Why Boys Leave Home

The Red Poppy-Symbol of Armistice Day

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WITH the coming of another Armistice day men and women all over the world will pin flaming red poppies over their hearts as symbols of the blood which was shed on the battlefields of the World war. For the red poppy has become the emblem of Armistice day and we wear it on November 11 as a memorial not only to the men who died during the war-torn years of 1914-18 but also to those who came back to their homes alive but bearing upon their bodies and in their minds the scars of that holocaust—the disabled veterans.

The story of how the red poppy became the emblem of Armistice day goes back to November, 1918—even before there was an Armistice to lighten the burden of a war-weary world. In it there is a curious parallelism between the establishment of this custom and another custom observed on another day when we honor our war dead. It was a group of southern women in Columbus, Ga., who in 1865 banded together to decorate the graves of soldiers, both Union and Confederate, thus originating a custom which is perpetuated in our Memorial day observance. And it was another southern woman, Miss Moira Michael of Athens, Ga., who originated the idea of adopting the red poppy as a symbol of the sacrifices of the fighting men of the World war and whose efforts have resulted in this flower's being adopted, as the Armistice day emblem.

The idea came to Miss Michael while she was serving on the staff of the Y. W. C. A. overseas headquarters at Hamilton hall, Columbia university, in New York. On Saturday, November 9, 1918, she was sitting in the headquarters office when a soldier came in and placed a copy of a monthly magazine on her desk. In it she happened to read Colonel McCran's now-famous poem, "In Flanders Fields." She was so stirred by the lines that she re-read it several times and then with a sudden inspiration she wrote this reply to it:

O! You who sleep in Flanders Fields,
Sleep sweet—to rise again!
We caught the Torch you threw
And holding high, we keep the Faith
With all who died.
We cherish, too, the Poppy red
That grows on fields where valor led:
It seems to signal to the skies
That blood of heroes never dies,
But lends a lustre to the red
Of the flower that blooms above the dead
In Flanders Fields.
And now the Torch and Poppy red
We'll wear in honor of our dead.
Fear not that ye have died for naught;
We'll teach the lessons that ye wrought
In Flanders Fields.

As she wrote, she decided that she would wear a poppy for remembrance and she would also ask others to do the same. While thinking about this three overseas Y. W. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. workers, who had been attending a conference at Columbia, came in to bring her a check for $10 in appreciation of her efforts to make a model hostess' house of their headquarters. She immediately told them that she would use the money with which to buy poppies and then explained her idea. They were as enthusiastic about it as she was and, returning to their conference, spread the news. As a result, all of the workers at the conference that afternoon were wearing poppies which Miss Michael had provided.

The next morning Miss Michael went to see her friend, Dean Talcott Williams of the Columbia school of Journalism, and confided to him her poppy-thought. He was very much pleased and offered to pass the thought on that afternoon to a war workers' committee on which were Mrs. Preston, the former Mrs. Grover Cleveland, and Rodman Wainmaker. He attended the meeting of the committee and brought back to Miss Michael enthusiastic reports of the manner in which her plan had been received.

Then came the armistice and Miss Michael turned all her energies to spreading the idea of the poppy as a national emblem. She presented the plan to other conferences and they straightway adopted it. Home-coming programs were made and the poppy idea was introduced into them.

The pictures shown above are photographs taken in a disabled veterans' hospital where the patients make Buddy Poppies to be sold throughout the country by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, the proceeds being devoted exclusively to welfare work among disabled veterans and ex-service men.

Miss Michael wrote her congressman, Charles H. Brand, and he replied on December 10, 1918: "I am writing today the War department in behalf of your suggestion that the poppy be adopted as the national emblem in commemoration of our soldiers who died in France."

Miss Michael wrote to many institutions of education, women's clubs and other organizations, explaining that as it was impossible to have triumphal arches or great memorials in all places from which came the heroes of the World war, she begged them to adopt the poppy as a tribute to the men who won the victory.

"Out of every great event of the world has come an emblem," she wrote. "Let us forget! Into this war went many emblems: The flag of nations, the Red Cross, the Red Triangle, the service flag and pin. Now out of this war should come some symbol perpetually to remind us and unforgetfully to teach coming generations the value of the light of liberty and our debt to those who so valiantly saved it for us."

On the eve of the Georgia State convention of the American Legion, August 19 and 20, 1920, in Augusta, Miss Michael went to the Legion headquarters in Atlanta and turned over to them her arguments concerning the adoption of the poppy. Charles M. Gallows of Post No. 1, Atlanta, took charge of the material and presented the movement to the convention. It was adopted and the delegation to the national convention was instructed to present it at Cleveland, Ohio, and to support the resolutions. The resolutions were presented to the national convention in September, 1920, and the poppy became the National American Legion Memorial Flower.

