CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JUNE 13, 1930

Ft. Stanton News

Saturday afternoon saw one of the best ball games ever played on the local diamond. The game was without a score until the seventh inning. At the close of the ninth the game stood 4 to 4. Visitors retired first half of tenth inning, with a run. Percy got on second with Cox at bat. A hit to center field where there was nobody home, brought in the winning run. Moody pitched a beautiful game, with Pharris finishing out the tenth. Sunday's game was a run-around for our boys—20 to 2, with Fort Bliss using four pitchers against us. It is always a pleasure to witness a game between our boys and any of the Fort Bliss teams. Their conduct is always that of gentlemen.

Plans go merrily ahead for the annual 4th of July picnic. Dr. Westhafer is passing on all bids for concessions, and is in charge of sanitation. People from away can be assured that the handling of all foods and dishes will be by people who are well and the direct supervision of Dr. Westhafer.

Herbert Lee and R. L. Traylor accompanied by Joe Evans departed Sunday morning for Las Vegas where R. L. and Joe will engage for the full 12 weeks work in summer school.

Attorney E. M. Barber and Editor John A. Haley were pleasant visitors at the Fort Sunday afternoon.

Mr. John R. Herting, genial owner of the Ft. Stanton Store, made a trip to Roswell last week and came home the owner of a new Graham Paige coupe.

Mr. J. R. Werner of Glencoe accompanied by Mrs. Werner's sister Mrs. Williamson, her husband and daughter, of Navarro county Texas, visited the Werner boys at the Fort Monday. Ralph went home with the visitors for a visit.

Fished in Rio Grande

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Harris and two grandchildren, Anna Bell Cole and Roe Johnson, returned Tuesday evening from a week's visit to a sister of Mr. Harris, at Fort Quitman, Texas. While there they angled for the big ones in the Rio Grande, and brought a specimen home with them, which belonged to the siluridae family, or in everyday english, a huge catfish. We enjoyed some delicious steaks from the big fellow.

We Make the Correction

S. E. Gilbert and son Hayden were here Wednesday from their ranch near Ancho. They said we were in error in our article concerning the Ancho homicide, last week, when we stated that Hayden Gilbert, charged with the killing of C. G. Garde, "came to town next morning and surrendered." Both father and son state that Hayden came to the sheriff's office between 9 and 10 o'clock the night of the killing, and this correction was requested, which is made accordingly.

rie Cavanaugh were delighted to greet her at the Fort Stanton Store, after a lengthy absence on account of sickness.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hobbs, and three boys, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burleson, Velma and Tommie, Mrs. Ernest Ludlum, Ernestine and Kenneth, left, left Sunday morning for the Nelson ranch where they were invited to a turkey dinner. There they met the Stover family from Hondo and the Roy Copeland family from Capitan. Mrs. Nelson is noted for her hospitality and excellent table and all enjoyed the outing very much.

Tomorrow, June 14, is Flag Day. The old banner should be displayed everywhere.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Stokes came in the past week from Midland, Texas, and will remain at the ranch for an indefinite period. The Stokes' are busy on the ranch, recently purchased from Bob Sowder, improving here and there and developing an additional water supply.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Birney, and children came in last Friday from Houston, Texas, and will be in and around here for the better part of this month. Mr. Birney at one time taught school here, and Mrs. Birney was formerly Miss Ivy Bingham, daughter of Mrs. C. L. Robinson.

Mrs. J. Sherman Ross arrived Monday, coming from Oklahoma City, to join her husband, and the couple occupy the Pace cottage on Alamogordo Avenue. The Ross family were residents of Carrizozo a number of years, during which time Mr. Ross had the same position with Paden's Drug Store he again holds. Carrizozo welcomes the Ross', which, however, is now a divided family, the parents having lost Charlie in a recent ceremonial when another woman walked off with him.

Automobile and Airplane

Detroit, Mich., June—A Chevrolet six recently played an important role here in what is believed to be the first case on record of a head-on collision between an automobile and an airplane.

The car, one of twelve Chevrolet sixes used by Detroit-Immigration authorities in border patrol work, was being driven by Stanley Zerambo, senior inspector, whose duties consist in thwarting attempts to smuggle aliens across the border.

Inspector Zerambo had to his credit six planes seized in this nefarious traffic, and had been watching for some time a seventh plane said to have operated for six weeks on regular schedule flying aliens from Canada to American soil.

After several attempts to seize the plane, its pilot and illegal cargo had failed, Inspector Zerambo was scouting along the Detroit river front shortly after sunrise, on June 1, when he spotted the plane heading for Canada toward an open field just beyond the Detroit city line. Speeding to the spot Inspector Zerambo swung into the field in his Chevrolet just as the plane landed, and drove directly into its path to shut off retreat.

When the pilot saw the official car in front of him, he sought to ward off capture by speeding the motor up in a desperate effort to take off again. Inspector Zerambo, in the split second available to make a decision, weighted the ruggedness of the car against the strength of the plane, and drove head-on into the whirring propeller.

Result: Another seized plane added to Inspector Zerambo's impressive record—a disabled plane with a shattered propeller and a damaged wing; two alien prisoners; an escaped pilot; Insp. Zerambo slightly shaken up and bruised; and a car with a damaged right front door, fender, radiator and the radiator cap picked off by the propeller.

Despite the damage to the Chevrolet it came out a decided victor in the crash, for while the plane was totally disabled, Inspector Zerambo was able to back the car out of the wreckage and drive it under its own power, with his prisoners safely aboard, to Detroit headquarters.

Las Vegas Reunion

Las Vegas will hold its 16th annual "Cowboy Reunion" July 3-4-5. The "Reunion" has become one of the most popular events of its kind in the Southwest, and we'll willingly contribute our mite in the way of publicity by quoting a few paragraphs from the splendid folder the association is sending out. The quotation, which follows, relates to the birth and growth and purposes of this celebrated organization:

"The 'Cowboys' Reunion' at Las Vegas, New Mexico, is unique and apart from all the numerous other Cowboy shows, rodeos, exhibitions or whatever name such events may be called. The 'Cowboys' Reunion' is the 'Original' and 'Only' Rodeo; or, exhibition of cowboy sports owned and managed by cowmen and cowboys—real active men of the range.

There is nothing just like it west or east, north or south. Real cowmen, real cowboys, meeting once each year—the first week in July—to participate in or view this contest in cowboy sports.

In the cattle country the various outfits of a region once or twice a each year round-up and separate their stock.

Out on the open range far from athletic fields and equipment, the cowboy athletes turned to horses and range cattle. Supremacy in riding broncos or outlaw horses, wrestling steers and expertness

Thus the "Cowboys' Reunion" at Las Vegas, New Mexico, is the only modern sport known to be the outgrowth of an industry.

Most of the rodeos and "wild west" shows existing over the country are in the hands of promoters and commercialized, but here at Las Vegas, in the heart of a great cow country and actually "in the west," the boys owning and managing the "Cowboys' Reunion" spend their money, time and effort and risk life and limb for the fun, thrill and excitement and to keep alive their cherished memories of the "good old days" rapidly passing into oblivion.

Fibbing About Our Gas Mileage

By M. K. THOMSON, Ph. D.

WHEN you get married you take your partner for better or for worse. In acquiring an automobile you take no such vows publicly, but the two situations are not altogether dissimilar. You cannot keep from becoming very much identified with your car and to fly to its defense, quite unconsciously, in case of attack on its virtues and vices.

It takes some occurrence, some rude shock such as enormous repair bills, and such other heart-rending incidents as being towed in through crowded streets where your friends are likely to witness your humiliation that you get to the point of contemplating divorce.

Ordinarily, however, every man is loyal to his own car. Our affection for the old bus increases as its market value decreases. Its weather-beaten features serve to endear the old faithful servant who has grown old and feeble for our sake. There are bound to spring up emotional attachments and sentiments after going through exciting experiences together.

We sometimes grow sentimental over the family car and refuse to trade it off and turn it out to pasture as a worn-out horse. The attitude is one of true comradeship. We hate to have any dealer look it over with a view of placing a price on its head. It hurts not only our pride but also outrages our sense of loyalty.

We fib about the gasoline mileage as we do about anything else connected with the car out of a sense of loyalty and on the ground of common decency.

We fib about our gasoline mileage because it is expected of us. We also fib because we want to make a good impression, to show off our skill in buying a good car in the first place and in keeping it in good repair and in getting the most out of it. The chief reason briefly stated is that in complimenting the car we compliment ourselves.

We fib about our gasoline mileage for the same reasons that a mother always sides with her boy.

The Mud Turpin

By Hugh Hutton.

