HOARDED MILLIONS SEEN AS KEY TO PROSPERITY
(Collyer's Sport Sheet)

Governmental, state and city agencies throughout the United States are preparing to give aid to the jobless and moneyless during the next few months. And in this laudable enterprise the whole country will aid with all the enthusiasm and generosity possible.

In the meantime many plans and theories are being exploited to bring to an end the great industrial depression that has fallen on this country—as well as on the whole world.

Strange to say the real cause of the so-called panic has been given but little consideration and none of the schemes for ending it have approached the correct solution.

Business must always be conducted on a gold basis—yet two nations, the United States and France, have cornered almost the entire gold supply of the world and diverted it from the arteries of commerce.

This country has almost FRIVE BILLION DOLLARS in gold hoarded at Washington—the greatest frozen asset the world has ever known. France has approximately $2,000,000,000 in gold.

If all this gold were put back into circulation the financial depression in this country at least, would vanish almost in a night. This fact is well known to the international bankers, who for months have worked to secure its release.

But the United States is not primarily interested in world commerce. It has a critical situation at home to deal with. All over the land people are jobless, are losing their homes through foreclosures. Businesses that ordinarily pay fine profits are idle because of lack of funds.

Here is a plan that would bring back prosperity to this country and still leave all this gold in the United States:

Let the Treasury of the United States issue script against one billion dollars worth of this gold—placing the Federal Reserve banks and make it "Easy to Get" by the deserving needy, not in the way of charity but as loans, secured either by property or the promise of the borrower to repay the loan in money or its equivalent—even by work.

Let the Government issue script against another billion dollars in gold to actually start work on the Deep Waterway from Chicago to the Gulf. The issue more script for the purchase of land that cannot be farmed with profit at prevailing prices and under existing conditions. On these additions to the public domain let work start at once on re-forestation plans—relieving the acute lumber shortage. Lumber at present is almost as high as it ever has been.

The result is that building of homes is restricted.

By issuing script, as suggested above, all the gold at Washington would remain in this country. But it would be put to work.

Most of this gold accumulated as a result of the war, repayments of loans and interest on the war debts. Taking it from its legitimate function has resulted in business paralysis.

Other countries are trying to wangle back this gold. Why not keep it—even if we cancel the war debts altogether. Let other countries work out their own problems. If three billion dollars were put to work in this country business would boom as never before. Wages would remain at levels that would permit toilers a high standard of living, and many luxuries.

Why gamble on Europe? Why hoard gold at Washington when it could be put to work to revive industry?

Give the people of this country the chance to earn three billion dollars the next two years and the present depression would end and its departure would not leave even a headache.

Are You Satisfied WITH CONDITIONS?

It's up to every voter in New Mexico, man or woman, to answer for himself or herself that question. As the voters go to the polls next week that is the one factor they have to consider. It is up to them to strip from the campaign utterances and campaign propaganda all of the camouflage, all of the trivial, inconsequential things that have been injected into the campaign and determine the exact facts.

Let the facts speak for themselves

The Democratic party urges each voter to weigh only the facts—not the whisperings, not the insinuations, not the mud-coated utterances of irresponsible maligners—just the facts.

With all of the explanations, alibis and apologies which it has been forced to make during this campaign, the Republican party has failed to disprove the real facts—facts which are serious charges against the Republican administration.

They have been forced to admit that:

Your taxes have gone up 40 per cent
Your state's expenditures have jumped 60 per cent

Your business conditions are "depressed"
Your prices for products gone down
Your chances for employment—even at lower wages, are small

Are You Satisfied With Those Conditions?

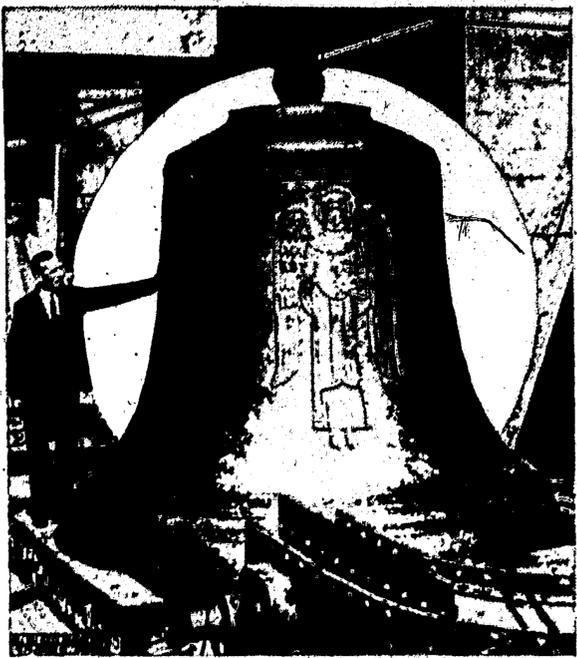

If you are, Vote the Republican ticket

If you aren't, Vote the Democratic ticket

But Before You Vote Look Squarely at the Facts

KEEP HOME FRESH AND LOVELY

By JEAN NEWTON

A DIVAN in the parlor is worth two benches in the park and the very foundations of the American home are threatened by the father who refuses to replace the old horse-hair sofa in his living room.

That was the pronouncement made by one of the delegates to a convention of furniture dealers recently held in New York.

"Things have come to a pretty pass," he said, "when the American girl has to entertain her suitors in a cabaret, just because the proper facilities are lacking in her home. Indeed, if the furniture is right, the daughter will be content to do her loving at home."

"The Jazz age," continued this editorially minded furniture dealer to his colleagues in convention assembled, "has not died, and there is work for all of us. If every mother could see the advantage of creating a proper home atmosphere—by means of furniture—she need never worry about the whereabouts of her daughter."

While I have absolutely no interest in nor even a slight leaning towards the furniture business (1) it must be admitted that there is something to his appeal to "change the old horse-hair sofa." While the motives of this canny business man were not entirely unselfish, his reminder of the importance of charm in the home by means of its furnishings is an important one for many of us.

There are many homes in which "the old horse-hair sofa" or something

just as bad, having become a habit, is consciously noticed by those who are spending a large part of their lives in association with it. But whether they know it or not, a refurnishing and freshening up of the home would make a very noticeable difference in their disposition and mental attitude when they are at home.

While some women manifest a need for excitement in a too frequent and extravagant change and discarding of their home furnishings, it is no less true that countless housewives, preoccupied with the daily routine of their busy lives, are oblivious to the fact that they are every day looking upon and living in a flat or ugly setting when they can well afford to make the changes which would make as much of a difference in their outlook as if they were to move from a home facing the disorder of docks or rubbish heaps to a boulevard on a park.

Frequently the necessary freshening and refurnishing involves the expenditure of little in money, and can be accomplished by a little changing here and freshening there that is made possible by attention and thought and perhaps a clever needle.

To a certain extent it is a matter of attitude and attention—this keeping the home fresh and lovely, which is so important not only for the purpose which the gentleman we have quoted refers to, keeping the young people at home, but for its restful and pleasurable value to every person in the home, including the woman who spends more time there than any one else. Take an impersonal look at your living room!

DON'T WONDER ABOUT IT

By Douglas Malloch.

CAN'T have it fine, this world of mine.

Fine always, that I know, So I just let the old sun shine, And let the old sun go, And day or night, Or dark or light.

Don't wonder that it's so, Folk aren't fair, not always square, Not always kind and true, And I don't always speak with care, Myself the whole day through; So, when they try, To hurt me, I Don't wonder that they do.

