Tariff Menace

Foreign Trade Declines

Washington, June.—Under the threat of the Grundy tariff bill, the foreign trade of the United States continues to decline at the rate indicated by the first quarter of 1930, which showed a decrease of $550,000,000.

For the first four months this year, there was a drop in American exports for the principal foreign countries of $380,000,000 and in imports of $330,000,000, a total of $710,000,000, or at the rate of more than $2,000,000,000 a year.

Exports to Canada, our best customer, dropped more than $62,000,000 and exports to Argentine fell off $21,500,000 in the first four months this year compared with 1929.

The menace of the Grundy bill to Canada was met by changes in the Canadian tariff upon imports on which Great Britain and the United States compete which placed 216 items on the free list under the preferential tariff given to Great Britain but upon which imports from America will have to pay full duty. It is estimated that Great Britain would be favorably affected to the extent of about $200,000,000.

This Week in History

White is much in the fashion picture this season. Shown here is a smart tallcut which any woman of fashion will love to wear. While suitable for sports wear, it is formal enough to be worn on many occasions.

Hints About Fashions of Interest to Women

The short-sleeved coat is a natural aftermath of the coat with cape, and is one of the season's most interesting entries.

The capelet and bolero seem in for a sort of endurance test in the race for supremacy.

One version of the short-sleeved coat is really the afternoon cape, which has an elongated shoulder line instead of even a short sleeve.

Buttons return to costumes, not as a necessity but as an ornament.

The term "fur Uppet" returns to fashion usage and applies to neckpieces which are more ornamental than warm.

The ruche, a detail of more formal periods, returns to necklines and all manner of scallops return.

Black linen is a new footnote and is in step with the trend toward novelty shoe fabrics.

Gray is leading ahead in wool demand, a natural reaction to beige having set in.

Pin-dotted fabrics have been frequently reported as important, and are now being rewarded in knitwear.

Corona, in which Corona challenges the supremacy of Fort Stanton. Corona bears the reputation of having won all her games this season; and Stanton has cracked several hard nuts—so fandom is all agog over the meeting of these two successful teams. The contest will, no doubt, attract a good crowd from all parts of the adjoining communities.

Stalkup-McMahon

Mr. O. McKee Stalkup and Miss Thelma McMahon, both of Roswell, were married in the Methodist parsonage Monday afternoon. The Rev. Jno. L. Lawson officiated. The ceremony was witnessed by Mrs. Jno. L. Lawson and Mr. W. L. Burnett.

Patronal Feast Observed

Letters of your name, REB. indicate a peculiar combination of friend and rebel, according to the ancient languages.

A friend to all who are in trouble, a rebel against the established customs of society, you present a curious picture to the who do not understand you.

You seem to grow by resistance. Like Rebecca at the well, in the Bible, you do best in seeking your own mate among those who come from a far country.

With your classic features and most Greek profile, you could excel all the charm necessary to hold him when once you had attracted him.

The tragedy and the happiness of your life may be formed upon one at the same event, or, at least upon a combination of events. For the REB, the fore-part of your name means do again and signifies the possibility of your marrying twice.

There is one thing certain, to attain your happiness, you must make your choice, whether one or many, yourself. You are one of those whom no one else can make a decision.

It was only in the understanding of this necessity of self-determination, this making of her own choice, that enabled one famous Rebecca to attain her success in writing.

And when you marry wealth, as you easily can do, you must immediately pick up the loose ends of your education. If there could be anything more essential to you than food for your body, it would be food for your mind, Rebecca. You can be happy only when you are thoroughly well informed.

Rosa

"As we struggle on life's journey
And difficulties meet,
We get a thorn with every rose,
But aren't the roses sweet?"

If I paid too much attention to my ancient Greek and Latin, I could say a lot of things about myself. I have been off here two weeks, he proceeded to Detroit where he inspected several automobile plants and the General Motors proving ground, and then was impatient to be off on the long trek home to resume his occupation as mechanical engineer.

Leaving Mexico City on April 30, the party covered the 929 miles to the border, crossed at Laredo, and proceeded to Chicago and Detroit with no mishaps other than two stop-overs, one for tire repairs and one, at San Antonio, for carbon removal and replacement of three exhaust valves in the eight-year-old car. The log of the trip, as reported by Mr. Griffith, provides statistics of interest to those contemplating a lengthy tour this summer:

Distance (Mexico City to Chicago), 2514 miles; running time, 137.5 hours; average speed 18.28 miles per hour; gasoline consumption, 96.6 gallons; miles per gallon, 26; cost of gasoline, $33.75; oil and greasing, $6.25; repairs to car, including tire repairs, $11.50. The total cost of transportation, exclusive of meals, hotel expenses and personal items, was $51.50, or at the rate of one-third cent a mile for each person in the car.

Despite the age of his Chevrolet, Mr. Griffith said that he started on the tour with no doubt as to the venerable old-timers' ability to cover the distance without trouble. In driving around Mexico City, prior to the start of the tour, the car was constantly being called upon to climb mountain passes up to 12,000 feet.

The speedometer had registered 28,000 kilometers before leaving Mexico. After spending several days here, following his return from Detroit, Mr. Griffith moved his car toward the South, and started out on the return trip as unobtrusively as though his destination were only a few miles out of town or his car were a new 1930 six cylinder model.

Cattle Association Corrects Reward Offer

Albuquerque, New Mexico, June 17, 1930

At the executive board meeting of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association held at Lordsburg, New Mexico, June 14, it was found necessary in some way to clarify the intention of the Association in the matter of the payment of the $250 00 reward offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any one stealing cattle or horses from its members. The intention of the association when they offered the reward was to pay the reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction in any one case of theft. For instance should two or three men be caught stealing one or more animals it was not the intention of the association to pay $250 00 for each conviction where two or more men happened to be convicted of stealing the same animal or animals. It was decided at the meeting to re-word the offer for the reward which is as follows:

"The New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association will pay a reward of $250 00 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person or persons of stealing cattle or horses from any member of the Association; provided that not more than $250 00 reward will be paid for any one case of theft and in no case will a reward be paid to the owner of stock stolen."

Tests Faulty

Tests do not amount much. A group of men and women were tested as to the effects of coffee on the human system. Those who liked coffee said they felt better and those who did not like it said they felt worse. All of which proves nothing.

Cheney-Clark

Mr. Bert Cheney and Miss Madeline Clark, both of Capitan, were married in the Methodist parsonage Monday afternoon. The Rev. Jno. L. Lawson officiated. The ceremony was witnessed by Mrs. F. L. Boughner and Mrs. F. C. Rowland. The young couple will make their home in Capitan.

It Takes Live Men To Make a Live Town

We sometimes hear the expression that if this town could be this, and could be that, how much better it would be.

Some of us have looked about us and have seen other towns that seemed to have more of the things that make for a bigger and a better town than we have.

It is true, some towns do have more than we have, but in the majority of instances they have these things because somewhere in the town is a man who was not satisfied with things as they were. He wanted them better. He interested those about him and soon they became a group of men working together toward the accomplishment of one end.

The result was a better town, a different atmosphere, an atmosphere that was progressive and the town became known everywhere in that section as a good, live town.

It takes live men to make a live town.

We believe that our town has enough live, progressive, aggressive men to make this community all that we want it to be.

Hoover Signs

President Hoover did just what everybody but Henry Ford expected him to do—signed the tariff monstrosity when it reached him. It means nothing for its proponents to boast that the Republican party "assumes the responsibility." It'll have to assume it—but why should everybody have to suffer because of the inanity of a president?

Some Valuable Health Hints

By NELLIE MAXWELL

It is not in much that happiness is found. It is not from splendor merry laughter springs. The woman to the latest fashion gowned. Though all her dangers bias with lawed wings. Can mean no more to him she loves, than with the sure good wife of any honest man. —Edgar Guest.

HERE is the latest and most highly recommended blood purifier. It is easy to prepare, doesn't cost much and will not be hard to take. Cook a bunch of young beets, tops and all, after giving them a thorough washing. Drain off the liquid—there should be a pint—add the juice of a lemon and put into the ice chest. Drink a wine glass full before breakfast and another at night before retiring. The beets may be seasoned and used as vegetables as well as the beet tops, so there is nothing wasted—a real scotch tonic.

Eat freely of asparagus tips as early and as long as it is possible to get them. These are the best kind of kidney tonics.

Do not be afraid to eat onions and garlic; they are absorbed into the circulation, that is, their oils and mineral matters, within a short time. Garlic, a clove eaten a night for three months, is said to cure hardening of the arteries. It is worth a trial, even if one has to withdraw from the rest of the family.

If you are well, strive to keep so, by proper exercise and careful eating. It is very easy to keep well, but when once the health is broken, it means long hard work to get it back.

With every magazine full of advice, setting up exercises given each morning over the radio, one has no excuse for not knowing a few of the important exercises to keep the body fit.