(Author of Nutty Natural History)

THE mud turpin (accent on the third syllable) or cockeyed terrapin is often found basking in the silversheets in the vicinity of Hollywood. It lives exclusively on custard pies, and when alarmed will pop out of sight in among the slap sticks. A few have been captured, and it was found that their shells when boiled down made a good substitute for celluloid film, but the cost at present is too high.

The picture shows a full-grown turpin surprised at its evening pie feed. The shell in this case is a half walnut shell, and a double peanut does for the head. The eyes with their crooked alignment are navy beans and pen and ink. Feet and tail are cloves, and the spots can be painted or left to the imagination.

Arkansas Town Is Governed by Women

Two men who, it is reported, would not get themselves jobs, were ordered out of town by this all-female government of the little Ozark mountain town of Yellville, Ark. The ladies, whose feminine government is the only one of its kind in Arkansas, are: back row, left to right, Mrs. Alma Berry, Mrs. A. A. Thompson, Mrs. Abbie Cowdrey, Mrs. M. O. Hutchinson, and Mrs. E. R. Record, all aldermen; front row, left to right, Miss O'Beta Carson, treasurer; Mrs. Virginia L. Walto, mayor, and Mrs. Lena Mowlin, recorder.

No Woman Wants to Dominate

By JEAN NEWTON

"HOW she dominates. The way she runs everything, disregarding her husband! I don't see how that man stands it! Don't you hate dominating women?"

I wasn't asked the question. I merely overheard it. But I'm going to answer it.

I hate the spectacle of a woman dominating, a woman who "runs everything, disregarding her husband." But I don't hate the woman. I pity her.

For I know that every dominating wife is a disappointed woman. With full allowance for such matters as ability, disposition, inclination, I am nevertheless convinced that dominating people are not born, but made. If you will investigate the life of any dominating person, man or woman, you are almost certain to find that they had responsibility thrust upon them so early in life that it became natural for them to shoulder burdens and handle situations. They were forced to dominate.

No woman naturally wants to dominate over her husband. No matter what the part she may have had to play—before, every normal woman when she marries wants to be dominated. In fact the more spirited a woman is the more certain is she to seek a mate whom she can look up to, the less likely to be attracted by a man whom she might expect to dominate over.

A girl of my acquaintance who since the age of sixteen has had the responsibility of caring for a widowed invalid mother and the upbringing of two younger children, remarked to me that because of her years of responsibility her idea of heaven was a place where some one would dominate her. "When I am free to marry," she said,

"I shall be the most clinging of clinging vines. Bring me a masterful man."

That is merely a case in point of the principle that even the woman who has had to dominate others, does not naturally wish to dominate her husband. Whatever the spirit of the age may have done to us, however the circumstances of our lives may have molded us, there is but one instinct that has bridged centuries and perhaps cons to show up anachronism though it may be, in the most modern of normal women.

Therefore when I see a woman dominating over her husband, bringing up her family on her own, taking important steps alone, making decisions which affect their common welfare without consulting him, I hate the spectacle, but I pity the woman. For in the echo of those acts I hear reverberations of a cruel necessity. Behind the unnatural role she is playing I see the shadow of a husband either too weak to take his rightful part in their partnership, or, more often, too lazy. Most often I see the type of man who fulfills his responsibility with the remark, "Why should I bother about that when you can do it so well?" or facetiously, "Why should I do the worrying when you worry so much better?"

"She calls her sweetie Paul Reverse," says Catty Katrinka, "because he's always calling her to arms."

It is those men who make dominating wives.

THE GARDEN FOLK HAVE PICTURES TAKEN

(A Story for Your Crayons.)
The carrots, the lettuce, the beans and the peas.
At home in the garden so gay,
Were talking together, when K. Carrot said,
"I've a plan for this beautiful day."
"Now haven't you noticed, Miss Lettuce and I
Look stunning together—and you,
Dear Mrs. Tomato, with color so high,
Are looking your very best, too."
"We should all have our photographs taken, I think.
While we're at our most beautiful best."
Said young Beane Bean, with the air of a queen,
"I'll be sure to be stylishly dressed."
"I'll wear my green frock and my slippers of jade,
And my hat shall be dainty and trim,
I'm glad I'm not fat, if I do say it myself,
It's the fashion, they say, to be slim."
Mr. Radish and Roddy, his fat little boy,
Thought the plan would be certainly fun,
"I'll be a fine picture, for where could you find
A handsomer father and son?"

A PICTURE PUZZLE

Find the following: Ruth's sister, her doll, a squirrel and the aviator.

Then Peter Potato, his solemn eyes blinked,
And said, "I approve of this plan,
'Tis my duty, I see, to take charge of this thing,
So I'll send for the camera man."
Then Mrs. Green Peasod in flutter of fear
(She always was nervous and shy),
Posed this way and that and retitled her hat,
And arranged a curl over one eye.
The slightly green balloons were trembling with dread,
And as usual were given to tears,
'Til Mamma Tomato said, "Come, here's the man."

New try to look pleasant, my dears."
So they all sat and looked at the little black hole,
When the camera man said, "Look! If the picture is good we will send it away.
For a page in a picture book."
And sure enough, here on the page they stand,
Do you think they were pleased with the sight?
They cried out in anger, they trembled with rage,
Such treatment they said was not right.
"Where are our dresses of scarlet and green,
And where are our colors so gay?"
And Peter Potato looked solemn and stern,
And said he would write right away.
No decent potato would wear black and white!
Such carrots had never been seen!
And Mrs. Tomato just looked like a fright,
And who ever heard of a bean
So pale and anemic!—The radishes, too,
Should be just as red as a rose.
"Oh, Editor Dear, ask the children,
we pray,
To give us our beautiful clothes."
So children get busy, your friends are distressed,
And paint them as bright as you can.
Perhaps once again, in their bright colors dressed,
They'll forgive the poor camera man.

Things the Family Will Like

By NELLIE MAXWELL

"There is no noble height thou canst not climb;
All triumphs may be thine in time's futurity
If, whatsoever thy fault thou dost not falter or halt
But lean upon the staff of God's security."

EVERYBODY knows how to make peanut brittle—but if that is too much trouble, buy some, and prepare the following dish; the children will like it as well as their daddy does:
Scalloped Apples With Peanut Brittle.
Take six large, tart apples, peel and slice. Spread the apples in a thin layer over the bottom of a baking dish, sprinkle with salt, four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, add a layer of peanut brittle and repeat. Put the candy on top of the last layer. Bake in a slow oven for one hour.

Spanish Delight.
Cut two lettuce hearts into quarters; peel and cut into quarters two ripe tomatoes, cut one cucumber into dice, one sweet pepper shredded, two hard-boiled eggs sliced, and season with salt and pepper to taste. Arrange on the lettuce and serve with a snappy French dressing.

Challenge Lemon Pie.
Beat the yolks of three eggs until light. To this add the juice of one lemon and the grated rind of two, three tablespoonfuls of hot water, one-half cupful of sugar and salt to taste. Cook in a double boiler until thick, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Fill a baked shell with the mixture and place in the oven to brown.

Orange Cocktail a la Canada.
Place thinly sliced orange well chilled in sherbet cup; over each pour two tablespoonfuls of maple syrup. Strained honey may be used for variety if desired.
Honey is especially wholesome as a sweet for children and should be used freely in their diet.

Rhubarb Punch.
Take one quart each of rhubarb and water. Cut the rhubarb into small pieces and cook in the water until soft. Strain through a double cheese cloth, add one-third of a cupful of orange juice, four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar syrup, pinch of salt and a pint of sparkling water. Mix well and when ready to serve add ice and the sparkling water. Serve very cold.

There is much to be said for women—but they can say it themselves.

BEST BREEDS OF HORNLESS CATTLE

Aberdeen-Angus Noted for Their Beef Qualities.

First and foremost among the breeds of cattle which are naturally hornless must be classed the Aberdeen-Angus. All black except for an occasional small patch of white on the belly, these animals are noted for their beef qualities. Docile by nature they make good gains on fattening rations. Aberdeen-Angus cattle are not generally so large as the other two beef breeds, Short-horns, and Herefords, full-grown bulls seldom weighing more than a ton, while cows average about 1,400. Another polled, or hornless breed which resembles the Angus is the Galloway. This breed is also black in color, the main difference between it and the Angus being the long curly hair. Slightly smaller than the Angus, the Galloway has often defeated the former in killing tests at the fat stock shows in England. Both breeds had their origin in Scotland but the Aberdeen-Angus is widely distributed in England, the United States and Canada, while few Galloway herds are to be found on this continent, due probably to their slow maturing qualities.

