Sees War Unless Jap "Hand is Called"

Washington—Today, at Washington and at Geneva, the great powers began a last desperate effort to head off a war involving 500,000,000 people and save the parts outlasting war.

Simultaneously, in the Far East, Japan was pulling the most colossal bluff ever risked by modern nation. But the stakes are worth it. If she wins she stands eventually to triple the land area of her empire.

Manchuria, over which Japan has fought two wars in the last 35 years, has an area of 360,000 square miles. The fertile portion of eastern Mongolia adjoining has another 300,000 square miles. With Korea, annexed 15 years ago, this would give her a total area of approximately 1,000,000 miles. Japan proper had only 150,000.

Domination over this continental back-yard of hers today is more than a mere Japanese policy. It amounts to an obsession. With it, her spokesmen say, they can grow and flourish. Without it the empire is doomed for lack of room to expand, and of vital foodstuffs and raw materials.

Japan knows that China is helpless.

Nor is Japan particularly apprehensive over what America and Europe might do. Europe is on the edge of an abyss, financially and politically. The spectre of revolution stares some of the principal powers in the face. And America, crippled by the depression, is certainly in no position to talk war—any kind of war, let alone war in China.

Japan therefore, appears to have picked her time with cunning.

The one big threat is from the direction of Russia. China has warned that unless the league and America can obtain for her a "just settlement," she will have to resort to war. Also, she has intimated, if the worst comes to the worst, she will seek the aid of her soviet neighbors. And experience has shown that, however reluctant she may be, it is an old port in a storm.

But two can play this game as well as one. It would be surprising if Japan did not seek an understanding with Russia, in the event of war, and if she got it the result for China would probably be the loss of all her territory north of the great wall—that is to say Mongolia and Manchuria in their entirety.

Hoover's Court of "Yes Men"

Washington, Oct. 15—Obeying the dictum of the poets that "you must go far from the mountain to view its grandeur," the Teton (Idaho) Peak-Chronicle thus presents its view of Mr. Hoover and his "Yes Men."

"It is a fact that grows more apparent as time goes on that the greatest court of Soothsayers, Jesters, 'Yes Men' are the advisors of our President today. First, last and always 'Yes, Mr. Hoover,' is their cry."

Citing the Wickersham report, the Peak-Chronicle continued:

"Costing $5 per word, this wonderful classic of the soothsayers tells us that you can and you can't, you will and you won't, you have and you have not, but most important of all, 'Yes, Mr. Hoover, you are right.'"

"Yes," the supporters of the tariff said, "we must build a high wall around our chicken coop; so high that our neighbors' chickens

Where Responsibility Lies

Chicago Tribune (Rep.)

The financial anarchy in the public affairs of Chicago, Cook county and the State of Illinois has been produced by a period of government for the greater part, both in time and area, under Republican administration. There has been a Republican Governor and a Republican Legislature. There was a Republican Mayor, a Republican School Board and a Republican Board of Review. The State Tax Commission, which intervened in the assessments, was Republican under a Republican administration.

Regardless of explanations which may be made, the anarchy has its source, legislative and administrative, in the Republican party. The various divisions of government may toss responsibility back and forth and try to evade it, but the conditions were produced under Republican officials, State and city, in the assembly and Council, in State departments and city offices, and by these officials.

can't come over and scratch up our garden; of course we got the wall so high that we could not throw seed over to our chickens, who promptly flew over to our neighbors' yards to live and lay their eggs; 'Yes, Mr. President, we must maintain our high tariff.'

'Yes, Mr. President, you are sure of the farmer's vote; why look at the wonderful things you have done for him; you spent the magnificent sum of $500,000,000 to stabilize his prices; the fact that you did not foster an interchange of products among nations by advocating the reduction of restrictive duties, resulting in 30-cent wheat, is nothing.' 'Yes, Mr. Hoover, you aided the farmer.'

"And so we could go on citing the most ridiculous situations that have ever existed in our history, all approved by that wonderful chorus of 'Yes Men'."

RETALIATORY TARIFFS THREATEN OUR TRADE

British sentiment in favor of an emergency high tariff which is becoming vocal in the House of Commons and in some sections of the press is the natural sequence of the system of trade barriers built up in continental Europe since the World War and the Fordney-McCumber and Hawley-Smoot tariff Acts adopted by the United States, complicated by the war reparations situation and the gravitation of gold to the United States and France.

With declining revenues to meet her budget requirements some eminent British former free traders feel that England can no longer afford to admit imports free while her exports encounter high tariff walls on every hand.

Their main purpose, of course, in advocating a tariff is to improve England's trade balance, but whether it will be attempted through the medium of a prohibitive tariff, with a view of stimulating consumption of comparable domestic products while trying to expand export trade—the futile Republican method—or by a fair tariff will yield a revenue to the government without injury to any industry economically justifiable, and that will tend to promote the interests of legitimate producers and of labor—the Democratic method—is yet to be determined, if a dutiable tariff policy is to be adopted.

The discussion presents an interesting phase to all Americans because it illustrates one of the evil effects of the Republican tariff policy as exemplified by the Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act. Already that piece of iniquitous legislation, sired by the gentleman from Oregon and the Senator from Utah and damned by nearly everybody else, has cost this country dearly in loss of trade and in international good-will, by provoking and inviting reprisals and retaliation.

The last two Republican tariff bills have done additional injury to American industry and labor by driving American manufacturers out of this country in order to escape retaliatory tariffs abroad and to hold their foreign trade following the erection of high tariff walls by many continental countries in Europe, due to rivalries and jealousies growing out of the World War.

This is the phase of the British tariff discussion that has keen interest for American producers, manufacturers and the labor element. Already the new Canadian high tariff enactments have attracted a large number of American manufacturers to Canada, and now, according to cablegrams, the American Chamber of Commerce in London has received requests from more than 100 industrialists in this country for information concerning probable sites for American factories in England. Of its own accord it has sent to American concerns nearly twice that number of questionnaires asking what facilities they would need to establish branch factories in Great Britain. There are now about 170 American concerns operating there either with branch factories or selling agencies, according to the informed London correspondent of the New York Times.

And the British discussion of whether or not there shall be a tariff wall around her borders is only in the preliminary stage. The extent of injury to America if that wall is ever built can only be conjectured, but even Senators Fess and Watson could not be expected to contemplate it with the naive optimism with which they look upon the one built by Messrs. Hawley and Smoot. Even they could get no pleasure, it may be presumed, from witnessing another exodus of American manufacturers to a foreign country with additional loss to American foreign trade and additional unemployment of American labor.

"Calamity Bonds" to Relieve "Hoover Panic"

Washington.—Grand Rapids, Michigan, met the unemployment situation partly through an issue of "calamity bonds," the Michigan Supreme Court having ruled that unemployment is a public calamity for which emergency loans may be made. The money was used for various public projects, all of which, it is said, benefited and beautified the city, while at the same time they saved the self-respect of the unemployed. So successful was the plan, according to the report, that $100,000 of the bonds have been retired.

This is the first time that the word "calamity" has been used to characterize the present depression, and it is predicted that the word will take a prominent place in the 1932 campaign.

Preserve Old Land-Mark

Roswell, N. M.—"The Tower" at Lincoln, in which the first white men in Eastern New Mexico sought safety from Indians, is to be preserved by the Roswell chapter of the New Mexico Historical and Archaeological society.