Walking, swimming, horseback riding are all the best of exercises. The housewife says: "I have enough walking to do in the home." That is true, but it is not the right kind of walking. Head up, chest out and abdomen in, breathing down, as the bottom of your lungs and refilling with the fresh air. If one cannot go outside for the walk and the deep breathing, anyone may stand at an open window or door and take a few full breaths, then expel them in short breaths, filling and refilling the lungs. It will give you new vigor and vim to start the day. Then take a glass of hot water with half a lemon squeezed into it and you will be ready for breakfast in a half hour. Lemon juice taken daily will cure constipation, all forms of rheumatism, liver troubles, and headaches—this seems enough to ask of a lemon.

Green Beans. Cut the tender beans diagonally in half-inch pieces. Drop into boiling water and cook rapidly until tender. Serve with salt, pepper, butter and cream if desired, or a dash of lemon juice.

Baked Corn and Tomatoes. This is best of course with the fresh corn, but makes a very good dish with canned corn and tomatoes. Arrange corn and tomatoes in layers, adding salt, pepper and dot generously with butter; then cover with soft bread crumbs. Bake thirty minutes in a hot oven.

PICTURE MAKING GAME

If you have no bright colored paper, use ordinary wrapping paper and cut a half sheet into all kinds of shapes of about two inches or less in length, squares, circles, oblongs, triangles, ovals or any other you happen to think of. Each child to play the game cuts his own share of pieces and then a pile is made of all the cuttings and placed in the center of the table. Then each player is given a sheet of pad-paper, large size, some paste and a go signal. The one who makes most quickly a good picture by pasting some of the cuttings together wins. To decide which picture is best of all that are made, a vote is taken.

Fellen Beard.

THE BREAKFAST GAME

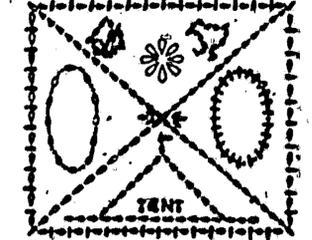

"Hurry up, Bobby! We're all at the breakfast table." Both Betty and Mother called.

"Oh, I don't want any breakfast. I don't like cereal," said Bobby coming slowly to the table.

Betty laughed at her brother. "Oh, that's a joke on you. There isn't any cereal."

Bobby looked surprised. But sure enough, waiting on his plate was a nice juicy piece of cantaloupe, instead.

"Be careful not to swallow a seed,"

said Father. "Those are for birds only to eat."

"Wash them and dry them so they will be perfectly clean," said Mother, "and then you can make things with them."

"What can we make?" asked Betty. "A necklace, if you like. You know in the Hawaiian Islands they string all kinds of seeds. It would be pretty to string first a red bead and then a cantaloupe seed."

"What shall I make?" asked Bobby.

"We'll divide the seeds between you," said Mother, "and I'll give you a cardboard box and some glue. Then see how prettily you can trim it with the seeds. So while Betty strung her beads and seeds into a long necklace, Bobby laid his share of the seeds on the box cover. He found he could make ever so many patterns, birds, animals, ships, tents and houses. When he showed the box to Mother, she said, "I'm going to let you buy a little gold paint when the seeds are dry and you can brush the whole box over with it."

"Then," said Betty, "it can be a jewel box, or a handkerchief box. How do you like my necklace, Bobby?"

"Heap much," replied Bobby, "it looks like an Indian brave's jewelry. I'll give you one of my boxes to keep them in. Isn't seed making fun?" —Marion Brownfield.

Our Suspicions and Mistrust

By JEAN NEWTON

"WILL you please write something about the evil and the danger of suspiciousness?" urged a correspondent.

"I have just had the most humiliating experience through being suspicious of my maid. It wasn't with regard to her honesty, but in the matter of her intentions for the summer. We are not going away for the summer, and although she definitely assured me that she was staying, my mother had suspected for some time that she would leave us to go with people who would take her to a summer resort.

"So long did mother keep harping on this that I began to see in the girl's every move a trick or a scheme to leave me when I needed her most.

Naturally this affected my attitude toward the girl, which caused friction, and when something concrete occurred that made me practically certain I taxed her with it—and found that we were entirely mistaken.

"There were perfectly simple explanations for every act that we had misinterpreted, and through our suspicion invested with ulterior motives. Absolutely innocent, routine matters we had colored black for ourselves by looking at them through suspicion-sooted glasses.

"Can you imagine how cheap I felt in the presence of that girl?"

There is nothing that could be added to strengthen the lesson that is in that letter, except perhaps to say that mistrust is a boomerang. Just as confidence will bind to you even a person whose loyalty may be wavering, so through suspicion and mistrust you are certain to lose the loyalty of even the most faithful, whether they be employees or friends.

The woman who wrongly suspected her maid has not only the waste of her nervous energy to charge against this. Suspicion is more expensive than that. By her strained attitude toward the girl, engendered by her suspicion, she gave her a grievance. And by expressing the suspicion she robbed herself of the affection and loyalty of her employee.

TO THE EDITOR:

By Fred Barton.

I'VE noticed those married couples who are happiest where the husband just smiles patiently when the wife starts to tell a good one on him.

The summer I was told to bring home the minister to supper and brought the wrong one, I suppose more people got innocent merriment out of my dumbness than have laughed at Pat and Mike. And that time I bought tomatoes at the store when we had some in our own garden, that was a laugh, too.

How did I know we had a garden? It's a good thing for all of us to have a few tangible, reasonable failings. It would be terrifying to live with a paragon.

Most Important Things

By Douglas Malloch.

WE COME upon old places now and then.

Old places long forgotten in life's stress.

We stumble on a pathway once again—

I wonder if there is forgetfulness? We may forget, but something else within Remembers every pathway we have been.

We turn a bend, we open gate or door.

And something says, "You have been here before."

I greatly doubt we ever do forget: The heart remembers, though the mind may not.

Each touch, each look, leaves something with us yet.

I doubt if there is anything forgot. The present seems so all-important now.

And yet we never lose the past somehow:

Some quiet day the heart shall yet recall.

The little, most important things of all.

Why We Are Penny Wise, Pound Foolish

By M. H. THOMSON, Ph. D.

I KNOW a man who drives a mile each day to the ice house because it is twenty cents a hundred cheaper than ice delivered. And he boasts of his frugality. Evidently he does not figure in the price of gasoline, the wear and tear on his car, the chances of scratching his hub sedan or of waiting the carpet by the melting ice, the time that it takes to go after the ice and the fact that frequently he forgets to go at all and the family is left without ice over Sunday or a holiday. This man is penny wise and pound foolish and doesn't know it. The same is true of the head of a large concern who spends his valuable time cutting the envelopes of all his letters into sheets of paper to use as scribbling paper and thinks he is economizing. For a few cents he could buy all the scratch paper he is likely to use in a month.

There is no end to illustrations of how we are all penny wise and pound foolish in some matters. The reason is that we are short sighted. We see only the immediate. The small saving looks big to us because it is concrete and definite. We lose sight of the greater losses we encounter because they are removed in time and space and because they are abstract.

We are penny wise and pound foolish for want of knowledge, self-deceptive habits of thrift, false notions of economy, lack of ability to think the matter through or to figure out in exact terms just where the saving, if any, comes in.

The person who is penny wise and pound foolish is the last one in the world to realize that he needs the services of an efficiency expert, for he is all the while congratulating himself on his wisdom and efficiency.

Perhaps what we lose in money by being penny wise and pound foolish is made up to us in the station of self-deception.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Every once in awhile some one says to Dame Fashion, "They're going abroad, 'She's going abroad," "We're going abroad." It makes her wish she could join the chorus and say, "I'm going abroad." But she has a never-satisfied desire to know bits of costume advice from all of these "travellers," and another quite a bit comes her way.

It may be counted of a simple sort, such as the statement to carry all creases and tuckings, if possible, in tubes rather than jars. It may be a friend back from a journey to Jerusalem and many foreign lands between there and the United States, who points with pride to an all-wool tweed traveling suit, quite light in shade, and declares that being a soft, sandy color, it never once had to go to the cleaners during the journey.

It is not new advice, but certainly good for the one season traveler, to leave trunks behind. There are cases to be had in this day which are at least near-trunks in value of holding necessities, yet without the bulk of trunks. There was an era—Saratoga trunk time—when trunks took on elephantine proportions. Americans were special sinners in heavy baggage, but the pendulum is swinging back to the ways of the early republic. Lady Washington undoubtedly took light baggage upon her stage coach journeys. There used to be an old-time "hair trunk" in Dame Fashion's attic in New Hampshire, and it would have held no more than a modern touring case.

The day of expressed pleats is welcome to the traveler. Sharply pressed edges are bad revealers of long continued postures. A dark blue silk ensemble is wonderful if the traveling is out of the way of cold breezes, and a collection of varying shade blouses will adapt to different occasions.

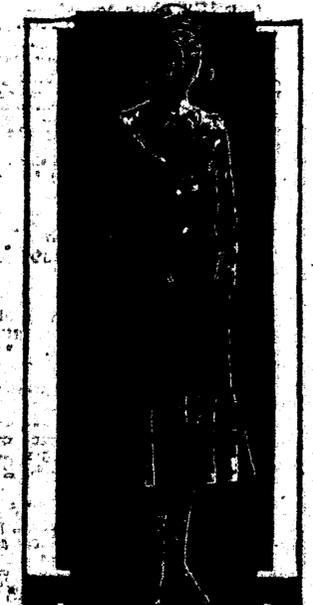

Lace is one of the most unchangeable and lightest weight of fabrics for an evening gown, and the present mode of adding to such gowns a little sleeved jacket of the same lace will make a modified of Yubilee dress, if such is needed.

