Farm Board "Faces a Crisis"

Washington, Feb.—The Independent Offices Appropriation Bill, as passed by the Senate, carried $100,000,000 as the final appropriation for the Federal Farm Board's $500,000,000 revolving fund.

A special dispatch to the Chicago Tribune (Rep.) recently, stated that "affairs of the Federal Farm Board are approaching a crisis," due to stabilization operations in wheat and cotton. The Tribune dispatch also says that Chairman Legge told the House Appropriations Committee that on a basis of present market prices, the stabilization operations had resulted in a loss of $30,000,000 on wheat and $40,000,000 on cotton, making a total of $70,000,000.

The figures on cotton are only about one-third the amount cited in the Senate debate on the appropriation bill. Senator Broussard (Dem. La.) stated "statistics show that the Farm Board now owns 1,300,000 bales of cotton and that the cooperatives or loans made to them by the Farm Board own 700,000 bales. This 2,000,000 bales cost them 16 cents a pound. It is now worth 10 cents a pound."

The following colloquy then ensued:

Mr. Glass: If they should sell today, they would lose $40,000,000.

Mr. Broussard: They would lose more than that. They have lost $110,000,000 already. The difference between 16 cents and 10 cents amounts to $110,000,000 on 2,000,000 bales.

If to the losses on cotton are added the admitted losses on wheat, the Farm Board would stand to lose at present prices $150,000,000 on those two commodities alone.

Discussing the $100,000,000 appropriation for the Farm Board, Senator George (Dem. Ga.) said: "The Board has been gambling in the grain market, and now members are having difficulty in financing transactions. If the Board stays in the future market, it will lose every cent."

Later Senator George said:

"Four years more of Herbert Hoover and we will be fortunate if we don't have to turn the United States Treasury into a community chest. I predict that Alexander Legge will go back to the International Harvester Company and that James Stone, the vice chairman, will return to private life, sadder and wiser men as the result of this gamble."

"If Congress and the government wanted to gamble it should have hired professionals and not amateurs."

P. O. Lease Interests gave $1,250,000 to G. O. P.

Washington, Feb.—Senator Blaine (Rep., Wis.), Chairman of the Senate Committee investigating post office leases, has announced that he would develop evidence showing that post office lease interests have contributed $1,250,000 to the Republican Party in the last two national campaigns.

In an interview with the press, he said:

"We have the names of contributors of more than $1,250,000. They are the names of individuals who are heavily interested in post

Santa Rosa Cut-Off Hit

Magdalena, N. M., Feb. 23.—Opposition to building the Santa Rosa cut-off "until the major highway program is completed throughout the state," was expressed by 100 highway 60 boosters who met here Saturday evening. The visitors were from Socorro, Mountainair, Quemado and other points besides Magdalena.

Mayor Landavazo welcomed the visitors and during the evening a discussion was held of plans for improving highway 60 and advertising it.

Highway 60, which is a cross state road, is also a section of the Carlsbad Cavern-Grand Canyon Highway via Springerville, Ariz.

W. E. West, superintendent of the Santa Fe railroad; W. A. West, secretary of the Socorro Business Men's Club, Geo. Keith, Maurice Miera, J. S. McTavish, E. M. Shaffer and others spoke.

Regarding the Santa Rosa cut-off the meeting took the position that Albuquerque is now served with good highways, and that no other new projects for entering that section should be built until the other cross state projects have been built.

Wet Platform for Democrats 1932 Says Kansan

Topoka, Kans., Feb. 23.—Dudley Doolittle, Democratic National Committeeman from Kansas, predicted Monday the Democratic party would be "wet" in the 1932 campaign in order to "represent what seems to be a desire of a very definite majority of the people of the country."

Doolittle prefaced his prediction, made in an interview, with an expression of opinion that the Democratic party in Kansas is "dry."

"We can enforce prohibition fairly well in Kansas, where we don't have a large foreign element, which can't see anything wrong in manufacturing or drinking liquor," he said.

office leases and all of the contributions went to the Republican Party."

John H. Bartlett, former First Assistant Postmaster General, testified before the committee that he had been sent to St. Paul in connection with a post office lease there to further condemnation proceedings, holding out the hope of a new post office building, while the lease was under investigation by a local grand jury.

"Is it not a fact that you were sent to St. Paul to call off the grand jury?" Senator Blaine asked the witness.

"I didn't know I was sent there for that purpose," Mr. Bartlett replied.

"But don't you realize now," Chairman Blaine asked, "that you were part of a scheme to chloroform the grand jury investigation and defeat the administration of justice?"

"I can see now that I probably was being used toward that end," Bartlett replied, "and that I was directed to do certain things which fitted into somebody else's scheme, but I didn't know it at the time."

Postmaster General Brown refused to answer questions concerning some phases of the post office lease situation on the ground that it would be "incompatible with the public interest."

The hearing has developed that there are about 6,500 leased buildings used by the Post Office Department, the total annual rental paid for them being $16,541,000.

The Carrizozo Woman's Club

A very well attended and interesting meeting of The Woman's Club of Carrizozo was held at the home of Mrs. Albert Ziegler February 18th.

The Club voted to give $10.00 towards the New Mexico bell to be placed in the Valley Forge Memorial.

The music department is planning to bring Samuel Martinez here for a concert some time in April. No one should miss hearing this wonderful violinist.

At the close of the business meeting Mrs. Blaney, chairman of drama presented the following program:

Piano solo . . . . . Margaret Shaffer
Vocal solo . . . . . Mrs. R. E. Lemon
Piano solo . . . . . Lydia Penfield
Reading . . . . . Miss Brickley
One act play "Top Dog", Mrs. Blaney, Mrs. Snyder, Miss Melas, Mrs. Chas. Young.

Before the Club adjourned the president, Mrs. Paul Mayer presented each member with a copy of the "Club Woman's Collect", which follows:

The Club Woman's Collect

Keep us, O God, from pettiness; let us be large in thought, in word, in deed.

Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking.

May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face, without self-pity and without prejudice.

May we never be hasty in judgment, always generous.

Teach us to put into action our better impulses, straight forward and unafraid.

Let us take time for all things; make us grow calm, serene and gentle.

Grant that we may realize that it is the little things that create differences; that in the big things of life we are one.

And may we strive to touch and to know the great common woman's heart of us all; and O Lord God, let us not forget to be kind.

Speeding Up Sales

The most energetic move made by an automobile manufacturer so far this year to bring volume up to normal levels is to get under way next week when the Chevrolet Motor company embarks on a sales promotional activity said to be the most extensive ever put on by a national manufacturer. Upwards of 40,000 people in the Chevrolet domestic retail organization will be summoned to the 52 zone headquarters in as many key cities to attend meetings staged by factory officials for the improvement of retail sales procedure.

The move represents an extraordinary activity by Chevrolet, attempted for the first time this year, and is based on the belief that unusually good business in 1930 will reward the organization which goes out after it.

The purpose, according to Mr. Kingler, is to school the retail salesman in every phase of car merchandising in the interest of improved service to the public, which in turn will add to the good will of the dealer's establishment and the product, and add to sales volume.

Meetings in each town last for one day, beginning with a luncheon and terminating with an afternoon business session in a leading theater or auditorium. A feature of the luncheon is the installation of officers of the "100-Car Club", a star salesman's organization composed of those retail salesmen who disposed of one hundred or more cars during the calendar year.

The revision in the company's normal program had almost immediate effect. Production in November and December set new high records for those months, and Chevrolet passenger car registrations in December lead all other makes, a position of leadership which the company seems destined to maintain during January in view of the trend of early reports.