In an official report, which she issued on February 8, 1922, from Canada on Poppy days, she announced: "The great war veterans have sold 1,000,000 small poppies and 200,000 large ones, clearing $30,000 for their relief work, and for the French, $30,000 to go to the poor French children of the battlefields."

In England the poppy program flourished tremendously. Earl Hall's British Legion adopted the selling and wearing of poppies in 1921 and since that time more than $11,000,000 has been cleared for ex-service men. In 1927 alone the British legionnaires sold 23,000,000 poppies and made a profit of $2,522,000. In 1928 the sales reached the $3,000,000 mark. In every British community, no matter how remote from the mother country, anniversary of the armistice is observed by the sale of poppies. The full list of overseas collectors from poppies, as printed in the 1927 report of the British Legion, announces the appearance of a gazetteer of the world. There are listed there the Azores, Egypt, the Grand Canary Islands, Morocco, Nigeria, the Sudan, the Orange Free State, Bermuda, British Guiana, Trinidad, Borneo, British Malaya and dozens and dozens of other countries.

Instead of the poppy becoming a national emblem, as the Poppy Lady first dreamed, it has become an international emblem. In Europe, besides the British Isles and France, 19 countries wear the blood-colored blossoms in their lapels: Italy, Holland, Germany, Spain, Belgium, Sweden, Switzerland, Poland, Greece, Rumania . . . oh, almost every corner of the globe. Poppies are even worn in Japan, China, Mexico, Asia Minor and in every country of North and South America.

The poppies are made by disabled veterans in hospitals in the East, at piece-work cost and the state departments of the Veterans of Foreign Wars all taken "certains quotas." A small amount is deducted for national and state relief and the rest goes to the poppies that sell the poppies to be used as their relief funds arise. The veterans are paid one and one-quarter cents for every poppy they make and some of them are skillful enough to turn out from 800 to 1000 poppies in a day, thereby earning about $5.00.

WORLD WAR YARNS

by Lieut. Frank E. Hagan

A Hoodoo That Wasn't

If you are one of those timorous individuals who believe that the number 13 is a jinx, talk to a former member of one evacuation hospital unit which served over there. He will tell you that there's absolutely nothing to that superstition at all. If there had been, not one of the men who served with Evacuation Hospital No. 13 would ever have come home. That number alone would have been enough to prove their undoing, not to mention the other ways in which 13 figured in the history of that outfit. Here is what Jack R. C. Cann, a former member, now a Michigan newspaper man, has to say about it:

"Evacuation Hospital 13 was organized by order of the War department and came into being January 13, 1918. The first promotions were 13 privates to privates first class. We boarded ship at Newport News on the night of July 13, 1918 and took 13 days and 14 nights to cross to Brest. Thirteen ran so persistently through our company history that we began purposely contriving to evolve new situations in which the figure appeared—such as placing 13 tents in a row, and so forth.

"In January, 1919, we went 'on tour' in Luxembourg with a company vaudeville show which we called the 'Jinx Chasers.' With our drivers we had 13 in the company and showed in many outlying towns, in Berdorf, Luxembourg, using the porch of the hotel as a stage with the headlights of two ambulances as spotlights."

"Black Jack" Shows the Way

A vote of the A. R. F. to name its most distinguished appearing soldier would reveal a formidable candidate in the person of Gen. John J. Pershing.

Not only was "Black Jack" an ace for appearance—he knew the drill manuals from cover to cover and he recognized the necessity of the discipline he demanded of his soldiers.

A story of Christmas day, 1918, President Wilson and party, and General Pershing, emphasizes the latter fact. "They all stopped at the village of Sarrey, Haute Marne," relates Charles R. Cabot of Boston, "following their Christmas dinner with me and officers of the Twenty-sixth division.

"Besides the President and Mrs. Wilson and General Pershing, Lieut. Gen. Hunter Liggett, Admiral Cary Grayson, Monsieur and Madame Jusserand were among the party. They inspected the men's quarters in Sarrey, where equipment was laid out on the hayloft bunks we occupied.

"One of the ladies, perhaps Mrs. Wilson, was curious to know how the shelter halves could be made into a pup tent. Whereupon, General Pershing knelt quickly, gathered the shelter halves, rifles and tent pins of two of the men. Then he set up a pup tent in the straw.

