Hoover Relief Policy Explained in Detail

In an editorial, "New Men—Old Plan," the Outlook and Independent discusses Mr. Hoover's relief plan, and under-takes to explain the Hoover policy in detail.

"Some of our readers may wish to know in detail exactly what the Hoover relief policy is in detail.

"Some of our readers may wish to know in detail exactly what the Hoover relief policy is," says the editorial. "It is a fair question, but not an easy one to answer. As we understand it, however, Mr. Hoover wants the Government to spend a lot of money so as to increase employment on public works but to economize so as to keep down expenses. He wants, above all, to save us from doles and to coordinate the efforts of communities which are providing doles through their public agencies; that is, he apparently favors local doles and opposes Federal doles, though he doesn't say this in so many words.

"The job of providing relief, he believes, should be left to the public and private agencies of States and communities, but he is warm in his praise of the Federal employment service. He likes to permit economic forces to have free play but interferes to prevent them from playing too rough in Germany and from lowering wages in the United States. He is hot against Federal subsidies for industrial workers, but equally hot for Federal subsidies for farmers. He is all for rugged individual enterprise and individual responsibility, but not when they relate to prohibition or the tariff. . . He starts with the assumption—see his 1928 campaign speeches—that the Republican

Is the Treasury Playing Politics in Loan Program?

Referring to the Treasury Department's recent offer of $1,100,000,000 in Government securities, rather than increase taxes to make up the deficit in the past fiscal year and the shortage that has since developed, the Louisville Courier-Journal asks:

"Are economies or tax increases to be deferred until after the Presidential election? Is the Treasury Department playing politics, not 'at the expense of human misery,' but at the expense of future generations?"

The Courier-Journal further says:

"Part of the funds obtained by the new Government borrowing, it is reported, will be utilized to retire some $630,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness which expire this month. In all, the Treasury has borrowed, in 1931, $2,500,000,000 in three issues of Government securities, and the public debt which stands at $16,544,000,000 is almost certain to be increased.

"But is this increase a political move to elect Hoover in 1932?" the Courier-Journal asks. "Are the people of the United States a quarter of a century hence to be penalized because a tax increase next year might hurt Mr. Hoover's candidacy or needed economies would be inexpedient? Mr. Mellon is a capable financier, but if his Fall program is aimed to pass along the present deficits to future generations his operations are sheer political jugglery."

party can produce prosperity, but he doesn't consider the party responsible for failing to produce it now."

Reduces Tariff Rates for Europe, But Not for U. S.

Washington, Sept.—Uruguay, which recently increased its tariff duties 50 per cent on all imports of manufactured goods, has now reduced such increases one-half on imports from Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Belgium, as told in a special cable to the New York Times. This is construed as a direct retaliation against the American tariff and the large unfavorable trade balance against Uruguay and in favor of the United States.

According to the cablegram, Mr. J. Butler Wright, the American minister to Uruguay, has called the attention of the Government to the discrimination against this country.

Uruguay has been buying 25 per cent of all its imports from the United States while the United States purchase only 3 per cent of Uruguay's exports.

Members of the Council and Congress who supported the discriminating tariff against the United States frankly stated that Uruguay "should buy from those who buy from us."

It is not known whether or not Uruguay has made any reciprocal trade agreements with the countries favored by the reduction of the recently increased rates, but the statement of the reasons for the cut is regarded here as another evidence that the United States can not expect to continue to sell goods to nations from which she does not buy or buys as little as she does from Uruguay.

The Uruguayan tariff discrimination is regarded as the most concrete case of retaliation and reprisal against the Hawley-Smoot tariff since the latter was enacted.

What The Democratic Party can Do

I have asked you to judge the Republican Party by its record. Likewise, you may judge the Democratic Party by its record. Compare the eight years of the Wilson administration with its constructive and aggressive methods of emergencies with the subsequent years of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover and you can find the answer. One thing at least can be said, the Democratic Party can approach the solution of any problem without fear of offending the contributors to its campaign fund. It can without embarrassment give equal and exact justice to all. It is under no obligation moral or otherwise to privilege, or pillage. It can administer to a sick and tottering bureaucracy, a stimulating dose of Jeffersonian Democracy. From a recent speech by former Governor Robert A. Cooper of South Carolina at Nazareth, Pa.

Business System Saves Thousands

Santa Fe, N. M.—Reports by auditors who checked over the accounts and operations of the New Mexico State highway department for a period of years preceding the present administration, has borne out fully the contention of the Democratic party in the last campaign that the people of the State were victims of extravagance and mismanagement in the conduct of highway affairs, William J. Barker, State Chairman asserted today.

The Democratic chairman pointed out in a statement issued from headquarters that the present administration, "carrying out to the letter the Democratic party's campaign pledges," had corrected the condition condemned in the auditors' report, long before the report was made or any information about its contents given out.

Mr. Barker's statement follows: "Charges made by the Democratic party in the last campaign that the highway department under Republican administration had been extravagant and that dilatory business practice had been permitted, were borne out in the report of the auditors who checked on that department's affairs up to June 30, 1930, six months before the administration of Governor Arthur Seligman started.

"Under the Democratic administration these grave business errors have been corrected, just as the party pledged they would be. These changes were made long before the auditors reported or any intimation was given out as to the nature of their report.

"Governor Seligman, personally, took direct charge of the highway department affairs as soon as he assumed office and insisted that the previous extravagances be ended immediately. Despite the fact that an extensive emergency road-building program was launched soon after the present administration took over the reins of government, there has been a marked reduction in administrative and overhead expenditures.

"Although the opposing political faction in the State Senate killed off the Democratic centralized purchasing plan, it has been put into effect in the highway department and a conservative estimate of the saving being effected in that department on purchases alone is $100,000 annually.

"Half a dozen 'fancy political jobs' in the department were abolished immediately after the administration went into office. The saving annually on the salaries and expenses of the men holding these jobs previously is approximately $50,000. It suffices to say that the efficiency of the department has not been affected by their elimination.

"Under the present administration a centralized inventory of all equipment and supplies in all districts of the State is being kept, something that the auditors' report stated is absolutely vital to good business procedure. As a result of that inventory and the constant accounting that is kept in the main offices of the department much unnecessary expenditure for equipment, parts and supplies has been avoided. That class of purchases is the lowest now it has been at any time since the department has been on its present scale of operations.

"Strict application of the requisition system for all purchases in excess of $25 has prevented the indiscriminate, unregulated expenditures to which the audit report takes exception. The department now has a standard price regulation enforced by its central purchasing system.

"Expenditures of large sums for special attorneys, such as is shown up in the audit report, has not been allowed under the present administration. Only in rare cases, where special counsel was needed in trial work, has an attorney outside the office of the State's Attorney General been used. If the political foes of the administration had not prevented a proper and necessary increase in the personnel of the Attorney General's office the employment of a special attorney, even in a limited way, could have been avoided.

"Records in the highway department show that the administration's policy of absolute economy has been adhered to zealously. Refinements have been made in the accounting system, and the 'laxity' in keeping of records, that is cited in the audit report, no longer exists.

"In brief, the people of New Mexico are being saved thousands of dollars in the operations of the highway department alone, the result of having a thorough business executive for governor and his appointment of competent business men as commissioners.

"The report of the auditors who check up on the present operations of the highway department will be far different than the story which has just been revealed—a sorrowful story of political plunderings and business blunders."

The monthly social meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society took place Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. V. P. Smith, who was assisted by Mesdames O. J. Snow and Clyde Luckey.

Twenty-three members and six guests enjoyed the afternoon together, the main diversion being the sewing of quilt pieces.

On next Wednesday the Society will have an all day meeting in the home of Mrs. Roy Shafer for the purpose of quilting. At noon a covered dish luncheon will be enjoyed.

The first chapter of the new book on Bible Study was ably presented by Mrs. John E. Hall last Wednesday, and a continuation will occur at each monthly social meeting until the study is completed.

The Bangle Necklace Puzzle

The young daughter of a certain man and woman was a very bright child, who wanted to help her parents in every way she could. Now her father was very anxious to find out what her mother wanted for a Christmas present, but could not get her to tell him what to buy. He appealed to his daughter, who promised to do what she could. A few days before Christmas she told him to watch the initiated bangles that made her necklace. One evening she pointed to it and put her fingers to her lips. Her father tried for some time to make sense out of the arrangement of the letters, and finally succeeded. Can you do the same?

Megishoo

"The ship is here! The ship is here!"

Megishoo was sitting in the grass playing with her Eskimo puppy. She scrambled to her feet at her brother's cry and raced after him.

Every one was chattering and laughing as he hurried to the shore. The white ship from America had been there only once before, but all the Eskimos remembered the visit.

"Come, let us take the kayaks (ki-yaks) and visit the white men," suggested Nookojingwa, the father of Megishoo. In a few minutes there were a dozen long, slender boats with a girl when the American ship had visited her country before. Now she was eight years old.

"Well, well, here we are again," said a big tall man. This was Mr. Mack, the captain of the ship. He slapped the men on the back, greeted plump babies the mothers carried on their backs, and then shook hands with all the children.