The Red Polled breed of cattle are noted for the production of both beef and milk. They are red in color, midway in size between the Angus and the Shorthorn. Originating in the southern part of England they are becoming popular in the middle western United States and in western Canada, where many strong herds have been built up.

Both the Shorthorn and the Hereford breeds of beef cattle have established herd books for some of their breeders who have herds of Polled animals. Sprung originally from a sport, i.e. an animal born without horns from horned parents, or in some cases graded up from native hornless cattle, these cattle retain all the usual characteristics of their parent breeds but have added advantage from a beef raising point of view of being without horns.

It has been suggested that the time may come when all breeds of cattle may be bred without horns.

Shade for Porkers Is Most Profitable Plan

Giving your pigs a cool, shady place in which to lie during the hot summer months will put pounds of pork on their backs and extra dollars in your pocket.
A pig cannot be expected to put on the cheapest and fastest gains if he is compelled to spend summer days in a hot, stuffy, dusty shed or depend on the north side of the shed for shade.
If you have trees in your hog lot the shade problem is solved. If you have no trees a shade may be built cheaply. A little time, a few waste posts and lumber and some woven wire are needed.

Set a post at each corner. If the shade is large it is well to set a couple of posts along the sides also. Nail planks or saplings to the posts. Next throw a few boards or limbs of trees across the top at regular intervals. Then stretch the woven wire fencing across the top. Weeds or hay may then be thrown on the woven wire roof.
Build the shade away from the buildings so the air and wind can move through it freely. It should be high enough so the wind can easily pass underneath.

Live Stock Hints

Don't feed a ration containing corn alone to any class of stock.

Not all pigs that manage to survive are necessarily profit makers.

Registered cattle with long-time records in their pedigrees are bringing the most money.

Don't feed animals worth keeping poorly because they are not producing; feed them and give them a chance.

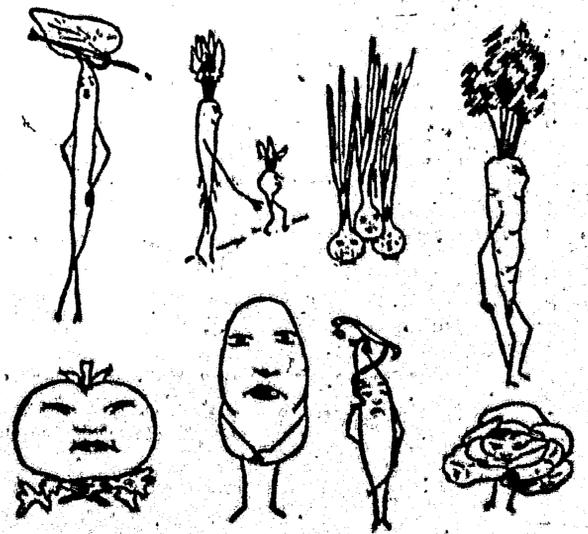

Feeding and care of sheep have a definite relationship to the growth of wool. The weak spot in wool is often caused by lack of proper nutrition which permits growth to become dormant.

There are several things to consider when building a self-feeder for grain. In the first place, it should be as rain-proof as possible with tight joints and a roof which projects a foot or more beyond the feed trough.

More pigs are lost from being washed by the sow than from any other single cause; 15 to 20 per cent of all pigs farrowed meet this fate.

The Karakul, a fur bearing sheep, seems to be gaining in numbers and popularity. South Dakota has recently started several flocks.

Exercise, sunshine, good water, clean surroundings, and plenty of green succulent feed are nature's tonic for young pigs. Provide these for the best porkers.

THE STORY

Floyd Unwin and Howard Bettington take dinner with an old college chum, Alfred Gibbons, financial magnate. Unwin produces a written pledge taken by the three at college to help each other in adversity, explaining that he needs financial assistance to educate his son Bob and daughter Mary. Gibbons agrees to make a place for the daughter in his organization. Mary Unwin is stenographer to a wealthy debauchee, Elgar Radway. Calling at Gibbons' office, as arranged, Mary is asked to betray her employer's secrets and refuses. Radway plans an ocean voyage to recover from the effects of dissipation. Mary is to go as secretary, her brother to accompany her. Bettington, painting on the Maine coast, is kidnapped, and taken aboard Radway's yacht. His clothes are found by Gibbons, a fugitive from justice, who dons them and goes to Bettington's studio, and there falls to his death. Bettington is questioned by a man known as the "Boss." He is shown an account of Gibbons' death, the body being identical as Bettington. The "Boss" intends to hold Radway for $1,000,000 ransom. Bettington is told he will be forced to assist.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

"It was a very serious blow to me, and it's an amazing coincidence that the master can finish what the pupil began. I was in luck there. Listen, Orme. At a word I can send you back for that sentence which will end only when you die. Furthermore, I am not putting myself in your power. You may never know my real name. I could look calmly at the very detectives who had spent years looking for me because I gaze at them with a different face. I will wager that you have seen the face I wore for years. When my bank failed, with such disastrous results, I was in every paper where illustrations are found. Yes, you know the real me. But Clements—the man you are looking at—is only a year old and his past is blameless. It took Beardsley a year to re-create me and it will take you a few minutes probably, to rectify one mistake."

Bettington had heard, often enough of the comparatively new branch of surgery which devoted itself to the face. He had associated it with beauty parlors and quackery in general. Now, suddenly, he was convinced that what Clements said was true.

But to find that he was expected to undertake some of it was horrifying. He shrank from the idea, but would not permit Clements to see it.

"Beardsley must have cut a nerve, for suddenly I found myself with this damnable smile. It never leaves me. Orme, I haunt myself. . . . Sometimes I think I cannot go on living, unless the curse is removed from me. I thought everything was well done. I had finished with Beardsley, before I knew."

Bettington wondered what was the cause of Beardsley's death.

"He died of pneumonia," said Clements, as though he had read the doubt in his companion's mind. "It was a sad blow to me."

"He was never strong," Bettington found himself saying, with gravity. Reluctantly Clements rose and put on the steward's livery coat.

"In this drawer," he said, "you will find some of the most recent books on operative surgery. They may refresh your memory. Take them to your room."

They proved of no benefit to Howard Bettington. Their fildoms were beyond his comprehension. He put the books aside and went out on deck.

Mrs. Radway was sitting in a chaise longue, writing letters. She looked up at Bettington and smiled as he passed.

"I am driven to writing letters to people I have almost forgotten. I'm afraid this is going to be a very dull month, doctor."

"Dull!" he said to himself, as he took a seat and looked out at the placid ocean. "If she only guessed!"

Never, he supposed, in the history of yachting had such a company been assembled by the design of one man. He was tempted to cross the deck to Todd and tell him to wireless to the government what was afoot: if any accident happened to him, what could save Evelyn Radway and Unwin's children?

"The other night," Mrs. Radway began, "it was as a friend I spoke to you. I felt you were friendly to me."

"Indeed, you were right," he said earnestly.

"Now it's to the doctor I am speaking. He hoped his face did not show his alarm and disappointment. "It's about Mr. Radway. I am horribly disappointed in his behavior. He came here to get himself into good ph- I feel certain he has given way to albinism. Doctor Waite, you must help me!"

"How?" he demanded. He was overcome with the layman's feeling of hopelessness in the presence of illness.

"After all, you are a physician, aren't you?"

"Yes," he found himself forced to say. "It seemed horrible to have to tell her a deliberate lie."

"Then it is your duty to go to him and tell him he's killing himself. And couldn't you see that that horrible Clements offered him drinks all the time?" She sighed. "It isn't very pleasant to have to confess that my warnings or pleadings have no longer any effect."

"You wish me to go now?"

"If you would."

"I'm afraid there is very little I can do," he said rising. "I have no sort of authority except what he gives me. If warning him is any good, I'll certainly do that."

He went below and then to the bow of the boat, feeling he was going on a useless errand.

Radway looked up as though he had been expecting such a visit. Except that a purple hue was spread over his face more deep than anything Bettington had ever seen on human visage, he had no air of intoxication. Years before in Paris, Bettington had noted how absinthe acts. It is a curious property of the spirit that its effects vary with the individual. It gave Radway the delusion of incredible powers and predisposed him to acts of physical violence.

"I should like to have them all down here," he said in morbid tone. "I am not sure that a man has lived unless he has actually squeezed the life out of the throats of men he hates."

"What particular lives do you want to end?" Bettington asked.

"The Gibbons gang. Alfred Gibbons first. He and his group have tried for years to hate me to death; it's quite possible."