Wearing the Fine Feathers

By JEAN NEWTON

A MECHANIZED world with every-body, including women, wearing drab uniforms, all alike, has been discussed, but about as seriously as we would discuss machine men or any other ideas out of weird modernistic plays.

But there is a country where it seems anything may happen, and that is Rumania, whence come reports of uniform dress decreed for women clerks in the government service.

It was a cabinet minister, we learn, who had the bright idea of ordering the robot-like appearance for all his women government employees.

They are to wear "black apron-like garments, tightly closed at the neck and extending to the ankles and to the wrists, where they must be tightly closed also." Incidentally rouge, lipstick or other cosmetics may not be used by the women. In fact the slightest disobedience of this order, it is announced, will be "punishable by instant dismissal."

Can you imagine being "fired" for turning your cuff back or opening your high closed collar on a hot day?

There has been some speculation as to the sources motivating this remarkable ruling.

One's first thought, of course, would be to regard it as a token of extreme susceptibility on the part of the male government officials to such details as a short skirt or a bare waist. You are almost ready to feel sorry for these poor men, perhaps have already wasted a few tears on such a pitiable condition of the stronger sex who are in need of such rigorous protection from us. But then perhaps you hear a whisper which came through with the dispatches.

And that is that many members of the Rumanian Officers' corps are said to resort to such things as powder and perfume, and perhaps a bit of rouge, to brighten their own charms. If that is indeed a fact, the reason for making robots of the women is obvious. They are jealous, they feel that in competition with us they cannot hope to decorate the official landscape as their position and their European masculine right of dominance entitles them to.

We may have found their reason for trying to make robots of their women. But have they found the answer? It's my idea that the women will prefer resigning from official jobs to men, creating a drab background as a foil to masculine splendor.

On the other hand, perhaps this is the first step of our entrance into an age where the male human, like the male bird today, wears the fine plumage, the female being the undecorative pursuer. Who knows!

NUTTY NATURAL HISTORY

BY HUGH HUTTON

THE STOCKHOLM SKOO

THE skoo, or two tailed straddled-bird, presents a curious example of evolutionary development. Fossil specimens found in the mountainous regions of western Sweden show that the skoo had legs fore and aft on its long body to enable it to navigate the narrow mountain passes, but the later changes to city life, where numerous temptations made its feet stray from the straight and narrow path, developed the peculiar arrangement of head, feet, and tail as shown above. The young skoos are called skoodles, in the quaint Swedish tongue.

The skoo here pictured trying to follow two primrose paths at once has a paper-shell pecan body, to which are attached in the middle a toothpick neck and peanut head. The ears are split peanuts, and the eyes are merely pen and ink. The feet are split almond kernels, the legs clove, and the tails which steer each foot separately are toothpicks.

KNOWING THE TREES

EUROPEAN BEECH

(Fagus Sylvatica)
THE European beech is a large tree, 60 to 100 feet high, round topped and symmetrical, and with wide-spreading limbs. It is a tree of rugged growth, with dense foliage of surpassing beauty. The bark is very smooth and in most varieties is darker gray than in the American beech. The leaves are often similar to those of the American beech, but usually shorter and broader, with less pronounced teeth and with 5 to 9 pairs of side veins, instead of 9 to 14 pairs, as in the American beech.

No serious diseases of the leaves of the beech are known. Several fungi cause leaf-spots occasionally and a sooty mold fungus often occurs on the leaves. It is subject, however, to several wood-rot diseases. The yellowish sapwood-rot and common white wood-rot are very destructive in the forest.

The most distinguishing characteristic of the European beech is the smooth gray bark which invites the carving of initials and entwining hearts.

JOY IN ALL THE TEARS

By Douglas Malloch.
I WEEP, but gladly, as the skies
Keep verdant all the earth—
Our tears the tribute, when one dies,
That love may pay to worth.

Our sorrows happy days recall,
Some hour, some lovely scene—
Grief sends its raindrops, after all,
To keep remembrance green.

So there is joy in all the tears
Of memory, my dead,
But, oh, the long and voiceless years
That stretch so far ahead!

Put Labels on Pantry Containers

By BETSY CALLISTER

"YOU will find the tea in that cracker box with the dent in the top. And the coffee is in that round tin that held the fruit cake. The rice is in one of the fruit jars and so is the farina. You can tell the difference because a string is tied around the rice."

Doubtless you have sometimes heard some such directions as these when it came to giving instructions as to where the various articles of diet were to be found.

Very few of us housewives have all our foods put away in such a way that they can be found without opening some few boxes and cans. You may think you have, but the chances are that here and there in pantry or larder there is a container not properly labeled. You know its contents, so there seems little object in labeling it. Still for the sake of convenience and system all such containers should be labeled plainly.

It is possible to buy gummed labels at a very small cost. These gummed labels are arranged in sheets, alphabetically, and contain the names of every sort of food that any housewife could want to list. There are also labels for articles that are usually found in household supply closets, and another set for medicine and drug cabinets. With these at hand it is a simple enough matter to label every box that contains anything of importance.

At the end of these gummed labels there are some blank labels on which you may write such articles as are not listed.

Suggestions for Winter Meals

By NELLIE MAXWELL

They say that man is mighty,
He governs land and sea;
He wields a mighty scepter
O'er lesser powers that be:
But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurled
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.
—William Ross Wallace.

AS MORE internal fuel is needed to keep up the body heat in winter, one needs to serve more of the heat-producing foods. As these are mostly protein and are apt when eaten too freely to leave an acid condition, it is needful to serve fruits and vegetables very freely to counteract this consequence.

Eggs are not really appreciated as a food. Made into omelets, fried, poached, cooked in the shell—that is about the usual round of egg-cookery with an occasional dish of scrambled eggs. Try cooking them in potato nests, using leftover mashed potato, well seasoned and formed into nests. Drop the eggs into the nests, season with salt and pepper, sprinkle with chopped parsley, after they have been baked until well set. A piece of butter and the parsley will add to the flavor as well as appearance.

Egg Salad.
Take six hard-cooked eggs and cook them so that they will be hard but not tough. Use for six eggs, six pints of boiling water. Place the eggs in a deep dish, add the water and cover closely, set on the back of the range where they will keep warm. Allow to stand a half-hour and the eggs will be well cooked and still tender. The eggs should be of the room temperature when added to the boiling water. If taken from the refrigerator, more water will be needed, as it will cool too quickly. Chop the egg whites and put the yolks through a sieve, combine with six or eight anchovies or sardines which have been made into a paste. Toss together and place with finely minced celery on shredded lettuce. Serve with french dressing.

Another nice way to bake eggs with potato is to place the mashed potato in a baking dish an inch or so deep and make depressions for the eggs, drop in a fresh egg in each place, sprinkle with salt, pepper, bits of cooked bacon and cover thickly with buttered crumbs. Bake until the eggs are set.

Stuffed Egg Salad.
Cook the eggs hard as above. Cut six eggs into halves and take out the yolks. Put the yolks through a sieve with one-half cupful of mayonnaise, a few dashes of paprika, a small onion finely chopped and one tablespoonful of chili sauce or tomato ketchup. Fill

"The Records of the Sixth"

When the old soldiers of the army were good ones, you couldn't find their equal in wartime value, anywhere. One of the best of the good ones was Sergeant Major Ullrich of the Sixth Infantry, an outfit attached to General Pershing himself during part of its career.

There was little of the military in Ullrich's appearance. He was a "paper" man almost solely, the sergeant major being, in effect, the general manager of a regiment.

No recruit was so insignificant that Ullrich didn't know all about him before he'd had a single pay day in the Sixth; no detail escaped his wise old eyes. And most of what he learned he kept on file simply by entrusting it to memory.