A tweed or felt hat, a grosgrain silk hat and a soft straw hat make enough headgear to start away with, and quite likely will bring one back to land again. To Dame Fashion there is no comfort in traveling like a substantially sized purse, or handbag, big enough, in addition to all the desired compact and bits of aid for daily comfort, to admit a tightly rolled light pair of the rubber. These, with an added short umbrella, swinging from the wrist by a trusty loop, are wonderful first aids in a summer shower.

Capes, especially, it is true, for the slender and graceful, are high lights in this year's picture. They appear on printed silk frocks; they add effect to many of the summer weight coats; they are especially delightful as a sort of fichu-cape with a chiffon or organdy dress—while just as capes alone, they are going as a wrap to many a summer evening function.

Just lately Dame Fashion has had the luck to meet several back from Paris, and it has happened that each had her white fabric flower at the lapel, sort of a fluffed or double capote, with many more little white loops than the power of a few years ago. Perhaps Paris would smile and say: it was not a camellia at all, but a full blown white rose. At all events, the flower lives for the right punctuation to the dress.

Lingerie Touches Add to Dainty Beige Crepe

Daintiness is one of the marked features of the frocks this season. Lingerie touches, such as those of a ruffled collar, a lace-trimmed bodice, and a charming bow and soft out of embroidered buttons.

Smart White Tailleur for Various Occasions

White is much in the fashion picture this season. Shown here is a smart tailleur which any woman of fashion will love to wear. While suitable for sports wear, it is formal enough to be worn on many occasions.

Hints About Fashions of Interest to Women

The short-sleeved coat is a natural aftermath of the coat with cape, and is one of the season's most interesting entries.

The capelet and bolero seem in for a sort of endurance test in the race for supremacy.

One variation of the short-sleeved coat is really the afternoon cape, which has an elongated shoulder line instead of even a short sleeve.

Buttons return to costumes, not as a necessity but as an ornament.

The term "fur tippet" returns to fashion, usage and applies to neckpieces which are more ornamental than warm.

The ruche, a detail of more formal periods, returns to necklines and all manner of scallops return.

Black linen is a new footnote and is in step with the trend toward novelty shoe fabrics.

Gray is leaping ahead in wool demand, a natural reaction to beige having set in.

Pla-dotted fabrics have been frequently reported as important, and now they are so regarded in knit-wear circles.

Straw Ribbon Is Among Decorations for Hats

Not for a long time has ribbon been used in such quantities, nor in such variety, especially on millinery.

There are figured ribbons, matched by a scarf, and rough-surfaced ribbons of a mixture of artificial silk and wool, which are being used by modistes for turbans and berets in the place of the chenille employed last season.

Ribbons with a rep weave, tweed ribbons, shantung ribbons, double ribbons, one side of crepe; the other of contrasting satin or velvet (these are particularly effective for the trimming of hats); and, most novel of all, straw ribbons, very soft and pliable, with rough-face, sometimes solid, at others openwork. Silk or wool is also straw-edged.

There is a Type of Hat for Every Type of Face

Felt lace, which is used in some of the French hats, is one of the novelties of the season. The "lace" is produced by more or less intricate perforations of the felt with the design further accented by matching embroidery.

Usually the lace finish appears at the edge of the felt, which is of the finest, lightest sort.

In one of the face hats from Le Monnier of Paris the felt that comes over the forehead has an edge of perforations giving the effect of small black rings.

There is, in fact, an unusually wide variety of hats from which to choose. If ever there was a type of hat for every type of face, it is at the present time.

Many Styles of Sleeves for Coats and Dresses

The short sleeve of one kind or another is gaining ground with every week. Several designers are cutting off the sleeves of coats to show the contrasting sleeves of the dress, which in this case must extend to the hands.

Tiered sleeves terminating at the elbow, short sleeves ending in frills of pleating or circular ruffles by now are familiar in separate dresses.

Puffs in sheer materials are a favored form of sleeve for brassy frocks. But the long sleeve with complicated drapery at the hand and a loosely loose to slip back when the arm is raised is a most attractive and feminine one in chiffon print frocks for afternoon.

New Oxford

Dressy tweed and three-quarter Oxford are very good with the new dressmaker suit. For the very elaborate suit, classic pumps are good if you can wear them comfortably.

Analyzing YOU

With the New Science of Syllabics By C. J. COFFMAN Dean of All the Enumerators

Rebecca
"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," who does not remember this wonderful picture?

The first three letters of your name, REB, indicate a peculiar combination of friend and rebel, according to the ancient languages.

A friend to all who are in trouble, a rebel against the established customs of society, you present a curious picture to those who do not understand you.

You seem to grow by resistance. Like Rebecca at the well, in the Bible, you do best in seeking your own mate among those who come from a far country.

With your classic features and almost Greek profile, you could exert all the charm necessary to hold him, when once you had attracted him.

The tragedy and the happiness of your life may be formed upon one and the same event, or, at least upon one combination of events. For the RE in the fore part of your name means to do again and signifies the possibility of your marrying twice.

There is one thing certain, to attain your happiness, you must make your choice, whether one or many, by yourself. You are one of those for whom no one else can make a decision.

It was only in the understanding of this necessity of self-determination, this making of her own choice, that enabled one famous Rebecca to attain her success in writing.

And when you marry wealth, as you easily can do, you must immediately pick up the loose ends of your education. If there could be anything more essential to you than food for your body, it would be food for your mind. Rebecca, you can be happy only when you are thoroughly well informed.

Rosa
"As we struggle on life's journey And difficulties meet, We get a thorn with every rose, But aren't the roses sweet?"

If I paid too much attention to my ancient Greek and Latin, I could say a lot of things here, Rosa, that wouldn't be so nice.

But who wants to say bad things about a rose?

With your straight, finely chiseled nose, and your face that used to be freckled, I see an evidence of intuition that makes you able to go right to the heart of things.

So if musty old books and tomes of dead languages try to make me think that ROSA means naughty and bad, I will just have to say to myself, that they didn't know about you.

Of course, you have the ability to be bad if you want to. But you won't because you are just naturally filled with helpfulness. And this helpfulness crops out in quite peculiar ways.

For example, you do have the cutest way of making little rhymes and singles, of painting little cards and decorations. Why don't you take that up as a profession, that painting of the little colored cards and managrams?

There is quite a field for you there. Rosa, in special designing and you can soon find out where you fit best.

The thorn in your rose-nature seems to be just a sharp little edge of jealousy or envy. You can get over this all right, especially if you become a success on your own.

Rosa Posselle made her way through petty jealousies innumerable, and envies unbelievable, to become one of the great singers of the Metropolitan grand opera in New York.

Rosa Bonheur, famous animal painter and sculptress, made her way up from a sick bed, after falling at the trade she started to learn. There is a lot of the same determination in you, Rosa. Go on ahead.

Key's Furniture is Gallery
The National gallery, at Washington has a valuable collection of colonial furniture, once the property of Francis Scott Key, the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," and his family. The property, which includes a number of portraits of historical interest, had been in the possession of his granddaughter, by whose will the property was left to the gallery. Providence Journal.

FAMILY DOCTOR MADE MILLIONS OF FRIENDS

Fifteen years after his graduation, Dr. Caldwell became famous for a single prescription which now, after forty years, is still making friends.

Today Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the world's most popular laxative. Millions of people never think of using anything else when they're constipated, headachy, bilious, feverish or weak; when breath is bad, tongue coated, or they're suffering from nausea, gas, or lack of appetite or energy.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is made today according to the original formula, from herbs and other pure ingredients. It is pleasant-tasting; thorough in the most obstinate cases; gently effective for women and children. Above all, it represents a doctor's choice of what is safe for the bowels.

Burns' Portrait Found

A Raeburn portrait of Robert Burns, painted in 1803 and lost for more than a century, is reported to have been found recently by a miner's wife in Larkhall, Scotland. The picture, said to be a striking likeness of Burns, is a canvas 27 by 23 inches inside the frame and carries an indistinct signature which experts believe to be that of Raeburn. It was "picked up for a few shillings," according to a Glasgow newspaper, in a second-hand furniture shop.

FRIDAY, JUNE 20, 1930

We note in an exchange an item telling how a citizen of that town bought an article in a city store and paid $1.50 for it. Later he purchased the same item at his home town store for $1.25. Thereupon the breast of this aforesaid citizen swelled with patriotic pride and he declared that henceforth and forever he would patronize home merchants. While we are glad to note that something woke up the above described gentleman to his plain duty to the community it rather cheapens his patriotism to know that after all it was merely the matter of a few cents difference in price that caused him to decide in favor of the home town store. Then too if he had made much of an effort to find the article at home he would have soon found out among the few stores of his home town whether or not he could have gotten it at home.