But friends regret, so I forget, Forgive them for their ill, I know that they'll be sorry yet, The sun will climb the hill, When for awhile Life falls to smile, Don't wonder if it will.

THE POP-EYED YOOK

By Hugh Hutton (Author of Natty Natural History)

FOR our lesson today we have before us a mono-theistic, rapidly vibrating biped, a native of the Hawaiian islands found principally in the vicinity of Waikei. Its classification is difficult, but is generally supposed to be related to the West African Tom Tom and Jersey Kowbell. It differs from monkeys in that it cannot learn anything new, and, having no ears, its singing is incredibly off key. The Yooks are carried as pets by the amorous youth of our country, but many are cruelly annihilated annually by irate parents and neighbors.

Two fiberg and a broken half of another one are used for the head, body, and skirt of this creature. The feet are split peanuts and the hands split beans attached to the body with toothpick arms and legs. A spaghetti tail, macaroni monkey cap, and popcorn eyes and nose complete the construction of this curious beast.

SOME HINTS ABOUT DIET FOR CHILDREN

By NELLIE MAXWELL

A good mother does not hear the music of the dance, when her children cry.—From the German.

All foods given the child should be simple, well cooked and easy to digest as well as attractively served. The mother who teaches her child to like various kinds of food must taste and season them to be sure that they are palatable. Poor cooking and unattractive serving is often the cause of a child's lifelong dislike for certain good foods.

A well-balanced diet for a normal child will include the growth and bone and tooth building foods in the following daily amounts: One pint to one quart of milk, plain or in cooked dishes; two servings of fruit, fresh, as oranges, apples, bananas and lemons.

There should be two to three servings of vegetables, one root vegetable and one or more green vegetable, including a leafy one, served uncooked.

Nuts should be ground or served in butters for the younger children and meats in moderate quantities.

Cereals, breads and cereal products are needed to provide energy; these are important in the case of a rapidly growing adolescent boy, who needs more food than a grown man to supply his daily needs and build his body.

During adolescence children of both sexes need more food to supply the rapid growth. Too frequently girls develop a rickety appetite and the food must be tempting. Going without breakfast may be indulged by hearty, healthy adults, but never in a growing child; it is dangerous for both present and future health.

Citrus foods have a special advantage in the child's diet; they furnish needed food elements in a pleasing form. As drinks, desserts and salads and as flavoring for other foods, they hold a large place in the diet.

A glass of orange juice, given to a child who has a sour stomach, will relieve the trouble and is taken with pleasure.

A child susceptible to colds and similar affections will be built up in resistance by cod liver oil. A child from six to ten years will have the proper tooth and bone building material in one quart of milk, one egg, one-tenth of a head of lettuce, or its equivalent in cabbage, or celery; the juice of half a lemon and sufficient orange juice to make a cupful, with any desired amount of fresh, raw fruit or vegetables, if eaten daily.

For a child from ten to eighteen, the egg is increased to two, lettuce to one-fourth of a head, one lemon and orange juice to make two cupfuls, taken in two portions—one for breakfast and the second at dinner. Failure to gain weight usually means undernourishment. Malnutrition may be the result of several different causes, such as improper or insufficient food, diseased tonsils, adenoids, decayed teeth. Undernourishment may follow illness or poor health, caused by lack of rest, sleep or fresh air.

The symptoms of malnutrition are listlessness, nervousness, being fretful, tiring easily, drooping shoulders, rouseless sabbies, teeth poor.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY

WORLD WAR YARNS

by Lieut. Frank E. Hagan

A Joke on the President For sturdy hospitality, for unfailing courtesy, the honors must be awarded to men and women of Brittany.

They were the representatives of France who greeted President Wilson with a typically Gallic welcome in the salle de reception on Pier 2, at Brest.

For days before Wilson's arrival the enthusiastic Bretons made ready for his coming. Only one detail was lacking as the big moment drew near—they needed a special emblem to display which would be of peculiar significance to the President.

"Is there not something by which Monsieur Le President sets great store?" they asked.

"Sure," remarked a Yank stevedore working at the pier. "Show the President an elephant of some kind—it's the emblem of his political party."

The only elephant, or picture of one, in Brest was owned by the consul of Siam, the Bretons learned. That official was overjoyed to lend a flag of his native land. It presented a white elephant with gleaming tusks.

So the flag of Siam was hung in the salle de reception of Pier 2. The courteous Bretons smiled. They were ready to acclaim the President of one of their allies. Nothing was lacking to make the affair a huge success.

President Wilson was smiling, too, when he arrived. He walked into the reception room and the first thing he saw, in welcome, was the Siamese emblem. Also the emblem of the G. O. P.

Discretion Was the Better Part

Nowadays Alexander Woolcott, well-known New York dramatic critic, Franklin P. Adams, otherwise "F. P. A.," conductor of "The Conning Tower" in the New York World and Harold Ross, editor of the sprightly weekly journal, the New Yorker, say pretty much what they please in print, with none to say them nay. But there was a time when such "freedom of the press" was denied them.

Of course the newspaper men on the Stars and Stripes enjoyed considerable latitude in what they might print. They could kid the war, kid themselves for fighting in the war and kid the enemy for making it necessary to fight it. As for kidding the "higher-ups" and their tactics anybody over the rank of colonel, well—the chief of the censorship and press section of the general staff at General Pershing's headquarters at Chateau was the "big boss" of the Stars and Stripes, in a "purely supervisory" capacity, of course.

The Stars and Stripes was strong for streamer headlines, especially on the sports page. Here are some samples: "Russia Benched; No More Weak Hitters," "Huns May Request Walters on Kaiser" and, on April 19, "Big League Season Opens in Two Hemispheres." Came a night when Mr. Woolcott and Mr. Adams (for the first and last time) were entrusted with the make-up of the Stars and Stripes. They decided on a snappy page-one streamer, so—

But let Mr. Woolcott tell about it: "We spent the entire evening speculating on the wisdom of our running a seven column headline across the front page, which we felt would both heighten the fame of the Stars and Stripes and give fathomless emotional satisfaction to many of its humbler readers. The headline, which, for editorial reasons complicated by personal politeness, we decided after all not to run, was 'Pershing is a Big Siff.'"

Teutonic Humor

If you are one of those who think that the Teutonic temperament is stolid and incapable of humor, hear this tale of a German general which tickled the members of the A. E. F. immensely when the yarn passed around among them.

Their American allies were often a great trial to the Germans. For instance, the Austrian idea of war had for its background pomp, ceremony, and exaggerated chivalry. The Germans believed, and such notions belonged more to the Middle Ages than the modern era. Needless to say, the Austrian idea was quite different from the efficient, machine-like code of the Prussian system.

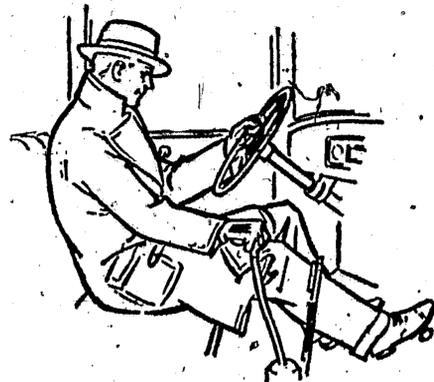

On one occasion when General Ludendorff went down to help the Austrians out of a mess, he was presented to a gorgeous Austrian field marshal. The Austrian smiled, saluted, bowed, and greeted his visitor with the usual salutation:

"Ich habe die Ehre." (I have the honor.) "Yah!" snapped the German. "Und ich habe die Arbeit." (And I have the work.)

