Refutes Smoot Contention about Tariff

Washington, Nov.—Representative Henry T. Rainey (Dem. Ill.), commenting on an article by Senator Smoot (Rep. Utah)—“Our Tariff and the Depression”—in Current History, says, with reference to the chief contention of the co-author of the Tariff Act:

“The notion advanced in Senator Smoot’s article that except for our policy of super-protection American industry would have been overwhelmed by goods from other countries during the present panic, is rendered utterly absurd by the fact that during the depression of 1921-2, under the Underwood tariff, our exports exceeded imports by $2,695,000,000. What industries here would have been overwhelmed except for the Smoot-Hawley Act? Would it have been the great automobile, or the cotton textile, or the machinery, or the cotton, the copper and scores of other great industries accustomed to ship and sell their surpluses in every part of the world in utter defiance of world competition?”

Republicans Discouraged

Washington, Nov.—Chairman J. Shouse of the Democratic National Executive Committee, commenting on Chairman Fess’ discovery that the election results “have in them nothing of discouragement for President Hoover’s administration,” quotes Republican sources which controvert the statement of the Republican National Chairman:

Referring to the unprecedented majorities in New Jersey and Kentucky, Mr. Shouse says that Governor-elect Moore of the former State in every speech stressed “the dismal performance of the Hoover administration,” which was defended by his opponent. He cites the administration Herald-Tribune’s Washington correspondent on Kentucky to the effect that “the result confirmed early indications that the popular trend away from the party in power has not been checked in the last year.”

Chairman Shouse quotes an Associated Press dispatch from Detroit saying that “Republican leaders and R. N. Holsapple, Superintendent of the Michigan Anti-Saloon League, said Hart’s espousal of the cause of modification played no part in his victory.” Dr. Fess had ascribed Hart’s victory to his wetness.

“We hope,” said Chairman Shouse “that the eminent Doctor (Fess) will not put upon himself the strain of endeavoring to reconcile his position with the circumstance that Mr. Hoover’s advent into the White House found his party in possession of 56 Sen-

On next Sunday the final arrangements will be completed for our every member canvass for all departments of our work: Local Church Expenses, State, Home and Foreign Missions, Orphan’s Home, etc. A committee will call on the members and friends of the church some time during next week for pledges to this work.

The progress of every phase of our work depends upon the manner in which our people subscribe to the every member canvass. This is an effort to get every Southern Baptist enlisted in Kingdom Work, and it is very important that we make as good a showing as possible next week. We hope to be able to report that Carrizozo church comes up with as good a percentage of subscribers as any church in the State.

atorial seats, 267 in the lower House, and 30 Governorships, and now must content itself with at most 48 Senatorships, 215 Representatives and only 20 out of the 48 Governors.”

A Reversion to Form

In the old days it was the custom of the country newspaper to publish a notice, annually, calling upon delinquent subscribers to come in and settle up. These appeals were often longwinded, but always bore fruit. Just why the custom fell into disuse, I am unable to say, but the discontinuance of these annual appeals seem to pass overnight, and it has been many years since I have seen the familiar announcement, and the NEWS, in common with country newspaperdom, quit short off, and it has not been practiced in this office for so long that a search for many years-back would be necessary among old files to locate the final appeal. Twenty-five or thirty years have passed into oblivion since a published request of such a nature has appeared in the NEWS.

But a reversion to form begins with this issue—the old time appeal, to which the above is the introduction, begins from here.

Delinquent subscriptions are sufficiently numerous with the NEWS that the collection of a reasonable percent thereof will put the NEWS “Over the Hump.” Much of this delinquency is due to this office in failing to notify subscribers and requesting settlement; but that is “water over the wheel,” and an explanation would be, more or less, a mere jumble of words.

Therefore, in conclusion, permit me to say, it’s money this office needs, and while it is a scarce article, there are few on the subscription list of the NEWS who are unable to satisfy this delinquency. You may not know the exact amount of your delinquency but you can approximate the sum, and should you, peradventure, remit a sum in excess of the correct amount, just bear in mind the NEWS expects to go on and on.

As receipts reach the office, each will be noted, and when the “Clouds Roll Away” each subscriber will receive proper credit. A liberal response is not only anticipated but hopefully expected, for which I shall be duly grateful.

Respectfully,
JOHN A. HALEY, Pub.

Refutes Iowa Senator on Corn Imports and Exports

Washington, Nov.—That part of the tariff debate between Senator Pat Harrison (Dem.) and Senator Dickinson, at Sioux City, Iowa, recently, relating to imports and shipments of corn was not broadcast for lack of time on the radio program.

Senator Harrison dwelt at length upon the many paper rates carried on agricultural commodities, citing enormous increases in the Smoot-Hawley tariff law on 750 items other than agriculture.

Naturally, in the corn state of Iowa, corn occupied a prominent place in the discussion. Senator Dickinson in his answer combated Senator Harrison’s argument that corn was being exported and that the tariff was having no effect upon it by saying that corn importations had increased and that while from the Middle West large quantities had formerly been shipped to the Pacific Coast for exportation, none had been sent there for several years.

In his rejoinder, Senator Harrison showed that one county in Indiana produced as much corn as had been imported in any one year for many years, and that from Sioux City 2,140 cars of corn had been shipped within the last twelve months to the Pacific Coast for exportation.

An amusing incident of the debate occurred when Senator Dickinson stated that the people didn’t vote in Mississippi, and the Senator from Mississippi answered by saying, “There must have been some ‘absenteeism’ in Iowa last fall, as after my friend had voted for this tariff monstrosity, the returns showed that he ran 104,000 votes behind his ticket.”

Senator Dickinson asked Senator Harrison to point to any instance where the tariff had driven American industries to locate in foreign countries because of the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act. The senator from Mississippi in his rejoinder read from a current trade paper an advertisement inviting American manufacturers to have their pharmaceutical instruments made in Canada by Canadian manufacturers on a commission basis in order to retain a part of the Canadian market and avoid Canada’s retaliatory tariff rates.

Senator Harrison further called attention to the fact that when the bill was first introduced in 1929 there were 540 American industries located in Canada with a capital of $530,000,000, but that in September this year, a survey showed that there were 1,150 American industries located in Canada, with a capital of $1,200,000,000.

The Methodist Church

By Rev. J. L. Lawson

One hundred and eight in Sunday School last Sunday—not counting the visitors Whoops! Over the top now. And let’s keep going.

And ‘tis said that the way to a man’s heart is through his stomach. That goes for a whole family. And Carrizozo knows how to play a mighty sweet tune on heartstrings. The pastor and his family were given strict orders Sunday morning to stay a way from the church until further notice. And when that further notice came—well, nothing could have kept them away. About two hundred people were present, and not empty handed. The table before the altar rail, the altar rail itself, and the long bench on the side were piled and heaped with good things. From a fat turkey in a coop to a gallon of cider. Yep, cider! From a ham, Premium ham—to a bucket of lard. From a sack of sugar to a box of candy. From potatoes to canned fruit, jelly, jam, and vegetables. From cranberries to nuts. All of that and a lot more, and then some. Never a greater surprise, and never a better one—nor one more appreciated. Truly it was a Thanksgiving occasion. Thank you! And you can multiply those two little words of gratitude and appreciation indefinitely.

Spontaneous giving, that’s the kind that warms the heart. And the givers with the gifts. Adherents of every denomination, sect, and creed in and about Carrizozo. And some with no church affiliations—good people all. The kind we love to associate, work, and play with. Truly our lines are cast in a pleasant place, and among a fine people.

A good rally day program by the Sunday School during which the orchestra under the direction of Supt. U. D. Groce rendered some good music. Carrizozo can well be proud of that orchestra. Then the presentation speech of Mr. J. E. Hall presenting the donation of the good things mentioned above to the pastor and his family on behalf of our neighbors, in every good sense of the word. Then followed the Thanksgiving service—the pastor was too flustered and flabbergasted to rise properly to the occasion. But under the direction of Miss Dia Haringa—the choir failed not and saved the day. A wonderful choir—and we can look forward for much from it. The choir is working now on a Christmas Cantata as well as the regular church services.

Preaching next Sunday morning and evening—that being the fifth Sunday. And don’t forget the Sunday School.

Again, Carrizozo, we thank you, many times. And may the Giver of every good and perfect gift, pour out His blessings abundantly upon you.