Shortly after war was declared, the army did an almost unprecedented thing. Ullrich, the enlisted man, was commissioned a major and ordered to report to the adjutant general's department at Washington. The outfit was to round out his thirty years' service as an officer.

Wearing his major's uniform, old Ullrich bade good-by to two of his closest friends. "They've spoiled a d--d good sergeant major to make an awfully poor major," he confessed to Col. Matthias Crowley of the Fifty-fourth Infantry. Then, tears streaming down his face, he shook hands in farewell with another colonel, Robert Noble of the Sixth Infantry, Ullrich's own regiment, and stumbled down the road.

Noble stood on the porch of his quarters, eyes following Ullrich until the erstwhile sergeant major had almost disappeared. Then, with a shrug of the shoulders toward the departing soldier, he said sadly to his adjutant: "Captain, there go the records of the Sixth Infantry!"

"The Fast Mountain Mail"

Persons as distinguished as the late Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago rode in the cab of Phillip Goldstein before the war. They should have seen him later, in the Vosges, as he piloted "Goldstein's Fast Mountain Mail."

Goldstein emerged from the war as a sergeant with a sterling record of service. Not the least of his accomplishments was delivering the mail on time to his regimental headquarters during one of its early visits on the line.

Goldstein was a corporal and mail orderly, in the mountains. He made a single, toiling passage with heavy mail sacks to an advanced p. c. Then he decided his duties must be lightened.

On his second delivery, the mail bags were strapped on the backs of two burros. They were they animals but one of them could have handled all the sacks. It became the custom for cooks along the steep mountain trail to tempt the little burros as they straggled past, with kitchen delicacies from the army stores.

"Hey! You're delaying the Goldstein Mountain Mail," Corporal Goldstein would shout indignantly to the cooks. And he'd urge one burro, then the other, into action up the narrow trail.

"I gotta use two of 'em," he explained confidentially to the regimental adjutant one day. "So's I can leave spots on 'em to reach with a spur." Saying which he swung the limb of a tree against the nearest burro with a resounding crack! And the "Fast Mountain Mail of Goldstein" was on its way again.

The Passing of a Sea Power

Exactly ten days after the Armistice, the Germany navy surrendered. Sailors aboard the New York, Texas, Wyoming, Arkansas and Florida (the Sixth Battle squadron) on November 21, 1918, participated in the surrender.

The five American battleships were in what was known as the red line of two groups which maneuvered into position so that a highway of victory was formed down which the German vessels steamed to lower their colors at sunset.

Directly ahead of the American ships that day was the British Fifth squadron.

The British destroyer Cardiff went ahead to pick up the German vessels. This it did and the long black forms of the enemy boats were first sighted by the allied fleet shortly after nine o'clock. It was an impressive sight as the German fleet, led by the Selditz, Moltke and Hindenburg, passed by. The Allied vessels were in complete silence. Every man was at his post. Every gun was manned.

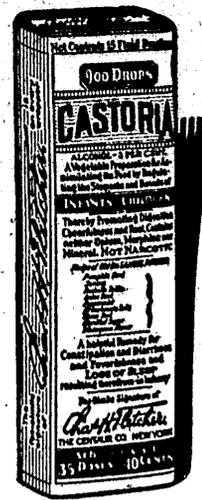

The lines closed in behind the fleet which had passed in surrender. A band aboard Admiral Beatty's flagship, the Queen Elizabeth, played "The Star Spangled Banner." A second band, on Admiral Rodman's flagship, played "Hail to the Chief." German sea power was no more.

Odd Modes of Dressing

Woman's Crown of Glory

For centuries, the hair seems to have been covered. The Egyptians wore wigs and headresses made in the shape of birds with beaks projecting over the face, and only a few black curls escaping. Greek women parted their hair in the middle and brought it down each side of the face and over the ears, catching it up in a loose coil at the back of the neck, holding it in place with a skewer of gold; bands of ribbon were bound about the head to hold the hair across the forehead. The Roman matron wore an elaborate arrangement of curls, sometimes close to the head and often piled high on top, with jeweled coronets and pins to keep the coiffure in place. Alas! these long pins were sometimes used in anger to punish the slave who was responsible for blunders.

Having worn the hair exposed for a while, a change was necessary and chin cloths, wimples and the henin, were used to cover the hair entirely. By the beginning of the Fifteenth century, headresses had become so fantastic as to appear ridiculous, the women seeming to vie with each other to make them as grotesque as possible; they also shaved the hair at the back of the neck and plucked their eyebrows. (Ditto, 1630.) The clergy warned, and laws were made, and finally the hair was brought low and again covered with velvet headresses and graceful turbans ornamented with network of pearls. With the next turn of the wheel of fashion, the hair was worn longer and curled, held up with real wire hairpins of the biped kind said to have been invented by the English in 1545. Two centuries later, the worst came in the form of coils, so high that the hairdresser had to finish them from the top of a stepladder and one knows how many hairpins he must have used.

How to Escape FLU

- 1 Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most likely to be spread; overcrowded cars and public meeting places; overheated, stuffy rooms.
- 2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air, but avoid drafts or chilling.
- 3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.
- 4 Above all, avoid catching colds. They lower your resistance to the flu germ. Ward them off. At the first sign of any cold, take Bayer Aspirin and remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone. If you have a sore throat, dissolve some Bayer Aspirin tablets in water and gargle; this will relieve the soreness and reduce the inflammation.
- 5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL

Trainmaster and Mrs. Cardwell were in El Paso Saturday to meet some friends from California.

Manager Gamble, of the Gamble Hatchery and Poultry Farm, Tucumcari, was here this week, looking up business. See his announcement about baby chicks elsewhere in this issue.

Mrs. Zoe Glassmire and son Haven are expected home tomorrow from Lawrence, Kans. They have been absent since November, and Mrs. Glassmire has been very ill during part of the time, but has completely recovered, which is pleasant news to friends.

C. B. Jennings, an old-time compositor, and a lino machine man, passed through yesterday enroute from the coast to the east. Some years ago Jennings did some work on the News and he looked us up while here. He stated that the west coast would be in fair condition but for the fact that heavy drift of unemployed from the east has glutted the demand for labor.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Newman and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Lane arrived Sunday from Alpine, Texas, for a visit with the Taylors at the I-X ranch. The Lanes were old-time friends of the Taylors at Alpine, and the Newmans came here a year ago with the Taylors and lived at the I-X ranch for a time.

C. A. Stilwell, who has been with the R. R. water service at Coyote a number of years, and with the company in a similar service for a still longer period, has been promoted and transferred. Mr. Stilwell has been promoted to water service foreman in charge of gang No. 1, on north line of Rio Grande Division, and he with Mrs. Stilwell and children will make their home at Lordsburg, New Mexico. Friends will be pleased to learn of Mr. Stilwell's promotion, at the same time regretting the departure of the family from Lincoln county.

Riggs-McDonald

Walter Riggs and Miss Anna McDonald, both of Oscura, were married last week in Alamogordo. Mr. Riggs came here a year ago from Alpine, Texas, and is employed on the I-X ranch. The bride is a daughter of the McDonald family of the Mockingbird Gap country, one of the oldest ranching families of that section. The News joins friends in wishing the newly wedded couple much happiness.

Returns from the East

A Ziegler returned Saturday from his eastern purchasing trip. New Goods are arriving daily, as a result of his trip to the markets.