Built high on a hill overlooking Lincoln, which for many years was the seat of government for the great domain from the Rio Grande on the west to the Texas line on the east, the tower provided refuge for the first whites who came to New Mexico.

Built in 1855, "El Torre" still stands. It is built of adobe and stone. It had space for 100 persons at one time and was entered by ladders, which could be drawn over the top when the last refugee had entered.

Portholes through which the guns of the early settlers blazed forth at the enemy still adorn the top of the tower on every side. The tower is one of the chief points of interest in Lincoln, made famous by Billy the Kid and the Lincoln county war.

Protecting the Laborer

(State Tribune)

The highway commission deserves congratulations for insisting verbally on a 35 cent minimum wage scale for laborers on the Isleta-Los Lunas federal aid road.

It is too bad that in the past the government would not lend its assistance to efforts of the state to direct emergency aid money into the pockets of the common laborer.

The attitude of the Bureau of Public Roads has been inexplicable. Federal aid emergency appropriations were made largely to create employment. But the bureau has refused to permit states awarding contracts to write in a minimum wage scale that

Colonel Halsey Suggests 1932 Slogan

Washington.—The Pathfinder, of this city is promoting a campaign of political slogans and is offering substantial prizes for the best slogan from either party. The publication recalls the famous slogans of past campaigns, upon some of which elections were won. It also quotes some suggestions received in this contest, one of which is from Col. Edward A. Halsey, Secretary to the United States Senate Minority, whose recent definition of a Democrat was widely reprinted in the press of the country. Colonel Halsey submits the following for the 1932 campaign, as quoted by the Pathfinder:

"When Better Times Come, the Democrats Will Produce Them."

Song by the Boys

(From the Star Reporter)

Well, we don't suppose it will happen again for months and months and months;

We don't suppose it will happen again.

We don't suppose it will happen again for months and months and months.

It's only happened once and we don't suppose it will happen again in months and months and months.

Pardon me, boys; I don't like to interrupt you, but I have here a telegram from Manuel; shall I read it?

Sure says Manuel—I have no secrets from the boys.

Well, all right, it says, Dear Manuel: You are the proud father of a nine pound bouncing baby boy.

All the signers congratulate him and one of them says, "I hope he's a doctor;" and another says, "I hope he's a bootlegger!"

Then all swing into the song and the curtain is pulled.

Well, we don't suppose it will happen again in months and months and months.

A farmer in Kansas shot two young men who were making a raid on his watermelon patch. If reports are true as to the production of the average farm these days, it isn't worth shooting a dog for all that may be grown on a quarter section this year.

would protect the laborer. Chief Engineer McDonald is now personally in favor of a minimum wage stipulation and an eight hour day. He may be able to get action if New Mexico and other state officials help him.

It is quite apparent that he can count on officials in this state to recommend minimum wages and the eight hours. Which is encouraging news to the head of a family with prospects of a highway job.

Poor Children Put On Their Own Pet Show

My Neighbor Says

When preserving plums, if you wish them to retain their shape and size, prick the skins in two or three places before you start cooking them.

Should an egg have been boiled too long it can be softened again by lifting the saucepan off the fire, quickly placing it under the faucet, and allowing a good stream of cold water to run into it. The sudden change of temperature from hot to cold water has the curious effect of softening the egg.

Fish which contains few bones may be converted into steaks by dividing the flesh from the back bone in long, wide strips and then removing any smaller bones. Bones supply the best steaks.

Water in which vegetables are boiled should always be saved, as it contains the most valuable minerals and vitamins. It may be used as stock in making soup.

The Kitchen Cabinet

Wall Paper Cleaner.—Take one cupful of sifted flour, one tablespoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of coal oil, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of ammonia and one-half cupful of water. Mix in a small saucepan and cook until the moisture is evaporated, stirring constantly. Remove from the fire and knead until smooth. Take a small piece, kneading and turning it to keep the outside clean, as the paper is rubbed with a downward stroke.

Field Mushrooms.—Gather the luscious morsels in the morning if possible, do not wash them—if carefully picked and handled they will need none. Peel the caps, remove the stems and cook them in butter by themselves, after cutting into bits. Broil the caps first, turn and put a teaspoonful of butter into each cap and finish cooking. Serve with the sauce prepared from the chopped mushrooms. Mushrooms are delicious served over well buttered and browned toast, as a luncheon dish.

Pennsylvania Towns Put Curfew on Radio

Shamokin, Pa.—Councilmanic ordinance set 11 p. m. as the curfew hour for all radio sets within Shamokin borough.

At that hour all sets must be turned down so that they cannot be heard outside the house and all windows must be closed when the radio is playing.

Shamokin was not alone in seeking to place restrictions on radios playing late at night.

At Wilkes-Barre police announced that they would respond promptly to any complaint against excessively loud radios and would direct set owners to cut down the volume immediately.

Youth, 15, Survives Copperhead's Bite

Newburgh, N. Y.—Bitten by a copperhead snake while picking berries, Steve Cencak, fifteen, was saved from death by quick aid administered by local physicians and city health department officials.

After emergency treatment, the youth was hurried to a hospital, where health authorities administered a serum.

Greedy Island

In my Airplane to Greedy Isle,
I went one afternoon,
'Tis many thousand miles away,
Afar beyond the moon;
And there I found the queerest tribe
Of boys and girls, I mean,
'They really are quite different,
From any you have seen.

This country is most beautiful,
As fair as our own land;
The streets are broad and cleanly kept,
The buildings tall and grand;
But all these funny children
In this Isle I went to see,
Have eyes right in the very place,
Their "ummies" ought to be.

I noticed when their mothers called
For them to come to meals,
They answered—tumbling with a rush,
With greedy grunts and squeals;

They pushed and crowded right and left,
Each scrambling for a place,
And not one paused a moment,
Nor bowed his head for grace.

They never waited to be served,
When once they had a seat,
But reached for things, and without shame
Began at once to eat;
And not one used a knife nor fork,
But dived into his food.
With little fingers all unwashed,
I'm sure you'd think them rude.

And when they'd stuffed their little selves,
'Till they could eat no more,
There yet would be upon their plates
Enough for three or four;
These greedy little children
Wanted all that they could see,
Because their eyes are in the place
Their "ummies" ought to be.

You Can Stop that Rheumatic Pain

The constant nerve-racking pain that spells rheumatism or neuritis can be relieved, often stopped entirely. The new treatment which gives quick results where old methods have failed calls for two or three daily applications of B. & M., The Penetrating Germicide. Used externally, this preparation seldom fails to stop the intense pain in a few hours. Also, where the trouble is caused by germ infection, the B. & M. treatment will destroy the germs, making it possible for Nature to restore normal conditions. Your druggist should be able to supply B. & M. If not, send us his name and $1.25 for a full-size bottle. Or ask for free booklet, F. E. Rollins Co., 53 Beverly St., Boston, Mass. (Adv.)

RESTFUL SLEEP for FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

—With Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. Very often the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. Bowels need help—mild, gentle help—but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives. Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then relaxed comfort and restful sleep! Genuine Castoria always has the name:

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT

Youthful Frankness
"Would you like to play and sing the way I do?"