The worst bankrupt is the soul that has lost its enthusiasm—the man who has just let go and let down. In the realms of wild life the animal that goes down in the pack or herd is turned upon by his fellows or trampled into the earth by them. It is a stern decree, but the same thing happens among the human race. Let a man give up, let down, quit fighting and the crowd rushes by and leaves him by the side of the road. There seems to be no place for a quitter.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

by WALTER TRUMBULL

Nothing so stirs the imagination of the human race as buried treasure. From childhood, man wants to dig for it. He never gets over wanting to dig for it. Expeditions constantly are being organized to unearth hidden hoards of silver and of gold. Old maps are still handed down in some families, showing the spot where buried riches are supposed to lie. Books which deal with treasure have to be carefully watched in the New York public library. Readers are constantly tearing out pages and illustrations.

For example, Ralph D. Paine wrote a book on buried treasure and put an index in the back. It isn't there in the library copy. Somebody tore it out long ago. Probably the man who has it never has been east of the Battery or west of the Hudson, but he likes to feel that some day he will start out on a journey of rich adventure.

The New York aquarium probably holds the greatest collection of rare fish in the United States and possibly in the world. It is a notable exhibit. The other day the aquarium was almost empty. I doubt whether there was a total of a dozen visitors in all that big building. About four blocks away is a sea food restaurant. In the window of this place is a glass box, about four feet long, filled with water. Swimming around in it was one lonely and very ordinary fish. Outside the window, watching the fish swim, was a crowd of perhaps forty persons. They blocked traffic on the sidewalk. That's New York.

A well-known woman painter in New York attended an exhibition of pictures. On her return home, she was telling her brother, who goes in for sport and knows surprisingly little about art, what an enjoyable afternoon she had experienced.

"I met the nicest young man," she said. "He was a big, handsome blond and he talked so intelligently about some of the pictures that I asked him if he was a painter himself, but he said he was not."

"What did the guy do?" asked her brother.

"I haven't the slightest idea," said the woman, "but I remember his name. It was Tunney."

My wife is urging me to move to Farmington, New Mexico, and go on a fruit diet. She contends that for a dollar you can buy there enough melons, peaches and grapes to support a family for a week and that the quality is far superior to anything found in a New York market. But, while I am fond of fruit in moderation, what I am looking for is some place where for a dollar one can buy enough beefsteak to live on for a week. In my case, that means a lot of beefsteak.

Walter Banks has been showing me some pictures of his truly lovely sisters. One of these harmony singers and dancers is a blond and the other a brunette. If they sing and dance as well as they photograph, it will not be long before they will be seen in some musical show on Broadway.

Happy Moon Legends

Na-quill.

Many suns and moons and snows ago there was born to Na-quill, god of the sky, and his wife, a son.

Now Na-quill, who had all the storms, rain and snow to attend to, as well as the thunder and lightning, was very busy. But just the same he sat down on the edge of a cloud and tried to think of the best gift he could give his son.

Because he lived in the sky, Na-quill was very fond of blue. And Na-quill remembered that once he had seen a blue stone exactly the color of the sky.

So Na-quill pounded on the edge of the cloud and Keo Yay, his helper, came running.

"Blue beads are the finest things in the world," said Na-quill. "My son shall have many blue beads. I'd better fly down and ask Ools Kah Stee where these stones are."

"Here are your wings," and Keo Yay handed him the claws, beak and wings of a golden eagle. The wings are seven feet from tip to tip and Keo Yay can hardly lift them.

"While you are flying, are you going by that valley over there? It is only a thousand miles and they need rain badly," said Keo Yay.

"No, I'm in a hurry to get the beads," said Na-quill. "Ools Kah Stee goes to bed with the sun. I must hurry."

"But, the Great Valley needs rain badly," said Keo Yay.

"I'll send them some," promised Na-quill.

Na-quill had put on all of his eagle suit except one wing. He had not put his arm into the right wing yet, so with his free hand he gathered up a cloud and rolled it into a ball. Then he threw the ball a thousand miles into the valley. The ball hit against a hill on the other side of the Great Valley. Then they had rain in the Great Valley, and Na-quill flew down to visit Ools Kah Stee.

Ools Kah Stee is a great snake. He lives down in the earth and he is king of the Under-ground. His name means "Fearless," but when he saw Na-quill flying toward him he moved near his hole.

"Good flying to you," said Ools Kah Stee.

"The same—I mean, I wish you good weather," said Na-quill.

"The weather could be better," replied Ools Kah Stee, looking over toward the Great Valley. "But can I do something for you?"

"Yes, I am going to give my son a string of blue beads to wear when he is older. Will you give me some of your sky-stones?"

"If you will stop the storm that is flooding the Great Valley you can have all you wish."

"I'll stop the storm," said Na-quill. "Good-by."

Na-quill dipped his wings in the waters and then shook out his feathers and the water dried up.

Na-quill had dried up most of the waters when he came to a waterfall high up in the mountain.

This was the very place where the storm ball had struck and it had knocked down a little tree. The tree lay across the stream and the rocks held it so it could not get away.

It was a brave little tree and though the river pounded it and threw rocks and branches at it and bent it, the little tree would not break. Every

Rare Chinese Tapestry Is Found in New York

New York.—Lost for nearly three centuries, a rare Chinese tapestry, valued by Manhattan art connoisseurs at $150,000, reappeared here in a strange manner.

The treasure was unearthed in an obscure little antique shop by Paramount's officials while in quest of objects d'art for a motion picture.

Unaware of its value the antique dealer rented the tapestry for a relatively small sum.

Research experts discovered that the piece was a genuine tapestry of the "Coming Up to Scratch"

TO SAY of a man that he comes up to scratch is to indicate that he meets the requirements of the particular situation confronting him, and, by inference, that he is able to cope with whatever may be in store for him.

As is the case with many other phrases that are now used metaphorically in everyday communication, "coming up to scratch" once had a literal sense.

The phrase comes from the world of pugilism. Years ago, before the advent of the modern fistie amphitheater, the practitioners of the manly art, so-called, engaged each other on the bare turf.

Their fighting area was not the roped square, which was a later refinement, but was simply an inclosure marked off with deep scratches dug into the ground with any instrument available for the purpose. The inside of this inclosure was again marked or scratched off with lines upon which the respective contestants would place one foot, so coming up to the scratch line, when prepared to advance toward the other.

It is from these circumstances that there arose the expression "coming up to scratch" to indicate somebody who was on the spot and ready for action. archeological survey, and Stirling, have resulted in the uncovering of many pieces of pottery, charred Indian corn, hickory nuts, and bits of three-ply plaited rope.

According to Stirling these fragments of pottery fitted together form elaborately designed pieces giving evidence of a high-typed Cahokia village. The things unearthed were not found under the mound as usual, but in it.

Not an Old Idea

Prints and calico are of great antiquity, but the printed cotton cloth which is highly calendered and known as calico in England, appears to have been first developed, to a point approximating its present perfection, in the Eighteenth century.

Relics Discovered in Ancient Burial Mound

East St. Louis, Ill.—Discoveries of bits of pottery and charred maize which give evidence of the site of prehistoric Cahokia village were uncovered here recently in a mound by the University of Illinois archeological survey, according to G. M. Stirling, in charge of the excavations.

The explorations, which were launched a few months ago under the direction of Dr. A. R. Kelly, anthropologist and head of the university

His Suit Wore Out Hanging in Store

Hamilton, Ont.—When Robert Baker was unable to meet the payments on his suit, it was confiscated and returned to the store where he had bought it.

Mysteriously, the suit continued to wear out. First the pants became shiny, then a button tore loose. Each Monday, the suit, apparently unused, needed a pressing.

Under questioning, Baker confessed to police he entered the clothing store every Saturday night for the past few months, "borrowed" the suit and then returned it Sunday night.

Through the cut bark Na-quill could see the white heart of the tree.

"What a strong heart," he said. "It will be a better gift for my son than many blue beads. I shall give it to him."

So Na-quill stopped the river and picked up the little tree. He flew to the mountain where he had left his wife and his little, brown son. He hurried into the house. The baby winked when the baby's eyes winked shut. Na-quill caused the strong heart of the tree to enter and live in his son.

When other people heard of this, they named the boy Strong Heart.

John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, Fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

"Bolshevik morals may be all right," he said, "but they seem topsy-turvy to me. They remind me of a story.

"How dare you try to kiss me, you unfaithful brute!" she scolded. "Only this afternoon I saw you kissing your own wife. And I heard you tell her besides that she was all the world to you."

"Yes," said the man, "what of it? There are two worlds, darling. Wife is the old world, and you are the new."

When PAIN Comes

WHAT many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water neutralizes instantly many times that much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go, get a small bottle to try.

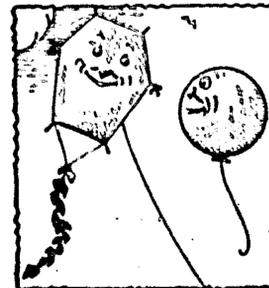

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drug store.

