Call for Democratic County Convention

A Democratic County Convention is hereby called to meet in the High School Gymnasium, at Capitan, Tuesday, August 26, 1930, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of selecting ten (10) delegates to represent Lincoln county in the State Democratic Convention, date to be named later, and to also represent Lincoln county in the various legislative and judicial district conventions to be held during or following the sessions of said state convention, and to transact any other business that may properly come before the convention.

The basis of representation at said county convention shall be (1) delegate for every ten (10) votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for the Hon. Robert C. Dow for Governor at the 1928 general election.

The eighteen precincts of the county, upon this basis, will be entitled to the number of delegates shown below:

Precinct	Votes	Delegates
Lincoln	136	14
Hondo	61	6
Arabela	8	1
Picacho	29	3
Rabenton	2	1
Encinosa	13	2

Ancho	43	4
Spiudle	13	1
Joneta	12	1
Total	975	98

All precinct committeemen have been advised, by letter, to call their respective primaries at such dates as will permit the selection of delegates for the county convention and in time to insure the attendance of delegates so selected.

Ellen C. Sellars,
Chairman Democratic County Committee.

Ruidoso Rodeo

The Ruidoso Rodeo and Western Days Celebration concluded a ten-day program Monday of this week. Large crowds were in attendance throughout the period, with the exception of two or three days of last week, when the heavy rains forced a cessation of activities.

Several days had special programs, the most interesting to our people, of course being "Lincoln County Day" last Friday. Miss Opal Wingfield, who had been chosen Queen for the occasion, and was crowned in the spacious auditorium, in the presence of a vast assemblage. Hon. George Curry, former governor presenting the crown with a most happy and appropriate speech. The parade to the Rodeo grounds, with the Queen leading the procession, was one of the biggest we have ever witnessed in Lincoln county. There were more than two hundred cars in the parade, beside the old frontier wagons, other vehicles and horse-backers. It was a big day, well attended, every part of the county having good delegations present.

The gathering attracted many people during its progress—people from distant as well as nearby places, and the sports and other entertainment features kept the crowd busy day and night. The Ruidoso Chamber of Commerce and the people of those thriving communities were recipients of many compliments for the manner in which the affair was conducted.

Schools Open Sept. 1

The rural schools of the county will open Monday, September 1. New buildings have been erected in two districts, three others are under construction and much repair work done and improvements made on buildings, and grounds in many districts during the vacation period, and every effort has been made to have all in a going condition on the date named. School conditions appear to be in a healthy state.

Law Does Not Save---Fullen

"If a man can be saved by the enactment of law, then the death of Christ on the cross was in vain," declared L. O. Fullen, president of the New Mexico State Bar association, in his final address before the state body, in annual convention here, (Roswell)

While making no direct mention of the eighteenth amendment in his address it was inferred that Mr. Fullen had reference to that phase of the constitution.

"We must leave the work of evangelizing the world to the church, and not to Congress. Many of us would rather be free than good if we could not be both. Mankind cannot be saved by law and men cannot be saved by building a legal wall around their souls," he declared.

In opening his remarks, Mr. Fullen said that he realized many of the things he was about to say would be unpopular.

"Just another and added reason why they should and must be said," he declared.

Mr. Fullen declared that the ideals of the framers of the constitution of the United States had in great part been lost sight of with the passing of the years.

"Our losses of individual rights and guarantees of liberty have come gradually until today our constitutional guarantees for protection of individual rights and liberties are being rapidly destroyed, and one of the most distressing things about the entire situation is that no one seems to care," he declared.

"The constitution of the United States was never intended to be a penal code. We are approaching dangerous days when an amendment may be added to the constitution of the United States and then labeled a 'noble experiment'."

"A law had much better never be passed than to fail to command the respect of the people at large. Laws must be worthy of respect, and while respect for courts is all important, courts also must be worthy of and command respect," he declared.

"Present day law makers it seems have become filled with a passion for the regulation of everything and everybody. This passion has brot about some results which may be well classified as 'terrific,' and the end is not yet. You can put a law into the constitution, but the people themselves must put that law into operation."

"The constitution of the United States will have been scrapped when centralized government takes the place of that constitution and individual and personal rights have been violated," he said.

"The ideal of states rights is not dead and must not die. The theory that the majority should always rule as between the states is a false theory, and it's high time that we should realize that each state must settle its own problems in its own way. Self-government is a sacred responsibility and one not to be taken away by congress or any other law making body," he declared.

"I believe in the churches. God speed the day when all men will be Christians, but Christians by what they believe to be right and just and not Christians by law. Human statutes can never supplant heredity and training and the courthouse can never take the place of the altar," he declared.

"The next 50 years are to be momentous years in the history of this great government of ours. You and I perhaps will never live to see it, but on the horizon there is a gleam of a brighter day, when we return again to the ideals of our forefathers, turn back the pages of time and revert again to the fundamentals of the bill of rights, a government of the people, by the people and for the people," he declared in closing.

Ft. Stanton News

Dr. and Mrs. Ellerby motored to Fort Stanton from Chicago. The doctor will be attached to the Fort's medical staff, and we are glad to welcome both of them to our midst.

Miss McGowan arrived from Chicago, to join the nursing staff at the Fort. Miss McGowan is glad to be back in New Mexico, having formerly been connected with the Indian Service in the state a few years ago.

Mrs. Berry and daughter Jean, accompanied by Miss V. Chauvin, motored out to the dam, and had quite a delightful picnic luncheon, in the Lincoln Forest Reserve.

Miss Florence Reed is here from Chicago to visit her brother Russell, and they are spending a few days at the Ruidoso.

Mrs. Ellen C. Sellars left Tuesday for Carrizozo, Ancho, Corona and other points in Lincoln county, in the interest of the Democratic campaign.

Mr. and Mrs. Felker arrived from El Paso, to spend a few days with the Cavanaugh family. Mr. Felker will be remembered by most of the old-timers around here. He was the baker at Fort Stanton about six years ago, and is kept quite busy renewing acquaintances.

Last Sunday our ball team crossed bats with the Joyce-Prutt team of Roswell, the Fort winning to the tune of 7 to 4. The Fort went into a lead of 4 runs in the first inning, but then Keyes, the Roswell pitcher, settled down and held the boys scoreless to the 7th, when the Fort scored 3 runs on two hits and three errors. The game was interesting throughout and kept the fans on edge, both Pharris for the Fort and Keyes for Roswell pitching air, tight ball.

The manager of the ball team is dickering for a three-game series with the Olin, Texas, ball team for the 30th, 31st of August, and Labor Day, the first of September. So watch the paper for a future announcement, as we expect a majority of Lincoln

Democratic Primary

A primary of the Democrats of Precinct No. 14 is hereby called to meet in the court house at Carrizozo, Monday evening, August 25, 1930, at 8:00 o'clock, for the purpose of selecting twenty-five (25) delegates to represent said precinct in the Democratic County Convention which meets at Capitan August 26. All Democrats are invited to attend.

Precinct Committeeman.

Mrs. Zumwalt Improving

A. B. Zumwalt has returned from California where he was called to the bedside of his wife, Friday. Mrs. Zumwalt is much improved, and her many friends hope that she will soon be able to return home. Mrs. Gilbert Peters and F. R. Zumwalt remained with their mother and will accompany her home as soon as her condition will permit.

county fans to be with us on that occasion and give us their support for these games.

Messrs. Gow, Westerling, Chrobach and Bowden returned from their vacation on the Ruidoso, where they combined business with pleasure, having had a concession at the Western Days Celebration. However, the concessions did not meet expectations, yet all report a good time.

Messrs. Oensein, Froom, Gunther and Hansen returned from a ten-day fishing and camping trip on the South Fork of the Bonito, and came back very much pleased with their outing, as the fishing was exceptionally good.

Sam Cox, our genial baker, who has been in the hospital for the last two weeks, with an appendix operation, returned to his home on Wednesday, and soon will be on the job again. We sure missed Sam on the ball team and are delighted to hear of his speedy recovery.

Farm Relief must be just another "noble experiment."

A VERY STRANGE LITTLE DOG

One day, a strange dog who could talk like people trotted gaily into our town. All the other dogs were green with envy.

"O," said the strange little dog to them, "that is easy. I will ask the baker here, and he will teach you."

"Why, certainly," said the good-hearted baker, and he assembled them in rows on the bakeshop floor.

"First," said the baker, "say C." The little dogs cocked their ears and wagged their tails but only shrill barks came from their throats.

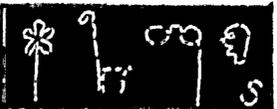

"Now try A." More barks. "Well," said the baker. Everybody say, T, and then we'll have a whole word, "A T for cat."

their tails between their legs they went back again.

"Is the strange little dog here?" they barked.

"No," laughed the baker, "he is not, but perhaps you may find him at the butcher's." Sure enough, the dogs tripped over to the butcher's and there he was in earnest conversation.

"Why," said the strange little dog, "Mr. Butcher, won't you teach these little dogs to talk?"

"Of course," said the butcher, "I will give a big bone to the one who speaks like a person first."

