Nogal Nuggets

B. L. Bolow and family were up from Roswell last Sunday, enjoying the beautiful mountain scenery and also taking a look at the Bonito Dam. Mr. Bolow is secretary of the Peacock Mining Co., and he states that they have incorporated under the laws of New Mexico and soon will be ready for operation.

Tommy Zumwalt and family left Monday night of this week for Douglas, Arizona. Tom is employed by the railroad company and was transferred to Douglas. They will probably remain in Arizona for the winter.

M. A. Hust reports a fairly good crop in his area of the county, but suffered considerable loss on account of dry weather—beans maturing to readily.

Fires are gently burning above the Bonito dam. The railroad boys are cleaning up the down timber.

The big shot will soon be touched off at the dam. They are now loading the coyote holes, using several tons of powder.

L. R. Hust and wife made a flying business trip to Roswell Saturday.

Sam Cox and wife were Nogal visitors Sunday. Sam is about at himself again since the operation; at least to be back on duty.

Mrs. Ethel Maloney and mother were visitors from Roswell last week.

W. F. Peacock is in Roswell attending to mining business.

Charles Claybord and family are visiting the Mixens at Ancho this week.

Hooveritis, an epidemic that swept this country in 1928, has entirely subsided—no case is now known to exist, unless it is little Chairman Fess—and attending physicians report his condition feverish and his mind a blank.

The "Lifeguards" Whine

Washington, September—From the editorial columns of the Louisville Times the following frank and pungent paragraphs are taken:

"The pitiful outcry of Mr. Hoover's advocates, that criticism of the President is malignant and destructive, will not impress the reasonable observer.

"Their whine utterly lacks courage and disposition to face the music which customarily is the accompaniment of political events.

"Nothing worse could happen to the President than for an electorate which admires thews and sinews and manly courage to reach the conviction that the whiners constitute the Administration Lifeguards; that the White House sanctions a performance in the President's behalf which has all the lack of dignity which characterizes the whimpering cry of a schoolboy who is too timid to fight: 'Quit peckin' on me!'"

Wampus' Cats Entertain

According to a recent decision in the Methodist Missionary Society, between the Wampus Cats and the F. F. O. C's, each under Captains Frances Spencer and Clara Snow respectively, the unit first making its proportionate pledge to Missions to be guests of the other; the F. F. O. C's were royally entertained in the cleverest conceivable manner in the spencer home on Wednesday afternoon. Since the issuance of the invitations depicting in sketch of pen and ink, the fine proportions of a Wampus Cat, in gleeful readiness to devour its prey of "Bird," the F. F. O. C's harbored a real sense of fear as to the entertainment to be offered. Arriving at the Spencer gate the anticipated fears put on more concrete form at the sight of a bold, sign—"Beware!"—supported by that ever watchful "Wampus Cat." Contrary to custom the hospitable doors to the spacious Spencer domain were closed; a weird and uncanny loveliness pervaded the place and upon closer inspection another warning as to personal responsibility for all who entered only served to substantiate the fast growing fears of the F. F. O. C's. However the tension was somewhat relieved in the appearance of Mrs. Spencer only to be left desolate again upon the demand of a Pass. In hasty consultation meows and scats were uttered in rapid succession which gained admission for the guests but only to the presence of an other Wampus Cat held by Mrs. Spencer which it was found necessary to salute in reverent and militaristic style. Immediately upon being seated work in the form of embroidering kitchen towels belonging to the society was given the guests. Without a moment for relaxation from this strenuous labor, supervised by the eagle eyes of Wampus Cats the guests were made to perform to suit the whimsical fancy of those same Wampus Cats, their taste being displayed in individual requests for every talent endowed upon man, from song "I wouldn't Marry a Cowboy," rendered by Mrs. R. Lemon; exemplification of the "Daily Dozen" skillfully performed by Mrs. E. T. Collier, and ably assisted by Mrs. Spencer, (that no part might be omitted) on to strange, and intricate but nimble steps by Mrs. W. W. Walker met the pleasure of this feline tribe.

Worms (in the form of long, click, spaghetti were next served the almost exhausted guests, though these were quickly dispensed within the hope of something more which proved to be suckers as delectable as any one could wish. Noting the depression of defeat on the part of the "Wampus Cats" the F. F. O. C's under the able direction of Mrs. Ray Lemon revealed in song and to the tune of "The Bear Went Over the Mountain" the identity and work of the F. F. O. C's concluding with the plea that

Call for Democratic County Convention

Inasmuch as the date on which the State Democratic Convention has been called and the date formerly agreed upon for the Democratic County Convention more or less conflict, it has been deemed advisable to change the date of the County Convention.

Therefore, the Lincoln County Democratic Convention is hereby called to meet at Capitan, New Mexico, Saturday, September 27, 1930, at the hour of 10:30 a. m., in the High School Gymnasium. The said county convention is called for the purposes of nominating a complete ticket for the various offices; a candidate for the state legislature; name a county central committee, and to transact any business that may properly come before said convention.

The basis of representation of said convention shall be one (1) delegate for every ten (10) votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for the Hon. Robert C. Dow for Governor at the 1928 general election.

The eighteen (18) precincts of the county, upon this basis, are entitled to the number of delegates shown below:

Precinct	Votes	Dels.
Lincoln	137	14
San Patrisio	61	6
Arabela	8	1
Picacho	29	3
Rabenton	2	1
Encinosa	13	1
Jicarilla	16	2
White Oaks	50	5
Capitan	86	9
Ruidoso	69	7
Nogal	49	5
Bonito	42	4
Corona	80	8
Carrizozo	253	25
Oscuro	13	1
Ancho	43	4
Spindle	13	1
Joneta	12	1
Totals	975	98

It is suggested that all precinct committeemen call the primaries in their respective precincts at a date sufficiently early that will insure the selection of a complete list of delegates to attend said county convention.

ELLEN C. SELLARS,
Chairman Democratic County Committee.

Ford Trucks Meet Wide Field of Usefulness

Recent improvements in the Ford truck have so extended its usefulness that it is now serving in practically every line of truck transportation except those requiring the heaviest of hauling. Mr. Shafer, local Ford dealer, said today. This, he added, is evidenced by the fact that more than 45 per cent of all the new trucks and commercial cars registered in the United States in the first half of the year were Fords.

"Since the introduction of the new chassis with four-speed transmission, dual rear wheels, heavier springs, and stronger frame" and axles, Ford Trucks have entered a number of new fields," Mr. Shafer said. "By themselves and in combination with trailers and semitrailers they are rendering economical and efficient transportation in practically every line of business.

"In the first place there is the Model A commercial car with bodies designed for light delivery work. The Model AA truck may be had with either 131½ or 157 inch wheelbase, with a variety of standard bodies, and with scores of bodies designed for the Ford chassis.