"They're succeeding apparently," Bettington replied, and pointed to the bottle of absinthe in the rack. "Have you ever thought that they may all be concentrating on you to drink this stuff? I don't know any surer way of death. You better lie down, you look all in."

"It's my constant headache that knocks me out," Radway returned, and pressed his temples as though in pain. "Sometimes it is so bad, I actually am blinded. . . . It's their concentrated hate."

Bettington turned away in disgust. The spectacle of this wreck, drifting toward destruction and blaming others for his disaster, seemed pitiful.

"Don't go," Radway said querulously. "Stay here."

Bettington paid no heed to him. Mrs. Radway was waiting for him anxiously. She could not rid herself of the feeling that this voyage was to end in tragedy.

"Were you able to do anything?" she demanded eagerly.

For the moment he did not answer. He wanted to ask her a question and did not desire her to feel the humiliation of having to endure his gaze as he asked it.

"Have you any reason," he said gently, "to fear physical violence from him in this state?"

There was a perceptible pause before she answered.

"The possibility exists, but it's most remote."

"If you like," he said, "I'll take one of these forward staterooms to be near him."

He hoped she would construe this to mean that he was merely exhibiting the physician's readiness to be at his patient's side in danger. He did not want her to realize that Radway's safety meant nothing to him. He felt she would be frightened to learn that his only concern was to protect her from the violence of a man almost insane.

"I think there is no need for that," she returned gratefully. "In fact, it might anger him if he found it out. He has a hatred of being spied upon, as he calls it."

Mary Unwin came up at this moment with Crosby Todd. Mary smiled pleasantly, but the wireless operator paid no attention to the ship's surgeon. Bettington watched Mary with the artist's admiration as she went off with Todd. She seemed to embody youth.

"I hardly realized the child was so beautiful," he muttered.

"She's in love," said Mrs. Radway. "I don't think she has ever been in love before. She has found a new heaven and a new earth."

Clements smiled.

"There's the man Captain Hallett particularly dislikes," Mrs. Radway said, when he had gone.

"Don't you?" Bettington demanded. Mrs. Radway hesitated. "The nerve quite sure. He is so courteous and has such an agreeable voice. . . . and yet, I sometimes feel afraid. Perhaps it is that settled smile which prejudices one. His features are good. Yes, it must be that smile."

Bettington wondered what the real Clements had been like. The voice had been cultivated to avert suspicion that the face gave rise to. And now the face was gone and one had been created to match the voice.

"Why do you sigh?" Mrs. Radway asked curiously. She noticed that there was a look of sadness, almost of despair, on his face. He was far too good looking, she had often told herself, to have escaped the attentions of her sex. "Something has upset you, doctor," she exclaimed.

He realized suddenly that he was nervous. Suppose the role he had set out to play was one beyond his ability or courage. He thought of Sam and Metzger and Leary, and the leiser men they controlled. Somehow he felt that Clements was only money-jealous and could be satisfied only with money. But Metzger and Sam! Metzger who liked what he called "class," and Sam who loved youth. Even at this moment Sam, enormously broad, prodigiously strong, and in his heart free from all sentiments of pity, was crossing the deck slowly, watching Crosby Todd leaning over the side talking to Mary.

Bettington wondered if there could be a better example of a beautiful woman, beautifully gowned and exquisitely cared for, than the lovely

"You'd Better Lie Down—You Look All In."

Mrs. Radway. She had never been deprived of the luxuries of her class and country. Everything about her was beautiful and rare. What a morsel for Metzger!

Bettington was musing on this when he felt a hand on his shoulder. It was Sam. Sam was looking in the direction of Todd. His great flat face was distorted with rage.

"I seen him kissing my gal," Sam growled.

Bettington shook himself free of the sailor's grasp. "He's young and good looking, and you're not."

Sam paid no attention to this. He was still glaring at the retreating wireless operator. If murder looked out of human eyes it was focused on Todd then by the deep-chested sailor. Bettington was glad he had an excuse to get away from the angry brute. "I must change my clothes for dinner," he said.

They had to wait for Radway. Bettington hoped that the owner would not come to dinner.

Mary Unwin was plainly nervous. Mrs. Radway showed no fear at all. She was playing a bright little dance by Chamade when Radway came in. His face was still highly congested. Clements met him with the inevitable cocktail.

It was toward the end of dinner that Radway made his one remark. It was addressed to Bettington. There was a mocking politeness in his voice.

"Is it part of your contract to dine with your employer?"

"Unfortunately it is," Bettington returned instantly.

There was silence until Mrs. Radway and Mary left. Bettington, who had risen when the ladies did, dropped in his chair again and stared at the financier. He felt he had never detested any living being so much. This was the man who had married beautiful Evelyn Whiteburn and had made her miserable. This was the man who had promised her so much and had done so little. He wondered what violent passages there had been in their lives. She had admitted that there was a possibility of danger for her when he was in this state; and it was no new thing for him to be as he was now.

He watched Radway rise, this time not steadily, and go to his quarters. Bettington made his way to the after quarter deck.

It was Clements who interrupted his unhappy meditations. Clements presented an unusual appearance of haste.

"It's Radway," he cried, "you'd better come at once. I don't know what's the matter."

Radway was lying on the floor insensible.

"No wonder after what he's drunk this week," Clements said. "Absolutely dead to the world." He watched Bettington stoop down and carry Radway to the bed. "By Jingo, but you're strong!" he said.

"I don't think this is drink alone," Bettington said. "I don't like it at all."

Clements had no suspicion that Bettington was not a skilled physician. It chanced that Harrowgate, the celebrated painter, had just such a seizure as this in the studio he shared with Bettington in Rome. The doctor who attended him put Harrowgate's feet in hot mustard and water and applied ice to his head. Clements saw Bettington loosen the senseless man's clothing and then begin the treatment.

After a while Radway opened his eyes:

"I remember falling," he said presently. "I must have knocked myself out. I'll be all right in the morning." In a sense he dismissed them peremptorily.

They heard him bolt the door when they were outside it.

"Clements," Bettington said with conviction, "you've helped him to kill himself. That man's very ill."

"Nonsense," Clements said. "You're a surgeon and this sort of thing isn't your line at all. It's like asking a racehorse to pull a huckster's van. As for my helping him to kill himself, that's absurd. What that man has wanted, he has taken. The whole world knows that."

"I suppose so," Bettington admitted. After all, neither he nor a steward had any control over Radway's appetites.

"I want you to meet the other men," Clements said.

"I've seen them already," Bettington returned.

"You are to meet them on a different footing this time. They feel you have no right to be supercilious. There is only one boss among them, and I'm he. They are to be in my stateroom within a few minutes. For your own good, I advise you to seek their goodwill."

Bettington looked at him squarely. "If you think I'm going to make a bosom friend of men like Sam and that hangdog Hammer, you are mistaken. I did not elect to come on this trip and I shall behave as I choose. I signed on as ship's surgeon. Very well, I'll play the part; but whenever did you know of a ship's surgeon making a companion of a deck hand?"

They traversed the length of the ship in silence. Bettington felt certain that Clements was enraged at what he supposed to be insubordination.

"I will not have my plans imperiled," Clements said, in the safety of his stateroom. "You must be careful not to risk any quarreling with them. They are hot-headed and feel you are reveling in luxury, while they work hard."

"You are thinking of Metzger?"

"Particularly of him. He is a jealous brute, as ready with a knife as with his tongue. He complains that you glare at him offensively."

"And shall continue to do so."

"Do you mean to defy me? Have you forgotten that I hold your life in my hand?"

"Have you forgotten that the master of Beardsley will some day hold your life in his?"

There was a subtle change in Clements' bearing.

"We must not misunderstand one another. Yes, I depend on you; I admit it. We are using these swine for our own purposes, but we must not let them know it nor get out of hand. I think I hear them outside now. For the success of the venture, unbend to them."

The cook, who walked majestically and had the air of one who has cooked but for kings, was introduced as Antonio Pereira.

"A very skilled user of the knife," Clements said. "He would be in a palace kitchen now but for it. He has all the villainy of the world at his fingertips."

Antonio Pereira bowed as one might who had been introduced as the greatest musician of his time.

"Graumann," Clements went on, "is the greatest 'peteman' out of jail. I have uses for him later, among the ports of South America. Kenzie has no special attributes except his skill as an engineer and a preference for crooked paths. Krauso"—he indicated a blond man, almost bald—"Krauso has the newspaper instinct. He is an expert at listening posts. As a news gatherer he has few equals. These four men, doctor, know their jobs."

