Robert Leslie

Robert Leslie died of a complication of diseases at his home in White Oaks last Monday after an illness of several months. Mr. Leslie was an old-timer at White Oaks having moved there in 1885. He was well-known throughout the county, and will be greatly missed.

Robert Leslie was born May 17, 1852 in Fulton county, Georgia. Died February 15, 1932, aged 79 years, 8 months and 29 days. He moved to Texas with his parents when a small boy. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Ward of Dublin, Texas, May 5, 1871. They lived in Eastland county, Texas a number of years and five of their children were born there. They moved to White Oaks, Lincoln county New Mexico in 1885, and have resided there continuously over a period of 46 years. Five more children were born there. He is survived by his wife, three brothers and five sisters, and six children: Mrs. Lura Yates, Elisha, Robert, Ward, Ben and Ellis, and thirty-four grand-children.

In early manhood he united with the Baptist church at Dublin, Texas, and was a member of that church when he died.

Funeral services were held in the White Oaks church, conducted by Rev. L. D. Jordan, and attended by a large concourse of friends and neighbors.

How to Pronounce the Word Purina

Thirty odd years ago a young man with a bent towards scientific livestock feeding, then a rather new fangled idea, began experimenting in feed mixing. His idea flowered, bore fruit, and today is known as Purina Mills. The young man's name was Wm. H. Danforth, now chairman of the board of that company.

And in Purina, Mr. Danforth gave to farming America a word that probably today is one of the most mispronounced in the language. Just how many ways Purina is mispronounced, no one knows. And yet there is but one correct way.

The word Purina, which is a part of the name Purina Chows by which the feeds and supplements made by the company are known, comes from the common word pure. When this young man got his idea on livestock feeding and feed mixing, he set up as one inviolate rule that always all ingredients must be pure. So it was only natural to seek to put that word into the name of his products.

Purina was the result. And the correct pronunciation is Pure-ee-na. That's the way it's said in home offices and research laboratories in St. Louis. That's the way the man who coined it said it.

The most common mispronunciation is Pure-eye-na. Other garbled additions are Purr-ee-na, Pa-roo-na, and even Proo-uce. But there's just one right way, Pure-ee-na.

Sunday School Class Entertained by Mrs. Spencer

Mrs. T. A. Spencer entertained her Sunday school class of girls at her home last Monday evening. About thirty members of the class were present, and other guests, brought the number to about 50, including the Superintendent of the Sunday school and the pastor. Lively games were played and some interesting contests were held in which the winners were awarded lovely prizes. This was a Valentine party and a Valentine motif of hearts was carried out in the dainty refreshments which consisted of ice cream and cake. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer are wonderful entertainers and the young people welcome the opportunity to visit this lovely and hospitable home.

New Spring Merchandise

Since Mr. Ziegler's return from the Eastern markets last week each day marks new arrivals of lovely spring wearing apparel for ladies, gentlemen and children. Suits, hats, dresses and in fact everything including yard goods, in both simple and gorgeous patterns to suit the varying tastes are on display. Mr. Ziegler's many years of experience in these lines have given him a discerning eye to the style trends, which enables him to reject that which is not so good and accept only the leading styles. We also mention that this beautiful stock of high grade merchandise is marked way down—some things even below pre-war prices.

Difficult to Restrain Executive Authority once Extended

Passage of the Democratic tariff through the House of Representatives is greeted with prophecies of a veto at the hands of President Hoover should the Senate concur in the enactment.

Yet the only changes suggested by the Democrats at this stage is the restoration of the complete rate-making authority to Congress where it constitutionally belongs and the inclusion of a project for an international conference to consider mutual reductions—in effect a reciprocity conference.

That it should be taken for granted that the President will resist removal from his province of the power to raise and lower rates through the Tariff Commission illustrates how difficult it is to reclaim from the Executive any authority once vested in him.

When the flexible tariff principle was first introduced under the Wilson administration, there was no thought that the President should become the arbiter of rates. What was sought was the establishment of a group of experts who would make a continuous scientific study of the duties, and recommend to Congress modifications, according to the mutations of comparison costs of production.