"In a Ford commercial car exhibit recently opened by the Ford Motor Company in Highland Park, Mich., more than one hundred types of bodies were displayed on Ford truck chassis. They include grocery trucks with shelving throughout.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Erickson of a well-to-do family is attracted by a Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. They lunch together and recall their school days. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing their father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. The love-making progresses rapidly. They make a runaway marriage. Ernestine is furious, but helpless, as Ernestine is of age. Loring Hamilton, lawyer, wins Lillian's consent to be his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in a single room in a humble neighborhood.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

Will was at the door, grinning at them, his mobile mouth twisted into a kind of sardonic look that he wore at times, and that made him like his father. He had a great deal of poise, Ernestine often thought, considering his youth and scanty advantages. Marriage had changed him very little. He was, perhaps, somewhat more inflammable, but he took Ernestine and the life with her most naturally and without self-consciousness.

They went on to Pastano's, entered an unmarked doorway and climbed broad wooden steps with double doors at the top which opened upon light, music, heat and the sound of happy voices.

The big room was airy, its excellent ventilation a surprise to Ernestine, and an important factor in every one's pleasure and good appetite. Mr. Poole came to meet them, and Ernestine gave him her hand and her nearest schoolgirl smile. She wished Mrs. Bennett had not said anything to her about this man. She did not have to heed any warnings except those her husband gave her!

Following Mr. Poole among the tables, Ernestine thought about the many things Will had told her of this man, until she felt that she knew him perfectly. His remarkable gifts, his value to his paper, his carelessness of himself, his small vanities and prejudices, his indolence and drunkenness and his great charm, she knew; he was as natural and straightforward with every one as a child with other children. Yet he possessed also the authority and autocratic manner of the man of established reputation. He drew Ernestine's hand within the curve of his arm, and led her to a table reserved for their party.

All the places were filled except theirs, and the men rose to greet Ernestine. There was only one other woman, Mrs. Wiston, the wife of the syndicate editor of the Sun, a small beautiful woman with the face of a siren who can never forget her role. She had been married twice before she had met Wiston, and Ernestine knew that back in New England were the wife and child Wiston had set aside for her. Ernestine was conscious of the indignation common to married women against such an impostor.

Wiston himself, a tall academic man with a ribbon to his glasses, Ernestine had met at the office, and John Tucker, called Tommy by every one, who was Will's rival for honors in the art room. The third man who was presented to her Ernestine did not know and she failed to catch his name. He was a small powerful looking individual, with a dark mustache, bright gray eyes and a vain and elaborate manner. The other two men, Underwood and Harrison, were from the Sun staff, and happy to be at any party, any time, any place.

They all sat down, Mr. Poole with one of the women on either side, and Tommy Tucker next to Ernestine, the pompous little man next to Mrs. Wiston, with the others grouped about the big table. Ernestine by now had forgotten her self-consciousness and became radiantly happy. She wished Will were beside her. She was only a half, and Will was the other half, and he ought always to be beside her, breathing as she breathed, turning as she turned. The idea delighted her, and she laughed at herself but felt still a deep joy in their unity.

"And what have you two young pieces of impudence been doing since last I saw you?"

"We have dined in state at mamma's," said Ernestine, smiling mischievously. "Will missed the significance of it entirely. Papa has, under duress, forgiven him. He offered Will a job in his office."

"And what does Will say?"

"He didn't even pay any attention to it. He just said that he was satisfied with the job he had, thanks just the same, and went on talking to mamma."

Mr. Poole laughed with delight. "Doesn't he know what papa wants?"

"I don't know whether he does or not. But anyhow, papa knows that, now he has decided to forgive Will, Will doesn't intend to let it make any difference. Papa really would like to let us struggle along. He feels pretty disappointed in me. But mamma can't bear it. She is determined to take care of us, whether we will or no."

"But how can she, if Will does not change his employment?"

Ernestine's face grew firm. "She can't. I won't let her. I've made up my mind to have nothing but what Will can give me. I don't mind being poor."

"You must resist poverty," Mr. Poole said. "It is the deadly enemy of marriage."

Ernestine's small face was scornful. Poverty was not so black as it was painted, she observed. He looked at her.

"You do not believe me? Wait, then, and see."

"But we are poor now. It's fun to be poor."

"You—poor!" His amazement was so genuine that Ernestine looked at him in surprise. "My darling child," he reasoned with her, "you don't know what the word means. You two—still in the flush of first love, without children, without a house to burden you, without a responsibility! One bed will do for both of you, one room will hold two hearts together. You are well, you are eager, you are fed and clothed and housed. You have a trunk full of pretty clothes, an adoring mamma begging to do things for you. You do not know the cold and odious breath of poverty at all. I could show you its dark face; slum, little children with great heads and emaciated bodies, houses held together by strings—shambles! I'll show you pale girls, and prostitution, and bare shelves, and empty cupboards, and pride bent double. Lack is a cruel witch. Pray that you may never know her."

"Yet you just told me to wait!"

"Ah, but that was nonsense. Life will never be cruel to you."

They ate the excellent food put before them, and talked, the men arguing among themselves about a technicality in some one's work, Will and Underwood and Mr. Wiston deep in it. Mr. Poole and Tommy competing for Ernestine's attention. Presently Tommy was drawn into the men's talk, and Mr. Poole leaned close to Ernestine and became very confidential.

"Will tells me you are going to have a child. I think that is the last perfection. I always knew that he was gifted, but his marriage with you has established the certainty of his future. Such things are not accidents. He is the chosen of the gods, or one of their finest gifts would not be his. He has all the elements of success. And a wife and children will do the forging."

Ernestine's cheeks burned. She could not understand how Will could have told his still precious secret to Mr. Poole. But she exercised great self-command to be quiet and responsive to him. He went on praising Will, and assuring her of the brightness of his future, until, after a little, she forgot her confusion and told him her own feelings about Will.

The party grew very gay, and Ernestine joined in the general happiness. Without warning the tight little man with the powerful shoulders was on his feet. He bowed to Ernestine, and he bowed around the room, and everywhere hands began to clap and there were shouts of joyous approval at sight of him.

With a gesture indescribably complacent, he held up his hand for applause and got it instantly. Standing so, his chest pushed out like a pouter pigeon's, his body rocking back on his heels, his napkin in his hand, which he flourished from time to time, he began to sing.

It was Slegfried's cry of joy, when he passed through the flames and found the sleeping Brunhilde. Ernestine recognized it, as she recognized the man. He was Mostane, one of the world's greatest tenors. And she had criticized his manner! But now, all else was swept away, and she lived only through her ears, on which fell each perfect note. She knew in delightful anticipation what his golden voice would do next, and her heart soared with his voice.