"When the tent was erect, 'Black Jack' turned away. But President Wilson touched him on the shoulder and said: 'As your commanding officer, I desire you to leave this equipment as you found it.' "General Pershing quickly bent down, refolded the shelter halves and rearranged all the equipment in its proper place."

Such Taking Ways!

If some one says to you, "Why that fellow would steal a red-hot stove if you didn't watch him!" you'd probably laugh at that as a pleasant bit of exaggeration because it's obvious that no one could ever do that. But a captain of the Judge advocate's court in one sector of France is the authority for this story:

"It happened during the recent cold spell when some of our troops were traveling from the seaboard to the interior. They traveled in semi-open horse cars and it was cold, and cold! One train stopped in front of a small railroad station and six soldiers with cold hands and feet jumped from the car and entered the waiting room.

"In the center of the room was a large square coal stove with red-hot sides. There was a whispered conference. Then one man stood on another's shoulders and dislodged the stovepipe. At the same time two others placed poles under the bottom of the stove, lifted it off the floor and walked out of the room with it. They placed it in the horse car, stuck the pipe out of one door and were warm for the remainder of the trip. Of course, the French authorities raised a big row about it and presented a bill for 400 francs for the stove and the coal in it. When the commanding officer heard the story he ordered the bill paid without a murmur. He said it was worth every cent of it—for American soldiers to prove that you could steal a red-hot stove and get away with it.

"I know of only one case to beat that one or come anywhere near equalling it. That concerned the infantryman who stole a hive full of honey and took the bees along with it. The medical department handled one aspect of the case and the progress surpassed the other. The bees melted out some of the punishment and we along his pay for costs."

For TEETHING troubles

FUSSY, fretful . . . of course babies are uncomfortable at teething time! And mothers are worried because of the little upsets which come so suddenly then. But there's one sure way to comfort a restless, teething child. Castoria—made especially for babies and children! It's perfectly harmless, as the formula on the wrapper tells you. It's mild in taste and action. Yet it rights little upsets with a never-failing effectiveness.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given to tiny infants—as often as there are disturbances. It is invaluable. But it has every-day uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever older children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset, a more liberal dose of this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

Unofficial County Returns

On the unofficial returns from the several precincts of Lincoln county the Democrats led in only four of the offices. They were:
A. H. Hudspeth, for supreme court justice, who received a majority over Denny of 120; Marie Cavanaugh, for member of legislature, 16th district, (Lincoln county) whose majority over Miralio Maen is 20; W. E. Kimbrell, for assessor, is given a majority over Kelsey of 131; Robert S. (Sid) Jones for commissioner from the 2nd district, defeats Mirabal by 66 votes.
A good many irregularities, how serious is to be determined, were reported, and deputy sheriffs were very much in evidence, not only at polling places but in and about the booths and ballot boxes; and Carrizozo, apparently, the seat of the greatest expectation of trouble, because of its inclination to riot at all times, in which blood flows freely, was especially guarded—every protection thrown around the absentee balloters and the employees of the highway department—there having been four deputies not to mention innumerable plain clothesmen, within the railing at the court house, where the election was held, at the same time. A sigh of relief was given by the few, but badly frightened, good people of the town when the polls closed, without fatalities, and the sheriff's force, with the active and most efficient aid of the highway department, in its suppression of incipient riots and the prevention of bloodshed, has every right to be gratified—with the results.

Card of Thanks

I take this method to express my sincere gratitude to my friends and those who supported my candidacy for commissioner from the 2nd district, in the recent campaign, and especially to our county chairman, John A. Haley. To those who did not support me I hold no ill will, and it shall be my purpose to serve all faithfully and efficiently.
Respectfully,
Syd Jones.

Jicarilla Gold Strike

Joe Montoya has made what appears to be a most promising gold strike in Juana Gulch Jicarilla. His prospect is only down about 10 feet, but he has opened up a vein of very rich looking ore which, he says, panmings indicate values that may run to $200 a ton in gold. A still larger body of ore was also uncovered, which runs around $30 per ton. Gold is the chief value, yet copper and silver also furnish some of the values. Joe left a fine specimen in our window, which is calculated to arouse the lust for the yellow metal.