Her Christmas Guest
By M. Lewis Reynolds

WHAT will do, thank you, Elise," and Elizabeth dismissed her maid with a smile. It was her custom each Christmas to entertain whatever guest the Charities sent to her, without Elise's help.

Once it had been a down-and-out missionary well along in years, once a lonely girl from the West, and several times this little walls from the tenements. On those latter occasions Elizabeth had been glad of the fragrant tree which always stood in one corner of the apartment, alight with colored bulbs and hung with varied gifts.

There was no one in sight now—wait, wasn't that some one just turned the corner?

A moment later the bell rang and if, when she ran down the stairs and answered it, Elizabeth was decidedly taken back at the young man who stood before her. It is probable that he, too, had his moment of surprise as he gazed at the slender vision in a white dress.

"Miss Lowry, of the Charities sent me—" he began.

"Oh, yes," nodded Elizabeth quickly. She mustn't let him think for an instant she had hesitated. She had absolute confidence in anyone Miss Lowry ry, head of the board, might send. "Hang your coat and hat on the customer at the head of the stairs. And, let me see, your name—"

Still the young man seemed a bit uncertain. Then, "Drake Gibson," he said, resolutely and abruptly.

Elizabeth breathed an unconscious sigh of relief, as she preceded him up the carpeted stairs. After the first embarrassing moments, she had always found that things went more easily.

Yet it was hard to believe, during the meal which followed, that her guest was the sort of down-and-out with which the Charities were wont to deal.

He talked interestingly and entertainingly and before she realized it, dinner was at an end and there remained as part of the festivities only the ceremony of choosing gifts from the tree.

She had rather decided to pass that part of the entertainment up when she remembered that she had hidden in a red cheesecloth stocking filled with candy a tiny purse with a five-dollar goldpiece in it. Nor was she to be blamed for supposing that a gift of money so tactfully presented would not be amiss to anyone willing to accept a dinner from an utter stranger.

So, in her winning manner, Elizabeth suggested that they each choose a gift from the tree, and laughed when he carefully untied a little furry monkey.

Then she took down the stocking full of old-fashioned Christmas candy. "At a proper tree there is always something to take home," she said.

He smiled and accepted it. Then, to her horror, drew out his knife and cut the red string at the top.

"Have some?" he invited.

"No—that is—yes, thank you," she said in confusion, and watched him

THE modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month. If you've ever taken Bayer Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. It is just as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry on in comfort. Take enough to assure your complete comfort. If it is genuine aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you. Bayer Aspirin does not depress the heart. It does not upset the stomach. It does nothing but stop the pain.

Headaches come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Bayer Aspirin will always save the day. A throat so sore you can hardly swallow is made comfortable with one good gargle made from these tablets. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Rheumatism. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking a few of these remarkable tablets. So are the little nagging aches that bring fatigue and "nerves" by day, or a sleepless night. Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets cost so very little after all, that it doesn't pay to experiment with imitations!

Then he pulled out the tiny purse, and, with a frown, opened it.

Strangely enough, she saw no sudden blush or sign of self-consciousness. Rather he seemed almost relieved.

"This means that I must tell you," he said gravely. "And I'm very much ashamed of myself. You see, I've accepted your hospitality under false pretense. I'm—well, I'm only Miss Lowry's nephew home from globe trotting for my paper. She asked me to stop and tell you that the old lady she was going to send to your annual Christmas dinner had not shown up. You made the mistake of thinking I was the one and—oh, I've no proper apology but you know a fool reporter never turns down an experience of any kind." He paused and regarded her so wistfully that Elizabeth's anger melted. After all, it was Christmas time when one should be forgiving.

"I'll promise never, never to do it again!" he said with such an air of little-boyishness that Elizabeth laughed in spite of herself.

Neither one of them realized then that all their Christmases were to be spent together.

CLIMATE and CLOVER

Thus far throughout most of the winter season, the advent of Winter has been so gradual that old folk are wondering if we are going to have a season of the warm winter of 1876-77 when people died of sunstroke in the mountains in January. If the winter does turn out to be a mild one, the clover crop will be a record.

The observations of the founder of the clover industry, the late Dr. J. A. Haley, pointed out, the clover crop will be a record. The clover crop will be a record. The clover crop will be a record.

After an opportunity to see the clover crop, the clover crop will be a record. The clover crop will be a record. The clover crop will be a record.

LONG RANGE WEATHER FORECASTS NOT YET PRACTICAL

Although the Weather Bureau has been working along three lines of research endeavoring to extend the period for which it can forecast weather, it still must confine its forecasts to one week, the Bureau reports in the annual summary of its work which was released Nov. 10.

Its conclusion that as yet no scientific basis for long range forecast exists in agreement with the opinion of most meteorologists, the Bureau explains.

Throughout its history the Bureau has made efforts to extend the period over which successful forecasts could be issued as far as practicable. With the advent of radio, giving a more complete picture of world weather conditions, the Bureau inaugurated some years ago its so-called weekly outlook, in which the forecast is made to cover approximately a week in advance.

It is believed that the views of the Bureau are in accord with those of leading meteorologists throughout the world, that up to the present time no sufficiently conclusive scientific basis has been found on which to make a successful forecast of weather conditions for more than one week in advance.

FINANCING THE AMERICAN HOME

The plan for the future financing of home and farm mortgages on a national scale, which has come out of the conference called by the President, ought to give a great impetus to the building industry and provide employment for millions in the building trades. It has the merit of not increasing any of the existing agencies, such as banks, building associations and the like, which make it their business to provide mortgage loans, but of enabling these institutions by reducing their mortgage rates to make additional loans and to give more money into circulation.

The natural growth of population and the destruction of buildings by fire, tornadoes and natural decay, which it is necessary to add about 2 1/2 percent to the number of buildings for home and other purposes, if we are not to be overcrowded. For the past few years we have not been building anywhere near the right proportion of new structures, so that there is a large backlog to be taken up. And the only reason why the building program of the nation has been suspended is that the usual sources of building loans have been unable to supply more funds for building purposes.

Under the program just announced at Washington, there will be organized a system of mortgage banks, one in each Federal Reserve District, which will lend their funds to local mortgage institutions as fast as the demand for money for building purposes develops. It will take time, of course, to get these banks organized, but assurances are said to have been given that their capital will be quickly subscribed, and in the course of a few months we may see a real revival of building activity in progress all over the country. And that will go a long way toward bringing real prosperity back.

REPORT 4,000 DEER KILLED IN STATE DURING SEASON

Santa Fe New Mexican
More than 4,000 deer were killed during the big game season, State Game Warden Elliott Barker announced today, including 1,634 does in the Black Canyon "dead area."

The kill actually reported to the warden was 233 white tailed and 2,178 mule deer, all bucks, and which together with the 1,634 does, makes the total reported 4,045. Barker estimates that probably 400 bucks killed were not reported.

The kill is not big in view of the size of the army of hunters in the Red Inlet Game Warden's check in 7,123, making contact with that number, and there were many more. Turkey reported killed total 420 and quail 1,229. Barker estimates that 100 turkey were not reported and probably 250 quail.

Only 10 bear were reported to have been bagged. Barker and brown bear. The kill at 75, all black and brown bear.

INDIAN BOY, 8, KILLED BY AUTO AT MESCALERO

Leadoro Smith, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Smith, Mescalero Indians, living at Elk Springs, died on Tuesday of injuries received Monday when he was hit by an automobile driven by a neighbor, Richard Margosh, 19, also a Mescalero Indian.

Leadoro was walking from the Indian School to his home, after school had been dismissed, when he was struck. Margosh had just passed over the cattle guard on the eastern boundary of the village of Mescalero, and according to himself and witnesses was driving at about 15 miles an hour. Leadoro, not heading the auto, failed to dodge, and a chum struck him by the arm and attempted to draw him out of the way.

The car hit the boy causing a concussion of the skull, which on Tuesday caused his death.

A coroner's inquest, held by Justice Barringer on Tuesday at Mescalero, returned a verdict of death from injuries received when hit by an automobile driven by Richard Margosh. The jury was composed of A. E. Prude, Luis Baldonado, Lee Green, John Flowers, John L. Mixon, and Carlos Borunda.

SALMON AND SALMON OIL RICH SOURCE OF VITAMIN D

Vitamin D, obtained chiefly from eggs and dairy products in the diet of the American people, has been found in appreciable quantities in salmon oil, fresh salmon, and canned salmon by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the U. S. Department of Commerce in a joint study.

The knowledge of the presence of vitamin D in salmon and salmon oil is considered valuable in that these foods offer a new source of this vitamin, not only for human consumption but in the preparation of livestock feeds.

Commercial salmon oil is an important source of vitamin D. About 300,000 gallons are produced annually, but a large percentage of the salmon waste from canneries, which is now discarded, can be used to produce oil. There is a potential annual salmon oil production of about 1,000,000 gallons.