150 Campers

Only one hundred-fifty campers can be cared for in camp We-hin-ah-pay. What are we going to do if more than that want to attend? We don't know because that situation has never yet arisen. That very situation however will probably come up in connection with our camp this summer. During the past week we have visited Portales, Muleshoe, Tucumcari, Santa Rosa and Vaughn. The camp spirit was found to be good in each of them and exceptionally good in all except one or two of the troops visited. That only means that the fellows are going to be there when camp opens on July 10th. We have a wall chart in the office here in Roswell and when a scout sends in his Camp Application we write his name in the space allotted to his troop.

As Easy As Calling A Neighbor

Out-of-town telephone service has been so simplified and cost so reduced in the last few years that you can talk to friends and relatives or transact business in other cities as easily as right here in town.

Telephoning is a round trip—there and back at one cost. It's next best to being there in person. Some typical low day rates when you will talk with anyone at the other telephone:

CAMP LEASES IN THE NATIONAL FORESTS

Sites Available For Term of Years

By H. M. Sarrs, Supt. National Forest, Forest Service.

What is your idea of a vacation? Is it a quiet nap under a shady tree? or the thrilling exertion of a bear hunt?

In either case, there is every facility and opportunity for realizing it with the exception of a few small areas, which are managed as game refuges, all of the national forests are open to visitors for hunting and fishing, subject only to State game laws.

Streams are periodically and adequately stocked with fish. All forms of wild life are so protected and managed as to render the greatest good to the greatest number of the sportsmen who visit the forests.

Visitors may camp on the national forests and stay as long as they like. Dead wood for fuel is plentiful and free. Sanitary measures are enforced to protect the purity of the waters.

On most of the forests tourists camps have been improved along the principal traveled highways. Here are pure drinking water, camping facilities, fireplaces, sanitary provisions and registry booths for the convenience of the tourist.

These camps are free. The only requirement is that the visitor observe the Golden Rule of leaving his camp clean, and obey the directions for care with his camp fires.

In the national forests of the West the Forest Service policy of leasing to the individual or community or civic group a little bit of national forest land for exclusive use and occupancy as a Summer home has been long established. This same policy has been adopted by the national Forests in the East and South, and a similar opportunity is offered to the millions in our great eastern centers of population.

In these Summer home sites or colonies, lots will be rented or leased to individuals desiring to construct Summer homes, under annually renewable permits, at rates as low as $15 per year. Where the residents' investment will be heavy or some other circumstances makes it desirable, a 10-year term lease can be granted as low as $20 per year.

Permits for Boy Scout, Y. M. C. A. or other semi-public camps are granted on annual or term basis at nominal rates.

The Summer home permittee will be expected to erect, in the first and second years of occupancy, an appropriate cabin. No standard designs are prescribed, but the plans of the permittee must be approved by the forest supervisor before construction is begun.

The whole purpose of the Forest Service in this feature is to secure developments harmonious with the surroundings. Strictly sanitary disposal of all wastes, garbage or wash waters required.

Of course it is not necessary to build your own home in the forest. There are good hotels and boarding houses within or very near practically the entire forest is open for your the eastern district.

life, camping first one phase, then another. You may enjoy this kind of other, and perhaps in this way find the location best suited to your needs for a Summer home.

MANY USES IN LIFE FOR CERTIFICATE OF BIRTH

By Dr. P. H. Bartholomew Certificate copies of birth are being asked for in increasing numbers from year to year.

The increasing importance of birth records should prompt parents in assuring themselves that this record exists for each child.

The law of Nebraska provides that a certificate of birth shall be accomplished by the attending physician or, if no physician is in attendance, by the parent or other person present at the time of birth. The certificate is filed with the local registrar, who forwards same to the State registrar, where the certificate becomes a permanent record.

The original law was passed in 1904, but until 1912 compliance was rather incomplete. However, since 1912 there was a progressive increase in completion of birth certificates so that in 1920 Nebraska was admitted to the Federal registration area.

The division of vital statistics, within a few months—usually about three—following birth, forwards to the parents at address given on birth certificate a notification of birth registration, which supplies the number under which the child's birth is registered. This number facilitates locating the record if request is made for a certificate copy.

LIVES SAVED BY MODERN AUTOMOBILE CONSTRUCTION

There is one phase of the automobile accident situation that seldom comes in for consideration, how many lives has good automobile construction saved?

Four-wheel brakes and non-shatterable glass have often made minor collisions of what might have been fatal crashes. But the all-steel body has been the safeguard that has stood between motorists and death in many accidents.

A car with a steel body triumphantly met the severest test ever given an automobile. It was released down a runway and plunged off the end, turning over six times. The test was repeated three times and the car then driven away under its own power.

Last year over 25,000 people were killed by automobiles. That was a horrifying record but much less than it would have been with old-style car construction.—The Manufacturer.

WISDOM COMES ONLY WITH YEARS, AUTO MAN BELIEVES

Detroit.—Henry Ford believes "more than ever" that business and industry must depend upon the leadership of men of mature years. He told the Associated Press today that he had found no occasion to change his previous opinion that if all the men of 55 years and older were removed from industry "there would not be brains enough left to carry on."

"This is no reflection upon the youth of today," he said. "I think that while they are different, today's youngsters are a fine lot and they decidedly are not headed for perdition. Moreover, they have greater opportunities today than the youth of 40 and 50 years ago."

Mr. Ford was asked whether he always had conceded the wisdom of age.

"You didn't think that back in 1894 when you began tinkering with your horseless carriage, did you?"

"I always had older men for friends and I always went to them for advice. I could cite them one after another. Old men understood my idea better than young men did. With mature years I realized more and more the value of that advice. I realized that in my youth I hadn't waked up yet."

Youth and age need each other. Mr. Ford went on. "Youth must look to age for its education," he said, "and age educates youth because youth interests it."

Referring again to the need of mature minds in industry, Mr. Ford said:

"Young men from 20 years on are the best executives—I mean they are well fitted to carry out the plans of an organization, but the best plans originate in older heads. The best part of a young executive's experience may be the way he is held back by the wiser plans of older heads. There can be an excess of action and an insufficiency of wisdom. Between them, youth and maturity provide both."

MILK SEPARATES BEST WHEN WARM

Milk will separate most efficiently when it is warm. This means that warm milk will produce more butterfat when run through the separator than if it is allowed to cool.

In cool weather milk cools rapidly and unless it can be separated as soon as it is drawn from the cow it should be warmed before separating.

W. H. Woodley, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, Extension Service.

Purdue University has done considerable work in checking up on the efficiency of separators in skimming milk at different temperatures, and they found that the cool was considerable. They separated 125 pounds of 4 per cent milk at 90 degrees F. and found 4.97 pounds of fat in the cream. The loss in the skim milk was very small. When it was separated at a temperature of 60 degrees F. they found only 5.9 pounds of fat in the cream. In separating 125 pounds of milk there was a loss of 1 pound butterfat because the milk was cooled. In a herd of five or six good cows, if they produced as much as 20 pounds of milk per day, the loss could be as much as a pound each day unless the milk was separated while it was warm.

If some time must elapse between the time of milking and separating, it would pay to set the can of cool milk in a tub of hot water until it is warmed.—Farm and Ranch.

THE FOOD INDUSTRY

One-fourth of all the money spent by the American people is for food products, according to a study made by the General Foods Corporation.

The annual income of the United States is around 80 billion dollars, and of this 21 billion is used to supply the dining table, in addition to three billion more for products "consumed on premises" and not cleared through any market.

The significance of this is shown by the fact that the value of all textiles in this country is about 12 billion yearly; automobiles, including trucks, tires and accessories, five to six billion; building construction, seven to eight billion; and iron and steel about six billion.

The food industry is thus the largest, as well as the oldest, of all businesses.

The trend in the food industry seems to be away from small producing and distributing units toward mass production and distribution, in line with automobiles, electricity, clothes, banking, etc. One famous company provides the American table with more than 40 favorite food products.

"KNOCKING" THE GOVERNMENT

The world is full of people who try to blame their own unsuccess, unhappiness or incompetence upon somebody else. Everybody knows somebody like that. They are the same sort of people who are always "agin the Government." The market for crops is good or bad because the Government at Washington is Republican or Democratic. Business is slow because the President did this or didn't do that. Let a few banks fail and immediately some of the chronic kickers rush to the front with the explanation that the Federal Reserve system is a failure.

Fair criticism of the Government is entirely proper and within the rights of every citizen. The tendency to hold the Government responsible for everything unpleasant without ever giving it credit when conditions are satisfactory is, however, just another manifestation of the childish impulse to shift the blame from one's own shoulders to that of somebody else.

The very people who make the most fuss about the Government's "failures" when things are not going to please them, would be the first to protest if the Federal Government should undertake to actually run the business of the Nation. The last thing that the vast majority of Americans want is a paternal government. We as a people firmly believe in the dictum, attributed to Thomas Jefferson, that that government is best which governs the least. It is properly true that most of the loose criticism of the Government is merely a form of "letting off steam." It doesn't hurt the government any and it relieves the emotional strain of the person doing this criticizing.

This year everybody is going to hear a great deal of criticism and defense of the Government. We are electing all the members of the next Congress, one-third of the Senators, and Governors and other officials of more than half of the states. Candidates and their friends are going to be if they were in instead of the ones who are in, or how foolish it would be to put the other fellow in then tell us how different things would they have made such good records. All that signifies, for the greater part is the desire of the "Ins" to stay in and of the "Outs" to get out.