He stopped abruptly, rocked a moment on his heels and then gently, softly, poignantly he sang without accompaniment:

Still wie die Nacht
Tief wie das Meer
Sol deine Liebe sein.

The tears rained down Ernestine's cheeks. He sat down in a storm of excited applause. Ernestine could not stop crying. She leaned on Will's shoulder, for he came and sat beside her and put his arm about her. When at last she could breathe steadily she rose and went around the table to Mostane and took his fat face in her two hands and kissed him.

There was a cheer from all the tables, and Will gleamed at her with approval for her spontaneity.

"Nothing else was adequate," declared Mr. Poole.

The hours passed in a trance. The patronage in the dining room changed, grew noisier, more turbulent. Girls came and went on the stage, and danced and sang, and twinkled pretty feet, and flicked bare knees. It was all an unrelenting blending of sight and sound and color, and Ernestine's heart was far away, in some lonely space with Will. Her being still troubled with that last swelling note. Dimly in her mind she felt an awakening of artistic comprehension, a spiritual understanding of the strength and power of perfect performance. Will had latent in him some such force, but it was far from impulses to such finished authority. Her thought was not that clear, but groping.

It was time to go home, and Ernestine wanted Will to take her away from the others. But she saw that Mr. Poole was not himself at all any longer. Will always took him home, from the office, from such affairs as this, to his flat. Ernestine felt that she could not bear to be parted from Will tonight.

She became conscious of a man standing behind her, a little to one side, regarding her gravely, quietly. She glanced up at him but did not know him. He was a huge man, with a great dark head and clear dark skin. He wore a sack suit, and his narrow face glittered with a ruby of enormous size, set in a gold circle. On one of his big brown hands, which were covered with coarse black hair, was another such gem. Ernestine remembered with a feeling of faintness all the wild stories she had heard about Pastano's place being so disorderly. Will, at least, was sober, as he always was.

Mr. Poole now saw the stranger, greeted him and called him to the table.

"And this is Mrs. Todd, my young friend's wife. You know Will, of course, and the others. Ernestine, this is Ruby Pastano, jewel merchant, ward boss, and the owner of this dive. A bad man—a terrible man. Shake hands with him."

Mr. Poole was enjoying himself and looked up at Pastano with glee. Mr. Pastano did not smile. He still fixed on Ernestine that queer solemn look. He bowed above her.

"Sit down, Ruby, sit down!" commanded Mr. Poole thickly, and motioned for a waiter to bring a chair, which was produced instantly.

Mr. Pastano sat down between Mr. Poole and Ernestine, and she felt his gravity spreading about the table, so that all were a little quieted.

"This is my birthday," Ernestine explained graciously. "I am twenty-one years old today, and Mr. Poole was kind enough to have a party for me. Now that you have come, it is more charming."

"Your voice—" he said, his own tone soft and silky. "Where are you born?"

She told him, naively, the address of her mother's house. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea: When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

The Heel

Dr. F. B. Daudé of Boise, who recently discovered in Oregon a carload of fossilized scales of the mesothorium, tracionon and other enormous prehistoric lizards, said in an interview in Warm Springs:

"You can tell a tracionon's scales from a mesothorium's as easily as you can tell a white man from a colored man."

Then Doctor Daudé chuckled and went on:

"Take a colored man's leg. It is planted in the middle of his foot. He has as much foot behind his leg as before it."

"A colored man was walking down the street one day. Suddenly he looked round and said:

"Boy, git off mah heel. Git in-tirely off!"

EWES WITH TWINS NEED BEST CARE

Mother Often Is Poor and Runs Short of Milk.

Take care of the twin lambs and the singlets will, in a general way of speaking, take care of themselves. Many conditions go against the ewe. She is often poor, or at least she is often poorer than if she had only borne one lamb. She naturally runs a bit short of milk, there being two youngsters to share it. The lambs are not, as a rule, so strong and capable of roughing it as the robust singlets.

Farmers are often puzzled to keep all in order when the ewe has one weak and one strong lamb through the litter taking the lion's share of the milk. And then it is that the weakling is likely to become weaker still, if nothing worse, or likely as not to succumb. The first essential, and to which there can be no exception, is for the shepherd to frequently visit the charges, say about three times a day, while the lambs are small. Generally the ewe may be left to take care of her own family at night.

It is the ewes with the twins that need best keep—the best feed all round. They need generous support to enable them to hold up their condition under the stress of raising a couple of lambs to enable them to fill their milk pails well enough for the milk which will be required of them. Then, too, good feed is required for the lambs to pick up because if that is provided it helps them to help themselves, and to help their mother, too.

The question is often asked, "When do lambs begin to pick at solid foods?" Some, under average conditions, begin to eat at about three weeks old. Then how much they eat depends upon the milk they get. If twins are running short of milk, and either running on some nice, sweet green sward, or have access to a supply of excellent forage, they soon begin to partake freely of the luxurious herbage.

But if the feed of the green sward is not inviting and the mother's milk is plentiful there is much more milk eaten about feeding or grazing. The shepherd worth his salt will see that the twins get the best feeds, best grass fields, and best forage and roots. A pint of oats per head per day until there is a full pasture to a good rule to follow. This grain works wonders with weak lambs. It pushes the carcass, pushes the milk, helps the lambs digest for they soon nibble at the troughs, and learn to eat other things. These oats are also very good for the ewe.

Prevent Hog Cholera in Swine During the Fall

Now is the time to prevent cholera in young pigs and sows. The fall of the year is very often the period of excessive outbreaks. Double-treat the young pig two or three weeks old and prevent cholera. If pigs are kept in new pastures or fields they will not become infested with large round worms in their intestines. It pays, by preventing disease, to double-treat pigs and keep them in clean new pastures or places. Remember, hog cholera and swine plague can be prevented by cleanliness, good care and double treatment with anti hog cholera serum and virus given only one time or at least once when three to four weeks old.

Live Stock Facts

Rotating animals on pasture is good for swine as well as cattle.

Hogs are widely used for pasturing alfalfa and do little damage to the stand.

Keep the sow and pig out of swamps and mud holes and water holes.

Registered cattle with long-time records in their pedigrees are bringing the most money.

Alfalfa will carry more hogs than will red clover, and will furnish a better quality of forage in drier seasons of the year.

The clean ground system of handling the pig crop stresses frequent rotation of pasture. Many farmers are beginning to rotate their pig crop along with their other regular crop rotations.

Lamb production in sheep flocks is very definitely influenced by the system of feeding and management of the flock.

Oats cut in the soft dough stage and properly cured make a very palatable and highly nutritious hay, relished by all classes of live stock.

