Nogal Nuggets

Local showers the last few days will help the farmers in the bean cutting, as they will not be so dry. The bean beetle has damaged the crop considerably, and in some instances entirely ruined it. The bean crop will be cut short one-third to normal.

There is quite a bit of ripe fruit in the Nogal district. Ripe ready for market, pears, peaches, apricots and early apples. See the Husts, LeBaron, A. B. Zumwalt or Ed Comrey. Some of them can supply your wants in the fruit line.

H. E. Keller, well known farmer of Loma Grande, reports a damaging hail recently.

The Nogal school started Monday with a fair enrollment.

The dance at Nogal Hall Monday night attracted a surprisingly good crowd. But we expect a still larger crowd Saturday night, September 6. The Boomers will make the music, and that's enough said. Everybody cordially invited to attend.

The mining business in the Nogal district is at a standstill, with the exception of a little assessment work. But we are looking for better days ahead.

M. A. Hust, Frank Peacock, Tommie Zumwalt and Jesse May and their wives spent Sunday evening on old Bonto Creek, enjoying a big fish fry before returning home.

Just a few words about our county fair and track meet. Local or county fairs are a big help to our community. The community that holds the fair of general farm products or livestock show every year is fortunate. These are the best means of keeping in touch with the most profitable type of livestock and farm products to raise, by this means of exhibiting their products. The judges who award the prizes are usually well informed regarding market demands, and are willing to give reasons for their placing, as well as answering questions that may be asked. Thus it is fairs are valuable because competition between a number of exhibitors stimulates improvement, and every one strives to win—the loser this year is quite likely to come back with a winner next year.

It is truly unfortunate that so many things can be learned only by experience. For instance every man has failed to get the best possible out of his school days and the leisure time of his youth but he has never been able to get his son or daughter to see it that way. This is one thing that the average son or daughter will have to learn for themselves.

County Nurse Here

Miss J. P. Egbert, of New York, arrived this week, having been sent by the State Bureau of Public Health and Child Welfare Department to take the position of Nurse for the current school term. Miss Egbert has been engaged in public health work in Labrador, and Porto Rico and has also had experience as a regular nurse in France. She will have an office adjoining that of the county superintendent. Regular visits will be made all schools of the county, but a complete program awaits the return of Dr. F. H. Johnson, county health physician.

Sharp Decline in Foreign Trade Shown

Washington, August.—American foreign trade continues to decline at the rate of over two billion dollars a year, according to the figures just made public by the Department of Commerce, for the six months ending June 30, last.

The falling off of exports for the last six months was $547,149,277 and the decline in imports was $550,645,298, a total decrease in American foreign trade of $1,097,794,575, as compared with the same period of 1929.

Our trade with Canada, which country continues to be our best customer, shows that American exports to the Dominion for June dropped from $80,483,894 to 49,715,152—a loss of $30,768,742, while our imports from Canada declined from $44,315,288 to $36,503,217, a drop of $7,812,071, as compared with June, 1929.

For South America, usually regarded as one of the best markets for trade expansion, exports for June declined $22,050,316 and imports dropped $15,195,987, compared with the corresponding month last year, with the heaviest declines in purchases from this country by Argentine and Brazil. Australia and Italy also show relatively heavy declines in purchases from America.

The one country that makes a favorable showing on American trade is Soviet Russia, to which country exports from America increased a million and a quarter dollars for June, while for the six months period they increased $42,357,354, with imports only slightly changed.

While some of the decline in American foreign trade is attributed to decline in commodity values, following the collapse of the inflated Coolidge-Mellon-Hoover stock market, it is also attributed in part to the growing tariff barriers in foreign countries and the resentment against the Grundy tariff.

Former Head of Agricultural Economics Criticizes Administration Policies

Washington, August.—Dr. H. C. Taylor, former head of the Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics, speaking at the Institute of Public Affairs held at the University of Virginia, recalled an almost forgotten statute—the Sherman Anti-Trust Act—as applicable to a solution of some present day problems.

The Sherman Anti-Trust act, it is recalled, penalizes all activities in restraint of trade, and he asserts that certain activities of the Department of Commerce, of which that department is rather boastful, are at variance with the Anti-Trust statute.

The agricultural situation, he said results from the placid acceptance of the false philosophy that "if business prospers all will prosper." Thus, he said, the Department of Commerce has actually gone out of its way to promote trade organizations limiting price-slashing competition within trades as "bad business." The farmers, unorganized and probably unorganizable, have gone down in the face of organized industry which dictates the prices they shall pay while the prices they receive are regulated by the law of supply and demand.

"If those laws which relate to competition and price were administered in an effective manner," he continued, "and certain special privilege legislation repealed, little more could be asked by American farmers.

"This new regime of limited competition has not only come into existence without Congressional provision or sanction, but unknown to the rank and file of the people.

"When the Chairman of the Farm Board indicated the desirability of a 25 per cent cut in wheat production in the United States as a means of making the tariff on wheat effective and thus advancing the price he was speaking in harmony with the policy which is generally promulgated by the administration, but which has no possible chance for success in agriculture under the present law."

Dr. Taylor proposed four measures for agricultural relief:

1. Restore competitive price in the so-called com-

Some one Must Lead in the Fight

"You have a beautiful little city here," is an expression often made by visitors to a town that has made progress in the matter of improvements, utilities and the like.

The visitor sees the excellent sidewalks, the good water plant the sanitary sewer, the good schools, the well kept lawns, and parkings and all these things that contribute to make a town a desirable place in which to live.

The visitor does not see it but back of every good thing the town has is a man or group of men who have contended for these things. They have taken the fire and the criticism of those who were opposed to any improvement of any kind in taxes and have gone ahead and suffered the sting of thoughtless, unfeeling criticism until their vision of a better town has been realized.

As a rule after the fight is over and the improvement or utility is installed the community is proud of it and would not give it up. When visitors come to visit the town the good sidewalks, the water system, the new school house, is the first thing they are shown.

In looking about for a place to locate the new comer does not go to the city clerk, --to see what the town tax rate is. He looks up the schools, the churches and the utilities the town has to offer. A man seeking a place for a home for his family is more concerned about these things than he is about a few extra mills of taxes.

The best way to attract people to a town is to provide the town with facilities and conveniences that people want in a town in which they expect to make a home for themselves and their family.

New Half-Ton Truck

Introduction of a new one and one-half ton truck by the Chevrolet Motor Company is announced today by H. J. Klingler, Vice-President and General Sales Manager.

Headlights of the new type include dual-wheels interchangeable front and rear; new one piece steel channel frame, and internal expanding brakes on all four wheels. The new truck lists at $520 f. o. b. Flint Mich., while dual wheels including six truck-type cord tires are $25 extra.

trucks for the first six months of this year exceeded the same period last year by twenty per cent, the introduction of this improved larger truck seems destined to add to the growing importance of Chevrolet in the low priced commercial car field. More than 1,100,000 trucks have been built by Chevrolet since the company began to turn out this type, Mr. Klingler stated.

The new chassis is built complete with cab, and affiliations with body manufacturers enable the purchaser to choose the exact type of body for the work to be done from thirty six different types. Chevrolet dealers are supplied with complete details on the various bodies available.

Production of the new truck is now in full swing and dealers throughout the country are being rapidly stocked with this new model, Mr. Klingler announced.

HELP!

We wish the child who cuts us out
Would put on paint in places
We're quite ashamed to go about
With blank looks on our faces.

A dot or two, a line or so,
Would give us some expression,
Like other paper dolls we know
And make a good impression.
Some dabs of brown placed on each head
Would give the wished for tresses;

And pink or green or blue or red
Would make such pretty dresses.
And then a child with skill, we think
Could brighten our complexions,
With just a little wash of pink
In one or two directions.