Bettington bowed to them amiably. He longed to transfer their faces to canvas. Each one a different type and yet each wholly villainous. The cook was the most picturesque; Hammer the one he most disliked. Graumann looked like a wolf without disguise.

The meeting resolved itself into a kind of committee meeting in which accounts of the past week's business was demanded by the chairman. There was no wild, incendiary talk.

When the others had gone Bettington turned to the steward. "I'm anxious to know when you plan to let Radway discover how things are."

"Not for a long time. It will be two weeks more, let-us say."

CHAPTER VII

An Ocean Tragedy

Bettington was glad when he entered the main saloon next morning for breakfast that Radway was not there. He rather dreaded that false, pre-prandial heartiness and he was not anxious to have to be amiable toward a man whose qualities he despised.

"Radway isn't up yet." It was Clements' voice. He had not seen the steward steal to his side. "He doesn't answer when I knock."

Bettington put down his cup. He could swear trouble brooded in the other's eyes.

"Think it's anything serious?"

"You know you were frightened of his condition last night, doctor. I think you'd better find out if anything's wrong."

Radway's door was locked, but Clements had a master key. Bettington closed the door behind him. He had seen enough in one brief glance.

Elgar Radway was dead. It was plain, even to Bettington, that he had been dead many hours. The two men looked at one another and said nothing. To Bettington the thing seemed the hand of Providence. It meant that the Albatross must put about and run for New York. It meant that the two women would never know the peril in which they had been placed. Evelyn was now doubly safe. Safe from the violence and cruelties of the dead man, as well as from the lusts of Clements' crime crew.

"This means ruin," Clements said slowly.

Bettington shrugged his shoulders. "What will be, will be."

"A fool's creed!" cried Clements. "Was that what you felt in Sam Quentin? You know it wasn't or you would never have killed a guard in order to escape. The only death which will ever beat me will be my own."

"Mrs. Radway must know," Bettington reminded him. "All right. It comes better from you."

Bettington found her on deck.

"Have you seen Mr. Radway?" she asked. He thought there was an air of coldness about her, an aloofness that was strange.

Evelyn Radway, although all vestige of affection for her husband had long since disappeared, was actuated by what she felt to be duty to him. She had realized with a start that her life on board would have been unutterably dreary without Doctor Waite. She was conscious of a quickening of her pulses when he was with her and a loneliness when he was away. Even after schooling herself to be cool, indifferent and aloof, she could not help being glad when Howard Bettington came to her side. Few girls marry their ideals; she had not. But she recognized in the ship's surgeon, as one sees an old and almost forgotten face, the man she had idealized before she set ambition above love.

"It is about him I want to speak."

"You mean he is ill?" she cried. He bowed his head.

"Oh," she cried. "You mean he is dead?"

Without a word she followed him to the forward stateroom. Clements withdrew as he heard her coming. She glanced in a little fearfully. For a few seconds she stood in the doorway. Then she turned to Bettington.

Literature for Blind Before Braille System

One of the earliest systems whereby the blind might read originated in Peru, where the alphabet was formed by knots on a length of string. In the sixteenth century Francesco Lucas, a Spaniard, engraved characters on wood for the blind, and in 1630 an arrangement of movable metal type was used in France. This plan failed through lack of funds and the blind had to revert to the wooden letters and pins stuck in cushions. Other devices for the blind were Doctor Pinneaux's frame with a small handle into which metal letters could be inserted, and a German scheme with letters cut in cardboard. Then Valentin Haüy realized the possibilities

Wisdom of Antonius

For a man can lose neither the past nor the future; for how can one take from him that which is not his? So remember these two points: First, that each thing is of like form from everlasting and comes round again in its cycle and that it signifies not whether a man shall look upon the same things for a hundred years or two hundred, or for an infinity of time; second, that the longest lived and the shortest lived man, when they come to die, lose one and the same thing.—Marcus Aurelius Antonius (121-180 A. D.) "Meditations" of embossed paper. It was at this school that Louis Braille was a pupil and he saw the superiority of the point system over the many others, including Gail's Moon type, that were causing confusion. His method is now world-wide. The Koran has been transcribed into Braille, and the system adapted to Chinese and Arabic.

Fearsome Creatures

Maud Rex Allen says: "As known in Japan, the conception of the dragon is undoubtedly derived from the products of the imagination of the early Chinese, who were especially fond of evolving supernatural forms by combining parts of various animals. It is essentially a serpent, with horns of a deer, the head of a horse, eyes like that of a red worm, scales like those of a carp, ears like a cow, paws like a tiger and claws like an eagle. It has flame-like appendages on shoulders and hips. On either foot are three, four or five claws—the imperial dragon of China has five; that of Japan three."

Ziegler's Big Sale.

By reference to other sections of the News this week, it will be seen that Ziegler Bros. are putting on a sale, starting next Monday, that, for magnitude and low prices, eclipses anything of the kind ever held in Carrizozo. An extra force has been busy several days, marking down the immense stock to figures that will make buying a profitable and economical thing to do. Many articles are cut in half and a general slash is made on all classes of dry goods. The thrifty will, no doubt, take advantage of this low-price sale.

SERVING MANY BUSINESSES
Experience of large fleet owners reveals the unusual reliability and economy of the new Ford

A SIGNIFICANT TRIBUTE to the value of the new Ford is found in its increasing use by Federal, state and city governments and by large industrial companies which keep careful day-by-day cost records. In most instances, the Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests of every factor that contributes to good performance—speed, power, safety, comfort, low cost of operation and up-keep, reliability and long life.

Prominent among the companies using the Ford are the Associated Companies of the Bell System, Armour and Company, The Borden Company, Continental Baking Corporation, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, General Electric Company, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Kellogg Company, Knickerbocker Ice Company, Morton Salt Company, Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, The Procter and Gamble Company, and Swift & Company.

Each of these companies uses a large number of Ford cars and trucks. The Associated Companies of the Bell System use more than eight thousand.

Modern business moves at a fast pace and it needs the Ford. Daily, in countless ways and places, it helps to speed the production and delivery of the world's goods and extend the useful service of men and companies.

Constant, steady operation over many thousands of miles emphasizes the advantages of the sound design of the Ford car, its high quality of materials, and unusual accuracy in manufacturing. Beneath its graceful lines and beautiful colors there is a high degree of mechanical excellence.

An example of the value built into the Ford is the use of more than twenty ball and roller bearings. They are hidden within the car and you may never see them. Yet they play an important part in satisfactory, economical performance. Their function is similar to the jewels of a fine watch.

Throughout the Ford chassis, a ball or roller bearing is used at every place where it is needed to reduce friction and wear and give smooth, reliable mechanical operation.

At many points, as on the transmission counter-shaft, clutch release, fan and pump shaft, and front drive shaft, these ball and roller bearings are used where less costly types of bearings might be considered adequate.

Additional instances of the high quality built into the Ford are the extensive use of steel forgings, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, Rustless Steel, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, and the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield.

The Ford policy has always been to use the best possible material for each part and then, through large production, give it to the public at low cost.

That plaintiff alleges that he is the owner in fee simple and in possession of said tracts of land, and that he is credibly informed and believes, and therefore alleges, that defendants make some claim adverse to the estate of plaintiff therein, and such claim or claims are without any right whatsoever.

That plaintiff prays in his complaint that his estate in and to the lands above described be established against any and all adverse claims of said defendants, or any thereof; that said defendants, and each thereof, be barred and forever estopped from having, asserting or claiming any right, title or interest in or to the premises hereinabove described, adverse to the plaintiff, and that plaintiff's title thereto be forever quieted and set at rest; and that plaintiff be awarded his costs and such other and further relief as to the court may seem meet.

You are further notified that unless you enter your appearance in this cause on or before the 7th day of August, A. D. 1930, judgment by default will be rendered against you.

That the names and postoffice addresses of the attorneys for plaintiff in New Mexico are Holt & Holt, Las Cruces, New Mexico.

Old Glory in Song and Story

1777 June 14 Saturday June 14 1777
- Capt. D. that the flag of the world...
By 13 ships...
Union be 13 stars...
my name...
248

the Stars and Stripes in the United States. From the earliest days of the Republic it has been a favorite theme of the poets. One of the most famous which it has inspired is that national classic, written by Joseph Rodman Drake early in the Nineteenth century. Nearly every American schoolboy at some time or another, has recited these stirring lines:

THE AMERICAN FLAG
When Freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard in the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And cut the stars of glory there,
She mingled with its gorgeous dyes
The milky baldric of the skies,
And striped its pure celestial white
With streakings of the morning light;
Then from his mansion in the sun
She called her eagle bearer down,
And gave into his mighty hand
The symbol of her chosen land.