The crossing of a good beef sire on strong, rugged dairy cows will produce satisfactory feeder cattle. Even calves fit to make good baby beavers can thus be produced.

Following After

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

CRAWFORD was consuming chop suety with a speed that augured well for the medical profession—until she took the seat opposite him at the long marble table. After that Fletcher was not in it with him when it came to masticating his food.

She was a girl of modest demeanor whom Crawford had seen on one or two occasions in the restaurant. She had, however, been too far away for him to realize that she was the most lovely thing that ever graced a Chinese dining table. At close range he could see the fragments of smile that played about her eyes and lips and the curious reddish glow in her big eyes. He had missed those charms from across the room.

She ordered only a cupful of tea and some rice cakes and seemed in a bit of a hurry about it. Crawford watched her draw from her bag a lot of time tables and begin to jot down a regular itinerary on the back of the menu card.

And all the time she scarcely looked up, only a fleeting glance now and again that just shaved the corner of Crawford's eyes.

His chop suety was nearing a finish and rather than seem to be hanging about occupying a chair he ordered more. Then, when it was put before him, steaming and fragrant, the girl glanced at her watch, arose hurriedly, paid her check and was gone.

In her rush she, of course, left the most important of her papers—the menu on which she had so carefully jotted down trains, hotels, etc. Crawford followed only to find that she had taken the elevator down to the street and was now lost among the thousands of released workers at Forty-second street.

Crawford did the best thing that came to his inspired mind. He made a hasty copy of all she had written down and left the menu as he had found it.

Had Crawford been anything but free floated for the next few weeks and possessed of sufficient coin to carry him on, he might have let the wanderer get out of his life. As it was, he was free to take the same trip, she was taking and would hope, by fair means or foul, to manage a meeting. He did not have to reach his home for another two months. After that, he would take up the splendid position open there to him.

However, meeting a lovely girl, who was entirely by herself and held out no encouragement, was not an easy matter. Crawford had feeling glimpses of her in hotels in Washington, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit, then after a long lapse, saw her in Denver, looking at the shops, had a room next door to hers in the hotel in Los Angeles and not once could he find even the slightest pretext on which to fix a meeting.

And still he followed, after. His two months were fast drawing to a close. Discouragement held Crawford in its grip. He was not even quite sure that she was aware of his existence on earth.

And the day arrived when he took the only train that was not on the girl's itinerary. He had to be back home next day and had at last abandoned hope.

Crawford was a bit slow getting off the train at his home city and was the last to get a taxi.

As he drew up to the familiar gate on Second avenue, he was hardly conscious that a second taxi had immediately preceded his.

The front door was still ajar when he bounded onto the porch and plenty of feminine chatter greeted him. Apparently some one had unexpectedly arrived and the event was joyfully received.

He popped his head through the door to see his pet sister and some one in a most familiar suit, clasped in each other's arms.

"What ho!" laughed Crawford, "not a word of welcome to her brother." He stood by not quite believing his own senses.

"Oh, Dickey, I was so excited at seeing Joyce—" she turned then and gave him a sisterly hug and kiss, "that I forgot you were to be on the same train that brought her. You've heard me speak often of Joyce Kimble—well this is she—Joyce, this is Dick."

Of course, brother Dick nearly passed out during that moment when the girl's hand lay well within his own and the curiously glowing eyes gave him a complete glance, but he managed to make a show of common sense.

"I hope she has come to make a long stay," he said calmly to sister Jane, "I fancy this chum of yours already. Do you know," he added turning direct to Joyce, "I believe I saw you come in a Chinese restaurant in New York. Were you perchance—?"

"And I don't know whether you have a thousand dollars," she said demurely, "or perchance I merely fancy that I saw you in every train, hotel—"

"I'll just go and see that everything's all right," put in sister Jane. "Everything's all right already," said Dick with a most deliberate look at Joyce, who blushed in a most satisfactory way.

There May be Poison in YOUR Bowels!

STEP out tomorrow morning with the fresh buoyancy and briskness that comes from a clean intestinal tract. Syrup Pepsin—a doctor's prescription for the bowels—will help you do this. This compound of fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other pure ingredients will clean you out thoroughly—without griping, sickening or discomfort.

Poisons absorbed into the system form souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commend it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drug store all.

Will Wood's Lament

Washington, September 19.—Under the above caption, the New York Evening World editorially says:

"The effectiveness of the extraordinarily careful publicity work of the Democratic National Committee is frequently attested by the rather fearful complaint of Will Wood, speaking for the administration. The burden of his lament is that from the moment the Hoover administration began, the publicity department of the Democratic committee began to inform the public almost daily of the proceedings in Washington. Because these proceedings have so clearly disclosed the limitation of the President and the mockery of the campaign pledges, Mr. Wood would have us believe that Mr. Hoover has been 'slandered.'

"There has been nothing but the recording of the facts, but this has been done more extensively and intensively than ever before. There lies the outrage."

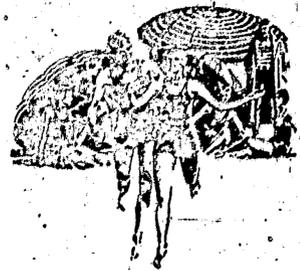

The Mississippi water level, the lowest in 70 years. Many tributaries of the "Father of Waters" have dried up.

What could induce the President to "take the stump" in October unless he shared the general belief that his Tom Thumt spokesman had fooled out?

The rag weeds crop will be light this year and hay fever sufferers will endure less punishment. So the drought has done some good, in addition to wrecking the Republican party.

Republicans have become terribly thin-skinned all at once, after all these years of feeding suckling babes with a decoction labeled "Cleveland's Panie of 1893," they display poor sportsmanship in resenting similar, and just, criticisms. The stickens have come home to roost.

CARRIZOZO, N. M. . . . . V. REIL, Prop.

Family Reunion

The Kilgore clan gathered at the home of the aged mother, Senia Kilgore, at Ancho, last Friday night. Six sons were present, to-wit: Tom Kilgore, Ancho; R H (and wife) and J. D. Kilgore, Alamogordo; J A and L M Kilgore, Fort Worth, Texas, and J. E. Kilgore, Houston, Georgia. The Georgia son was the only one to remain at the old-home-stead, and this was his first venture west, 42 years having elapsed since he had seen mother or brothers. The different members left for their respective homes Sunday.

Bean Crop Short

The bean farmers in the section between Nogal Hill and the Little Creek region now realize, at harvest time, what the bean beetle did to them. Lack of moisture at the proper time, played a part in cutting the crop short, but the big damage was done by the beetle, which cut short and damaged the yield of the most promising fields in that area. In other sections of the county, notably around Corona, the ravages of the beetle are said to have been missing, and where there was sufficient moisture a fair crop will be harvested. In the Mesa section, mentioned above, the crop will be cut to about one-third of what it was last year. Instead of something like three-quarters of a million pounds produced in 1929, growers there say the same area this year will do well if one-quarter of a million pounds are harvested. The bean beetle, therefore, has been a valuable assistant to the farm board—he cut down production.