"Everyone say, P-P-P-P-P." The little dogs opened their mouths and stuck out their long, red tongues, but the only sound they made, was, "Woo-oo-oo-oo."

"Well," said the patient butcher, smiling, "try a-a-a." The little dogs planted their forefeet deep into the sawdust, but the only sound that came from their throats, was, "aou, aou, aou."

"Now," said the butcher, "this is the easiest of all, is, ts, ts, ts, ts." But the butcher had scarcely uttered the last word when every little dog, sniffing frantically in the air, ran hither and thither out of the shop.

After the other dogs had gone here and there in a vain search for rats, with drooping ears, as well as tails, they again approached the butcher.

"Is the strange little dog here?" they barked.

"No," said the butcher, still shaking his sides in glee, "he is not, but maybe you will find him at the cheesemonger's." There, sure enough, he was, engrossed in serious conversation.

no one to teach us to talk like people?"

"Most certainly," answered the generous cheesemonger, "and into the bargain I will give to the one who speaks like a person first, a large slice of cheese."

"Now," said the cheesemonger, "when little dogs want to learn to talk, they must first learn to think."

"Think of cats," said the cheesemonger. The furry coats of the little dogs quivered, but remembering their first experience, they did not move from their places nor utter a sound.

"Think of rats," said the cheesemonger. The little dogs' eyes snapped and their fur bristled a second time, but yet remembering their disappointment, they did not move.

"Think of rabbits," said the cheesemonger. That was too much. At the last word, every little dog gave a wild yelp, and racing out of the cheesemonger's, they rushed helter, skelter down the road, and the strange little dog never saw them again.

QUADRUPLETS REACH TWELFTH BIRTHDAY

Some Welcome Summer Drinks

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Humility lodged in a worthy mind is always attended with a certain homage, which no haughty soul, with all the arts imaginable, can purchase.

THIS is the time when all good drinks should come to the aid of the hostess. For those who enjoy chocolate the following will be treasured:

Chocolate Frappe.

Prepare a quart of rich chocolate, adding one-half cupful of sugar. Pour into an ice cream freezer and freeze for fifteen minutes, or until it is of the consistency of thick cream.

Mix grape juice and ginger ale in equal parts, this is a most delightful drink. There are any number of good things to be prepared with fruit juices and ginger ale in various proportions.

Spiced Milk.

Take one quart of chilled milk, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, cinnamon and a few gratings of nutmeg, stir until the sugar is well dissolved, heat vigorously and serve with chilled ice.

Fruit Punch.

Boil two cupfuls each of water and sugar for ten minutes. Cool, add one cupful each of sliced pineapple, strawberries, bananas, white grapes, maraschino cherries and raspberries, the juice of six oranges and six lemons.

chill well and add two quarts of charged water just before serving. Pour over ice in punch bowl. Serves twenty-five.

If one is fortunate enough to have an iceless refrigerator the ice to use in light drinks might be colored or put a cherry and a sprig of mint in each cube to make a drink more attractive.

Loganberry Milk Punch.

Take two and one-half cupfuls of loganberry juice and water, two teaspoonfuls or more of sugar, and one and one-third cupfuls of evaporated milk. Serve with chilled ice.

Orange Nog.

Take one and one-third cupfuls of cold milk, six tablespoonfuls of sugar and one-half cupful of orange juice. Shake vigorously and serve immediately with chilled ice. This will make three servings.

Honey Milk Shake.

Beat two eggs and pour into a mason jar or shaker, and three cupfuls of chilled milk, six tablespoonfuls of honey and chilled ice. Chill and serve.

Cheese Roll.

Take one cream cheese and two cupfuls of finely grated American cheese; mix well, add a few dashes of cayenne, a little chopped green olives, two or three finely minced pimientos; moisten if needed with cream and mold into a roll. Cover with sliced olives stuffed with pimientos and serve on a fancy plate covered with a dolly.

"Oh, I say... is there no end to this?"

IF Sir Walter speaking. What, Sir Walter Raleigh? The same. Some months ago he offered pipe lovers a free booklet on "How to take care of your pipe."

However, we've succeeded in engaging two of Queen Elizabeth's ladies-in-waiting to help the old boy out with his mail—so don't hesitate to send for your copy. It tells you how to break in a new pipe—how to keep it sweet and mellow—how to make an old pipe smoke smoother and better—the proper way to clean a pipe—and a lot of worth-while hints on pipe hygiene.

IF you're a pipe smoker, you'll want to read this booklet it's free. Just write to the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, Louisville, Ky.

TURN IN on "The Raleigh Review" every Friday, 12:00 to 11:00 p. m. (New York Time), over the WEAJ coast-to-coast network of N.B.C.

The Poppled Koink

By Hugh Hutton (Author of Nutty Natural History)

THE Koink, or speckled groundhog, is a ham growing creature found in many rural districts. Although mistaken by many for pig banks, they carry no money, and are valued only for their ability to hunt gophers which they root out from their burrows with their strong proboscis.

These in a wild state, being unable to prepare the soup, get only parsley and are much thinner than the domestic koinks.

After hunting through a bushel of peanuts, you can find one about the shape of the koink's head, but they are rare. The body is a paper-shell pecan with golden speckles, and the

Modern Youth and Its Ways

By JEAN NEWTON

"DAD, you're just a conscientious objector!"

I heard a boy of twenty say that to a father whose whole life was wrapped up in his children and to whom nothing in the world meant anything compared with their happiness.

During that boy's childhood father and son had been pals. But now it seemed they were growing farther and farther apart. They no longer seemed to have things in common. The father could not escape the terrible hurt that he was losing his son's confidence.

To an outsider, the reason was obvious. Modern youth and its ways were completely awry according to the standards of the older man. Of course he had only his son's own good to mind. There were times when he was undoubtedly right in his contention that his son was endangering that "good." At other times when he created issues it was merely because he was inelastic—a bit narrow and a bit stubborn in insisting upon his own standards as the only right standards instead of recognizing them as something as dated and inappropriate to modern needs as his 1899 clothing would be if he should put it on for a meeting of the 1930 Rotary club!

The important point, of course, is not who is right in any particular issue of 1930 against 1899. It is that parents can do more for their children by holding their confidence than by being right. And if they are going to see everything from the other side of the fence from their children, those children cannot have anything in common with them; and not only will they feel no urge to give their parents their confidence, but to avoid the unpleasantness of constant friction they will consciously or unconsciously avoid those who love them best and are in a position to give them valuable assistance with the problems of their lives.

It is a bitter pill for any parent to have to swallow when he realizes that his son or daughter regards him as a "conscientious objector." And difficult as it may be to drop standards and ideas which for a generation we had regarded as the very foundations of the universe, to force our set minds around to see things in the light in which we can hold the confidence of those children, which is the most powerful weapon for their protection in times of real danger.

Incidentally a mental attitude of doubt as to whether our way is really always the best way in everything is good for us. It helps us keep young.

American Libraries

The modern public library in the United States, maintained by the municipality or some other unit of local government from the proceeds of taxation, dates from about 1850, but its real development began in 1870. The earliest tax-supported library is said to have been the town library of Salisbury, Conn., established in 1803. The oldest existing library of this kind is the one at Peterborough, N. H., established in 1523.

WHY WE HATE DON'TS

By M. K. THOMSON, Ph. D.

WE ALL hate don'ts. None of us like to be told that we must not do this or that. Every such command is a challenge to our personality. We rebel. The natural reaction to every don't is to do the very thing we are commanded not to do.

Every don't arouses a counter suggestion. The force of an idea is such that once the idea takes possession it has a way of working itself out in action. Whenever the don't is repeated either by ourselves or by others it serves to keep the idea at the focus of consciousness.

We cannot live on don'ts. Body and mind we are made for action. Don'ts do not provide opportunity for doing, and since we must do something, we end by doing the very thing that is prohibited. The laws of association and suggestion turn the trick.

The most important reason why we hate don'ts is that the thing prohibited is usually something we have done before or are likely to do. This means that it is something we like to do. We therefore resent being told not to do it.

A don't implies an act that is already begun or is strongly contemplated. In either case the muscles as well as the inner mental attitude are all set for it. Once an act has begun to function, any interruption is looked upon as an imperiousness. The whole mechanism is thrown out of gear. Consequently the resources of the man are called into play in behalf of the act in question. So that what was originally a mild reaction becomes a storm center with the whole man mobilized in its favor.

Finding the Next Dollar

By Douglas Malloch.

WHERE the next dollar comes from, that's the problem that we face. Whether a mansion or a flat, it always seems the case.

The morning always brings some need: New fuel for the fire, New food to eat, new books to read, New clothes that we require.

But if by chance two dollars come when only one will do, Then add the other to the sum.

You save, to work for you, For dollars that you lay away A dollar soon will breed, And that may prove some other day The dollar that you need.

Perhaps some morning when the shop is shut, or hair is white, We'll find that dollars never stop, Keep working day and night, They will not need to ask of friends Who saved as well as spent; Where the next dollar comes depends On where the last one went.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Grace J. Austin, editor at Dame Fashion's home because no one in the household has a costume to harmonize with it.