"Oh, please, no, ma'am," quickly responded the child. "I wouldn't like people to say things about me."

Sophisticated
"How do you like her acting?"
"I hardly know. She plays a simple village maid with plucked eyebrows."

Main business of politics is to get re-elected. After that, attention may be paid to public affairs.

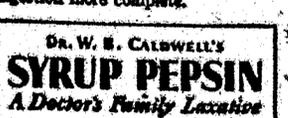

BOWELS need watching

Let Dr. Caldwell help whenever your child is feverish or upset; or has caught cold.

His simple prescription will make that bilious, headachy, cross boy or girl comfortable, happy, well in just a few hours. It soon restores the bowels to healthy regularity. It helps "break-up" a cold by keeping the bowels free from all that sickening mucus waste.

You have a famous doctor's word for this laxative. Dr. Caldwell's record of having attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby is believed unique in American medical history.

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from your druggist and have it ready. Then you won't have to worry when any member of your family is headachy, bilious, gassy or constipated. Syrup Pepsin is good for all ages. It sweetens the bowels; increases appetite—makes digestion more complete.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK by WALTER TRUMBULL

It was only a few short years ago that all of my friends and acquaintances were reading. Their favorite literature consisted of the ticker and the financial page. Now that Wall Street is as animated as the mummy of Hecates the Great, they have taken to writing. Jack Dempsey, for example, has written the story of his life by using Charles Francis Coe as a medium. One-eyed Connolly told me the other day that his autobiography was in a state of construction. On every hand, citizens of this fair land are rushing into print. If the next generation reads all the books which are being written by this generation, there will be no more wars. They will be too busy to fight.

One of the most amusing books I have read lately is Damon Runyon's "Guys and Dolls." Damon Runyon knows his Broadway. Moreover, he likes it. He has caught the life which lies between Times square and Columbus circle with an accurate and understanding typewriter. The short stories in this book have more than mere humor; they have both insight and sympathy. I know of no man today who could have written those stories except Damon Runyon. They are as full of color as Broadway itself. New York has changed since O. Henry christened it "Bagdad on the Hudson." "Guys and Dolls" is a strictly modern book. But there are stories in it that

O. Henry would have liked; that no would have been amply satisfied to write. I do not mean that any of them are an echo of any writer who has gone before. They are original and stand on their own merits. And, with me, some of them stand high. Here is the voice of Broadway recorded by an ear true for all of its nuances.

When Leopold Auer was in New York, a party was given for the master violinist which was attended by several of his pupils. Among the guests was a wealthy society woman, who was considerably impressed by the company. As those present separated into little conversational groups, she approached her host.

"Don't you think," she said, "that with so many famous musical stars present that it would be a good thing if you asked those two young men to stop tinkling on that piano?"

"Well," replied the host, "I feel just a little bit backward about interfering. You see those two are Jascha Heifetz and Efrem Zimbalist."

Roger Bacon, who has decorated most of the big houses at Palm Beach with Spanish and Moorish tile of the Fifteenth and Sixteenth century, has been visiting our city and telling me fish stories. He told me of a trip to islands of the Bahama group some 300 miles northeast of Nassau, where, in shallow water, his party caught forty bone fish in one day. Take it from Isaac Walton, that is a record.

Many a fisherman has spent a day trying to get one bone fish, which according to no less an angler than Dr. John Oliver La Gorce is about the gamiest fish that swims.

Mr. Bacon also seriously told me a story of trolling with a Japanese feather for bait and of the feather being swallowed by a yellow tail, the yellow tail by a larger fish, and the larger fish by a shark, all within a few moments. This is what I'd call fishing with a party line. I am told that Mr. Bacon once took a course in romantic literature at Wesleyan.

It seemed a great pity to me that those ardent fishermen, Irvin Cobb, Bob Davis and Maxmillian Foster were not present to tell some of their fish stories; although Mr. Foster never was quite the same as an angler after taking William O. McGeehan on a fishing trip. Mr. McGeehan insisted upon referring to a split bamboo rod of great price as a "pole."

had returned practically empty handed. Mr. Fisher was willing that his guests should believe he had caught the fish while seated comfortably in a deck chair smoking a cigar. It later was discovered, however, that Mr. Fisher had offered the natives of Blimini five dollars per fish and that practically that entire island had gone fishing.

HOW IT STARTED To Have a "Confab"

If over there is a line which seems rooted in slang and colloquialism of the day, "to have a confab" signifying to converse with intimately, would seem to be entitled to first honors.

Yet, interestingly enough, such a surmise would be far indeed from the fact. For, as you shall see in a moment, "confab" is rooted about as classically as could be.

To have a confab is simply an expression embodying an abbreviation of "confabulation" which in turn is derived from the Latin "confabulatio" having the same meaning as the word "confab" today.

Buttons Trim College Girl Frocks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

BUTTONS, buttons, trim your frocks, your blouses, your suits, your coats and your pajama costumes with buttons, such is the message which fashion is fairly shouting in the ears of young moderns who attend college this fall.

An ideal decoration for smart campus clothes is the new buttons, whether there be rows and rows of them, or perhaps a single huge button placed with a view of "showing off" to the best advantage.

The nifty Jersey frocks, which are so decidedly "it" for the college girl this fall, make a perfect background for the now-so-chic button trimmings. In order that you may be made wise as to the effectiveness of the new button treatments your attention is called to the stunning costume of brown wool Jersey shown to the right in this picture. Here rows and rows of beige ocean pearl buttons travel up and down the deftly-seamed sections of the tunic, on the sleeves also, in fact, wherever there is the slightest excess for their appearance either on bodice or skirt there do these ornamental buttons hold forth.

Color adds greatly to the lure of the clever button trims which are such a definite style feature this season. The four immense ocean pearl buttons which pose two on one side and two on the other at the neckline of the swanky blouse which the style-wise coed, standing to the left in the picture, is wearing, are a handsome green matching the silk which they trim. The suit itself is fashioned of one of the numerous rough textured loose-woven woolsens which are so correct for the fall or winter costume. The deep sea-green of this material contrasts handsomely with the brown for which collars it.

It is really very exciting, the button game as fashion is now playing it. For example, picture, if you will, a modish black silk afternoon dress with a diagonal bodice closing, which is traversed with six large white ocean pearl buttons sewn through with a cording made of bright red fabric.

Paris is not only showing an interest in buttons, but buckles and other pearl trimmings are likewise regarded with favor. This vogue is even reflected in the millinery realm where one sees here a director's hat trimmed with a single large pearl buckle, or there a felt shape with a tab buttoned over the brim to give it a one-side flare as the season demands.

SILKS, WOOLS AND VELVETS IN FAVOR

Velvets, silks and wools lead the parade of fall and winter fabrics, according to Kathieeb Howard, New York fashion editor of Harper's Bazaar. Many new weaves and colors are available in these fabrics, she writes.

"Velvets are to be an outstanding fabric for the fall and winter mode," she says. "They are apparent in a variety of weaves.

"Evening dresses, evening wraps, afternoon dresses, cinema dresses are all seen in this luxurious fabric, so suitable to the romantic mode.