"Oh, candy!" cried Megishoo, looking into her hand after Mr. Mack had passed her. "Candy, American candy," laughed the other children.

One of the men from the ship suddenly put down a big black box he had been carrying. It stood on the top of three long poles.

"Come here, little girl," he called to Megishoo. He pointed the black box at her and stood waiting behind it.

Megishoo backed away from him. She shook her black hair violently and her black eyes opened wide with fright.

"It's all right, Megishoo," said Captain Mack. "He wants to take your picture."

"No," said Megishoo firmly. "The black box might go off!" She did not know what might be inside of that strange machine.

"Here, I will hold you," offered the captain, "and we will have our picture taken together." He swung her up to his shoulder and she clutched his head tightly with both hands.

"That's a good girl," said the captain. "Now just think of the fun you will have visiting the ship. I have a present for you, too."

At this Megishoo's round, rosy face the women, talked to the smiling.

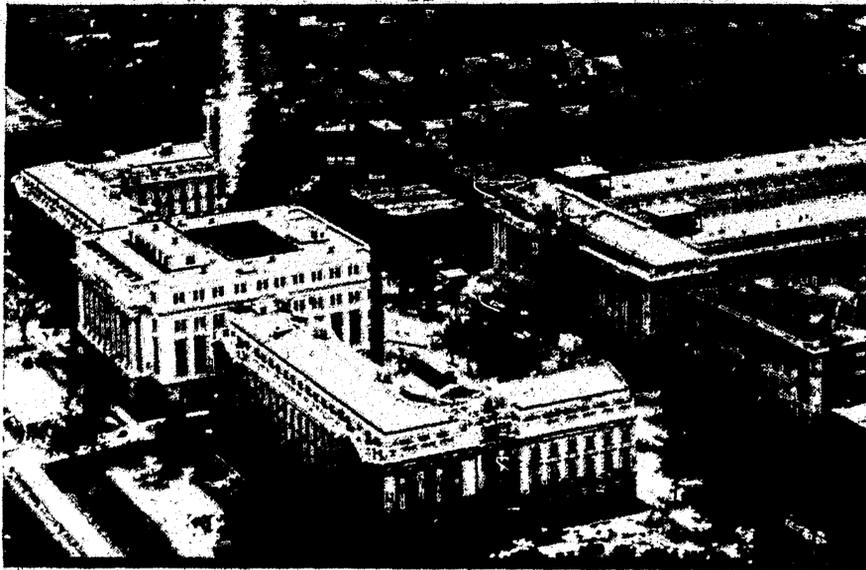

skimming over the water to the ship where they were eagerly welcomed.

Megishoo ran to the very edge of the water. She had been only a little wrinkled into smiles. She did not notice a click from the black box.

"There, that's fine," said the captain as he swung her down again.

"The next time the ship comes here I will bring you a picture of yourself," Megishoo could not understand such wonderful news. Who, in Eskimo

Looking Down on the Department of Agriculture

Here is an unusual view of the Department of Agriculture group of buildings as seen from the top of the Washington monument. The center section of the long building at the left houses the offices of the secretary and was completed a few months ago. The elongated extensible building on the right is still under construction.

Land, had ever heard of a picture of oneself?

"Here come the presents," said Captain Mack, as a man carrying a big bundle joined the group. The man untied the bundle and began to take out some packages.

"Here is a present for Megishoo," said the captain. He put a shining piece of wood and metal into her hands.

"Put it up to your lips and blow in it," said one of the men. Megishoo puffed and blew first one way and then another, but she could not make any sound. Her cheeks puffed out and grew red and she almost lost her breath. Suddenly the instrument made a noise.

"Oh, Megishoo make music!" she said with a happy smile. And in a few more minutes she could play the harmonica easily.

The Kitchen Cabinet

Casseroles of Sweetbreads and Mushrooms.—Soak a pair of sweetbreads one hour in cold water, then cook for fifteen minutes in slightly acidulated water, using a half tablespoonful of vinegar to a pint of water with a little salt. Remove and chill, break into small bits, discarding the membranes. Skin and dice the mushrooms and stew them in three tablespoonfuls of butter. Make a pint of well-seasoned white sauce and add the mushrooms and sweetbreads to it. In the bottom of a well-buttered casserole place a pint of young peas which have been cooked and well seasoned, adding a bit of sugar. Pour over these the mushrooms and sweetbreads and place in a hot oven for half an hour. Cover well. Serve with radishes and cucumber as salad, on lettuce.

Butterscotch Squares.—Cook together one-fourth of a cupful of butter and one cupful of brown sugar until smooth and well blended. Cool, add two unbeaten eggs and beat well. Add one-fourth of a package of sliced dates and one-fourth of a cupful of finely cut nut meats, add one-half cupful of flour sifted with one teaspoonful of baking powder and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt; mix well, adding a favoring of half-teaspoonful of vanilla. Spread in a pan lined with heavy waxed paper and bake in a moderate oven thirty minutes. Remove from the pan and cut into squares, when cool.

Old-Fashioned Ginger Water.—This was the drink carried to the fields in jugs for the harvest workers and is just as wholesome and appetizing as well as refreshing for the porch party. Take two tablespoonfuls of ground ginger, add half a cupful of brown sugar, a dash of vinegar, a tablespoonful will be plenty, and add two quarts of cold water. Stir well and serve. Cream of tartar is used by many instead of vinegar. One teaspoonful will be plenty for this amount. With so many fruit syrups left from canned fruit one may have a different flavored drink for everyday during hot weather.

Raspberry is especially well liked, and one may, during the season, prepare a few bottles of raspberry syrup to use during the warm weather.

Squash With Parmesan.—The tender summer squash, or marrow, are used for this dish. Cut into cubes if very tender, without peeling. Fry the vegetable in butter, sprinkling with salt and mixed spice, when well cooked turn into a dish and sprinkle with grated cheese and buttered crumbs, brown under the broiler or in a hot oven.

"Hue and Cry"

WE ARE all familiar with this phrase which we know to refer to a noisy mob.

For some reason this expression seems to have all the ear marks of a pure Anglo-Saxon; however, like so many others, this appearance is deceptive, the expression being, in its entirety, Gallic in origin.

We have it after the French "huer" meaning to shout at, as when a crowd is chasing somebody who is running away and "crier," meaning to scream.

Forgotten HEROES

By

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A Peace-Time Hero

IN 1889 there died one of the most famous Americans of his day. He had received more honors during his lifetime than any citizen of the United States ever had before. Congress voted him a special medal and Queen Victoria presented him with a jeweled miniature of herself. He was buried with kingly honors in Westminster abbey. Later his body was carried to his own country and it was borne on Great Britain's finest warship, escorted by an American fleet under Farragut. Queen Victoria sent one of her sons to stand beside his grave. The prince of Wales unveiled his statue; Victor Hugo wrote his eulogy; two American towns, an American college and museums at Harvard, Yale and Baltimore bear his name. His statue stands in the Hall of Fame at New York university. Yet today it is doubtful if one American in a hundred could tell even the principal facts about the life of George Peabody.

A native of Massachusetts, he had been a farmer, a country storekeeper, one of America's first traveling salesmen and a soldier in the War of 1812 before he was twenty-one. (Then he became a banker and in his thirties and forties established an international banking house which obtained in England the credit which pioneer America needed to develop its vast resources. In financing the American expedition to search for Sir John Franklin, lost in the Arctic, he created a bond between England and America which greatly improved our relations with that nation.)

But the United States even more than England has reason to remember him gratefully because of his services as an educator and a philanthropist. And it was because of the fact that there was little of the dramatic and spectacular in these services that he is now almost forgotten. To him probably more than any other man is due the credit of establishing the American system of public school education. He did it by founding the Peabody education fund in what was then one-half of the states of the Union. The college in Nashville, Tenn., which bears his name is a monument to his desire to train teachers for public school work. Also he antedated Andrew Carnegie by almost fifty years in establishing free public libraries.

The inscription under his statue in the Hall of Fame is the best answer to the accusation of "money mad America." It reads "Looking forward beyond my stay on earth I can see our country becoming richer and more powerful. But to make her prosperity more than superficial, her moral and intellectual development should keep pace with her material wealth."

Captured 300 With Empty Gun

SERGEANT ALVIN G. YORK captured 132 Germans and won for himself the title of "outstanding war hero," but Sergeant Harry J. Adams of Rochester, N. Y., a member of Company K, Three Hundred and Fifty-third infantry of the Eighty-ninth division single handed made prisoners of more than three hundred Teutons. It was for him the Distinguished Service cross which he was awarded in 1919. Then for twelve years his feat was forgotten. When General Pershing's memoirs were published in 1931 he told of the capture by Private Lemaire, a marine, of 75 Germans. "Not bad for the marines," said army officers, "but let's remember Sergeant Adams." So even though they could not see what became of him, whether he was dead or still alive, still in the army or a civilian, through the newspapers they reminded his fellow Americans of this story:

On September 12, 1918, the Three Hundred and Fifty-third infantry took part in the attack on the town of Bouillonville. They captured the town and 80 Germans surrendered to Adams and his lieutenant. Then the lieutenant told Adams to see if there were any more Germans in the town. The sergeant saw one of the Helais run into a house and he followed. He entered just in time to see the German go through a trapdoor in the wall. At that time he had only two shots left in his automatic pistol. Firing both those shots through the door he shouted "Come out of there!"