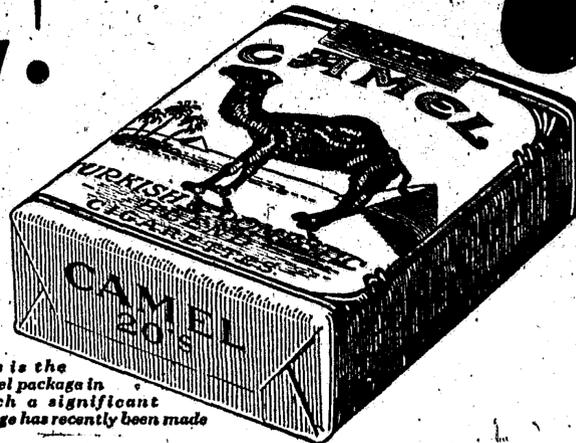

The selections now on exhibition represent the latest features in styles, weaves and patterns and the prices are attractive to every buyer. A visit to the store will interest all shoppers.

PHILIP HENRY "LITTLE PHIL" SHERIDAN

SHERIDAN'S STATUS IN WASHINGTON

SHERIDAN

SHERIDAN'S GRAVE IN ARLINGTON

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IT WAS just 100 years ago, March 6, 1831, that there was born to an Irish immigrant couple in Albany, N. Y., a boy who was destined for lasting fame as an American soldier and as one of the great cavalry leaders of all time. Philip Henry Sheridan has preserved his name but American tradition has preserved his memory in two nicknames which his devoted followers gave him—"Fighting Phil" and "Little Phil." And like another horseman of an earlier war, Paul Revere of the Revolution, Phil Sheridan, the dashing cavalryman of the Civil war, owes some of the perpetuation of his name and fame to a poem—Thomas Buchanan Read's "Sheridan's Ride."

While Sheridan was still a child his parents moved to Ohio and settled near Somerset in Perry county. There his boyhood and youth were spent under frontier conditions with its necessity for hard work by all members of the family and its limited opportunities for education. There the characteristics of his later life became evident early. Young Sheridan worked for a country storekeeper for the sum of 10 cents a week, and although his employer testified to the fact that he was a faithful worker, he also commented upon the fact that what time the boy wasn't working he was "folkin' soldier or playin' soldier."

At the age of seventeen Sheridan had the good fortune to secure an appointment to West Point, and although his limited education made the work there unusually difficult for him, he made a fairly good record at the academy. However, he lived up to his "scrappy" reputation by having such a fight with a fellow cadet that he was suspended for a year, and instead of being graduated in the class of 1852, as he should have been, he was not graduated until 1858 and then he stood No. 34 in a class of 62.

Following his graduation and appointment as a second lieutenant in the infantry, Sheridan spent the next eight years in comparative obscurity. He was detailed to service on the frontier and in various parts of the West saw service against the Indians, which not only afforded him good training with the dragoons for his future career as a cavalryman but also gave him an insight into the Indian character which was to be particularly valuable during the Plains wars after the conflict of 1801-03.

The outbreak of the Civil war, however, gave Sheridan his chance to display the genius which was to give him his place among the great cavalry leaders of the world. Detailed first on the staff of General Halleck at St. Louis, he soon attracted attention by his capacity for detail, his energy and his unflinching devotion to duty, and these qualities resulted in his appointment as colonel of the Second Michigan cavalry. Only a few weeks later he was elevated to the grade of brigadier general of the United States Volunteers. That was in 1862, and by the end of the year he had been placed in command of a division and given his commission of major general. And all of this had happened when he was but thirty-two years of age.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE

Up from the south at break of day,
Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay,
The affrighted air with a shudder bore,
Like a whirlwind in haste, to the chieftain's door.

The terrible grumble, and rattle, and roar,
Telling the battle was on once more,
And Sheridan twenty miles away.

And wider still those billows of war
Threw round along the horizon's bar;
And louder yet late Winchester called,
The rear of that red sun unobscured,
Making the blood of the Monitor cold,
As he thought of the odds in that fiery fray.

And Sheridan twenty miles away.

But there is a road from Winchester
A good, broad highway leading down;
And there, through the fumes of the morning light,

A steed as black as the steeds of night
Was seen to pass, as with eagle flight;
As if he knew the terrible need,
He stretched away with his utmost speed.

Hills rose and fell, but his heart was free,
With Sheridan fifteen miles away.

Still sprang from those swift hoofs,
 thundering south,
The dust, like smoke from the cannons'
muzzles,
Or the trail of a comet, sweeping fast
and faster,

Forwheeding to trailers the doom of disaster.
The heart of the steed and the heart of the master

Were beating like prisoners assailing
their walls,
Impatient to be where the battlefield
calls;

Every nerve of the charger was strained
to fall plumb,
With Sheridan only ten miles away.

Under his spurring feet, the road
Like an arrowy Alpine river flows,
And the landscape speed away behind
Like an ocean flying before the wind;
And the steed, like a hawk fed with fire-
hose fire,
Swooped on, with his wild eye full of fire;
But, lo! he is nearing his leader's door;
He is shouting the smoke of the retreating fray.

With Sheridan only five miles away.

The first that the general saw were the groups
Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops!

What was done? What to do? A glance told him both,
Then, striking his spurs, with a terrible
sob,

He dashed down the line, 'mid a storm
of bullets,
And the wave of retreat checked its course there, because

The sight of the master compelled it to pause,
With foam and with dust the black
charger was gray;
By the flash of his eye, and the red
netting's play,

He seemed to the whole great army to say:
"I have brought you Sheridan all the way
From Winchester town to save the day!"

Hurray! hurrah for Sheridan!
Hurray! hurrah for horse and man!
And when their statures are placed on high,

Under the dome of the Union sky,
The American soldier's Temple of Fame,
There, with the glorious general's name,
Be it said in letters bold and bright
"Here is the steed that saved the day
By carrying Sheridan into the fight."
From Winchester—twenty miles away!"

—THOMAS BUCHANAN READ.

three years of the war was brilliant enough, with his part in the battles at Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga and Chattanooga, but it rose to the heights in 1864 when he was made chief of the cavalry corps of the Army of the Potomac and started upon his famous campaign in the Shenandoah valley of Virginia. There his problem was to checkmate another brilliant cavalry leader, Gen. Jubal A. Early of the Confederate army, and to devastate this rich country so that it could no longer feed the Confederate army.

It was during this campaign that the incident occurred which inspired Read's famous poem and gave rise to one of those popular legends so dear to the heart of Americans—and so filled with inaccuracies as to historical fact! That legend tells how Sheridan at Winchester, hearing heavy firing in the direction of Cedar Creek, where his army was stationed, suspected something was wrong, sprang to the back of his coal black charger, "Winchester," and made a mad dash of 20 miles to find his army being routed by Early's surprise attack. Then, according to the school book histories, "Swinging his hat, he dashed along the line of battle, shouting 'Never mind, boys, we'll whip them yet.' The boys responded by throwing up their caps and hurrahing with the wildest joy. Before night set in they drove Early out of the Valley."

A reference to Sheridan's "Personal Memoirs" and other standard authorities, however, will show that the legend can stand considerable correction. In the first place Sheridan did not ride any 20 miles, as the poet has him doing. It is only 13 miles from Winchester to Cedar Creek and he had his first view of his disorganized army at Mill Creek, less than a mile from Winchester. From there to the actual "front" it was not much more than nine or ten miles. Nor was his ride made alone nor covered at top speed all the way, as the poet would have us believe. He was accompanied by two of his aides-de-camp, Maj. George K. Forsythe and Capt. Joseph O'Keefe and at various places along the route of his progress toward the enemy he paused long enough to give orders to various officers about rallying the retreating Union troops. As for the "Turn, boys, turn! We're going back" type of exclamation so often attributed to Sheridan, these words from his "Memoirs" speak for themselves: "I said nothing except to remark as I rode among those on the road: 'If I had been with you this morning this disaster would not have happened. We must face the other way; we will go back and recover our camp.'"

