Virgil Hall and Halley Hall have gone to Smithville, Okla. where they will attend Fulson Training School.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sweet arrived in Ancho recently from Henryetta, Okla.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Story have as their guests this week Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wood, of Mountainair.

Warren Kenyon made a business trip to Arizona last week. Mrs. Jimmie Knight and son, Tommy, were El Paso visitors on Labor Day.

Mrs. Vera Berryhill, of Kenna and Mrs. Wallace Berryhill, of Gallup, have returned to their homes after spending a few days with Mrs. L. L. Peters, Mrs. J. D. Martin, who spent the past six weeks with Mrs. Peters, accompanied Mrs. Vera Berryhill to Kenna.

Mr. Tom Kilgore is expecting a visit soon from his brothers, Mr. Jud Kilgore, of Huston, Georgia, whom he hasn't seen in 41 years and Mr. Jim Kilgore, of Ft. Worth, Texas, who has made frequent trips here in past few years.

The Ancho Woman's Club held its regular meeting Saturday, Sept. 6th at the home of Mrs. T. J. Straley. Mrs. Elbert Brown is to represent the Club at State Federation meeting which is to be held in Albuquerque, during October. The ladies are contemplating the purchase of a fence to be built around the school house. This is one of the first activities on winter's program. Plans were discussed at this meeting whereby they might raise funds for this purpose. Then later they expect to beautify the grounds by planting grass and setting out trees and shrubbery. Mrs. Belknap, vice president, who is one of our most active members, is away on her vacation. We are eager for her return. The hostess served a delectable salad course. Next meeting will be on Sept 20th with Mrs. B. W. Wilson.

Mrs. R. E. P. Warden is in Albuquerque this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Tipton, old time friends of the Hobbs family, departed Wednesday for their home in Brown County, Texas. They expect to return some time and hope to buy a ranch in Lincoln county.

Mrs. Joe Robinson is spending the week in El Paso showing the sights to her sister Miss Betty Robinson of Morehead, Ky.

The Community House Monday evening was the scene of one of the most beautiful parties Fort Stanton has ever been privileged to attend. The Rev. Mr. Smith was host to all the children in

Call for Democratic County Convention

Inasmuch as the date on which the State Democratic Convention has been called and the date formerly agreed upon for the Democratic County Convention more or less conflict, it has been deemed advisable to change the date of the County Convention.

Therefore, the Lincoln County Democratic Convention is hereby called to meet at Capitan, New Mexico, Saturday, September 27, 1930, at the hour of 10:30 a. m., in the High School Gymnasium.

The said county convention is called for the purposes of nominating a complete ticket for the various offices; a candidate for the state legislature; name a county central committee, and to transact any business that may properly come before, said convention.

The basis of representation of said convention shall be one (1) delegate for every ten (10) votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for the Hon. Robert C. Dow for Governor at the 1928 general election.

The eighteen (18) precincts of the county, upon this basis, are entitled to the number of delegates shown below:

Precinct	Votes	Dels.
Lincoln	137	14
San Patricio	61	6
Arabela	8	1
Picacho	29	3
Rabenton	2	1
Eucinoso	13	1
Jicarilla	16	2
White Oaks	50	5
Capitan	86	9
Ruidoso	69	7
Nogal	49	5
Bonito	42	4
Corona	80	8
Carrizozo	253	25
Oscuro	13	1
Aucho	43	4
Spindle	13	1
Joneta	12	1
Totals	975	98

It is suggested that all precinct committeemen call the primaries in their respective precincts at a date sufficiently early that will insure the selection of a complete list of delegates to attend said county convention.

ELLEN C. SELLARS,
Chairman Democratic County Committee.

the post and was assisted in entertaining them by Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Fagan, Miss Harris, Mrs. Moorman and others.

The grounds of the community house were strung with Japanese lanterns and the beautiful lawn and flowers surrounded by lovely children, all dressed in their best, was a sight long to be remembered. Refreshments were served at eight o'clock and the children returned to their homes tired but happy.

Mrs. Marie Cavanaugh is better at this writing. She has been confined to her room with a severe case of bronchitis.

Fair Notes

1. The teachers of Lincoln County held a meeting with the committee in charge of school events of the Lincoln County Fair Saturday and after disposing of a number of matters and making suggestions to the Fair management drew for places in the basket ball tournament, drawing resulting as follows:

1. Carrizozo vs. Capitan boys.
2. Hondo vs. Corona boys.
3. Carrizozo vs. Corona girls.
4. Capitan vs. Hondo girls.

2. It was agreed to have the eligibility list of each school in the hands of the chairman by Oct. 1st.

3. Track events will be the same as last year.

4. Mulchay of Albuquerque will referee the tournament if his services can be secured; he will also act as starter for the races.

5. Track officers as follows:

Gladys Gardenshire, Clerk H. S. Boys; Dorothy Wright, Clerk H. S. girls; Ethel Johnson, Clerk grade school boys and girls; Messrs. Traylor, Cummins and Rockwell grade school judges; Messrs. Madison, Hester and Greer, race judges.

7. If satisfactory arrangements can be made J. L. McDermott will bring his merry-go-round and ferris wheel and set up for the Fair, the Fair committee to have charge of both, and no booths or other attractions to be set up during the Fair.

8. Maggie E. Lovelace will again have charge of the Flower Stand; Clara T. Snyder of the Hot Dog Stand, Mary McCammon of the Country Store. Other committee assignments to be announced later.

9. The Capitan Boomers will play for all dances.

10. Candidates for public office may place their card on the Track Programme for $1.00. Committee,

4th. Annual Lincoln Co. Fair and School Track Meet.

P. T. A. at Capitan

The first meeting of the year was held in the domestic science room at the High School in Capitan and was unusually well attended, some 24 being present. A round table style of introduction was held; each one present announcing who they were and whether teachers or parents. A short business session was held and later refreshments were served, by Mesdames Koogler, Hobbs and Lowe. Mrs. Hobbs is the new president and Mrs. Lowe, Secretary and Treasurer, and no more need to be said to insure a successful year for the P. T. A. Capitan.

The first Tuesday night of each month is the regular meeting night and it is respectfully urged that all parents in the consolidated district make an effort to attend.

Freshie—Will your parents be surprised when you graduate?

Senior—Oh no; they've been expecting me to for several years.

Crystal Theatre

Friday, Sept. 12. John Gilbert, Elenor Boardman, Conrad Nagel, Renee Adoree in "REDEMPTION." A drama, taken from the book by the same name.

Saturday-Sunday, Sept. 13-14. George Sidney, Charlie Murray in "Cohens and Kelleys in Scotland." A comedy, with the well known team working together again.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Sept. 15-16-17. Kenneth Harlan in "Paradise Island." A comedy drama, with some wonderful singing thruout the picture by Kenneth Harlan.

Thursday-Friday, Sept. 18-19. Louis Stone, Ernest Torrence, Cathrine Dale Owens in "Strictly Unconventional."

Grants Franchise

The New Mexico Light & Power Company, which has been operating under a franchise granted by the board of county commissioners before the town was incorporated, was granted a franchise Wednesday night by the Village Trustees. In filing the application for franchise, the company submitted a schedule of charges, which, in effect, will produce a 20 per cent reduction over current light rates. Users who only consume the minimum will get no actual reduction, but will be given a 12-kilowatt-hour service at the rate heretofore charged for 10. The next 38 a 20 per cent reduction will be given and a further reduction allowed when still more kilowatts are consumed. Upon the formal acceptance of those terms, which, no doubt, will be executed soon, a complete schedule will be published. There are various characters and combinations of rates, other than the purely domestic one, that larger users may investigate with profit.

WHY PEOPLE HAVE REVERENCE

By M. K. THOMPSON, Ph. D.

REVERENCE is a strong sentiment of esteem and respect. It is an attitude of deep and sincere admiration for what is vastly above and beyond us.

The self-regarding instinct is the strongest motive of human behavior. This impulse has two phases, self-assertion and self-abasement or submission.

In domination and exploitation, the desire to lord it over others, we have an illustration of the self-assertive phase. Reverence illustrates the highest form of the submissive impulse.

We take pleasure in submitting to a superior person because in so doing we raise ourselves to kinship with him and shine by reflected glory.

Despite our egotism and self-assertive tendencies all of us realize our weakness and frailty as compared with the forces of nature and the great mysteries of life that baffle the wisest of men.

Submission to an inferior or an equal rank and we never do it, willingly. But to submit to a superior is a great pleasure because in so doing we really climb up in our own estimation.