Orange juice in an orange basket was served to the children. The first grade was entertained Friday afternoon with a Halloween party given by their teacher Miss Dorothy Wright. They played games and told spooky stories which added to the Halloween spirit.
 Witches and black and orange scrap-books were given as favors to each child present. After an hour of jolly fun, cake and punch were served as refreshments.
 The eighth grade entertained the sixth and seventh grades with a Halloween party Friday, Oct. 31. Mr. Groce, our superintendent, and Mr. Greer, the seventh and eighth grade teacher were present at the "Who, Who" party. Billy Bryan won first prize, and Johnny Lyons won second prize for the best costumes. We played many Halloween games after which refreshments of cake, cocoa, and marshmallows were served.
 The seventeen Freshmen of Corona High School enjoyed very much the privilege of wearing their cloth backwards, with a cedar bouquet and odd stockings last Friday and also showing deep love and respect for all teachers and upper-classmen whom they met. Friday night a party was sponsored by the sophomores, juniors and seniors in honors of the freshmen who were overjoyed at being branded with ice and allowed to push a peanut the length of the Gym with their noses which were painfully blistered with the performance. Sandwiches, cake and coffee were served and enjoyed very much after the strenuous exercise up-stairs. Every one wore old clothes and were glad of it afterward. Prizes were given to the best boy and girl sports in the Freshman class and were won by R. C. Montgomery and DeAlva Crow. A booby prize was won by Ruby Sheffield.
 A snappy basket ball game was played by the Corona town team and the Fort Stanton team. The Fort Stanton team won by a score of 35-31 after a tie of 27-27 which was played off.
 A party was given Friday afternoon in the Home Economics room. The Home Ec. I girls were guests with the faculty and Home Ec. II girls served cake and tea. Games were played and afterward came a merry time of dishwashing. The party was a Home Ec. Project.
 Mr. C. E. Nunnally visited Alice Sultimer and other friends here last week. He went to Three Rivers where he will take up his duties as operator for the S. P. R. R.
 Mr. Brack Sloan was in Corona Tuesday.
 Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sultimer and Mr. and Mrs. Cant Brooks spent an enjoyable evening at cards Friday Oct. 31 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Simpson.

Marries in Colorado

The following clipping from a Trinidad, Colorado, paper, gives the marriage of a young man, whose parents lived in Lincoln county many years, and who have a number of relatives still residing here, particularly the Cleghorn and Grumbles families:
 A wedding of interest to members of the younger set is that of Miss Frances Albertson and Geo. W. Vent, both of this city, which was solemnized in Pueblo, Colo., this afternoon.
 Rev. Hayden of the Baptist church officiated in the presence of the necessary witnesses.
 Following a short honeymoon the couple will return to Trinidad and will make their home at 208 Animas street.
 Mrs. Vent is the daughter of Mrs. Nettie Albertson, of this city. She attended the local schools and for the past two years held a position with the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Co.
 Mr. Vent, who holds a position with the Huggins Electric Co., is a graduate of the Trinidad High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Vent of this city.

It was dull in Chicago that summer. Mamma was still in Europe, and Ernestine felt that she could not confide in Lillian about Will. There were times when she was frightened about her own health. She felt faint in the heat. She could not eat at all. She had not felt this way before Peter was born, but then she had been strong and well. She couldn't understand this—her feet were swollen until she could not wear her shoes. Mrs. Schluss and Mrs. Pryor expressed their anxiety. Only Will, engrossed in his own troubles, was unaware of her frailty. She presented to Mr. Poole and to Will a superb plan, and a facility that was easier for her than tragedy.

Will found some work for an advertising agency, which he brought home to do. He might have taken one of the jobs papa had offered him from time to time, but papa was in Europe and Loring in charge of his affairs.

Ernestine could not forgive Will for playing baseball in the streets with John Pryor and a half a dozen other half grown boys, when he came back from his fruitless jaunts after work. "He doesn't care," she thought, and longed to wound him, to strike through his carelessness. She grew almost morbid. "Perhaps he'll have reason to waken to understand that life's a job for a man."

Will took five dollars, almost the last of their cash, one morning early in August and went out, looking very clean and spruce, and with the light of adventure in his eye.

"I'll find work today, or stay out till I do," he told Ernestine and kissed her on both cheeks.

Peter clung to him ecstatically. "Peter loves Will the better," she thought, pressing any thorn at hand against her heart. After he was gone, she went to her trunk and got out the bankbook she had obtained that day two years ago, when she had come out here and found Will's father dead. Here was a secret source of supply of her own. She looked at her bank balance. It was enough to pay for herself and the new baby, if she went into a two-bed ward, as Doctor Grey had planned for her. This was her money. Will would have to manage for himself and Peter. She decided to go and get the money and have cash in the house if anything happened. But she would not let Will know she had it.

She put the small bankbook on the dining room table and went about the clean and tidy house, washing dishes, setting the rooms in order.