Then came the Harding administration and the Fordney-McCumber bill. In this measure was embodied a provision assigning the Tariff Commission to the President. As the appointment of its members rested with the President, it was equivalent to making him a tariff dictator. He could alter any rate adopted by Congress to the extent of fifty per cent. The excuse for it was that the disturbed condition of foreign finance, and the chaos in foreign exchange made it necessary to be prepared for swift changes as the relative costs of production in different countries varied.

It was explained and emphasized that it was a temporary measure and even Senator McCumber, author in the upper House of the bill, assured his colleagues that he would not advocate that Congress should alienate one of its prerogatives, if he had any idea that it was to continue in effect after the emergency had passed.

The Tariff Commission, under the Fordney-McCumber enactment resolved itself into a bureau that simply registered the will of succeeding presidents. If Commissions were not tractable they were got rid of. With rare and unimportant exceptions it lifted rates instead or reducing them as was the apparent idea when it was enacted. The one conspicuous reduction—on sugar—recommended by the Commission, was adroitly p-holed by president Coolidge.

WOMEN OFFICIALS CHOSEN TO RUN ARKANSAS TOWN

Mrs. J. G. (Eva) McLane (fourth from left), mayor of Mount Ida, Ark., being sworn in together with the women members of the city's council. The six women declared they were elected to the council without aspiring to office. Mount Ida has about 600 population and is located near Hot Springs.

My Neighbor Says:

If a cake falls in the center when baking it is very possibly due to the fact that the oven door was opened too soon after the cake was put in. In the case of a sponge cake the door should never be opened during the first 20 minutes.

Apple butter is best when served with hot muffins or biscuits, as well as with hot rolls.

Evergreens should be planted early, by the middle of October at the very latest. If the weather is dry at time of planting dip the roots into a thick mud paste before planting, but it is not necessary if the season is wet. Evergreens do not require much attention after planting except that they must not be allowed to become dry. They should be kept watered up to the time of freezing.

The Kitchen Cabinet

DAINTY LUNCHEONS

There is nothing more appetizing, satisfying and attractive than a pair of well made and garnished sandwiches with a cup of hot coffee. The following is one that will provide a substantial meal:

Sandwich Ensemble.—Arrange sliced chicken on toast, spread with mayonnaise, cover with a slice of tomato with dressing, cover the tomato with a thin slice of fried ham and then with a sautéed slice of pineapple. Cover with toast.

Crab meat or tuna seasoned with lemon juice, salt, pepper and a touch of tabasco used for sandwich filling is especially good with a salad. Baking powder biscuits toast so well that they make very nice sandwiches. Creamed chicken sandwich is so well known that it need not be pressed, but used with baking powder biscuit, a salad and a hot drink, one has a fine meal.

Another very good sandwich is prepared with hard cooked egg, chopped chicken liver, mixed with mayonnaise, a bit of prepared mustard and spread on whole wheat bread, then sautéed in a little butter until brown on both sides.

For a cool night, prepare hot toast, add a slice of tomato, cover with cheese, seasoned with a bit of Worcestershire and chili sauce and serve hot with curls of bacon.

Men as a rule like sandwich fillings with snap and tang, so more seasonings should be used, especially when served hot.

Vegetable stocks, aspics and gelatins may be used as tops for open sandwiches, garnishing with chopped nuts, fresh chopped green or red pepper, bits of other cooked vegetables such as peas.

There is a wide range of seasonings for hot or cold sandwiches. With the bottled sauces, mushroom, walnut, chili and others well known, there are chopped olives, capers, green and red peppers, parsley, cress and mint.

HOW IT STARTED
By JEAN NEWTON

"MEN IN HIGH PLACES"

IT WOULD be safe to say that few of us, unless we had an inkling of the truth, could accurately surmise the actual beginnings of this phrase "Men in High Places" which today is an allusion to people occupying important positions.

But how different was its original usage and its original significance!

For in the beginning the so-called "high places" were held in dishonor and disrespect by those who used the expression—the Israelites—of their neighbors—the "high places" referred to being the hilltops where "men went to worship strange gods."