Reverence is sincere and elevating. It appeals to our ego maximization indirectly but nevertheless effectively.

CHARACTERISTICS OF INFANTS

By JEAN NEWTON

I'M ALWAYS wishing I were like somebody else.

"I want things badly, and when I get them I don't want them any more.

"I get very annoyed when people interfere with my plans.

"I like to be begged and coaxed into things.

"Sometimes I do things just because somebody doesn't want me to."

Those are a few contributions which a college professor received from his students when he asked them to name their prevailing "infantilisms"—in other words to point out things that we do that would more appropriately be characteristic of infants!

Read them again and then let me add a few:

"Wanting everything that everybody else has.

"Being dissatisfied when some one you know has more than you.

THE AUTUMN SHADOWS

By Douglas Malloch.

WE USED to walk the meadows in that long, long ago. We know their lights, their shadows, For both you come to know. Yet even when we found them, The darkest shadows then, We know that just beyond them The sun would shine again.

Once more I walk the meadows; I walk alone today. Again the lights and shadows Along the same old way. Not June now, but September; In spite of all I said, It seems I can't remember The sun shines just ahead.

That's how it is with meadows. That's how it is with years, The same the lights, the shadows, The same the smiles, the tears, The old summer weather, With shadows here and there— But things you bore together Alone are hard to bear.

(© 1926, Douglas Malloch.)

"Wanting or liking things because people you know want or like them. "Doing things not because you want to, but to 'keep up with the Jones'.

"Being impressed by what people have rather than what they are. "Living only for the day—and leaving the rest to luck.

"Putting our attention, our effort, and therefore our hope of happiness into things instead of people—and so, as the poet said, dropping buckets into empty wells and growing old in drawing nothing up."

Salads and Desserts Are Popular

By NELLIE MAXWELL

A GOOD salad is always a welcome dish at any time or season. Fruit salads especially appeal to the appetite in warm weather.

Chilled Fruit Salad.

Cover salad plates with fresh crisp lettuce and arrange mounds of sliced fruit, such as oranges, grapefruit, peaches, pears and berries, in the center place a mound of cottage cheese, then surround with such fruit and berries as are in season. Serve with a fruit mayonnaise—add orange juice to mayonnaise, chill and beat well before serving.

One of the valuable food adjuncts (vitamin C) is found most liberally in the citrus fruits. It is an unstable element and cannot be stored in the body for any length of time, hence a daily intake of such fruit makes for bodily health.

Fruit Cup Dessert.

Cut one orange, add one cupful of pineapple diced, one cupful of halved strawberries or white grapes, one-half cupful of powdered sugar. Serve very cold in sherbet glasses with a maraschino cherry for a garnish.

Deviled Crabs.

Take one can of crab meat, mix with one cupful of bread crumbs softened with one-half cupful of milk, add two egg yolks hard cooked and put through a sieve; add one tablespoonful of salt, a dash of mustard, one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter. Fill timbales or small ramekins, sift buttered crumbs over the top and brown lightly in a moderate oven.

Orange Ice Cream.

Mix three cupfuls of orange juice with one cupful of sugar. When well dissolved add two cupfuls of thin cream or the same of milk and one cupful of thick cream. If the thick cream is used whip it before adding. Freeze to a mush, then add the whipped cream and finish freezing.

Lemon Fruit Sherbet.

Add to one quart of rich milk two and one-half cupfuls of lemon juice and one cupful of any of the following fruits: Crushed strawberries, raspberries, apricot pulp, mashed peaches, bananas or apple sauce. Freeze as usual.

A Man's Salad.

Take one head of lettuce, one-half dozen young green onions, chopped fine, including the tops; one hard-cooked egg, also chopped. Combine, add salt and pepper and serve with a good french dressing.

We need plenty of fruits and vegetables to supply vitamins and keep the body healthful.

Frozen Fruit Salad.

Soak two teaspoonfuls of gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of water and melt over hot water. Add the softened gelatin to one cupful of mayonnaise, then add one cupful of cream, whipped. Fold in one and one-half cupfuls each of orange pulp and pineapple, or bananas and peaches combined. Pack in a sealed can. Freeze, using three parts of ice to one of salt. Serve either as a dessert or a salad.

The Children's Corner Edited by DOROTHY EDMONDS

AN OLD FAVORITE RETOLD

Jack was a lazy boy, who lived with his mother; He hadn't any father or sister or brother.

They had a little cottage, and an old, old cow; One day his mother called him and said to him, "Now, Jack, we have no money, so our cow we must sell; Take her off to town, and luck be with you." Well—

Jack took the old cow and started off for town— Up hill and down hill, and up hill and down.

Eye and bye he met a man who said to him, "How in the world do you expect to sell that old cow?"

Now, I have some magic beans and I'll give you one in trade for the old cow," Jack said, "Done."

Then he turned himself around and started off for home— Up hill and down hill, the way he had come.

Soon he was home again, and his mother said, "Jack,

Where he had planted out his bean, climbing in the air.

Up and up and up it went, till it seemed to touch the sky, And Jack said to climb it he was bound to try.

His mother said "More foolishness!" but Jack would go. He climbed on up and up, till he had reached the top, and so

He gave a look around him, and saw a castle near. Now he was very hungry from climbing, so 'twas clear

That he must go and give a knock and ask someone for bread. A woman met him at the door: "For the love of Me!" she said.

"What ever be you doing here? Oh, Oh, my dear, You'd better go as far away as e'er you can from here!

"My husband is a giant with an awful appetite. For little boys like you, dear, so you'd better make haste!"

But Jack was very hungry, and he begged her so, That she let him in to get a bite, but she said, "You know—

If we should hear a cry 'Fee-fi-fo-fum!' I'll have to hide you quickly, for 'twill be he, come."

And indeed it wasn't long before these words were said, "I smell the blood of an Englishman! Be he alive or dead, I'll grind his bones," the giant cried, "I'll grind his bones," he said, "I'll grind his bones, his precious bones, to make my bread!"

She popped Jack in a closet, and shut him up tight— Just in time—for here came, striding in his might,

The giant. "Wife!" he cried, and "Wife!" he cried again, "There's someone in this castle, for I can smell him, plain!"

He wrinkled up his ugly nose, and gave her such a look, She faced him squarely but her poor knees shook.

"It is only fresh steak, and nothing else beside; There is no one in the castle," the poor woman lied.

So the giant ate a huge dish of steaming steak, and then— "Go," said he, "Quickly, and bring me my hen!"

Peeping through the keyhole Jack saw the hen; "Lay!" said the giant, "Lay!"—and then—

Right before his very eyes she laid an egg of gold! Another and another did our Jack behold.

Eye and bye the giant got the hen down on the floor; Then he fell so fast asleep that Jack crept through the door,

GRITTY AND GRITTY! Says G R T "I haven't any grit, Alas! Alas! I've no it." Says G R T "I never, never quit, I'd be ashamed to do it." Says G R T "Somehow, I always stop, Just before I get to it." Says G R T "I tackle every job, Determined to get through it."

Seized the hen and ran as fast as legs could carry him, Slid right down the bean stalk and reached the bottom, BLIM!

When his mother saw him, she wept for very joy; So happy now to have again her very careless boy!

Now they had a plenty, and would never have to beg; Jack need only say "Lay!" There was a golden egg!

Jack made other journeys, took the money bags, once, From the giant, who lay sleeping, and stupid as a dunce.

But when Jack tried to carry off the gold, magic happened, and he was after Jack sharp.

They raced for the bean stalk, but Jack was so slick He was down in a jiffy, crying, "Bring the ax, quick!"

Jack cut the bean stalk with one big whack! Down came the giant, breaking his back;

Breaking his back, too, and breaking his head! "Whoopee!" cried Jack, in glee, "The old giant's dead!"

Now, lest I make my story longer than I ought, I'll have to hurry up a bit and try to cut it short.

In the end it turned out that a long time ago The castle had belonged to Jack's father, you know.

So he and his mother went back there again, Taking all the money bags, the hen and the bean.

There they lived happily, so the story goes. But, just how long a time, nobody knows.

Dame Fashion Smiles

By Grace Jewett Austin

The discussion of fall clothes is always entertaining. The energy gained by all of the summer's out-of-door life is about to be put into effect in all sorts of activities. Lace promises to be an important factor in trimming for fall gowns with venise and heavier types approved. Beading and beaded embroidery will be rife on the head with back-tilted effects and shallower crowns. There are downward tilts at the sides and all forms of the beret are fashionable. White gloves are just as much in demand in the autumn as they have been throughout the summer. The thought of the tariff hitting the inexpensive foreign costume jewelry will probably send us all scurrying to get a few more pieces of it. But of course American jewelry makers are clever enough to be able to supply all of our real needs.