Majestic monarch of the cloud,
Who rear'st aloft thy regal form,
To hear the tempest trumpings loud
And see the lightning lances driven,
When strive the warriors of the storm,
And rolls the thunder-drum of heaven,
Child of the sun to thee 'tis given
To guard the banner of the free,
To hover in the sulphur smoke,
To ward away the battle stroke,
And bid its blendings shine afar,
Like rainbows on the cloud of war,
The harbingers of victory.

One of the prose classics, inspired by the national emblem, is "The Makers of the Flag," by Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior in President Wilson's cabinet. Speaking before the employees of his department in Washington on Flag day in 1914, Mr. Lane delivered this eulogy:

THE MAKERS OF THE FLAG
This morning, as I passed into the land office, the flag drooped me a most cordial salutation, and from its rippling folds I heard it say: "Good morning, Mr. Flag Maker."

"I beg your pardon, Old Glory," I said, "aren't you mistaken? I am not the President of the United States, nor a member of congress, nor even a general in the army. I am only a government clerk."
"I greet you again, Mr. Flag Maker," replied the gay voice. "I know you well. You are the man who worked in the swelter of yesterday straightening out the tangle of that farmer's homestead in Idaho, or perhaps you found the mistake in that Indian contract in Oklahoma, or helped to clear the patent for that hopeful inventor in New York, or pushed the opening of that new ditch in Colorado, or made that mine in Illinois more safe, or brought relief to the old soldier in Wyoming. No matter; whichever one of these beneficent individuals you may happen to be, I give you greetings, Mr. Flag Maker."

I was about to pass on when the flag stopped me with these words:
"Yesterday the President spoke a word that made happier the future of 10,000,000 people in Mexico; but that act looms no larger on the flag than the struggle which the boy in Georgia is making to win the Corn Club prize this summer."
"Yesterday, the congress spoke a word which will open the door of Alaska; but a mother in Michigan worked from sunrise until far into the night to give her boy an education. She, too, is making the flag."

"Yesterday we made a new law to prevent financial panics, and yesterday, maybe, a school teacher in Ohio taught his first letters to a boy who will, some day, write a song that will give cheer to millions of our race. We are all making the flag."

"But," I said, "these people were only working!"
Then came a great shout from the flag:
"The work that we do is the making of the flag. I am not the flag; not at all. I am but its shadow."

"I am whatever you make me, nothing more. I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become. I live a changeful life, a life of moods and passions, of heartbreaks and tired muscles."

"Sometimes I am strong with pride, when men do an honest work, fitting the rails together truly. Sometimes I droop, for then purpose has gone from men, and cynically I play the coward. Sometimes I am loud, garrulous and full of that ego that blinds judgment."

"But always I am all that you hope to be, and have the courage to try for. I am a song, a fear, struggle and panic, and an- noying hope."

"I am the day's work of the weakest man, and the largest dream of the most daring. I am the Constitution and the courts, statutes and the statute makers, soldier and draftsman, drayman and street-sweeper, cook, counselor and clerk."

"I am the battle of yesterday, and the mistake of tomorrow. I am the mystery of the man who do without knowing why. I am the stretch of an idea, and the reasoned purpose of resolution."

"I am no more than what you believe me to be and I am all that you believe I can be. I am what you make me, nothing more. I swing before your eyes as a bright gleam of color, a symbol of yourself, the pictured suggestion of that big thing which makes this nation. My stars and my stripes are your dream and your labor. They are bright with cheer, brilliant with courage, arm with faith because you have made them so out of your hearts. For you are the makers of the flag and it is well that you glory in the making."

Friendly Feeling for Birds That Kill Snakes

All over South Africa the secretary bird is protected by law and custom. In the stomach of one secretary bird were found three snakes, each about a yard long, eleven lizards, and a quantity of crickets and locusts. The bird has no hesitation in attacking a cobra or any poisonous snake. It comes up quietly, then, opening its wings to shield its body, flashes upon the snake and usually kills or disables it before it can strike. If the snake does manage to strike, the blow is caught upon one of the wings, then the bird's beak and feet finish the business. Before eating its prey, the bird plucks out the feather which was struck.

In South America the carlama, a prettily crested bird, much smaller than the secretary, kills snakes. Australia's snake killer is the laughing jackass, of which there are several kinds. The bird is a saucy creature and a bit of a thief. But since it kills and eats snakes it is protected and encouraged.

OLD DOCTOR'S IDEA IS BIG HELP TO ELDERLY PEOPLE

In 1885, old Dr. Caldwell made a discovery for which elderly people the world over praise him today! Years of practice convinced him that many people were endangering their health by a careless choice of laxatives. So he began a search for a harmless prescription which would be thoroughly effective, yet would neither gripe nor form any habit. At last he found it. Over and over he wrote it, when he found people illious, headachy, out of sorts, weak or feverish; with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy. It relieved the most obstinate cases, and yet was gentle with women, children and elderly people.

Today the same famous, effective prescription, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is the world's most popular laxative. It may be obtained from any druggist.

Gems of Colored Glass

Pitkin flasks are the products of the Pitkin Glass works, which were the first works of this kind built in Connecticut. The works were constructed in 1783 and were in operation until 1830. Many containers made by the Pitkin Glass works were never surpassed in beauty or color or pattern. "The Pitkin type flask," says R. M. Knittle, "is known to every glass collector. Many large bottles are green with long handled necks. The sunburst pattern flask is particularly meritorious."

There is nothing more satisfactory after a day of hard work than a line full of snowy-white clothes. For such results use Red Cross Ball Blue, Adv.

Absent-Minded

Billy was a very absent-minded little boy. One cold morning his mother sent him to school well bundled up, even to his galoshes. When he appeared at his desk his teacher was quite surprised at his appearance. She asked him: "How did you happen to come to school today without your shirt?" Billy looked himself over from his neck to his feet and exclaimed: "Gee, roshi! I thought I took off my galoshes."

Fig Tree on Palm

A fig tree about three feet high was found growing out of the side of a palm tree in the courthouse grounds, Vasalla, Calif. Its roots apparently drew sustenance from the mold in the niches of the palm and from the sap of the palm tree. This fig tree blossomed out with other trees at the first sign of spring.

A la Radio

Conrad and Bobby, three and eleven, are ardent followers of basketball, and each evening try their powers at looping the Ball into the basket in their basement. Conrad has learned the popular lingo from the radio announcers, and his little voice rings clear: "He's dribbling down the floor; he shoots, misses; he gets the ball; shoots—and it went!"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE scene is Independence hall in Philadelphia. The date is June 14, 1777. The Second Continental congress is in session and at the command of John Hancock, Secretary Charles Thomson reads the following resolution:
"Resolved, That the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."
The resolution is unanimously adopted by the congress. Thus the Stars and Stripes became our national colors.

The scene is Fort Mifflin in Maryland. The time is during the third year of the War of 1812 between the United States and Great Britain and, more particularly, the date is the night of September 12, 1814. A British fleet, sailing up the Chesapeake bay to capture Baltimore as a part of the British plan to "cut the nation in two," finds Fort Mifflin a stubborn obstacle to that plan. On one of the British ships a young Maryland lawyer, who has gone on board seeking the release of a friend who had been taken prisoner by the invaders, is detained by them. Francis Scott Key is his name. All night long the guns of the men-of-war roar and all night long the fort answers with such artillery as can reach the enemy.

As the dawn of September 13 breaks, Key peers anxiously through the mist and smoke to see if the fort is still holding out against the bombardment. A welcome sight meets his eyes. High up on the flagpole of the fort the Stars and Stripes floats in the morning air. Key's joy can be expressed in only one way. He sits down and upon the back of a letter, which he happens to have in his pocket, he writes some notes for a poem which flashes into his mind in the ecstasy of that moment. A little later he writes out the poem in full and this is it:

STAR-SPANGLED BANNER

O say can you see by the dawn's early light
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rocket's red glare, the bomb bursting in air,
In our ears and our hearts all the time that we were there,
O say can you see that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?
On the shore dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposed,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected now shines in the stream,
'Tis the star-spangled banner—O long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!
D, thus be it ever when freemen shall stand
Between their lov'd homes and the war's desolation,
Blest with vict'ry and peace, may the heav'n rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation!
Then conquer we must, when our cause is just,
And this be our motto—"In God is our trust."
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

On September 21 his poem is published in the Baltimore American and a few days later it is

1. The house flag which is flown from the arm of the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor on Flag day each year. On the balcony stand Mrs. Laura S. Prioleau, "the Mother of Flag Day."
2. The original "Flag Resolution" of June 14, 1777, in the handwriting of Charles Thomson, secretary of the Second Continental congress.
3. Capt. William Driver, the Salem (Mass.) sea captain, who gave the name of "Old Glory" to the American flag.
4. Sea-raffle on the base of the Francis Scott Key Memorial monument at Fort Mifflin, Md., which perpetuates the fame of the man who wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner," the national anthem.
5. "The Stars and Stripes Forever!"—A thrilling incident of the Revolution. The British evacuating after the Yorktown surrender, nailed the British flag to the flagstaff at the Battery and then grazed the pole. A barefoot sailor boy volunteered to climb up, take down the enemy flag and nail the American flag to the pole. From the reproduction of the famous painting by Henry Mosler in "The Winning of Freedom," volume of "The Pageant of America," Yale University Press.

struck off in handbill form and distributed on the streets of Baltimore where there is great rejoicing at the deliverance from the threat of invasion. The poem immediately catches the fancy of the public and Ferdinand Durang sets it to music, using an adaptation of an old tune, "Anacreon in Heaven." A popular actress sings it in the Holiday Street theater and it is greeted with thunderous applause.