Although Sheridan is known to more Americans because of this incident than any other in his career, that career continued long after the Civil war. It included service on the Mexican border in the days when the Maximilian incident was a threat to our peaceful relations with European countries, during the Indian wars on the plains when he was in command of the operations which finally brought about the subjugation of the warlike tribes, as guest observer on the staff of King William during the Franco-Prussian war and as commander in chief of the United States army after the retirement of Sherman. Sheridan died in 1893 at the age of fifty-seven years with the rank of full general, a grade which had been restored by Congress that year in his favor.

Three Phoenix men were made defendants in a suit filed in Federal Court in Santa Fe, N. M., by R. E. Connors, also of Phoenix, seeking $20,000 for injuries alleged suffered in an automobile accident twenty-two miles from Winslow, Ariz. They are C. B. Watkins, C. C. Ellis and Otella Ellis.

The Arizona Senate unanimously passed the joint memorial to Congress, asking immediate cashing, at face value, of World War veterans' compensation certificates, introduced in the House by McQuillan of Navajo and Rosenbaum of Gila. It previously passed the House with one dissenting vote.

E. L. O'Malley, president of the Phoenix Baseball Club, said in Phoenix a few days ago, Louis Gusto would pilot the Senators in the 1931 race for the state league title. Gusto, 1930 manager, O'Malley said, will report in Phoenix about April 1. He is at present coaching baseball at St. Mary's College.

Sugar beets have proved a profitable crop in the vicinity of Las Vegas, N. M., where they have been grown for the fourth year, and at several points in northern New Mexico. More than 250 acres were grown in San Miguel county and it is expected that the acreage will exceed 500 acres for the coming season.

New Mexico was one of the seven states, including the District of Columbia, in which no bank failures were reported during 1930, State Bank Examiner Lawrence Tamm stated in Santa Fe. The states in which no failures were reported were Maine, Rhode Island, Wyoming, New Mexico, Nevada and the District of Columbia.

Nearly dead from loss of blood, Samuel M. Johnson, World War veteran of Parke, Ariz., was found in the Bloody Basin country, near Prescott, Ariz., where he had been trapping. His right arm was badly shattered when his gun accidentally discharged. He was brought to the government hospital at Whipple, where amputation was necessary.

Cadet Joseph B. Donnelly, whose plane crashed thirty-five miles southwest of Roswell, was found by Allen Doyle, rancher, twenty miles from the wrecked plane. The plane crashed when the motor stalled as Donnelly attempted to make a landing. As he neared the ground, the wind direction shifted and he landed with his tail in the wind. The plane turned over and was demolished. Donnelly suffered only a slight bruise under his right eye.

The governors of California and Arizona, for the first time in the history of Arizona as a state, clasped hands on Arizona soil at Phoenix recently, and exchanged friendly greetings. James Rolph, Jr., of California, broke bread with George W. P. Hunt, seven-times chief executive of Arizona, and declared "I want to be friendly—if for no other reason than to shake your hand and say Hello, governor." "If there have been misunderstandings in the past, Rolph assured the Arizona veteran, "I'll change all that. I hope you'll pay us a return visit."

More than 400 delegates attended the annual convention of the Northern New Mexico Teachers' Association, held in Raton. Speakers included Dr. W. D. Bowden, president of the New Mexico State Teachers College; Frank Caroon, president of the State Normal University; Mrs. Georgia Lusk, state superintendent of schools, and Raymond J. Huff, president of the State Teachers' Association.

Progress is being rapidly made in sinking the elevator shaft at Carlsbad cavern, near Carlsbad, N. M., which is being rushed to completion this spring to house the longest single lift elevator in the world into the largest and most spectacular cave of its kind. The construction work is a most interesting engineering feat, unique in the fact the digging of the shaft is being done from the bottom up and from the top down at the same time, the workmen to meet somewhere near midway when the shaft is completed. The hole is about 8x16 feet to accommodate two elevator cars each a single lift of 740 feet from the big room of the cavern to the surface.

M. Daughy, Miss Lillian Bess and Dr. C. M. Stantiff were re-elected to serve as members of the Tucuman, N. M., school board.

Addition of the thirty-three miles of roadway to complete the cavern highway between Carlsbad and the Carlsbad caverns, to the emergency highway program has been ordered by Governor Arthur Seligman of New Mexico. Governor Seligman said he has found that the road has been improved as a federal aid project, and that there will be sufficient money available for the work.

LAMBS FATTENED FOR MARKET PAY

Farmers Who Followed the Plan for Years Favor It.

The winter occupation of fattening feeder lambs for the market may or may not be profitable in any one season, but farmers in this section who have followed the industry year after year say the profits from the good years more than balance the deficits incurred in off years, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker. The feeder lamb business is not a sure proposition, but that is true also of any farm industry dairying, crop raising, etc. Market prices cannot be controlled by the average farmer, but as in any branch of farming there are certain rules and principles to be observed in the fattening of feeder lambs.

Extra care must be used the first few days if the industry is to be started properly, without loss of lambs. The bulk of the feeder lambs come from the great sheep ranges in Texas, Arizona, Idaho and Montana. The time taken in transit from these ranges with perhaps one or two lay-overs is productive of a loss of weight of the lambs and the formation of an enormous appetite. Often this ravenous appetite causes the lambs to eat so much grain that it is fatal.

Only light feedings of grain should be given them the first four or five days and self-feeders should not be used. Even if the grain portion per lamb is small, some of the larger and stronger lambs are very likely to partake of more grain than is safe. Self-feeders should be taboo for the first few days, troughs being the most practical arrangement to use. Small feedings of grain can be given in the troughs, and, as a greater number of lambs can eat from the troughs than two or three self-feeders, the grain is quickly consumed with practically no danger of any lambs overeating.

In feeding forage, not so much caution is required but I would not advise too heavy feedings the first day. The lambs, when they first arrive, are gluttons, and there might possibly be some ill effects from too much forage. Just enough forage the first day to take the sharpness from their appetite is advisable.

After three or four days, when their craving for grain has been satisfied self-feeders may be used. Even then, there are times that a lamb may overeat, but these instances are few. Some farmers use troughs altogether, but self-feeders make the feeding of grain easier as it entails much less labor. A gradual daily increase in the amount of grain for four or five days should take care of the feeding situation at the start.

When Various Pastures Are Ready for Animals

Red clover alone or mixed with alfalfa will be ready to pasture in six to twelve months, will furnish pasture for four to five months and will carry ten to twelve hogs per acre.

Sweet clover may be sown alone or with rape or other clovers in March or April. As with alfalfa, it requires a sweet soil. Sweet clover will be ready to pasture some the first year about July 1. The second season it will be ready near the first of April and will furnish pasture for four to six months. About ten to fifteen head of hogs with some cattle may be fed on each acre.

Sudan grass will furnish an abundance of feed in five to seven weeks after sown. It may be sown broadcast or with a drill from May to July 15 at the rate of ten to twenty pounds an acre. It will furnish forage for three to four months and will carry fifteen to twenty head of hogs an acre.

Emergency Pasture for Swine Is Much Favored

An emergency pasture mixture which will give good results for pasturing pigs is made of a mixture of rape, oats and clover, according to W. E. Carroll, University of Illinois. The oats are the first to start and if they are not pastured too heavily will supply feed for some time. The rape is next to reach the grazing stage and will protect the young clover until it is ready to pasture.