Grace J. Austin, liked, and the draped neckline is to continue in favor. With abundant remarks about pleats and flares, there seems no prospect of skimpy skirts.

There seems a tendency for hats to recede on the head with back-tilted effects and shallower crowns. There are downward tilts at the sides and all forms of the beret are fashionable. White gloves are just as much in demand in the autumn as they have been throughout the summer. The thought of the tariff hitting the inexpensive foreign costume jewelry will probably send us all scurrying to get a few more pieces of it. But of course American jewelry makers are clever enough to be able to supply all of our real needs.

Sporty dresses in lightweight wools are important, and the skirt lengths for such are three to four inches below the knee. There is something rather fascinating in these new "twin tweeds"—tweed cloth manufactured to look the same in texture and weave and color, but with a distinct difference in weight. So a suit may be made from the lighter grade, and an outer coat from the heavier weight, making a four-piece ensemble and a costume that with a fur scarf added would be warm enough to defy the chill of the autumn football games.

Dame Fashion watched a company of sixty choral singers the other evening and found pleasure in looking at about forty kinds of pretty-figured silks and organdies and crepes and georgettes. Printed goods still have value for the fall with the choice of the small figure if the gown is to be used for street wear.

There is a great deal of talk about dark tones; black, dark brown and navy. But, after all, is that especially new, when autumn is in consideration? Mrs. Noah probably talked to her daughters-in-law about now black, blue and brown dresses, when they were repairing their wardrobe.

Not long ago, after all the world and his wife had been listening to Admiral Byrd reading about him and thinking of chilly regions, Dame Fashion prophesied that streaky reindeer coats might be expected at least, for sports wear. This has not yet been sealed by the approval of great authorities, but there is announcement that "polar bear white" is a good color for the autumn season. Those who have watched the big weary creatures go splashing into ice water tanks will have just this off-white color in mind—not so far from the egg-shell shade which appeared for an approved color in the summer for everything.

Paris talks of large velvet hats for the fall. Dame Fashion is inclined to think that the ability to wear large hats with grace and becoming effect is one of the birthright qualities which the fairies either do or do not give at the girl baby's cradle. If one can "carry off" a large hat there is nothing equal to it, but a large hat must be worn with a large hat manner.

Knitted, Worsted Tweed for Fall Street Wear

A tailored dress of light-weight wool is an excellent choice. Not only will it serve as a general utility dress all winter but it makes a smart dress for the street in the early fall, says the Woman's Home Companion. In this frank of knitted worsted tweed a collar of matching silk crepe, buttons and a high-bloused waistline are interesting style features.

Huge Fox Collar Gives Decided Feminine Touch

This smartly fashioned fall coat is made of an imported tweed and has a large fox collar which adds that important feminine touch so prominent in the fashions of the present time.

Velvets Are Forecast for Fall and Winter

Prominence is promised to velvets for next season's clothes, observes a fashion correspondent in the Louisville Courier-Journal. This is forecast by the importance given them in the recent showings of Lucile at Armand, Lucien Lelong, Marie Peray, Jeanne Lanvin, Worth, Jean Patou and Vionnet.

Two distinct groups of fabrics take their places for next season, those appropriate for the soft, supple or draped silhouette and those adapted to the bouffant skirt. Since both of these silhouettes are sponsored, American fabric makers have been quick to take the hint and develop new versions of fabrics to suit every style.

Canton crepe, heavy weaves of sheer crepe, satin and velvets, in the soft weaves, as well as sheer woolen cloth, are for the long, drapy gowns. Suitable for the bouffant silhouette, with puffs and pleaths here and there are the crisper textures of velvet, moires and failles.

For "luxurious negligees, as well as for sports and daytime models, one manufacturer has presented a new fabric, a transparent corduroy with a faintly ribbed surface. This combines the qualities of both corduroy and velvet in an attractive manner. And, as always, color goes hand in hand with texture. For the new season the black dress which you have always considered a necessity in your winter wardrobe is quite likely not to be really black. That is, if you follow the latest dictates of the fabric dyers.

Last summer we talked about "off-whites" until we were a bit dizzy as to just what they really were. Every "I" seemed, was off-white in shade, from lingerie to wedding gowns.

This winter we are to see and hear a lot about "off-blacks." The newest shades being shown for next winter are so dark that they are almost shades of black. If one allows such a thing to be possible.

Greens for autumn show a tendency toward tones with a slightly yellow cast. Since these retain their brilliancy under electric light, their success for evening is assured.

Reds, always popular with American women, are in evidence—rich reds that verge on purple and wine shades quite different from the yellowish tones of the past season.

There Is No Excuse for Styles "Not Becoming"

The desire of the modern woman to express her individuality is certainly to be satisfied this season through the selection of her wardrobe. A woman need no longer fear that her gown will be a replica of her neighbor's, and therefore conspicuous if they should attend the same bridge, for not in many decades has fashion been more generous with her fabrics or so diverse in her style moods. There are colors, flattering to the blond, the brunette and the tawny beauty, and gowns becoming in line and cut to the tall, the short, the thin and the fat. Truly, no woman can excuse an unbecoming costume with the plea, "but the styles this year are not becoming to me."

Woolens Will Be Plain, Says Fall Fashion Note

Among the advance fall notes which are important to know is that plain rather than novelty woolens are expected to be the high style for suits and coats. This is easy enough to understand since all woolens in vogue at the moment and for some time back have been in novelty patterns. Late summer successes are translated in reasonable fabrics. One finds faceted or woven designs, reflecting printed silks. One also finds satins again—silk's fashion seemingly having already tired of dull silks.

MOTHER PROBLEMS

By Mrs. Dorothy Coffey

The "Whiny" Habit

CHILDREN come into the world as perfect morally as they will ever be. Even at the ages of three and four many "weeds" may have grown amongst the "rarer flowers" of sweet, desirable traits. These "weeds" may not seem serious because it is the common theory that children outgrow them, but do they?

We are all acquainted with the person who speaks with a whine in his voice, the one who does most of the complaining when there is least to complain about. There is little doubt that this whine began very early, fretting no doubt because an own way was not granted. The outlook for a child who whines is sad indeed for he is bound to be unpopular with his fellows.

There are many little ways in which a tendency to "whininess" may be encouraged and the danger of them lies in the fact that they are often in the most trivial circumstances when a mother must be very keen witted indeed to realize their significance. Perhaps at a children's party the seed was planted when little Blary wiggled around on one foot with fingers in her mouth and said, "No, I don't want to pin the tale on the donkey," all the time being very anxious to. When the game was over and Mary had had no turn she whinily changed her tone, "I want to pin the tale on; I haven't had a turn!" "Well, the cute thing!" said all the adults, "she wanted to all the time." Whereupon Mary giggled and gurgled, exceedingly proud of her little trick. What an excellent lesson for her if she had been told that her turn had passed, that she had said she didn't want to play and now it was too late to change her mind! Instead, she found it more or less of a joke to whine her way into attention.

Perhaps it is started in a small group of playmates, one having a toy that another one wants. Some of the children are content with the owner's statement that the toy belongs to him and he doesn't wish anyone else to have it, but not so this one child, who is determined to obtain temporary possession at all costs. He tries strategy, trading one of his for it, begging for it, finally whining for it until an adult who is nearby admonishes the owner of the toy to let the other child have it for a little while. Had the adult not interfered at this point that child would have learned that whining would have netted him no results except that the other children would have turned on their heels and left him, but with the interference of the adult and the consequent yielding on the part of the owner of the toy, that whiny child won a victory. The next time he would try whining again.

Keeping Promises to Children AS WE think it over we find that there are many reasons for making promises to children but only one for breaking them. We are very apt to consider them only the fruit of the moment that will be promptly forgotten by the child and may be as promptly forgotten by us. This is where we are wrong. We may forget it but the child does not. Betty was playing happily the other day when she conceived the idea of removing her shoes and stockings. Soon she came limping into the house, crying as if with the lungs of ten. The foot had been struck by a nail and while nothing serious resulted the accident was sufficient to start a whole day of peevishness, and toward night Mother was at her wit's end, in need of rest. Betty continued to fret and whine. To make a long story short, nothing was pleasing all day long, but the important issue came towards the end when Mother, driven desperate, said "Betty, if you'll only stop fretting for a while and let Mother rest I'll give you some ice cream."