Some types of fish, such as the cod, store their fat or oil, which contains much vitamin D, in the liver. Others, such as the salmon, store the fat in the body. That is why the salmon meat, when fresh or canned, is such a good source of vitamin D.

The joint study of the two departments showed that salmon oil can be made distinctly superior to cod-liver oil in vitamin D content. The study was made by Dr. E. M. Nelson, of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and C. D. Tolle, of the Bureau of Fisheries, in the U. S. Department of Commerce.

BAPTISTS BEGIN MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR 1932

New Mexico Baptists are this week arranging canvassing teams, revising membership rolls and making final preparations for the taking of pledges between Nov. 29 and Dec. 6 for the work throughout the state, the South and the World for 1932. Payment on pledges taken during this period will begin January 1, 1932.

This program of New Mexico Baptists is in cooperation with more than 24,000 Southern Baptist Churches in which almost 4,000,000 Southern Baptists expect to raise for all causes during 1932 the sum of $40,000,000 as against more than $37,000,000 in 1930. Out of this large sum $9,000,000 will be used for missionary causes in the United States and in nineteen foreign countries where they have missions on the field. The remaining $31,000,000 will be used to pay the expenses of the churches in the Southern Convention.

Included in the program of New Mexico Baptists as outlined in their recent State Convention in Portales is $15,000 for mission causes within New Mexico; over $11,000 for their Orphan's Home at Portales, where between 30 and 35 children are being cared for; over $10,000 for Montezuma College and $5,000 for mission work outside New Mexico.

Along with the solicitation for pledges to be paid during 1932 one-fourth of the membership of the Baptist Church in New Mexico and throughout the South are being asked to tithe their income for that period. This will mean nearly 1,000,000 tithe within the bounds of the Convention.

New Mexico Baptists are well organized for the task confronting them next week and fully expect to lead all of the Southern States in the percentage of members enlisted in the campaign.

Justified Appreciation
"I am aware that local commentators will attempt to narrow the causes upon which they think the elections of this year have turned. But I view them in connection with the general election of 1930—and consequently I am apprehensive concerning the election next year."—U. S. Senator Geo. H. Moses (Rep. N. M.).

Mrs. Ziegler Ill

Last Sunday morning at 5 o'clock, Mrs. Albert Ziegler suffered a stroke of paralysis which involved her entire right side. Dr. Johnson, the family physician was called and restoratives were administered and later it was determined to call Dr. Ramey of El Paso, for consultation; Dr. Ramey having been consulted by Mrs. Ziegler many times in the past. Upon arrival of the El Paso physician, Mrs. Ziegler was removed to the Johnson hospital and during the night the attending physicians gave what aid was possible to retard the difficulty and to give as much ease as possible to the suffering patient. Since that time hopeful reports have been received from the hospital, but others emanating from the same source are of such gravity that they have disturbed the family and the hosts of friends, among whom Mrs. Ziegler has so long and so nobly striven. Fortunately, a daughter was present besides the husband, when the blow fell and it was determined to notify the other daughter, Mrs. John Gutknecht of Chicago, who arrived Tuesday morning. Sorrow hovers over the town because of the serious condition of this charming woman who has given so much of her life for the pleasure of others; and deep sympathy is felt for her in her stricken condition, and for the family who likewise suffer because of it. It is the deep, if unspoken, hope of the entire town that this faithful wife and loving mother may yet be spared many years of happiness and usefulness.

The Harvest Home Festival and Dance given under the auspices of the P. T. A. last Saturday night was very much enjoyed by all present. The Rythm Makers outdid themselves.

Next Saturday night, Nov. 28, the Gloom Chasers will play for Oscura dance lovers.

A few days ago, Mrs. J. V. Taylor, of the I-X Ranch, invited the village teacher, Mrs. Geo Dixon, to dinner—inferring that said teacher would be the only guest. What was Mrs. Dixon's surprise and delight, upon arriving at the scene, to find assembled all the ladies of Oscura. The guests were Mrs. Webster, of Dawson, accompanying her hostess, Mrs. Holloway; Mrs. Donohoo, Mrs. Dillard, Mrs. Brazel, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Rigger, and Mrs. Keene. Mrs. Taylor, her daughter, Mrs. Turner, and Mrs. Mrs. Edith Nixon proved most capable in receiving and entertaining the guests. After greetings had been exchanged, Mrs. Taylor presented Mrs. Dixon with lovely souvenirs of the occasion, together with the following lines:

The mothers of Oscura are gathered today
Altho we are only a few,
And all of us are sincere when we say:
Our appreciation is great of you.
If our children you could always teach we are sure
Into much better citizens they would grow
For all their bad habits you soon would cure
It wouldn't take long, we know.
Our fine, happy-go-lucky boys are much neater
How their habits and manners improved
Our nice little girls are so very much neater
Since to Oscura, as a teacher, you moved.—(Edie Nixon)

After a few well chosen words of appreciation, a most beautiful and palatable dinner was served.

The I-X Ranch is famous for its beauty and hospitality.

The guests departed to their separate homes, much gratified at the happy occasion, and wishing their charming hostess happiness and good cheer.

Mr. Viagil Kimmons, a most capable and trustworthy young man, has charge of the fine Thornton home during the absence of the family.

A very exciting and interesting occurrence took place in Oscura last week, many cow boys, old and young, gathered the cattle from a thousand hills and shipped 15 car car loads, some to Denver, some to Kansas City.

Every one enjoyed watching the skill with which the riders managed both horses and cattle. Many camp fires burned in different directions surrounding the little village. The music loving cowboys bedded down the gathering herds with songs characteristic as the life. The finale was the loading of the cattle into the many side-tracked cars and the scattering of the cow men to their separate abiding places.

The people of Oscura who placed exhibits in the County Fair, wish, even at this late date, to express their pleasure and appreciation, of the management of this good yearly affair. The judges of exhibits were so capable and just in their awards. We will surely be there again next year.

Altho in some respect Oscura is a deserted village of the plain, it is one of the most desirable of all fine places in which to live. Here we have our beautiful snow capped White Mountains as one neighbor, and the picturesque Nogai Peak as another, on the other hand the oscura range in its varied beauty, adds to the picture. Also we have the lovely coloring of the desert.

Joyce hesitated. She was aware that Alan deeply wanted her company. After all he'd done for her, it seemed cruelly ungrateful to refuse. And she herself wanted to go. But bitter wisdom whispered a warning. Since that morning when she turned his letters and picture and gifts to ashes, there had been no looking back. There must be none now. She had strength and courage to talk with him calmly and to act toward him as though they had never been more than good friends; but she dared not presume too far on that new-born strength. To be alone with him two hours on a twilight river with their talk inevitably drifting to former times it would be unbearable.

"With gentle firmness she said: 'I'd like to go Alan. But I'll have to run back to the West. There's so many things to do.' She tried to smile. 'I don't want to be a neglectful hostess to Bill and Mr. Leatherell.'

As she started up the river trail, her thoughts brooded on several things Alan had said in the course of his story especially on his occasional references to Elizabeth. Not that he had said anything derogatory about Elizabeth. But his tone, his manner. . . . Was he becoming a little disillusioned? Was he seeing Elizabeth Spaulding not as the sister of his dead partner (Curt, not as a girl to be cherished and adored, but as a selfish, calculating person)? Was he dimly foreseeing what his married life with her was going to be?

Joyce checked herself sharply from hoping or even thinking that Alan might break off his engagement, or from extending him anything more than grateful friendship. She was glad profoundly glad, that his words had caused no renunciation of hope, no tremor of emotion. The discovery of her strength sufficed her with a kind of pride. But for all that, she felt a great sorrow for Alan. He was bitterly unhappy, and she knew it. What was his situation now? Police work, his life in the North, comradeship with his old friends, everything that he had cherished was stripped away from him and he was going into a marriage reluctantly and forcing himself into a life that was alien to his whole nature. When Joyce thought of all that, her sympathy, tender and compassionate, went out to him whole heartedly.

Returning at deep twilight with the drums, Alan found Buzzard cleaning fouled spark plugs on the plane engine.

Candles were already lit in the trading store. Alan looked up the path, expecting to see Joyce's figure in the lighted doorway. He hoped to have an hour or two alone with her this evening. But all day the conviction had grown upon him that a talk would be worse than useless. If only God's truth didn't sound so preposterous, if only he could tell Joyce that he had become engaged to Elizabeth, had expected to marry Elizabeth, and yet all the time in his deepest longing, had wanted not Elizabeth but her.

"If we're going to get away from here first thing in the morning," Buzzard broke into his thoughts, "we ought to put in a couple hours work after supper on these motor leads. They're pretty bad frayed around the pulleys."