Sudan grass last summer provided a good emergency pasture crop, he reports. It is rank growing but seems palatable for pigs if it is not allowed to get too great a start.

With the possibility that clover will be winter killed in many sections of the state it is likely that some kind of emergency pasture crop may be needed in 1931, he states.

Beef Silage Crop

Oats can be used fairly successfully as a silage crop for feeding beef steers. Tests in Illinois showed average daily gains of 2.83 pounds for steers receiving a ration of shelled corn, cottonseed meal, and alfalfa hay to which was added oat silage. Similar steers receiving the same ration but with corn silage substituted for the oat silage made average daily gains of 3.05. This suggests a possible and profitable use for badly lodged oat crops.

DOCTOR'S Prescription gives Bowels Real Help

Train your bowels to be regular; to move at the same time every day; to be so thorough that they get rid of all the waste. Syrup Pepsin—a doctor's prescription—will help you do this. When you take this compound of laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients, you are helping the bowels to help themselves.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the sensible thing to take whenever you are headachy, bilious, half-sick from constipation. When you have no appetite, and a bad taste or bad breath shows you're full of poisonous matter or sour bile.

Dr. Caldwell studied bowel troubles for 47 years. His prescription always works quickly, thoroughly; can never do you any harm. It just cleans you out and sweetens the whole digestive tract. It gives those overworked bowels the help they need.

Take some Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin today, and see how fine you feel tomorrow—and for days to come. Give it to the kiddies when they're sickly or feverish; they'll like the taste! Your druggist has big bottles of it, all ready for use.

To Celebrate Virgil's Birth
Among the preparations being made at Mantua, Italy, to celebrate the two thousandth anniversary of Virgil's birth is the development of a 15-acre tract, which is to be planted with more than 200 trees and plants mentioned in his poems. The space will be made to appear as much as possible like a Roman garden of the first century before Christ. As far back as the Napoleonic wars a similar project was planned, but lack of funds prevented its completion. The Virgilian wood will be dedicated in October.

Brightest

From three to twelve. That's the most important period in a child's growth. And that's the time many are retarded physically and mentally by energy-sapping constipation.

Watch your child, mother! At the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, headache, biliousness, lack of energy or appetite, give California Fig Syrup.

This pure vegetable product will cleanse the little bowels without discomfort. It tones and strengthens weak stomach and bowels. In colds or children's diseases, employ its gentle aid to keep the system free from germs and waste.

Mothers everywhere are eager to tell how it helps children. Mrs. H. Mayer, 1737 Marburg St., Dallas, Texas, says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Danny all his life in colds, biliousness, constipation, upsetts, or children's ailments. It keeps him the brightest, happiest six-year-old I know."

Emphasize the name California, when buying, to get the genuine.

Simple and Inexpensive Implement House That Will Protect Machinery

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 407 South Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Storage of farm machinery in the open where it is prey to the weather is much more expensive than building an implement house or an implement shed, such as shown in the illustration. It is often said that more farm machinery rusts out than wears out. It will not have a chance to rust out if it is stored under cover after being properly cleaned and the metal parts painted or greased.

The implement shed illustrated is 40 feet long and 16 feet wide. Two sections are open at the front, but may be supplied with sliding doors. The third section is enclosed and has a concrete floor, thus making a modern garage for the storage of the automobile or tractor, or both.

This building is simple to construct, as will be noted by the cross-section of the garage. A concrete floor is installed in the garage, while the balance of the building is supported by posts set on concrete footings. Good matched lumber is needed for the siding, while the frame of the structure is of 2 by 4 studs.

The roof may be covered with any of the materials used for the purpose. The plan shows lightning rods installed, which is good protection against fire caused by lightning.

The construction of this sort of a shed is so simple and the cost of construction is so little that no farm has any need of doing without such protection for implements. The design is also one which may be enlarged merely by extension in case it is not large enough to provide for all of the farm machinery or in case more machinery is purchased later. Each section can be considered a separate unit and more units may be added as required.

Boiler Made for Every Fuel and Heating Load

Round boilers and square boilers, boilers with vertical sections and boilers with horizontal sections, steel boilers and cast iron boilers, boilers with copper tubes and boilers with cast iron tubes—that's what the radiator heating industry is offering to the public today.

There is a boiler today especially adapted to every heating load, every type of chimney, every condition of floor, and every fuel.

Years ago there was only one kind of boiler—a round boiler, like the popular model of one of the inexpensive cars, this boiler was sold all over the world, and its total sales ran into the millions.

While many other types of boilers are made today, the round boiler is still produced in large quantities for installation in smaller residences. It is not, however, the same boiler that was made years ago. It has been improved in its construction so that it is more efficient than its predecessor and it has responded to the catholic demands of the present vogue for color and beauty in utilitarian objects.

The chief difference between the round boiler and the square boiler is that whereas the former has its sections piled on top of each other like pancakes, the latter has sections which stand upright. There is, in the case of the square boiler, a front section, a rear section, and from two to a dozen in between. The grate is, of course, rectangular.

Round boilers consist of a base casting, firepot casting, and one to five sections set one upon the other over the firepot.

Steel boilers for small homes are built of steel plate with seams electrically or otherwise welded or riveted and caulked. Nearly all steel boilers are adapted equally well to solid fuels or oil. The combustion chamber occupies all or part of the lower portion of the boiler and is lined with firebrick. Between it and the outer shell, usually, is a water space which extends up to the top of the boiler.

While some cast iron boilers may be used for either coal, oil, or gas and most steel boilers may be used for either coal or oil, there are some steel boilers that are built especially for gas and some intended exclusively for oil.

The manufacturer of one of the oil-fired boilers, for instance, has departed radically from conventional boiler design. Since an oil burner generates a tremendous amount of heat in a short time, this boiler designer especially for an oil burner has copper tube sections, small flues, and a scientifically designed combustion chamber. This boiler is also suitable for use with a gas flame.

The advantage of the copper tubing is said to result from the rapid conductivity of copper and from the fact that the use of this metal permits the boiler to break the water into smaller sections than is possible in cast iron construction.

Prevents Waste

If your heater is old and worn out, you are paying the coal dealer a lot of money which might better be applied toward buying a new heater. It will soon pay for itself and then go on saving money.

Gay Colors in Kitchen Make It Livable Spot

Every woman knows that it's not as unfashionable to have an unattractive kitchen as it is to wear an out-of-date frock. There's something quite Cinderella-like in this room, for it suddenly lost its drab appearance and became one of the gayest places in the home.

So popular, in fact, has the kitchen become that the young people even have their parties there. Not merely the well-known "ridding the ice box" expeditions, either—but jolly supper parties, where every guest prepares some special dish.

Certainly it behooves the homemaker to keep her kitchen more sparklingly clean than ever, and to decorate it as charmingly as she can. She can first give her kitchen woodwork, doors, window frames—and cupboards, too, if she wishes—a riotously gay coat of paint. Waxing will then protect the bright color from dirt and the inevitable kitchen splattering. She can easily make curtains to harmonize with the color scheme from checked gingham, ruffled voile or organdie. The smart new pots and pans, pitchers and bowls now available will also add sprightly touches of color.

Linooleums may be chosen in shades to match her kitchen decorations. Whether the flooring is linooleum, wood or tile, it will last longer and be far easier to keep clean if waxed and polished. Gas ranges and cabinets may also be protected from dirt and grease by a light waxing. In fact, there's an old saying, "neat as wax," which might have been meant for kitchens, so useful is that preparation in keeping the kitchen immaculate.

To help make the kitchen inviting, there are many little decorative features which any woman can easily achieve. Use gayly painted shelves for cookbooks.