Instantaneous calm and quiet resulted, but when the promise was rashly made the hour had not been noticed. It was in reality very near Betty's supper time. Mother rested for a short while, forgetting all about her promise, revelling only in the quiet. But Betty had not forgotten! When Mother awoke as if to get up, Betty was upon her for the fulfillment. She had made a bargain and rightfully had come for its fruition. "Oh, goody! Can I have the ice cream now?" she called.

Mother looked surprised and glanced at her watch. "Why, Betty, it's supper time now. Don't you know that ice cream isn't good for little girls so late at night?" So that was the promise, was it? She wasn't to taste that ice cream after all. Disappointment overwhelmed her and no doubt in her small subconsciousness worked the fretting of complete disillusionment, the faintly defined knowledge that Mother did not play fair. Anyway, a very unhappy child ate a very uninteresting supper and went to bed completely tired out, at war with the world.

Yes, the incident would be forgotten but would that and other similar broken promises never again be remembered? Alas, they would! Not by Mother—the only made them—but by Betty who suffered the pain of their wilful destruction.

INDIA AND ITS PEOPLES

ALLIGATORS

IN CEYLON, many of the rivers abound in alligators which come ashore to bask in the sun, all with their heads turned toward the water except one of them who acts as a watchman and whose snout is turned toward land. When he gives the signal of danger there is a general stampede into the river. They are so numerous that one hardly thinks them worth powder and ball, and their horny sides make it more trouble to kill them than they are worth. A friend of mine, when patrolling one of these rivers, had a very narrow escape. His companion, who was walking on the opposite bank, took a shot at an alligator right in front of him; and instantly the ball crashed into the branches of a tree under which my friend was walking. It had been deflected from the reptile's back.

There is a method of catching alligators which affords some sport to those who are indifferent to the suffering it entails. You take a live puppy and strap him on to a raft formed of two pieces of tough wood lashed in the form of a cross. You sharpen all the four points of this cross and fasten to it a bank of twine a yard long to which you attach a rope. You then float your puppy, who of course yelping loudly, on a still pool or backwater of the stream, and tie the end of the rope to a tree. You then see that your revolver is handy, and with a half a dozen or more natives you sit under the tree and watch.

In a few minutes a pair of enormous jaws appears above the surface of the water; the puppy disappears into them, but they do not close with the facility with which they open, for the cross has stuck in the brute's throat and the strands of the bank of twine have got between his teeth. You now lay onto the rope with a will, and slowly draw the reluctant monster ashore, while he lashes the water with his tail in impotent rage. When you have got him on shore, you keep at a respectful distance and take pot shots with your revolver at his eye. If you keep on doing this long enough you will finally kill him. Those who have tried this "sport" say that the life of the unfortunate puppy can be saved more often than not.

The alligators in some of the rivers of Ceylon are so voracious and numerous that the natives, who are very fond of bathing, stake off their bathing places. From these strongholds you can safely taunt an alligator should he come and poke his nose between the bars and sniff your tempting flavor—green jabbing at him with a knife. Near the mouths of the rivers the natives think it is safe to bathe without the protection of any such device, as they believe the water is too salt for the alligators and too fresh for the sharks.

BOMBAY—A COSTLY EXPERIENCE

WHEN I first set foot in Bombay, ignorant of the East and naturally unable to speak a word of Hindustani, I was confronted with the usual problem for the newcomer—that of selecting a "bearer" or personal servant. From among the many applicants who pestered me for employment, I chose a man who I afterwards learned was probably one of those "untouchables" or low caste Hindus, who are so much despised by the castes above them. My reasons for selecting this man were threefold: his knowledge of English seemed tolerably good, he was a convert to the "Christian faith" and his testimonials appeared to be highly flattering.

At that time I was ignorant of two very important facts, namely, that as a rule only low caste Hindus forsake their own religion—usually, I regret to say, with the ulterior motive of securing employment with a white man which they might not otherwise obtain, and also that testimonials are commonly bought and sold in the Indian bazaars. This fraudulent disposal of recommendations does not appear to be prevalent among men of the real servant class, Hindu or Mohammedan, who are usually unable to speak English owing to the custom of British officials of almost invariably addressing them in Hindustani. In the circumstances it was not surprising that my newly acquired treasure should vanish on the second day after my arrival, taking with him as souvenirs of myself a gold watch which had belonged to my grandfather, an expensive outfit of tropical clothing purchased in London prior to sailing, and other items of lesser value.

Warned by this experience, I carefully selected a Mohammedan of the name of Deloush, who was unable to speak English, and despite the difficulties of communication between us, I never had cause to regret the choice, for he proved to be an admirable and loyal servant. First impressions of India are usually formed at Bombay; and no more lovely gateway to the wonderful land to which it gives entrance could be wished for than this verdant city which encircles the blue water of its splendid harbor.

French Sailor's Unique Reward for Heroic Deed

The rewards of heroism are not always what they should be, the philosophers will tell you—and, they might cite very handily the recent case of Capt. Lucien Malbert, mariner and shipmaster. Captain Malbert commands the rescue tug Iroise, stationed in the harbor of Brest. An S O S call ticked through a raging storm. Captain Malbert was sleeping; his his oilskins, as was his crew; all he had to do was cast off from the dock, which he did. He rendered aid to the steamer in distress; he almost lost his own ship in the violent sea; he limped back to port 48 hours later without food or sleep, exhausted. And what happened? The port authorities fined him 500 francs ($20)—for crossing the brenkwater without a permit! The case caused a scandal loud enough to reach Paris, and the fine, luckily, was remitted on the personal intervention of the minister of finance.

Most Perfect Arms

Arms of which the armless Venus de Milo might have been proud have been found at Milan, Italy. Italian painters and sculptors agree that Signorina Cobelli, noted Milan beauty, possesses the most beautiful pair in the world. The question was settled by a vote of the artists, which gave Signorina Cobelli a decisive majority. The search for the most graceful arms has been conducted throughout Italy for several months.

How Islands Got Name

If you think the Canary Islands were so named because the trees were full of yellow songsters, guess again. ## She Lost 19 Pounds of Fat in 27 Days

During October a woman in Montana wrote—"My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "it's the little daily dose that takes off the fat." Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's life-giving salts is carried to every cell of the body and there is followed by "that Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 80c bottle of Kruschen Salts from any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

Whose Panic?

Chairman Fess of the Republican National Committee and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York are in disagreement concerning Chairman Fess' statement in his radio speech that this administration made every effort through the Federal authorities to warn against the speculation mania.

Commenting on this statement the New York World says that if Dr. Fess had consulted the last annual report of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, he would have discovered the significant statement that for an number of weeks from February to May, (1929) the directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York voted an increase in the discount rate to six per cent, but that this increase was not approved by the Washington authorities.

"This is the official account of what was really going on," says the World. "It shows that at least eight months before the Wall Street panic, the New York Reserve authorities were endeavoring to apply a brake to the speculative mania and that they were being blocked. This was attributed to the Federal authorities at Washington, headed by Secretary Mellon.

"It was not until August of last year that the consent of the powers in Washington was obtained for the application of restrictive measures, and it was then too late. The panic was inevitable. The record also shows that for at least three years before the crash in the market Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Mellon consistently issued statements which gave stock prices a new fillip. Mr. Coolidge even went so far as to uphold the huge increase in brokers' loans as merely a normal economic development. Not a word of warning was then issued by Mr. Hoover Secretary of Commerce nor later as President regarding the dangers of inflation."

Ben Sanchez, a long-time employe at Ziegler Bros., is taking his annual vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Bostian drove to Alamogordo this morning to spend the day.

Cottage cheese—15 cents pint also fresh buttermilk, 10c qt. churned daily—Sanitary Dairy.

E. W. Harris went to El Paso last week after Mrs. Harris who returned with him Friday. Mrs. Harris is considerably improved, though yet far from her normal health.

Mrs. Julia Miller, who had been visiting her son, Harry Miller, and her daughter, Mrs. F. H. Johnson, during the summer, left Wednesday morning for her Los Angeles home.

FOR SALE—Hoover Electric Vacuum Cleaner. Best of condition.

Mrs. Jno. L. Lawson

Mrs. Dewey Pilant and little Judith, who have been visiting their parents, the Finleys, a large part of the summer, at the latter's cottage on Eagle Creek, return to Roswell tomorrow.

The new filling station at the east end, which Vincent Reil is having erected, is nearing completion. The station is quite favorably located to catch traffic which enters town from two different directions.

These cool, crisp mornings are beginning to make one wonder what's become of the summer wages, or provoke a search in the closets, dresser drawers and elsewhere for heavy flannels.