There was a long letter from mamma in the morning mail. Ernestine did not finish reading it, for she had to go and lie down on her bed, seized with such pain that she could scarcely forbear crying out. She felt within herself no light at all, no buoyancy, no spark of life. She was dull, leaden, submerged. She felt she ought to make some effort to resist this spiritual inertia but she was too ill. She wondered if her child would be born too soon. This thought goaded her into action. She rose and gathered from her trunk Peter's little baby garments, long since washed and mended and laid away. She made the things she might need for the baby into a bundle and put it in her dresser drawer. She would get her money. She would arrange her own affairs—with competence. When the call came, she would be ready.

But she must rest first. She made herself a pot of fresh tea, asked Mrs. Schluss to look after Peter, and at length in the early afternoon she started off on the long walk to the street car.

She rode interminably, withdrawing her spirit from the congestion of the heat waves that came up from the stone pavement into the street car. Walking in a mist she reached the bank and went inside. She opened her purse, but found among its contents no bankbook. Like a picture in a dream she could see the leather square of it on the dining room table in the little house. She had left it at home.

If she had been in normal condition she would have realized that it was quite possible for her to establish her identity at the bank. She had made many small deposits. The teller would have remembered her. But as she stood in disappointment, the world grew black before her eyes, and for a straining moment, fully conscious but blind, she stood in silent terror. The blindness passed, and she picked up her purse and went out of the bank. Turned half instinctively, toward Mrs. Bennett's. A strange girl was at the door, a colored girl who raised her eyes at Ernestine.

"Ma' Bennett's out, ma'am, will you wait?" Ernestine left without a word, and went back to the boulevard. The darkness, the blindness was coming down on her again. She felt that she was going to faint. She could not hold on any longer—there was nothing with which to cling—she no longer cared. The great bulk of the bus was moving down toward her—gigantic, menacing. She felt that it would crush her, and moved back a little on the sidewalk, her horrified eyes fixed upon the monster which seemed to swell and grow, and then, strangely, to rise from the pavement and to turn slowly and gracefully about in the air. She knew it was delirium, she knew that the bus could not act that way. But her knowledge could not pierce her fear of confusion. And then the bus lunged at her—the blindness came down again, and Ernestine, alone and very ill, fell down upon the pavement of the boulevard with a soft and plaintive moan.

CHAPTER IX

Loring Finds Ernestine

It was nine o'clock when Lillian reached Chicago from Langley Lake in obedience to Loring's frantic telephone call. She turned the car into Erie street, as Loring had instructed her, and stopped before Mrs. Bennett's door, her hands falling from the wheel of the car with nervous weariness. She went up the stairs quickly, her heart full of repressed terror for Ernestine. She could not imagine what might have happened to her. It wasn't time surely for her baby. Loring had been brief and unsatisfactory over long distance.

The door was opened by a colored maid who stared in silence.

"Is Mrs. Bennett in? I'm Mrs. Todd's sister. They told me to come here."

The girl gave a squawk and threw her hand up over her mouth and rolled her eyes at Lillian.

"Can you tell me where Mrs. Todd is?" asked Lillian sharply.

"Lawd, Miss, what I cud. Nobody knows. But you better e-min and talk to Mr. Bennett. She kin tell you the fact."

Trembling seized Lillian, but she followed the girl in silence to Mrs. Bennett's sitting room, and in a moment found herself confronted by a plump little woman whose face was gray and ravaged. Lillian looked at her with pleading eyes, afraid to trust her voice. Her throat was dry and closed.

"Please—where is she? What has happened?"

"We don't know. We can't find her."

"Tell me—please."

"She's not been well—you know of course that she was expecting another confinement?"

Lillian nodded, realizing that she was ignorant of the date.

Reviewed of Slow Growth. Exposed is sometimes called the living antique. Truly it is, as the proportions of the plant determine its age, and a reproduction is not possible unless one chooses to wait a hundred years and have one grow.

"Well, since Will's been out of work, she's not been well."

"Will out of work? I didn't know that." Her heart was shaken with remorse. Will out of work, and Ernestine ill, and she had known nothing of it—playing bridge and golf and swimming at the lake.

"But where did she go? Who was with her last? What happened?"