But if handkerchiefs talk, other garments and accessories can do it also, and now the question is, what do they say? Or perhaps a closer question would be, what do we want them to say?

In former days in rain, the only word demanded was to announce protection, but now when a woman walks abroad in storm and dampness she wears the raincoat which she chose deliberately for its becoming qualities, as well as its good waterproof substance. There are many pretty berets or effective felt hats that fairly enjoy a baptism of rain.

"Wear old clothes for traveling," was a statement that the prudent made back in the erroneous termed "gay" eighties and nineties. "Wear the most becoming matched or harmonized costume your purse and your luck can find when you go traveling," is the modern version. For the modern traveler stops at the best hotels for dinner, and as we all know, is likely to run across friends unseen for years, and must be becomingly attired.

There is probably not now in existence a bolt of the somber, "battleship gray" calico, which used to be considered the proper wear for the war of housekeeping. The gayer the smock the better the mood of the house dress, the livelier and more cheerfully the home day will go. Dame Fashion would not believe in taking the smock upon the floor of congress at Washington, as one of the women representatives did. But short of that, and a church service, the omnipresent smock has wide travels. It takes many names, especially "beach coat" in the summer, but really remains a smock just the same.

Paris not so long ago gave one of its shrieks for white, fuchsia, and white only. But the pretty rose-and-peach garments are much too fascinating to women buyers to be given up. It is the message of the costume jewelry that really keeps it in style. It makes no attempt to say, "See how many thousands I represent!" But for any art lover it declares, "See my lovely color effects!"

A university junior lately said, "Dame Fashion, you love color, so you ought to come and sit for hours on the beaches. Green and orange, pink and sky blue—blue and white and white and black and white, to give that 'punctuated' you talk about, to the beach; stripes and bands are there that just yell 'Hallelujah!'—or sort of a 'Happy days are here again' note."

The other day Dame Fashion went to call upon an elderly lady over eighty. Her eyes were bright and full of interest. "I think nothing of going from coast to coast," she remarked, although a cane rested by her side. Dame Fashion was attracted by the clear white hair of the traveler, bobbed in a modish manner with two well placed permanent waves. Two generations back her head would have been in a cap. What a gain in comfort and becoming qualities that these women may now appear, just as nature intended they should!

Girlish Evening Dress Fashion From Hollywood

Showing a dainty evening dress of mesh pink chiffon, featuring feminine loveliness in the skirt, with softer trimming the blouse. Rhinestone patterns, copying flower designs, encircle the neck and form a nosegay at the shoulder and waistline.

Bolero Jacket Ensemble for Slim Young Women

The princess dress and separate bolero jacket is planned especially for the slim young girl. The dress illustrated is simply fitted with shirring at the waistline. It has a trick jabot cut from a semicircle, effective cape sleeves and a slim skirt with low-placed fullness. The separate jacket makes the dress doubly useful and adds to the becomingness by means of a little tucked collar, a bow at front and tucked ruffles at the cuffs. A light yellow silk crepe with diminutive brown printed design, offset by a brown hat, bag and shoes would be very effective. Binding is also the simplest finish for the skirt, the jabot, neck of the dress and the bolero. —Woman's Home Companion.

Hollywood Is Ignoring the Long Skirt Trend

With truly modern disregard for some of the old, unwavering edicts of Missy Fashion, Hollywood couturiers have put their proverbial foot down and accepted a compromise in sport ensembles between chic and practicality, according to an article by one of moviedom's fashion experts, in Talking Screen.

Ignoring the long skirt trend, tennis skirts remain "bobbed," deriving necessary fullness by means of pleats, folds, circular flares or godets. The sleeveless mode predominates though tiny cap sleeves are shown. Pastel shades in pinks and dusty blue vie with yellow; while bright cardigan jackets or gay "roughneck" sweaters are slipped on after the game. Vivid socks and two-toned tennis slippers, with printed scarfs and matching bandanas are also indicated. Even jaunty linen shorts for tennis, have been sported.

Practical three-piece knitted suits for golf both in pastel shades and tweed mixtures with lined skirts have attracted favor as have suede aviation suits consisting of leather coats, trousers and vest in several colors and smartly cut. For the equestrienne, white linen trousers or checked, soft-tailored blouses with four-in-hand ties and, for chilly mornings, pastel slip-on sweaters are indicated, together with jodhpurs instead of riding breeches. Tweed top-coat as well as shaggy polo coats are recommended.

Bowknots Decorate the Dainty Summer Models

Bowknots of the same material as evening dresses play a big part in ornamentation of midsummer models shown by couturiers.

Impressive in size and sometimes cut in one with intricate godets and incrustations the up-to-date bow is one with the dress.

Bows placed just above the knees, marking the focal point of fullness of godets, are the only relief on many smooth fitting princess dresses made of heavy crepe marocain.

Brilliant Handkerchief Adds That Bright Touch

Chiffon handkerchiefs studied in many shades of the same color are accompanying the sports costume as well as the evening ensemble. Shades of orange and yellow, for example, brighten a brown knit sports suit when dangling as a handkerchief from the patch pocket on one hip. Some of the recent sports suits depend on a large, brilliant handkerchief for their bright touch rather than on a scarf.

Straight Little Jackets of Blazer-Striped Flannel

There really was no very good reason why blazers had to come back into fashion this summer. We could have got along very well without them and there are all sorts of little jackets and capes that answer the purpose in a more feminine sort of way. But here they are—straight little jackets of blazer-striped flannel, looking very smart and in the picture at resorts and smart country clubs.

Cultivating Insincerity

THERE is a person whom we all know. The one who tells you your hair looks so well when you are conscious it is struggling in dishvelment; the one who says: "Oh, my dear, I would love to go to your party," and then at the last minute offers an excuse that is so feeble it totters at the very utterance; the one who says in a superior tone that he wouldn't be paid to go to one of "those cheap shows" and at the first opportunity sits in the front row; the one who claims and professes friendship and yet behind our back destroys our character or condemns it with faint praise. Insincerity—there is no more hated quality in the world and yet also none other so widely practiced. I saw the seed of it planted in a child's mind only the other day.

Gertie and Helen were playing happily together when Helen's mother came into the room. "Helen must have her supper now, Gertie, you'd better run along home," she said.

So Gertie ran home and Helen asked, "Why do I have my supper now Mother? It isn't dark yet."

"Oh, you aren't going to have it Helen. Mother just wanted you to play quietly alone for awhile. I just told Gertie that!"

Just told Gertie that, when she could have been honest and sincere just as well as not! You see, she did not realize that a child is very susceptible to adult example even in such small ways as speech or manners. Little Helen herself would later use the same tactics and for no other reason than that Mother had shown them to her.

Another example occurred today. Two mothers met two other mothers on the street. They stopped to have a few moments of conversation. Their children were with them and, of course, were forced to wait and listen to the words that passed between them. Both groups were intimate friends and they exchanged the most friendly, confidential remarks. After a few moments, when the children grew restless waiting for them, they said good-by and moved on. "Thoughtlessly and ingenuously enough each pair then indulged in critical comment of the other two, betraying further confidences made them individually at previous times. The children absorbed every word and, although they probably did not quite understand why their mothers should say one thing to their friends and quite another behind their backs, they naturally felt it must be the thing to do and when they grew older would, no doubt, adopt the same despicable practice.

Children learn by watching and listening to grown-ups. Avoid every practice of insincerity and children will avoid it, too.

Teaching Orderliness

THERE doesn't seem to be any way to persuade six-year-old sons and daughters to pick up their toys and put them near where they belong. If some one stands near and repeatedly prods by saying, "And now pick up the ball, and now pick up the doll's clothes or the ten pins" the prolonged process of being orderly is eventually and painfully accomplished. Little is left of the prodgers, however.

Funny, isn't it? Children will go around and around Robin Hood's barn to avoid doing something that could be over by the time they begin to think about it. We may nag until nagging seems our chief attribute but it makes no impression. What can be done? Shall we sacrifice our idea of order to the boys' dispositions? Shall we pick the toys up ourselves to save our energy? If we do, we'll let ourselves in for years of doing just that, and we'll also help the children to form the habit of slinking which they will never be able to overcome. Six years of age is only the beginning of a long, long life of avoiding petty duties and it is the most important age for habit formation.

Now the method of attack for this problem is divided into two equally important parts. The first has to do with the elimination of our inequities, our liberality in the use of just plain chatter, our persuasions, our pleadings and our threats which we never bother to carry out. Few words are needed when one wishes to be most convincing and never more true is this than in dealing with children. Have you ever tried the experiment of looking a dangerous animal straight in the eye to keep him from attacking you? Probably not, but try it on your six-year-olds. Look squarely in those teasing young eyes and say, "Son, daughter (whichever the case may be), pick up your toys. Nothing else can be done until they are all back in their places." And mean it!

The second part has to do with honesty in our demands. If we're going to insist upon order, we'd better not be too insistent unless our own bureau drawers will bear inspection. We have no right to pose as dictators of a principal which we do not practice and children are quick to observe this form of hypocrisy.