Mrs. A. Ziegler left Saturday for Seattle, as noted in last week's issue. After a visit with her daughter there, she will go to Chicago to see her other daughter before returning home.

J. M. Frame and Mrs. J. E. Frame were here Monday from Ancho. Mr. Frame left the following evening for Monahan, Texas, to visit his aged parents, and from there will go to Frisco to see Mrs. Frame, who has been under the treatment of chief Surgeon Coffey of the S. P., for the past year. Mr. Frame hopes to find Mrs. Frame sufficiently recovered to return home with him.

Henry Hoffman, who runs out of El Paso to Carrizozo, made our office a pleasant call Wednesday, during his short lay-over here. In discussing the shake-up in the railroad situation, due to the annulment of passenger trains 13 and 14, to take place soon, Henry figured the new schedule would mean the reduction in the running force of about 20 men. The discontinuance of these two trains will produce a big shift among the older heads, and the elimination of a number of the younger ones. It requires long whiskers to hold a regular run these days.

Dust Damages Engine

Dashing over a gravel or dusty road, with the wind causing swirls of dust to cloud the pathway of the car, the motorist often wonders what effect this dust has upon the engine of his automobile, and if it finds its way into the vital working parts thus causing a grinding wear.

The reassuring answer to this question is supplied by James M. Crawford, Chief Engineer of the Chevrolet Motor Company, who explains interestingly how the air cleaner removes the dust from the intake air, making it purer than that which you yourself breathe.

"If it were not for the air cleaner, dust and sand would enter the carburetor—even in city driving—causing wear on cylinders, rings and pistons," Mr. Crawford says.

"Quite often the dust on a good road cannot be seen but it is there just the same. Motor car wheels constantly grind off fine particles of road material which are dispersed through the air. These particles viewed under a microscope bear a striking resemblance to a valve grinding compound.

"Were it not for the air cleaner, this dust would enter the engine, form on the cylinder walls and soon become thoroughly mixed with the lubricating oil. The inevitable result would be formation of a grinding compound which would attack pistons, rings cylinder walls, bearings and other working parts, causing damage throughout the engine, lowering its performance, shortening its life and making unnecessary repair expense.

"The air cleaner, used on all Chevrolet cars, is made entirely of metal, has no moving parts and will last for the lifetime of the car."

Attempted Burglary

News reached here over the phone that an attempt was made one night this week to burglarize the Titsworth store at Capitan. Someone, whether officer or employe the report did not state, discovered the attempt, took a shot at the culprits, whereupon the latter jumped into a car and hit for the tall uncut. It was further reported that a visit to scene of the attempted burglary disclosed the presence of fresh blood, and there is probably a man in that neighborhood with a bullet hole in his body, but no information has reached here of an arrest.

Beggars Can Choose

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceford, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. They lunch together and recall their school days. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing their father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. The love-making progresses rapidly. They make a runaway marriage. Briceford is furious, but helpless, as Ernestine is of age. Loring Hamilton, lawyer, wins Lillian's consent to be his wife.

CHAPTER III

Strange Country

It seemed a natural thing to Ernestine, however it seemed to the others, to waken on her marriage morning, in the little back bedroom of the tiny house where the Todds had lived all their married life. She was instantly wide awake and oriented. Perhaps it was the close tangle of Will's arms about her that made everything normal. Perhaps the delicious consciousness of her new happiness had never entirely been lost in sleep. It did not matter at all about the family now.

Thinking of everything, Ernestine felt in her heart something new about Will. Added to her romantic love for him was something really more wonderful: a sound thing—respect. He had behaved admirably.

She was filled with a transport of tenderness, a strong conviction of having done well. Now, at last, life had begun for her. The chrysalis of girlhood was broken, and she was emerged into womanhood. She had become real. Always now, Will would be here beside her at the beginning of every day. Gravely she considered this, and sent up a wordless prayer that she might be a good wife.

Some one was moving about in the kitchen, and she heard the rattle of coals in the kitchen grate. How close and small the house was. Each sound came through the thin walls distinctly. Ernestine realized that she would have to chase the window, and she essayed to rise. But at the first movement Will's arms tightened about her, though he did not waken. Ernestine extricated herself and got up with a swift strong movement.

"You have to work today, Will," she said in such a wifely tone that he laughed and looked up at her adoringly.

"I suppose now I've got somebody even worse than my mother about making me get up," he said, and then added, "Hey, wait, I'll get you some warm water," for Ernestine was washing her face in the basin that stood on a small washstand near the door.

But the water out of the pitcher, which had stood all night with the cold wind blowing through the open window upon it, was cold and invigorating.

Will shaved in the kitchen, and Ernestine could hear his voice, in an affectionate murmur, talking to some one. Before the small wavy mirror, she applied her make-up, looking at herself sharply. She arranged her sleek soft hair, proud of its thickness and texture. What was there in her face? Was she different this morning? She must not be different. She powdered again, and rubbed some of the scarlet oil on her lips, which were as red as cherries under the lip salve.

She made the bed neatly and set the room in order, packed up her belongings. The smell of coffee and the sound of the percolator made her feel faint. She had eaten nothing the evening before.

In the kitchen, Will's face turned on her, as bright as a triangular mirror with the sun on it. His mother was sitting by the kitchen table, with a warm shawl over her heavy dress. She could be up at times, and this morning she had made the effort. Ernestine went to Will's mother, and kissed her.

"I hope you didn't get up on our account, mother," she said gently, "but I'm glad you are better."

The woman looked up at Ernestine, her faded eyes, under the drooping brows, regarding this strange bird that had slipped so easily into her nest. How old she looked, thought Ernestine. She was a generation beyond, mamma, for she was old with a gentle humility and meekness that Ernestine had never met before. There was not in her even the stubbornness that sometimes the meek can use so effectively.

Will's father Ernestine could understand. A carpenter, with a gift for woodcutting, he was a skilled and able workman and had a great pride in his trade. He was a tall, thin, stooped man, with a clear-shaved, heavily furrowed face and brightly saturated, black eyes, which regarded Ernestine with a kind of grim humor. He made her realize without saying so, that he disapproved of their marriage as much as her people did, but that he was not the man to cry over spilled milk. They could count on his kindness.

At breakfast in the bright kitchen, Ernestine and Will made plans: "You are welcome to stay here as long as you like," said Peter Todd, but the two shook their heads. They had already decided to be independent at once.

awfully good of you to want us here, but the house is small, and mother is really not well enough to have us."

Mrs. Todd said nothing, and Ernestine felt that she had never seen so dispirited a creature.

"If we get near town, mom," Will said, "we can save money on carfare. I know a place on Erie street one of the fellows told me about, where you can get a room and two meals, at a reasonable price, and it's in walking distance of the office. Anyhow, I think we ought to live alone."

"That's right," said Will's father. "It's the only way for young married people. If you need any money when you go to fixing up a flat, I can lend you a little. I always have a few hundred dollars tucked away for emergencies," he explained to Ernestine. "I can let Will borrow, without interest, if he needs it. I own a house on Troy street that you could have if it wasn't leased. But the location is not good for you."

"We'll manage," said Will confidently, and Ernestine admired him.

They exchanged bright looks, and Mr. Todd said heartily:

"Well, come and visit us sometimes, anyhow."

It was soon time for them to go. Ernestine, in her squirrel coat and scarlet hat, bade her new relatives good-by. She felt that there were tears in the air, realized a little that these people were losing Will more definitely than she would ever be lost to her family. He was their only son, but they said good-by to him with quiet dignity. Ernestine admired their restraint, and was grateful for their good taste. They offered neither advice nor counsel, but allowed the young ones to go forth about their own affairs. The house on Erie street brought to Ernestine her first shock of reality. It was an ancient, smoke-blackened dwelling place, not far from the lake. Across the street from the house a five-story machine shop reverberated with activity. A secret-looking brown-stone house, with drawn blinds, stood on the corner. Ernestine felt that the apartment they spoke of so glibly was not so near. A sense of the irrevocable nature of the step she had taken swept over her. She was now Will's, and as he had said to her father, his roof was her roof. His home was hers, and this was it. She had definitely abandoned her old way of life and set her feet in a strange country. The future was as remote from the past as though she were following him to a great distance.

"You Are 'Lovely,' He Protested as Though She Had Denied It.

Hand in hand they ran up the stone stairs and met a small plump woman, called Mrs. Bennett, with whom Will discussed rooms and prices, while Ernestine stood to one side, burningly conscious of the gold band on her third finger.