The only persons who will be fooled are the simple-minded ones who really think that the Government can change economic conditions over night and at will. All any government at Washington can do, all it ought to try to do, is to remove any obstacles that exist to the free flow of business and industry, to the right of every American citizen to work out his own individual salvation, economy and otherwise, in his own way, so long as he does not infringe upon the right of any other citizen to do the same thing.

HOW CENSUS FACTS ARE COUNTED

Each Individual Is Represented By a Card Punched Full of Holes Classified by Machines.

You're a card 6.4 inches long, 3 1/2 inches wide, with 31 holes punched in it.

That is the way you appear on Uncle Sam's records in Washington, provided the census enumerator found you and turned in his report according to schedule. And, so far as the Government at Washington is concerned with your case, that's all they know or want to know about you.

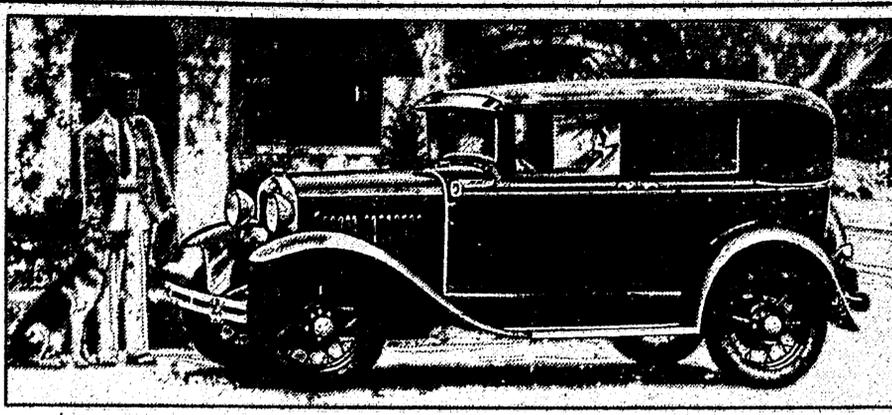

Your name does not appear on the card. It is on the enumerator's sheet, of course, but those are all baled up and stored away in a vault where there isn't one chance in a million of your individual name being dug out for any imaginable purpose. In the course of time these old reports will go to the paper mill, and then the only identity you will have left is the punched card, looking somewhat like a rectangular square of Swiss cheese.

As fast as the enumerators' returns come to Washington they are turned over to several hundred young women who sit all day in front of electrically-operated punching machines and transfer the enumerator's information to these cards. A punch in a certain position on the card means that you live in a certain state or territory. Another punch indicates your county, a third your Census enumeration district. The holes are all the same size, the only difference for each fact recorded being the position of the hole in the card. There are as many keys on the punching machine as there are possible different facts about any individual, and the operator merely presses the correct key and the machine punches the hole in the right place.

A punch in one position means that you live on a farm, in another that you don't. Whether you are male or female is indicated by another punch in a different place. Color or race, age, whether married, single or widowed, your education status, occupation and all of the other bothersome questions which you have to answer for the Census man, all are reduced to holes in a card.

When all of the required holes have been punched in a card, it is fed into another highly ingenious machine, which at one operation adds the facts which the card contains to all the other facts of the same character. This second machine has hundreds of little metal rods or plungers, one for every possible position of a hole in a card. Nothing happens when one of the plungers touches the surface of the card at a point at which there is no hole, but wherever there is a hole in the card, one of the metal plungers goes right through it. For example, if you are a Chinese, none of the plungers indicating Mexican, Indian, Japanese, Filipino, Hindu, Korean, or Hawaiian blood would go through the card, but the one which is connected with the Chinese counter would pass through the hole which indicates Chinese birth. In doing this it makes another figure on the counting machine that records the Chinese population. And so with each of the other plungers which find a hole to go into. All thirty-one of them make their records simultaneously, and the

Ford Offers New De Luxe Sedan

Ford De Luxe Sedan

The De Luxe Sedan, recently added to the Ford line, is designed for those who desire distinctiveness and unusual comfort in an automobile. The interior is inviting and roomy with wide doors to both compartments. Absence of rear quarter windows gives the car a striking individuality and affords privacy to the occupants.

Interior trimmings and appointments are luxurious. Upholstery is either in brown mohair or a deep tan Bedford cord patterned after that used in high-priced cars.

Other refinements include arm rests for the rear seat, mahogany finished garnish moldings on the windows and beneath the windshield, flexible robe rail and hardware in an attractive pattern.

The front seat is adjustable within a range of four inches to suit the convenience and comfort of the driver. It is moved quickly and easily by a small, inconspicuous handle in the front center of the seat just above the floor.

The De Luxe Sedan, like other Ford body types, can be obtained in any one of several color combinations.

punched cards pass through each one of dozens of such machines at the rate of 175,000 a day.

totaling Census figures would be so slow, with a population of around 125,000,000 to be counted, that it might be a year or more before the complete total was known.

There were no counting machines or electrical appliances when the first Census of the United States was made, nor for nearly a hundred years after that. Everything was done in those old days slowly, by hand, and the records kept in books, some of which are still preserved. And nobody knows whether those records were correct or not, with the chance in favor of their being decidedly inaccurate. For the early Census enumerators, who were paid only $1 for each fifty names, had to cover a lot of territory, in most cases, and doubtless overlooked many inhabitants. The Census of 1790, the first under our present form of government, was not completed until 1792, when President George Washington reported to Congress that there were 3,929,214 persons in the young republic. In all probability there were more than 4,000,000 or eight times as many as there had been in 1790, sixty years earlier. In that year, 1790, the population of New York, Boston and Philadelphia combined was only 15,000, and the total population of the Colonies less than half a million.

One reason why accurate counting of the population was not possible in Colonial times, and to some extent since, was the belief that to enumerate the people would bring a curse upon them. The people, especially in the New England colonies where they tried to run the government strictly in accordance with the teachings of the Bible, which they interpreted literally, feared the wrath of God if the people were counted. For proof that Divine vengeance would follow the taking of the Census, they pointed to the 13th chapter of the Second Book of Samuel, which tells how King David sent Joab to number the people from Dan to Beersheba. Joab, the first census-taker on record made a count which showed 400,000 inhabitants. But this impious act was followed by a pestilence which killed off 70,000 of them.

It is no wonder that a people who took every word in the Bible as literal truth feared the Census-taker!

The influence of this belief extended into the other colonies, so much so that in 1712 Governor Hunter of New York, charged by the home government in London with enumerating the people of the Colony, apologized for the inaccuracy of the count, saying that the people were so superstitious that they thought an epidemic of illness had followed the last previous count.

Something of the same reluctance to be counted befitted the Census-takers who tried to enumerate the inhabitants of the different Colonies early in the Revolutionary War, in order to apportion the cost of war equitably among them. It was realized then that only a strong Central authority could make any sort of an accurate Census, and a provision for such a desirable count was therefore provided in the Constitution when it was adopted in 1787.

AWARDS CONTRACT FOR AUDIT OF STATE HIGHWAY DEPT.

Santa Fe, N. M., June 14.—The contracts for auditing the state highway department has been awarded to Fred Fessel and Company of Albuquerque, state comptroller Rupert F. Asplund announced today.

Mr. Asplund said he had not formally called for bids on this project but had asked the major auditing firms of the state to come in for conferences. He said that nothing could be gained by calling for auditing bids because accountants are professional men with standard prices, and seeking an auditing bid for this job would be like "asking attorneys to bid on a lawsuit and then giving the case to the cheapest bidder."

The contract was let on a per diem basis: $25 a day for the accountant in charge; $20 a day for senior accountants; $15 a day for junior accountants and $10 a day for clerical accountants. The number of men employed will depend upon the room available, Mr. Asplund said.

Mr. Asplund now has under consideration the contract for auditing the state land office. This contract also will be let without bid, he said, and the work will be started about July 1.

ISLE INHABITED BY RARE BIRDS

Feathered Kingdom Found on U. S. Preserve.

Galveston, Texas.—A princely of the feathered kingdom and an ornithologist's paradise is Bird Island.

It is on this small island, less than a mile long and about half a mile wide, that trappers and government banding agents find migratory birds once common but now so scarce that they are protected by federal law.

The island, about two miles from the southwest tip of Galveston Island and three miles from the mainland, can be reached only by boat at high tide.

The birds have favorable weather conditions. Breezes from the gulf keep the sand as warm as 65 degrees in winter and as cool as 80 degrees in summer.

The island itself offers few attractions to the birds other than its isolation and almost even temperature. The only vegetation is salt grass and salt cedar, and other animal life is scarce. The birds are mostly water fowl, however.

At least two of the rarest species visit the island at times. The whistling and trumpeting swans have been found there. The reddish and snowy egret also are frequent visitors. Both nest there. Among other birds nesting on the island are the black and royal tern, the small blue heron and the Louisiana heron, the skimmer, the willet, the curlew, the cormorant, sea pigeons and many more common species.