Versatile Musician

Victor Herbert played the violin in an orchestra. His musical education was received in Germany; he became principal violoncello player in the court orchestra at Stuttgart, then soloist on the concert platform. In 1888, when twenty-seven years old, he became solo cello in the Metropolitan orchestra, New York city. In 1894 he organized his own orchestra.

Cold weather is motor-punishing weather... Now, more than ever, you need the extra protection of this DE-WAXED, EASY-STARTING OIL

In cold weather motors usually are hard to start, but Conoco Germ-Processed oil actually makes starting easier!

There are two good reasons for this.

First: Germ-Processed oil is thoroughly de-waxed and does not congeal at low temperatures; Second: Germ-Processed oil does not drain away during periods of motor idleness.

The initial "turning over" process is made easier by the protective lubricating film which is on duty before you touch the starter. The usual 40% to 60% of motor wear occurring during the starting period is greatly reduced. Conoco Germ-Processed Motor Oil gives you safe starting—and quick starting, even at zero temperatures.

Change now to this new oil. Use it all winter for motor safety and economy. You always will find Germ-Processed Motor Oil at stations bearing the Conoco Red Triangle.

Can't PLAY Can't REST —child needs Castoria

WHEN a child is fussy and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty safe sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will effectively help to regulate sluggish bowels in an older child. All druggists have Castoria; it's genuine if you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature and this name-plate!

Bell for Rockefeller New York Church

Here, with a six foot man standing beside it, is the largest of the 72 bells for the Riverside Baptist (Rockefeller) church in New York City. The bell is 10 feet 2 1/2 inches in diameter and weighs 20 1/2 tons. It is claimed that the ringing of this bell may be heard five miles away.

KEEP HOME FRESH AND LOVELY

By JEAN NEWTON

A DIVAN in the parlor is worth two benches in the park and the very foundations of the American home are threatened by the father who refuses to replace the old horse-hair sofa in his living room.

That was the pronouncement made by one of the delegates to a convention of furniture dealers recently held in New York.

"Things have come to a pretty pass," he said, "when the American girl has to entertain her suitors in a cabaret, just because the proper facilities are lacking in her home. Indeed, if the furniture is right, the daughter will be content to do her loving at home.

"The jazz age," continued this editorially minded furniture dealer to his colleagues in convention assembled, "has not died, and there is work for all of us. If every mother could see the advantage of creating a proper home atmosphere—by means of furniture—she need never worry about the whereabouts of her daughter."

"While I have absolutely no interest in nor even a slight leaning towards the furniture business (1) it must be admitted that there is something to his appeal to 'change the old horse-hair sofa.'" While the motives of this canny business man were not entirely unselfish, his reminder of the importance of charm in the home by means of its furnishings is an important one for many of us.

There are many homes in which "the old horsehair sofa" or something

just as bad, having become a habit, is consciously noticed by those who are spending a large part of their lives in association with it. But, whether they know it or not, a refurbishing and freshening up of the home would make a very noticeable difference in their disposition and mental attitude when they are at home.

While some women manifest a need for excitement in a too frequent and extravagant change and discarding of their home furnishings, it is no less true that countless housewives, preoccupied with the daily routine of their busy lives, are oblivious to the fact that they are every day looking upon and living in a flat or ugly setting when they can well afford to make the changes which would make as much of a difference in their outlook as if they were to move from a home facing the disorder of docks or rubbish heaps to a boulevard on a park.

Frequently the necessary freshening and refurbishing involves the expenditure of little in money, and can be accomplished by a little changing here and freshening there that is made possible by attention and thought and perhaps a clever needle.

To a certain extent it is a matter of attitude and attention—this keeping the home fresh and lovely, which is so important not only for the purpose which the gentleman we have quoted refers to, keeping the young people at home, but for its restful and pleasurable value to every person in the home, including the woman who spends more time there than any one else. Take an impersonal look at your living room!

SOME HINTS ABOUT DIET FOR CHILDREN

By NELLIE MAXWELL

A good mother does not hear the music of the dance when her children cry. From the German.

All foods given the child should be simple, well cooked and easy to digest as well as attractively served. The mother who teaches her child to like various kinds of food must taste and season them to be sure that they are palatable. Poor cooking and unattractive serving is often the cause of a child's lifelong dislike for certain good foods.

A well balanced diet for a normal child will include the growth and bone and tooth building foods in the following daily amounts: One pint to one quart of milk, plain or in cooked dishes; two servings of fruit, fresh, as oranges, apples, bananas and lemons. There should be two to three servings of vegetables, one root vegetable and one or more green vegetables, including a leafy one, served uncooked. Nuts should be ground or served in butters for the younger children and meats in moderate quantities.

Cereals, breads and cereal products are needed to provide energy; these are important in the case of a rapidly growing adolescent boy, who needs more food than a grown man to supply his daily needs and build his body. For butter and fats there should be one part of fat to four parts of starch and sweet foods.

The liquid required for daily consumption should be six glasses—fruit juices, milk and water supply this.

During adolescence children of both sexes need more food to supply the rapid growth. Too frequently girls develop a fickle appetite and the food must be tempting. Going without breakfast may be indulged by hearts, healthy adults, but never in a growing child; it is dangerous for both present and future health.

Citrus foods have a special advantage in the child's diet; they furnish needed food elements in a pleasing form. As drinks, desserts and salads and as flavoring for other foods, they hold a large place in the diet.

A glass of orange juice, given to a child who has a sour stomach, will relieve the trouble and is taken with pleasure.

A child susceptible to colds and similar affections will be built up in resistance by cod liver oil.

A child from six to ten years will have the proper tooth and bone building material in one quart of milk, one egg, one eighth of a head of lettuce, or its equivalent in cabbage, or celery; the juice of half a lemon and sufficient orange juice to make a cupful, with any desired amount of fresh, raw fruit or vegetables, if eaten daily.

For a child from ten to eighteen, the egg is increased to two, lettuce to one-fourth of a head, one lemon, and orange juice to make two cupfuls, taken in two portions—one for breakfast and the second at dinner.

Failure to gain weight usually means undernourishment. Malnutrition may be the result of several different causes, such as improper or insufficient food, diseased tonsils, adenoids, decayed teeth. Undernourishment may follow illness or poor health, caused by lack of rest, sleep or fresh air.

The symptoms of malnutrition are listlessness, nervousness, being fretful, tiring easily, drooping shoulders, muscles flabby, teeth poor.

German Lost Interest in "Smallpox" Sufferer

For 10 days the Germans had been occupying the little village where I was staying with my aunt, and all the American soldiers had left, all except a wounded one whom we were hiding in the garret, hoping to be able to keep him and take care of him safely until the Allied troops would recapture the village. One way or another the Germans found it out and something had to be done to save him before they came to take him. So, rushing down to the garden and grabbing nettles out of which I made a whip, I rushed back upstairs and whipped his whole body with it, leaving terrible red marks and white spots. An hour later a German officer came to search the house . . . and the greatest moment of my life was when he left the house quicker than he entered it and had posted on our door: "Quarantined for smallpox."

A week afterward the village was recaptured and my soldier boy was saved.—Gaby de la Heuzanne, Tulsa, Okla., in the American Legion Monthly.