If we are convincing and honest, we will have little trouble in obtaining not only order, but any other quality desirable. The reason why we have to nag so much is usually a lack of one or the other of these necessary attributes of discipline.

INDIA AND ITS PEOPLES

By Capt. L. R. Claud Robinson

BRITISH GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

WHEN the administrative powers of the East India company were transferred to the crown in 1858, it was provided that India should be governed in London by a secretary of state assisted by a council, and in India by a governor general or viceroy assisted by a small cabinet of officials. The provincial governments were organized on the same lines. This system continued until 1900, when Lord Morley as secretary of state in London, and Lord Minto, the viceroy, agreed upon giving India a measure of representative government. This was provided for by a piece of legislation known as the Indian council act.

The advance made by this act lay in increasing the size of the legislative councils. The additional members were nominated by representative Indian bodies such as chambers of commerce, universities and so forth, so as to secure representatives of different classes. It appears, however, that the powers of the councils were limited to discussions and recommendations which the government was not bound to accept. This system seemed to work well and give satisfaction.

The next step was a report in 1918 by Mr. Montagu, secretary of state for India, and Lord Chelmsford, the viceroy, in which proposals were made for a new constitution. These became the basis of the government of India act of 1919. Roughly, this scheme enfranchised five millions of the Indian population on a property qualification. These elect a large proportion of the central and provincial legislatures, the size of which has been much increased. The electors also appoint a new central council of state, which is really the upper house corresponding to the senate of the United States and the house of lords in England. The remaining members of all these bodies are nominated by the executive government which is irremovable, but of course the elected members are in a big majority.

In the provinces the functions of the legislatures have been divided into two categories. The elected members, that is those entirely Indian, deal with such subjects as education and public health; while the nominated members, English and Indian, control the police, the administration of justice and such matters. The British governor of each province is the keystone of these somewhat complicated arrangements.

The viceroy has powers of veto and legislation far exceeding those of the President of the United States, when deemed necessary for public safety. Contemporaneously with these great changes, local self-government was established and the civil service "Indianized" by raising the proportion of Indians to nearly 50 per cent. All these arrangements came up for reconsideration recently by the Simon commission.

A HINDU FESTIVAL

THE great spring festival of the Hindus is known as the Holi and is celebrated in varying form all over India. A feature of the observance which attracts the onlooker is the indiscriminate throwing of red powder and the squirting from syringes of a red liquid—significant of the blood of Hindu martyrs of the past. For days after the celebration men are seen going about with their white clothes still stained with patches of scarlet.

I witnessed this festival at Puri in the province of Orissa. Large numbers of pilgrims came into the town for the event and the streets were thronged with a good-natured holiday crowd.

Self-mortification, which India reverences and admires, is the chief motive of those who take an active part in the proceedings. At one point is a man with little to cover his nakedness beyond a coating of wood ash smeared all over his body, standing motionless upside down. His whole weight rests on his head and elbows. His legs are crossed in the air and a relentless sun beats down upon him. I learned that he had been in this position for three hours. Further along another man reposed upon a bed of spikes. He had been lying thus in the sun for four hours.

But the most popular practice seemed to be that of being barbed alive. On patches of waste land along the road were rows of human arms and legs. These marked the graves of living sadhus, or those who are treading "the path of knowledge," the idea apparently being to illustrate the effectiveness of a system of breathing, which is a part of the training of these men; a training which, it is claimed, ends by giving a man complete control over all the functions of his body. I took hold of a pair of protruding arms and the owner willingly allowed himself to be raised from his temporary grave. He stated he had been barbed for an hour.

Happy Woman Tells How She Lost 19 Pounds of Fat in 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote—"My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Do sure and do this every morning for "It's the little daily dose that takes off the fat"—Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system. At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's six life-giving salts are carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

Naturalist Will Study Creatures of the Sea

Dr. William Beebe, a famous naturalist, has gone to Non-such Island, Bermuda, to study the strange creatures that live in the sea. He is to live with them, but will pursue his studies in a special under water apparatus fitted with thick glass windows. Doctor Beebe hopes to reach a depth of nearly 1,700 feet and to discover many new kinds of marine life. The ordinary diving apparatus consists of a helmet with glass "eyes" secured to a waterproof dress which covers the whole body except the hands, a flexible tube connected with a pump which provides air, a 40-pound weight for the chest, a similar weight for the back, boots studded with 10 pounds of lead, and a life-line, in which in most cases telephone wires are embedded. A diving suit of metal is used by divers when they work at great depths.

Baby's little dresses will just simply dazzle if Red Cross Ball Blue is used in the laundry. Try it and see for yourself. At all good grocers.—Adv.

Death Ends Lifelong Vigil
With the death of Miss Isabella Henry at the age of eighty years has been revealed her broken romance. When a girl she fell in love with a youth who jilted her. She was broken hearted, and since that time she has spent most of the time at the front window of her home at Durham, England, looking, as she often said, "for her lover." She would occasionally visit the railway station and watch the arriving trains in the hope that she would see him again. But he never came.

Political Announcements

FOR ABSENTEE

I hereby announce my candidacy for the office of Assessor of Lincoln County, subject to the action of the Democratic Party.

A. R. Dean.

Where'll They Go?

Many Democrats left the party because of the panic of 1892, the last administration of Grover Cleveland, and have since scared their children with the dangers of Democratic supremacy. Now, by the same token, they'll have to leave the Republican party, and where'll they go?

"The only Party That Knows How to Rule" has fallen onto hard times. This party doesn't even have the satisfaction of blaming its present plight upon some fault of its political enemies, for it has had charge of every branch of government, from cellar to garret, for ten years. "No panic can occur under a Republican Administration" has been packed away in moth balls with other slogans.

G. P. A. Convention

Sportsmen of the entire state are waiting with interest the sixteenth annual convention of the New Mexico Game Protective Association which will be held in Albuquerque, September 1 and 2.

The Albuquerque association, host to the convention, is making elaborate plans for the entertainment of delegates. It is expected that over two hundred delegates will be present from the 47 local associations in the state.

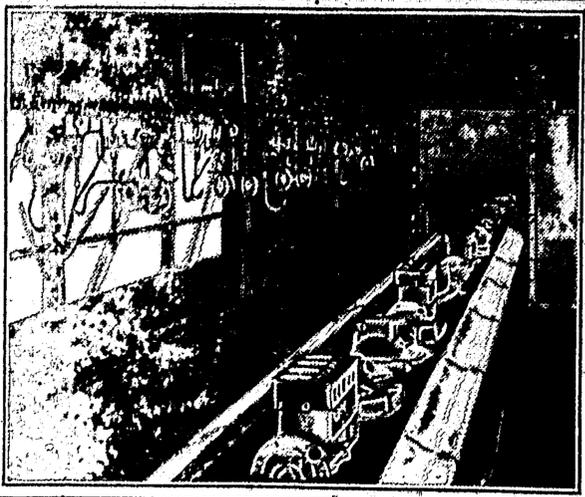

The Franciscan hotel will be head quarters and the convention will be held in the large Indian Room, which will be decorated with mounted heads and trophies of the hunt for the occasion.

While entertainment plans are still tentative, the first day will be featured with the six reels of field and stage pictures at the Sunshine Theater, and a huge rally at night to be held in the First American grounds.

If possible, the convention will be brought to a close at noon of the second day so as to enable members to return to their homes that night.

The New Mexico G. P. A. has been growing rapidly in the past year and it is expected that this will be the largest and most enthusiastic annual convention of its sixteen years of existence. Among the speakers will be re-

Miles of Conveyors in Ford Plant

This picture shows two types of conveyors in use in the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Company.

AN ENDLESS chain conveyor, three and a half to four miles long, said to be the longest in the world, has just been completed at the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Company at Dearborn, Michigan. On it parts of Ford cars in the process of manufacture are transported from one building to another and completed parts are carried direct to railroad cars for shipment to branch assembly plants.

The conveyor, which carries its cargo on suspended hooks, has a daily capacity for 300,000 parts weighing over 2,000,000 pounds. It supplants eight cars and trucks which have been used for the transfer of many parts from one point to another in the Ford plant.

This longest conveyor of them all in development of the Ford policy that nothing should be done by manual labor that could better be done by machine.

In the early days of his manufacturing career, Mr. Ford devised the assembly line—a moving track on which cars in the process of assembly went to the workmen instead of the workmen carrying parts to the car. The assembly line, perfected in many ways, is now used by automobile manufacturers generally.

The value of the conveyor in reducing physical labor, in saving time, in preserving system and in cutting costs soon became apparent and its use was extended to other purposes about the plant. Now there are literally miles of conveyors of various types in the Ford plant. Some of them carry parts from one building to another and are carefully synchronized so that the parts arrive at precisely the right moment and in the exact spot where they are needed. Others transport red hot ingots of steel weighing nearly a ton each. Still others move outgoing shipments.

If it were not for the conveyors, according to officials of the Ford Company, mass production would not be possible on its present scale.