And did they come out! The man he had followed was the first through the door and he was followed by one lieutenant colonel, 18 staff officers and 355 soldiers. A few minutes later Capt. Elmer R. Axon called out to Lieut. Van Dyne Howbert of the Three Hundred and Fifty-third that "here comes one man with about half of the German army." Then says Howbert, "Adams was walking along in front and entirely unconcerned; he had picked up a rifle since exhausting his pistol ammunition and was strolling along with his right arm hooked over the arm of the stock and the bayonet nearly dragging in the ground behind him, as he was very busily engaged in using both hands in eating something which he had picked up in the town. He had not even bothered to disarm the Germans and some of them were still wearing their pistols. We asked him where he got this gang and he gave us more or less the same story as is covered in the citation and was quite unconcerned about the exploit."

Sleeves Feature the Velvet Jacket

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

INTRIGUING little velvet wraps continue to flourish in the style picture, both for daytime and evening wear.

At this time of the year when the cool of autumn is being foretold during midseason days, the little jacket made either of black or of bright-colored transparent velvet comes as a lifeline to many a pretty summer frock such as women love to wear and are loath to cast aside until the last call for summer ceases to resound through the realm of fashion.

And so, because of the little velvet jacket, which tops it so smartly and flatteringly, many a beloved summer frock at this very minute is being permitted to live on borrowed time.

While the velvet jackets shown in the picture are functioning as evening wraps, they may be just as suitably and effectively worn during the daytime hours. The back view of the very youthful model to the left calls attention to an exceedingly clever shallow yoke effect. As to the sleeves, they are the "last word" in artistry and novelty. The velvet which fastens this good-looking wrap is bright green and it is worn with a pale yellow firm-weave chiffon evening gown.

The other jacket, with its wide flowing sleeves and its scarf-like neckline, is highly colorful; the transparent velvet of which it is made being bright red with red, white and black printed chiffon for its lining. It contrasts strikingly the pajama costume of black satin over which it is posed.

If there is one thing which distinguishes the popular velvet short-jacket wrap more than its sleeves, it is its color. The intent of the mode seems to be to add a velvet jacket to the costume which shall intensify the color scheme. Throughout the early Paris collections arresting color contrasts are stressed. Most unusual colors are combined, such as deep jade for the velvet jacket over purplish dark blue for the dress, or perhaps a radiant brown velvet wrap with a pale blue evening frock. The new color card places emphasis on rich shades of green, red and blue for fall, these deep autumn-like hues being especially effective in velvet.

Some of the very newest evening gowns show a stately silhouette made possible through the use of velvet which is stiffer and firmer than has been in favor for many a year. These late models make the skirt fullness at the back and their sleeves are composed of two puffs quite like artists of the past delighted in portraying in pictures of "a lady."

POSSIBLE SPREAD OF YELLOW FEVER

Experts Foresee Danger From Airplanes.

A "new aviation peril," said to be sensational in its possibilities, came up for discussion at the annual conference of the British Medical Association. Sir Malcolm Watson called attention to the likelihood, almost the certainty, of "aircraft carrying yellow fever from West to East Africa." If that happened, he claimed, there was nothing to prevent it from spreading to Asia, from completely paralyzing itself. Other physicians at the conference undertook to show how airplanes might be the means of "propagating plague, cholera, smallpox and typhus." And Sir George Buchanan stated that, as there was a possibility of aircraft introducing new types of influenza and cerebrospinal meningitis into England, the subject was engaging the attention of both the air ministry and the ministry of health. For himself he regarded it as "an important matter requiring measures in the yellow fever zones to prevent the spread of the disease."

Almost simultaneously with these deliverances, though without any sort of connection with them, came an article in the London Times setting forth facts regarding the transmission of cholera over the world after its appearance at Calcutta in 1817, and asserting that by 1831 it had become certain that no country was secure against the inroads of the disease. Appearing successively at Bombay and Madras, it reached Ceylon in 1810 and spread thence and from India over eastern Asia and the islands of the Indian ocean. By 1823 Syria was reached and Europe threatened. It disappeared from Turkey, but began to push north and west again after ravaging Persia and the lands south of the Caucasus. In Russia more than 250,000 human beings died as the result, in Cairo and Alexandria 30,000 were swept away in 24 days. And the alarm in Great Britain "increased enormously" in June, 1831, when Londoners received the news that the cholera had reached Riga, where "700 or 800 sail of English vessels, loaded chiefly with hemp and flax," were waiting to come to England. It was then, after an order had been issued for the quarantining of all ships from the Baltic, that "the plague established itself in England for the first time."

Yet all through that period, beginning with 1817, there were none of our modern airplanes in existence, and no possibility of the cholera being carried by them. Are they in any way specially fitted for the conveyance of contagious diseases, for stimulating to special precautions, and for thus alarming the world? Must it not be assumed that there is a like risk in the to-and-fro trips of our ocean steamers and sailing vessels that have been so long connecting the continents, the latter for many centuries past? Introduced disease, whether imported by airplane or steamer, is dangerous in any case. The call is to prevent such importation so far as that can be done, but especially to continue the fight against disease in all the countries which are affected or serve as its breeding ground, so that there will be as little as possible of it to export. And this is the task at which the scientists and the physicians are working in their campaign against that enemy of man, the poison microbe.

THINKER HAS GOOD WORD FOR THORNS

Serve to Keep the Individual Within Bounds.

"The rose culturists have accomplished so much in the development of blooms that I have often wondered why they have not been able to do away with the thorns," said Mr. Carlo Ninetti. "Perhaps it is impossible, or perhaps, in some instances, they have succeeded, but the roses of the garden still have thorns; and vicious enough they seem to the amateur, who, when he prunes his bushes or his climbers, should be sheathed in plate armor; even the experts do not escape unscathed, I understand. I have sometimes had the feeling when I was applying an antiseptic solution to my lacerated arms and hands that roses shouldn't be allowed at large, but that their cultivation should be wholly within guarded boundaries where they could do no harm. And yet, a rose in bloom is—a rose in bloom! And as long as such blooms are produced it seems highly probable that we'll endure the thorns."

"In horticulture rose thorns are menacing; in literature they are monitory. Many of the classicists, for many a century, have recorded the discovery—which has been made by so many other people—that there is no rose without a thorn; and then, with their usual ignoring of facts, the metaphorists talk of rose-strewn paths as the ways of delight, and beds of roses as couches of luxurious comfort. Fellow amateur, who has done some of his own rose pruning, would you like to walk along a rose-strewn path or lie on a bed of roses? You needn't answer. I'll answer for you. Certainly not!

"Let us, then, bear all this in mind as we contemplate the superior blessings of our more fortunate fellows. Those whose ways lead along rose-strewn paths must often find them rather painful to the feet, and those who lie on beds of roses probably have a good deal of difficulty in adjusting their posture so that tender parts of their bodies will not be painfully pierced. All of this, of course, is merely another form of a most comforting philosophy—a comprehension that there are flaws in the advantages that are enjoyed by the most enviable.

"Buck," I said, referring the subject, as I do most puzzling questions, to a man who has ideas, "don't you think that, with all the advance horticulture has made, the experts ought to be able to develop a rose without a thorn?"

"Perhaps," he responded; "but why should they?"

"Why, because thorns hurt people. They are bad things that serve no good purpose."

"As usual, you are wrong," he declared. "Thorns serve a very good purpose. They keep people within bounds. In fact, they ought to be on a good many other things than roses. Accelerators, for instance." — Indianapolis News.

Jack Mail Route

The carrying of the mails has progressed so rapidly in late years that the airplane now speeds across the country with mail in only a fraction of the time required by trains of a few years ago, yet in spite of all the progress there is one mail route which goes on unchanged in the 30 years of its operation. In Edwards, Colo., W. H. Wellington, a veteran of the mail service, has the contract for transporting the mail from the post office to the railroad station, and thence daily for 30 years he has driven the mail back and forth in a buckboard wagon drawn by a jack mule. His is believed to be the only jack-powered conveyance in the federal mail service.

In Agreement

"How is your boy, Josh getting along with his employer?"

"Well," replied Farmer Corntassel, "they have come to an agreement at last. Josh said he was going to quit an' the boss, he said so, too."

You can be tolerant of the foolish, but how about being tolerant of the intolerant?