Peculiar SOS

A man was sauntering down a Vancouver street when he was struck on the head by a cake of soap. Around the soap was folded a business card and on the reverse side was written this frantic note "Please telephone to the office of this hotel and tell them to send up somebody to unlock the bathroom door, as I am locked in. Distressed." A bellboy headed a relief expedition to the bathroom.

THE POP-EYED YOOK

By Hugh Hutton

(Author of Nutty Natural History)

FOR our lesson today we have before us a mono-thetic, rapidly vibrating biped, a native of the Hawaiian islands found principally in the vicinity of Wauiki. Its classification is difficult, but is generally supposed to be related to the West African Tom Tom and Jersey Kowbell. It differs from monkeys in that it cannot learn anything new, and, having no ears, its singing is incredibly off key. The yooks are carried as pets by the amorous youth of our country, but many are cruelly annihilated annually by irate parents and neighbors.

Two fibrets and a broken half of another one are used for the head, body, and skirt of this creature. The feet are split peanuts and the hands split beans attached to the body with toothpick arms and legs. A spaghetti tall, macaroni monkey cap, and popcorn eyes and nose complete the construction of this curious beast.

SHEER WOOLENS LEAD IN STYLE; EVENING CAPS AND DINNER HATS

At the turf meets, at the international polo matches, at the ball games, in fact everywhere that fashionable women are gathering, the new wool dress is the most prominent and the most pleasing style creation of the season—not the heavy wool dress of years ago, but something new and far more wonderful—a dress made of sheer wooleens so soft and so supple that they meet the most exacting demands of graceful, flowing lines.

OF SHEER WOVEN WOOL CREPE.

After years of untiring effort on the part of the world's leading experts, these new woollen fabrics have at last been perfected. Yarns of unbelievable fineness have been spun, colors have been dyed of a richness and a depth that personify autumn, materials have been produced of a softness and beauty often dreamed of but never experienced until now. Gone is all hint of bulkiness or harshness—and in its place are sheer, supple materials which combine the draping qualities of silk with the tailored aspect of fine wool. In the midst of this artistic perfection, the practical side has not been forgotten. These new fabrics wear without wrinkling or mauling.

Fashion has decreed the short fur jacket for fall, and the wool dress is a welcome and necessary complement, sufficiently warm and stylishly right.

This season is to be a galaxy of rich colors and increasing elaboration of detail. It is fortunate that the perfection of these new woollen fabrics has enabled the wool dress to take its place as a most fitting leader of this season's unequalled fashion pageant.

Lightweight wooleens lend themselves charmingly to the new Russian trend be-reflects in terms of the formal dinner hat, fluttering dance hats and festive-looking evening caps.

The hats in the group pictured evidence that the trend is toward more formality. They are the sort which top the luxurious fabrics, the fluttering furs and the rich jewels of the costume to perfection. These styles are particularly interesting in that they bear the stamp of approval of leading millinery authorities of America.

The first model is one of the new fur-trimmed types which are the choice of the smart set for fall. In color it takes its cue from the red and white print of the frock with which it is worn, being a brick-red felt with a draped bandeau of white galsak. Its side dip is infinitely becoming and supremely smart.

Everything must glitter, is one of the messages of the mode this season and the decree is carried out in ways as pictured to the right at the top. This stunning evening cap is made of sequin-embroidered banding. Glitter answers to glitter for the one-side shoulder strap of the gown is of brilliant and sequins.

The "bovel banded and scalloped bandeau which gives "class" to the hat below to the left is being made a feature in millinery design. A favorite theme is turquoise beads with

WORLD WAR YARNS

by Lieut. Frank E. Hagan

A Joke on the President

For sturdy hospitality, for unfailing courtesy, the honors must be awarded to men and women of Brittany.

They were the representatives of France who greeted President Wilson with a typically Gallic welcome in the salle de reception on Pier 3, at Brest.

For days before, Wilson's arrival the enthusiastic Bretons made ready for his coming. Only one detail was lacking as the big moment drew near—they needed a special emblem to display which would be of peculiar significance to the President.

"Is there not something by which Monsieur Le President sets great store?" they asked.

"Sure," remarked a Yank sledgehammer working at the pier. "Show the President an elephant of some kind—it's the emblem of his political party."

The only elephant, or picture of one, in Brest was owned by the consul of Siam, the Bretons learned. That official was overjoyed to lend a flag of his native land. It presented a white elephant with gleaming tusks.

So the flag of Siam was hung in the salle de reception of Pier 3. The courteous Bretons smiled. They were ready to acclaim the President of one of their allies. Nothing was lacking to make the affair a huge success.

President Wilson was smiling, too, when he arrived. He walked into the reception room and the first thing he saw, in welcome, was the Siamese emblem. Also the emblem of the G. O. P!

Discretion Was the Better Part

Nowadays Alexander Woolcott, well-known New York dramatic critic, Franklin P. Adams, otherwise "F. P. A.," conductor of "The Conning Tower" in the New York World and Harold Ross, editor of the sprightly weekly Journal, the New Yorker, say pretty much what they please in print, with none to say them nay. But there was a time when such "freedom of the press" was denied them. That was when they were on the editorial staff of the Stars and Stripes, the newspaper for, of and by the soldiers of the A. E. F.

Of course the newspaper men on the Stars and Stripes enjoyed considerable latitude in what they might print. They could kid the war, kid themselves for fighting in the war and kid the enemy for making it necessary to fight it. As for kidding the "higher-ups" and that included anybody over the rank of colonel, well—the chief of the censorship and press section of the general staff at General Pershing's headquarters at Chaumont was the "big boss" of the Stars and Stripes, in a "purely supervisory" capacity, of course.

The Stars and Stripes was strong for streamer headlines, especially on the sports page. Here are some samples: "Russia Benched; No More Weak Hitters," "Huns May Request Walver on Kaiser" and, on April 10, "Big League Season Opens in Two Hemispheres." Jave a night when Mr. Woolcott and Mr. Adams (for the first and last time) were entrusted with the make-up of the Stars and Stripes. They decided on a snappy page-one streamer, so—

But let Mr. Woolcott tell about it: "We spent the entire evening speculating on the wisdom of our running a seven column headline across the front page, which we felt would both heighten the fame of the Stars and Stripes and give fathomless emotional satisfaction to many of its humbler readers. The headline, which, for editorial reasons complicated by personal politeness, we decided after all not to run, was 'Pershing is a Big Star!'"

Teutonic Humor

If you are one of those who think that the Teutonic temperament is stolid and incapable of humor, hear this tale of a German general which tickled the members of the A. E. F. mightily when the yarn passed around among them.

Their Austrian allies were often a treat to the Germans. For instance, the Austrian idea of war had for its background pomp, ceremony, and exaggerated chivalry, the Germans believed, and such notions belonged more to the Middle Ages than the modern era. Needless to say, the Austrian idea was quite different from the efficient, machine-like code of the Prussian system.

On one occasion when General Ludendorff went down to help the Austrians out of a mep, he was presented to a gorgeous Austrian field marshal. The Austrian smiled, saluted, bowed, and greeted his visitor with the usual salutation:

"Ich habe die Ehre." (I have the honor.)

"Yah!" snapped the German. "Und ich habe die Arbeit." (And I have the work.)