AN UNEXPECTED PICNIC

(A geographical puzzle story)
"Here are your lunch baskets," said Mother handing her two small daughters two baskets. "Have a good picnic and be home before the ISLAND IN A GROUP OFF THE WESTERN COAST OF SCOTLAND grows dark. Do not CAPITAL OF ITALY too far from home."
The twins were going on an adventurous CITY OF FRANCE for the afternoon, without any plan in their minds at all, but they were sure exciting experiences would come. Their names were A CITY IN FRANCE and A CITY IN NORTHERN ITALY. Both were dressed in knickers, with A SEA NORTH OF RUSSIA blouses, and each wore a SEA WEST OF ARABIA-CITY IN MOROCCO on their head, and carried short CITY IN FRANCE, for protection from wild animals.

Now, there were no wild animals within thousands of miles of them, but that did not bother the twins at all. With their imaginations, a tiny kitten might become a roaring CITY IN FRANCE NOTED AS THE GREATEST SILK MARKET IN THE WORLD, and their MOUNTAINS IN GERMANY would thump with prehistoric CAPE OFF THE SOUTHERN POINT OF NORTH CAROLINA, while a little wild ISLANDS OFF WESTERN AFRICA would be a swooping eagle waiting to carry them off to A GULF SOUTH OF ARABIA or OCEAN SOUTH OF ASIA (plural), if there could be such things.
"What shall we do first?" asked the twin with the SEA WEST OF CHINA hair whose name was A CITY OF FRANCE.
"Let's eat, and then we won't be bothered with our baskets," replied her sister.

So they found a meadow full of CITY OF FRANCE (plural) and sat down on some CAPITAL OF AR. KANSAS (plural), right under a CITY IN WALES tree, and opened their baskets. It was such fun to eat their lunches in the clear, fresh CITY IN SCOTLAND!

It was a delicious lunch which Mother had prepared for them. There were ISLANDS IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN (plural) filled with A COUNTRY IN EUROPE AND ASIA and also CITY IN GERMANY.
"The lunch is always the best part of every picnic!" said the CITY IN NORTHERN ITALY, contentedly.
"Oh," screamed both girls together. "Let's CITY IN ENGLAND as quickly as we can!"

Dropping their baskets, the twins ran for the stone wall and tumbled behind it. "Was it a RIVER IN SIBERIA?" asked the twin who had been reading about ferocious tribes in European history, and who always got her peoples and places mixed. "Maybe it was a EUROPEAN SEA—BRIT.

ISH-AMERICAN LAKE," suggested the other twin.

"Let's CAPITAL OF CHINA through the fence a little way below here," suggested CITY OF FRANCE.

"Oh, oh!" screamed CITY OF ITALY. "I've hurt my foot! Oh, A CITY OF INDIA foot, what shall I do?"

This was more of an adventure than the twins had bargained for and not at all to their liking. Poor CITY OF ITALY! It made her scream when she made the slightest move. CITY OF FRANCE ran out into the road and looked up and down for help, but nobody was in sight. "We'll just have to wait until some one comes by," she said as she returned. But she received no reply from her sister who had apparently fallen into a deep sleep.

"ISLAND BELONGING TO THE UNITED STATES IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN BETWEEN HAWAIIAN ISLANDS AND THE PHILIPPINES!" she screamed. "Don't go to sleep."

But when her twin did not respond to her calling, CITY OF FRANCE grew frightened. "Perhaps the pain in her foot has made her faint," she thought. And with that idea she ran pell-mell to the meadow where they ate their lunch, grabbed their baskets and ran up the road to the nearest farm house and called to the man on the porch, "COUNTRY OF ASIA, COUNTRY OF ASIA! Come quickly! My sister has fainted."

They carried CITY OF ITALY into the farm house, rang for the twins' mother and called a doctor. After the injured foot was taken care of and THE CITY OF ITALY had been carried home, the twins reviewed the day's proceedings, and decided that it had been a great adventure after all.
—Mrs. Clifford Hastings.

Cheap Cold Storage
Satisfactory results have been obtained by the North Dakota Agricultural college in the formation of an ice well for cooling and storing milk. The ice was made during winter months by running a small quantity of water in the well every day. The gradual freezing formed a large cake of ice which lasted through the 1929 summer. This experimental well was eight feet square, nine and one-half feet deep, with boarded sides and gravel bottom.

Puzzled
Mary Elizabeth had moved with her parents to a small town, and the family milk supply was obtained from a woman who kept a cow, living at the edge of the village. It was the little girl's duty to go after the milk each evening. One evening when she came home she said to her mother: "The woman where I go for the milk always acts like I am two people, instead of one."
Mother did not understand what she meant, until one evening when it was getting late, she went with Mary Elizabeth. On knocking at the door they were greeted in this manner: "Good evening, good evening, come in, come in."

THE NEBRASKA NOIMP

By Hugh Hutton
(Author of Nutty Natural History)

THE noimp, or bob-eared rabbit, has been nearly exterminated by the farmers of the sandhill region in the West, but at one time it was so plentiful that crops were wiped out season after season, and the ensuing hard times gave birth to a new political party. It is a fast burrowing rodent, and can undermine a whole sandhill

In a few hours clear down to bedrock. The weight of a cultivator on the field will cause it to cave in. When down there, the farmer can usually find the noimp and hit it with the cultivator, but by then it's too late to do much about it.
A half-shell walnut does for the body of the noimp, with a fibert head attached on front. Ears are popcorn and feet are split peanut kernels with claws attached to the front ones for claws. The tail is also a clove.

About Punishing the Children

By JEAN NEWTON

DEAR Miss Newton:
"A short time ago you criticized a reader for punishing a boy for bad temper, saying: 'Punishment is almost always a mistake.' I don't agree with you. I think it would take a little angel right out of heaven to be brought up without any punishment. I think all children need punishment, and while it can of course be overdone, I don't believe that punishment is always wrong or unprofitable. You'll have to prove that to me."

It is not punishment in itself that is wrong. It is the spirit of punishment as employed by so many mothers, that is wrong. That is the spirit of fight. There is only one type of child, to my mind, that should be fought to be controlled. That is the vicious child. And I have never met a vicious child.
I agree with you when you say not all children need punishment. My reason, however, is not that punishment will drive evil out of them. It is rather that life punishes us inexorably for our mistakes. Therefore in preparing children for life, which is the meaning of bringing up a child, we should make them acquainted with this law. It is the law of cause and effect. And punishing a child in the spirit of bringing home to him the law of cause and effect is not wrong; on the contrary it will profit him.
What is wrong is punishing in anger, which is to most parents the quintessence of punishment. The child transgresses, the mother is angered and uses her power to make him suffer for it. Frequently it is the damage he may have caused rather than the principle of wrongdoing that is stressed. And what is the child's reaction? He senses, only anger, spite, vengeance in his punishment—he senses fight. And if he is able to he fights back. That "The most pathetic thing in the world," says Ironical Irons, "is an old maid attending a lecture on the divinity of evil."

spirit of punishment is wrong and futile. It only aggravates whatever friction it is desired to cure.
It is the spirit of punishment and the place of punishment which determine whether it is good or bad. It was to a reader whose letter indicated that punishment had first place as a restraining influence with her child, that I wrote that that is almost always a mistake.
The right place of punishment, as I see it, is after a child has been given the benefit of every constructive effort to bring his character up to the standard of the best that is in him.

Good Things for the Table

By NELLIE MAXWELL

A MOST appetizing relish may be made of ripe cucumbers as well as the sweet pickles which we all like.

Ripe Cucumber Relish.
Peel and grate a large ripe cucumber, remove the seeds and squeeze all the liquid from the pulp by pressing through a sieve. Add good vinegar to make the same consistency, a small grated onion, and salt, cayenne and two to three tablespoons of finely chopped red pepper. Bottle cold and seal. This will keep for months in a cool place.