Ernestine was too good a sport to bemoan their conspicuous lack of money. Fresh from the rigors of a fine school, it was not hard for her to accustom herself to simplicity. Will discovered that she had a most practical nature. The forces which had driven her into marriage had not all been romantic. In adjusting herself to living on Will's pay, she was able to exercise some of her native ingenuity and shrewdness, and in that capacity she found a certain pleasure. It was fun to put herself on a basis of having no money to spend and then discovering how much she had grown accustomed to spending in the months since she had left school. Her trunk was full of pretty clothes. It was an element she did not at first appreciate.

CHAPTER IV

A Party at Pastano's

Mr. Poole was having a party for Ernestine and Will, and, according to prearrangement, Ernestine slipped downstairs ahead of time to show herself to Mrs. Bennett. She could not help but be proud of the evening dress mamma had given her for Christmas, and which she had not worn before. The yellow chiffon lay about her slender limbs delicately, subtly. She appreciated the illusive cobwebby hose that had come with the dress and the gold cloth slippers. The string of small real pearls which had come to her from her grandmother Langley's estate, the pearl ring which daddy had given her to match her necklace, were the last touches of a perfect toilet. Will had appreciated her, this evening, his fine eyes glowing with admiration.

"You are lovely," he protested, as though she had denied it, and she swung herself about in the narrow room and gave him a languishing, mocking look. But she went down the carpeted stairs in a glow, her squirrel coat over her arm.

Mrs. Bennett got up with an admiring exclamation when Ernestine closed the door behind her. The latter advanced to the center of the room and prouced on her toes. A little, round, weary body, with tired eyes beneath a fringe of gray hair, Mrs. Bennett had long outworn personal egotism and was generous with praise and sympathy.

"You're in the time to live, darling," she said to Ernestine. "My life is an old story, but you are young and glowing, and things are happening to you. It is better for you to have your hard times now, and grow old rich and strong, than to have the hardships in old age, as I have had them. But tell me, aren't you excited to be having a birthday party given in your honor by a great cartoonist?"

Ernestine laughed.

"He only wants to be nice to Will. He thinks it will please Will, and of course it does."

Mrs. Bennett maintained a discreet silence, and Ernestine turned to the mirror over a chest of drawers and looked at her reflection, running her hands over her sleek soft hair. She was a little thinner than she had been when she was married, and her eyes were big and dark in the delicate whiteness of her face. She was lovely with a breath-taking quality, her face shining with an inner spiritual excitement. It seemed to her as she stared that she looked too happy, too thrilled for every-day use. She must learn to dissemble.

"Sometimes, darling," Mrs. Bennett chided Ernestine gently, "I think you fall to realize what an effect you have on the people here—the men. You are so different from the other girls these boys know. You bloom. You wear the face of love. It's hard on them. I want you to be very wise with Mr. Poole. It would be an easy thing for you to disrupt his friendship with Will. Will admires him, and his patronage means so much, just now."

"Will won't be jealous of any attention I pay to Mr. Poole, or that he pays to me," Ernestine said indifferently, "if that's what you mean. It won't hurt Mr. Poole to admire me. He's a nice old man, and he loves to admire women, and men, too, as far as that goes. It's part of his big heart. Will says, anyhow, Will wouldn't be jealous of me—now." Her small face was so shining that Mrs. Bennett threw her advising instinct away with a gesture and came and kissed her young friend.

"Have a lovely time, darling. Pastano's has the distinction of being the very toughest place in all Chicago. It is beautiful, and not so dangerous as Mr. Pastano likes people to think. He is really very careful about the police. And then, too, you will be with Mr. Poole, who is a close friend of Ruby."

"Crackers" First Baked by Massachusetts Man

As far as any authentic record shows, the first cracker bakery in the United States was that of Theodore Pearson at Newburyport, Mass. He began business in 1793 and his specialty was a large cracker which was known both as a "pilot" and as ship's bread. Joshua Brent was Pearson's first great business rival. He erected an oven for cracker baking at Milton, Mass., in 1801. He was succeeded by many other cracker manufacturers. The crackers were first made by hand. During the years between 1840 and 1866 the mechanical process employed in making crackers underwent a remarkable development. Prior to 1840 the use of machinery in the cracker-making process was practically unknown. Even then the dough was still worked up and put into the oven one piece at a time. Machinery was finally invented which took the dough after it had been prepared by hand and rolled it into a thin sheet which, as it passed over a sort of endless belt, was cut by a stamping machine which works automatically.

WIFE WINS BATTLE FOR RIVAL'S CHILD

Legal Adoption Gives Woman an Mother's Right.

New York.—An unusual legal battle, between a tall, aristocratic woman with graying hair, and her husband, a middle-aged scientist and bacteriologist, which had been smoldering on and off for almost a year and which revolved about the custody of an eleven-year-old girl, has ended in victory for the wife.

The scientist is Dr. Rafael Y. Sarmiento, of noble Latin lineage and a former Venezuelan consul in Boston. He is the father of the child.

His wife, who received custody of the little girl with an interlocutory decree of divorce from the scientist, is Mrs. Edith Webster Woodin Sarmiento, descendant of Daniel Webster. She is not the mother of the little girl, Mary Trinidad, but the tot was reared by Mrs. Sarmiento almost from the first day she was born.

Real Mother Missing
The child's mother, Celia Torregrossa, a former laboratory assistant to Doctor Sarmiento, was only a vague shadow in the courtroom battle between the doctor and his wife. She had a secret romance with the scientist while he was married to Mrs. Sarmiento. After little Mary was born she went away—whether she is living or dead is not known—and permitted the doctor to register the little girl as his own.

Justice James C. Cropsey of the Queens Supreme court, in granting Mrs. Sarmiento the custody of Mary, based his decision upon the ground that Mary was the legally adopted child of the Sarmientos and that Mrs. Sarmiento was therefore her proper custodian.

The judge's decision, however, will be made the basis for an appeal by Doctor Sarmiento. During the proceedings the scientist's lawyers contended that the court did not have jurisdiction over little Mary inasmuch as she had been born in Venezuela and was, therefore, a citizen of that country.

Wife Adopted Her.

Mary was born in 1910, about two years after the doctor had married Mrs. Sarmiento. Three weeks later the doctor confessed to Mrs. Sarmiento. She consented to rearing the child as their own and later the little girl was adopted.

After Doctor and Mrs. Sarmiento and Mary came to America Mrs. Sarmiento was informed that the doctor was being seen in the company of another woman, Mrs. Anita Klein of Long Island.

She did a little investigating of her own and her findings resulted in a divorce action. Doctor Sarmiento thereupon instituted proceedings to compel his wife to turn over the custody of Mary to him, but he was unsuccessful. Justice Cropsey, in granting the interlocutory decree, ordered the doctor to contribute $10 weekly toward the child's support.

Woman Social Worker Finds Romance in Jail

New Orleans, La.—Love nestled behind the cold steel bars of a jail cell here for Miss Marie Flebbe and John Tatum. And a quirk of fate proved Tatum innocent of a crime for which he faced a long prison sentence and enabled him and Miss Flebbe to become husband and wife.

Tatum was in jail awaiting trial for robbery when Miss Flebbe, a social worker, stopped for a chat with him. He asserted his innocence but said that five witnesses had identified him as the robber and that he could not hope for acquittal. He was a stranger in the city and had no allies.

"I believe in you," Miss Flebbe told Tatum.

The young woman visited Tatum in his cell often after that, and one day they became engaged. Miss Flebbe promised to wait for him and to become his wife when he had paid the penalty.

The dramatic climax came in court. The five had testified against Tatum, and his assertions of his innocence apparently carried no weight with the jury. Just then a telegram was handed to the district attorney. It said Edward Dunbar, under arrest, had confessed the robbery for which Tatum was held.

The man was freed—and now he and Miss Flebbe will marry soon.

CATTLE LICE NEED TWO TREATMENTS

Some Homemade Mixtures Are Quite Effective.

Three kinds of lice are commonly found on cattle and they may all be present at the same time. Fortunately, the same treatment may be used for each kind, says Prof. H. A. Hopper of Cornell university.

Cattle lice are especially injurious to young stock. The irritation caused by the lice arrests growth and contributes to low vitality. When the animals are stabled in the fall, lice may not be detected, but after a few weeks in the stable several batches of eggs may hatch and the whole herd be infested. They must be controlled to insure the thrift and comfort of the herd, not to mention profitable milking.