Mrs. Bennett tried to be coherent. "She left her little boy with a neighbor and went out alone, early in the afternoon. Evidently she intended to go to the bank, for Will found her bankbook lying on the table. We can't find out whether she was at the bank or not. No one noticed her, and she did not withdraw any money. But she came here about four. I was out and she left, but the maid said she looked as though she were going to drop then. That's the last that's been seen of her. Will got home about three, and he began to worry because Ernestine had not told him she was going out, and it was so hot, and she's not been well. He decided to come over here to the bank, and when he found that she hadn't been there, he went to your mother's. Ernestine wasn't there. Then Will came here, and Mr. Hamilton met him here. I phoned to Mrs. Schluss for them, but Ernestine wasn't at home yet."

"Wherever she was she would have come home to Peter, as Will argued, and I agreed with him. Will was nearly distracted—the men quarreled bitterly, and Mr. Hamilton called up and organized a search—of course, people in the city go off and are delayed and don't get home on time. But, you see, now it's nearly ten and we haven't heard anything of her. Mr. Hamilton has notified the police. They'll find her—unless—"

"What do you mean?" cried Lillian sharply. Her hands were shaking so that she could scarcely hold her purse and gloves.

"Well—your husband—Mr. Hamilton, he's got the idea that she may have destroyed herself. But Will says no—she wouldn't do that."

"Will is right. Ernestine wouldn't do such a thing."

"But pregnant women get wonderful queer notions in their heads," insisted Mrs. Bennett dolefully. "Mr. Hamilton was nearly wild. He told Will that he had killed Ernestine—it seemed hard for Will to hear, but he brushed it away like nothing." She paused.

"Mr. Hamilton's got a taxi for us out there—had it since six o'clock. I don't know how much this'll cost him."

"That doesn't matter," said Lillian impatiently, and tried to control her perturbation. She was disturbed anew at the thought of Loring violent, uncontrolled—she had never seen him so, except on the other occasion of his quarrel with Will. But this was worse. He had always been so fond of Ernestine—as though she were his own little sister. She felt a great relief to think that he had taken charge of the search. He would find Ernestine if she were to be found.

But the thought of her sister out in these hot streets, lost, ill and alone, caused her such anguish that she could scarcely breathe. What would mamma say to her? Mamma loved Ernestine the better—always had. Mamma had really left Ernestine to her.

The door was swung open and Loring stood there. His eyes were glittering with fear or fever. He looked at her as if he scarcely knew her.

"Lillian!" he exclaimed.

"I drove," she told him, "all the way. I've been so worried."

"You had cause to worry," he said grimly. "When we find Ernestine she is going home with us—to stay. Don't you agree? She's got to have somebody to take care of her."

"Of course, Loring."

"I've news of a sort," he said slowly, and they stared at him. "I don't know what it's worth. There was a woman taken to the County hospital this afternoon—from this neighborhood. She was a young woman, and she was to be confined. It might have been Ernestine. I've sent Will out there, and I came—by to see if you were here—to his wife—and to wait here for a phone call."

The telephone shrilled, and the sound leaped through them all. Mrs. Bennett picked up the receiver with a trembling hand, while they all watched her in straining silence.

"Yes—yes—this is Mrs. Bennett. . . Oh, he did. . . Oh, thank you. . . Her sister is here. I'll tell them."

She turned from the phone.

"It's the hospital office. Will has identified Ernestine, and he's there with her. Oh, Mr. Hamilton—you found her!"

"Get your hat," said Loring. "And come with us. Never mind your keys, Lillian. We'll take the taxi."

Advices Use of Slogan to Overcome Dejection

Slogans are advocated as an aid to a healthy mental outlook by James D. Weiland, who considers their effect and lists a number in an article in Hygeia Magazine.

A good slogan can brighten our whole horizon, fill us with courage and be an emotional stimulus. It directs and holds the attention to a bracing thought. For instance, when a man is down in the dumps it is comforting to think that "the man who try to do something and fail are infinitely better than those who try to do nothing and succeed," or that "there are more chances and opportunities in life than we know."

There are slogans hidden away in the world's literature that it almost

FIND COTTONSEED MEAL SAFE FEED

Used as Substitute for Tankage for Hogs.

How much cottonseed meal can we feed steers? That was the question asked within the animal husbandry department of the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college, when they planned last year's feeding experiments.

The basic ration consisted of ground corn, alfalfa hay, and enough ground limestone to make 2 per cent of the grain ration. To this was added cottonseed meal in different amounts for different lots of steers. The lot which received one and one-half pounds of cottonseed meal per steer daily, made the largest gains, an average of 1.91 pounds a day, and their gains were made at a cost of $7.08 a hundred pounds, which was the cheapest rate of gain.

Although limestone was included as a part of the ration no advantage was noted.