The beautiful plumes of the egret once adorned feminine apparel, but federal laws now make even possession of an egret feather an offense punishable by a maximum fine of $500. Birds banded on the isle so their reasonable flights could be traced have been captured as far north as Canada and as far south as Brazil.

Substitute for Glass Is British Invention

London.—An unbreakable substitute for glass, known as poloplax, abbreviated to "plax," has been invented by E. C. Baly, professor of organic chemistry at Liverpool university, and his son. A factory for its manufacture is being erected in Nottingham.

The new substance, clear like glass but unspiltterable, is said to be an improvement on the material invented by Dr. F. Pollack, the Austrian chemist, with whom Professor Baly and his son have been collaborating. "Plax," it is said, is cheaper than any other glass substitute, is burglar-proof and translucent to ultra-violet rays, like vitreous.

It can be molded to any shape and can be "turned" like a piece of wood. It can also be reduced to powder and pressed hydraulically, so that it becomes opaque and can then be given any color.

As soon as the Nottingham factory is finished the new glass substitute is to be placed on the market. Professor Baly does not say that it will supersede glass entirely and says that he is not satisfied with its brilliance, but says that its possibilities are limitless.

Miss Jewel Trent was here the first of the week from El Paso, enroute to Chicago. She was the guest of the Sweets at the Eating House while here, and Tuesday afternoon Miss Louise entertained at bridge in her honor.

Walker Hyde, former sheriff of Lincoln county, passed through late last Friday en route from Amarillo, Texas, to his home at Tucson, Arizona. Walker looked as natural as corn bread—the years adding nothing to his broad shoulders and massive frame.

W. E. Renick, of the Model Cleaning establishment, returned late last week from Socorro, to which point he had been called by the serious illness of his mother. The mother passed away while he was there, and after attending the last sad obsequies Mr. Renick returned home.

Dr. W. H. Broadus, optometrist, was here Tuesday from Santa Fe, on his regular monthly visit to Carrizozo. Dr. Broadus has a large number in this section for whom he fits glasses, and he is kept busy at his profession while here.

Richard P. Hickey and daughter, Mrs. A. H. Kudner, were down this morning from the O-O ranch, in Venado Gap. Mrs. Kudner but recently returned with her husband from an extended European trip, and is now at the Kudner country home here with her parents, the Hickeys.

Mr. and Mrs. George J. Dingwall, Mrs. Wayne H. Hamilton, Miss Aileen Halsey drove up Wednesday to Eagle Creek Lodge from El Paso. The ladies were down yesterday and returned to the hills this morning. They will be joined Sunday by the Johnsons and Wayne Hamilton and all will return to El Paso.

Mrs. Hendron and Miss Jones Dorothy Doughty drove down yesterday afternoon from Tucumcari, the former to see the Reilly and Gray families and the latter to meet an aunt. The visitors will return to Tucumcari this afternoon, accompanied by Miss Doughty's aunt.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Mendenhall and little son leave tomorrow for Pueblo, Colorado. Mrs. Mendenhall and son will remain in Pueblo with her parents while Mr. Mendenhall goes to Denver to take a mechanical course in the Ford School. Mr. Mendenhall is mechanic at the Carrizozo Auto company.

Mr. Hinger, of the Echo Studio, packed up his plant and left Wednesday for a point up the line. This was Mr. Hinger's second visit here, and both times enjoyed a good patronage—and it was justified; for he was a skilled artist and did his work conscientiously. His return will be welcome, and it is hoped that when he comes again he may find it profitable to establish a permanent studio here.

By reference to an advertisement in another part of the News, it will be seen that M. Doering is about to retire from business. Mike says he was 67 years old Sunday, and is ready to surrender the reins of business to some one younger in years.

Harry Gallacher Injured

Harry Gallacher was seriously and quite painfully injured yesterday afternoon, at one of the Gallacher ranches, near Indian Tank. He was upon the tower of a windmill, oiling the machinery, when a whirlwind came up, which suddenly started the wheel, and its revolutions swept him from the platform. His fall, about 40 feet, was partially broken by his landing on some sheet iron which had been placed on some uprights, and but for which the injuries might have been even worse than they were.

The injured man was brought to the Johnson hospital and an X-ray examination made. It developed that, besides being bruised and battered from head to foot, three ribs were broken, but so far no internal injuries have developed. Harry is resting very well this morning and his family and friends derive some comfort from the fact that the accident might have been much more serious.

The Livestock Situation

Announcement that Los Angeles has become the fifth largest city in the United States, with an official population of 1,231,730, and that the total population of Los Angeles County is now 2,199,557, is of more than passing interest to livestock producers of the western states. The consumption of meat foods has kept pace with the growth in population and explains why the Los Angeles market is the most important center in the west. It was not so many years ago that the intermountain stockmen figured on shipping all of their products to eastern markets. As a matter of fact, until recent years, the California stockman, himself, shipped a good many beef cattle east. The picture has changed, and now Los Angeles must draw upon flocks and herds of many western states for its meat food supply. The official census announcement tells why. Los Angeles and Southern California, with a population in excess of three million people, have become a great metropolitan center, and a great consuming center for food products of all kinds. In the growth of the city and its environs, a population made up of people from all over the face of the earth have come and made their homes here. Along with the growth in demand for meat food products, there has been a decided change in consumer demand. The building up of the city has created dense apartment house population, in which both kitchen and families are small. This means that the Los Angeles housewife demands small chops, steaks and roasts, instead of big cuts, which were popular in large families a few years ago. This has brought about a demand for the smaller animals. The 70 to 75-pound lamb is more popular than the 85 to 100-pound yearling, because the cuts are smaller and more adapted to the city dweller. Instead of the big pork-type hog of a few years ago, Los Angeles now wants the 180 to 200 pound bacon or butcher hog. The demand for heavy steers has given away to the yearlings or "baby beef" type. Aside from the smaller animals required for modern urban consumption, there has been a decided demand for better quality meats, which can be produced only through finish feeding on grain. Probably at no time has the demand for choice beef been so evident as right at this time, when the California grass-fat cattle season is at its peak. Despite the large number of grass cattle now available in California, Los Angeles packers have found it necessary to buy grain fed cattle on markets as far distant as Denver, Omaha, St. Joseph and Sioux City, in order to supply the ever increasing market demand for choice beef. The best grades of cattle are in urgent demand at prices much higher than are prevailing at Missouri River markets, yet the plain and half-fat cattle from the range country are so plentiful as to be burdensome. This buying of grain-fed cattle by Los Angeles packers at distant markets is hand-writing on the wall for the western cattlemen. Supplemental feeding of range cattle will help solve the home marketing problem, but the real answer must come from the general utilization of our home-raised grain and forage for the production of choice beef. We have wellbred cattle in the west, and lots of them. But, we'll apparently be forced to pour grain into them, in order to hold the home demand.

The Mutiny of the Albatross

BY WYNDHAM MARTYN

COPYRIGHT IN THE U. S. WNU Service

THE STORY

Floyd Unwin and Howard Bettington take dinner with an old college chum, Alfred Gibbons, financial manager. Unwin produces a written pledge taken by the three at college to help each other in adversity, explaining that he needs financial assistance to educate his son Bob and daughter Mary. Gibbons agrees to make a place for the daughter in his organization. Mary Unwin is stenographer to a wealthy debauchee, Edgar Radway. Calling at Gibbons' office, as arranged, Mary is asked to betray her employer's secrets and refuses. Radway plans an ocean voyage to recover from the effects of dissipation. Mary is to go as secretary, her brother to accompany her. Bettington, painting on the Maine coast, is kidnapped, and taken aboard Radway's yacht. His clothes are found by Gibbons, a fugitive from justice, who docks them and goes to Bettington's studio, and there falls to his death. Bettington is questioned by a man known as the "Boss." It is shown an account of Gibbons' death, the body being identified as Bettington. The "Boss" intends to hold Radway for $1,000,000 ransom. Bettington is told he will be forced to assist. Radway becomes despondently ill.

"Please leave me," she said. "I want to be alone."

When the door was shut she looked down at the white face. There he lay, who had trampled her heart in the dust; who had satisfied her ambition for a little while, and then given her so large a measure of unhappiness. She wondered why, as she gazed at the heavy-lidded, half-closed eyes, she had not long ago shaken herself free of him. She supposed it was because of his dominance. Such dominance as he had captured a girlish fancy and she had never been able to rid herself of it. . . . Women, she told herself wearily, are so different from men. Less gross, or more stupid . . . which was it?

When she rang the bell it was for Captain Hallett she sent.

"How soon can we get back to New York?" she demanded when he had recovered from his astonishment at the spectacle.

He considered a moment.

"I'm afraid we won't get there in time, I mean," he said in confusion, for he had a natural delicacy at such a moment, "we may have to bury him at sea."

"Very well," she said, "I will leave it in your hands. And Captain Hallett, you complained that Mr. Radway did not give you complete charge. I shall remedy that. Tell the steward to come to the library."

She looked with the utmost distaste at this small grinning man.

"I have told Captain Hallett," she said quietly, "that he has absolute control now."

"Hain't he been captain heretofore, madam?" Clements returned.