Ripe Cucumber Pickles.
Cut ripe cucumbers into halves lengthwise. Cover with salted water and heat gradually, then let stand an hour or two. Remove and chill in ice water. Prepare the cucumbers as above, by peeling and removing the seeds. Make a sirup by boiling two pounds of sugar, one pint of vinegar, two tablespoons of whole cloves and the same of stick cinnamon, tied in a cloth. Add the cucumbers and cook ten minutes, remove to a jar and pour over them the boiling sirup. Boil the sirup three mornings and pour over the pickles; then cover and put away for winter use.

Lemon Mince-meat.
Scald, drain and chop one cupful of raisins. Mix with them one cupful of chopped apples, one-half cupful of chopped nuts, one-fourth cupful of candied orange peel or orange marmalade, one-half cupful of lemon juice, two cupfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon and one teaspoonful each of cloves and ginger. This makes two medium-sized pies. When making pies add a tablespoonful of butter to each pie, more if liked richer.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

Back in the earnest nineties, "How to be happy though married" gained columns of earnest discussion and much solemn advice. In the hot summers of the energetic Twentieth century, it seems a more burning question, "How to dress most comfortably for high temperatures."

Many women Grace J. Austin, have solved this question and solved it well. On one of the warmest days of the summer Dame Fashion sat in a country club dining room at a luncheon with 60 women present, at the conclusion of a golf tournament. The women were admirably gowned to produce a cool effect, and in spite of the presence of many grandmothers in the company, there was a general aspect of youth.

With warm summer days sleeveless gowns made a decided advance in popularity, even above the little puffs, and sleeves half to the elbow. Looking at these athletic women it was easy to see that in spite of all the talk about reverting to early types of costume there were none who were seeking for the 18-inch waist of the great grandmothers.

The dresses were nearly all of that type, which has gained the name of "spector sports" attire. White hats held the majority place, with many of the gauzy creations that give lacy reflections on a pretty girl's cheek. But not until that hour did Dame Fashion realize fully the sheer beauty of sun tan, much as it has been talked about in recent years. One may talk of sun kissed, this, or that, or the other, and it will sound poetic enough, but sun-kissed arms, Dame Fashion decided, are among the loveliest possessions that girl or matron or grandmother can have.

A laughing girl came to see Dame Fashion lately and said:

"You don't half know what a useful thing the alphabet is, Dame Fashion. Daddy rashly said the other day that I would think I needed a thousand things to get myself ready for that house party to which I am invited. I declared I could do it with twenty-six—just as many as there are letters in the alphabet. Do you want to bear the 'alphabet' of things I bought?—and everyone of them exactly in style at the present moment."

Of course Dame Fashion was all attention at once, and the list interested her so much she made this copy: Alencon lace-trimmed lingerie, berets, clips with costume jewels, Deauville sandals, ensemble of tweed in five pieces, flowers for the back of an evening dress, gloves by the dozen, handkerchiefs in color effects, Indian pongee frock, jade jewelry, knickers for camping, lemon organdie and maize-colored crepe dresses, neckwear of lace, organdie-trimmed lace evening dress, polo shirt and pajamas, quilt to flick my horse, riding breeches and coat, a shantung two-piece dress, ties of all sorts, usable toilet aids, velvet wrap, wardrobe trunk, excellent reading matter, yellow linen dress, and zipper handbags in all shades. It really sounds as though her alphabet list ought to cover one visit's needs.

It was Michael Angelo, wasn't it? who said: "Trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifle." If Angelo did say it in his liquid Italian tongue, he was thinking of the grace of a statue, or the correct placing of locks of hair on his young David rather than about the costumes of women. But the same holds good in costume laws. Not, emphatically not, that every trifle must match, but that rhythm and harmony must be developed in attire.

Screen Actress Models Charming Dinner Gown

Pale green mousseline de sole develops this handsome dinner gown modeled by a prominent screen actress. Wide frills fashion the skirt and the costume is completed by jet jewelry and black kid gloves.

Frock Is Designed for the Short, Stout Woman

The frock illustrated is suitable for women from 5 feet to 5 feet 3 inches in height. Every line gives length. The yokes are cut in one with the front panels. The opening extends from neck to pleats. A striking result is obtained if made up in dark brown pin-dotted woolen with white plique collar and cuffs.—Woman's Home Companion.

Importance of Gray Is Held to Three Fabrics

So far, the importance of gray has been restricted mainly to woollens in tweed mixtures, to flannel and to velvet.

A costume worthy of mention is a Vionnet, consisting of a gray fat crepe dress topped by a gray velvet jacket. Several versions of this have been observed.

Ensembles, suits and separate topcoats in gray woollen mixtures are approved in smart town fashions. They are developed either with coat or jacket and skirt, supplemented by a contrasting silk blouse, or consist of a dress matching the coat fabric, or entirely unrelated, with a separate topcoat.

Many travelers homeward bound from Paris have arrived in costumes, the effect of which is gray, but which in reality are mixtures of white and black.

White Flannel Is Worn by Fashionable Women

White flannel has come into its own again this summer. It is being used for skirts, coats and suits worn by the fashion-knowing.

Flannel suits are especially interesting in the way they are using dark blouses as accompanying accessories. Red and blue and blue and white on the nautical theme are very chic. A white suit and a blouse with a blue and white star pattern has a blouse with scarf-like collar that is worn over the jacket. The ends of the silk crepe trim the sleeves of the jacket at the wrists.

The red and blue blouse theme is cleverly worked out in another white flannel suit which has a three-quarter sleeve jacket. Red and blue are used in diagonal stripes.

Two Hemlines Are Now Favored for Evening

There are two hemlines of different lengths for evening now, the familiar ones reaching to within an inch or two of the floor, and the new even length launched by Lanvin and Chanel, which measures about ten inches from the floor, achieving a very short effect in the full skirt.

Vionnet, with her diagonal and V-shaped skirt cuts, is another conturrier to approach the former knee-revealing length, but only in spots. Lelong uses an evening skirt cut in narrow strips or panels left free from the hip and disclosing the underskirt.

Capelets Mark Summer Mode That Women Like

It is no whimsicality of the couture to add grace to the coat silhouette by means of capes, capelets and the once-famed boleros. These details have been popularized and will be seen repeatedly this season, but they mark this a period of definite revivals. Popularity in the sense of their constant repetition in one form or another will not, apparently, detract from their vogue. Some creators compromise by diversifications of the cape and bolero themes, executing them conservatively, which makes these details seem less conspicuous.

Organdie Is Smart

Organdie comes back, but its erstwhile girlish simplicity has undergone a change toward sophistication. The pastel organdie frock is decked out with a huge bow in some deep, eye-arresting color. And the white organdie frock is likely as not to be white only in the bodice, the skirt being black organdie and the contrast absolutely startling.

By Capt. L. R. Claud Robinson

A NARROW ESCAPE

THE day, the riots broke out in Amritza, in 1918, I happened to be making an inspection of a government fodder factory, one of the many I was responsible for in the Punjab which were engaged in pressing up hay into bales for dispatch to the armies in Mesopotamia and Palestine. As ill luck would have it, the first place visited by the mob of several thousand Indians who gathered intent on the destruction of the white man or his property, was this particular factory.

Fortunately a wall eight or more feet high surrounded the place, and my friendly Indian contractor, as the first sounds of the approaching babel reached our ears, quickly locked and bolted the double entrance gates. Then, greatly agitated, he informed me of the likelihood of attack and the probability of my rapidly approaching doom. Calling one of his coolie laborers, he instructed him to place a ladder against the wall opposite the entrance, and pointed this out to me as my only means of escape and begged me to avail myself of it immediately. I was thankful enough for the precautions he was taking for my welfare, as it prevented the necessity of having to make my own arrangements for possible flight and thus displaying an unbusiness which I was certainly beginning to feel.