WOOLENS FAVORED FOR AUTUMN WEAR

Woolens are in a most important place in the fashion picture for the coming season. And justly so, for wool no longer is a term synonymous with a heavy, bulky fabric designed for utility alone. Woolens of 1931 are in many weights and many surfaces, but the best of them, heavy or light, smooth or rough of finish, drape with the perfection which the new mode demands. They are as serviceable as they ever were, and they are beautiful as well, a fact borne in upon us recently when we visited one of the foremost woolen manufacturers of the country, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Coat fabrics for women are being woven so closely and thickly that they need no interlinings, which are clumsy things at best, and at the other end of the wool panorama are gossamer woolens which make the woolen evening gown seem an eminently practical and desirable addition to the wardrobe, rather than an extravaganza of the designer's imagination.

Women Learn to Make Permanent Waves Behave

Permanent waves are still going strong. Every woman concedes that the hard-bolled curl is a marvelous and wonderful idea. Methods have improved. Waves are wider. The process is completed in less than half the time that was necessary a few years back. Women have learned how to make permanents behave, to moisten them, pat them, pat them into alluring patterns. Brushing doesn't harm them; only makes them crazy for the moment. Combing out straight, applications of brilliantine or hot water together with clever manipulations put them in form again.

Cuban Heels Popular for Sports or Street

The Cuban heel is a smart choice for sports or street wear. It isn't like the square heel that was once characterized as Cuban but is gracefully shaped though sturdier than the spike heel. Usually of leather, it ornaments the shoe of calf or alligator. The spectator sports shoe is frequently seen with this conservative but very smart heel.

Plaid transparent velvet in greens and yellow fashions this tailored dress with velvet scotch beret to match. A green wool jacket tops this handsome one-piece frock which is collared and cuffed with white plique. Black kid pumps, a purse of black velvet with silver mountings and eggshell doekin street gloves complete this charming outfit.

Luxury Lingerie Smart When Laden With Lace

Luxury lingerie of crepe satin white or black is smartest when heavily laden with white lace of floral pattern. The silk slip for evening wear cut with a decollete back has its skirt finished up in an extravagantly deep source of the lace. Black satin night robes as well as chemises are stunning when bordered with white lace.

Burdensome Commissions

According to a headline in the Scripps-Howard chain of newspapers, "The White House Splits With Farm Board in Surplus Crisis."

The story goes on to tell circumstantially that the President sensitive to the almost universal chorus of disesteem for this commission's performance up to date is trying to work out a solution of the problems presented by the Board's unmarketable surpluses of wheat and cotton independently of the agency he created to handle just such problems.

Yet, President Hoover declared that the creation of this agency to settle the grangers' woes was "the most important measure ever passed by Congress in aid of a single industry," and at the initial session of the Farm Board he advised them that "I invest you with responsibility, authority and resources such as have never before been conferred by our Government in assistance to any industry."

The Farm Board was Mr. Hoover's own pet plan to save agriculture. He promised in his speech of acceptance that "it will protect the farmer from the depressions and demoralization of seasonal gluts and periodical surpluses." He came back to the subject in West Branch, Iowa, his old home town in August of 1928, where he said the Federal Farm Board would assist the industry to meet "not alone the varied problems of today but those which may arise in the future."

And now he is ignoring, if not repudiating, his child. Had the farmer prospered we would have not only the White House spokesman but every Republican orator and newspaper claiming it as the result solely of the President's foresight, wisdom and efficiency. Now that the Farm Board has failed utterly, he is apparently endeavoring to divorce himself from any responsibility.

It is a rather familiar expedient of our Chief Executive. He attained office largely through his claim that his election meant a continuation of prosperity which was always the consequence of Republican rule. When the Hoover panic hit the country and millions of men lost their jobs, he explained that these phenomena were the result of world conditions and an inescapable sequence to the World War. He has made no more reference to his pre-election prophecies and promises than he has to his glowing forecast of the effectiveness of his Farm Board.

When our Government was just taking form, Thomas Jefferson warned against the dilution of executive responsibility through the use of commissions and protected them against permitting the Executive to pass the burden of decision on to committees and councils. President Hoover's course exemplifies this century-old warning. Whenever any matter requiring determination appears he appoints a commission—a commission to handle the farm situation, a commission to investigate the prohibition problem, a commission to manage unemployment. If any of these function successfully, their accomplishment is claimed as an item on the profit side of the administration ledger. If they fail, as they usually have, the blame is to be laid on the hapless citizens he has pressed into service.

It is the finest example of "heads I win and tails you lose" in the modern game of administration politics.

Vice Chairman Ross Denounces Washington-Hoover Pamphlet

Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, Vice Chairman Democratic National Committee, in a recent statement openly denounced the "fulsome comparison" of President Hoover with George Washington, "which obviously evaluates him rather than the first President," as set forth in the pamphlet of the Washington Bicentennial Committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

According to Mrs. Ross, the pamphlet, which suggests a program to be used by women's clubs and others in celebrating the admission of unnaturalized aliens to citizenship or of young Americans on their becoming of age, reads "much more like a campaign document issued by the Republican National Committee in the interest of the candidacy of President Hoover than like a tribute from the members of a nonpartisan organization of women to the memory of the first President."

"Washington, Mrs. Ross continues, "was a great man and successfully met the issues of his day, but unless I seriously misread the signs of the times, a large proportion of our people, including thousands of Republicans, feel that Mr. Hoover has utterly and completely failed to cope with the problems that have been presented to him."

Eastern N. M. State Fair

With six county booths practically assured for the Eastern New Mexico State Fair to be held in Roswell October 7, 8, 9 and 10, and two or three more in prospect, this annual event is assured of being a sectional event of merit that will attract attention throughout the southwest. The livestock entries look larger than ever before, and reports on the flower show, the domestic arts department and the individual entries of farm products are most encouraging. Every woman in eastern New Mexico is being urged to make entries in the domestic arts department, just as every farmer and every stockman is being urged to enter in those departments. Premium lists detailing the various departments may be had by writing the Chamber of Commerce at Roswell.

Old Timers Day on a Friday October 9 will be on a bigger scale than ever before. Those who have lived in New Mexico thirty years or longer will participate both in the parade in the morning and in the barbecue to be held at noon. The parade will be even more elaborate than in former years. This is also true of the parade on the opening day of the fair.

The rodeo and races on the first three afternoons will include bronc riding, roping and bull dogging by the top cow hands from the entire west. The wild bronc contest in which a purse of $250 has been put up for the best bucking horse is a new feature in rodeos. Three races each afternoon at intervals during the rodeo will include entries from a half dozen western states. Admission prices to the rodeo have been materially reduced this year, and because of the crowd expected, it will be held on the New Mexico Military field.

The meek may one day inherit the earth, but they will have a Dickens of a time paying the taxes.

None of the bragging on California is being done this year by the folks who went out there expecting to get a job.

It is well that every city and town in the country begin now to lay plans to care for the unemployed this winter. Students of economic conditions can not see any material change in the situation this winter. It is just as well to recognize this fact now and begin to prepare for it.

Referring to the ever mounting loss of life, due to car accidents each year, we can not help but note that while it requires several years apprenticeship before an engineer is permitted to drive a locomotive on two steel rails, and young hairbrained youth with fifteen minutes instruction can take a car, capable of more speed than the locomotive and can be given free use of the highways. There are hundreds of men and woman driving cars, who ought never to be permitted to touch a steering wheel. They will not make car drivers regardless of their experience. As long as they are permitted on the highways they will be a menace to the life and limb of everyone else who uses the highway. The remedy that they will have to be invoked is a stricter handling of the drivers' license laws.

Ed R. Kelley Dies

Many of Carrizozo's people were shocked and deeply grieved when news came yesterday that Ed R. Kelley, one of Carrizozo's oldest citizens, had joined the silent majority, at 9:20 a. m. yesterday, in his home, Riverside, California.

Mr. Kelley was born in Bellefontaine, Mississippi, September 2, 1848, and had therefore, passed his 83rd birthday when the Grim Reaper called. At an early age he went to Alvarado, Johnson county, Texas, and came to New Mexico in 1887, and ranched in Socorro county during the early years following his coming to this section. He came to Carrizozo in 1907, soon after the founding of the town, and entered the furniture business, the title of the firm being Kelley & Sons. In 1919 he and Mrs. Kelley went to Riverside, California, where they have since resided. A wife, four daughters and two sons survive. T. E. Kelley, of the Kelley Hardware, one of the sons, is the only member of the family still living in Lincoln county.

The deceased was a man of fine personal appearance, and though more than four score years had passed over his head, his frame was as erect as a perpendicular line, and had the bearing of an old-time son of the South, and, of course, bore all the marks that has distinguished the real Southern gentleman. The passing of this old veteran has cast a gloom over our people, who deeply sympathize with the survivors.

D. L. Byron Injured

As a result of a truck accident yesterday afternoon, between here and Polly, D. L. Byron is in the Paden hospital, in an unconscious condition. A blow on the head appears to be the most serious injury suffered by Mr. Byron, although internal injuries may later develop.

The accident was caused by the wet condition of the road and the crash of the front right wheel of the truck which was being driven by Ashby F. Roselle. The truck became unmanageable when a wheel crashed and ran into the ditch, throwing both occupants out. Whether Mr. Byron's head was injured by coming in contact with the roof of the truck's cab, or whether his injury was the result of contact with the ground, Mr. Roselle is unable to say. Anyway, the truck is pretty much of a wreck, and he also noted, after he had extricated Mr. Byron, that the truck was facing in the opposite direction from the one it had been traveling.