One additional lot of steers was fed prairie hay instead of alfalfa hay. Both these lots showed a gain of 1.75 pounds a day per steer, but the lot fed prairie hay gained 100 pounds at a cost of $7.01 while it cost $8.22 with alfalfa hay. The steers fed alfalfa hay beat the others on the market, bringing $12.50 a hundred compared to $12 for the lot fed prairie hay.

Alfalfa hay was figured at $15 a ton, prairie at $8, cottonseed meal at $38, and corn at 65 cents a bushel.

Cottonseed meal was also tried as a substitute for a part of the tankage in the ration of fattening swine. Results showed no ill effects when cottonseed meal is fed in this way, one lot actually getting three parts of cottonseed meal to one part of tankage. Gains were satisfactory and costs of gain were uniformly low. It appeared that the price of cottonseed meal must be less than half the price of tankage if it is to be profitable. One lot that received cottonseed meal but no tankage made much smaller gains at greater cost.

Artificial Respiration Useful to Save Lambs

Immersing a lamb which has been chilled at birth in a dish of hot water so that all parts of the body except the head are submerged, will often save it. Immediately after removing the lamb from the water it should be wiped dry and kept warm until it has gained strength.

Lambs failing to breathe at birth are saved frequently by artificial respiration. To do this, rub the sides, move the front legs forward and backward, and blow in the nostrils.

Feed two tablespoonfuls of the ewe's milk every two hours to a weak lamb. After a few artificial feedings the lamb will develop sufficient strength to look after himself.

A ewe which has lost her lamb may be induced to adopt an orphan if the skin of the dead lamb is placed on the back of the orphan. Another method is to dab a bit of kerosene or winter green oil on the nose of the ewe and on the back of the orphan lamb.

Should a ewe refuse to own her lamb, bring a strange dog into the shed; the danger often stimulates the protective instinct of the mother to the point where she will forget her stubbornness and go to the lamb.

Fall Pigs Profitable if Given Attention

"Vigorous fall pigs that are properly fed and handled probably will make pork just as cheaply as spring pigs," says W. E. Carroll, chief of swine husbandry, University of Illinois.

"If fall pigs become infested with worms the losses are almost sure to run high and in addition the growth of the pigs will be seriously stunted, thereby increasing the cost of making pork with fall pigs. Fall pigs handled under the swine sanitation system will have a vigor which will mean economical pork production when the animals are turned into the feed lot, and in addition the sanitation system will save many pigs which otherwise would be lost during the sticking period because of worms."

If the pigs are farrowed in the permanent hoghouse or around the premises, the sows should be washed thoroughly with soap and water so that their sides and udders will be clean. Their pens should be thoroughly scrubbed out with a solution of boiling water containing common household lye at the rate of one pound to 30 gallons of water. This is the same treatment that is recommended for spring litters.

Save Finished Hogs

After a hog has been finished for market, he should be saved. Often for lack of careful handling, he dies en route from the farm to the packing house. After being warmed up by a long drive, the animal is in condition to contract pneumonia; and he is usually taken out at the other end of the journey dead. Every farmer who delivers hogs to be shipped should handle them very carefully. Handle carefully, load slowly, and ship quick.

Combinations of Materials Add to Attractiveness of Exterior

This brick and frame home will just suit those who want to build this type of house and want to do it economically. It has straight walls, which mean low construction cost. At the same time the entrance door and the windows, together with the roof make it very attractive. As will be seen by the floor plan, the home contains six rooms, there being three bedrooms and bath on the second floor.

Architects are using combinations of materials more and more when designing modern small homes. The contrast secured through the use of brick and lumber or brick and stucco adds to the attractiveness of the exterior appearance of the house and gives it a distinctiveness, which is not generally secured through the use of a single material.

Shown in the illustration is the exterior view of a combination of brick gables, and the wide dormers on the second floor, all are features, which, when added to the balcony over the sun room, make this a very distinctive architectural design for a home. The floor plans show that this home contains six rooms together with the sun room and a breakfast room at the back. The arrangement is very convenient. The entrance door at the corner leads into a hall out of which run the stairs to the second floor. At the right is the living room, 12 feet by 14 feet, with the sun room opening off of it. Back of the living room through a cased opening is the dining room, at the left of which is the kitchen and breakfast room. A right angle turn in the stairs leading to the second floor opens into a central hall off of which are the three bedrooms and the bath.

This home will accommodate a good-sized family, as all of its rooms are comparatively large and are arranged so that there is easy access to all of them. The good feature is the size of the basement for the accommodation of the heating plant, fuel storage and other storage.