Alan knew that Buzzard was asking him to leave with that bit. But he did not answer. He wanted this evening with Joyce. Unless he took circumstances into his own hands tonight he and Joyce would drift across a continent from each other in a few days more. Torn with uncertainty of her affections for him, he was debating about this evening. After the incidents of today, his picture gone, her rejection her refusal to go with him— he was wavering, undecided.

He tossed his cigarette out on the water. "Maybe we'd better go up and help Joyce what we can."

Buzzard did not stir. For several minutes he had been glancing uneasily at Alan. Finally he screwed up courage to speak.

"It's strictly none of my business, Alan, but. . . . You're engaged to a girl there at Endurance, but you bought Miss MacMillan that rainbow scarf with your last dollar and you talked a lot about getting back here and helping her."

Alan was loath to speak of Joyce, even with a partner. He tried to say quietly: "We've been good friends for several years. She's one of the sweetest girls I ever knew. You've met her now. You'd naturally want to help her, wouldn't you?"

"Of course. But. . . . See here, I may be laughing things; you can tell me to shut up if you want to—but it seems to me there's something wrong between you and her."

Alan repeated, rather shortly: "We're good friends. There's nothing more than that."

Buzzard knew different. He had had a vague suspicion of it ever since Alan first mentioned Joyce MacMillan's name at the cafe in Edmont. As he remembered the incident of this noon, he wondered at the Spartan courage Joyce had shown and at the paganism behind such an act. Surely some bitter unhappiness lay between her and Baker.

He said reluctantly: "If that's true, if you're merely friends and nothing more, what made her burn up that scarf you brought her?"

"What?" Alan whirled on him, gasping. "Burn up that colorful fleecy?"

He half-rose. "You say that's what she did? You're sure about that? You didn't make a mistake?"

For a moment, groping about to retrieve his blunder, Buzzard hardly knew what to say or do. There had been no mistake; he had seen that incident with his own eyes when he glanced through the window to find where Alan was. He debated whether to draw back from his statement or to plunge ahead and tell the rest of it—Joyce's momentary battle, the shudder that swept her whole body when she put the scarf into the stove, and the quick blinding tears that she dashed away.

He thought: "Better not get any deeper into this. I'd only blunder again. Better back out entirely."

He stammered: "I might have made a mistake. I might—uh—it might have been the wrapping paper. I just merely saw her put—uh—something into—and I jumped to conclusions. Must have been the wrapper. Why would any person want to burn up a gift like that? Let's forget it."

His tones carried no conviction. He realized it himself. Alan disbelieved him; Alan knew Joyce had burned the scarf he gave her.

Cursing himself hotly, Buzzard looked out across the purpling river. He had meant only the best, and he had dealt Alan a savage pitiless blow.

After a little time Alan said to him: "You'd better go up, Buzzard; she may be waiting for us."

"Are you going?"

"No—not now; I don't much care. . . . I don't want supper."

Something in his voice warned Buzzard not to urge him. As he turned away, Alan said, in the tones of a man who has made some hard and abiding decision:

"When you've had supper, come back down here; I'll help you with that work. We'll do it now, so we can get away early. I was thinking—for this evening something else. But that's out—now."

"What!" Alan whirled on him, gasping. "Burn Up That Colorful Fleecy?"

At three o'clock the next morning Buzzard lifted the plane out of the Big Alouka. With Alan directing him, he headed due north.

One hundred and thirty miles away, nearly four hundred miles from Fort Endurance, a small tribe of Tinnels lived along the western fringe of the Big Alouka. They were a timid, skulking, ineffective band, sheltered into a region where other tribes scorned to live. Dave MacMillan had been their friend and they brought him their furs; and Alan, during his years at Endurance, had sent a protective patrol to them twice a year.

Joyce had found out where they were spending this summer; and Alan had a mission with their old headman, Mugwa-Eitthen.

When the timbered country began yielding to lakes and semi-muskeg, he got out his glasses and started searching ahead for their camp. At a height of five thousand feet he could sweep a region of more than two hundred thousand acres. The eyes of an eagle, the wings of a bullet-swift curlew, and that big-barreled Browning machine gun—through luck and driving purpose and a faith in his dubious plan, he had smashed through obstacles till now he held the power and heavy odds over those bandits.

The sure knowledge of this was about all that was left to him. His

Races and Languages Huddled in Suez Area

The Port Said consular district in Egypt has three cities of importance: Port Said, situated on the northern extremity of the Suez canal, with an officially estimated population of 195,592 inhabitants, of whom 25,000 are Europeans; Suez, at the southern end of the canal, with 40,000 inhabitants, of whom 8,000 are Europeans; and Ismailia, between the two aforementioned cities, with 25,194 residents, of whom 10,000 are Europeans. The preponderant element is almost entirely Egyptian Arabs, says United States Commerce Reports.

Egyptian Arabic is the language of the native population, while the foreign element converses usually in two work in the Mounted, his life here in the North, were both gone; and Buzzard's cataclysmic words last evening had showed him that his secret hope towards Joyce had been a fool's hope, a fool's wishful thinking.

How low he must have fallen in her esteem, that she should burn his gift to her! At first it had seemed a little cruel of Joyce to do that. But then he looked at the incident with relentless honesty, and he could not blame her. Once he and she had planned to marry. People had spoken of it; it had been generally accepted along the River. She had liked him, loved him. What must her feelings have been as she watched his relations with Elizabeth, and saw him engaged to another girl and coming no more to the Big Alouka? She must have felt shame, a burning shame, at being jilted. Month after lonely month of that—it had been an outrage to her girlhood. Nothing she could do to him could be so heartless as what he had done to her.

Through the propeller disk he at last sighted the Indian camp, a cluster of brown, leather tents beside a lake where the band was passing the summer near their fish weirs. Buzzard roared over the camp and banked to alight. Old Mugwa-Eitthen, a gaunt and wrinkled old savage, stalked up and gravely bade them welcome.

After this flood season of heavy rains, Alan knew there were a few acres in the watery wilderness of the Thal-Azzah where a party of men could camp. He himself had only a hazy idea where those areas lay; but this old headman, Mugwa-Eitthen, who followed the Caribou, had lived his life along the border of that great marsh and knew it better than any man alive, and could probably give him a pretty definite idea where to look.

Very wisely, Joyce had kept from letting the nomad bands know anything about the police defeat. The Shaglanha maintained order in so huge a territory largely through their reputation of never falling, and the news of their stinging defeat would do incalculable harm. Joyce had not even told old Mugwa-Eitthen.

After pledging the headman to silence, in cultural Tinnel Alan began sketching the story of the robbery and battle. As he told of the bandits escaping up the Alouka, he noticed that the old chief suddenly became all interested.

Alan looked at him keenly. "Something's up," he thought. "I've stumbled onto something." He demanded: "When I wa-wa two three breaths ago you start like hit buck. Why?"

Drawing a crude map of the Thal-Azzah with his bony forefinger, the old headman sprang his astounding news.

"Ten suns ago, he said, Tukeok and another young buck had gone westward into the Land of Many Waters to locate rat colonies for autumn trapping. One evening they heard the boom-boom of fire-sticks far away southwest. Slipping up, timid, cautious, they saw some strange men shooting waves for food. They saw a tent, a camp on an island. . . .

For several minutes, fighting down a wild elation, Alan forced himself to crouch there, asking questions. Fixing that map and that spot unforgettably in his mind.

At the wigwams he rejoined Bill. "Come on! Let's be getting into the air! An hour and a half from now we'll be saying it with a machine gun. When we flew up here we brought our luck along!"

From his height of three thousand feet, regarding the country spread below him, Alan could follow the crude finger map without once being in doubt. . . . That should be the great blue-water lake which Mugwa-Eitthen had described. It should have islands in the center of it. On one of the islands near the north edge of the cluster the bandits should be camped, if they had not moved on.

"Swing north!" he shouted at Buzzard. "Those islets there to themselves. . . ."

The machine swerved and thundered closer. One by one Alan started to search the five. On the first one, nothing. On the second, nothing. But on the third. . . . He started suddenly as he caught that center one in clear focus. Below them on that center island, conspicuous to their spy patrol, stood a solitary dirty-white tent.

After a few moments Alan had presence of mind again. He leaned forward and shouted instruction: "Drop down to a thousand feet. Fly over that island again. Slow. Wait to study it carefully before we start things."

The Y DAIRY

BEST TO DISPOSE OF "LEAKING" COW

Percentage of Cures Shown to Be Small.