Thus our national flag became widely known as the Star-Spangled Banner. Thus America acquired a national anthem by popular choice and popular acclaim, although no definite action toward official adoption of Key's song as our national anthem was taken until this year.

The scene is Salem, Mass. The date is August 16, 1831. Down at the Salem wharves a crowd of citizens gathers to see the sailing of the brig, Charles Daggert, which is about to start on a 'round-the-world voyage. Capt. William Driver, master of the Charles Daggert, is one of the best known skippers who have carried the name of Salem to every part of the globe. He is noted for his sturdy Americanism and his deep love for his country's flag. So his neighbors have brought him a gift which they know will please him as nothing else can. It is a fine American flag.

Captain Driver is on deck when a sailor, carrying the red, white and blue bundle, folded in triangular form, advances and starts out upon his carefully rehearsed speech. "In ancient times when an ocean voyage was looked upon with superstitious dread," he says, "it was the custom on the eve of departure to roll the banner in the form of a triangle. When ready the priest stepped forward and taking the banner in hand sprinkled it with consecrated water and dedicated it to 'God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost,' turning the point of the triangle upward at the name of each, thus calling on that unity of Creator, Redeemer, and Sanctifier to bless the national emblem and prosper the voyagers and their friends. The flag thus consecrated was then hoisted to the masthead."

As he finishes, he hands his gift to Captain Driver who adjusts it to the halyards and hoists it in position at the masthead. Quiet falls upon the crowd as the new flag unfolds in all its beauty. To Captain Driver, who has just heard the rite of the ancients, comes the inspiration to perform a rite of his own. Looking aloft he cries out, "I'll call her Old Glory, boys, Old Glory!" Thus was the name Old Glory first applied to our national banner.

In few other countries has the national flag been such an inspiration to writers as has been

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

To have a flat tire is not desirable, but to have a flat bag or pocket book for your money and the bits of accessories that help to make a day serene is to be correctly in the mode. Since pocket books or bags and beads are Dame Fashion's special pets, a sight of them draws her like iron filings to a magnet.

Artists began to concentrate on bags at the time that the gay little lizard, the python, and the water snakes were chosen for use in both pumps and purses. It has been the developing of the ensemble theory which has given to the purse so much importance.

Theoretically, the hat is the most important accessory. Paris touches up many of them with a little face veil, but the American woman of the Twentieth century has little patience with veils. In the early days of the automobile there were enough yards of auto veiling sold to reach from the Middle West to San Francisco, and it would have been a brave woman who would have started on a tour to a destination twenty miles distant without being amply veiled.

Perhaps the lessening of dust on the roads or the appreciation of the beauty of tanned complexions, or the many glass-enclosed cars or a half dozen other circumstances have combined to make this auto veil completely extinct. But the sun is not extinguished, and now that he has grown warmer, many women find, the brimmed hat to be grateful.

Straw votes are popular in these days, and Dame Fashion tried a small one on her own account; on the topic of the large or small hat. The men's question for the vote is, "Do you prefer to see large or small hats on your women friends?" while the query for the women is, "Which do you prefer to wear, large or small hats?" Now this vote, by the nature of things, is still open and undecided. But as the poll stands, it is unanimous for the men, in preference for the small hats for women—perhaps they can better watch the expression on the faces of wives and sweethearts. The women's vote, thus far, is about 50-50. Small hats are convenient, but the big hat has a fascination.

Watching a number of pretty little neighbor children at play, Dame Fashion thought it was a cause for a special pean of rejoicing that in all the talk about lengthened skirts and the total disappearance of women's and girls' knees from the view of fashionable society—except at the beaches—there was no such edict went forth about the little toes. Those picturesque but tumble-causing days of Kate Greenaway dresses down to the ankles, and the hot velvet suits, fragile lace collars and long yellow curls or "Little Lord Fauntleroy" have gone forever, let it be hoped. Little bits of underwear, often of rayon, and sun suits that cover up very little of a child from the health rays of the sun, are much in order this summer.

If there is one proverb or slogan of the year in fashion, it would seem to be, "Suits suit every woman." The light, unlined jacket silk suit has its findings as much as any ball club. As for blouses, with their rippling ruffled fronts, their softly folding cowl necks, and their contrasting color effects, they are almost like the stars in number.

Do you have in your mind some beautiful girl who once floated about in a cloud of white organdie? You are likely to see such a vision again, for organdie is due for a revival.

Three-Flooned Frock and Suede Accessories

Fashion indicates gray. Here is seen a charming gray remain crepe and silver piping in a three-flooned frock. Note the black suede gloves, bag and hat, as chic accessories. The silver scarf is a luxurious touch.

Popular Pajama Outfit for Home Wear or Beach

The pajamas illustrated would be very striking and inexpensive. If made in a sturdy basket-weave cotton in plain bright blue, green or orange and harmonizing multicolored stripes. It has a tuck-in blouse and wide, floppy trousers of the plain color and the short jacket is made of the contrasting striped material. They may be worn of a morning in the kitchen or for a day on the beach with a wide, floppy brimmed sun hat—Woman's Home Companion.

Flaring Pleated Skirts for Tweeds and Jerseys

The tweed and jersey costumes are simply made with flaring or pleated skirts, and always with hemlines. Hemlines differ as to the correct length, but it is several inches longer than last year, usually from 13 to 15 inches from the floor, although an occasional house shows even tweeds slightly longer.

Pleated ruffles and skirts pleated all around are again being worn, box pleats being one of the newer forms. One may achieve interesting contrasts by pleating sections of a printed frock. The use of twin prints is being continued and border effects are cleverly handled both in dresses and in jacket ensembles.

That the jacket costume will be made of printed crepes is a foregone conclusion. It may be worn with lingerie blouse or consist of dress with jacket of almost any length, though preferably short.

As the season grows older one is bound to be treated to other dressmaker versions of the suit, and bound to be converted to this flatterer type especially when executed in silk or later in linen. Pleats, scallops, poptums, lingerie details and novel sleeves make the sum total of the suits one sees.

In conjunction with the new trend in skirt fullness most makers sponsor a length approximating 12 inches from the ground for soft suits, tailored types being even still more abbreviated.

Pastel Mode Influences Popular Pajama Outfits

Judging from the enormous amount of display space devoted to pajamas, one must surely be expected to spend a great deal of time in them. Never have beach costumes been stressed to the extent they have been this season at fashion shows here and there. Pajamas are topped with either self-fabric berets or with wide-brimmed hats, and are completed often by decorative cork clogs. Trousers are extremely wide, much wider than the average skirt. In fact, and coats are as you like them, which means from bolero length to the knees. Printed coats with plain trousers and vest are universally liked.

There are less exotic details to the modern pajama than formerly. Colors are more subdued, taking their cue from the general acceptance of pastels for sports and evening. All white is as always, distinguished—white with either a pastel or bright tone is equally effective. Such neutral touches as lacings are not to be overlooked—nor are sailor collars restricted to the navy.

Printed Fabrics Favored for the Summer Season

We have been wondering whether the print would remain important in the summer season as it has in the spring. The three-piece suit in printed fabrics comes to the fore as a decidedly affirmative answer to our short cape in lieu of sleeves and some of the jackets boast the tiny puff sleeve. The one that will be most frequently seen, however, is the very short straight jacket coupled with sleeves, blouse and flared skirt.

Choose Own Skirt Length Fashion dictators, as well as individual shops, are telling women that gowns should be whatever length looks most graceful when the height of the wearer is taken into consideration.