I did not at this time know the fanaticism or ruthlessness of an Indian mob, or it is likely I might have decided to leave there and then. I was armed, however, and a good runner, and I felt sure that if my six-shooter proved of no avail, I could easily make my escape. Meanwhile the uproar of the approaching mob had increased until we could hardly hear ourselves speak. There was something inhuman and uncouthly in those thousands of wildly clamoring voices in which passion and lack of all restraint were given free play. I instructed my loyal contractor, Gopal Das, that if any effort was made to force an entrance, he was to attempt to make himself heard and tell them that the property was his and not the government's.

It was probably only a matter of seconds, though it seemed at the time minutes, after my giving these instructions, that the tumult reached a deafening roar, followed by loud clattering on the gates and demands for entrance. For fully ten minutes Gopal Das attempted to make himself heard. I stood beside him and heard his appeals and his repeated cries of "Bye-bye, koi apko bye ki boln"—Brothers, brothers, it is your brother who speaks. At length the din subsided sufficiently for his voice to be heard. He told them that the property was his own, that no Sahib was within the walls, and implored them to leave him in peace. So eventually they moved on.

WHAT SHALL WE EAT?

IN SOME parts of India the game is so plentiful that one is rarely reduced to experimenting with strange diet. I once dined off young monkey, which is something like rabbit but immeasurably superior to it.

My regiment was stationed in Baluchistan for six months. The whole country is outside the monsoon area, making it arid and unproductive, consequently little game is to be met with. We lived for the most part on a monotonous diet of goat's meat, and I remember what a luxury it seemed, when one of the colonel's polo ponies broke a leg and had to be destroyed, to have something on the menu which proved a reasonable substitute for roast beef. Hunting in the region of the Himalaya mountains I have lived for some time on bear meat.

I have always entertained the greatest respect for the French chef, who is indeed without an equal in the exercise of culinary skill. It requires a little practice to recognize at once the difference between commonly edible animals and those which one eats in emergency, if they are all prepared with equal care and delicacy. I knew a man in Ceylon, camping out with his dogs, and depending solely upon their exertion, who succeeded, thanks to the ingenuity of his French cook, in giving some American tourists who paid him a visit a most varied menu. There was ris de veau, fillet de boeuf, poulet saute and I don't know what else besides. It was some time before his guests discovered that under these high sounding names, they were eating various preparations of elk.

In India, where pen-fowl are sacred, they are perpetually offering the most tantalizing shots to the sportsman, which out of respect to the feelings of the natives he rarely avails himself of. I once, however, took a chance shot with a rifle at a distant flock of them on the wing, and much to my surprise brought down a splendid bird—at least he was to look at, but proved rather tough to eat, for he was an old cock. I suppose this was just retribution, and I never shot another.

Prevent Summer Upsets

Warm weather and changes of food and water bring frequent summer upsets unless healthy elimination is assured. You will find Feen-a-mint effective in milder doses and especially convenient and pleasant for summertime use.

FOR CONSTIPATION

Electric Light Helps Wheat

The Canadian agriculture department, at the Ottawa experiment station, is conducting experiments in the direction of improving the wheat crop of the country and by crossing the grain and producing hybrids, it is hoped to produce harder varieties and possibly a grain which will grow two crops a year. Some trials of stimulating the growth of the seed by the use of banks of electric lights have resulted in the production of the hybrids in one-half the usual time. Thus experiments which usually require eight years are being done in four. The element of time in this work is very important.

Gull Ornaments Flagstaff

The Yacht club at Santa Barbara, Calif., has a living emblem on the free end of its flagstaff. It is not a golden eagle which tops the flag, but a dun and gray gull which perches atop the knob. The same bird roosts there almost motionless nearly all day unless disturbed. It usually takes its post in the late morning and maintains it until evening.

Costs 85 Cents A Month To Lose Pounds of Ugly Fat

Thousands of Women Know This Is True

How would you like to lose 15 pounds of fat in a month and at the same time increase your energy and improve your health?

How would you like to lose unhealthy fat that you don't need and don't want, and at the same time feel better than you have for years?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent abdomen and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

How would you like to get your weight down to normal and at the same time develop that urge for activity that makes work a pleasure and also gain in ambition and keenness of mind?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get an 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts which will last you for 4 weeks. Take one half teaspoonful every morning in a glass of hot water and when you have finished the first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you can laugh at the people who pay hundreds of dollars to lose a few pounds of fat—now you will know the pleasant way to lose unsightly fat and you'll also know that the 6 vitalizing salts of Kruschen Salts that your blood, nerves and glands must have to function properly—have presented you with glorious health.

After that you'll want to walk around and say to your friends—"One 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts is worth one hundred dollars of any fat person's money." Leading druggists America ever sell Kruschen Salts.

WHEN THE CONOCO MAN ASKS "ETHYL?" say Yes! and you'll say it again . . .

THE next time you drive into a CONOCO station, the man at the pump will ask you a one-word question. "Ethyl?", will be his query.

And in justice to yourself and the car you drive, we urge you to answer, "Yes!"

For Ethyl, added to CONOCO, the gasoline we're proud of, is like seasoning added to food. As seasoning brings out taste and deliciousness, so Ethyl brings out the qualities which have made CONOCO Gasoline famous.

Ethyl stops the knock that makes the foot retreat from the accelerator when you would rather "bear down" harder. Ethyl stops the knock that forces you to shift gears on hills. Ethyl stops the knock that embarrasses you when you let in the clutch in traffic.

So when the CONOCO salesman asks, "Ethyl?" . . . Say, "Yes!" . . . and you'll say it again.

Democrats to hold State Convention Sept. 18

At a meeting of the State Democratic Committee, held in Santa Fe this week, the date for holding the state convention was fixed for September 18. Santa Fe had formerly been chosen as the place. The only difficulty with the date, from a local standpoint, is that the Democratic county convention is to be held at Capitan on the 20th, and the same delegates can scarcely cover both dates.

Henry Ford is being criticized for moving some of his plants to Germany and Ireland. Perhaps the fact that the tariff law which was passed over the protest of Mr. Ford has something to do with the move. When this country levies a tariff duty other countries retaliate by passing a tariff law against this country. It is cheaper to build plants in Ireland and Germany than it is to make cars and tractors here and pay the retaliatory duty necessary to get them on the European market. Grumpy the author and giver of the tariff is an efficient tool for the interests but he will find Ford thinking two jumps ahead of him.

"Down where I live," said a Texan, "we grew a pumpkin so big that when we cut it my wife used one half of it as a cradle."

"Why," smiled the Chicagoan "that's nothing. A few days ago right here, two full grown policemen were found asleep on a beet."

He--You mustn't blame me for my ancestors.

She--I don't. I blame them for you.

USE OF CARBON DIOXIDE AS ICE SAID TO BE DEVELOPING RAPIDLY

The development of solid carbon dioxide or "concentrated essence of frigidity" for use as a refrigerant in transportation of perishable products, is already taxing the manufacturing facilities of the Nation in its effort to provide enough of the gas to supply the demand, according to a statement, Aug. 13, by C. C. Conannon, chief of the chemical division of the Department of Commerce. So rapidly has the use of this new form of refrigeration come into acceptance that there is not sufficient carbon dioxide gas available to satisfy the requirements of industry, it is stated. The gas is being saved as a by-product from the manufacture of industrial alcohol. Refineries are also cracking oil to obtain more of the "snow," and other industries are utilizing the product, according to Mr. Conannon.