Claude Branum came along shortly after the accident and brought the injured man to the Paden hospital, and the family, and many friends, as well, await the passage of the next few hours with much concern.

The Woman's Club

With the beginning of the new Club year, the Woman's Club of Carrizozo met at the home of Mrs. Oscar Clouse, hostess, assisted by Misses Paul Mayer, Glassmire, C. W. Young, Lucky, Nellie A. Branum and Miss Ella Brickley.

The club voted to change the date of the October meeting to Saturday, October 10, to avoid conflict with the County Fair and for the State Federation convention. With these two important events occurring in October it was decided to postpone the chili supper scheduled for October to some convenient date in November. Membership chairman, Mrs. J. M. Beck, reported four new members: Mrs. Groce, Mrs. Detloff, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Coplin.

Business meeting adjourned for the following program arranged by Mrs. Paul Mayer in honor of Past Presidents of the Club:

Blind Alleys—Civilization is riddled with blind alleys. The prosperity that ends in my being prosperous is a blind alley; the education that ends in my being educated is a blind alley; the amusement that ends in my being amused is a blind alley; the religion that ends in my being religious is a blind alley. These broad highways were never intended to end abruptly at the points I have indicated. My prosperity, instead of ending with the inflation of my bank account, should lead to the enrichment of the world. My education, instead of ending with a university triumph, should equip my whole individuality for loftier service. My amusement, instead of being a mere revel, should be a tonic, a refreshment, a re-creation. And my religion, instead of filling my soul with a smug and unwholesome self-content, should help every man I meet to fight life's battle with a braver heart.—F. W. Boreham.

Spanish Fiesta to be Held at El Paso

THE STORY

Six bandits hold up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackenzie. Kill Jimmy Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs. At the Mounted Police post at Fort Endurance, Sgt. Alan Baker disputes with his incompetent superior, Inspector Haskell, regarding plans for the capture of the bandits. Baker starts out in the police launch with five men. At the MacMillan trading post, Joyce MacMillan is thrilled at the arrival of the police launch. She had expected to marry Baker, and had been stunned at the news that he was to marry Elizabeth Spaulding. Stories are found on the MacMillan place and evidence points to Joyce's father. Alan leads his expedition up the big Aloska, compelled by Haskell's foolish orders to divide the party. Alan fails to capture the bandits and returns to Fort Endurance. Haskell blames him for the failure and Alan is allowed to buy out of the Mounted on condition that he absolve Haskell from blame.

CHAPTER VI

The Dark Hour

In his cabin Alan took off his uniform and changed to civilian clothes. It seemed to him he was stripping off his foot-free adventuresome life with that uniform.

What money he had on hand, several hundred dollars, he buttoned carefully in his shirt pocket. His expenses on this trip ahead would be heavy; he would have to borrow. But he was going to take that Victoria job, and he knew Colonel Steele would gladly give him a salary advance.

Then he made up a slender pack—a single blanket, a change of clothes, food for a week or ten days. That was all. No camping outfit, no weapons, no equipment for wilderness travel.

As he was buckling his pack together, Elizabeth unexpectedly came into the cabin. As she stepped into the light, she exclaimed: "Alan! That MacMillan girl told Mrs. Drummond that Haskell demanded you! That you're a constable! That he put all the blame of this patrol on you!"

"That's what he did," Alan answered, straightening up, facing her. "I didn't believe he was capable of it. But I shouldn't have been surprised; he's given me cues enough to his nature."

"And you're going to stand for that?" Her voice rose, sharp, nagging. "You're going to be his orderly, a constable, disgraced, boozed around? I'd think that any man would—"

"She checked herself as she saw the government property laid out on the bed and noticed that Alan was in civilian clothes."

He said quietly "You were a bit hasty. I didn't stand for it. I thought out I'm out of the Mounted. Out for good."

"Elizabeth gasped. For moments she stared at him, incredulous."

"She did not know just why he had taken this drastic step, but vaguely she guessed he had had some fierce clash with Haskell. It did not matter the circumstances. He was free of this ninety-month rut, this backwoods calling. There had always been a doubt in her mind whether Alan, when the great test came would actually tear himself away from the Mounted. She had expected a fight that would embitter him against her. But now he was out; he would surely take that Victoria offer; next winter she would be living in Victoria!"

Her heart leaped at the thought, and her whole manner toward Alan changed. She drew near him, slipped an arm about him; and a softness came into her voice.

"Dear, you're sorry to be out. I'm sorry to see you go. You didn't want to leave here, Alan, I—I did want you to; but I wouldn't have insisted. I'd have given in to you, dear, before I'd seen you unhappy. In the long run, we'll not regret; it'll be the best for us."

Alan watched the candle sputter in her hair, the burn half that always brought him poignant memories of her brother Curt. His thoughts, leaping ahead to his lone-handed venture, were scarcely with her at all, yet he was bewildered by her sudden change, her ardent affection. There had been times when affection from her would have cheered and heartened him; but now her lips, inviting him, asking for his own, meant less than the packing lying at his feet.

She asked him: "And now—you're going to take—we'll be down in Victoria, now? Won't Colonel Steele be glad when he hears! You'll write to him right away?"

"I suppose so. Yes, I'm going to take that job. Not much else to turn to."

She noticed how cold, how unmoved he was; and she went on, half-whispering:

"On our way outside, we can be married at Edmonton, and have that trip we planned to the Blackfoot Belkirs. And we'll have—we can afford to have now!—a cabin back in Vancouver Island; back in the mountains by ourselves, Alan."

He merely said, gesturing at the alcove: "I'm leaving Curt's keepsakes here. You'll watch after them, won't you?" And he added, "I'm leaving here tonight, Elizabeth."

"Leaving here? Tonight?" Her eyes went to the pack on the floor. Suddenly startled, she looked up at him again.

Feeling that he owed some explanation to the girl he was engaged to, he partly explained: "I'm pitching off on a trip, Elizabeth. By myself, I'm going after those men that shot up two of my friends. Haskell blocked a patrol I wanted to make. To go after them I had to be free. I don't know how long it'll take me. Maybe three weeks, maybe six. I'd like for you to wait here."

Something in his manner stopped Elizabeth from questioning him. She knew he intended to marry her and take her to Victoria; but something told her that in this present hour it was not well to question or oppose Alan Baker.

She acquiesced: "I'll wait, dear. I'll wait here for you. But, Alan, before you go . . ." She stood on tiptoe, reproaching him, begging, "Aren't you going to tell me good-by?"

Alan bent and kissed her, as she invited. But he did it dispassionately, as a thing expected of him. He felt her breath on his cheek, her arm tightening around him, her body pressed against his. He was subtly but unmistakably aware of a certain willingness about her; she wanted him to linger; she would have stayed with him there in the cabin. . . . It surprised, it shocked him, after all these months when she had been so cold and passionless.

When she had gone, he buckled his pack and caught up his hat. As he started to snuff the two candles in the alcove, he heard a thumping footstep on the threshold and turned to see Bill Hardsack. In a flash he guessed that Bill had been waiting outside, not wanting to come in while Elizabeth was there.

"Alan! H—H's blue blazes!" Bill was all but incoherent as he advanced across the cabin. "Say it isn't so! I heard . . . wasn't meaning to leave."

"I'm Out of the Mounted—Out for Good!"

"Joyce told me part of it, and I just heard you tell Elizabeth. . . . He didn't bust you? He didn't dare! And blame you for splitting our patrol? You didn't buy out—"

"That's what I did, Bill. He busted me. Busted me. What's worse, he wouldn't let us make the Inconnu trip. I couldn't stand that. I'm out. Leaving Endurance. Right now."

Bill's face turned gray. His jaw dropped, he stood in stupefied shock, with a look of misery on his blunt, bulldog features.

"You're—leaving—us," he gulped. "You're—pitching away—for good. You always stood up for us men, against Haskell. You and me . . . pretty good partners. . . . Now you won't be here any more, Alan. . . ."

"Bill, shake yourself together and listen. I'm going after those bandits. There's several things you've got to do for me. One is, I want you to cut aside from patrols whenever you can and visit Joyce and see she's safe. Another thing, I'm giving you this cabin and what's in it, except for a little personal stuff that I'll get some time or else send for. Then, there's one last thing. Got any free time coming in the next couple weeks?"

"I don't know. Yes, must have three or four days—way we've been hitting the ball all winter."

"Two days will be enough. I need a little help on my plan; and you, here, at Endurance, you can give me a hand. It's not much, but it'll mean a lot to me. I'll tell you what I've got in mind, so you'll understand."

In a few terse sentences that left Bill gasping and sweating at so stupifying at his feet.

She asked him: "And now—you're going to take—we'll be down in Victoria, now? Won't Colonel Steele be glad when he hears! You'll write to him right away?"

"I suppose so. Yes, I'm going to take that job. Not much else to turn to."