"You know what she means," Hallett said fiercely. "I don't want to speak disrespectfully of the dead, but Mr. Radway was too easy with you. He gave you authority you hadn't any right to, and Mr. Radway is taking that away from you. Isn't that what you mean, madam?"

"Exactly. You understand, Mr. Clements?"

"I fear I do not, madam. Captain Hallett suffers from an inability to think clearly or correctly. You will invariably find such characteristics with his type of skull. He is narrow and prejudiced and seems my enemy although I have tried to help him."

"Help me!" Hallett snorted.

Clements still addressed his remarks to Mrs. Radway. "With your permission, madam, I will announce Captain Hallett's promotion to this men. It will amuse them."

"Please let us have no violence," Mrs. Radway said sharply. She had seen a baleful light in the captain's eye and had noted the clenched fist and the step forward.

"I'll attend to him later," Hallett said, breathing hard.

"I hope you will do nothing of the sort," she said. "Personally, I have witnessed none of the slights you refer to. I have only noticed that you are uniformly unkind to Doctor Waite and never lose an opportunity to speak ill of Clements."

"They're two of a kind," he said sagaciously.

She made a gesture of weariness.

"I want to hear nothing more about it," she said.

"It's my duty to tell you," he persisted. "There's something wrong with the crew."

"You are captain," she reminded him.

"I'll show them I am," he cried and made his way to deck.

Slowly Mrs. Radway went to Mary's stateroom. The girl was dressing hurriedly. She turned and saw her.

"My dear," said the elder woman, "we are going back to New York. Mr. Radway died last night."

Then, suddenly, she broke down and wept tumultuously.

Mary tried in vain to stem the torrent of tears. "She must have loved him, after all," thought the girl. She was not to know how much of relief was gained in this coming quiet after all these years. Evelyn Radway found herself free. No more need she fear all those subtle, cruel little things which he had so often amused himself, or look forward to succeeding years with dread.

"You must send your parents a wireless," she said when she was more composed, "but I can't spare you, Mary. You must not leave me when we get ashore. I have had very few loyal friends in my life and I need some now."

On deck Captain Hallett was already asserting himself. He stopped squarely before Bettington, who was pacing up and down.

"A word with you," he said peremptorily. "I command this ship, and I'll have no plotting or insubordination."

"Quite right," said Bettington mildly.

"I was talking to Mrs. Radway awhile back, and I said that you and your pal, the steward, were two of a kind."

"I am always sure of a kindly pat on the back from you," Bettington answered. It was not so easy to return meek answers to a man of Hallett's type. "I had an idea you men of the sea were bluff, hearty sort of fellows, and yet you tell me you have been saying things to Mrs. Radway which were unwarrantable. . . . It is that your mariners' way of giving a man a square deal?"

"A square deal for square men is my motto," Hallett retorted. "I say what I mean and I mean what I say. I don't like you."

How impossible it seemed to be able to make a confidant and ally of such an incarnate prejudice as this! He watched Hallett cross to the wireless house; there must be some sort of kindness in the man, for he put his arms about the shoulders of his nephew and young Unwin in a friendly fashion.

"The fool!" Bettington muttered. "Those three and I are the only ones aboard to guard the women if there's trouble; he makes it very hard for me."

He turned to see Clements coming toward him.

"Doctor," said the steward loud enough for the captain to hear. "I'd be glad if you'd have a look at my throat. It feels like tonsillitis."

"All you steward," Hallett called, "I'm using your quarters for the rest of the trip. You can berth amidships."

Bettington, as he followed Clements to his doctor's office, wondered what rage was tearing at the vitals of this lithe, deadly man.

"If Hallett only knew it," said Clements, "the noise he is making is really his death rattle." He flung himself into a seat. "There's nothing the matter with my throat, but he isn't allowed to come in here without your permission; that's shipboard etiquette. Hallett has practically told Grammann that if the wireless isn't ready for sending messages in a few hours' time, he'll put him in irons."

"That won't hurt you," Bettington said. "Why look on it as a great misfortune?"

"Because with Grammann out of the way they'll put the instrument in shape. I can't have it known that Radway is dead."

"It will have to be known. We are running back to New York now."

"But we shan't get there. Listen to me, Orme. I thought when I saw him lying dead that the whole game was up, just as you did. But it isn't. Mrs. Radway is a rich woman in her own right and she is Radway's sole heiress. She will be one of the richest women in a world of rich women. If I could get a million from Radway, I can get it just as easily from her."

Bettington shook his head obstinately.

"The cases are not parallel. Mrs. Radway is not money mad. Her fortunes are not dependent on her personal exertion."

"You miss the whole point of it," Clements returned. "She, like Radway, will see that a million is the easiest way out."

"Out of what?" Bettington cried sharply.

"Difficulties. I shall not specify them. One is named Sam and the other is known as Metzger."

"Impossible," Bettington asserted. "What about Hallett and the others?"

"You have heard the death rattle in his throat. As to the others, what are they but boys? There will be no trouble at all. I think I can prevail upon Mrs. Radway to see what is best to be done. I count on your influence with her. Naturally Hallett has tried to influence her and most likely something of what he has said has made its way. She will realize that her position aboard is different now. Radway was the conventional protection and now he is removed. Inevitably, she will become more reserved, but that will not mean she has ceased to have confidence in you."

Bettington experienced keen pleasure in this comforting thought. It was quite probable that she would feel as Clements said.

"What do you want me to do?" he demanded.

"This is my plan," said Clements. "I want her assurance that the money will be paid. If she agrees to do this without consulting lawyers or friends, I shall let that fool of a captain run the Albatross into the East river and rant and dictate as he chooses. I shall attend to him at my leisure. She will refuse at first; she will certainly want to consult some one. Women always do. I shall forbid her to tell Hallett. He would never allow it on a ship he commanded. He couldn't. He's the obstinate, honest sort, who would meet death for a prejudice and think he was dying for principle. She will talk to you."

"And she'll find me backing you up very strongly." What was a million dollars compared with the immunity it bought!

"I am going to see her now," Clements rose without any appearance of haste. "It may be she will call you in while I am there. You will be indignant, angry, threatening, until I point out the strength of my position. Then you will see light."

What a damnable situation to be in! Bettington was a man who detested deceit and how he was committed to the practice of it in order to safeguard the woman for whom he cared.

The Girl Was Dressing Hurriedly; She Feared She Was Late.

his sister and Crosby were grouped together. Hammer was polishing brasses near the bridge; Hallett was in the chartroom and a deckhand, named Mike, at the wheel.

"I must not run the risk of being interrupted," he said gravely. "I suggest the library, madam, if you will permit it."

When she had taken a seat below and had told Clements to sit, she asked him for what reason he needed privacy.

"I have observed you for some time now," Mrs. Radway began, "and I think you will keep calmer than most women when I tell you what you must hear."

"She noticed that he had dropped the use of 'madam'." He was no longer the obliging and civil steward. Although he was courteous, his manner was that of an equine.

"What I have to say," he continued, "directly concerns the safety of, among other people, Miss Unwin. I am going to ask you to promise me, you will not consult Captain Hallett or his nephew on what I tell you. They are too much prejudiced to be of value."

"And if I decline?"

He reflected a moment.

"I am going to rely on your intelligence when you have heard my news to do as I advise. Mrs. Radway, you must know that I am not a steward at all. I assumed this grotesque and braided jacket for special reasons. The death of your husband upset my plans."

"Then what are you?" she demanded. Clements was glad she did not show fear, although he was sure she experienced it. He knew there was no creature so difficult to deal with as a hysterical woman.

"A collector of coins. You might call my hobby by a harder name. At considerable cost I induced Mr. Radway to buy this boat. Gathering the crew together was another item. It was my intention to hold your husband to ransom for a million dollars."

He outlined his plan and the reasons for which he believed success would have been certain. But he made no mention of the forger's name.

"You horrify me," she cried, "and I am glad your plans have come to naught."

"But have they?" he returned. "That's just the point. I admit I feared they had at first. You are his heir, Mrs. Radway, and I shall tax you the same sum. If you agree to pay me the money and swear not to take any legal steps against me, I will engage that the trip back to New York will be swift and free from unpleasantness. Hallett will never need to know anything."

"I shall not pay you. I will not lend myself to such an infamous thing."

"Then you will put yourself to a great deal of trouble," he said in an even tone. "Much more trouble than you can imagine. Let us take the thing in detail. You inform Hallett. Very well. He will try to intimidate the crew. He will find himself, if I can save him in time, in irons. Leary, one of my men, assumed command and we turn again south. We shall coal at the Bahamas."

"You will have to give us some time or another. The authorities will look for us."

"Oh, no. Miss Unwin will have written to her parents, stating that you are remaining away for an indefinite period. The time which was to have forged your husband's letters will forge Mrs. Leary's. From you will be received by your attorneys in New York to the same effect. I have left nothing to chance."

"But after a time you will have to give in. You cannot keep us away for ever."

"After a time, my dear lady—that is, if you wear out my patience—you will not want to return to your native land; nor will the girl Mary. Certainnow, you are a woman of the world. Consider the situation; consider the type of men there are aboard. . . . I observed that during the service just over, you could not help looking at the chief engineer. He is the man with the crooked nose and the eyes like polished jet. There is a man who is hard to handle. And you may have seen the man called Sam. He is the broad-shouldered creature with the rolling walk and enormous face. In his less angry moods he likes the solace of youth."