Many high producing milk cows will be seen with the milk dripping or streaming from their udder for some time before the usual milking time. The owners of such cows will be desirous of learning how to prevent this loss of milk. Usually there is only one way to prevent that is generally satisfactory, and that is to milk these cows often enough to prevent the distention of the udder which causes this leaking. By milking these cows three or four times a day, this loss usually is prevented. Since many owners do not find it convenient to do this, it is usually best to dispose of these animals.

Several different treatments have been advocated for this condition, but none of them promise sufficient results to warrant their being generally used. Under no condition should rubber bands be placed around the teats nor should the teats be tied off with tape. Where the leakers are not too bad, occasionally the openings in the end of the teat can be contracted slightly by painting with tincture of iodine or by making a saturated solution of alum and injecting it just inside the opening. Most owners find any of these treatments too troublesome to be practical.

When the cow is a persistent leaker and leaks away a good quantity of her milk, it is usually best to dispose of her unless she is an exceptionally valuable cow for breeding purposes, as the percentages of recoveries are so very small that it hardly seems desirable to keep such cows in the herd unless they are exceptionally valuable. —Montreal Herald.

Impossible to Find Any Profit in "Scrub" Cows

When the prices of butterfat and feed are normal, ten cows producing an average of 100 pounds of fat per annum will earn $135. Under the same conditions one cow producing 400 pounds of butterfat will earn $193. When you multiply the butterfat production of a cow four times, you multiply your income ten times and you cut your feed costs per pound of butterfat in half.

It is suggested that out of the more than a million cows milked in Texas there must be a very large number that never make a profit for their owners. How much better it would be to sell six scrubs for butchering purposes and buy one good cow.

When scrub cows are sold to other farmers for dairy purposes the industry has not been helped. Every non-profitable cow should be disposed of, even at sacrifice in price, to the butcher or killed and canned for home consumption. What we need in the Southwest is fewer and better cows.—Farm and Ranch.

Kill Lice in Calves

The problem of lice on calves, and especially calves, in the winter is difficult to control but by using certain well-known methods as recommended by J. B. Fitch, Kansas state college, the insects can be eradicated.

"Probably the most efficient treatment for lice in an application of a 2 per cent solution of a coal-tar dip to all parts of the calf's body. A second treatment, a week or ten days later, will usually eliminate most of the trouble. This treatment should be applied only when calves are in a warm place and can be rubbed dry. During severe weather a mixture of equal parts of kerosene and lard, or a good commercial house powder will usually control the lice. Through cleaning and disinfecting of the calf shed will also help to control the lice."

Curing "Sucking" Cow

A cow that has formed the habit of sucking the other cows usually as difficult to break. A writer in Hoard's Dairyman states that he has had this trouble with two animals in his herd and cured both of them by putting bits in their mouths, securing them there with a small rope running over the head, halter fashion, and a piece of balling wire for a throat latch. The halter must be tight enough that the bit binds in the corners of the mouth, as this causes the mouth to get sore and they will refuse to graze or eat. The directions are to use a common light snaffle bit. The bit is left in the mouth for several weeks and when removed the habit is cured. At least, it was so in the case of this writer.

DAIRY FACTS

The composition of milk is, with small variations, 87 per cent water, 3.7 per cent fat, 3.5 per cent protein, 5 per cent lactose, and 0.8 per cent ash.

In spite of low prices for dairy products, the present trend in the number of milk cows in the country as a whole seems to be distinctly upward, according to the bureau of agricultural economics.

"Thriller" of Long Ago

Outdone by Invention. "Way back in their boyhood reading, illicit reading, with the yellow-back in the big geography, and the teacher not too vigilant, some men who are gray-haired now can recall a Beadle thriller with the title 'Red Star, the Spirit of the Lake.'"

A white pioneer has had all his family murdered by the Indians. He escapes to an island and finds a cave. In that cave there is a stone tomahawk with the striking edge so carved as to form a star, and leave that mark on the victim.

Also there are two very light and narrow cedar canoes, with straps for the feet. The pioneer finds that in these he can walk the water of the lake. Every night he goes out. Every morning some redskin is found dead in the forest with the star mark. Hence "Red Star, the Spirit of the Lake."

Red Star walked on quiet water. But now the news tells us that Karl Naumesnik, of Styria, has eclipsed the Beadle hero. Facing rather heavy seas, he has actually walked the water from Cape Gris Nez to Dover on "water skis." The distance is about twenty miles. The water skis of 1931 are clearly superior to the strapped-on cedar canoes of fancy, three-quarters of a century ago. And once more it has been proved that truth is stranger than fiction.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Velvet-Clad Youth in Style Revue

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WELL, well, who comes here prom- enading along fashion's highway with all the poise and assurance of a sophisticated grown-up who glories in a feeling of being well-dressed? 'Tis none other than the younger generation ranging from tiny tot to self-important Miss Junior, and you can tell at a glance that, like their elder sisters and their cousins and their aunts not to forget to mention mothers dear, they, too, have become decidedly velvet-conscious this season.

There is no doubt about it, that to the very young, fashion is broadcasting the message of velvet with as much emphasis as to those older. The favor for velvet in the juvenile world has reached such a high point of enthusiasm designers are not only exploiting it for coats and frocks but in a trimming way as well as for cunning accessory items it is regarded as a medium of outstanding importance.

For instance, with their costumes of gay wool weaves, little girls are wearing darling muffs, beret and scarf sets made of velvet, often shirred as fanciful as you please or perhaps touched up with a bit of fur. Mothers who are deft with the needle and who are gifted with a sense of imagination when it comes to designing will not doubt be intrigued with the idea of fashioning these cunning "sets" for their little ones. It's really surprising what a yard or so of velvet thus manipulated can do in the way of adding chic, charm and "class" to a little girl's costume.

Even newer than the scarf effects are the clever little velvet shoulder capes which are detachable and which usually are accompanied with a diminutive matching muff. Sometimes the order is reversed in that the capelet and the muff or the scarf and the beret, as the case may be, are made of dainty fabriclike fur, with velvet for the coat.

In the picture, little Miss Seven-Year-Old is wearing a caped coat made of black silk Lyons velvet, topped with a hat of the same. White fur for the collar, of course, for have not their elders set the example this season, by having their black velvet wraps collared with handsome white ermine? You will notice that this smart little coat buttons snug up to the neck which it should according to latest style dictates.

As to the charming two-piece velvet dress or suit, if you please to call it so, for it may be worn as either, which chic Miss Sub-Deb, to the left in the illustration, has chosen for her outfit, it is the "last word" as to color (rich wine-red), styling details and the velvet of which it is fashioned. The scalloped panel fastening at the front of the blouse is especially attractive. The wide belt of self-velvet is very ultra. So is the slight flare given to the skirt below the knee.

In working velvet when creating little folks' fashions the latest wrinkle is to employ designer fagotting. The seams are often fagotted and sometimes entire yokes, pockets and cuffs are formed of wee velvet folds or cording which are fagotted together.

This ornamental stitchery offers an opportunity to introduce bright color touches. The silk floss need not necessarily be the same color as the velvet. By using several shades of thread, say red for one row of fagotting, green for the next and perhaps yellow for a third, a black or navy velvet dress is prettily enlivened for the tiny tot. Exquisite ombre effects may be achieved by using various shades of the same color. For example, in making a frock of brown velvet the yoke and sleeve detail is enhanced when the velvet cording is joined with dark brown for the first row, using a lighter shade of floss for each succeeding row, grading finally to pale beige.

TAILORED FROCKS FOR ALL-DAY WEAR

Not matter how colorful it may be, the favorite daytime dress of the winter season is simply but cleverly tailored, of wool, varying from very sheer to fairly heavy weights; or of silk crepe, in its various weights and degrees of crepeiness—flat crepe, canton and roshanara.

Satin and transparent velvet will, of course, be worn in the daytime—but for the all-day dress—for the woman whose day is more practical than social, the more tailored frock is a better choice. Transparent velvet and satin, made along simple lines, are attractive for luncheon, bridge, matinees and other daytime occasions for which there is time to dress especially.

Knit woollen fabrics also put in a bid for daytime attention. Although usually considered as sports outfits, knit materials have such interest and such prestige that they make smart daytime frocks for town wear complete with fur jackets, sports fur coats, or jackets of corduroy or other informal fabrics.

Blue Lined Drawer Will Keep the Linen Whiter

Here is a good suggestion for your linen closet or linen drawer. Paint the inside of it to give it a smooth, easily washed surface, and choose blue for the color. A blue lining, it is said, will keep the linen whiter.

For other drawers you may prefer to use varnish instead of paint. It can be applied quickly, and it helps to make an easier job of cleaning out drawers. A damp, spongy cloth rubbed over the surface collects the dirt and leaves the drawers ready for their lavender sachets and blue liners.