"Flat crepes, in flower and fruit shades and in pastels, are greatly in demand. Lanes are important. Satin is paramount. Stiffer silks, such as faille and brocades are represented in the collections. Novelties in plaid effects, heavy-pebbled crepes, square alpaca-like weaves and faconne surfaces are offered.

"A woollen season is strongly indicated. In costings the newest surfaces are rough for daytime wear, changing to dainty or broadcloth for more formal coats."

New Glove Buttons Up Back Instead of Under

A new glove buttons up the back of the hand instead of the under side. It is a gauntlet, but the buttons begin diagonally at the little finger and cross the hand above the wrist. A contrast in color is made by the buttons and the outline around the buttonholes, and occasionally by means of contrasting stitching done by hand around the fingers. On some a cuff turns back, showing a bright lining in combination with white or beige or a lighter shade of whatever the lining is showing.

Ostrich Puts You in Forefront of Fashion

And the ostrich is back. Oh, very much so. Not only on fans, but also on the everyday afternoon hat. Yes, "anans, two little ostrich plumes over the right ear on a close-fitting hat not only lend softness to the face but put you in the forefront of fashion. What's more, an ostrich neck has been known to be carried, solemnly but prettily, to evening functions.

Jewel Shoulder Straps

The jewel-like beauty of turquoise blue ocean pearl sequins which band the shoulder straps and outline the deep décolletage lends brilliance to this sophisticated evening gown of shell-pink celanese satin.

Some of the New Ideas in Chic Hats for Fall

On distinctly new lines is the small hat with a curving feather like a crescent moon. Not all the new brimmed hats have ostrich. A new one in rust colored felt is trimmed at the side with a roll of green velvet set under the side brim as a feather might be.

A black felt hat has a large black satin ribbon bow in the back, under a brim that encircles a very shallow crown. Still more ribbon appears, this time in pink velvet for a black felt model that sports a rather wide brim stepping down in front and up at sides from a crown almost too slight and small to talk about. The way the velvet ribbon is used deserves a word. Its modest twin knot perched in front and Watson shepherdess bow behind.

DOLLAR TRACED TO 'PIECES OF EIGHT'

American Currency Since the Days of 1792.

In the Fifteenth century the counts of Schlick, in Bohemia, minted large silver coins from metal found in the vicinity of Joachimsthal, in that country. These coins were known as "Joachimsthaler," abbreviated to "thaler." In the low German this became "daler," and to the English "dollar."

Before the Nineteenth century coins often circulated with little regard for national boundaries. Some types of coins, because of the quality of their manufacture, came to be especially well known and to be accepted as an international standard. The florin, for instance, first minted in Florence in 1252, was later adopted as an Austrian, a Dutch and an English coin. It is in this same manner that a little valley in the recesses of the Bohemian mountains came to give its name to the monetary unit of Prussia, before the establishment of the German empire. Other countries adopted dollars in their currency, and the name was next applied to other coins of weight and fineness similar to the dollar. The famous Spanish "pieces of eight"—eight reals—came to be called a dollar, and this became the most widely circulated of all the early dollars.

It is the Spanish "pieces of eight" which gave us our standard coin. In the days of the Spanish colonial empire in America, the "Spanish milled dollar" circulated as freely in the English colonies as in the Spanish, and became the principal medium of exchange throughout the western hemisphere.

The United States adopted its dollar currency under the coinage act of 1792. The United States wanted to be independent of Great Britain even in its currency, and it turned to the Spanish example rather than the British, and a decimal system was decided upon instead of the British calculation of shilling and pence.

The Spanish dollar had been divided into eight, but that of the United States was divided into a hundred fractions, "cent" being from Latin and French words for "hundred."

More and More

Publisher George Doran said in a literary talk: "Novels get more and more passionate, don't they? A novel like 'Three Weeks' was considered terrific when it came out, but the girl of today would consider 'Three Weeks' dull."

"A class of coeds were asked to make out a list of subjects that they'd like to write essays on. One girl began a list with:

"My Ideal Man,' 'A Divine Hour,' 'Moonlight Love,' 'One Hour of Love,' 'Desert Love,' 'Life's Happiest Hour.' Then she broke off.

"I'm not satisfied with this list," she said. "It seems so darn practical."

Oyster Culture

The sow-and-reap method so common to agriculture is on trial in the oyster industry. An enterprising company operating at Padilla bay on Puget sound will plant seed oysters from Japan about the first of each year and harvest them the following fall. Fifty million oysters are now growing in the Padilla beds and will be ready before long. Care will be taken not to let the oysters reach the gigantic, "beefsteak" size they would if allowed to attain their full growth.

Heron Collection

Perhaps the biggest colony of blue herons on the Atlantic coast is at Bartlett's Island, near Bar Harbor, Maine. The island, a four-acre tract off Indian point, is owned by Augustus P. Loring, Boston lawyer. On it there are some 500 blue heron nests and, in addition, many nests of the black-crowned heron and of osprey.

Explorer Sets Forth

Sahara as Man's Cradle

Upon his return to the United States after an 18,000-mile exploration trip through Africa Dr. Arthur Torrence, Los Angeles explorer, announces his belief that the southern Sahara desert was the cradle of the human race. Not only did he make extensive investigations of the primitive tribes and the geological history of the Sahara, but he claims to have found evidence refuting the Darwinian theory of the origin and perpetuation of new species. While he does not deny that man evolved from a lower type of animal, he thinks this evolution took place in the southern part of the Sahara.

New York is not usually considered a mining state, largely because it does not contain any gold or silver, yet its sub-surface deposits yield returns greater than those of many states with popular reputa-

THE "HIDDEN QUART"

That Stays up in the Motor and Never Drains Away

—is Worth its Weight in Gold to Any Motorist!

It's not the mileage your speedometer shows that makes your car wear out quickly, lose power and need costly repairs. It's motor wear, caused by friction, that does it! And almost half of all this motor wear occurs while you're starting. Cut down starting wear and you'll give your motor longer life.

That's just what the "hidden quart" of Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil does! It stays up in your motor and never drains away and thus cuts down starting wear! Ordinary oils drain away, leaving working parts unprotected until oil is pumped from the crankcase through the motor, which takes several minutes. Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil penetrates and combines with metal surfaces of working parts, stays there and never drains away. The "hidden quart" safely lubricates every cylinder, piston and bearing the instant you touch the starter.

The "hidden quart" is worth its weight in gold to you! From the first fill with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil, you'll have this "hidden quart" up in your motor, giving safe lubrication at all times, lengthening your motor's life. Drain your crankcase now—fill with Germ Processed Oil at any station displaying the Conoco Red Triangle.

Sitting Steady in the Boat

(Santa Fe New Mexican)

Millions are out of work in this country. Millions have had their incomes cut in twain or worse, the rich and the poor have encountered adversity so serious as to make it necessary for them to readjust their whole scheme of living.

Apparently the principal thing overlooked in all this welter of financial woe is the magnificent way the country has taken it. There is a limit, say you, and things look dark for the long hard winter ahead.

There has been much talk of the mercurial American business temperament which squeals the minute it loses hold of hysterical prosperity. But look back over the year, and travel through the country, and realize the situation and then marvel at the steadiness of the great American people.

Money should be a means of exchange, but we have made a commodity out of it

There are two kinds of men: Those you can trust; and those who agree with everything you say.