She noticed how cold, how unmoved he was; and she went on, half-whispering:

"On our way outside, we can be married at Edmonton, and have that trip we planned to the Blackfoot Belkirs. And we'll have—we can afford to have now!—a cabin back in Vancouver Island; back in the mountains by ourselves, Alan."

He merely said, gesturing at the alcove: "I'm leaving Curt's keepsakes here. You'll watch after them, won't you?" And he added, "I'm leaving here tonight, Elizabeth."

"Leaving here? Tonight?" Her eyes went to the pack on the floor. Suddenly startled, she looked up at him again.

goring a scheme, Alan sketched his plan.

"And you'll keep quiet about this, Bill? Don't tell Ed, Elizabeth, Drummond, anybody. If it ever gets out, it'd wreck the whole idea, and I'd probably land in a penitentiary."

"I'll keep quiet as a dead dog. I won't breathe a word. But Alan, why in h—h, why we've hung together, why can't I be in on your trick?" Eagerly he pleaded: "Let me go along, Alan."

"It'd mean desertion for you. Haskell would give you the limit. And you've got to watch after Joyce. My work is a one-man job anyway. We'll keep in touch, Bill. You write to me. Lord knows but—what you and I, sometime ahead, might get together again."

They shook hands.

Alan hurried down the slope to the trading store. Factor Drummond had not gone to bed. The news of the patrol, of his old friend Dave MacMillan being arrested and faced with such overwhelming evidence of guilt, had upset him.

"What the devil, Alan?—civilian clothes!"

Alan was weary of people's astonishment. He yawned no time with explanations.

"Drummond, where's old Dad Pence? I saw him here when we got back this evening."

Drummond pointed behind the counter. Alan walked around, up the narrow aisle, and there found old Pence asleep on a pile of wolf skins.

He had passed his three score and ten, old Dad Pence, at prospecting, trapping, water dogging, whatnot. He had made fortunes and guilelessly had lost them to men sharper than he. He had come down to the twilight of life penniless, homeless, childless. But old Dad Pence could still handle a rifle with the best of the youngsters; and a reputation for magic which he had acquired among the witch-killing Indians, still clung to him and put fear into primitive hearts. Altogether he was the man for Alan's purpose, if only Joyce would not mother him too much and make his existence thereafter too desolate by contrast.

Shaking him wide enough awake to understand what was wanted of him, Alan explained. He was to go back to the Big Aloska with Joyce and watch after her. He was to keep in touch with Bill Hardsack. Under no circumstances was he to wander off into the bush and leave Joyce alone.

Old Pence nodded. "I'll do it, b'y. Just as you say. I'll try not to forget and wanner off in th' bush. I'll look after Joyce, you don't worry."

Alan thrust a handful of bills into his pocket, and rose up and stepped back around the counter. "I want to buy your motor canoe, Drummond. How much?"

"To buy it? You making a trip? Go ahead, take it and use it, Alan."

"But I'm not bringing it back. I'm leaving this country in it. How much?"

Drummond was all tangled in Alan's swift words. "That canoe isn't worth a lot . . . You're leaving this country. . . . The motor cost me a hundred but it's three years old. . . . You're not bringing it back? . . . I guess fifty dollars, Alan. But what in the name of al—?"

Alan gave him the fifty and strode out the door.

Down the terrace at the steamer landing, Joyce was waiting for him, as he had asked her. Laying his pack in Drummond's canoe and untying the painter, Alan stood holding it, hat in hand, for a few last words with Joyce.

He said slowly, lengthening these last moments with her: "Joyce, I'm going away. I'm going after those six men. Bill will tell you something about it. I arranged with him to visit you whenever he can, and old Dad Pence is going back to the Aloska to be company for you."

Though she asked no questions about his trip, her dark eyes were big with wonder. Alan was tempted to tell her all. He could depend on her not to breathe one word of it. A score of times he had confided police secrets to her and she had given him invaluable information gleaned from Indians and breeds.

But his plan was a desperate gamble, and Joyce would surely recognize it as such. She might lose faith in so dubious a venture. And he thought: "It'll be entirely out of the country, out of it for weeks and weeks. She mustn't know that; she'd feel too terribly alone; she might even come to believe I've deserted her, as I did last winter. But if she thinks I'm still here on the Waterways, perhaps working secretly, I'll help her keep up hope."

Old English "Sport" of Fox Hunting Endangered

Would England still be England, without its hunting habits? Is this sport of centuries, the merry chase of elusive foxes, fated to die out?

It is unlikely that there is any feature of English country life so typical of the customs and traditions of the nation, as fox hunting. This being so, a recent statement of the earl of Roeherry, on accepting the mastership of the Whadden chase, that this sport is in a very critical condition, came rather as a surprise. He declared that five neighboring packs are having difficulty in finding masters, and that sportsmen must rally around now, or see fox hunting go the way of hawk-jing. His lordship ascribed the decline to hard times and high taxation.

This might be considered bad news, even for the foxes, for from accounts of this sport that I have read, it would seem that the prey gets as much fun out of eluding the hunters, as the latter do in the galloping pursuit. After some of these old wily masters of the craft have learned the business, their chances of becoming a mere break are comparatively few. Why, there are even some of these old fellows who pay visits to the kennels, if the hunt is not up regularly, to see what is keeping their little playmates! At least that's the story told.—Border Cities Star.

Constitution First

The Constitution was written before the preamble, and voted upon, section by section. It was then submitted to the committee on style, which made the final draft, placing the preamble in its proper place. It was then voted upon in its entirety.

BIGAMIST WORKS CITY TO SUPPORT HIS TWO FAMILIES

Auditor Learns Truth When Asked to Pay Expenses of Two Births.

Detroit.—Discovery through a check of welfare records that William M. Cram, thirty year old, has two wives, the first with six children and the second with two, has led to his arrest on a warrant charging bigamy.

The birth of a child to each of the wives in the Florence Crittenden home within a period of two weeks led to the discovery when hospital expenses in each case were referred to the welfare department of the city for audit, since both wives are being supported by the city.

Following Cram's arrest he admitted that he married Laura Ayotte of Flint, November 23, 1918, and that he married Marie Kochin in Toledo, April 27, 1920.

Legal Wife Suspected.

The first wife, who lived with her six children at 2904 McKinley avenue, said she long had known of Cram's friendship with the other woman, but that she did not know until two weeks ago that he was married to her or that her second child was born. She said that within the last few years she had met the other woman several times and had demanded that the affair be ended.

"My husband told me that he had not seen the other woman for a year," Mrs. Laura Cram said. "I have said nothing because of my children and now that it has all come out I will fight for him. I always have had the first claim and my children need him."

The first Mrs. Cram said her husband, a mechanic, was injured more than a year ago and has not been regularly employed since. The family has been receiving $17 every two weeks from the welfare department. She said that formerly her husband was absent from home at intervals out that in the last year he had been at home so regularly she believed the affair had ended.

Believed Him Divorced.

The second Mrs. Cram, who lives with her father and three brothers, said Cram had told her he was divorced. She explained that after their marriage Cram had told her he would live with his sister, because, being unemployed, he did not wish to be a burden to her family.

She said Cram had given her but little money and that she had worked steadily for four years until just before her second child, Nancy Mae, was born last May.

Young Bandit Discovers That Crime Doesn't Pay

Kansas City, Mo.—"It doesn't pay to be a bandit."

Robert South, daring twenty-three-year-old bandit, so told nurses in a hospital, where he is suffering from six bullet wounds inflicted by police. He attempted to make his getaway after a holdup.

Unrepentant at first, Robert South, slowly lost his bravado.

"I only got $100 and six bullet wounds in the attempted robbery of that sandwich shop," he said. "I wouldn't attempt it again for $5,000."

Bachelor Cafe Owner Prefers Pets to Wife

Maud, Texas.—T. A. Huntzberger, bachelor owner and operator of the White Squirrel cafe here, owns 30 pets and says he thinks more of them than he would of any wife.

Huntzberger's prize is a white squirrel, after which he named his place of business. He captured it himself and it is one of the few white ones ever seen in this section.

The zoo includes an assortment of fox, squirrel, rabbit, spitz dogs and Persian cats.

Philadelphians Still Favor Latin Language

Philadelphia.—Attacked on all sides by the "moderns" ripped from the required list of the University of Pennsylvania, and spurned as being a "dead" language, the mother tongue of Horace and Tacitus still holds its own in Philadelphia. Of all the 16 languages studied by 13,500 junior and senior high school students and 1,400 University of Pennsylvania men and women Latin ranks second only to one tongue—French.

Luckie Brothers Prove Name Means Something

Rochester, N. Y.—Something may be in a name, after all, if the case of the Luckie brothers is considered. John, eighteen, was blown through the roof of a small building and escaped with severe bruises and cuts about the head, while Roy incurred slight cuts on his knees when a tank containing 50,000 cubic feet of oxygen exploded.

Motor Kills Aged Cat; Nine Lives All Spent

Utica, N. Y.—The eternal existence of Tricky, a cat who ran the gamut of his nine lives, has ended. Tricky died at the age of sixteen under the wheels of an automobile.