VOGUE FOR CONTRAST

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Fashion's stages startling contrasts this season both in color and in materials. A favorite theme is that of the sleeves in direct color contrast to the rest of the dress. The gown pictured, which is a Jane Regny model, interprets the mode by contrasting lustrous black and dull white beaming satin. The soft fullness of the bodice and sleeves, and the over-the-shoulder blouse effect reflect a favorite whim of fashion for fall and winter.

Prove Bulls Before Putting Them to Use

Only Method of Assuring Herd Improvement.

It is some considerable degree of satisfaction to us that breeders and dairy farmers recognize more and more the value of dairy herd improvement associations for securing better sires. Breeders who have advanced their herds in production through keeping records and systematic culling do not desire to select a bull that many decrease the production of the herd. This leads them to seek ways and means to prove the bulls before used extensively in their herds.

In Iowa we find that the herd improvement association is attempting to prove 1,374 bulls. This activity is named the "better sire contest," and 61 associations have entered. It has caused three or four farmers to own a bull together, to build safety bull pens, and provide paddocks where the bulls can exercise so they may be kept in good health. At the proper time awards based on pedigree, type, records, of daughters over dams, will be given. This kind of work will help to save the good bull which, up to now, too often has been sent to the butcher before his value was known. Further, if carried out in the proper way it will ultimately eliminate from our breeding cattle the low producing blood and establish characters that will breed true for high production and good type.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Early-Breeding Sure to Hold Back Development

Many heifers that have been well fed fail to make proper size at maturity because they have been bred at too early an age. Not only is size lost by this practice but ability to produce milk as well. The heavier the breed the more is the time required for development before the animal is bred. Holsteins, for instance, may be bred at the age of eighteen to twenty-one months depending on their development. Ayrshires at eighteen to twenty months and Jerseys at fifteen to seventeen months. This is a general rule. The best breeders may prefer to hold their heifers a little longer. One of the greatest Ayrshire breeders once said that the best heifers he ever owned were not bred till twenty-one months, and he considered this quite early enough. In altogether too many cases the lighter breeds come in at twenty months and the heavier breeds at twenty-four months.

Need for Deep Plowing

Land can be made rich in the plowed soil by the addition of manure and green immature clovers plowed under, or by plowing under any of the peas and beans; but land can be made rich with manure and these crops, only as deep as they are plowed under. When the surface soil is made rich, the roots of plants grow largely in the plowed or surface soil and roots are shallow and weak. When roots are shallow and weak the crops are likely to suffer from drought when the surface soil becomes dry, and the crop is reduced in size and quality, because full maturity is not reached. Legume crops grown and removed from the land are likely to leave the soil poorer than before they were grown, except for a slight temporary stimulation.

Made $27.58 an Acre!

A net profit of $27.58 an acre was earned last year by Charles Green of Monrovia. Total expenses to the acre for his year's operations amounted to $10.03. Money received grossed $38.27 an acre. The difference of $27.58 was left to pay for Mr. Green's work, and interest on the investment, which is a good record for a tough year. Of the 50 acres Mr. Green farms, 27 acres are in alfalfa, with small amounts of other legumes. Sweet clover is used for pasture. Here is a dairyman who produces quality cream that is sold on a steady price basis, and all of his crops are fed to his herd of nine Jersey cows, some chickens, hogs and sheep.—Kansas Farmer.

Agricultural Notes

A successful sailor studies his compass and a successful farmer studies market conditions.

At present prices for corn and tankage, skim milk is worth about 25 cents a 100 pounds, to feed hogs.

Ordinarily the meat from hogs six to twelve months old will combine the most desirable features of weight, yield and eating quality.

Forty-four men, managers of county live stock marketing associations, pitted their skill against one another to find which can ship live stock to market this year with the least transit losses.

Pruning of young trees from one to three years old takes very little time and can be left until all danger of winter injury is past.

Alfalfa as a forage for winter feeding supplies the necessary bulk for a hog's ration. Alfalfa contains valuable vitamins, minerals and proteins.

Colorado's total dry bean crop is estimated at 1,871,000 bushels, as of October 1, compared with 2,227,000 bushels last year and a 5-year average of 1,770,000 bushels.

Speeder Blamed Hot Dogs for His Arrest

Kansas City, Mo.—Yes, Ferdinand Lambrecht was speeding, all right. There was no doubt of that, he mournfully admitted in police court. But there was a reason, an excellent reason, he hastened on.

It was the matter of hot sausages—vulgarians call them hot dogs. Ferdinand had a truck load of them.

"And if you've worked among a bunch of sausage customers, Judge, you know how particular they are. I had promised them hot sausages, and you can't do that unless you get there in a hurry."

Judge Thomas V. Holland said Lambrecht would have to serve five days at the county farm and let some one else deliver the hot sausages for a while.

GOOD NEWS LOSES IN SUICIDE RACE

Wire Restoring His Prosperity Finds Man Dead.

Los Angeles.—Had George H. Far and clung to life just a few hours longer—had he said to himself:

"I'll make just one more little struggle before I kill myself—"

Today Farland would be a happy, prosperous citizen of Los Angeles, as he was for twelve years. But he didn't wait, didn't fight.

For a dozen years Farland, fifty-six, from Davenport, Iowa, had been California representative of the United States Chamber of Commerce in Washington, D. C., setting small chambers to join the national body, earning commissions, making $1,000 to $1,500 a month.

Within the last year or so his territory was cut smaller and smaller. His income went down. Finally he had only the city of Los Angeles. He couldn't make a living here. He wrote to Washington and set forth his troubles.

There came no reply. He grew depressed. Finally he went to a downtown hotel, inhaled chloroform and died. A couple of hours after he left home there arrived a telegram from Walter Schultz, western manager of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

This notified Farland that all his territory had been restored to him—and it wished him good fortune.

Squirrel Squints Into Shotgun Barrel; Dies

Connecticut, Ohio.—A bushy-tailed fox squirrel died because his education had not included the old legend about how curiosity killed a cat. His ignorance also allowed W. D. Rice to tell his friends the best hunting story of the year.

Rice was out hunting on the old Mitchell farm on South Ridge road. On the trail of two squirrels, he seated himself on a log with his gun across his knees.

He looked over toward a tree where he thought his quarry might be hiding.

Feeling something touch the gun he looked down and saw a squirrel with one paw on the muzzle and squinting down the barrel.

Rice pulled the trigger and Mr. Squirrel paid "the supreme penalty" for his curiosity.

Rescue Man Clinging by Fingers to Steep Cliff

Los Angeles.—Clinging by his fingers to a rock on the Santa Monica Palisades with 150 feet of space between his feet and the roadway below, Jontaro Kaitul, fifty, yelled for help.

Two life guards on the beach responded:

"Hang on! We'll get you!" They carried a coil of rope up a steep trail to the top of the cliff. One made the rope fast around a boulder and lowered his companion down to where Kaitul hung, his hands fast losing their strength.

Kaitul and the lifeguard were then hoisted to the top.

Thief Enters Synagogue and Steals the Bible

Columbus, Ohio.—A strange theft occurred in the synagogue Beth Jacob here. A window was found broken, a door opened and the Torah, or Bible, was gone from the altar.

Pennies in the poor box were not disturbed. A year ago a thief broke in and stole 250 pennies from the box. The Torah was forty years old and valued at $150.

"But no Jew would buy a Bible except from a reputable person," said Rabbi Leopold Greenwald. "The restoration was in vain."

Baby Dies After Taking Swallow of Whisky

Buffalo, N. Y.—Claude Theus, Jr., aged two, negro, snatched a bottle of whisky from a chair as his mother was bathing him in their home and took a swallow before his mother could stop him. He was rushed to a hospital for treatment but died. Medical Examiner Pecco de Dominicis issued a certificate of death due to accidental alcoholic poisoning.

LIFER ARRESTED FIVE YEARS AFTER HE BROKE PRISON

Fugitive Caught While Working as Longshoreman in Northwest.

Seattle.—"The game is up, I'll take my medicine."

With this remark Jim Whetselle, man of many aliases, extended his wrists at Port Townsend for Sheriff Carroll to place the handcuffs. He was brought here for safekeeping.

Whetselle, living apparently as a respectable and industrious longshoreman and builder, must go back to Tennessee to serve the remainder of his life in prison as a murderer.

Escaped Prison.

He had escaped five years ago from the Tennessee penitentiary. It was the end of long years of hiding and dodging of arresting officers, and of trying in the meantime to establish himself in various parts of the country as a respectable citizen to avoid suspicion.

Whetselle, known also as Joe Burke and Ray Neff, is forty-eight years old. He went to Port Townsend some time ago where he started work as a longshoreman and builder, but three weeks ago was recognized from a man-wanted poster sent out by the Tennessee authorities.