True economy is the wise expenditure of money. We have said that before, but it will bear repeating. But we do not elect men to office who know how to spend money wisely.

Everyone is asking, when will the depression be over? Well, it will be over when every one gets down to the fair basis of prices, and not until then and the quicker everyone realizes this and gets their prices down, the quicker we can start up.

On the same day that James Francis Burke, General Counsel of the Republican National Committee, made a rosy report to President Hoover that a personal survey of eight Western States indicated that Mr. Hoover would be re-elected, the Seventh Congressional District of the well-known Western State of Missouri went Democratic by the largest majority in its history.

"Senator Watson credited the Farm Board with averting a panic by its purchase of wheat."—A P. Dispatch from Omaha.

With wheat thereafter falling from $1.25 a bushel on the exchange to 23 cents on the farm and at this writing hovering around 48 cents Chicago, one wonders just what Senator Watson would call the conditions the Farm Board brought about. Prosperity?

If W. J. Bryan were living today he could say, "I told you so." He advocated bimetalism for money and predicted disaster if we went to a gold basis.

A local motorist while returning home the other evening from a neighboring town kept record of the number of drivers who dimmed or tipped down the beams of their headlights as they passed him.

The biggest fallacy is the belief that advertising increases the cost of the merchandise advertised. Advertised merchandise, value for value, more often sells for less than the non-advertised. The reason is that on advertised merchandise the sale is larger, consequently the volume produced is larger.

The Livestock Situation

J. A. McLaughlin

I recently heard a conversation in one of the good-size banks of the West. The customer was a representative man of that section who had apparently borrowed up to the limit and the banker, like all I have met lately, wanted the customer to cut down his loan.

Central Livestock Markets have played a very important part in bringing about a condition where either stockers and feeders or fat stock may be readily sold. The stocker and feeder outlet has been created by providing a supply for the small operators who are constantly watching the market for their requirements.

Meat food is an important part of our national diet, placing the whole industry of production and distribution on a sound and enduring basis. Present conditions are bringing us back to a realization of this fact.

Every ton of hay or grain that we can market thru livestock even at present prices brings additional returns.

There are substantial indications that the livestock list has reached the low point. Fat cattle supplies are less than a year ago and while there is a statistical increase in the Spring pig crop we must keep in mind that values recently reached the lowest point of more than twenty years.

However, in connection with the whole list there is no reason to assume that we are immediately going to substantially higher price levels because there is nothing in the consumer demand to justify that condition.

If we have reached the bottom we are at least on a sound foundation. We may mark time for a while and the upward climb will be gradual.

That there is a much better feeling throughout the industry as a whole is plainly evident and we are glad to see the leaders take advantage of present low values to build up their flocks and herds as a safeguard of the future.

Use Home Grown Products

Wise as this generation proclaims itself to be it is still helpless when it comes to the matter of caring for itself. Some sections of the country have a vast surplus of food while the people in other sections are starving to death.

Editor News—

In Albuquerque and other parts of New Mexico, the housewives are buying home-grown farm products in preference to those that are shipped in.

If the people of Carrizozo will give their entire patronage to the local business houses—the stores, bakery, laundry, shoe repair shop, cleaning and pressing shops, watch repairing, etc., the money so spent will be kept at home and will help the town grow to a much larger size.

Employment should also be given to home mechanics in preference to outsiders. Let us all help to make Carrizozo a strictly home town. Our mechanics are as good as can be found anywhere.

This is a good time to have work done on property before the cold weather sets in. People who own property should give out work to help local mechanics. It is the duty of those who can afford to do so to help out the unemployment situation as far as lies within their power.

Robert Leslie, Sr., one of the oldtimers of White Oaks, and who is well advanced in years, we are informed, is quite ill and his condition is said to be critical.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lemon and son Maurice, returned Sunday from White City, Kansas, where they had been called by the illness and subsequent death of Mr. Lemon's mother.

John Doering was over Tuesday from Glencoe. John ran a barber shop in Carrizozo for several years, but about six years ago moved to Ruidoso and established a store which he still operates.

Allen Lane is reported to be very ill at his home in White Oaks, and his two daughters Misses Vivian and Aileen, and son Edward, came in from El Paso and California, and are at their father's bedside.

WANTED:—A few good cows. Inquire at this office or see E. T. Collier.

Charles H. Thornton was up from his home, near Oscura, Tuesday, with a load of fruit from his orchard. He was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. A. W. Moore, who will spend a visit with her parents.

C. M. Lucky killed a bear Wednesday, in Carrizo mountains. The bear was not large, the weight reaching 150 pounds. So far as we are able to ascertain this is the only bear that has been killed in Lincoln county this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Syd Jones and children were down from Corona Wednesday. Mr. Jones, who is a member of the Board of County Commissioners, was here to sign the tax roll, while Mrs. Jones and children visited the dentist and eyespecialist.

Judge John Y. Hewitt, who has lived at White Oaks for 51 years, and who bears the distinction of the title of "Nestor of the New Mexico Bar," had many visitors from Carrizozo and other sections of the county, last Sunday, on which date he was 95 years old. Most cordial were the greetings.

Mrs. Maggie Pungsten, of the Nogal Mesa, returned last Friday from a swing around the circle. She first went to El Paso where she was joined by her daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kendrick, and the enlarged crowd drove to Carlsbad Cavern. Their next stop was at Portales to see the James Robinson family. On their return they stopped at Roswell to see the fair.

Mrs. Alice Roberts returned last week from a four month's visit to her children in California. A family reunion was held at the home of her son, Bert, all the children and her only brother, Ben Parker, being present. Mrs. Roberts had a most wonderful vacation, but even so, thoughts of home, with its winds and sand, and the perpetual Sunshine were often uppermost in her mind; and of course, she was happy to get home.

Camp Mal Pais

The Camp Mal Pais, which has been under construction during the summer, is now completed offers its service to the public—both local and tourist motorists. Everything is brand new, from the filling station to the cozy cabins. Each cabin has a bath, with hot and cold water, and shower baths have also been installed. In fact, it is one of the most up-to-date concerns of its kind in this section, and is a creditable improvement to our town. Camp Mal Pais is located at the intersection of Fourth and Main street, on Highway 566, and is operated by Mr. and Mrs. B. Frier.

Rolland's Burglarized

Rolland's Drug Store was entered by burglars sometime after midnight Sunday, the 11th, and a large quantity of merchandise, consisting chiefly of jewelry, cutlery, etc., carried away. The loss was about $500.00. Entrance was gained at the rear end of the store. Search for the perpetrators has been made, but so far without results. Severe comments have been heard on the streets and suggestions made for safeguarding the business houses, but it is probably only a flash in the pan, and will be revived only by a repetition of Sunday morning's infraction.

District Court Convenes

Judge Frenger, and other officers of the court, came in Sunday from Las Cruces, and the fall term of court opened Monday. The grand jury was organized, and discharged Tuesday evening, having returned two true bills. The petit jury will be empaneled Monday and the court will proceed with the docket. In the meantime, the court has been engaged in hearing motions, setting trial dates, etc., and clearing the deck for uninterrupted work during remainder of the term.