Green Is Most Popular Color for the Kitchen

Our favorites in colors change from time to time just as our favorites in movie actresses and breakfast foods vary. A person who preferred purple five years ago may now think there is no color as lovely as yellow. A preference for tan may switch suddenly to emerald or rose. Our color tastes change as we notice new colors or see too much of "favorite" shades.

Not long ago it was generally agreed that blue was the most popular color for both men and women and that red, in tints and shades from pale pink to dark maroon, was the second choice of most women. But since the beginning of the present color vogue there are indications that other colors are supplanting the popular blue and red.

According to a recent investigation, the colors most popular for American kitchens have changed. When color first invaded the kitchen, blue held first place. However, we are told that the most popular kitchen color now is green with yellow ranking as second and blue as third. White is the fourth most popular kitchen color. The green is a light blue-green. The yellow is described as butter or rich golden. And the blue is azure. The white that is favored most is tinged with cream.

A model kitchen decorated in these four most popular culinary colors proves a constant joy both to the woman of the house and her cook. Members of the family insist that meals prepared in the newly decorated room are more appetizing.

The ceiling is painted white with a suggestion of cream—a color obtained by mixing a small quantity of raw sienna with white-lead paint. The upper walls down to the top of the cupboards are colored with white lead tinted rich golden yellow. Blue-green was added to white lead for the lower part of the walls and the cupboards and tables. A band of azure divides the yellow from the green. Azure and yellow were used generously to brighten cupboard handles and door panels. The floor is painted a dark green with the four other colors of the room spattered over it. The final floor coat of white lead and the spatter colors to lead were mixed with linseed oil, turpentine, floor varnish and a small quantity of drier. This gave a surface that wears well and washes easily. At the windows of this model kitchen are hung gingham curtains in green and yellow check.

Type of Fence Means Much to Home Beauty

Many a rear lawn and even some of the front yards are now hemmed in with fences, but they are not merely installed as something useful without regard to the ornamental side, not these modern fences.

The home owner picks his fence as carefully as he does his light fixtures and wall decorations. He calls in an experienced fence "architect" to build the proper type. "Custom-built fences are now a commodity that are called for frequently. There seems to be as many styles in fences as in frocks nowadays, for various fashions in gardens must be matched in fencing. Gardens are no longer simple or nondescript, however, but demand many accessories aside from fences, pergolas, trellises, birdhouses that must match the fence, if there be one.

A popular type fence is of ornamental woven wire with red cedar posts. A chain link lawn fence also is in demand for certain type yards or gardens, with the attractive and ornamental wooden fences painted white in trellis effect, or in quaint picket fashion, with graceful gates or archways that gleam enticingly through vines and tall shrubbery, where gardens are luxuriant in the summer.

The old-fashioned type of ornamental miniature wire fence enclosure for flower beds also is back in fashion again, and the formal garden takes on an added "antique" note with fenced-in flower pots.

Pick Colors Carefully for Exterior of Home

When selecting paint for exterior work it is well to remember that some colors are less enduring than others. They will either darken gradually under the blaze of the sun, or fade out more or less quickly. Blues, pinks and delicate tints are intended solely for interior work, and should never be exposed to the sun. Greens of the yellowish cast are more fugitive than the darker greens; the former will grow lighter, while the latter are permanent.

Replacements

It is often found that after the home has been newly decorated the home fixtures have been outmoded, particularly the plumbing fixtures. Replacements of this type should be made before redecorating to save the cost of breaking through a newly painted or papered wall.

Tickled At Its Success

Carrizozo, Oct. 26, 1930
Editor News:

I was glad to read in your paper of last week that our fourth annual fair was a success and financial success in spite of the hard times. Next year I hope to see every business man represented on the score card as the amount charged is 20% over the amount charged last year. It helps the town to have something like this every year. After paying the interest on the indebtedness of Community Club, there is a neat sum left to apply to reducing the debt thereon. A few more fairs will wipe out the indebtedness entirely.

BUSINESS MAN

Glencoe Woman's Club

The Glencoe Woman's Club met with Mrs. Tully November first. Mrs. Davis was leader. Mrs. W. B. Prater, J. A. of the 4th Corps Area U. S. A. gave a very interesting talk on the government and customs of the Hawaiian Islands. Mrs. Tully reported the State Convention at Albuquerque. The Spanish lesson was more interesting because of a short story being studied. The Club served refreshments at the Glencoe polls election day. The next meeting of the club will be in the nature of a social party at Mrs. W. F. Coe's, December 6 and Mrs. Lillian Clark of Roswell will give a talk on her recent trip around the world.