He had been struck by automobiles three times, in addition to being caught twice in steel traps, having the tip of his ears frozen off and recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

The hospital, representing an expenditure of $650,000, occupies the site of the old El Paso and Southwestern station, the greater part of which has been utilized for the plant.

A charge of $25 to pay witness fees in addition to the assessment of a fine and court costs which was made recently in a game law violation case at Albuquerque, has been ruled to be constitutional by Quincy D. Adams, assistant attorney general of New Mexico. An Albuquerque man was fined $20 for shooting doves out of season, $6.50 court costs, and $25 for witness fees.

The quest for an understanding of man's origin and development in the Americas henceforth will be centered in a new scientific workshop which was recently dedicated in Santa Fe. It is the laboratory of anthropology, sponsored by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., from which expeditions in North, South and Central America will be directed. The laboratory is the only institution of its kind in the United States.

With the arrest of Dewey Thurlo, held in Albuquerque, N. M., on suspicion of auto theft, the search for an escaped Arizona prison trusty, who convinced an assistant warden he should be allowed to attend a picnic, ended. Thurlo, who became known as the will of the wiseprodigal from the Arizona prison, disappeared while in custody of Charles Rose, prison guard, who accompanied Thurlo to visit an ill relative.

Cannibalistic

A tourist automobile halted at one of the boulevard gas stations near Hollywood, Calif., and the driver asked that the tank be filled. A pretty girl of about seventeen leaned out of the car to chat with the attendant and soon the young man asked her name, "I'm Miss Wienie Hottelberg," the girl said. "It's my real name and I feel like a cannibal whenever I eat a frankfurter."

Youthful Feet Recalled

It was 78 years ago that Frank N. Davis, of Calais, and Isaac H. Johnson, of Deering, Maine, ran up the 234 steps of the Bunker Hill monument without stopping or touching the rail. After an hour's rest, during which they cut their initials on the Adams cannon, they came down the same way—on the run.

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. Uniontown, Pa. — Prosecutor J. B. Adams went to bat for the man out of a job. He served notice that where facts warrant he will jail for the costs any woman who files desertion and nonsupport charges against a husband out of work.

SPURNED MAN KILLS WOMAN AND HIMSELF

Unwelcome Attention End in Double Tragedy.

Martinez, Calif.—His unwelcome attentions repulsed Emello del Turco, fifty-five, shot and killed a married woman and then committed suicide. The woman was Mrs. Paul Paganini, thirty-four.

The tragedy took place on the porch of Mrs. Paganini's home here.

Just prior to the double shooting, Del Turco and Mrs. Paganini had been engaged in an ordinary conversation, police were told by Elazzi Affallo, a cook employed by Mrs. Paganini.

Affallo had just left the couple talking on the porch and, while he was in the house getting a drink of water, he heard three shots.

Running outside, he found his employer dying, with bullet wounds in the throat and breast, while Del Turco, who had placed the pistol against his heart, was already dead.

According to Affallo, Del Turco, an accordion teacher, had come to give a music lesson to Mrs. Paganini's son, Melvin, ten. The boy and his sister Lillian, six, were not at home, however, so Del Turco stayed and chatted with Mrs. Paganini and himself. Affallo told Deputy Coroner John Connelly.

Mrs. Paganini's husband, who was attending an American Legion meeting at the time of the tragedy, was stunned and unable to understand the shooting.

Undersheriff William Veale stated after investigation, however, that he was convinced Del Turco had attempted to force his attentions upon Mrs. Paganini.

Bees Sting Air Pilot but He Sticks to Job

Paris.—The air pilot Casanova is being proposed for a hero medal because during a trip from Paris to Marseilles one of the six beehives he was carrying as cargo was accidentally upset and burst open, the insects stinging him severely.

The bees perched on the pilot's hands and head, but, having in mind the lives of the 12 passengers he had in his plane, Casanova did not lift his hands from the control and sat sternly at his post. On reaching Marseilles he was found to have suffered 40 stings.

Gives Robbers Cash and Foils Plans for Holdup

Cleveland, Ohio.—Mrs. Martha Bradley of this city preferred being generous to being robbed when two prowlers recently appeared at her home while she was alone with her three small children. Awakened by the noise of some one trying to pry open the kitchen window, Mrs. Bradley called out: "What do you want?"

"All of your money and your fur coat," was the reply from below. Opening up her bedroom window, the woman tossed out two $10 bills. Snatching them up, the two marauders fled.

New York City Plans as Biggest Jewelry Mart

New York.—About 25 per cent of all the jewelry sold in the United States is disposed of in and about New York. This is shown by a census of distribution figures prepared by the government. There are 1,490 jewelry stores here that dispose of jewelry valued at $93,000,000 yearly. The bulk of sales are made in Manhattan, which has 815 stores, whose net sales exceed $90,000,000 annually.

Farmer Cracking Whip Knocks Down Sea Gull

Lehi, Utah.—Vern Webb, farmer, snapped his whip over his horses. The whip struck and injured a gull flying low overhead. Webb picked up the injured bird and killed it.

He noticed its peculiar color, investigated and discovered it was known as "Franklin's gull," whose natural habitat is the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and southern Canada.

Cougars Attack Auto

Medford, Ore.—A tourist car was attacked by two cougars near Grayback mountain. One of the animals was killed by falling under the car wheels. The other ran off after one vain leap against the closed window of the sedan.

Specialists Tell of Improved Pop Corn

Variety Pops to Twenty-Six Times Its Volume.

Pop corn specialists have surpassed the record of two blades of grass for one. Through selection, they have produced a new strain which pops to 26 times its volume.

The new strain, a yellow pearl pop corn named Sunburst, was produced during a seven-year period by agronomists of the United States Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Kansas agricultural experiment station.

The produced the new strain by testing ears of pop corn and retaining for seed the ones which gave the greatest volume of popped corn. The test consisted of popping a sample of the seed from each of the selected ears and measuring the volume of the resulting popped corn. Each sample was also tasted for flavor and texture. The remainder of the seed on the good ears was kept and planted the following year. The process was then repeated.

Although the testing was a long job, it proved worth the effort in producing better popping corn. It took one man a day to test from 60 to 75 ears of corn. However, the new strain showed an average of 26 times the volume of the seed when popped, while Queen Golden, the variety from which Sunburst was developed, gives slightly more than 19 times the volume of the grain.

Such careful selection of seed, while not practical for the small grower, has possibilities for the commercial grower of pop corn seed, declare the agronomists who made the Kansas test.

Calves Need Grain for Most Profitable Gains

Beef calves that are turned out to run with their dams on pasture need grain in addition to their mother's milk and grass if they are to be quickly fattened into profitable "baby beefs," according to W. B. Young, of the animal husbandry department, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. They should be taught to eat grain before they are turned out so that they may be fed in a "creep" while running with their dams, he said.

Getting them started on grain before they are turned out can be done easily by feeding the cow in a low trough or box on the floor so that the calf may nose around and find out what his mother is eating. Another method which may be used to save time and labor with several calves is to fix one large stall or pen into which all the calves may be run.

The grain should be put in some kind of a feed trough low enough so that the calves can easily see into it and get their noses in. A mixture of equal parts of cracked corn and ground oats used at the rate of six or eight parts, by measure, to one part of linseed or cottonseed meal, is a good one to feed.

Handy Grain Bin Boards

Boards in grain bin doorways slide up and down easily when arranged according to the plan used by John P. Becker of Bridgewater township, Rice county, Minn. As explained by Harry Haas, Rice county agent, Mr. Becker fits his boards so that they lie slanting instead of horizontal. Mr. Becker cuts his bottom board about 2 inches wide on the left end and 6 inches on the right end to give the proper slope. The other boards are then added, one after another, with their ends cut at the proper angles to fit the groove. All of the boards slant up from left to right, and by lifting the right end of each board they come out very easily. Mr. Becker says this idea saves him much time and annoyance.

Teach Terracing

Terracing equipment is being purchased by rural school districts in Pottawatomie county, Oklahoma, to be used by classes in agriculture in the schools and by farmers in the neighborhood. The county agent and superintendent of schools co-operated in the county-wide terracing program and a majority of the districts purchased equipment. In one district eight farms were terraced and seven were drained. In another district nearly every farm had used the equipment before the school year was over. Farmers there built five and one-quarter miles of drainage ditches and terraced 184 acres.—Capper's Farmer.

Agricultural Notes

Watch the nests and see that they contain enough litter so that the eggs will not be broken in the nest.

In the Middle West soybean hay is a substitute for alfalfa has worked well in wintering ewes with lamb.

It is estimated that the American farmer is at least four times as efficient as any other farmer in the world.

The United States bureau of biological survey estimates the average hawk or owl is worth $20 a year to farmers. They prey on insects and rodents.

July and August cultivation in the orchard extends the growth period and prevents the fruit from taking on the best color.

Careless handling in picking, grading, or packing is responsible for much cheap fruit. A brace is never repaired.

HISTORIC RUINS TO BE PROTECTED

Agricultural Department Ends Vandalism.