Plans for Increased Production
While the use of solid carbon dioxide will expand rapidly, its more general adoption will be governed by the price of the product and a more thorough knowledge of handling it safely and conveniently, according to Mr. Conannon. Its cost at present is about $100 per ton or roughly 20 times that of ordinary ice, but it is not considered as a competitor to water ice at present as its uses are declared to be confined to shipping rather than to stationary refrigeration.

Dryness a Characteristic
Chief among the advantages of the new refrigerative are said to be refrigerating power due to its low temperature of 110 degrees below zero (one pound of carbon dioxide ice at 110 degrees below zero is declared to be equivalent to 10 pounds of water ice), its greater density giving easier portability; its features of dryness or freedom from residue on melting, and the fact that the gas formed is non-explosive.

Prospective Uses
Among the prospective new uses for solid carbon dioxide, in which it may play an important part in reducing distribution costs, might be included carlot shipments of fruits and vegetables from the Pacific Coast to the eastern markets. Mr. Conannon said it has been estimated that a 50 per cent saving will result in these shipments through the saving by the elimination of re-icing, according to the division.

The meat packing industry as well as fish distributors and vegetable associations are said to be either considering or developing at the present time methods of distribution of quick-frozen products. The low temperatures required for maintaining such products in the proper condition in traffic as well as central and branch distributing points may be such that the usual refrigerating methods may provide newly augmented outlets for this product, it was stated.

In response to President Hoover's belated plea to cut expenditures after the appropriations requested by him have been made, Naval officials are reported to be considering a plan to save on fuel, and to restrict the target practice of Senator Fess, Leader Watson and the Cabinet broad-easters! They are not hitting anything.

The Legg-Hyde Combination which is still barnstorming around the country in behalf of reduced acreage to eliminate the surplus of wheat is rapidly accumulating a surplus of bricks.

Ford Phaeton

THE Ford Phaeton, shown above, is equally popular as a family car and as a sport car for young people. The seating arrangement provides for the driver and one passenger in front and three passengers in the rear. Seats are upholstered in two-tone cross-grain leather. The top is of the quick collapsing type, easily handled by one person, and folds flat. The windshield, of Triplex shatter-proof glass, is of the folding type and can be laid flat forward. The windshield wings fold over it, emphasizing the sport effect of the car.

The Livestock Situation

Following the drastic declines of the past three months, it appears to many that cattle values have finally reached a level which should stimulate consumption of beef to such an extent as to stabilize prices. In fact, there are many students of the trade who feel that the declines have been so precipitate that some upward revision of values is in order, although there are few who look for any great improvement in the price situation for some time to come, and it seems beyond reason to expect to see the cattle market react back to the levels which prevailed early in the year.

The trade is resigned to the sharp reductions in lamb values as there has been expansion in breeding flocks and even with a wide amount of advertising and intelligent sales promotion effort, it was out of question to stem the decline in lamb prices. But the cattle situation is vastly different. According to the statistician, there was no over-supply of beef cattle and the decline in the result only of depressed trade conditions and reduced buying power. Improvement in business conditions and greater regular employment should bring about adjustment in the cattle market. Of course, just when business conditions will improve to permit such readjustment is another question. But there should be no forced liquidation of breeding herds of cattle such as occurred right after the terrific slump following the World War. The present low scale of values should, on the other hand, stimulate the rebuilding of cattle herds financing at present prices should be a much less difficult problem than any time in recent years.

An important element which enters into the stocker and feeder situation is the condition of corn and hay crops in the middle west. While it is likely that the recent breaking up of the prolonged drouth has somewhat relieved the situation, it seems very likely that the demand for stocker and feeder cattle from the Corn Belt this fall will be much smaller than normally.

In direct contrast to Corn Belt conditions, there were bumper crops of hay and grain in California this season and prices have been relatively low. Apparently the only profitable outlet for this some calls for feeder cattle earlier in the season than normally, as California in the past has been mainly a range feed state. It is, the volume of feeder cattle demand from California range cattle feeders as this will depend of course, too early to estimate largely upon whether or not the state has early fall rains.

HOW TO COOK BEANS, USING HARD WATER, TOLD BY EXPERTS

A desirable cooked bean should have a pleasing flavor, a good texture, a good color, and remain whole unless a mashed bean is preferred, says Mary L. Greenwood of the N. H. Agricultural College. When hard water is used in cooking beans, it should be boiled 10 or 15 minutes before using which destroys some of the hardness. The following methods of cooking, using in each instance 2 cups of beans, 5 cups of water, enough to one-fourth teaspoon of soda (where soda is used) and two teaspoons of salt, may serve as guides in cooking pinto beans in hard water.

Method 1--Beans soaked in soda water, no draining. Wash the beans. Dissolve the soda in hot water. Soak the beans in soda water from 10 to 14 hours. Boil gently in the same water until the beans are tender. Add salt during last half hour of cooking.

Method 2--Beans not soaked, no soda, no draining. Wash the beans, add the soda and the water and boil gently until tender. Add salt during last half hour of cooking.

Method 3--Beans not soaked, no soda, no draining. Wash the beans, add the water and boil gently until tender. Add salt during last half hour of cooking.

Method 4--Beans not soaked in soda, no draining. Wash the beans, add the soda and the water and boil gently until tender. Add salt during last half hour of cooking.

Main Points to Remember:
Boil the water before using it.
Use as small an amount of water as possible, keeping beans covered.
Use a kettle with a close-fitting lid to prevent evaporation.
Use soda if a more tender skin is desired.
Use soda if a shorter cooking time is desired.
Use hot water in soaking.
Measure soda carefully when soda water is not drained (methods Nos. 1 and 4).

and thrown open to the public," says the bulletin. "Coincident with the opening the accident rate steps up."
"This seems to indicate that when motorists are fearful of the road, they drive carefully but as soon as they hit a new project they press the accelerator to the floor and then lay themselves open to all hazards of driving such as defective vehicle, old tires which may blow out, soft road top resulting from a recent rain, soft shoulders which may turn them over if forced to the side and all the rest of highway accident possibilities."

"When driving with the car under perfect control, a motorist does not usually go as far toward the edge of the road when passing yet maintains complete safety passing distance. At a high speed when a slight twist of the wheel will move the speeding automobile much farther in a given length of time than at a low speed it is only natural that the speedster's car should swerve too near the road edge. A soft shoulder will not necessarily throw a car when it is under complete control but is very liable to be fatal if the car is rocking along at too high a speed."

"Where projects are new and the shoulders have not yet had the time to settle into the firmness rain, compaction and age give them it is a necessary precaution that every motorist must take to stay safely on the gravel line of the roadway. Further, motorists should remember that

G. P. A. Convention

Albuquerque, Sept. 4.—At the closing session of the most enthusiastic and largest convention ever held, the State Game protective Association re-elected Fred Sherman of Deming to head the association for another year. Charles C. Lee, Las Cruces; H. P. Saunders, Albuquerque, and Dr. M. S. Smith of Raton were elected vice presidents.

Closer co-operation between the State G. P. A. and the state cattle and horse growers' association and the New Mexico wool growers' associations in predatory animal control work was urged. Albet Mitchell, representing the livestock association, and Earl L. Moulton, representing the wool growers, addressed the convention.

The convention went on record as strongly favoring the state legislature bestowing full regulatory power over fish and game commission.

Selection of the next convention city was left to the decision of the executive committee, due to the large number extending invitations. Two hundred delegates from all sections of the state were in attendance at the convention, the sixteenth the association has held since its inception.

The convention went on record as recommending that the $50,000 appropriated by the federal government for a fish hatchery in New Mexico be entirely expended in a warm water fish hatchery. No recommendation as to the location of the hatchery was made by the convention.