Importance of After-Dinner Sweets

By NELLIE MAXWELL

Down the sun-kissed beach of memory The dream ship floats upon the bay. You step aboard and drift away. At the call of a voice yesterday.

A DINNER without a sweet of some form, whether it be frozen cream or pastry, seems unfinished and unsatisfactory. With the useless refrigerators there are so many delightful dishes that may be prepared with little work.

Maglo Ice.

Dissolve one package of lemon gelatin in a pint of boiling water, or any light colored fruit juice strained from fruit may be used for half of the water. Add when cool one pint of seeded green grapes and set away to chill and become firm. When serving remove by spoonfuls into sherbet glasses. The irregular mass looks like ice and tastes most delicious. Top with whipped cream if desired more stylish.

Coffee Strup.

For iced coffee, egg-nogs and various drinks, the coffee strup will be found most desirable. To one pound of coffee add one and three-fourths quarts of boiling water. Clear and strain and add three and one-half pounds of sugar; boil two minutes and bottle in tightly sealed sterilized bottles. Then it is ready for use as needed.

Tropical Salad.

With a vegetable cutter make balls from ripe canteloupe or watermelon that is fairly firm in texture. Peel and slice oranges to make twelve slices, tomatoes to make six. Place one slice of tomato and two slices of orange on lettuce on each plate and arrange several melon balls on each. Garnish with green pepper cut into fancy shapes, or finely chopped. Serve with any desired dressing.

Banana Ice Cream.

Crush two junket tablets, dissolve in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Mix one cupful of sugar with three cupfuls of milk and one cupful of mashed banana. Add the junket tablets to the milk warmed to lukewarm, then stir the sugar until dissolved and add banana with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one cupful of cream. Pack in ice and salt and freeze.

The Children's Corner Edited by DOROTHY EDMONDS

THE RUBY KING

Angle swung merrily on the old white gate of Squire Edmonds' big rambling farm house. As she swung to and fro, she spied some one advancing along the road. He was a young lad in buckskin clothes. He carried a stick over one shoulder and Angle knew that the little bag at one end carried all his few belongings. She had seen such young men pass the Four Corners many times and had eagerly listened to the tales they told of frontier life. Angle greatly admired those frontier folk, so as the stranger

"Thanks," he said. I asked at a good many houses back there, but no one else offered me a drop. I had had luck in that town anyway," he went on seriously, "you see, last night I went for a walk around the square and when I came back and looked for my pouch of money, I couldn't find it anywhere."

"Lost," Angle exclaimed, her eyes growing bigger.

"Sure as I sit here under this elm! It was lost alright. So I had to do without my supper and my breakfast, and here I am thirty miles from home."

"What a kind little Miss you are! How old are you?"

"Ten," replied Angle.

"My," he said thoughtfully, "my little sis is just that age." Her name's Martha Washington Hendricks, we call her Maggy. My name's Daniel Boone Hendricks," he continued proudly. Then he went on to tell her of his home, a rude log affair in the forest where his father had cleared away the trees. They had been very poor for a long time and he, Daniel, had been allowed to take the furs of animals he had trapped to the city to try to earn some money. How disappointed they would all be now, when he came home with no furs and with no money either! "But I ought to be grateful for meeting you," he said suddenly to Angle. "And now I must be getting on my way for I have far to go."

Jumping up, he fumbled in his pocket for a long time without speaking. Angle wondered if he had suddenly remembered what might have happened to his money pouch. But no, he brought forth a tiny something wrapped in paper and offered it to Angle.

"I found this on the square this morning," he said, "just as I was leaving. I was going to take it home to Martha Washington, but you've been so good to me, I want you to have it instead." With that he was gone and Angle, unwrapping the package found the very thing she had wanted for a long time, a lovely ruby ring! She was busy looking at it and admiring it when just then she heard the voices of Grandfather and Mother who had just returned from Philadelphia. She ran around to the corner of the house where they were. Mother kissed her and then folded her in her arms.

"Has Angle been good today?" she asked.

"Yes," was Angle's reply.

"We had a lovely gift for you, Angeline," said Grandfather, "but your old Grandfather is not to be trusted any more with valuables. I lost it this morning not ten minutes after I bought it. It was a ruby ring, my child, the loveliest one in Philadelphia."

"Why here it is, Grandie," sang Angle. "Here is my very own ring!" And she told them all about Daniel Boone Hendricks and how he had given her the ring because she had been kind to him, and so surprised were Grandfather and Mother that they could only look first at each other and then at Angle, saying between chuckles, "Well, did you ever hear of such a thing? That is certainly wonderful luck!"

neared the gate, she waited in anticipation.

"Good afternoon, Missy," he said, doffing his coonskin cap. "Don't know of a place whereabouts where I could get a drink of water, do you?"

"I'll be glad to get you a nice, cool drink if you'll wait here," Angle offered, hopping down from the gate. And when she returned with the dipper of water the young lad drained it thirstily.

"My, you must be hungry," Angle said. "I'll try to get you something." With a flash, Angle was off again for the house, and into the kitchen, and in less time than it takes to tell it she was back again with a paper napkin, bulging with a sandwich, cake and other goodies.

"The hungry stranger ate as if he hadn't tasted food for much longer than one night. "Thanks a lot, little Missy," he said when he had finished

Investing the Insurance Money

By JEAN NEWTON

"DEAR Miss Newton: "I have been married for 15 years and during all that time," writes one woman, "I have skipped and saved on the altar of the future. Since bringing up a family of three children in these days doesn't allow you very wide margins, we are still saving. And I'm beginning to wonder if it's all worth while."

"You see people who never put away a dollar for a rainy day getting along just as well. Things seem to break so they get through just the same. When you see those who have sacrificed the little luxuries and pleasures all their lives to save for security in their old age, dying young and leaving their hard-earned savings to the indolent and the extravagant, you can't help wondering whether those who spend as they earn and take in every possible pleasure of the present without worrying about the future, haven't got the right idea."

"We are living self-respectingly and are not wanting for anything. But when I realize that with the saving item on our budget we could run a little car, that with what my husband pays for insurance I could have a first-class maid, I question the wisdom of so mortgaging the present, which is a certainty, for problematical future needs. What do you think about it, Jean Newton?" I think that by the time the lady sees this answer to her letter she will overcome the mood which prompted it. She will not have to think very hard to realize that for every person who provides for his future and then has to leave his savings for others to "blow in," hundreds who have neglected to provide for their future suffer in consequence, shame, humiliation, discomfort and want all the way to starvation.