Red Cross Roll Call

Again the people of Lincoln county are asked to answer the Roll Call and join the American Red Cross. This is the Fiftieth Anniversary of this national agency of humanitarian service. The aid the Red Cross gives in times of drouth, floods and disasters of many kinds is made possible only by the annual memberships of hundreds of thousands of our people. We of this county can do our share of this fine work by answering the Roll Call—by joining now! The annual membership is one dollar, fifty cents of which remains with the local chapter in this county for local relief work. You are cordially invited and urged to answer the Roll Call this year by giving your membership to the worker who calls upon you, or better still, just answer the Roll Call at the Red Cross Booth in the Lutz building during the Fair. Don't leave it to George—the Red Cross is counting on YOU!

Money measures a man. It is not how much money you have, but what you do with what you have. They are putting God first, and he is richly blessing them.—Louie D. Newton.

Replacing the Mule

Lee Hall, Va., Oct. —Firm in the belief that the next war cannot be fought successfully with instruments of the last one, a new type of army combat unit, with modern motor trucks replacing the proverbial army mule, is being developed here by government officials conducting the army proving ground at Camp Eustis.

While motorization of infantry for movement of troops has been under development for some time, the plan of using trucks as an adjunct to actual combat has been developed only within the past few months. With no semblance of roads to guide it, the motorized unit, made up of ton and a half Chevrolet Trucks modified by two extra wheels in the rear, attained speeds of thirty miles an hour in shell-torn waste land, over wooded knolls and through swamps blanketed under water at high tide.

Because of its speed and flexibility the unit is particularly valuable for pursuit work and in breaking up enemy air bases, army officials say. The automotive equipment used by the unit consists of part of a fleet of 56 Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks supplied the 34th Infantry in 1929. So effective have been tests with the new unit that army men hope for sufficient new and additional equipment to make possible motorized combat units as a part of the extra fighting equipment of the army.

HEART OF THE NORTH

BY WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

THE STORY

Six bandits hold up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackinac Island, Michigan, and escape with gold dust and furs.

"Buzard—that's more like it. I saw you milling around up there when I got off the train. Made inquiries and hustled out here in the field.

fine offer will you wire me five hundred as salary advance would be mighty grateful letter following with details.

"ALAN BAKER."

He and Buzard ate dinner; and then for a solid hour Alan talked.

He told of the Midnight Sun robbery, of the chase, flight, escape, of Dave MacMillan's trouble; of his resolve to help Joyce; of Joyce going bravely back to the lonely trading station; of his run-in with Haskell, his getting busted, his buying out of service, his thousand-mile trip to Edmonton.

"But just where do the old crate and me come in at?" Buzard asked.

Alan told why he was looking for an airplane, sketched the strategy of his campaign, explained his whole daring plan of running the bandits to earth.

He asked, "Will you go, Buzard?" It was so very simple a question, but there was a prayer in his voice and eyes.

"Will I go?" Buzard echoed, almost angrily. He put his flat down on the table so hard that the salt shaker jumped. "Will I go—on a trick like that? It's a hell, what a question! Would I kiss my girl if she asked me to?"

Baker Jerked His Thumb at the Piano—'Whose is That?'

Alan checked him: "Just a minute, Buzard. Let's get a couple things clear. One is the matter of pay. I've got a couple hundred dollars in my pocket and five hundred coming by wire. It'll probably take all that to outfit us, so right now I can't pay you any red cent. But I'll going onto a good-salaried job, and I'll pay you before the year's over."

"How much are you getting out of this?" Nothing. Good! I'll take the name."

"But it's my affair, my quarrel."

"Then I'll have to go it. And besides, I'll get my pay out of it in the long run. Look at the publicity value, Alan, if we pull a stunt like that! With all the headline advertising I'd get."

"But supposing your machine gets wrecked down north somewhere? It'd be a total loss. I couldn't pay you back for a top."

"Usually when a fellow's plane is a total wreck, he doesn't worry much about the loss. All he cares about is a nice headstone."

"But look here now, and get this straight. We haven't any right to pull a trick like this, Buzard. We're stepping outside the law. We're violating several hard and fast statutes. I happen to know."

Buzard grew impatient. "Suppose we get down to essentials. You said you wanted to leave as soon as you could. Then let's talk sense. How about gas? This crate of mine isn't one of these transatlantic planes."

"My eyes! I've read about some of your doings. You're on a detective trick or something like that, Baker?"

With expert judgment Alan had been sizing up his new acquaintance, from his brick-red helmet, down across his oil-splattered jumpers, to his "side-walk" shoes. He read the daredevilry in this Featheroff. He was a man after Alan's own heart. And he had a machine of his own! If only he'd go, it would save precious days looking for a plane and pilot.

Alan said: "My story is a long one. You look as hungry as I feel. . . ."

"I am, Baker. Let's go eat and then talk."

Alan helped him pull a canvas over the machine. Together they stepped over to the taxi. As they rambled down town they wrapped up yarns, discovered several mutual acquaintances, and came down to "Alan" and "Buzard."

At the Chateau MacDonald Alan sent a telegram to Colonel Steele in Victoria. He wrote it swiftly, not daring to think twice of the fatal step.

"Am out of Montreal accepting your It'll do about seven hundred miles in a pinch, and then it stops and sets down. I'll have to get a pack-club for you. A decent one'll cost three hundred. I've got to put on a new propeller; that tottler on the old crate now is about ready to quit. A new prop costs like sixty. Then we need navigating instruments on a long trip like this. They come high. I could use fifteen hundred dollars."

Alan paled a little, but he said doggedly: "I'll raise it. I'll raise it somehow."

Buzard was thoughtful for a moment. "Maybe," he said finally, "you won't have to raise it. I'll tell you what, Alan; you give me two hundred, and I'll try to manage the rest of it. You'll need money for your outfit and we'll have to keep some for operating expenses."

Alan nodded, though he did wonder what Buzard meant by that word "manage."

"They went back to the Chateau and waited. At three o'clock the wire came from Victoria.

"The five hundred is accompanying this let me know if need more looking forward to seeing you and presumably meeting Mrs. Baker."

"S. G. V. STEELE."

Alan was grateful for the desperately needed money; grateful for the personal warmth of Colonel Steele's message. But he felt that he had sold his freedom now and indentured himself.

Stubblyly he forced his mind away from the heavy cost and regrets that tore at him. Putting aside three hundred dollars for operating expenses, he gave Buzard two hundred and kept two hundred for himself. After arranging to meet out at the field that night, they separated.

At a pawn shop Alan stopped and bought a pair of binoculars. Powerful x-12's of a costly make, they put a dent in his roll. Farther along he managed to purchase two heavy automatics, slipping the proprietor ten dollars extra in lieu of a permit. Then came emergency food for the trip and the flying tops Buzard had advised him to get.

He still lacked a folding canoe, a number of small items, and one last piece of equipment—the most vital of all his adventure. Down to fifteen dollars, he went into another pawn shop and soaked his expensive watch and a diamond brooch of his mother's, making the owner promise to hold them for six months. With a hundred and seventy-five in his pocket, and a second-hand finger-roll which the old gentleman had kindly given him, he walked out, breathing easier.