The earliest American apartment houses, as represented by the ruins of community houses and cliff dwellings of Indian origin in national forests of the Southwest, will be protected from further vandalism, according to the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture, which recently invoked the law in order to protect an ancient building in one of the national forests. While taking measures to preserve and protect these ruins as well as natural phenomena of interest, the forest service, however, encourages the public to visit and study them.

Some of the ancient houses in the southwestern national forests have been designated as national monuments. Casual delvers after relics or souvenirs have in certain instances destroyed fragments of no value to themselves, but of great interest to scientists and historians, who would reconstruct the times of the ancient builders and bring from relics their civilization facts of climate, agriculture, and arts for the benefit of present and future generations. Competent scientists and archeologists may get permits from the secretary of agriculture to study ruins located within the national forests.

Occasionally visitors seem unaware that it is unlawful to deface historic objects or dig into ruins on government lands. But the American antiquities act of June 8, 1906, provides a $500 fine and imprisonment, or both, for any person who shall without permission "appropriate, excavate, injure, or destroy any historic or prehistoric ruin or monument, or any object of antiquity, situated on land owned or controlled by the United States."

The forest service administers 16 national monuments—areas reserved for the public because of their historic or scientific interest. Gila cliff dwellings and Bandelier monuments in New Mexico and the Tonto and Walnut canyon monuments in Arizona contain ancient cliff dwellings. Old Kasaan national monument in Alaska is an abandoned Indian village containing many remarkable totem poles.

Modoc lava beds in California, reminiscent of the Modoc Indian war of 1873—the last great Indian war in California—Wheeler national monument in Colorado, and Sunset crater in Arizona, are notable for unique volcanic formations.

Jewel cave in South Dakota, Oregon caves in Oregon, Timpanogos cave in Utah, and Lehman caves in Nevada all have remarkable caverns and formations of interest to the visitor.

Mount Olympus national monument in Washington is famed for its glaciers, forests, and herds of elk. Devil's postpile in California and Chiricahua monument in Arizona have unusual natural rock formations.

Three Party Divisions Had Name "Republican"

The name Republican has been applied to three parties, a fact which gives rise to confusion. The Republican party of today originated in 1854-55, after the dissolution of the Whig party. The southern Whig went over to the Democratic party on the slavery question and the northern Whigs affiliated with the Free Soil and Know-Nothing parties. At a meeting held at Ripon, Wis., in 1854, a group of Whigs, Free Soilers and Democrats threatened to form a new party if the Kansas-Nebraska bill passed. The bill passed, and on July 6, 1854, representatives of the same groups met at Jackson, Mich., and formed a party to which they gave the name Republican. In the election that fall, the new party carried 15 of the 31 states. The Democratic party as now known began with the Anti-Federalists, who opposed the federal Constitution because of the rights surrendered by the states to the federal government. In 1792, it took the name Republican party to oppose the Federalist party. It was later sometimes known as the Democratic-Republican party, which name is still the official designation of the Democratic party. After its principles were clearly formulated in 1798 by Thomas Jefferson, it was sometimes called Democratic, but generally Republican, until Andrew Jackson's administration, which began in 1829. He was the first President to be officially listed under the name Democrat.

Looked Like Circus Stunt

At Monterey Park, Calif., John Ostich, police captain and motorcycle officer, gave townspeople a few uneasy moments when he rode down the main street with a five-foot snake coiled around his neck. Ostich explained that he had been called by a woman to come quickly and protect her from a big snake. He found the snake was harmless and conveyed it in the easiest manner to the hills and released it.

Last Call! Only 4 more days CONTEST CLOSES MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, MIDNIGHT $10,000 IN CASH PRIZES FOR THE BEST ANSWERS EXPLAINING THE MYSTERY of the "HIDDEN QUART" AND TELLING HOW THIS QUART BENEFITS MOTORISTS

Fact No. 1—Thousands of motorists and service station men have observed that after a car has been given its first fill of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil and is driven 200 to 350 miles, a look at the crankcase gauge shows that about one quart of oil is apparently missing... but

Fact No. 2—These same people have noticed that on the second and later fillings with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil, scarcely a drop of oil will disappear during the first 350 miles, and practically none at 500 and up to 1,000 miles!

The above facts have been checked by actual tests with cars that use six quarts of oil for the crankcase, can in good mechanical condition and driven at ordinary rates of speed. These facts will also prove true for your car, in proportion to the amount of oil your crankcase usually holds, your car's mechanical condition and the speeds at which you drive.

What becomes of the "hidden quart"? The answer is easy if you study the Facts given above and keep in mind the thing that only Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil can do. The explanation of the whereabouts of the "hidden quart" is simple—no technical knowledge of motors or oil is necessary.

Remember—The "hidden quart" of Germ Processed Oil does not escape through leakage... does not burn up, wear out nor evaporate. It is "present but unaccounted for." Fact No. 2, given above, proves all this.

After you've found where the "hidden quart" goes, you can easily see the special benefits it gives the motorist—advantages that no other oil can give.

Ask at any Conoco Station or Conoco Dealer for free Entry Blank which contains information about Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil that may help you win. Conoco Station and Dealer employees will gladly answer your questions. Remember, you do not have to buy anything to enter this contest.

See Rules of Contest for complete details.

Ancho News

J. F. Nick and family have returned to Oklahoma after a brief stay here.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack LeMaster arrived in Ancho last week from Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Jim Dale was home over the week-end from Douglas, Ariz.

J. H. Vandervort made a trip to Santa Fe and Albuquerque on business matters last week. He visited Mr. and Mrs. Billie Walsh, former Ancho residents, while in Albuquerque.

Mrs. J. E. Frame was hostess to the Bridge Club last Wednesday evening. At the close of the game, delicious refreshments were served.

Miss Maudie Warden was home Saturday and Sunday from Carrizozo where she is attending Hi School. She was accompanied by her cousin, Miss Leslye Cooper.

Enjoying the delightful fall weather the Frame and Pruett families with Mesdames Henderson and Belknap and Miss June Caldwell picnicked in the forest Tuesday evening. Supper was cooked on the spot and a host of stories and other thrillers were related. The party returned to town at a late hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Pruett and their trio of attractive children came down from Duran to attend Box Supper at school house last Saturday. They remained over until Sunday afternoon guests of S. J. Pruett family.

The Box Supper given by the Ancho Woman's Club for the purpose of supplying books for children of the local school netted something over thirteen dollars. Considering the worthy motive of the entertainment, the sum realized was much smaller than anticipated and falls far short of the amount needed. Music being kindly donated by Messrs. Lawrence Dragoon, Walter Hobbs and H. W. Barnes and Miss Lucille Drake, dancing was enjoyed before and after the supper and a congenial and harmonious crowd voted it one of the most pleasant affairs of the season. The woman's Club hope to repeat the occasion with a free entertainment and dancing in the near future.

One unpleasant note was caused by the theft of radiator caps from all the cars parked at the school house door. This is something which occurs at nearly every gathering at Ancho and local officers should give it their attention.

Carl Boydston who left here recently to attend Sweeney's Auto School in Kansas City writes his friend, Mrs. R. E. P. Warden, that he is getting along splendidly at Sweeney's and he is also attending night school. Carl is an ambitious boy and his many friends predict for him a bright future.

Mrs. Belknap was hostess to the "A B C" Wednesday evening September the 13rd. Three tables of progressive Auction Bridge were played. High score was made by Mrs. J. E. Frame. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Grover Pruett, S. J. Pruett, Bryan Hightower and J. E. Frame, Mesdames Henderson and Kille, Miss Caldwell and Mr. J. M. Frame.

Carrizozo Hi School Notes

(By H. S. Reporter)

Thursday of last week the Juniors entertained the assembly with a short play entitled "The Fatal Dose," which was quite amusing. The characters were: Frank Windham, Ruth Kelley and Lala Joyce. This was followed by a Spanish son and dance by Ernest Prehm and Jane and Andrea Kimbrell. This short program was then closed with a song; "Oh, We Are The Juniors" to the tune of that jolly old German Stein Song "Ach Du Lieber Augustine."

The weekly health talks which Miss Brynk, the County Health Nurse, has been making to the High School girls should, from all reports, be of benefit to the girls.

Monday of this week the Freshmen and Sophomores made their plans for their stunts in assembly.

Tuesday the Senior class had a sunrise breakfast across the Mal Pais, leaving town at five in the morning. Everyone had a grand time including Mr. Groce, who is undoubtedly the champion for all time for cooking omelet over a camp fire.

Also on Tuesday, the Rev. Jordan, of the Baptist church, gave a short and uplifting address on physical, mental, and spiritual growth.

And here is something for you eagle eyed golfers! The Junior class had offered a reward of one Buffalo nickel to the person returning the balloon which its members filled with hydrogen and sent toward Old Sol Monday.

Highway Officials Here

G. D. Macy, District Engineer, and H. H. Robins, assistant, both of Roswell, and G. C. Lassater, Santa Fe, Engineer of Surveys, were here Tuesday evening. While here a conference was held with W. M.