Almost daily the papers tell, in such terms as the suicide of the elderly man who has lost his job, the tale of misery brought on by imprudence. People who spend as they earn, living up to and beyond their means with no thought except for the day's pleasure, always live to regret this. If you know one who gets away with it he or she is the exception, not the rule.

No woman in her right mind will sacrifice the substance of her husband's and children's security by diverting their saving item into running a little car. No woman whose mental vision is straight would consider insurance money, which safeguards the future of herself and three children, in terms of something nice it would buy for today. However, I am not worried for the mother who has written the above letter. Her record of 15 years proves that she does see straight. It does us all good to "let off steam" once in a while when we get tired.

The Motive for Defense Mechanisms

By M. K. THOMSON, PH. D.

DEFENSE mechanism is the term the psychoanalysts use to denote a very common mental trait which leads every person to cover up some humiliating experience, some stigma. The man who is humiliated by being abnormally small in stature will compensate and defend his pride by assuming a dignified attitude far beyond normal and a deep bass voice that is supposed to belong to a man of very large stature.

Any stigma of race, of physical, mental or moral trait is compensated for in this way as a means of self-defense. The same defect in another person is most severely criticized and quite unconsciously.

Recently the manager of a department store was convicted of fraud and of stealing from the company. It was observed that he had been the most successful in dealing with the clerks who had been caught stealing.

There is no end to illustrations of this type of conduct. Defense mechanism serves to explain many queer acts, especially the acts that are exaggerated and out of proportion to the situation.

We rightly suspect the man who is abnormally intolerant of some human frailty. It is a pretty good sign that he suffers from the same defect.

The motive for defense mechanism is obvious. It is merely the conscious and mostly the unconscious effort to cover up some deformity or defect which the individual thinks stands in his way of getting the social recognition he craves. It is an attempt to forget an unpleasant trait or experience, to compensate for it by exaggeration of some other desirable characteristic and in denouncing the stigma in others in order to disarm suspicion and reproach.

SLEEVES FEATURE OF FASHION; MILLINERS TURN TO VELVET

HAVING victoriously passed through the sleeveless age, fashion's followers are now entering the sleeved era. Such a medley of sleeve ideas as the advance styles for fall and winter are ushering in! Leg of mutton sleeves on the way, "angel sleeves" to grace the evening gown, sleeves which begin to widen below the elbow, sleeves of elbow length which flare over lace, lingerie or embroidfur trimming is arranged so as to accent the lower part of the sleeve, sometimes to an exaggerated degree. Frequently the puff which reaches from elbow to wrist is made of flat fabriclike fur matching the huge collar.

To Be Velvet Season.

According to the shadows which coming millinery events are casting before, it is going to be "all ered sleevelets, and listen to this: the erstwhile sans-sleeve décolleté dinner gowns are taking unto themselves sleeves.

This revival of sleeves is especially emphasized in connection with the new all-over lace frocks, for lace continues to be a favorite theme for the dinner gown.

A lavishness of detail is centered on the long close-fitting sleeves of dinner gowns made of monotone chiffon and other similar materials. This elaboration usually begins at or below the elbow, the lower portion being intricately worked with beads. Frequently, fluting panels are attached at the elbow, lending a most picturesque aspect to the silhouette.

velvet" for fashion's followers this season. At any rate, velvet is having its day, not only in relation to suits and frocks but the milliners are especially enthusiastic in regard to velvet for fall and winter.

Designers working with velvet are striving for the unique, and consequently they are manipulating it with an originality which gives it a refreshingly new aspect. The whole scheme of things is "different" from the actual handling of the material itself to the very pose of the hat on the head, not forgetting the new "lines" and colorings as expressed in terms of velvet.

Perhaps the most striking note sounded for early fall (some there are

A favorite type is the sleeve which distinguishes the youthful afternoon dress in the picture. This charming frock is fashioned of faille silk in one of the lovely green tones. Cream georgette is employed for the lower part of the sleeves, with embroidery and applique done in matching green. as shown to the right in the picture. This style-wise young woman is wearing a beret of dainty white velvet which is shirred and draped as only a milliner-born can do.

The swanky cap-fitting model centered to the left is part of black felt and part of white velvet. Each of these little chapeaux is designed to set back on the head so as to "show your curls and look pretty."

When it comes to "style" the model at the top has it. In draping the black velvet, the designer has kept in mind the trend to wide effects at the sides.

The last hat in this group is fashioned entirely of wide sapphire blue velvet ribbon. Fashion is also highlighting the black velvet hat with a touch of turquoise blue.

JONAH: THE NARROW NATIONALIST REBUKED

LESSON TEXT—Jonah 3:1-5, 10; 4:1-11

GOLDEN TEXT—And Peter opened his mouth, and said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him."

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Love for All the World.

UNION TOPIC—God's Love for All the World.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What is True Patriotism?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Patriotism and World Brotherhood.

In teaching this lesson it will be necessary to sweep into view the entire Book of Jonah.

I. Jonah's Call and Commission (Ch. 1:1, 2).

Jonah, a Jew, was called to go and preach repentance to a Gentile city, (Gen. 12:1, 2). The story of Jonah graphically portrays the history of Israel as a nation. God separated Israel to be the channel through which his mercy and salvation are to be carried to all nations. They, like Jonah, have been recreant to duty. Because of this, God has caused them to be swallowed up by the nations which will one day spew them out upon dry ground—Palestine. After severe chastisement, they will discharge their obligation, and the nations through their ministry will repent and turn to God.

II. Jonah's Flight From Duty (1:3).

He turned his back upon God and attempted to flee from his presence. In the same way Israel has become an apostate people.

III. Jonah's Correction (1:4-2:10).

1. Overtaken by a storm (v. 4). Trouble soon came upon the disobedient servant of God. So with the Jews, misfortune after misfortune have overtaken them because they turned from God. They are now tossed about by the surging of the nations.

2. Cast overboard (v. 15). In their perplexity the sailors cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah. According to his own direction they cast him overboard. God had prepared a great fish which swallowed him.

3. Jonah's deliverance (Ch. 2).

Jonah in his affliction turned to God and prayed (James 5:13). God miraculously preserved him while in the belly of the fish, and he has miraculously preserved Israel in the heart of the nations. The fish could not digest Jonah, neither can the nations digest Israel. Jonah repented while in the fish. So Israel will repent as they go into the great tribulation. God made the fish to vomit out Jonah. So he will at the proper time cause the nations to cast out Israel.

IV. Jonah's Commission Renewed (Ch. 3).

His experience made him willing to do God's bidding.

1. His field (v. 3).

He was to go to Nineveh, a large city, the people of which were cruel. Israel's field is the Gentile nations.