Community Hall Notes

The Capitan Boomers will give a dance at the Community Hall Saturday Sept. 13th, and another Saturday Sept. 27th. This organization has proven itself quite successful and popular and a large attendance is predicted.

Birthday Dinner

A birthday dinner was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones last Sunday, at their home on Salt Creek, in the Eastern part of the county. The occasion was the 76th birthday of Mrs. Bettie Porter, Mrs. Jones' mother. Mrs. Porter is also the mother of Matt Porter, and a sister of Jobe and Riley McPherson and Mrs. John L. Bryan, of Carrizozo. There were 50 present—all five of Mrs. Porter's children, five grand children, four brothers and two sisters. Mr. and Mrs. John L. Bryan and Mr. and Mrs. Jobe McPherson went from here. Mrs. Porter was the recipient of many beautiful presents. A beautiful dinner was served at 1 o'clock. Games were indulged in by the younger members, while the older ones contented themselves with conversational reminiscences. At 4:30 water melons were served, and the different members soon after departed for their respective homes.

Hot Barbecued Meat every day at the Burnett market. A splendid addition to a quick and easy meal.

County Teachers Here

The rural teachers are here today from all parts of the county, to discuss school problems, secure supplies and to go over important matters that are to be met during the current term. The session is being held at the courthouse and large number is in attendance. The activity and interest shown by the teachers are promising indications of the kind of schools we will.

The County Fair

Arrangements are being made to hold the 4th Annual County Fair, October 17-18, 1930. Adjacent towns and cities have been notified so that if possible there will be no conflicting dates.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceiland, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. They lunch together and recall their school days. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing their father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. The love-making progresses rapidly. They make a runaway marriage.

"Not at all," said Will quickly. "But anyhow, we are married. I know this strikes you suddenly, sir, but we just decided in haste, and as we want nothing but your blessing—"

"Be still!" exclaimed papa passionately, and he turned to Ernestine. "Where were you married? By whom?"

Will took the conversation into his own hands with deliberation.

"We went to town about noon, went to the courthouse and got our license, then to a jeweler and bought the ring and waited while it was engraved." Ernestine held up her left hand, and showed the astonishing gold band on her third finger. "Then we took a taxi out to my mother's house, got her and went to the church I was reared in, in Avondale, and were married."

"But why this mad haste?" spluttered papa, who was almost incoherent. "Ernestine," turning to his daughter, in renewed determination to have nothing to do with Will, "what's got into you? I am sure you have been under some dreadful influence. I can't understand how you could act this way. I can't believe it."

He was furious, he was undone, but he still had a note of command in his voice. Ernestine felt his strength with terror.

"Papa—" she began, but Will cut in resolutely, so that in spite of papa's determination to talk to Ernestine the situation narrowed itself constantly to papa and Will.

"Ernestine was afraid, sir, that you might try to separate us. My own instinct in the matter was that we should talk this over with you, but I see, now, that she was right. You must understand, sir, that we are married, and your objections are futile."

"Ernestine had reason to fear me," papa said in a voice none of them had ever heard from him before. Ernestine felt herself shiver under it. Papa had no intention of considering himself futile.

"She had reason to fear me, and so had you. I suspect your fear was more important than her own. Even if she were a fool, you might have been decent about it. I have no intention whatever of letting her go away from here with you. You'll learn, sir, that there are such things as annulments, even as divorce. Just because she has made one foolish mistake, is no reason why I should let her ruin her whole life. You have behaved very badly, but your behavior ends here and now. Ernestine stays here. You may go, and I will deal with you outside the house."

Ernestine felt that everything was lost, but Will only laughed. If papa were new and strange, so was her young husband, for he seemed to glow, to fill out, to be bigger and stronger.

"Don't be silly," he said. "Ernestine is of age. She married me of her own free will, and if you tried any such stunts, she would say so. Our marriage is entirely legal. It stands before everything else. She is now my wife, and my home is her home, and you can't detain her."

"We'll see," said papa grimly, and then mamma broke in.

"You shouldn't have, Ernestine. You shouldn't have run off and got married, without telling mamma. It's the biggest, the most important thing in your life—and to take such a step without your people knowing it! I can't bear to think you'd go off and be married—and not tell me."

"I'm sorry, mamma," said Ernestine in distress, and papa took things up again. He had made a decision.

"Go to your room, Ernestine," he said in a voice of stern command, "and stay there until I can talk to you. If you ladies will excuse us, we will settle this among ourselves. Do you hear me?" he said sharply, turning his furious eyes upon Ernestine. She faltered, half turned to go in automatic command, for papa had always ruled his home, without much effort, but Will put his hand on her arm.

"Stay here, Ernestine," he said in a low voice, and she paused, undecided, while mamma and Lillian seemed to be grouped together on the other side of the room.

"I can understand your distress, sir," said Will. "I can see just how you feel about this, not knowing me at all and not understanding my motives. But you exceed your authority. If you should detain Ernestine here by force, I have only to go out and get the nearest policeman and come back for her. You can't do it."

There was a moment of incredulous silence, and papa half turned to Loring, in appeal, and Loring said in a low tone, "He's right."

Will followed this advantage swiftly.

"After all, what have you against me, except you think I may want Ernestine's money? We have decided to do without that. I'm not a stranger to you. You've known my father for thirty years. You know my people, that they are honorable and decent. There's no reason at all why I shouldn't make any marriage I choose, even with Ernestine. I'm working. I can take care of her."

Papa raised his clenched fist above his head, as though he would strike Will, and Ernestine made a little moan and mamma screamed. But Loring put his hand on papa's arm, and drew him back. And in that moment Lillian went to Ernestine and put her arms around her and kissed her.

"Oh, Lillian!" Ernestine cried, and burst into terrible tears. "Papa, papa," she cried, turning from Lillian to her father, and holding out her hands, "don't quarrel with us. I can't bear it. I love Will. I wanted to marry him. Let us go ahead with our own married life, now, but don't quarrel with us."

"It's you who have broken faith," said papa. "Not your mother said I. You've put this stranger before us. You can't have both."

Ernestine was appalled. "You mean that I can't come home?" Papa attained a grim smile.

"That's what I mean," he said, but now mamma broke in hysterically. "I won't be separated from Ernestine. I won't permit it," she cried, and went to her younger daughter and took her in her arms. "Darling, you can come home as long as mamma lives here. I will see you every day. It's dreadful. It's hard on all of us, and it will be terrible for you. But mamma will not let her little girl go away like this."

"Elaine!" said papa, but she turned to him, as full of anger as he.

"The child is married," she explained. "She may have made a mistake, but if she has, it is only a reason for standing by her. This is my home, as well as yours. I won't be instructed to let my little girl go out friendless. You may do what you like with me, and send me away, too, if you can, but I am going to see Ernestine. I am going to have her here."

Of course papa was helpless, and he said so with a shrug.

"Mamma," said Ernestine, "I am willing to take the responsibility for my marriage. After all, it's I who married Will."

"Not you alone," said mamma vigorously. "The whole family has married him, and we may as well realize it. For nobody marries just one of the Briceilands. We are all going to stand together, always. Papa, we will have to make the best of it. The marriage will have to stand."

Papa would not look at her, nor answer.

"We'll have to go," said Will.

"Goodby, darling," said mamma, and embraced her. "I'll see you soon."

"Goodby, papa," Ernestine faltered, but papa held his stubborn attitude.

"I'll have to go upstairs and get some things," murmured Ernestine, as they went into the hall.

Lillian went upstairs with Ernestine. Mamma came out and put her hand on Will's arm.

"Be good to her," she implored. "If you can't take care of her, if she's not happy, let her come back."

"I will, Mrs. Briceiland," he said soberly. "I appreciate what you have done."

Mamma wept afresh.

"It is hard for her father. He worships her. You must understand him."