Additional Local

Bob, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Skinner, had the misfortune to break his right arm in a fall from a horse, Thursday of last week. Bob, however, doesn't appear to be much concerned over his mishap.

Joe Hennessey, a well known resident of Jicarilla, traded his home and 40 acres of ground for two lots on one of the main streets in Farmington, New Mexico. He left Tuesday for Farmington and may decide to locate there.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Foust, who have been guests at the Kudner home in Venado Gap, will leave for their Chicago home next week. Mr. Foust is vice president of an advertising company, of which Mr. Kudner is president, and is the western manager of the firm, with headquarters in Chicago.

representatives of sheep and cattle growers, forest service, biological survey, state game commission and others.

A program of closer co-operation between stockmen and the G. P. A. in the matter of predatory animal control is expected to result from the meeting, as both the stock raisers and the game association are faced with this same problem.

A number of store fronts have received a new coat of paint this week. Good work.

Mrs. L. W. Stewart came in Wednesday night from Douglas, Arizona, and is the guest of Mrs. Albert Ziegler. She will leave for New York next Friday night, after a visit with old friends here and at White Oaks. The Stewarts lived at White Oaks in the early days and occupied a prominent position in the social and commercial life of that town's golden era.

Mayor McQuillen returned this week from a three-weeks' trip to the coast. Mac appears to have stood the trip very well, looks prosperous and contented, even if the "Native Sons" did "pull his leg" a little. The only unpleasant memory of the trip, in fact, was that portion between Long Beach and Frisco, which was made by boat, and Mac was continually feeding the fish.

Dr. and Mrs. F. H. Johnson left Wednesday morning for San Diego, California, the former to attend the annual meeting of the S. P. Surgeons. From San Diego they will go to Frisco; then across to Salt Lake and up through the Yellowstone Park. A straight shoot east will take them to Chicago, where the doctor will take a three weeks' post graduate course. They expect to be absent until about October 1.

The County Fair

Arrangements are being made to hold the 4th Annual County Fair, October 17-18, 1930.

Adjacent towns and cities have been notified so that if possible there will be no conflicting dates.

7,200,000 Chevrolets

Flint, Mich., August—Another automotive record toppled here on Thursday when the Chevrolet Motor Company turned out its two millionth six cylinder car less than twenty full months after the introduction of this type.

Just as Chevrolet led the world in four cylinder car production during the last two years that the company built that type, so now it assumes leadership in the six cylinder field by having built nearly five times as many sixes in twenty months as any other manufacturer in the history of the industry.

The two millionth six—a coach—rolled off the line here with Chevrolet and General Motors executives in attendance to witness the final assembly of the car, for which no further ceremonies were planned.

The brief time required by Chevrolet to build two million sixes provides an index of the rapid strides made by this organization to the front rank of volume car builders. The company was organized late in 1911, and there were required nearly seventeen years to turn out five million of the old four cylinder cars, while two million sixes have been placed on the streets and highways of the world since January 1, 1929, or in a total time of only nineteen months and one week.

Commenting on the manufacture of the two millionth six, W. S. Knudsen, President and General Manager, stated that the fact of establishing a new record was significant mainly in that it indicated a definite public preference for the performance and luxury which a six affords in the low priced field.

"We abandoned our position as the world's largest builder of four cylinder cars," Mr. Knudsen explained, "because the volume we had built up, coupled with the tremendous purchasing power of General Motors, enabled us to put two extra cylinders in our cars and yet retain the price range and operating economy of the old four cylinder car."

Total output of the Chevrolet Motor Company to date is approximately 7,200,000 cars.

LONG MILES IN SHORT SECONDS

BEFORE starting on a trip, other than for a vacation, of course, consider for a minute whether a telephone call might save you the time and expense.

Telephoning is a round trip, the miles there and back are just a matter of seconds, and complete discussion is as easy and satisfactory as being there in person. Friendly telephone visits with friends in other cities are also becoming as commonplace as business calls. Just give the operator the out-of-town number—if you don't know it, the name and street address. The call is generally completed like a local call—while you hold the line. When the operator gives you the number before completing the call, jot it down for future reference.

Here are a few samples of day rates when you do not ask for a particular person at the other telephone:

ADDITIONAL LOCAL

Mrs. Elsie Paden, chief operator at Central, is in El Paso.

The Haleys were guests for the week-end of the Finleys at Eagle Creek.

Roy Stimmel and family came in this week from California for a visit with their parents.

Loss: $30.00 in currency liberal reward if returned to Lincoln County News office.

Miss Louise Sweet returned last Friday from an extended visit to Chicago and other points east.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gallacher and children are in Silver City, visiting Mrs. Gallacher's parents.

The O. W. Young family and Miss Stella Vaughn spent the week-end at Eagle Creek with the Kelleys.

Mrs. Frank A. English and little son Fred left last Saturday for Redondo, California, to see the eldest son, Don.

Miss Ethel Johnson returned Friday from Berkley, California, where she had taken a six weeks summer school course.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Clouse were in El Paso a few days this week. They accompanied Mrs. Branum upon her return to that point.

Miss Evelyn Grumbles returned Friday from Tucson, Arizona. She is contemplating a return to that point and enter a university there.

Mrs. C. P. Hupperts and daughter Miss Helen Frances, returned the latter part of last week from a visit to the old home in Iowa.

Mrs. Frank Abel and Frank, Jr., spent the week-end on the 'Doso. They returned Monday, accompanied by Frank, Sr., and Joe Adams.

Willie Norman and family are here on their return from Hot Springs. They will visit here a few days before going to their home at Tucumcari.

Attorney and Mrs. E. M. Barber and mother, Mrs. Mary L. Barber, drove to Las Cruces Monday morning and returned the next morning, via El Paso.

Frazier Charles was here the first of the week from Dallas, Texas. His two little daughters, Frances and Ginger, joined him on the Ruidoso for a few days.

Col. G. W. Prichard returned to Santa Fe Thursday, following a week's stay in Lincoln county, during which time he devoted his attention to personal interests.

Mr. Hubbard came up Saturday for Mrs. Hubbard and children. They were accompanied on their return to Carlsbad Monday by Mrs. Ella Skinner and her daughter, Miss Zuma.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Hamilton and Mrs. Pat Hamilton came up from El Paso Saturday evening, and spent Sunday at Eagle Creek with the Dingwalls.

Mrs. Nora Broussard and Mrs. Ed J. Hogan, Beaumont, Texas, mother and sister, respectively, of Mrs. J. V. Taylor of the I-X ranch, arrived last Sunday for a visit with the Taylors.

The weather has been dry and hot the past week, and, though little time has elapsed since we have had good rains, vegetation is beginning to show the need of additional moisture.

A. R. Dean, well known rancher and a mighty fine citizen of the Baca ranch country, was here Tuesday. A. R. says his section has enjoyed abundant rains and that stock conditions were never better.

Mrs. D. D. Tiffany left Monday for Utica, N. Y., to attend the bedside of a sick brother. Later she will visit Mr. Tiffany's brother at Middletown, and still later will go to the big town to give it the once over.

Maurice Lemon returned Friday from South Gate, California, to which point he had gone with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Queen. Maurice has a grown to such proportions that he can no longer wear his dad's pants.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Jackson, of Morocco, Indiana, were guests of Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Blaney at Eagle Creek the past week-end. This is Mrs. Jackson's first visit to our county, but Mr. Jackson was an early homesteader in the Oscuro country.

A. S. McCamant and son Tom were here Saturday from Las Cruces, enroute to their Corona home. They expected to get some peaches on the Rio Grande, but found the crop short, and brought some water melons instead. We fell heir to a nice, juicy one, for which we express our appreciation.

Mrs. George L. Strauss and children returned Thursday of last week from a two months' visit with relatives in California. They brought back with them a little animal known as a Kinkajou, whose habitat is Chile. This interesting little animal is a member of the weasel family, has a head and eyes like a bear cub, squeals like one, and possesses a tail out of all proportions to its body. Its food is bananas and tropical fruits and it climbs trees wraps its tail around a limb and swings from it just as our foreparents did.

Scott Taylor

A quiet wedding occurred Tuesday evening, August 19, at the I-X ranch home. The contracting parties were Mr. Duncan Scott, Jr., of Des Moines, Iowa, and Miss Dolores Taylor. Rev. Jno. L. Lawson performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by Mrs. Ed J. Hogan and Mrs. Nora Broussard and members of the immediate family.

The bride's one of the loveliest girls in Lincoln county, and possesses a charm that will carry her a long way toward making a happy home. Miss Dolores attended the New Mexico University last year, and had spent her vacation at her former home at Alpine, Texas, and had just joined her parents at their New Mexico home near Oscuro. The groom is on the staff of the Des Moines Register, and must possess some good qualities or could not have won such a charming girl to share his fortunes. Best wishes.