Dipping the herd is most effective where the size of the herd justifies it and the equipment is at hand. An orchard sprayer or even a hand pump may be satisfactory for moderate-sized herds. If well done, spraying will control lice. The body must be wet thoroughly, especially the head, ears, bristles, tail, and the inner surface of the thighs and flanks. In cold weather the cattle must be protected after treatment. Arsenical dips are commonly used for sprays, but any standard dip used according to directions will be effective. Two treatments 15 to 20 days apart are advised.

During cold weather most owners will prefer to use hand applications such as powders and ointments, suggests Professor Hopper. Before applying these, it is best to expose the hiding places of the pests by clipping all or part of the body. Clip and remove the rough hair, if any, along the back, around the head, neck, and ears and inside the flanks and thighs. Most dusting powders have some value in holding lice in check in cold weather, but they are not recommended as effective in eradicating cattle lice. Homemade preparations may be used if mixed and applied as indicated. And as the dips they should be applied 15 days apart.

Inbreeding Intensifies Swine Characteristics

Inbreeding intensifies both the good and bad characteristics present in the parents. If the ancestry is known to have had no weak points, which is seldom the case, then inbreeding may result in outstanding offspring. It should be remembered also that inbreeding often brings hidden defects to light, writes A. D. Weber of the University of Nebraska.

As a general rule, inbreeding should not be practiced in herds where the pigs are to be fattened for market. The progressive and studious breeder of pure breeds, however, can afford to experiment with inbreeding with the hope that a few outstanding pigs will be produced, and thus enable him to eventually fix a superior type that will breed true.

Dairy Cows to Produce Heifers for Beef Trade

Where a man intends to keep a few heifers for breeding, a milking short-horn bull, of unusually beefy conformation, would make a satisfactory cross on his dairy cows. If a man didn't want to keep any heifers, then an Aberdeen-Angus bull could hardly be excelled for crossing on dairy cows, to produce calves to raise for beef. The hornless head and the black color of the Aberdeen-Angus are dominant in heredity, and the cross-bred calves would be mainly hornless and solid black in color. This uniformity, together with the short legs and thickness that they would likely inherit from their sire, would be an advantage to the feeder.

Sows Need Minerals to Prevent Going Down

Sows that go down in the back may be injured in some accident. More often, however, they are crippled because of the reduction of lime in their skeletons to supply milk to their young. A ration that is high in protein, mineral and vitamins is essential if the sows are not to have trouble from this source. A ration containing tankage, alfalfa meal and mineral should not allow the skeleton to get so low in minerals that the bones cannot carry the weight.

Little or nothing can be done for her once she is down. Feed her a good balanced commercial ration will prevent this trouble.

Returns From Silage

An acre of corn returned $71.65 when put into a silo and fed to steers as silage, together with cottonseed meal and mixed hay, at the Ohio Experiment station in a recent test. An acre of shollar corn returned $50.80 when cut and hauled and fed to steers as shelled corn and stover, together with cottonseed meal and mixed hay. This study confirms the results secured by other experiment stations as well as the observation of practical feeders.

ONE IN 500 BURIED ALIVE IN EUROPE

Doctors Start Movement to Halt "Errors."

Paris.—With official announcement that an average of one person in every 500 buried is interred alive in Europe, a group of 35 deputies, nearly all of them physicians or surgeons, have submitted a project of law to the government requiring a verification of deceased by a medico-scientific proof before a permit for inhumation is delivered.

The parliamentary group requests the cabinet to consult the Academy of Medicine and the Academy of Sciences to aid in adopting the surest means to ascertain that a person is dead.

Miser Attitude Blamed.

Doctor Dervieux of the medico-legal institute, in an interview asserted that statistics reveal that two per thousand are buried alive in most advanced continental countries and that in certain others—Balkan states, for example, the percentage probably runs much higher. The figure includes newly-born infants.

Most such cases occur in the provinces and are due to the miser-like attitude of peasants who refuse to call a doctor to pronounce a patient dead. When a patient expires, or seems to, his relatives or friends rush to the doctor who has been attending him—or her—and tell him there is no necessity for making another call, that the patient has expired.

"The best method of insuring that death has arrived," said Doctor Dervieux, "and the process which will be adopted doubtless, is an injection of flourdecaline. A small dose of this is not deadly and will not hurt a patient who is not dead. If it is injected into a corpse it spreads over the whole body which takes on a greenish hue."

Doctor Dervieux asserted that burning the soles of the feet had been suggested as a test. "But a person could be burned so gravely that he would die from the effects," objected the doctor.

Might Open Arteries.

"Opening the arteries has also been suggested. Blood will not flow from a corpse."

"Stabbing a pin inches long through the chest into the heart has been proposed," said the doctor. "There would be a tiny flag attached to the protruding end of the pin and any pulsation of the heart would make the flag wag. But there might be draft in the room and the flag would move and everyone would think the person was not dead."

"Injections of ether have been suggested. Ether runs out again as soon as the hypodermic needle is withdrawn from a corpse and only remains in the body of a living person. "One of the surest signs of death is the greenish spot which appears on the abdomen of a corpse at the end of 24 hours, due to the beginning of decomposition; also rigor mortis, but that might be confounded with catalepsy."

In many cases in Europe the funeral of a person is held within 24 hours of death, as it is extremely rare that corpses are embalmed. Even Foch and Clemenceau were not embalmed, and there are only two undertakers in Paris who do embalming, and they do it exclusively for Americans who die here.

Trust Fund Left to Tree May Grow to $750,000

New London, Conn.—Before death Myrica Cerefera Davey, now sixteen years old, will be worth more than three-quarters of a million dollars because of a trust fund of $100 established here. Compound interest is the answer.

Myrica, who lives in a public park here, owns the passbook in which the $100 deposited by a godfather, James A. G. Davey, of Kent, Ohio, will grow to $750,000 before Myrica's normal expectation of 200 years of life have been reached.

Myrica Cerefera was known to the Pilgrims on the Atlantic coast as the bayberry tree and candles were made from its berries. These wax-like berries also were used as a medicine to cure dysentery.

Pays $125 in Taxes, But Forgets to Give His Name

Grand Island, Neb.—County Treasurer Hugo Meves is in receipt of $125 in currency, to be applied to some one's back taxes—but the writer of the note that came with the money forgot to sign his name. The money came in an envelope bearing a Grand Island postmark. Since then the treasurer has conducted a long search for the sender, but is still holding the money.

Term Nearly Ended, Convict Strolls Off

Walla Walla.—Efforts of Washington state prison authorities to capture Pat Murphy, who walked away, have failed. Murphy, working on construction of new trusty buildings, was from King county on one to three years for grand larceny. He had only four months to serve of the minimum term. His escape will mean an extended sentence if he is recaptured.

TIP TWICE REFUSED OUSTS CUSTOMS MAN

Bill Slipped into Pocket by Arriving Passenger.

New York.—Because a $5 tip which he had twice refused was slipped into his pocket by an arriving passenger, Theodore Kessler, a customs inspector for 20 years, was dismissed from the service.

Kessler, who was popularly known on the New York docks as Teddy, is the first victim in a war declared recently by customs heads at Washington against graft.

Two other inspectors have been charged with bribes in connection with the smuggling of narcotics, but their case is still pending.

Three weeks ago Kessler was assigned to inspect baggage from the North German Lloyd liner Europa at the army base, Brooklyn. One of the passengers whose baggage he inspected was a Chicago man, who twice offered Kessler $5 as a gratuity, which he declined.

The passenger good-naturedly slipped the tip into Kessler's pocket. The act was seen by A. J. May, an undercover agent of the Treasury department.

May searched Kessler and found the $5. He instantly ordered a reinspection of the baggage. Nothing dutiable which had not been declared was found. The passenger admitted giving Kessler the tip.

A disciplinary board found the inspector guilty and recommended he be suspended 60 days. A commissioner of customs at Washington said that the verdict would not be accepted. Kessler was thereupon dismissed.

The speed of his dismissal, which usually takes from three to six months, shocked the customs service. Kessler entered the department in July, 1907, and was appointed an inspector three years later. He resides at 2921 Tilden avenue, Brooklyn.

New York Schools Cost Almost Million a Day

New York.—The daily cost to this city of educating the more than 1,200,000 pupils registered in the various divisions of the public educational system is now more than $330,000. Figures computed on the basis of the annual statistical report of the board of education show that, at the present rate of increase in annual budgets, the cost of the school system for each of the 180 days of the academic year will rise to $1,000,000 in a few years.

The school system total expenditures during 1923 reached a record figure of more than $171,000,000. Excepting a possible increase in the capital outlays during 1923, it is estimated that the educational expense will rise by more than $4,000,000 this year.