2. His message (v. 4).

He was instructed to "preach the preaching" commanded by God. Forty days were given to the people in which to repent. God's supreme desire is that all should repent (II Peter 3:9). This message represents the heart of God in his dealing with sinners.

3. Repentance of the Ninevites (vv. 5-9).

(1) They believed God (v. 5). They believed that God was speaking to them through Jonah about their sins, and was announcing impending judgment.

(2) They proclaimed a fast (vv. 5-9). The king and people joined sincerely in this movement. They put on sackcloth, the sign of penitence.

(3) They reasoned that God would repent (v. 9).

The sending to them of a prophet encouraged them to believe that God would show mercy if they repented.

V. Jonah's Behavior (Jonah 4:1-11).

1. He repines at God's action (vv. 1-3).

He now makes known the real reason for his flight from duty. He knew that the gracious God would spare the people who repented. The treatment of the Israelites at the hands of the Ninevites was such that Jonah did not want God to forgive them. We have here a case of a preacher of repentance mortified when the people repent and are pardoned.

2. God reproves Jonah (vv. 4-11).

By means of the gourd God showed him his error. This closing scene affords a striking example of the patience and pity of God in contrast with the hard-heartedness of man.

INDIA AND ITS PEOPLES

By Capt. L. R. Claud Robinson

INDIA UNDER WATER

IN THE rainy season—June to October—the plains of Bengal present a remarkable spectacle. In the eastern part of the province the whole land is under water, but water from which spring wonderful crops of jute and rice, transforming the whole country into a vast field of emerald green. Villages have the appearance of small islands set in a vivid green sea. The houses almost buried in dense clumps of shady trees—mango, banana, palm and bamboo—are supported on artificial foundations raised a foot or two above the usual level of the monsoon floods.

Small boats with varied colored sails move over the great expanses of the rivers. Indian children in, curious little improvised boats of clay, paddle themselves around on the creeks which cut into the village sites. One may witness the strange phenomenon of a boat sailing across a field of jute or rice. These crops grow in varying depths of water, usually several feet and in some cases, where there are depressions in the surface of the land, up to 15 feet and more. It has been recorded that as fast as the water rises the stalks grow, so that the ear is never immersed in water. Such crops are reaped in boats, but ordinarily the men of eastern Bengal spend the day waist deep in water.

This cultivated land remains under water for as much as five months of the year, so that, since most of the harvesting is done under these conditions, man becomes an amphibian. Yet curiously enough, the Indian seems to dislike getting his head wet, and I have seen men up to their arms in water, clad only with a loofa cloth and wearing large circular pleated bamboo hats to keep off the rain.

In eastern Bengal rivers form the highways, and in the monsoon season innumerable smaller channels take the place of country lanes. This is the most convenient season for travel. The heat and moisture are oppressive, and the insect life, vast in number and bewildering in variety, is a constant source of exasperation, but one may move freely wherever one wishes, for water, the medium of travel, is universal.

The scene through which one passes, though monotonous at times, has a peculiar charm, for seldom can one see elsewhere so glorious a variety of shades of green. Little can be seen of the dwellings of the Indians, owing to the density of the jungle that surrounds them. A cultivator's house consists often enough of a number of semi-detached sheds of wattle, built round and opening onto a courtyard. The big man of the village may have a more substantial residence of brick. Sometimes the force of the rain is so great that the mud homes of the natives are washed away.

JUNGLE THRILLS

THE Indian jungle is both beautiful and fascinating, but it also has its discomforts. I have vivid recollections of a long night's vigil. A panther had killed a goat on the edge of a small clearing. A friend and I rode out from camp, 15 miles on horseback. Leaving our horses in a village nearby, as the sun was setting, we climbed into a tree not very far from where the dead goat still lay. The sun sank and the short Indian twilight descended with a curious hush on the land.

Soon the silence was broken by the strange noises of the jungle. Mosquitoes buzzed around us and bit relentlessly. Pea fowl, with their absurdly pompous gait, strutted to the water of a neighboring pool. Parrots screamed and swooped from tree to tree. Suddenly, just as dusk was turning to darkness, a blurred outline appeared for a moment in the undergrowth 20 yards away. Immediately the sounds of jungle life ceased, and then altogether unexpectedly there broke out on all sides a wild chorus of jabbering. The branches above our heads were wildly jerked and shaken; heavy bodies seemed to be hurling themselves from tree to tree. They were, of course, monkeys, and for an hour or more they chattered and jumped and jibbered, exhibiting in the very frenzy of their outcries the fierce hatred for their hereditary enemy that preyed upon them.

As for ourselves, we knew for the time being that hope was dead. We stretched our cramped limbs and scratched our bitten hands and necks until we were nearly mad with irritation. But at last silence came once more. A faint light from the moon trickled through the branches. Tense and not daring even to whisper or move, we strained our eyes to the farthest visible distance.

Yet when the panther put in his appearance again, we neither of us saw him come. His movements were absolutely noiseless, and not until he was actually on top of the goat's body did we realize his presence. He was so close that it would have been difficult to miss, and my companion, who we had agreed was to be the first, shot him. We carried him back in triumph—15 miles in the dark on the back of my protesting horse.

Eldorado for Jobless

Old coins, semiprecious stones and irregular pieces of metal found in increasing numbers at Tokyo, Japan, may turn the city's "back yard" into an Eldorado for the unemployed. It all started when a man out of work happened to be wandering over a large tract of land which has been reclaimed by the city since the earthquake and which will be used for factories. The man found about a dollar's worth of coins the first day and twice that amount the next. The news spread rapidly and a miniature gold rush started before the city authorities stepped in and divided up the land for exploitation by the jobless.

The explanation is that the land used for the reclaiming project was taken from districts which were swept by fire following the earthquake of 1923 and which were made over for the construction of roads and parks. Countless pieces of money and other valuables were left by the flames and never recovered. These are now being dug up after being transported to their new location. The record find to date in the exploited area is a semiprecious stone which used to be part of a ring and which the finder sold for $25.

Early Peddlers

Elderly New Englanders living in the rural sections like to recall the old tin-peddler's carts which appeared at their doors every so often with pans and kitchenware. Those earlier day itinerants were invariably shrewd yet kindly Yankees who gave good values and made friends wherever they went.

Although generally called tin peddlers, they carried a large assortment of miscellaneous household utilities. From door to door they moved, collecting old magazines, rags, lead pipe and other marketable metals, giving from their stock in exchange. The carts opened from the sides to display the articles carried.

Skis to Scotland in Summer

In the exchange of school children between nations of Europe during summer vacation a party of German school boys were recently sent to Kilsyth, Scotland. Expecting to find snow-capped mountains, instead of the sun-baked fields, the lads took skis with them.