Can't PLAY Can't REST
—child needs Castoria

WHEN a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago! A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted; comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your own mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will soothe and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more than 100 years it will effectively help to regulate sluggish bowels in an older child. All druggists have Castoria; it's genuine if you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature and this name-plate:

The Empty Pocket Book

Mr. Hearst says: "After all the information in regard to the pleasant stringency, those interested in prosperity consider the ways and means that should be resorted to. That the full dinner pail shall be brought back; to do this we must also have a full pocket book. One of the chief causes of hard times is over-capitalization by the manufacturers and big trusts. When they make 25 or 30 per cent dividends instead of using part of this huge profit to increase the wages of their employes, they increase their capitalization, so that only six or seven per cent dividends will be made on the watered stock. Then the trusts sold to the public these inflated securities; the big crash in Wall Street came as the big corporations emptied the pocket books of the public to their coffers. Thus we now have the empty dinner pail, the empty pocket book and, in many cases, the 'bread line.'"

The News calls the attention of its readers to an article appearing elsewhere in this issue, entitled "Open Letter to Mr. Hoover," in which it is shown that the government at Washington has hoarded up in its vaults five billion dollars in gold—an amazing FROZEN ASSET. The half of it, if put into circulation throughout the country, would wipe out the present depression in 24 hours. All the above inequities can justly be charged to the present Republican administration, either directly or indirectly. Every good citizen, irrespective of former party affiliations, should come to the rescue of his country and give the people a new deal, reduce taxation, in both state and nation, stop the useless and reckless expenditure of the peoples' money and adopt a financial policy that will not permit a few to profit to the injury of the many. Let's clean house. Vote the Democratic ticket.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL

Dr. Fred R. Baker, eye-sight specialist of San Angelo, Texas, was here from Saturday to Monday. Dr. Baker makes our section annually, but this trip made his second here for this year. He is a skilled optician, a very pleasant gentleman and has a splendid practice among our people.

Mrs. W. S. Kirby, former Democratic Chairwoman of the National Democratic Committee, passed through yesterday enroute to Magdalena. This office acknowledges a pleasant call from Mrs. Kirby, who gave very interesting and encouraging information on the political situation in New Mexico.

H. F. Dockray, substantial citizen of Capitan, was here on business this week. We met "Shorty" when we reached Lincoln county thirty seven years ago, at which time he held the lines on a stage running from White Oaks to Lincoln. Later he punched cows and now is one of the well known ranchers and stockmen of the county.

Let's swat this NOW!

VOTERS of New Mexico, you will be asked on November 4 to express your approval or disapproval of the proposed tobacco tax, amounting to an added two cents on each package of 20 cigarettes, one cent on each five-cent cigar, and various rates on all other tobacco products. This is your first chance to participate in a referendum in this state—and not only that, but it is your golden opportunity to defeat an obnoxious and burdensome piece of legislation.

Mark well what this means:

A "nuisance tax" if there ever was one; a precedent that may pave the way for similar tax burdens on candy, patent medicines, soft drinks or canned goods; a penalty against smokers on top of an already whacking big Federal tax.

SMOKERS, here is your chance to speak your mind in very definite terms.

This added burden on tobacco may seem small to legislators, and doubtless the state needs the money, but the increase will not seem unimportant to the thousands who must watch the pennies, yet who know and value the unfailing solace of a good smoke.

To such men any increase at all is a hardship—and they deserve sympathy!

TAXES ALREADY HIGH

Beyond even the money involved, however, lies a bigger consideration—a principle; in short, a question of common fairness.

Smokers today are already paying the highest revenue in history to the Federal Government for their tobacco.

The little green stamp that you now see on every package of cigarettes, box of cigars, or tin of tobacco represents the amount you pay in to the Government.

For example, the tax you pay on cigarettes alone is SIX cents for every package of 20!

Thus, smokers are already bearing far more than their share.

IS IT FAIR?

Is it not unfair to select, out of the whole population of the state, the one class which is already paying an excessive tax—and then to pile a state tax on top of it?

Does any logical or fair basis exist for thus discriminating against smokers only, and subjecting them to this double taxation?

In plain language, such a tax is beyond all reason. No other commodity, necessity or luxury is so taxed. Why single out tobacco?

WHY PICK ON SMOKERS?

Most other taxes are based on wealth and income—this one is not. It is a daily tax on you because you smoke.

Smokers, are you going to allow yourselves to become tax victims and be penalized day after day for the privilege of enjoying tobacco?

So, if you love a good smoke—and who doesn't—rise up and ACT. Go to the polls and say NO.

THE STORY

Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceford, of a wealthy family, is attracted by Will Todd, newspaper artist, son of a carpenter. Ernestine's sister, Lillian, knowing their father would disapprove, urges her to end the affair, but Ernestine refuses. They make a runaway marriage. Briceford is furious, but helpless, as Ernestine is of age. Loring Hamilton, lawyer, wins Lillian's consent to be his wife. Will and Ernestine begin their married life in a single room in a humble neighborhood. John Poole, Will's best friend, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's resort. Pastano irritates Ernestine by criticizing Will for bringing her to such a place. Conscious of approaching motherhood, Ernestine opens a savings account. Will's father dies suddenly. Lillian and Loring are married. Will's mother dies immediately after the birth of Ernestine's baby. Changes in Will's office fail to bring advancement and Ernestine again is looking forward to motherhood. Pastano acquires a summer home near that of the Bricefords.

"It would be nice," said Ernestine vaguely, feeling hurt because she had not known about papa, or the stone merger—feeling out of things, "but I want to be with Will."

In July they went to Langley lake, where Lillian was established and where somehow she appropriated the role of hostess, although it was not her house any more than it was Ernestine's. Will refused to worry about the Pastanos living on the point, and Ernestine saw that he lacked her own snobbish prejudices about the lake colony. He took Peter and went to visit the Greeks the first morning he was there, and stayed all day, romping with the young Pastanos, teasing Alexandria, who adored him, and eating Madame Pastano's pickled fish.

Ernestine had asked John Poole to come down for the two Sundays they were at the lake. She had come to love the man as much as Will did, and had grown into the way of ignoring his bad habits. He was admirably sober the first Sunday he came down to them, and Will and Poole spent the day in the wood path and on the water, making ridiculous sketches in the sand, carrying Peter about with them.

But the second Sunday was a day of misfortune. Ernestine was ill and could scarcely rise that morning, and it seemed to her that Will was impatient and unsympathetic.

Loring telephoned that he had stripped his gears and put the car in the garage. He would have to come on the train, and Ernestine realized with dismay that John Poole would be with him. Lillian brought the two from the station in her car. John Poole was already fuddled with drink and elaborately polite, and it was easily seen that Loring was in a state of nervous exasperation. His face was flushed, his brow furrowed.

"I've got to go right over to Pastano's to see a man that's coming out today," he said to Lillian as soon as they had had Sunday dinner.

"If you are going to see Ruby, I'll go with you," said Mr. Poole. "I have a most important matter to discuss with Mr. Pastano. Most important. He has a nephew—yes, I know—as Will laughed—"he has forty-seven nephews—but this is a most particular one. This boy is to study modeling. He is to be the exception—an artist in a family of clever criminals. I'm to see Mrs. Pastano about him. I'll go with you."

He rose and took a familiar hold on Loring's arm.

"Will can take you over in the boat, after while," Loring said, "I must hurry, and Pastano can't talk to both of us at once."

"No, I want to go with you," insisted Mr. Poole.

Loring no longer made the faintest effort to conceal his disgust.

"Your desire is unrequited," he said, and Will laughed and came around the table to his friend and boss and took hold of him.

"You're coming with me, you old war-horse," he said. "You're drunk, I'll wager, you haven't done a lick of work all week. We'll go over to see Ruby after while. Loring doesn't want you, John, so come along with me."