Grecian Influence on Culture of Old Rome

Almost as far back as the history of Rome extends, Greek influences are to be traced in the development of Roman culture. The Roman people were conservative and slow to cultivate the artistic sense. Rome had little creative genius. In her whole history she did not produce an artist such as Phidias and Praxiteles. The nature of the Roman was unusually practical and idealized power, law and pride. The Romans copied the distinctive style of architecture such as the Greeks. They borrowed their architecture from the Etruscans and the Greeks. The literary life of Rome has a profound effect upon mankind. Clear with no orations, political and

The United States biological survey wants its lions dead or alive. This was the declaration of D. A. Gilchrist, associate biologist in charge at Phoenix, in reporting a toll of 146 dead and alive lions captured during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930.

Indicating how desperate some of the unemployed people are, it is stated that two men and a woman, traveling in a Cadillac car from Detroit, Mich., to Los Angeles, Calif., stopped for a day in Las Vegas and washed windows at a price of five cents per window.

T. E. McCullough of Flagstaff, chairman of the Arizona Fish and Game Commission, said plans and specifications for the largest trout hatchery in the state have just been completed. It is to be at Pinotop, one and one-half miles south of Lakeside on the McNary road.

The new curriculum in petroleum geology, which is being introduced at the New Mexico School of Mines this year, is receiving much favorable comment. Many inquiries regarding it have been received by the school and a number of students have signified their intention of enrolling.

Arizona is soon to start its campaign for county health units. Completion of plans for the Pima county health unit at Tucson, revealed recently, for the first time, the dream of the Arizona Board of Health to install clinics in every county for the treatment of the destitute ill.

Although specifications have yet to be made, Arizona's license plates for 1931 will be nearly identical with those of 1930, with the exception of color. Adolphus Hughes, 25, a private in the Eighty-second field artillery at Fort Bliss, Texas, was killed in an automobile accident at Cloudford, N. M.

Shattering all oil production records in New Mexico, the Midwest Refining Company's Byers No. 33 recently gauged 24,000 barrels on a twenty-four-hour test. The well is making about 40,000,000 feet of gas and is producing almost 3,000 barrels of oil better than the next best well in the Hobbs area.

A mother and three children were burned to death on their farm, eighteen miles southeast of Portales, a few days ago. The dead are Mrs. D. G. Horn, Dick Horn, 3; Robert Horn, 5, and another boy, aged 7. The blaze, which occurred shortly before noon, is believed to have been started when the woman used kerosene to light a fire.

Unemployment census totals in Oklahoma, Montana, Idaho and New Mexico have been announced. Oklahoma, total population 2,331,777; unemployed, 42,322, or 1.8 per cent. Montana, total population, 536,332; unemployed, 11,208 or 2.1 per cent. Idaho, total population, 445,837; unemployed, 6,347, or 1.4 per cent. New Mexico, total population 427,216; unemployed, 5,426, or 1.3 per cent.

Amarante Montoya and Julian Montoya of Chamitan, N. M., were each sentenced to three years and fined $500 in Federal Court after a jury had found them guilty of footing the mail. Nearly all of the new appointments to the staff of the University of Arizona for next year have been confirmed and it is believed that the faculty will be considerably strengthened by the new additions.

Present indications point to the largest cotton crop produced in the history of New Mexico.

Arizonaans are frequent visitors to Mexico and vice versa. This was indicated when reports of the Arizona Industrial Congress showed that 1,301,223 motor cars crossed the border during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930. There were

MOTHER PROBLEMS

By Mrs. Dorothy Coffeen

Aiding Resourcefulness

"MOTHER I can't make this wheel stay on. You do it!"

Now it happens that young Sue has only made a very feeble attempt to make the wheel stay on. She has been accustomed over long in procuring aid in all her enterprises and so she calls upon the willing source again. Mother is very busy but she leaves every thing to come to the aid of Sue. The wheel of the little cardboard box cart she is making goes on to stay but through Mother's efforts and not Sue's.

Sue goes from the cart to another occupation. She calls for help in every one and does not find it lacking. Oftentimes it is easier for parents or those working with children to do a thing themselves than to see the child struggle over it but if they could only stop to realize that every time they give their help the child grows more and more dependent upon assistance and less and less able to think and act for himself, they would shut their eyes or tie their hands rather than give the assistance sought, except in the rare instances when the child actually needs it for encouragement or a difficulty out of a child's realm of ability.

Children are resourceful by nature and if left entirely alone with material, knowing that assistance is not withheld, they will invariably turn upon this quality and have an excellent and profitable time doing so. Children are also less easily or quickly discouraged than adults. They will work over a problem if it is their own, for a long time before they will give it up. It is the wise parent who can watch for the moment when, after they have worked hard at a problem, a little encouragement acts in and then offer a little help or suggestion, but not before.

Now when Sue calls for help in a childish problem, help her only if it is something she positively cannot do herself, but then at the same time help her, too, to help herself. Show her, by letting her find out, what fun there is in doing things for oneself. Let Mother play absent once in a while. If this habit of assistance has been formed, or claim to be too busy when the call for it comes. In any event let her refrain from depriving her of the value and happiness of her own achievement. Later on Sue will be a resourceful, independent, happy individual because of Mother's wisdom.

Value of Imagination

OF THE two children, one always asked at the end of a story, "Is it true?" If Mother said, no, Nancy had no further interest. But to Bobby, every one was true, every one was possible and the next day he would play them through from start to finish. Bobby's life was colored every hour with the varying shades of fancy. Nancy's viewpoint was the one of literalness and therefore restricted.

One day Bobby took a piece of cake from the pantry without permission and when his act was discovered and Mother asked him why, he answered quickly, "Why Muvver, a great big whale wiggled himself in through the window and told me to give him some cake for his babies who were hungry. Fore I could do that I had to taste it to see if it was good for his babies and first thing I knew I had it eaten all up. And Muvver, that whale felt awful bad." Mother was quick and wise. "No," she answered, "Bobby, the whale did not come through the window. No one was there but Bobby and it's not very brave to blame it on some one else, even a whale. The brave people in your stories would never do that, never!"

"Wouldn't they really, Mother?" Bobby reflected, very obviously impressed. The next day Mother put a large piece of chocolate candy quite by accident where Bobby could easily reach it. She came upon him later standing in front of it with his little hands tight behind him. "Go way, whale," he was whispering, "Go way! This chocolate isn't mine and it's wrong to take other people's things, so you just go way! No you can't even have a taste. Go way!" Then louder and very, very much pleased, "Oh, Muvver come here quick, I just chased away the whale, honest I did." He had not known that Mother was nearby watching the little act.

Now if Bobby had not had such a vivid imagination, if he could not have so readily transferred himself from the world of reality to that of fancy, how much longer it would have taken to drive home the point of honesty and self control! Every hour of his life he was the hero of some story and it is easy to appeal to a hero. In the words of the mother, "Let him live in his world of heroes. If I watch him closely and teach him carefully, I will add to this great gift of his a balance and strength which will help him to pluck his fancies out of the air and turn them into real accomplishments. This dream world of his is vast in extent and strong in power. If I starve it and kill it, I will leave Bobby lost in a universe he cannot understand and will cheat the already too prosaic world of a man of vision."

Sell Coyote Scalps to Kansas Counties.

Topeka, Kan.—Four men are under arrest at Hill City, Kan., charged with perpetrating the greatest raid upon the public treasuries of this state that has ever been consummated in the Middle West. The four men are believed to have defrauded 85 Kansas counties of at least $50,000 in two years, and the practice is believed to have been carried on for at least 14 years. Two of the men have been identified as conducting the same scheme that long ago.

The four men are under arrest on the charge of defrauding 85 of the 103 counties in the state and also for perjury used in committing the fraud.