Spanish Architecture Most Popular Today

"The last decade in this country has seen an amazing renaissance in architecture," writes Helen Bishop in Arts and Decoration Magazine. "Following the revolution against the ugly frame house of the nineties with its ridiculous wooden battlements and turrets there was a return to the Colonial type of house with the simple lines—a style which rightfully may be called a new branch of native American architecture. Following that came a wave of interest in what is known broadly as the Mediterranean type of dwelling, particularly the house of decided Spanish feeling, a style which is as native to Florida and California as the Colonial is to the northeastern seaboard states."

Warm Tones in Room With North Exposure

An important general rule which should be followed in planning the color scheme for any room is as follows: Use warm tones in rooms with north or east exposure and cool shades in those which face south or west. The warm colors are red, yellow and their variations, and cool colors are blues, greens and gray. This rule guides the homemaker in selecting the dominant colors, but small contrasting accents in shades of the opposite type may be introduced.

THE STORY

With his English wife, Catherine, and son, Jeems, Henry Bulain, French settler in Canada in 1748, cultivates a farm adjacent to the Tontour seigneurie. As the story opens the Bulains are returning from a visit to the Tontours. Catherine's wandering brother, Hepsibah, meets them, with presents for the family. To Jeems he gives a pistol, bidding him perfect himself in marksmanship. Hepsibah fears for the safety of the Bulains in their isolated position. Jeems fights with Paul Tache, cousin of Toinette Tontour, whom they both adore.

Jeems was aware of her presence and physically sensible of her combativeness, but in the complexity of action which surged over and about him he could afford no discrimination in the manner of using his arms, legs, teeth, and head, and at last, finding herself disoriented, Toinette scrambled to her feet considerably bruised and in such disorder that no one would have recognized her as the splendid little lady of the seigneurie who had come so proudly to Lussan's place a short time before. Her handsome hat was a crumpled wreck in the mud. Her dress was twisted and bedraggled. Her hands and face were discolored with soil, and her hair was so tangled about her that she was almost smothered in it. Despite this physical condition, her mental self was more than ever inflamed with the desire to fight, and seizing upon the hard and woodlike stalk of a last year's sunflower which lay in the dirt, she succeeded in bringing it down with such force that, missing Jeems, it caught Paul on the side of the head and laid him sprawling flat on his face. This terminated the conflict for Toinette, who gave a cry of apprehension when she saw what she had done.

Paul had recovered from Toinette's blow before Jeems could take advantage of it, and what happened during the final round of contention remained largely a matter of speculation in Jeems' mind. He was sitting up, after a little, and there was no one to strike at. Paul and Toinette were out of his reach yet he heard their voices, oddly indistinct, moving in the direction of Lussan's house. He tried to call out, thinking that Tache was escaping like a coward, but something in his throat choked him until it was impossible for him to get breath enough to make a sound. He made an effort to rise that he might pursue his beaten enemy. The earth about him swam dizzily. He was gasping, sick at his stomach, and blood was dripping from his nose.

A horrifying thought leapt upon him, and so sudden was the shock of it that he sat staring straight ahead, barely conscious of two figures emerging from the concealment of a thick growth of brushwood twenty paces away. The thought became conviction. He had not whipped Paul Tache? Paul had whipped him—and his enemy's accomplishment had been so thorough that he could still feel the instability of the world about him as he drew himself to his feet.

His eyes and head cleared as the realization of defeat swept over him. Then he recognized the two who had appeared in the edge of the open. One was his Uncle Hepsibah, the other Toinette's father. Both were grinning broadly at the spectacle which he made, and as they drew nearer he heard Tontour's voice in what was meant to be a confidential whisper.

"Is it really your pett-n-even, friend Adams, or one of Lussan's pigs come out of its wallow? Hold me, or what I have seen will make me split!" But Jeems heard no response from Hepsibah, for the trader's face suddenly lost its humor, and in place of it came a look which had no hint of smile or laughter in it.

CHAPTER IV

Next Sunday morning Jeems set out for Tontour manor with the thought deeply entrenched in his mind that he would not fight Paul Tache that day no matter what temptation might be placed in his path. He had told his mother where he was going and what he was planning to do, and with her encouragement to spur him on he felt eager and hopeful as he made his way toward the seigneurie.

This feeling was unlike the one with which he had set out to fight Paul Tache, and what he had to do loomed even more important than any physical vanquishment which he might bring upon his rival. To soften Toinette's heart, now so bitterly against him, to bring back the friendliness of her smile, and to see her eyes alight with the sweetness which she had been on the point of yielding to him at Lussan's place were foremost in his mind. He was anxious to see Toinette and to offer her all that his small world held, if thereby he could make amends for the ruin and humiliation he had brought upon her. A spirit of chivalry in him, older than his years, rose above the lowly consideration of rights and wrongs. He was sure he was right. Yet he wanted to say he was wrong. Though he did not know it, years had passed since two days ago, and he was a new Jeems going to a new Toinette. His fear of her had vanished. He was no longer borne down by a feeling of littleness and unimportance, and for the first time he was visiting Tontour manor without the thought of inferiority sending its misgivings through his soul. In some mysterious way which he did not understand, but which he strongly felt, he had passed away from yesterday forever.

Soon his feet were in the path which led to the manor. It was so still he could have believed that every one was asleep as he courageously mounted the wide steps to the door of Toinette's home. On this door was a great black knocker of battered iron. The face of the knocker was a grinning ogre, a gargoylish head which, from his earliest memory of it, had fixed itself upon him as a symbol of the grim and unapproachable spirit that guarded the rooms within. His hand reached out to awaken the dull thunder of its voice.

"I Ask You to Forgive Me."

His fingers touched the cold iron. He hesitated in the moment he was lifting it, for he observed that the door was open by a space of a few inches. Through this aperture a voice came to him clearly. It was a high, biting, angry voice, and he recognized it as Madame Tontour's. He raised the weight from its metal panel and would have knocked when he heard a name which made him pause in rigid silence. It was his own.

He heard Toinette's mother say, "Henri Bulain was a fool for marrying this good-for-nothing English woman, and Edmond is a greater fool for not driving her from the country when her breed is murdering and killing almost at our doors. The woman was made for a spy, despite the pretty face which has softened Edmond's silly heart, and that boy of hers is no less English than she. The two should not be allowed to live so near to us, yet Tontour maintains they are his friends. The place they have built should be burned and the English woman and her boy sent where they belong. Let Henri Bulain go with them if he chooses to be a renegade instead of a Frenchman!"

"Fie upon you for such thoughts, Henriette," chided the milder voice of Madame Tache. "I despise the English as much as you or Toinette, but it is unfair to voice such invective against these two, even though the woman is proud of her pretty face and her boy is a mud-slinging little wretch. Edmond is a big-souled man and sim-

Bright Idea That May Have Averted Tragedy

Allusions to the effective use of ridicule against his opponents made by the late Lord Balfour during the term of his chief secretaryship for Ireland recalls an incident of long ago, when a body of convicted prisoners who had been concerned in one of the rebellions—the 1845—had to be marched through the streets of Dublin. The authorities had been warned that a desperate attempt at rescue might be made by the mob and even though a military escort had been provided, there was some uneasiness. In these circumstances a really brilliant notion occurred to the officer in command of the troops. He gave instructions at the last moment that the suspender buttons on the trousers of the prisoners were to be cut off and thus they had to walk through the streets holding up their trousers. The spectacle was greeted with roars of laughter by the crowd, and no more was heard of the attempted rescue.—Montreal Family Herald.