John Poole turned and detained Loring who was trying to escape.

"You don't want me?"

"No," said Loring nervously. "I've had enough of you—too much. I don't ever want to see you again as long as I live."

"Come outside and fight with me, and I will beat you, and then we'll go to Pastano's—together."

Loring was furious. "I won't fight with you—you old fool!"—Will, for God's sake, take him off me. Why did you bring him down here, anyway?"

"Don't be so hard with him," said Will, smiling weakly. "He's got a little money—he might come in handy some day. You've changed your mind about friends of mine before—Pastano and Wiston, for instance."

Loring turned to Lillian who stood, silent and grave, by her table. "If this is what I am to expect here it's the last Sunday I come down."

Will flushed. "So Ernestine is intruding now?" he said slowly. "Perhaps you have already consummated your intention of cheating her out of her privileges in this house as elsewhere—"

"Anybody could cheat Ernestine," exclaimed Loring. "She was cheated once and for good when she married you. She ruined her life then, and now she must endure anything because she lacks protection and is handicapped to boot."

Will took a step forward, his big hand raised, and though he still smiled his face was evil. He spoke low and rapidly, and with an indescribable effect of vituperation:

"You great big stuffed shirt—you imitation—you safe-player and bribe-taker, you! You coveter! Do you think I don't know what's the matter with you?"

There was a pause which lasted indefinitely. Loring had swollen to rage, and then he had collapsed, until he stood looking at Will with a dreadful, haunted face.

It was strange, Ernestine thought afterward, that none of them felt, even then, that Loring was afraid of Will. There was some other element which gave Will tremendous advantage. Before the blaze in Will's eyes, before his cursing breathless phrases, Loring fell into a strange dejection. The two men looked at each other in the stillness that swirled around them all. Will turned at last to Ernestine.

"Go get your things, kitten, and get the baby ready," he said in a gentle voice. "We'll all go back together. I'll go to the hotel and get a taxi to take us to the depot. We can get the afternoon train. Gather your things up again, John."

With tears running down her face, Ernestine obeyed him. Loring went off, cursing under his breath, and Mr. Poole followed him to about unheeded threats and maledictions. Lillian helped Ernestine to get ready, both of them crying.

"It's the end," said Ernestine. "We can never see each other again now. Our lives are separated indefinitely, and Lillian was thinking, 'What will mamma say?'"

"I'll call you up, when I get in town. Write to me, Ernestine. Don't let them tear us apart—"

"My life is with Will—yours with Loring," said Ernestine, and went ahead, trying to stem the tears, trying not to care, but feeling the nervous, uncontrollable necessity for weeping.

In the train, going back to Chicago, she still cried now and then. "Why does Loring hate us?" she asked at last in a low tone. "Especially me? Why does he hate me? He seems to want to wound me, to strike at me. He's done it before. But I've never harmed him. Why does he hate me, Will?"

"Hate you?" exclaimed Will, and looked at her strangely, his dark bright eyes searching her pale face for guile. "He doesn't hate you, Ernestine. But forget him—I'm glad something has happened. They've only made us unhappy, anyhow."

It was nice to be home again. Ernestine went about her little house with a feeling of comfort and joy.

Will was not due at the office until the end of the week, but on Monday, as Ernestine was finishing up a washing for the baby, he got dressed to go downtown. As she kissed him good-bye and watched him go, then turned back to the routine of home, Ernestine felt a sense of well-being blot out yesterday's turmoil. She resolved not to think about it, nor to worry.

It seemed to her that Will had barely had time to go to town and come back again before he stood in the kitchen doorway, his eyes upon her with such a look in them that she gave a little cry and her hand flew to her throat.

"Will—what's happened?"

He put his hat down slowly. He hung his head, unable to speak to her, but at last he got it out.

"I've lost my job."

"Will—"

He said no more.

"Tell me—what happened?"

"Craps."

Ernestine sat down weakly in a chair by the kitchen table and gave a foolish-sounding laugh.

"Unarm, Ernie—" she exclaimed and grinned at him. "I'm glad. You would never have quit, and now you'll get a job where they'll appreciate you."

"Ernestine!" he said, and choked.

"I'll make good for you—I will! You'll see—some day."

Mr. Poole had not been at the office when Will was dismissed by Mr. Wiston. It was some days before he learned the details and gave them to Ernestine. The fellows had all surrounded Will with affectionate greetings on his arrival in the office unexpectedly. They had at once planned to eat supper in a crowd. Somebody produced dice to determine immediately who would have to pay. They squatted on their heels in a close ring between the sloping desks, and Tommy Tucker cried a fierce schoolboy "jiggers" at them. Will held the dice, and he straightened up and turned about boldly rattling the cubes in his big hand, and faced Mr. Wiston.

Mr. Wiston made quick work of him, almost, it seemed to Will, or so he said, as though he were glad of the chance. Within ten minutes after his arrival, Will walked out of the Sun office, his possessions, done up in a paper package, under his arm, while half a dozen indignant but futile youngsters mourned after him.

But John Poole would not have it. "You fire my help and you fire me," he told Wiston, and he left bag and baggage.

Nobody had thought of this. Mr. Wiston remonstrated with him, but nothing would satisfy John Poole except Will's reinstatement, and that Wiston would not concede.

So Will had added to his own anxieties a sense of responsibility about John Poole, of concern over Ernestine's break with that part of her family which was in or near Chicago.

Mr. Poole let it be known in newspaper circles that he and his assistant were available, but to his astonishment he had no offers. He was old, he had been identified with the Sun for many years. The Sun's rivals were busy developing their own artists and establishing them. It was only a year or two longer, it was said, for John Poole, and anyhow he would probably be back at the Sun within a month.

Patti Only Member of Fair Sex at Banquet

In 1850 Adolina Patti made her debut at the Academy of Music in New York in "Lucia," says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle Magazine. Not since Jenny Lind had a singer so captivated her audience. To the end of their lives many of her admirers insisted that she was the last one entitled to be called "la diva."

Twenty-five years later, in 1854, Patti again sang at the academy. To her honor a banquet was planned by a number of prominent New York men, including Judge Daly, William Steiway and Nathan Seltson. Naturally the wives of these men were expected to be present, but they virtuously refused to sit at the table with Patti, who had been divorced from her first husband, the Marquis De Caux, and married to Nicolini, the Italian tenor.

Extremely embarrassed, the gentlemen sent a committee to put the case to Patti. Patti, as a collector of postcards, and ask her if she would consent to be the guest of themselves only. Patti consented unhesitatingly, and she was the only woman present at a party of some seventy masculine admirers, in the ballroom of the Hotel Brunswick.

Date From Colonial Times

The Pennsylvania Dutch are descended from Germans who settled in Pennsylvania during the Colonial period. They began to migrate to Pennsylvania about the time the Quakers did. Many of them were from the Rhenish Palatinate. It has been estimated that in the years 1700 and 1708, more than 30,000 Germans went to England, and were transported to America in English ships.