Buy 'Em Wholesale.

The scheme used was the sale of coyote scalps to the counties and the collection of the bounty. The men purchased these coyote scalps from fur dealers in New York and other eastern points and then swore that the animals were killed in Kansas and collected the bounty.

The coyote is a predatory animal for which the state authorizes the counties to pay a bounty of $1 for each scalp. It is intended to encourage hunters to trap and kill the coyotes. The animals are harmless so far as men and the larger farm animals are concerned, but they kill and maim thousands of chickens, young pigs, calves and sheep every year. The bounty funds are raised by general taxation.

The four men had their headquarters in Kansas City, Mo. They would receive shipments of the coyote scalps at various points and then proceed to sell these scalps in small lots to the counties for the bounty price. They would sell from 18 to 47 in each county. During a single week the officers traced the sales of 1,014 scalps to 30 counties. The shipments which finally landed the men in jail were made to Colby and Hays. Each shipment was collected $22.50 and it is believed that the men were paying the fur dealer from 25 to 50 cents for each scalp. The scalps came wrapped in moth balls.

Twenty Counties Escape.

Kansas and Nebraska are the only middle western states offering so large a bounty for coyote scalps. Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and other states with much wild land where the coyotes roam, do not offer the bounty. As near as the officers have been able to learn the fur dealers buy coyote skins in these other states and then cut off the scalp and ship them to Kansas for the four men to sell to the counties for the bounty. The 20 counties where coyotes have not been seen for years are never molested.

Jersey to Build Traps for Japanese Beetle

Hackensack, N. J.—A mechanical trap will be used against the Japanese beetle, which has attacked Bergen county recently, leaving a score of trees in Central avenue here standing stripped of their leaves. The trap it is believed, will be chief among the recommendations to be made by Dr. Edgar G. Rex, supervisor of Japanese beetle suppression in New Jersey, and Dr. G. J. Headlee, state entomologist, who have just completed an investigation of the pest.

It is expected that a device will be attached to the trunk of a tree to imprison the beetle and drop it into a tank of chemical compound at the foot of the tree. So far the parasite has not attacked the truck gardens.

Number 11 Follows Lad in All His Activities

Prosper, Texas.—Eleven is a lucky number for N. C. Settle, Jr., of this place.

Born on the eleventh minute, eleventh hour, eleventh day of the eleventh month of 1911, he has attained the eleventh grade in the Prosper high school in a class containing 11 pupils.

He wears No. 11 numeral on his basketball sweater and plays 11 musical instruments. His mail is received at Box 11, Prosper. He wears a No. 10 shoe but says a No. 11 fits him better.

Gives Money to Charity; Lives in Dire Poverty

London, England.—Edwin Dudley, fifty-two, gas works employee, lived the life of a recluse for years in his brother's house. He bought a pound of tea and a pound of sugar once a year; two loaves of bread lasted him for the week.

When he died of heart disease police found he had been giving all his savings to charity. Between 500 and 600 postal money-order stubs in favor of various charities were found in his rooms.

LIGHTS of NEW YORK

There are certain places in this world which appear to have personalities; some happy, some sinister. There is, for example, a New York apartment which, even when it is empty, has a somber atmosphere. An artist lived there with a pretty and attractive wife. They were divorced and he married one of his models. They fought so that they were finally asked to move. Another young couple moved in. They, too, began to quarrel bitterly. In a fit of rage, the man one night pushed his wife down a flight of stairs. Her leg was broken by the fall; she left him.

A bachelor took the apartment. One evening a friend borrowed it, met a woman there, shot her, and shot himself. Hate, cruelty, disloyalty and murder have left something behind them inside those walls. The apartment has been repainted and redecorated since then; but somehow—the flowers on the bright wall-paper, with which the landlord tried to make it cheerful, look unhealthy. I have few superstitions; but I shouldn't care to live there.

The artists who a short time ago were growing affluent on smart, modern drawings, now find little work. They have been caught in the wheel of time. Their place on the rim of the wheel has passed its peak and is on the way down. All artists and writers, in fact, are a little disturbed. When the flapper age was followed by the jazz age, and that by the collegiate age, they had something definite to work on. They knew where they were going. But those ages have passed and now there is a blank period. Something must come out of it but nobody knows exactly what it will be—just what is coming up on the rim of the wheel. Artists, authors, dramatists, all are groping for it; but they haven't found it.

Singers and music, which have been the backbone of radio entertainment, are losing their popularity a bit. The big features of the programs now seem to be humor and information. Monologues and dialogues have the greatest vogue. Listeners seem to want a type of vaudeville, wisecracking philosophy, news and comment, instruction. Radio is becoming journalistic; furnishing front page and sport page stuff, editorials and columns.

Rudy Vallee thinks that Guy Lombardo is the best orchestra conductor of his type in the business; says that Lombardo has more ideas and can do more than any of the others. That is high and generous praise.

The old toastmaster idea has developed into the modern master of ceremonies; Al. Ca. they call them in the parlance of the profession. You find them in night clubs and theaters. They introduce performers and act; fill in stage waits; do stuff of their own; keep the performance moving; see that a good time is had by all. Among the better known masters of ceremonies are Paul Ash, who came to New York from San Francisco by way of Chicago, Frank Fay, Lou Holtz, Benny Rubin, Gene Mullin, Harry Richmond, Eddie Cantor and Ed. Wynn act as masters of ceremonies at their own shows. And then, of course, there is "Texas" Guinan.

Della J. Akeley, now in Paris, writes to say that she left the African pygmies all small and happy. Mrs. Akeley is the only woman I know who wanders around the Belgian Congo and other parts of the Dark Continent, alone, except for native bearers. On this trip she remained in Africa for almost a year, using a moving picture camera more than a gun, although she is a splendid shot. She shot the largest elephant in the group at the Natural History museum. This time she was collecting for the Brooklyn museum and doing some research work for various governments.

Iryn Cobb recently observed Ring Lardner wearing a silk hat which was a bit ruffled.

"I do not know," said Mr. Cobb, "through what vicissitudes that hat has passed, or what things happened to it; but none of them were for the best."

Census in Shanghai Puts Population at 2,927,858

Shanghai.—Shanghai has increased in population to a point where it now ranks among the ten largest cities in the world, according to statistics of the bureau of public safety of the Chinese municipality.

A census taken last spring gives the total population of Shanghai as 2,927,858 persons, apparently ranking Shanghai as fourth, with Paris and Chicago as competitors and New York, London and Berlin ahead.

Ft. Stanton News

The Little World Series came off as scheduled, with Fort Stanton taking two games out of the three. The third game lasted 10 innings, when big boy Pherris let Olton in for three runs. The games were all enjoyed and came as a fitting climax to a well-played season. The boys have worked hard and played hard and deserve a lot of credit. The patients have enjoyed and appreciated the games; and discussing the players and games have helped to while away many 'aweaary hour for them. Are we for the ball team?' Say something about them and find out.

Mr. W. M. Gavanaugh enjoyed a visit Monday night with his old friend Tom Doran and wife of Las Vegas. They have been friends for nearly fifty years. And their reminiscing was a joy to the rest of us.

Dove season opened with a bang early Monday morning. Your correspondent and family are indebted to Mr. John Major for a delicious feast Monday night.

STEEL ECLIPSE

Windmill

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. With the first sign of breeze one started up smoothly and quickly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away only as long as the wind raised a dust in the road. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally came smoothly to rest with the last trace of the dying breeze.

That is the difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between turned and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts.

the difference between machined and polished bearings and ordinary bearings; the difference between running in oil and running with dry gears.

In other words, it is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse Self-Oiling Steel Eclipse Windmill and just a plain windmill.

Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the self-oiling feature—the center lift feature—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will form a new idea of how good a windmill can be.