Analyzing YOU

With the New Science of Syllables By C. J. COFFMAN Dean of All the Enumerators

Norma

Your name is quite ancient. It comes from a Latin root, NORMA, meaning the rule or method from which a thing comes. It is the basis for our modern word normal, which means standard, balanced, regular.

There is also an ancient current of power exhibited here. In that Norma shows rulership.

Taking the first syllable, NOR, we really mean "not with," and you are "not with" a lot of things that more common minded people would like to have you in.

Your splendid forehead and straight face can lead the way for others, or present a wall of resistance to any who would mislead the way.

Your name contains an old Hebrew phrase, ORMAH, which shows great prudence and subtlety. You may carry this to any extent you like, from a kindly effort to guide others without worrying them with details, clear over to actual deception, when you think the cause demands it.

The two letters, OR, in your name had two different meanings among the ancients, according to how they appeared. For one thing, OR meant to them a beautiful skin of waxlike quality, and a soft, alluring bloom.

You can have this yourself by a little study of diet or even by the simple process of eliminating all meats and bread and sweets from your food.

The other meaning of the phrase, OR, was enlightenment. If your digestive organs are trained to treat your skin properly, your skin will enlighten those who observe your beautiful face.

Then, after the years of your youth have established you in a right and natural maturity, you may come with sweet and staid joy, to the last syllable of your name, MA. For there is in you that which will have missed life, unless you are finally a mother.

Patsy

Well, not quite that, since you are just a nice young lady, but that first syllable in your name, PAT, does sound masculine, or at least saucy and tomboyish.

The ancients used the PAT to indicate "father," and the fatherhood of one's own country. You can still see this use in such words as paternal and patriotism.

People who know you as a vivacious and almost reckless young lady might be surprised to find what I have found in you. Do you know what that is?

It is a real healing ability! That firm, strong arm of yours is capable of wonderful skill along the lines of chiropractic or other manipulative healing or massage work. There is a big field there, Patsy, and how your patrons would love you!

The ancients, using a word very much like your name, indicated one who could deliver from wounds, and bring healing to very difficult cases. Curiously enough, they use another word very similar to yours, to designate one who could break forth readily into joyful song.

Which shall it be? A healer, the great head of an institution of your own, helping and healing thousands, or will you reach your adoring public by your voice?

Both of these are prominent in you, and so well balanced that I find it hard to choose for you. Perhaps you can help. Perhaps with your usual snap and verve, you have already gone a long way on one of these careers by now.

Anyway, I shall not be worried over the possibilities in you, Patsy, whichever way you decide.

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

By GEORGE DORSEY, Ph. D., LL. D.

"America is a Nation of Morons"

THE great by-product of our participation in the World war was the startling discovery that "America in a nation of morons!" Moron means dull or stupid, and is technically applied to children with permanently arrested mental development. Defective mentality due to congenital deficiency is "amentia"; it due to deterioration, "dementia." Congenital imbecility is generally accompanied by a thin and poorly organized brain cortex.

Nearly two million American adults were tested by the army as to their intelligence. The average was that of a normal school child of twelve. As the test sampled the nation, the cry went up, "Nation of morons!" And much bunk was and is talked and written.

What is intelligence? "Ability to learn or to profit by past experience?" All right. The hog is an intelligent animal; rattlesnake also; likewise hookworm and clam. "Civilization" intelligence, measured by the amount it has profited by past experience makes a poor showing; it goes right on putting its troubles upon the Lord instead of upon itself. Voters make the poorest showing of all: they put their troubles upon the "government."

The army had to find out whether a man could react to orders and learn to use a musket; if not, he was not intelligent enough to shoot or sit to be shot at. If, on the other hand, he was too intelligent to be shot at and was put to work in an ammunition laboratory. The army had to make tests. It used certain lists of questions.

I give you a list of questions. You may flunk completely. Have I tested your intelligence? Only to the extent of that particular list. Even then, I have tested nothing of your capacity to learn or to profit by past experience.

I have a bottle of liquid before me. I ask that bottle certain questions: Are you indiaric, creatine, glucose, or acetic acid; have you any phosphates, calcium, or iron, in you? To each the bottle replies "No." Very well, then, I cannot use you; your mother did not bring you up to be a soldier. But do I know from that test what that liquid is, or what, it will do if I drop a hair or a lighted match in it? Or what it will do to me if I drink it? That bottle might be aqua vitae itself, for anything I know to the contrary. I did not test it for aqua vitae, only for acetic acid.

There are idiots, imbeciles, morons, all degrees of feeble-minded. Grade A feeble mind passes into the low grade of a mind that is not feeble; and so on up through the grades of genius. But there may be two reasons why I cannot talk Chinese: never tried to learn it; could not learn it.

We start with suppositions in judging character, intelligence, personality. We must, of course. But as long as we are at the mercy of our convictions we fall to realize that the boy of twelve does not make the grade, not because he cannot, but usually because that grade does not appeal to him. We have our own grades. The school, on the other hand has its own. Instead of attempting to find out what grade I can make, it throws me out for not coming up to its standard. The average man meekly accepts the verdict incompetent, and is counted with the morons.

Many a teacher's time and patience spent trying to make the boy or girl learn could be better spent trying to find out what the boy or girl has a will to learn. Will being a human engine that goes best with certain fuel and in certain directions. "Music lessons" have spoiled many a cook and "modern languages" many a farmer.

If America is a nation of morons, then that is the answer to the attractiveness of the intellectual feat our educational system spreads; it is not a test of the American's ability to learn.

We are cars of many makes, types, styles, gears and motor capacity. Some are racers and some are trucks; some are no good on dirt roads and some are tractors and can climb mountains; some are one-seaters and some are buses; some can pull, only themselves, others the whole family; some use a pint a mile and some a barrel.

And as any car can be wrecked as it leaves the factory, so also by careful and scientific handling every car is good for its capacity.

But we are more than machines; we make ourselves as we go. What we make ourselves into depends on many factors. But one consideration should not be overlooked: there is no absolute in the measure of intelligence, only standards—yours, mine, this community's, that society's, etc. These standards vary and keep varying with time and place. Christopher Columbus could not qualify for a water tender's rating by the navy of Alfonso XIII. Of the world's hundred geniuses perhaps five could pass any of the contraptions now in vogue to measure intelligence. Of this same hundred few, if any, were rated "intelligence A-1" by their contemporaries. In fact, some of them were killed by their contemporaries for lack of intelligence. Was that a measure of the intelligence of their contemporaries?

Have Glut of Bibles and of Epsom Salts

No more Bibles or epsom salts are wanted at Tristan da Cunha, the "world's loneliest isle," in the South Atlantic. The reason is that kindly people have sent so many of these articles that every inhabitant is supplied for years. According to Rev. R. A. C. Pooley, the missionary in charge, there has been a flood of Bibles, some houses having six copies, and many "Good Books" are awaiting new arrivals. He adds that there are still 200 pounds of epsom salts to be taken when required. His letter was written a year ago, but has just arrived in England, the boat touching the island only about once a year. A new school was erected last spring for the 150 inhabitants, who are descendants of the British garrison in the days when Napoleon was at St. Helena.

Baby's little dresses will just simply dazzle if Red Cross Ball Blue is used in the laundry. Try it and see for yourself. At all good grocers.—Adv.

Wooden Hats for Women

Paris' new fashion of wooden hats for women is being accepted. The hats are made of three-ply wood, and the brims, which are cut in two, are fitted with hidden springs so that they may be pulled over the hair. The headpieces preserve the cloche shape, and are trimmed with delicately carved ornaments, some of which are the work of artists who devoted much time to them. It is claimed that they are just as light and comfortable as felt and much more durable because they do not develop creases. But they are much more expensive.

German Red Lips Costly

Keeping the lips of maidens and mothers of Germany a rosy red costs $2,500,000 a year, according to an estimate based on government reports. Last year 524 tons of lipstick, valued at $1,750,000, were imported. German lipstick manufacturers supplied $750,000.

She Lost 19 Pounds of Fat in 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote—"My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast. Be sure and do this every morning for "It's the little daily dose that takes off the fat." Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure fresh blood containing Nature's life-giving salts is carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

STEEL ECLIPSE

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze one started up smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away only as long as the wind raised a dust in the road. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came smoothly to rest with the last trace of the dying breeze.

That is the difference between a super windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between turned, ground and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts; the difference between machined and polished bearings and ordinary bearings; the difference between running in oil and running with dry gear.

In other words, it is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse Steel-Eclipse Windmill and just a plain windmill.

Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the self-oiling feature—the motor lift feature—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will form a new idea of how good a windmill can be.