The recent industrial employment survey report issued by the U. S. Employment Service of the U. S. Department of Labor in Denver states that some increase in industrial employment in New Mexico was noted during September; however, the supply of labor exceeded all requirements. Cotton harvesting started the latter part of the month and will provide employment for a large number of workers for the next several weeks. Fall plowing and other miscellaneous agricultural work continued to employ many laborers. There was very little activity reported in the metal-mining industry. Logging and sawmill operations remained on a curtailed basis. A seasonal increase in employment is expected in the coal mines during the next thirty-day period. Building and general construction continued fairly active and several large projects were under way including the $10,000,000 Middle Rio Grande conservancy project. Highway construction, considerable miscellaneous telephone work, and municipal improvements offered employment to a large number of men. Contracts were let in September for state-aid highway projects and it is believed that additional contracts will be let in October. The railroad shops worked with curtailed forces throughout the month on a five-day week basis. The railroad freight transportation forces will probably be slightly increased during the next thirty days. This report says that a slight increase in employment was reported in Arizona at the close of September. Harvesting of the cotton crop was started giving employment to a large number of workers. The manufacturing establishments reported fairly steady operation. The cotton gins resumed their seasonal operations. Metal mining continued on a curtailed basis affecting approximately 15,000 men. Many of the idle metal miners will probably secure employment in connection with the cotton harvest and other miscellaneous agricultural work. Building and general construction continued fairly active in most centers; however, the supply of this class of help slightly exceeded the demand. Lumbering in the Flagstaff and McNary districts was maintained on a basis considerably below normal. Logging was practically at a standstill and the sawmills operated with curtailed forces. Considerable miscellaneous telephone work and highway construction afforded employment to many men. Railroad employment was reported as somewhat below normal and a slight surplus of all classes of railroad labor was apparent.

Arizona has about 252,000 head of cattle, valued at about $39,115,000. Arizona has about 1,139,000 head of sheep valued at about $9,492,000. Arizona ships more than 5,500 cars of cantaloupes annually. Arizona's cotton crop in 1923 was worth $15,000,000.

A. M. Crawford, legislative examiner, has announced in Tucson that the first item on the building program of the University of Arizona, calling for an expenditure of $75,000 in heating plant improvements has been approved. Crawford said the improvements probably will start next fall.

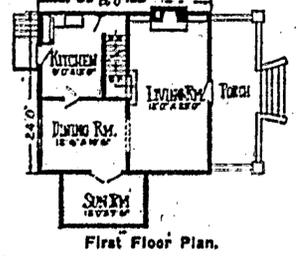

Cottage Type Stucco Bungalow Is Attractive and Comfortable

This bungalow is a combination of stucco with a tile roof. The contrast between the stucco and the tile roof is very attractive. This bungalow contains five rooms, all of them of good size. How these rooms are arranged and the size of each are shown on the floor plan. This is a very excellent design for a family that wants an unusual bungalow home.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to practical home building, for the rendering of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The story-and-a-half type of home is always attractive in appearance, because it is rather low and has a graceful attractive sweep to the roof. In order to give the extra rooms in the second floor there usually are gabled dormers which add to the ex-ing room through double french doors. The kitchen adjoins the dining room at the back corner. A glance at the floor plans will show how attractive and comfortable this room layout is. The second floor plan shows the arrangement of the two bedrooms, one in the end gable and the other in the dormer at the front. The bath room occupies the other corner of the second floor.

The combination of stuccoed walls with the tile roof, which forms a striking contrast, is very attractive. The wide porch with the substantial-looking pillars supporting the overhang of the roof is another excellent feature of the home.

How susceptible this house is to planting of shrubs and flowers is shown in the exterior view.

Colorful Boiler Adds Nice Touch to Basement

The discovery of the basement now takes its place with some of the other great discoveries of history.

In fact, there is a striking analogy between the discovery of a new continent and the discovery by the American public during the last decade of the vast amount of unused space in its basements.

Take, for instance, the average two-story seven room house. If the basement is fully excavated, there is as much room in the basement as there is on the first or second floors.

In other words, the basement space is equivalent to 33 1/3 per cent of the total usable space under that particular roof.

In the case of a one story bungalow with a full basement, the basement space is equivalent to 50 per cent of the total space under the roof.

There were several reasons why the discovery of the basement was delayed until the twentieth century.

In the first place, space was plentiful until building costs began to mount. Then, economy of construction as well as economy of space began to be sought.

In the second place, the basement used to be dirty. Nobody knew it could be clean until clean fuels proved that it could be.

And the third important factor in the discovery of the basement is radiator heating which makes full utilization of basement space possible. Radiator heating pipes are of such small dimensions that they are not in the way. The boiler can be located almost anywhere in the basement. Furthermore, the boiler itself with a colorful jacket adds a decorative touch to the basement and blends well with window drapes of cretonne, a gayly painted floor, and bright furniture.

Thus, it is not surprising that the thoughts of the American public have turned basement-ward and that innumerable playrooms for children, dens for fathers, social rooms, club rooms, and modernistic apartments have blossomed forth where once were salt cans and junk.

Steel Bridging Takes Place of Wood in Frame

For many years wood bridging has been used to re-enforce frame construction, but a comparatively recent innovation has been the utilization of steel for the same purpose.

Steel, in its superior strength, is naturally more efficient as a re-enforcement material than wood, and it has the added advantage of doing away with the nails which were liable to loosen or pull out.

The average home owner is not acquainted with the necessity for bridging, and it is a subject of paramount importance. Floors which have not been re-enforced develop squeaks and creaks, and bridging possesses an important bearing upon the strength of the entire house.

Experts Approve of Use of Color in Kitchen

The use of color in home decoration has invaded the field of kitchen equipment, and is becoming a standard recommendation of architectural experts. The general color scheme of a kitchen, however, does not need to take account of "smart trends." In fact, Miss Betty Thornley of Collier's Weekly insists that the kitchen should mirror the personality of the woman who decorated it to suit herself.

"Suppose," writes Miss Thornley, "a woman never gets enough color in ordinary life—how about yellow walls in the kitchen, above a black linoleum floor? The woodwork will be yellow, too, with moldings picked out in red. A yellow kitchen cabinet, red macepans and teakettle, red oilcloth curtains—and here's where we'll wear white smocks if we feel extravagant or bright blue, eyes if we don't. A pot of primroses on the window sill will add to the gaiety—and don't forget a mirror in a good light, with a shelf below it for a bright red make-up box with powder and all the rest of our beauty arsenal."

But such a kitchen might ston some women, as too colorful. In that case they should consider white walls with dark blue woodwork, blue and white linoleum on the floor, white curtains with red edges, cupboard and kitchen cabinet in blue and white with red inside. Blue pots and pans, or shiny aluminum.

Another colorful kitchen recently installed by a prominent interior decorator has white walls and brilliant yellow woodwork, a red linoleum floor in solid color, red and white gingham curtains and yellow pots and pans. Another begins with walls of powder blue above a floor of gray, black and white checked linoleum; the woodwork is white, the curtains plaid voile.

Housewives are constantly discovering new methods of using color in the kitchen. A bakeshop in Columbus, Ohio, makes colored bread, and its pastel shades have great appeal for afternoon tea sandwiches. So also have the red and orange loaves, but the general public preference is for blue. On patriotic holidays, the shops sell bread striped the colors of the flag.

Avoid Damp Cellars

All earth around the house should slope away from the foundation walls to prevent rain from seeping into the cellar. Rain water from the roof should be led away from the house and not be allowed to soak into the ground close to foundation walls. Roof drainage is one of the chief causes of damp cellars.

Watch Tin Roofs

Watch your tin roofs. The excessive heat and drought are apt to peel off the paint and open up the seams in the metal. Then when the rain does come it will come right through. Tin roofs need the protection of best grade paint.

OLD-FASHIONED HOG LOSES OUT

Feeder Should Select Breed He Likes Best.