"Petritized" Hair Under favorable conditions human hair will "petrify" just the same as other parts of the body. When organic matter petrifies, it merely supplies a mold for inorganic matter. As a rule the hair petrifies as a mass and only in rare cases are the individual hairs recognizable. The same of course applies to the fur of animals.—Exchange.

ply befriends them out of pity! Are you angry because of that, Henriette?" "I am angry because she is English, and her boy is English, and yet they are allowed to live among us as if they were French. I tell you they will be traitors when the time for treachery comes!"

Jeems had stood with his fingers clenched at the unfolding iron of the knocker. Now he heard another voice and knew it was Toinette's.

"I think Jeems' mother is nice," she said. "But Jeems is a detestable little English beast!" "And some day that beast will help to cut our throats," added her mother unpleasantly.

The great iron knocker fell with a crash, and almost before the sound of it reached a servant's ears, the door swung open and Jeems stalked in. The women were speechless as he stood in the wide opening to the room in which they were seated. He scarcely seemed to realize they were there and looked only at Toinette. He remained for a moment without movement or speech, his slim figure tense and gripped. Then he bowed his head in a courtesy which Catherine had carefully taught him. When he spoke his words were as calm as those of Madame Tache had been.

"I have come to tell you I am sorry because of what happened at Lussan's place, Toinette," he said, and he bent his head a little lower toward her. "I ask you to forgive me." Even Henriette Tontour could not have thought of him as a beast after that, for pride and fearlessness were in his bearing in spite of the whiteness of his face. As the occupants of the room stared at him, unable to find their voices, he drew back quietly and was gone as suddenly as he had appeared. The big door closed behind him, and turning to a window near her Toinette saw him go down the steps. An exclamation of indignation and amazement came at last from her mother, but this she did not hear. Her eyes were following Jeems.

He went across the open and into the fields. As he drew near the foot of Tontour hill, Odd came cautiously forth to meet him, but not until they reached their old resting place at the crest of the ascent did he pause or seem to notice the dog. Then he looked back upon the seigneurie. A bit of iron had sunk into his soul. His eyes were seeing with a new and darker vision. From the rich valley which had been the fount of all his dreams they turned to the faint gleam of distant water in the south where lay Lake Champlain, and beyond which, not far away, were the Mohawks and the English and the land of his mother's people. It was the blood of that land, running red and strong in his veins, which Toinette and her mother hated.

He dropped a hand upon Odd's head, and the two started over the homeward trail. The dog watched the forest and caught its scents, but he watched and guarded alone, for Jeems gave small heed to the passing interests of the woods and thickets.

Late spring, then the beginning of summer, followed Hepsibah's arrival at the Bulain home, and still he gave no betrayal of the restlessness which preaged his usual disappearance for another long period into the fastnesses of the world. This season of the year was always one of torment for the forest dwellers because of the winged pests which crawled the earth and filled the air, and Jeems had come to dread it as an indescribable nightmare of discomfort and suffering. From the first of June until the middle of August, such plagues of mosquitoes bred and multiplied in the swamps and lowlands and woods that beasts were half devoured alive and the pioneers literally fought for their own existence, smothering their cabins incessantly, covering their flesh with hog fat and bear grease, and resorting to every known subtlety that they might snatch a little sleep at night. Within a few days, it seemed to Jeems, a world that had been a paradise of flowers, of sweet scents, of ripening fruits and delicious air was transformed into a hell of insect life which shut out travel in all directions and which invested with poisonous torture every spot where it was not partly submerged by fire and smoke. The timber was heavy and dark, swamps were undrained, rivers and lakes were shadowed by dense vegetation, and in the humid, sweating mold of these places, the malevolent pestilence was born and rose in clouds that sometimes obscured the face of the moon. During these weeks a cordon of decayed stumps and logs smoldered night and day about the Bulain cabin, screening it in pungent smoke, and outside this small haven, work on the farm was continued at a price of physical martyrdom, except under a burning sun, when the insects sought refuge from the glare and heat.

FOR CONSTIPATION

Enormous Toll Taken by Agricultural Pests

That the annual toll exacted from agriculture by insect pests is even greater than that taken by plant diseases was brought out by J. A. Hyslop, of the bureau of entomology of the Department of Agriculture. He placed the annual loss in the United States in excess of $2,000,000,000. "At least two-thirds of the loss occasioned by insects is preventable," he said.

Lee A. Strong, of the plant quarantine and control administration of the department, estimating the losses from plant diseases and insects, in round numbers, at $3,000,000,000 annually, said that "fully 50 per cent of the important pests responsible for this enormous loss are of foreign origin, practically all of them having been introduced prior to the passage of the plant quarantine act of 1912."

Kruschen Salts is the ideal treatment for constipation, indigestion, headaches, nervousness and acidity. Take Kruschen every morning—it's the little daily dose that does it—if not fully satisfied after the first bottle—money back—Adv.

Tortoise Grieves for Mate

Sleep finally assuaged the sorrow of a giant tortoise in the London zoo for its dead mate. For several weeks following the death of its companion the lumbering reptile constantly made the rounds of the tortoise house searching for her. There were other giant tortoises around him, but they were not his distinctive variety, and he wanted a friend. Then winter came and after eating a meal he turned his head to the wall and buried his troubles in sleep.

$50,000.00 Cigarette Contest Under Way

A contest offering $50,000.00 in prizes has been announced by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, makers of Camel Cigarettes, with special announcements in practically every newspaper in the United States. Eight days are allowed for submission of essays, the contest closing at midnight on March 4th. Prizes will be awarded for the best answers to the question "What Significant Change Has Recently Been Made in the Wrapping of the Camel Package, Containing Twenty Cigarettes, and What Are Its Advantages to the Smoker?" Answers are limited to two hundred words in length, must be written on one side of the paper only and are to be mailed to the Contest Editor, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

First prize is $25,000.00, with second and third prizes of $10,000.00 and $5,000.00. Numerous smaller prizes will also be awarded. Judges of the contest are Ray Long, president of the International Magazine Company and editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine; Roy Howard, chairman of the board of the Scripps Howard Newspapers, and Charles Dana Gibson, internationally known artist and publisher of Life Magazine.

The contest is part of what advertising experts declare is one of the most intensive advertising campaigns ever staged. Practically every daily and county seat weekly newspaper in the country will be used as well as college periodicals and financial newspapers. This campaign is to be followed by an aggressive advertising drive, through newspapers, magazines, radio and outdoor display.

Preaching at Capitan

Which came first, the hen or the egg? The acorn or the oak? The answer is not easy. Everything had a beginning somewhere, some time. Was there a hen before there was an egg, or did the egg precede the hen? "Great oaks from little acorns grow." But, really, now, did the oak come from the acorn? Or did the acorn come from the oak? Read the first chapter of Genesis and read any theory of evolution that you can find, then be at church next Sunday morning. Let's see whether we can answer the questions.

Sunday School

The Washington's Birthday program at the Methodist Church in Carrizozo last Sunday was a success. There were seventy six present for the class period and more came in time for the program. The little fids and lassies dressed as so many George and Martha Washingtons, and the songs, recitations, and maneuvers of these youngsters were a treat, indeed. We will say to the children and their parents just here that there are many more good things planned for them during the year. Come at 9:45 next Sunday morning, and keep right on coming. Some of the pupils are to receive solid gold award pins for regular attendance for one year soon. An award well worth striving for. And one which they will be proud to wear.

Did God make man? Or did man make God? Some answer, yes to the first question. Some to the second. Read the first chapter of Genesis; or Paine's, Lucretius, Voltaire, or whatever you can find on the subject. And let us see what we know about it at church Sunday night.