Children's handkerchiefs often look hopeless when they come to the laundry. Wash with good soap, rinse in water with Red Cross Ball Blue, Adv.

Some persons simply cannot save a dollar; and it is doubly unfortunate if they are men.

When a cynic feels benevolent, he doubts his feelings; at any rate he analyzes them.

Take half a teaspoonful of KRUSCHEN SALTS in a glass of hot water every morning—do not overeat and in 3 weeks get on the scales and note how many pounds of fat have vanished. Notice also that you have gained in energy—your skin is clearer—your eyes sparkle with glorious health—you feel younger in body—keener in mind. KRUSCHEN will give any fat person a joyous surprise. Get an 85c bottle of KRUSCHEN SALTS (lasts 4 weeks). If even this first bottle doesn't convince you this is the easiest, safest and surest way to lose fat—if you don't feel a superb improvement in health—so gloriously energetic—vigorously alive—your money gladly returned. Leading druggists all over the world are selling lots of Kruschen Salts.

Untraveled Clergymen

To have lived within 210 miles of the Atlantic ocean for a lifetime without seeing it is an experience that comes to few in these days of automobiles. Yet fifteen of the seventeen Vermont clergymen who attended the New England rural church workers' conference near Old Orchard, Maine, had never seen the sea, says the Boston Globe.

New Form of Ice

A nonmelting "ice" invented by Max Heinrich Gurth which has been used for skating purposes in Germany was recently demonstrated in New York city. "Opal ice," as it is called, is made by adding hot water to a secret chemical composition. The ice is not cold and, of course, cannot be used for refrigerating purposes.

This Regulated Age

Cop—Let me see your license. Autolot—Marriage, car, driver's, fishing, dog, hunting or bulider's license?

Big Enough to Hit

It is pointed out that aviation has made the world smaller. This is true, but still you can't fall and miss it—life.

The Test

He—'I'll do anything for you. She—Get two tickets for the symphony and take my mother.

Prices

"Have you a nickel watch?" "No; our lowest price on watches is $1."

If our friends will count 10 before they speak, it will give us a chance to say all we want before they begin.

Others don't want you to be "useful" to them; they want you to admire and like them.

There is much comfort to be got out of the thought that nobody is perfect and not much in trying to be.

A big word may attract attention to your thought when a little word won't.

Among other evils folly has also this, that it is always beginning to live.—Seneca.

The man who has been fooled twice by the same woman is hopeless.

Self control is often just "What's the use?"

A word to the wise is sufficient; and to the timid, a mere scowl is.

Scandal continues to be the fashionable society game.

"I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at Change of Life. Now I take it every spring and fall and it keeps me in good health. I am able to take care of an eight-room house and garden at the age of 71 years. I will praise the Vegetable Compound wherever I go for it is a wonderful medicine for women. They should give it a good trial by taking about five bottles."—Mrs. Clara Riley.

"I was very nervous and rundown and weighed less than one hundred pounds. I felt tired and weak and I often had to lie down. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I read the advertisement in the paper. Now I eat well, sleep well, and have good color. In fact, I couldn't feel any better and I weigh one hundred fifty-five pounds. I am glad to answer letters from any woman who wants to know more about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Bertha Stephens.

Glencoe Woman's Club

Mrs. B. J. Bonnell was hostess to the Glencoe Woman's Club, Saturday September 6th. The subject of the occasion was Better Community Schools and Mrs. Werner, was leader. Installation of officers was an important part of the Club's program and members voted for a thirty minute period to be devoted to the study of conversational Spanish during the winter. October 4th the Club will meet with Mrs. Fryer and Mrs. Tally will be the leader.

Improving Apartments

The Phipps' Apartments are undergoing improvements, in the nature of an additional room, the installation of bath room, toilets, etc, in fact, when completed, the apartments will have every modern convenience. A constant demand for this character of apartment insures tenants and a good return on the investment.

Death Claims Mrs. Lutz

Mrs. Matilda Lutz died early Sunday morning at the family home, following a lengthy illness. Funeral services were held in the Catholic church Thesday afternoon, Fr. Mitchell officiating. A large concourse of friends assembled at the church and followed the remains to the local cemetery, where the last sad rites were performed.

Mrs. Lutz was born in Bavaria province, Germany, December 11, 1865. Married to Henry Lutz Oct. 22, 1890 by Judge O'Brien at Plaza Hotel, Las Vegas, N. M. Came to New Mexico forty-one years ago, and Lincoln county has been her home almost from the time she landed in America. A husband, Henry Lutz, two daughters, Mrs. Oscar Bamberger, Amarillo, Texas, Miss Belle Lutz, who was the constant companion of her mother during the latter's long illness, and a son, Henry Lutz, Jr., Roswell, to all of whom the deepest sympathy of the entire county is extended.

An accomplished musician and a charming woman, Mrs. Lutz took and held a prominent part in the early social life in Lincoln county, which ceased only when impaired health caused a cessation in those activities. Many early citizens recall with pleasure her lovable qualities, her capacity for entertaining, when this county was a frontier, and her charming personality. Throughout this county a host of friends bow their heads in sorrow.

Ft. Stanton News

Mr. and Mrs. Gylling entertained a group of young folks Sunday night at a six o'clock dinner in honor of their daughter Genevieve who will have a birthday soon. The table was beautifully decorated and a lovely dinner, consisting of fried chicken, candied sweet potatoes and many other nice things that go with a meal of this kind, finished off with orange ice and delicious cake. Those partaking of their hospitality were: Mary Ellen Sellars, Lee Sundt Spicklemeyer, Frank Fagot, Virginia Fagan, Billie Cavanaugh, Inez Brockwell. Betty and Marguerite Gylling made charming waitresses in their tiny white caps and aprons. It was one of the nicest parties ever in Fort Stanton.

Miss Gene Brockwell was operated on Monday for appendicitis. At this writing she is doing as well as could be expected.

Mr. Eric Williams was a visitor Saturday and Sunday in El Paso.

Mr. Daniel Gomes is spending a well earned vacation from his duties as orderly; with friends at San Patricio and Carrizozo.

Mrs. Susan L. Berry and daughter Jean departed for Albuquerque Saturday where Miss Jean enters for another years work.

Mr. Fred Wasey has returned from an extended visit to relatives in the south and east. Some six weeks ago he accompanied the remains of patient Jack Ranier to Pittsburg, Pa., for burial.

Mr. Fred Chavez is confined to his home with a severe attack of tonsillitis.

Mrs. Grace Burleson accompanied by her son Tomle and Mrs. Ellen C. Sellars spent Friday the guests of friends in San Patricio, Finnie and Hondo.

The children are all planning costume for a Halloween party to be given at the Community House by the Rev. Mr. Smith some time in October.