ONE MORE DAY TO REGISTER
Many citizens of New Mexico—both men and women—may lose their right to vote at the election this fall through failure to register, or to see that the registration books in their respective precincts carry their names.
There is but one day left for registration—tomorrow, (Saturday) August 23rd. In precincts where there were not more than 100 votes cast at the last election there is but one day—Saturday, August 23.
The News urges every citizen, as a fulfillment of a public duty, to register, or to see that his or her name is on the registration books. The names of voters at the last general election should, according to law, be carried forward to the new lists, but errors sometimes occur and there is a possibility that some names might be dropped unless every citizen makes a personal check-up to determine whether his or her name is on the new list.
One member of the family may register other members of the same family and it is urged that in each family, where all cannot appear personally for registration, one member be delegated to see that the family registration is made.
Your vote may be vital to the welfare of your county and state this fall. Do not place yourself in a position where you cannot vote, through failure to register. If you do not know the location of the registration place, call on your precinct chairman and the information will be given.

IT'S WISE TO CHOOSE A SIX

Announcing a new production record

2,000,000 Chevrolet Sixes now on the road

Since January, 1929, Chevrolet has produced and sold over 2,000,000 six-cylinder automobiles—nearly five times as many as any other manufacturer has ever built in an equal length of time.

These 2,000,000 buyers have chosen Chevrolet because it offers many desirable qualities not obtainable in any other car so low in price—

—the smoothness, silence and flexibility of a modern six-cylinder engine—the comfort and roadability of a modern, full-length chassis—and the style, safety and distinction of bodies by Fisher.

Yet, despite these fine car advantages, the Chevrolet Six is unusually economical. Its gas, oil, tire and upkeep economy is unsurpassed. And

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine, Lillian, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. They lunch together and recall their school days.

CHAPTER I—Continued

Lillian was ash blond, and very lovely. Her eyes were a kind of deep violet, serene calm eyes, and her lips were thin and bright red, beautifully cut. Her nose was patrician, her skin a clear milky white, and she wore just enough rouge to give her a faint rose color and make her eyes more lovely. The two girls plunged at once into the conversation of elaters, without beginning or end.

"I've been to the matinee with Sadie and Juel. Sadie's seen Delancey's show ten times. She's as crazy as she can be. Imagine falling in love with an actor. She's written him letters and letters. But he won't see her."

"She is kind of old for that line," said Ernestine, perched on the edge of her bed, a silk stocking in her hands. "I saw Will Todd today."

"Will Todd? Who is he?" Ernestine reminded her, and Lillian admitted that she remembered. "He's charming," Ernestine said. "I thought I'd ask mamma to invite him here for tea some afternoon, or for dinner, some night when he doesn't work."

Lillian stared, then laughed. "If you want to see him again, if you want an affair with him, don't tell mamma," she advised Ernestine, "or that will be the end of it. A little tango boy about the house one summer is quite a different matter from an attractive grown man. Mamma will make him miserable."

Ernestine considered this. "I don't see why," she said stubbornly.

"Certainly you see, darling," said Lillian. "We are not to have any irregular affairs now. We are to marry."

"Well," said Ernestine, "what of it? You can't marry unless you're asked. I can be friends with Will without marrying him, can't I?"

"I doubt it," said Lillian calmly. "You always go to such extremes, Ernestine. You are always blundering around, taking such awful chances and making wild friends. You've been spoiled and have had your way about lots of things. But this is one thing you can't have."

Ernestine pook-pooked Lillian, but felt at the same time that she would say nothing about Will just now.

"Beth's going to be married. She's going to marry Johnnie Allison."

"I'm not surprised, are you?" asked Ernestine, thinking of Will's gestures—the way he moved his hands continually.

"No, I'm not surprised. It's just what she wanted. One ought to know what one wants. I do. We talked about it today."

"I can tell you what you want without talking to you about it," said Ernestine with sisterly decision. "You want a house in Hubbard Woods, or else one of those big co-operatively owned apartments on the drive, near downtown. And you want a limousine, and a rich handsome husband. You've got it all planned out."

"In detail," agreed Lillian, unperturbed. "Pretty much as you named it. I want Loring, for myself."

"Why don't you ask him?" exploded Ernestine, her feelings a confusion of resentment. That Lillian had showed her the fallacy of her own dream, of hurt for her sister, that Loring should have been such a fool, of scorn for these plotters.

"I probably won't need to," Lillian answered, and went on, before Ernestine could interrupt her again: "If not Loring, then somebody much like him. I merely mentioned him as an example. After I've been married a few years, I want a son, and if I get along nicely, I wouldn't mind a daughter. I want everything right. A man who is already a member of good clubs, so that the money he makes will take us in the right direction, and we won't have to stand and wait. All right, go on and hoof. I know what I want, anyhow, and that's more than you know." She looked at Ernestine with some severity, and added darkly: "What's more, I'll see it. Watch me."

Ernestine could see Lillian as she had planned it all out. A correct house, a correct husband, perhaps even a correct baby or two. The same old business over and over, with correct people coming and going and Loring walking hand-in-hand about.

Not far her. She knew what she wanted. She wanted love! She wanted something not mentioned on Lillian's list. She wanted passionate, romantic love. She wanted adventure, an inevitable great adventure. Suddenly she stood trembling, her heart beating with great strong strokes. She was terrified with the intensity of her feeling, with the vivid, almost material picture of Will Todd's violent personality before her. One person, one in all the world, and never anybody else. She wanted love, and all her wakening instincts warned her that she had found it.

CHAPTER II

The Lady Promises

Again and again Ernestine resolved, to tell mamma all about Will, but again and again her confidences faltered before mamma's bright energy, before mamma's staccato bossiness. It was really her first secret from her family, and she did not feel right about it. Of course she was old enough, to have a friend if she wanted one, a friend of her own choosing, but Lillian's attitude that she was having an affair, a romance on the side, purely for the thrill of it, dismayed her. Yet she couldn't tell mamma, and an incident occurred which sealed her silence.

She had called Will on the telephone the next morning after her encounter with him on the street, and that had been the beginning of an absorbing intimacy. He worked in the afternoon and at night six days a week. He had nothing better to do with his forenoon and his luncheon hour than share them with Ernestine. But the very time of these engagements made

"But You Know Just How Papa Would React to Will Todd."

Ernestine safe from curiosity. It was a time of day exclusively the property of women in mamma's world. It would never have occurred to mamma that a love affair could have proceeded during a succession of forenoons.

And a love affair was what it rapidly became. Ernestine could not prolong the time with Will enough to suit her, and his eagerness soon matched, then outdrove, her own. His enthusiasm, his energy were compelling, and Ernestine felt the rousing and stirring of her own personality in touch with his. Within a week she was desperately in love. She had no room for any thought and feeling but those which concerned Will Todd. Presently she realized that the termination of their friendship would be a true catastrophe, and with this realization she began to practice secrecy with skill and determination.

One blowy, gusty Sunday morning in December she had escaped church and met him and talked, hand in hand, as they always talked, quickly, sturdily.

Eventually a little silence fell between them, and in its magic, without speaking a word, they turned and kissed each other, and smiled a little dazed and leaned together. The touch of lips, and then the pressure of cheek to cheek was magic. His arms slipped about her, and for a long, long time they sat in a swing of joy.

There was no word spoken, no promise, but Ernestine knew now that she must tell mamma. The family was home from church when she reached the house, sitting in the big living room, all of them engrossed in gossip. Mamma looked at Ernestine sharply.

"Why didn't you come to church?" "I went for a walk," evaded Ernestine, and her face flamed with color, for they all looked at her, and she felt that Will's love-making was visible upon her. Mamma said no more, however, and Lillian turned to her with the news.

Motorist Learned That Small Boy Was Correct

Humor can be found even in parking difficulties. A Brooklyn motorist had cleared two blocks in an effort to find a place to park the other night. He was taking his family to a neighborhood motion picture show and already was ten minutes late for the feature picture. Finally he sighted an ideal space near the theater. Speeding up ahead of other motorists he stopped and started to back into the space. "You can't park back, mistake," cautioned a fat negro boy from the curb. Ignoring the negro boy, the motorist completed backing his car into the space, then looked out and angrily demanded: "What's the matter with you? What do you mean, I can't park here?" "Nothin', mistake, nothin' at all," replied the lad with a frightened look

"You remember I told you Sadie Hall was in love with the actor, Lon Delancey?" Ernestine nodded, and Lillian said with some satisfaction. "Well, she finally succeeded in meeting him, and they were married last night. Every one was talking about it in church this morning."

"Well, what of it?" said Ernestine. "She can marry him, can't she?" "Ernestine!" said her father sternly. "You know it isn't suitable." He was a big man, a little too stout, with a handsome florid face. His brown eyes were warm and kind, but his big nose was acquisitive, his mouth stern and hard, a man of brilliant mind, but limited by prejudices.

"It is her money he wants," said papa, "and nothing else. The girl's a fool, and was not brought up properly, or she would never have done such a thing."

Loring put in his oar. He was always there on Sundays, thought Ernestine, who was tired of having him around.

"Any man who urges a girl to keep her love affair a secret from her folks is a blackguard, and a girl may as well realize it first as last. No real man would do such a thing. He would be honorable." He looked at her when he said it, with such meaning that Ernestine felt a faint dismay.