As he passed a fashion shop, his eyes happened to be caught by an exquisite cellulose fiber, a broad sash-belt hand-made in old Quebec. Thinking of the worn and faded one Joyce owned, he stood admiring this beauty, imagining how rapturous Joyce would be if she had it. She knew how to wear it properly, with a saucy grace that only the metisse girls could match, for the wearing of the bright girdle was an ancient vogue custom rapidly dying out. . . . Forty precious dollars . . . but worth the price if she'd like it, a gift from him. . . .

With almost his last dollar he went in and bought the girdle.

Later, through the gathering twilight, he walked to the armory. Two companies were practicing there that evening. By pretending to be a new Edmonton citizen anxious to learn how to drill and perhaps to join the militia, he not only got inside but was shown all around the place by a lieutenant impressed by his stalwart powerful physique.

The lieutenant went back to his duties, the companies went on drilling, the privileged spectators began trickling homeward. When the armory was closed at eleven, when the guard big building was locked up and deserted, it was Alan Baker who rose up, like a thief in the night, out of a big bass drum case in a corner on the ground floor.

Not daring to strike a light, he groped across the parade floor to the room where the lieutenant had showed him the machine guns and explained their use—to him, commander of a machine gun platoon through a dozen major battles! He felt around among various types till he laid hands on an old friend, the Browning air-cooled, A-10. He found plenty of ammunition, a better tripod, and lastly a tarpaulin to wrap the whole outfit in, for if he started down an Edmonton street with a machine gun over his shoulder he was not likely to get far.

Gathering all his things at the Chateau, he whipped an out to the rendezvous arranged with his new-found partner.

ROBBER FINDS HIS GIRL WAITING FOR HIM WHEN LET OUT

Romance Is Revealed When the Criminal Is Married After Serving Sentence.

Kansas City, Kan.—Through six of the fourteen years he spent behind the walls of Kansas State penitentiary for train robbery William (Bill) LaTrasse was buoyed with hope because a girl had promised to marry him upon his release.

The romance came to light when LaTrasse, forty-seven, and Hazel Henderson, thirty-one, obtained a marriage license here recently.

It was in December, 1910, that LaTrasse, then twenty-six years old, staged a spectacular holdup of a Missouri Pacific passenger train near here.

Prior to that time Bill had been just an ordinary holdup man. He had served two terms in penal institutions but for several years LaTrasse had gone straight.

It was on Christmas eve, 1910, that Bill jumped into the headlines of newspapers as a train robber of extraordinary daring.

Daring Train Robbery. LaTrasse, single-handed, held up the train, and the police were soon on his trail.

A medium-sized man, the passengers told the authorities, carrying a big gun and wearing a blue bandana handkerchief across his face, climbed over the brass railing and boarded the train as it pulled out of Leavenworth. From his pocket he took a flask, swallowed a big drink, threw the bottle to the roadbed and entered the car.

"Stick 'em up," came LaTrasse's gruff command, enforced with the pistol.

The passengers covered with one exception, Capt. L. I. Newbold, of the United States army, resisted and started to draw his gun, when LaTrasse sent a bullet flying through his hat so that it scraped the captain's head.

LaTrasse was captured in Chicago and brought here for trial. He was sentenced to ten to twenty-one years. He escaped twenty-seven months later, only to be recaptured. He later broke a parole and was returned to the prison, where he remained until recently.

Mother's Savings Lost. His mother had saved $1,600 from her work as a scrub woman and laundress, with which to start her son in business. LaTrasse had been an expert shoe repairman in the penitentiary and while they looked for a site, a bank went bankrupt, leaving them without funds.

Friends subscribed enough money to purchase the shop. It was while LaTrasse was enjoying a parole that he met his wife. They became engaged and she said she would wait until he had finished his term.

"Long stretches in prison," Bill says, smiling as he talks, "will break the ordinary man's spirit. It would have broken mine, but I knew Hazel was waiting for me. Hazel and mother. That's how I stood it."

They all plan to live with Bill's mother.

"I couldn't leave mother," he explained, "after all she has done for me."

Mystery Snake Kills Many in Chinese Lake

Peiping, China.—Much excitement has been caused among Chinese residents in Tientsin by the mysterious deaths recently of several men near a small lake in the outskirts, whose bones seemed to have been crushed by an enormous pressure.

Excitement has increased by the report of a group of foreign children playing by the lake who fled in terror, declaring they had seen a huge snake come from the lake and fasten itself around a Chinese coolie sleeping on the shore.

The children were so terrified they did not stay to see what happened. At least three men have been found dead through crushing near the lake recently police declare one boy said the snake was about 12 feet long and as thick as a man's thigh.

Chinese police have fenced in the lake and warned people not to bathe in it, as they have been accustomed. How a snake of this size got into the lake, if it is there, is a mystery. No such snakes are indigenous to north China and the police have no report of a snake escaping from a traveling circus.

The Chinese workman who was attacked by the snake, according to the children's story, has made no report on the matter and seems to have disappeared. Chinese police believe he may be a fourth victim.

Robbed of His Coat; He Turns Other Cheek

New Britain, Conn.—One who believes in turning "the other cheek" isserted this ad in New Britain newspapers: "If the person who took a coat from my car parked outside the library, yesterday, will communicate with Box—, I will forward the pants and vest, which are no further use to me without the coat."

Angry Old Dog

Jamestown, N. H.—An unusual catch was made by Leonard Reid, Scherman, here recently. When he went to get his fishing pole he found a dog on the line. It had swallowed the bait and had to be shot.

DAIRY FACTS

CATTLE LICE TAKE HEAVY DAIRY TOLL

Eradicate the Pest Before Heavy Infestation.

Cattle lice, which run up a heavy toll in the form of reduced milk yields and slackened gains, are likely to be more troublesome this winter than usual, according to a report to the University of Illinois by an assistant entomologist of the Illinois state natural history survey. There has been a gradual increase in louse population on dairy animals and other stock in the past two years, owing largely to lack of proper control measures. Fortunately, the lice are not hard to eradicate until a heavy infestation is allowed to develop.

From the standpoint of cheapness, availability and effectiveness the best treatment is raw linseed oil. Boiled or refined linseed oil is likely to injure the skin and should not be used. The oil may be applied with a handbrush or in the case of short-haired animals, with a wad of cloth. A brush having uneven bristles is best adapted to this work. A second treatment should be given two weeks following the first and then monthly applications should be made until spring. The oil should not be applied too vigorously but enough should be put on to reach the skin. It is a good plan to keep treated animals out of the sun for a day.

Time and Work Saved by Use of Milking Machine

The man labor used in caring for dairy cows in Nevada varies all the way from 81 hours to 250 hours a year for each cow, as indicated by 44 detailed farm records secured by the experiment station for that state. The average chore time for herds which were machine milked was 100 hours as against 141 hours for all herds of 15 or more cows, milked by hand. The average time required in all hand-milked herds—which on the whole had fewer cows than the machine-milked herds—was 131 hours, which showed that where labor-saving equipment was not available labor costs were higher. For a 25-cow herd, a milking machine will make a net saving in labor of $200 each year according to this experiment station. This calculation assumes that labor is valued at 40 cents an hour and allows an expense of $60 annually for the machine.

Fall Calving

Fall calving is here. It brings certain problems that need unrelenting attention. The act of bearing young requires great sacrifices on the part of mothers. It brings about rapid and extreme changes in the physical body of the mother. Instinctively the mother is willing to make extreme sacrifice for her young. She is not always physically fit or capable of doing so.