The cost of instruction proper was $594,001 for each school day during 1923, and this year it is estimated to reach more than $610,000. The daily expenditures of the system include, in addition to salaries of supervising and teaching forces, the average daily cost of supplies, physical maintenance of the school plant, its operation, the administration, business and general outlays, repairs and the per diem average disbursements for the construction of new buildings to provide additional sittings made necessary by increased registration.

Fleet of Planes Attack Clouds, Break Up Storm

The Hague.—Sunshine or rain at will, in any desired quantities, were promised by the Dutch "rainmaker," Herr Veraart, today after he led an attack by a fleet of airplanes on a bank of clouds over the North sea. The clouds were broken up and wiped from the skies. Herr Veraart, with the co-operation of the Dutch war ministry, led five Fokker planes against the clouds about 12,000 feet up. The planes attacked the clouds with ice dust. After about 7,000 pounds of the ice dust had been strewn over the clouds they disappeared. Herr Veraart plans to make experiments on a larger scale soon.

Gobbler Wants to Set on Eggs; Is Given Chance

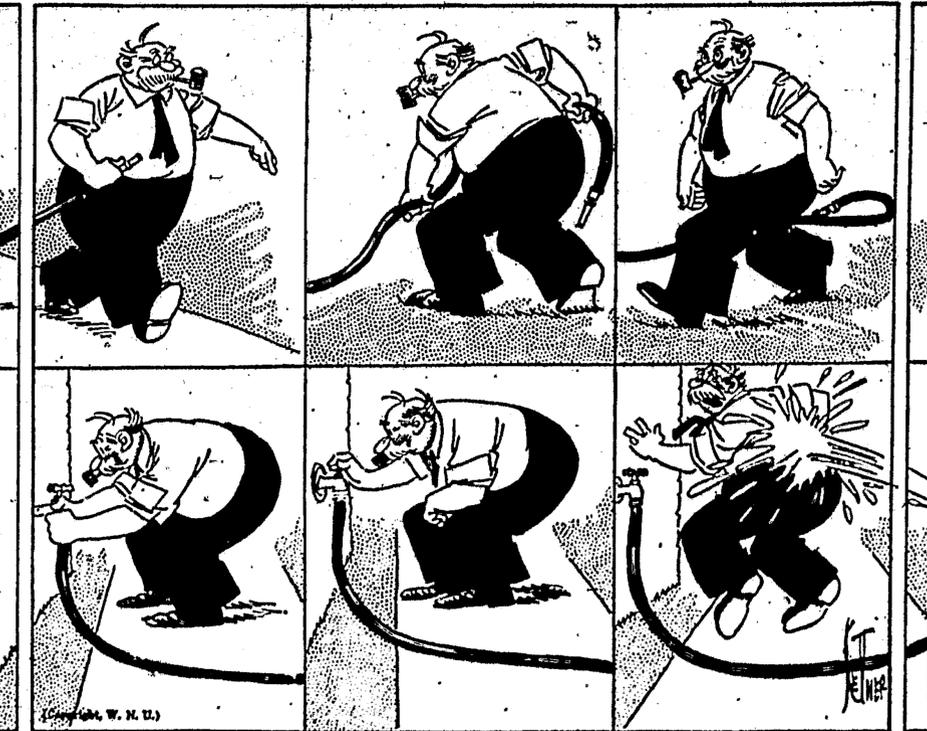

Sharpsburg, Md.—A large turkey gobbler belonging to Mrs. Mark Cooper, near town, showed a great desire to set on eggs and each day would rouse a turkey hen from her nest in the barnyard and take her place. Finally Mrs. Cooper made a nest, placed some turkey eggs in it and put the gobbler on them. For four weeks he sat there patiently and at the end of that time was proud to find twelve baby turkeys. Two have disappeared, but the remaining ten follow the peculiar call of this proud gobbler and are growing fast.

Snap Shot Hits Gator; Ends Duck Mystery

Chelsea, N. Y.—The mystery of what has caused the continued disappearance recently of ducks in a lake on the Irving Bergen country place in New Hackensack, near here, was solved when an employee shot at an object he saw skimming over the water and found he had stunned a four-foot alligator. Investigation showed the alligator had been brought from Florida, had escaped from a farm in the vicinity to a brook and from there reached the lake and began slaughtering the ducks. The alligator was captured.

Nogal Nuggets

The Nogal Service Station has changed hands again. B. B. Goza, the new manager says if your car is not perking to suit you, he can fix it.

J. J. Peacock and wife, Eliza Johnson and wife and Clarence Johnson were Nogal visitors the past week. They enjoyed the beautiful scenery on the old Bonito also a fine mess of fish. They remained over here for the dance Saturday night, returning to their homes in Hagerman Sunday. J. J. Peacock took home with him the twins who had been staying with their grandparents.

The dance at Nogal last Saturday night entertained a large crowd, everybody enjoying themselves; except after the dance, some of the boys had to pull a little battle. Some of us tried to stop it, but—

The people of Nogal would greatly appreciate it, if, after the dances, all would quietly return to their homes and not carouse or disturb those who do not partake of the dances.

Mrs. May says she greatly appreciates the courtesy and respect that some of the people show while here at the dances. The names she will not mention, as it would take too much space; but says there are bound to be mothers and fathers who are striving to give their children the right kind of training.

The next dance at the Nogal Hall will be September 20th; music by the Boomers. Everybody come and enjoy one more dance. But leave your bad booze off—at least the fighting kind.

Albert May and Frank Peacock are on the sick list this week.

A large crowd attended the air circus at the Kudos Airport last Sunday. There were no accidents—every performance perfect.

Hangs in the Well

The Old Oaken Bucket, which Wordsworth immortalized, and which has almost passed from human ken, has been restored, or at least reproduced in the grounds surrounding the City Hall. In the center of a grassy plot surrounded by trees and shrubbery, sits, or rests, or is located the well. The curbing is of malpai rock, and nothing presents a more rustic appearance than that molten material from the depths of old mother earth; a frame tops the hole and from a pulley, with rope attached, swings the Old Oaken Bucket. The goad is there, and one may quaff from the vessels, "amidst scenes of our childhood," that were common to our forbears. Only one thing is lacking, and that is the moss—and Mac says we have so many "rolling stones" that it is difficult to secure a supply. That, however, will come with time, and our cup of happiness will then be filled to overflowing. The thoughtfulness of mayor and trustees in "presenting to view" these "fond recollections" are commendable, and revive pleasant memories of the Old Oaken Bucket covered with moss.

Real Car Oiler

Harry Miller has just installed a rotary lift at the City Service Station that is about the niftiest and most useful piece of machinery made. The lift sits on a cement platform, the column coming up through the center, and atop the column a frame is attached. A car is driven onto the platform, the air turned on, the car rises to about shoulder height. Every part of the machinery is exposed, the connections are cleaned by air and water, after which high-powered guns are turned on every interstice and joint—no friction point is missed, and the car is given an oiling such as it has not had since it left the factory. Consequently, as may be suspected, the under-view thus given shows that almost every car has places where oil is needed but where none has been applied since the car has been put on the road. The rotary lift gives a clear inside to the innards of a car as nothing else could, and, at the same time, insures a thorough and satisfactory result.

Colonel Sellers Here

Colonel D. K. B. Sellers, prominent candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, was here a short time Monday enroute from Albuquerque to the Pecos Valley. The Colonel found the Lincoln county delegation to the State Democratic Convention unimpaired, but, at the same time many very friendly to his candidacy. Bernalillo county, with its 76 votes, is solidly behind the Colonel, which, it must be admitted, is a good running start.

STEEL ECLIPSE

Windmill

Starts sooner—pumps longer

Two windmills stood just across the road from each other. With the first sign of a breeze one started up smoothly and quietly. When the breeze became a wind, the other started with a groan and lumbered away only as long as the wind raised a dust in the road. Then it stopped as abruptly as it had started, while the other continued pumping for some time—then it finally gave up completely to rest with the rest of the spinning breeze.

The difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between accurately machined and fitted gears and ordinary cast gears; the difference between turned, ground and polished shafts and ordinary steel shafts.

The difference between a superior windmill and just a windmill. It is the difference between the Fairbanks-Morse Steel Eclipse Windmill and just a plain windmill.

Come in and see this great advance in windmill construction. See the self-oiling feature—the center lift feature—the mechanism that enables the Eclipse to actually pump water during two-thirds of every revolution of the wind wheel. You will form a new idea of how good a windmill can be.