"But how ridiculous," she exclaimed. "You all know, every one of you, that if she had told her folks of her infatuation, they would have carried her off to Europe, or had him forced out of town. They would have separated them instantly."

"But that's why she ought to tell her people," said papa. "No girl can trust her own judgment, when she gets out of her own class. Her people know best, and she should confide in them."

All this while mamma had been watching Ernestine. Mamma was so pretty, with her violet eyes, and smooth fair hair, and her slender vigorous body. But mamma was sharp.

"Neither of my girls would do such a thing," she said now in her soft quick voice, but with a meaning that Ernestine and Lillian both sensed. "I am sure that neither of my little girls would do such a thing to me—have a secret love affair. Would either of you?"

"Don't be putty, mamma," advised Lillian, and Ernestine was silent.

Later, alone, Lillian turned to Ernestine eagerly. "You'd better come across. I think the folks are on to you."

"Of course not," said Lillian impatiently. "It's your own business. But, Ernestine, you aren't really going to fall in love with him, are you? Papa would be furious."

Ernestine shook the bright tears from her eyes and smiled at Lillian. After a moment, Lillian went on vigorously. "Loring saw you yesterday morning. He asked me who the young man was, and I told him, but asked him not to mention it. Still he may tell. He's awfully fond of you, Ernestine. He's always telling me that you are just like a little sister to him. He might feel it his duty to tell papa about you and Will."

"But there's nothing about Will that anybody could object to," protested Ernestine. "I'm not engaged to him, but if I should become engaged, I don't see who could care. He's fine and good and gentle. He's brave, too, a real man."

Lillian shook her head. "It's your funeral," she said, with the heartless laissez-faire of her generation, which feared, above all things, that it might become its brother's keeper. "But you know just how papa would react to Will Todd. He's the son of papa's old carpenter. He's poor, and he hasn't been to school, and he's not very strong—there's nothing but objections to such an idea, Ernestine. Anyhow, I can't see why you could tell yourself even a thing of such a thing as getting engaged, imagine taking a chance like that!"

Will said nothing about marriage. He was full of talk, overflowing with his own vitality, enraptured with Ernestine's beauty and dearness. One day, however, when they had gone for their usual walk north along the lake shore, he seemed oddly silent and thoughtful, and at times he looked at her, as though wondering whether to speak his mind or not. When he left her, he kissed her again and again, and said oddly, "Remember me," as though it were farewell.

"I'll see you tomorrow," she whispered to him, and turned her fur collar up against the wind.

CLAIRVOYANT DOES TRICKS FOR COURT

Arrested as Fraud, He Wins His Acquittal.

Lettmeritz, Czechoslovakia.—The extraordinary course of staging a seance for the purpose of testing the capacity of a clairvoyant was adopted by the Lettmeritz court in the course of a trial which has aroused enormous interest.

The accused, Erik Jan Hanussen, was charged with obtaining money by false pretenses. The case was begun last year, but owing to the large number of witnesses, some of them from abroad, it was adjourned last December until recently.

Hanussen, whose services as a clairvoyant were in great demand, was arrested in Tepitz on a charge of fraud, and though witnesses alleged that they had been deceived by him, an equal number spoke as to the man's extraordinary gifts.

Tell of Feats. Prof. Dr. Albert Kroener of Berlin declared that Hanussen was a "phenomenon and the best clairvoyant known." A letter was read in court from a Berlin carpet dealer, who stated that he was conversing in a restaurant concerning a theft of carpets. Suddenly a man sitting at the next table—it was Hanussen—bent over and said, "The two men are on the race course at Marienbad." The dealer went at once to Marienbad, recognized the thieves, and had them arrested.

Another witness who had attended one of the accused's seances told how a woman had handed Hanussen a slip of paper on which was written the date of a murder which took place in the year 1000. Hanussen gave a detailed description of the crime and of the murdered man.

The court decided—following these stories—to subject the defendant to a test—under rigorous conditions. All persons who had come into contact with Hanussen during the trial were placed under police guard. The court held was also strictly guarded by police, and the neighboring rooms were carefully searched in case an accomplice might be concealed there. All entrances were guarded by gendarmes.

Proves His Powers. Hanussen was set the following tasks: To find a concealed object. To give the characteristics of three persons from specimens of their writing. To do the same with two specimens of writing in the possession of the court.

Two clairvoyant tests with names, and to describe the fate of a man on the strength of an object associated with him.

As soon as the object was hidden, Hanussen ran out of the room and returned within one minute with a key which had been concealed. The clairvoyant next gave a brilliant description of three well-known Lettmeritz personalities when their writing was submitted to him, and he succeeded equally well with the pieces of writing provided by the court.

The strict clairvoyant tests also were triumphantly accomplished. In one of these he described a motor accident and in another the scene of a birth.

Hanussen was acquitted. He was given a great ovation as he returned to his hotel.

His Job to Help Eels Over Cenarth Falls

Newcastle-Emlyn, England.—To the many strange jobs in the world, add one of J. Morgan Rees, a fisherman. He helps young eels over a waterfall at Cenarth. During May and June millions of eels enter the river Telfy from the breeding grounds in the Atlantic and all goes well until they encounter the barrier of Cenarth falls.

Here is where Rees' job begins and ends. He weaves ropes of long grasses and reeds and hangs them over the projecting rocks near the bank. The eels swarm up the ropes and enter the calm waters and Rees' job is done.

Brothers, Separated for 50 Years, Are Reunited

Van Buren, Ark.—After being separated for more than 50 years, S. B. Miller has been reunited with his brother, L. L. Miller. The older brother had left home a half century ago and had heard from none of his relatives until accidentally discovering his brother.

Norwegian Indebtedness

Oslo, Norway.—Foreign indebtedness of Norwegian industrial and similar enterprises in the past year amounted to approximately 2,120 million kroner, about 15 per cent of the total capital invested in these enterprises.

X-Ray Finds Straw in Boy's Left Lung

Manlius, N. Y.—For nearly ten years Malcolm M. Rose, seven-year-old of Manlius, suffered from hemorrhages of the lung, apparently caused by tuberculosis and malnutrition. The other day an X-ray was taken and a six-inch straw was discovered in the left lung. It was removed and the youth now is believed to be recovering.

LIGHTS of NEW YORK

There is a girl at the Lighthouse, New York's association for the blind, who can guess the ages of persons by hearing them speak. She rarely is over a year out of the way.

Yet this is not so unusual. Most of those who have been blind for some time can judge not only age, but character by voices. Often it is harder to fool the ear than the eye. The answer may be that beauty parlors do a lot for faces, but cannot iron the wrinkles out of voices.

Many of us, because we do see, rarely consider how many impressions we get from sound. If we hear an unfamiliar noise, we usually go "to see what it is." Yet, not only words, but the tone of a voice can rouse various emotions in us. Words, for example, may be respectful, but their tone impermanent. We get definite impressions from a voice over a telephone, where we are forced to depend entirely on the ear.

To the deaf, life is a silent movie. To the blind, it is a radio performance.

The growth of the radio naturally has resulted in many experiments and discoveries as to sound effects. The National Broadcasting company here in New York has found that it is necessary to be just as careful in casting plays for the radio as it is for the stage. It is necessary to find speakers who possess parallel qualities to those of actors. They must have "acting" voices; voices with dramatic possibilities. Over the radio, voices take on physical characteristics.

With the passing of the James boys and their followers, it might have been supposed the holding up of trains had grown obsolete, but I notice the fashion has come in again. Once more the girls are growing old enough for long dresses and it is possible to step on a lady's skirt without the aid of a stepladder. The carpet sweepers so far appear to be confined to evening wear, but, even in the daytime, the evident tendency is downward. It looks as if such shows as have undraped choruses would soon be a treat again.

New York men who employ secretaries grow to be more dependent on them than a ship's captain on his compass.

Charles Francis Coe, for example, the man who wrote "Me, Gangster," "The River Pirate," "Votes," and all those other novels, dictates his stories, as well as his letters. The other day I entered Mr. Coe's writing room, in a Broadway office building, to find him sitting at his desk, gazing disconsolately at an epistle which he had picked out on the typewriter himself. It seems that he had lost his secretary by marriage or some other catastrophe.

"Got a stamp?" he inquired. "I assured him that I was unarmed. 'Well,' he said, 'I don't know what I am going to do. This is an important letter and I haven't any stamp.'"

Suddenly he was struck by a bright idea. He smiled happily, picked up his telephone and called an editor in Philadelphia. It took only a moment or two to get the connection and Mr. Coe explained that he had written a letter, but hadn't mailed it, and recited the gist of its contents. Then I heard him say:

"No, don't wait until you get the letter. I can't mail it. I haven't a stamp."

I later learned that the charge on the telephone call was $7.20. And all because Charlie Coe was alone in New York, without a secretary or a two-cent stamp.

New York has so many visitors landing at its piers or its railway stations that its hotels are almost always crowded. This is especially true of the more fashionable hosteries. As a result, many wealthy men, whose business brings them to the city frequently, not wishing to be bothered by making reservations or waiting for rooms, keep suites at hotels all year around. Their rooms are always ready; clothes hung in the closets; toilet articles in place; perhaps their own furniture. Thus they travel with little baggage. A number of rich New Yorkers own country places on Long Island or in Westchester, Conn., or New Jersey and also have apartments in town.