Helpers calving for the first time should be watched carefully as they approach calving. Breeding dates are essential. Most helpers will bring their calves along without help. What they need is clean, sanitary surroundings, the right feeding before and after calving, and some attention to their udders. Helpers that need help in calving should not be denied the advantage of the help of one who understands what to do and how best to do it.

Warm the Drinking Water

Water which has had the chill removed from it will be consumed more readily by dairy cows in winter and will cause heavier milk production, according to C. A. Smith, Colorado State college.

"Every 100 pounds of milk contains 57 pounds water. In order to produce the maximum quantity of milk a cow must consume large amounts of water," Smith says. "It has been found that producing cows consume much more water than dry cows. They will not drink much water when they have to break the ice, but drink large quantities of water if the chill is removed. A small tank heater will do the work at a very small cost."

DAIRY NOTES

Whole milk will be delivered daily or twice a day while cream will likely be delivered just two or three times a week. Every 48 hours is better unless conditions for holding are very good.

Continuous testing for production in dairy herds provides the only means of intelligently weeding out poor cows and improving the milking ability of the herd. This is especially important when prices are low.

By culling and breeding stock, dairymen of California increased butterfat production from 185 to 265 pounds a year.

Only comfortable cows can do justice to themselves at the milk pail. As far as possible flies must be controlled.

It has been found that cows that have the individual water cups in their stalls produce more milk than those that get their water morning and evening.

Positively the Latest in "Simplified English"

What is described as "a scientific and practical method of simplifying English spelling" has been worked out by a Swedish professor, who calls his system "Anglic." It is designed especially for the use of foreign students. The professor apparently has the idea that "Anglic" may become a sort of universal language, because, he explains, in the "new spelling" he has devised, that he wants to "pae" our "langgwig the heat compliment our by endeavoring to make it noon, wead, lurd, and appreciate aul over the world." Such a language—which all may read—has been worked out between the British railways and a number of foreign lines. It consists of a series of picture labels, affixed to goods carried by rail, which are read from one country to another. The labels show the nature of the goods and, consequently, how they have to be treated. For instance, one design shows a fish, a sower, and a bunch of grapes. This means perishable items which would deteriorate if not delivered quickly.

Sting Fatal to Bee Honey bees die within a day or two, and sometimes sooner, after stinging a person. This is because when they sting the "stinger" remains in the body of the person stung and is torn from the bee with such injury that it cannot live.

Events in the Lives of Little Men

Forgotten HEROES

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

"Disaster at Phil Kearney!"
CHRISTMAS EVE at old Fort Laramie on the Oregon Trail in Wyoming. In "Bedlam," the building where all the social functions of the post were held, a great ball was going on and unmindful of the bitter weather outside the little garrison was forgetting for awhile the perils and hardships of life on the frontier.

Across the snowy parade ground a horse plodded wearily, wavered and dropped to the ground dead. Its rider reeled from his saddle as it fell and stumbled toward the door of the building.

A moment later the music stopped with a crash as his gigantic figure, wrapped from head to foot in buffalo overcoat, leggings and cap, slung into the little ballroom "Disaster at Phil Kearney," he gasped. "Captain Patterman and 81 men massacred. The Indians are all around the post. Colonel Carrington must have help." Then he felt unconscious from over-exposure and exhaustion.

Immediately after the destruction of Patterman's command by Red Cloud's Sioux, Colonel Carrington called for volunteers to go to Fort Laramie for help. Outside a frightful blizzard was raging and the thermometer stood at 25 degrees below zero. To go meant a ride of 200 miles through that bitter weather and through a country swarming with hostile Indians, blood-mad from their recent success. None of the soldiers would offer to make the trip, then a frontiersman, named John Phillips, nicknamed "Portugee" because of his nationality, stepped forward and said he would go if given the swiftest horse in the command.

This was done and at midnight of December 22, 1866, with only a few crackers for himself and a small amount of feed for his horse, Phillips slipped out a side gate in the stockade and rode away into the storm. Although the soldiers had predicted that the messenger would be caught before he had gone a hundred yards, he managed to avoid the Indians and set out for Fort Laramie. After 48 hours of cold, hunger and fatigue he reached that post as previously related. On New Year's day a cry of thanksgiving went up from the beleaguered garrison at Fort Phil Kearney as a line of soldiers appeared over the hills. "Saved! Saved! Phillips got through to Laramie!"

"It's What We're Here For!"
"OFFICER and gentleman"—such is the tradition in the American army and none better exemplified it than Guy V. Henry, who has also, and justly, been called "the typical knightly American soldier." A West Pointer, and the son of another, he was born into the service in which he was to have such a distinguished career. He saw four years of the hardest fighting in the Civil war, was three times mentioned in dispatches and brevetted five times for gallantry in action. At the desperate fighting at Old Cold Harbor he won the army's highest distinction, the medal of honor.

He was a brilliant Indian fighter from 1863 to 1870 and during the Spanish-American war he accomplished wonders as military ruler of Porto Rico and there he died because he would not ask to be relieved of his command although he knew that by staying he was doomed. "Here I was sent and here I will stay until my duty is done," he said. Yet, for all of his services, he is but little known, as compared to other officers whose more spectacular careers brought them to public notice.

"Thin as a shoestring and as brave as a lion," the soldiers who served under him and almost worshipped him, said. What he lacked in physique, he more than made up for in will power. During the winter of 1874 he was ordered from Fort Robinson with a troop of soldiers to expel miners from the Black Hills. The march, which is a classic in old army traditions, took them over 300 miles of the roughest country in America and was made in weather ranging from 20 to 40 degrees below zero. Only the indomitable perseverance of the commander kept the men from lying down and being frozen to death. His plight was the worst of all. They had to cut the bridle reins from his frozen hands when he returned to the fort, and slit his gloves into strips. Each strip brought with it a piece of flesh and to the day of his death he could not close the fingers on his left hand.

In the Battle of the Rosebud during the Sioux War of 1876 Henry was shot through the face and fell to the ground. A desperate hand-to-hand conflict raged over his body but he was rescued and carried to the rear. "Fix me up so that I can go back" were the words mumbled through bleeding lips to the surgeon, but there was no going back for him. There he lay through the long hot day while the battle raged, almost unattended, for not a man could be spared from the firing line. To a fellow officer who came and beat over him compassionately, Henry murmured, "It's all right, Jack, it's what I'm here for." And a few moments later to a war correspondent who came to see him, Henry recommended that he join the army!

Siam's Monarch Credits Progress to Football

The king of Siam, now in this country for an operation on his eyes, is noted or rather will be in history, for the great progress his country has made under his rule. When asked by a reporter what he considered to be the greatest factor in this remarkable progress, he made the astounding answer—"Football."

"No, I do not jest. You know I was educated in England and learned the game. I introduced it in Siam and it aroused the spirit of competition in a race which has idled along in contented apathy for centuries.

"The army and navy played first. We had few men in either, for Siamese are not eager to be warriors. But soon after football came in, we had so many recruits that now our ranks are overflowing. Football awakened the nation and this wakefulness spread to every line of commercial and social endeavor. It has even taught a barefooted nation to wear shoes."

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1110 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny.

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 30 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way. Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly.—And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.