Usually the best breed of hogs for any one man is the breed that he likes best. It is the type of the individual hog of a breed that is more important than the breed itself, explains J. P. Willman of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Thirty or more years ago the wide, thick, short-bodied, short-legged type showing extreme refinement were in demand. Some still prefer this type, but it has been replaced by a type that has proved more profitable. The old-fashioned pig took too long to reach market weight, Mr. Willman says.

The present-day type of hog has length of body, long legs, and large but not coarse bone. It should have in addition good depth and capacity of the chest and middle to insure constitutional vigor and good feeding qualities. The long, deep-bodied, somewhat leggy type of sows produce and raise good litters. Also the long, somewhat narrow-bodied, leggy, waddling pig with plenty of bone makes rapid and economical gains.

The type can easily be carried too far, however, and develop the "gun barrel" type of hog. Sometimes the racy boar is criticized, but as he will sire the kind of pigs that will get to the market before the average run of pigs and prove profitable to the feeder.

To Keep Animals Free From All Parasites

Clean herds, clean ground, clean stables, clean barns, clean pastures, properly drained, are the chief weapons to keep animals free from parasites. Plowing and cropping are measures that farmers should employ in their operations with the idea of fighting parasite menace. There is no better way to disinfect the soil than by plowing. Overstocking should be avoided. Even though the pastures are rotated, overstocking concentrates the infection and increases the danger of the parasite menace. The time to fight parasite diseases is before they appear.

Careless methods which repeatedly expose susceptible animals to polluted and infected soil, may ultimately bring on parasite diseases. The McLean County system of swine sanitation has done a great deal in the control of worms in swine, as well as other diseases. Sheep and poultry sanitation programs are merely simple procedures to avoid parasites.

Every Beast and Fowl Favors Its Own Vermin

An expert on lice can tell the kind of bird or animal that acted as host to the louse by examining the louse, for every bird and beast has its own particular sort, says F. H. Wilson of the department of entomology at Cornell university.

The old idea that the cattle were infested with lice because the chickens roosted in the cow stable is false, he says. It is not hard to imagine the differences presented to a louse used to crawling and dodging among feathers when it suddenly finds itself in a forest of hairs. Their feet are not adapted for crawling on hairs any more than those of a dog for climbing trees. The cattle get their lice from cattle, the sheep from sheep, and turkeys from turkeys, according to Mr. Wilson.

"Human Gorilla" Found

Comrade in Adversity
A customers' man temporarily out of a job ran into a friend who owned a circus and asked him for something to do.

"Well, the gorilla recently died," said the friend, "and if you want to get his skin, swing on the trapeze, growl a bit and amuse the children, you can have the job."

The customers' man filled the bill well until one day the rope on which he was swinging snapped and he was catapulted into the lion's cage.

The lion, seeing him, let out a lusty roar to which he offered a timid yelp. The lion roared more menacingly. The pseudo-gorilla lost his nerve and became entirely human, backed into a corner yelling "help, help!"

The lion thereupon came closer and said in a hoarse whisper, "Shut up, you d-d fool, you are not the only customers' man out of a job."—Wall Street Journal.

Healthiest

"Arthur had a bad case of measles," says Mrs. Clara Gilliam, 4187 Bowdoin St., Des Moines, Iowa. "He was having a hard time until I gave him California Fig Syrup. It regulated his bowels, seemed to give him new strength and energy."

"I have since used it for all his colds or upsets, and it has helped make him the healthiest boy I know."

For over fifty years, mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Doctors advise its use when children are bilious, headachy, constipated; and to keep bowels open during colds or upsets. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor. It is mild in action.

Look for the name California when buying. That marks the genuine.

How Old Are You?

Today Said She—I'm 43

Am I Fat?—Not Me

Yes! A year ago I had twenty-two more pounds of fat than I needed—I was fat—and very sensitive about it—but now I say it is foolish for anyone to be overweight.

What did I do? Nothing very hard, I can assure you—I cut out pies—candy and all sweets—ate moderately and every morning before breakfast I took a half-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water—Never missed a morning.

I lost fat—gained in energy—vigor—charm—and vivaciousness and have a shapely figure I am proud of—anyone can do the same.

A North Carolina woman lost 47 pounds in 3 months—a Montana woman lost 19 pounds in 4 weeks—Wisconsin woman 11 pounds in 6 weeks.

Every druggist in the world sells Kruschen Salts—a bottle that lasts 4 weeks—costs 85 cents.

Nogal Nuggets

(Too late for last week)

There have been two more big bear killed in the Nogal district during the open season.

Joe M. Aguayo killed one of them and, according to all reports, took it very quietly.

Elmer Hest killed the other, and he had quite a battle; shot him 8 times and after the second shot the bear made fight, stood up on his hind feet and made for the hunter; but Elmer coolly sent another shot through the bear's body, knocking him down. The brain rolled to the bottom of the hill, after the shot that knocked him down, got up and tried to get away. Elmer followed, trailing the bear by the blood, for half a mile or more, ultimately sighting the bear again, giving him the final wind-up.

L. R. Hest heard of this before Elmer's return home; so two tubs of water were heated for emergency use. Next morning L. R. reported that Elmer was all right, but that they had to sit up with him the first night after the bear chase.

A car wreck on Nogal Hill Sunday evening (of the previous week). Seven people were injured, man and woman and five children—brakes gave way and car came down hill at full speed. The man kept the car in the road until he came around one of those short curves, when a front tire blew out, resulting in throwing it out of the road and causing it to turn over. F. W. Skinner and Sam Cox saw the accident and rushed to the scene, and at once to the hospital in Carrizozo. Other Nogal parties assisted in gathering up their belongings. Possibly, if these curves were eliminated, not so sharp, this character of accident might be avoided.

A. B. Rose visited Nogal the past week on business.

W. F. Peacock has returned from a business trip to Roswell.

For County Supt.

I wish to thank all my friends for their loyal support in the 1928 campaign, and to solicit your earnest support in behalf of my candidacy for County Superintendent of Schools in the present one. I have neither the time nor the money to make a house-to-house campaign, as I did two years ago and as I would like to do again, but I believe that the voters of the county are duly appreciative of these conditions; and that they will give me the same consideration that might be asked of me were conditions reversed. Believing you will accord me this favor, I wish to add, without going into details as to my qualifications, that I have had more than 20 years experience in teaching school, 18 of which have been in Lincoln county, and 10 of them in the rural schools. If, by your votes, I am chosen county superintendent, I promise service.

Respectfully,
Bernice Nickels.

For Treasurer

To All Voters:
It is my desire to meet all voters of Lincoln county between now and election, and to respectfully present to them my candidacy for the office of County Treasurer. I know however, that this is not possible and to those I do not see I wish to say in this announcement that I urge consideration of my candidacy, and if it is found that I measure up to the requirements for this office, the support given me will be fully appreciated. Should my candidacy receive the approval of a majority of the voters of the county, I promise a faithful performance of the duties imposed.

Respectfully,
Ellen C. Sellers.

For Commissioner

To the Voters of Lincoln County:

Having been nominated by the Democratic party for County Commissioner, from District No. 3, I respectfully request the voters of the county to investigate my fitness for the office, and if, in their opinion, I can best serve them, their support and their vote will be appreciated. I can make but one promise and that is, if chosen to the responsible position, it shall be my constant endeavor to render to the people of Lincoln county the best service of which I am capable.

Respectfully,
M. E. Piny.