In an eating and drinking place in the Fifties, there is an old-fashioned bartender who is intensely fond of fishing. When he is not dispensing liquids, he usually is talking concerning his exploits with rod and line. Not long ago he was telling of the number of trout he had caught on one expedition and claimed that he could have caught twice as many.

"Why didn't you?" inquired a listener.

"Why," said the bartender in shocked tones, "I had the legal limit. It would have been against the law."

It was on Forty-sixth street that a well-dressed old man suddenly stopped, on the curb, removed his hat and placed it on the sidewalk, and taking an ecstasy, the musical instrument commonly known as a "sweet potato" from his pocket, began to play.

All types of people tread the sidewalks of New York.

FARM STOCK

SWEET CLOVER IS FINE AS PASTURE

Best Legume Crop for All Classes of Stock.

(By J. J. MONLEY, Extension Live Stock Specialist, Kansas State Agricultural College)

Sweet clover is the best legume pasture crop for all classes of live stock in Kansas with the exception of alfalfa for hogs, and even for hogs it is a very good substitute for alfalfa. It will carry more stock per acre than any other tame or wild crop grown in Kansas. While there have been in the past few years a few cases of sweet clover blight, it should not be condemned as a pasture crop on account of an occasional blight, as any rank succulent pasture such as rye, wheat, or even blue grass will occasionally cause bloat.

When first turning cattle or other stock in on sweet clover it may be well to gradually accustom them to it. If they are being turned in on a rank growth, they should be fed some dry feed first so they will not gorge themselves.

In pasturing the first season's growth, it is advisable to let the plant get a good start of about ten inches. After this it may be pastured down as much as the top growth will permit until frost and even then the excess growth may be grazed off. Pasturing the second season may start as soon as the stock can get a "bite" of it. It is the first pasture crop in the spring, being two or three weeks earlier than native pasture. Sweet clover will furnish two to four times as much grazing per acre as native pasture. It should be grazed heavily enough throughout the season to prevent it from getting coarse and woody. If not grazed close to the ground it will renew itself and come on again the next year.

Feeders Favor Silage for Cattle and Sheep

Feeders of beef cattle and sheep have even more reasons to build a silo and feed silage than the dairymen, according to experiment station results in all sections of the country. Yet nearly all dairymen feed silage, while the majority of beef men and sheep men do not.

After summarizing the results of all experimental data available Prof. F. H. Morrison, director of the New York experiment station, finds that the average ton value of silage for dairy cows is approximately one-third that of good mixed hay, while the per acre yield of silage is four or five times greater than that of hay. For beef cattle, he finds silage worth half as much per ton as clover hay, and for sheep more than half as much.

In an average of 20 trials with two-year-old steers, gain on silage-fed cattle cost $1.22 cents a hundred lbs. than on steers fed no silage. In these tests, a ton of silage replaced 27 pounds of concentrates and 693 pounds of clover hay.

Professor Morrison, who has long been considered one of the foremost feeding authorities of the country, feels that cattle and sheep feeders, like the dairymen, could get more money for their corn crop and make greater profits on live stock by feeding silage. In one corn belt state, 78 per cent of the members of dairy herd improvement associations own silos as compared to 12 per cent of all the farmers of the state.

Live Stock Notes

The loss of the pig crop every spring is considerable and in many cases it is due to anemia.

Feeding of iron salts to the sow does not influence the quality of milk as far as the ability to prevent anemia is concerned.

The use of anti-hog cholera serum, a method developed by the federal bureau of animal industry, is the only reliable preventive known.

With the cattle market showing decided preference for lightweight finished cattle there are greater possibilities of profits from raising well bred beef cattle.

It generally takes the best feeders of baby beef cattle from 180 to 200 days to make finished baby beef from heifer calves and 200 to 225 days to make finished baby beef from steer calves.

When hogging down corn it will be profitable to feed the hogs some protein supplement, such as tankage or skimmed milk. The hogs will not require quite as much tankage as they would if they were being fattened in a dry lot.

In the fall of the year the live stock raiser should take an inventory, particularly to determine which animals he will cull out to enter for market. Old animals that have outlived their greatest usefulness as breeders should be disposed of.

Reason for Alteration in Name of New Baby

On the very last day of the census, a baby was born at the Good Samaritan hospital and the proud father told the enumerator about it.

"And what is the baby's name?" asked the census taker, pointing his pencil.

"Why, it hasn't any name yet; it was born just about two hours ago." "Can't very well list it without a name," protested the statistician.

"Well, I'd like to have it in the count to make Los Angeles a little bigger," said the husband, and he and the enumerator went into conference as to a suitable name. They finally decided on Henry, and the husband called up the hospital to get his wife's approval.

"She can't talk now," stated the nurse over the phone, "but she says if you've decided on Henry, it's all right with her, except that you'll have to make it Henrietta."—Los Angeles Times.

Skeptical Public

Brian Jewett, grand exalted goof of his well-known Goof club, couldn't sell $5 gold pieces in Congress street, Portland, Maine, for $4 each. About five o'clock he emerged from a bank with ten new gold pieces. He started in with a sales talk something like this: "I say, here is a $5 gold piece and I need some ready money. Will you purchase it for $4?" Most of the replies he got were "ha! ha! ha!" One man, however, a foreigner, took a look at one of the gold pieces, bit on it sharply and passed over $4 with no hesitation. And one other was in on the purchase; but Jewett could not sell the other eight, though hundreds of passersby stopped to listen.—Indianapolis News.

Busy New York

In New York city a child is born every four minutes. Nine million persons scramble daily for subway seats. Fourteen persons are married every hour. On the average for a year, 23 new buildings are put up every day and six torn down. New Yorkers and their guests eat 7,000,000 eggs a day. And how the human family loves amusement! There are 800 theaters in New York city.

Shocked

Perry Greer, one of the veterans of Automobile row, had an experience the other day that had him hanging over a barrel.

"I'll pay cash for this car," a customer stated.

"Cash?" stammered Greer, "really, this is so unusual that I'm afraid you'll have to give us a reference or two."—Exchange.

Idea for "Movies"

A psychologist suggests that the superfilm of the future may be accompanied by a sequence of scents wafted through the theater, to bring the audience more completely into the atmosphere of the forest, the apple orchard, the farmhouse kitchen, or other scenes of the story.

Eternal Feminine

"How are you going to vote?"

"As my best judgment dictates," answered Miss Cayenne.

"Will you vote for a woman?"

"Yes. Every woman feels like voting for another woman in an election, but never in a beauty contest."

Biggest Hotel for London

London's new names house is to be the largest hotel in Europe and the biggest commercial building in the world outside America. It will have 2,000 rooms with baths, the number of baths being another innovation for hostilities in Europe.

WE can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly. If it doesn't, you should call a physician.

Frank. A census taker had a hard time getting into an apartment. He finally went up to the roof, and down a fire escape to get in, but once he had identified himself, the pretty young matron willingly gave him full information.

"You've been so frank about answering my questions, that I'm wondering why it was that you wouldn't let me in," the enumerator remarked as he folded up his blanks.

"I thought you were my husband," replied the girl apologetically.

Willing Giver Collector—Have you anything to give us that would do for home for aged females?

"Yes, take my mother-in-law.—Berlin Lustig Blatter.

Wants All the World to Know

"About ten years ago I got so weak and rundown that I felt miserable all over. One day my husband said, 'Why don't you take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' When I had taken two bottles I felt better so I kept on. My little daughter was born when I had been married twelve years. Even my doctor said, 'It's wonderful stuff! You may publish this letter for I want all the world to know how this medicine has helped me.'—Mrs. Horton Jones, 208 48th Street, Union City, N. J.

Reed Dean for Assessor

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the announcement of A. R. Dean for Assessor. As a Democrat—and being as straight in his politics as he is in his business dealings with his fellow man—Mr. Dean makes his announcement subject to the action of the party of his affiliation. Born in Texas, he left there with his parents and came to New Mexico in his early youth and has lived here about 45 years, a number of which have been spent in the Baca Ranch country, north of Lincoln, where he has been, and still is, engaged in the stock business. A man in the prime of life, active, vigorous, honest and intelligent, Mr. Dean meets every requirement for an efficient and faithful public official. Those who know him best and have neighbored with him for many years are his staunchest friends and supporters, and a better recommendation could not be asked of any man. More need not be said.

STEEL ECLIPSE

Windmill

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood feet across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze one started up smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away only to stop as the wind raised a dust in its eyes. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally gave up and went to rest with the last trace of the dying breeze.

That is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between turned, ground and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts.

The difference between machined and polished bearings and ordinary bearings; the difference between running in oil and running with dry gears.

In other words, it is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse Self-Oiling Steel Eclipse Windmill and just a plain windmill.

Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the self-oiling feature—the center Mt. feature—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will form a new idea of how good a windmill can be.