Pillar to Post.

Since then he has been under surveillance until Sheriff Carroll was certain of his identity. Carroll, while his men were watching the suspect at his work, called Whetselle up on the phone and asked him to report at the sheriff's office. He did so immediately and was there accused of being a fugitive from justice.

"I'm willing to go back," he said. "The last five years haven't been a very happy time, anyway, pursued as I was from pillar to post and always fearing that the hand of the law would be on my shoulder at any moment."

"Anyway, I have been wanting to see my folks back in Tennessee for a long time. I haven't dared to write them. They can see me at the penitentiary."

Sheriff Carroll said that Whetselle escaped five years ago in a general break riot at the Tennessee prison at Nashville. Arresting officers have been on his trail in various cities. He narrowly escaped arrest in Topeka, Kan., and in California.

Known as a desperate and unscrupulous criminal and prisoner, Whetselle, it was feared, might make another break for liberty.

Angry Housewife Gives Boy Bandit Spanking

Kansas City.—Mrs. Forest Dumas wasn't frightened when Robert Kelly, twelve, menaced her with pistol when she caught him prowling in her house.

Instead the enraged housewife turned the lad over her lap and spanked him—which was an undignified proceeding in the judgment of Robert, who posed as a tough housebreaker.

After the paddling, Mrs. Duma sat Robert on a chair and told him to stay there. He did remain there until the police came.

Snake Swallows Eggs and Later They Hatch

Palmyra, Va.—When three little guinea hens on the farm of John Floyd grew up they can have a tall tale to tell their grandchildren.

Floyd killed a large blacksnake on his farm when he came upon it, sleepy and gorged from raiding the nest of a setting hen.

The hen had been working on a setting of guinea eggs. After killing the snake, Floyd extracted three of the guinea eggs and replaced them under the hen. They hatched along with the rest.

Mother Expires While Her Son Beats His Wife

Kansas City, Mo.—Walter S. Hadley, twenty-six, brought his estranged wife to his parents' home and beat her severely. When the wife sought to have him arrested he jumped out the window, exciting his mother, Mrs. Ruth Ella Hadley, sixty-seven, so much that she dropped dead.

His estranged wife, Mrs. Thelma Hadley, said that she would continue to prosecute him. They had not lived together for a year.

The wife said Hadley had previously attempted to throw her into the river.

Mother Falls Dead as Her Daughter Marries

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Mrs. Mary Gilmore, forty-seven, wife of Dr. George B. Gilmore, dropped dead at the wedding of her daughter, Ruth, to Fred A. Wagner of Winnetka, Ill. Just as the minister pronounced the couple "man and wife."

Shoots at Cat—Hits Mother

Millford, Conn.—Young Howard Beard's attempt to bag a stray cat with a shotgun cost his mother an eye. One of the lead pellets ricocheted off a hard surface and struck her. The cat escaped.

Finds $2.61 in Coats

St. Cloud, Minn.—Al Meyers killed his goose and found—not the golden egg—but $2.61 in dimes and pennies. Meyers bought the goose for $1 from a farmer.

RESTFUL SLEEP for FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

—With Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. Very often the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. Bowels need help—mild, gentle help—but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives. Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then relaxed comfort and restful sleep! Genuine Castoria always has the name!

Sweeping Indictment
It is not true that the young people today are thinking for themselves. Young people don't think; they haven't had experience enough to think. In the past, young people permitted their parents to think for them in vital matters. Today many young people neither think for themselves nor allow anybody else to think for them.—Southern Agriculturalist.

COLDS

RUB Musterole well into your chest and throat—almost instantly you feel easier. Repeat the Musterole-rub once an hour for five hours... what a glorious relief!
Those good old-fashioned cold remedies—oil of mustard, menthol, camphor—are mixed with other valuable ingredients in Musterole to make it what doctors call "counter-irritant" because it gets action and is not just a salve. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists.
To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Too Many
"Mother, when the depression is over may I have a pony?"
"Well see, Bobby. What did daddy say?"
"He said I could have a dozen ponies, but I wouldn't know which one to ride if I had that many!"

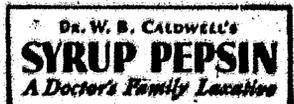

Their Problem
"Does your baby talk yet?"
"Talk? It takes us all our time to teach it to be quiet."

It is the man on the fence who feels the first political breeze.

POISON in Your bowels!

Poisons absorbed into the system from souring waste in the bowels, cause that dull, headachy, sluggish, bilious condition; coat the tongue; foul the breath; sap energy, strength and nerve-force. A little of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will clear up trouble like that gently, harmlessly, in a hurry. The difference it will make in your feelings over night will prove its merit to you.
Dr. Caldwell studied constipation for over forty-seven years. This long experience enabled him to make his prescription just what men, women, old people and children need to make their bowels help themselves. Its natural, mild, thorough action and its pleasant taste commended it to everyone. That's why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin," as it is called, is the most popular laxative drug on the earth!

A Surprise Party

On last Sunday evening, when we returned home from church, we found that our home had been entered from the rear, and there were piled on table, chairs and floor a large and varied assortment of good things to eat. The good women of the church had gotten together and contributed a bountiful supply of beans, butter, bacon, jams, jellies, preserves, and canned fruits, potatoes, etc., all of which come in very nicely in a preacher's pantry.

We wish to thank every one who had a part in this generous act; and to assure you that we are deeply grateful for your thoughtfulness.

Baptists Begin Missionary Program for 1932.

Albuquerque, Nov. 23—New Mexico Baptists are this week arranging canvassing teams, revising membership rolls and making final arrangements for the taking of pledges between November 29 and December 6 for their work throughout the State, the South and the world for 1932. Payment on pledges taken during this period will begin January 1, 1932.

This program of New Mexico Baptists is in cooperation with more than 24,000 Southern Baptist churches in which almost 4,000,000 Southern Baptists expect to raise for all causes during 1932 the sum of $40,000,000 as against more than $37,000,000 in 1930. Out of this large sum $9,000,000 will be used for missionary causes in the United States and nineteen foreign countries where they have missionaries on the field. The remaining $31,000,000 will be used to pay the expenses of the churches in the Southern Convention.

Included in the program of New Mexico Baptists as outlined in their recent State Convention in Portales is $15,000 for mission causes within New Mexico; over $11,000 for their Orphans' Home at Portales, where between thirty and thirty-five children are being cared for; over $10,000 for Montezuma College and $5,000 for mission work outside New Mexico.

Along with the solicitation for pledges to be paid during 1932 one-fourth of the membership of Baptist Churches in New Mexico and throughout the South are being asked to tithe their income for that period. This will mean nearly 1,000,000 tithers within the bounds of the Convention.

New Mexico Baptists are well organized for the task confronting them next week, and fully expect to lead all of the Southern States in the percentage of members enlisted in the campaign.

THOUSANDS OF W. O. W. PILGRIMS ATTEND IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES AT NEW CHAPEL

Above is a photograph of the new Woodmen of the World Chapel at San Antonio, Texas. Inset is W. A. Fraser, president, for whom the chapel was named.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Nov. 23—Baptists, Presbyterians and Catholics, thousands of members of the Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Association from nearly every state in the Union to help celebrate the dedication of the William Alexander Fraser chapel and hospital here this afternoon.

The new chapel is on the grounds of the W. O. W. War Memorial hospital a short distance from San Antonio.

From early morning until late in the evening, the exceptionally large number of W. O. W. pilgrims inspected the chapel and hospital, as well as the hospital and its spacious grounds.

They were thrilled by the magnificent oration of U. S. Senator Morris Sheppard, national treasurer of W. O. W., who made the principal address.

National officers of the association took part in the formal dedication of the building, as well as ministers of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish faiths.

The North Infantry band from Fort Sam Houston played.

An elaborate program of music featured a recital by St. Mark's Church choir, a hymn by the San Antonio Liederkreis, a feature by the Ecchoven Macnerehor and organ recitals by Ben Stanley of Omaha, Nebraska, Walter Dunham and John M. Steinfeldt.

The beautiful chimes of the Chapel lent much atmosphere to the impressive occasion.

Thousands were guests of W. O. W. at a huge barbecue of products from the farm of the W. O. W. hospital. Many members of the association came as guests of W. O. W., having won their expenses to the dedication by special performance in a large membership campaign.

The chapel was named for William Alexander Fraser, president of W. O. W., because of his personal enthusiasm and long devotion to the building of a great W. O. W. center at San Antonio. Mr. Fraser began the task of raising funds to purchase the hospital grounds twenty-five years ago.

Everyone in attendance agreed that Woodmen of the World has contributed much to the welfare of Texas by the unusual architectural design and the solemn physical beauty of the new building.