Evelyn Radway put her hands over her burning face.

"Stop! stop!" she cried. Most vividly the horrors presented themselves to her which he had but hinted at. They were ravaging wolves. She wondered how many more of them were hidden in the secret places of this horrible vessel to come out like jungle animals in the darkness. Little Mary Unwin, who had been allowed to come on the trip because she had promised to take care of her!

"I am glad you see what lies in store if you are foolish enough to force my hand. You are helpless. It is fortunate a man of my temperament is in command."

He wondered what sudden thought changed her face. She was looking at him with almost a pleading way.

"Is—Is Doctor Waite one of your men?"

"No. What makes you think that?"

He could see that her relief was enormous.

"Captain Hallett told me you and he were so much together." She felt ashamed that she had doubted him. She ought to have known that he was one of the dependable, loyal men of the stuff true friends are made of. There was one man aboard on whom she could rely for guidance. Clements made the surgeon's position even more reasonable.

"My health is indifferent and I have needed his care. I suppose you wish to talk this over with him. Warn him that a word to Hallett, his nephew or the Unwins, and there will be bloodshed instantly. If once fighting begins, even I can't say when it will cease."

He did not try to emphasize matters. He could see that she had made up her mind. She would not let Hallett know. The matter of the payment would be taken up when she was in a more composed frame of mind. The coming interview with Andrew Orme would be of great service to him. A million dollars! With his lion's share of it, what might not his next carefully planned coup realize?

Most criminals have longed to be able to start anew with the knowledge the years have brought them and freed from those marks of identification which the police record so well. Perhaps in all the history of crime there had been no such case as that of the man who called himself by the name of Clements. Not again would he be run the risks that he had once taken. With money, he could always hire men for the roughest work.

He roused himself from these pleasing reflections when Mrs. Radway rose to her feet. She was a beautiful woman. There was little to marvel at in the doctor's surrender to her charms. He rather liked the man he thought of as Andrew Orme, and he hoped Andrew Orme liked him. The minor operation of which he had spoken was in reality one of extreme delicacy; no bungler must attempt it. He intended to keep Orme with him permanently. Facial surgery was not old enough for anyone to risk with certainty how well it would last.

"I think I should like to see Doctor Waite," Mrs. Radway said.

"I will send him in, but caution you not to let him try any violence with me or endeavor to make Hallett an ally. If he disobeys your warning he may be dooming you to a worse danger than he knows."

Bettington was in his room.

"Mrs. Radway wants you. Everything has turned out as I wished. She will warn you not to be violent to me; she thinks you are her only friend. It will not be difficult; already she believes in you. You have no prejudices to overcome."

Old Structures High as Modern Skyscraper

The skyscraper is probably our most striking achievement, says Emil Lorch, professor of architecture.

"Europeans are thrilled by its daring fusion of art and science and by the unusual street effects, and skyscrapers are created by these huge towerlike masses which rise here and there about the cities, much as the cathedrals over the lower and more even outlines of foreign towns.

French Superstitions

To a considerable extent, the French peasants still attach credence to the evil eye, to witches, to werewolves and to other weird medieval superstitions, in spite of years of persistent effort to eradicate these primitive beliefs. In many remote villages of Normandy and Brittany belief in heathen deities also survives. Sacred trees are the object of midnight worship, when young girls gather to dance in the moonlight, as in the days of Druidical heathendom. Healers and medicine men abound in the rural districts and certain animals still are treated with reverential awe. Cases involving superstition are constantly coming to the attention of the French courts.

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

By GEORGE DORRIS, Ph.D., LL.D.

Why Women Kiss Some Men

DURING the month of August, 1914, a great nation lost its character but gained a reputation.

Character seems to be an essence, a spirit, a core, a stuff, that defies analysis like consciousness or unconscious mind. "If I could only get at his true character," we say, as though it were something quite beyond range of investigation. Or at least beyond anyone but a psycho-analyst; he might be able to "draw it out."

What do we do with a bottle that "looks like gin but may be poison"? Try it, or have a friend try it, or send it to a chemical laboratory. Are there laboratories where character may be analyzed? There are: palmists, phrenologists, handwriting experts, Freudists, mind-readers, clairvoyants, Swamis, mystics, and charlatans—ignorant and honest or wise, and dishonest. They all "read" character.

While they are in the inner shrine with some one's "true character" or "inner self," let us not forget that human beings do not come like buttons from a mold but in individual packages. There is probably a prize in every package, if we only looked for it or knew how to find it. These packages come with a limited repertoire of habits, an unlimited amount of emotion, and an enormous capacity to learn. Further, they are keen to learn: their very bodies itch for action—they could not have peopled the earth and enslaved nature otherwise. Further, these little packages, in the natural process of becoming untied and budding like a rose or a sunflower as is their bent, become more and more tied up, with the result that by the time one is old enough to vote—whether it has learned what the ballot means or not—it belongs to mother's church and father's party, and wears the clothes, thinks the thoughts, and swears by the flag the family and the community have wished on it.

In short, its "character" may be hit, its reputation fine. But it is a person and is so recognized by law. It has a personality. It is a going concern. Where and how fast and how long it goes, and when it will throw a fit or jump the track or explode, depend. . . . Fill in the details yourself.

We do, every day: Shall I marry her? Does he love me? Shall we invite them? Shall I accept his invitation? Shall we let her go to the dance with him? Dare I make the venture? Is he fit for our son to play with? Is his note good? Shall I employ him? Is she a good cook? Is he an honest chauffeur? Would you, if you were I?

How do we answer these questions? Call in a palmist? Some do, or there would be no palmists. But most of us answer them as we answer other questions, such as: Wonder if I dare eat that pie? Is it a real ruby? Is this a good lipstick? Shall I buy Q. E. D. or sell P. D. Q.? Shall we send Willie to Brown or Green? Is this road safe? Shall we go to the movies or to church? Is the beer all gone? Shall we quit now or play till morning? Is this suit good enough? Shall I endow a charity now or steal another million?

We make mistakes. With original sin loose in the world, we must. We make mistakes in persons and things.

A "pleasant," "thrilling," "absorbing" personality is one we like to touch. Men shake their hands. Women kiss them. When "I instinctively like that person," the instinct that is talking is an unanalyzed sexual or emotional slant based on early habits of love. A "lovable" personality within the same sex is possible because sharp leanings toward the other sex were not formed at the time sex matured. Co-education is sanitary education.

We jump at our personality conclusions. We know he cannot be this and she cannot be that. What we really know is that some personalities appeal to us, others do not. We can rarely give the real reason for our spontaneous judgments. Personalities are rather more complex than apples or motor cars.

The most "erect carriage" may be the greatest social scoundrel unhung. The "intelligent brow" may be housed under a dunce's cap. The "squarest chin" may be a weak sister and the most henpecked man in town.

Some things do show through: elation, despondency, etc. But the rosiest cheeked apple may have a wormy heart. A woman with a homely face covers it with hat and tresses, and sells herself on her form.

Pick 50 men at random from Fifth avenue. Take them to the Tombs, shave their heads and photograph them. Mix the photographs in with those of 50 inmates. Call in your mind-readers and character experts. How many will they pick out? As many as the law of chance allows them. Now take the 50 inmates, dress them in the hair and clothes of the new arrivals, and drop them along Fifth avenue. Call in your character experts. If they can pick these 50 "toughs" off Fifth avenue, they should report to the chief of police of New York or the attorney general of the United States. Jobs await such men.

People who read character from hands like to hold hands; and vice versa. If they pay to have their hands held they do not lose their personality, only their money.

Methodist Church

There is no law against fishing on Sunday in New Mexico. It is well. We have too many laws anyway. Still there are six other days in the week besides Sunday. And fish are no respecters of days. They will bite on one day as well as another. They are good to eat any day, specially Friday. Likewise we can go to church any day in the week. But the Fisherman of Gallilee went to church on the Sabbath Day. And wouldn't it be better to crowd the House of the Lord on His Day rather than to crowd the fishing streams? Too many fishers spoil the fishing. The pastor hereby offers his services to fish, cut bait, or eat fish for all and sundry on any day except Sunday. Now let all fishers, and this goes for golfers and other Sunday amusement seekers, as well, forsake not the Lord on Sunday. The pastor is broadminded. "He will not always chide, neither will he keep his anger forever," yet he can quote scripture. Note the following: "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and let thine heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the night of thine eyes; But know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." The Lord gave us seven days in the week. One of them He commanded us to keep holy. But why say more? You are bigger than a fish, and you'll be at church next Sunday, won't you? Thank you.

STEEL ECLIPSE Windmill

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stand just across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze the one started up smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a racket and lumbered over only as long as the wind raised a dust in the road. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came sensibly to rest with the last trace of the drying breeze. That is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between turned, ground and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts; the difference between machined and polished bearings and ordinary bearings; the difference between running in oil and running with dry gears. In other words, it is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse Self-Starting Steel Eclipse Windmill and just a plain windmill. Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the following features—the constant 100 bearings—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will form a new idea of how good a windmill can be.