Such were the original "high places" upon which shrines were erected—this being a custom which was widespread in ancient times, arising undoubtedly out of the belief that the tops of hills brought the worshiper that much nearer to his god.

The Children's Corner

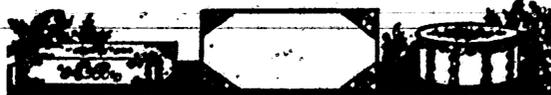

EDITED BY DOROTHY EDMONDS

The Game of What Do You See

Cut out the chart of pictures given here and mount it on a piece of cardboard. The players sit in a circle and the chart is placed in the center, covered over. The captain counts three, uncovers the picture chart, counts fifteen and covers it up again. Each player must write down a list of the things he remembers seeing in the picture. The one who remembers the most wins.

Fun With Stamps and Seals

Betty and Bobby were making gifts. They had collected all the seals and stamps they could find in the house, old ones and new ones, but all of bright colors. Betty found a tin marshmallow box, some empty mayonnaise jars; Bobby brought a small wooden box and a large pasteboard box such as dresses come in, and then Mother gave to the fun a picture for which she said she wanted a frame.

The pictures here show you all the nice things the children made and the directions will tell you how.

A Photograph Frame—A piece of cardboard several inches larger than the picture you wish to frame, with a square or a circle cut from the center to let the picture through. All over the surface of the frame seals are neatly pasted.

A Tissue Box—An empty paraffin box or other tin, cleaned of all its wrappings or printings, and seals pasted in a design all around the sides and on the top.

A Vase—Empty mayonnaise jars, washed clean in warm water, and seals pasted in a little side design and two borders as shown in the picture.

A Lamp Shade—A piece of very heavy paper, oh, very heavy, cut into a half circle first and then a half circle cut out of that, with seals pasted on top and bottom and the whole pasted together to make a perfect shade.

A Blotter Pad—Made from the large pasteboard box that Brother Bobby found, the flat part of it, neatly trimmed of all rough edges, with corners of heavy paper pasted on each corner underneath each side to form a little pocket, into which the blotter could be slipped. Each of these pockets are to be covered with pretty seals.

A Pencil Box—This is made from the wooden box (cigar box, perhaps), prettily covered with seals on the outside only.

GREAT THINGS EXPECTED OF THIS AIRPLANE

One of the station masters at Grand Central has a side line. He owns a gasoline and oil business on the Boston Post road, and he tells me that trade is poor. Motorists who used to pull in and say, "Fill her up," now count their gallons. They buy just enough, apparently, to get home. Many ask whether they cannot open a charge account, but the station master's son, who runs the business in his absence, has strict instructions to do only a cash business. The only exceptions to this rule, queerly enough, are young men who look like college boys. They usually pay the next time they go by but, just to be on the safe side, the gas man takes their license numbers. Some drivers have ten gallons of gas put in the tanks and then say they have forgotten their pocketbooks. "That is all right," says the gas man. "Just leave your spare tire." If they drive away without doing so, he just telephones a police box down the road, and they come back. Then they usually discover some money. The station master says the funny thing about the whole affair is that most of the motor-

The history of depressions in the United States appears to be that they last about three years, with nine fairly fat years in between. Those of us, therefore, who are still around in the early 1940s may be expected to go about snoring: "Panick! You don't know anything about a panic. You are too young to remember 1931."

When Helen Morgan was in Havana, the movie people decided it would be nice to take a little shot of her buying something in a department store. They did not care which store, but the managements of the two largest stores in Havana cared a lot. They were firm in the belief that if Miss Morgan went on the screen in a store, the particular emporium made a lot of difference. The contestants turned Miss Morgan's suite at the hotel into a verbal battleground. Neither she nor her mother understood Spanish, but they could perceive that the argument was bitter. The battle was at its height when Evelyn Kelly, an old friend of Miss Morgan, arrived. Not only could she understand Spanish but it appeared she had taken a temporary job in the older of the two palaces of merchandise. That turned the scales of war. Miss Kelly's store won in a walk, at the end of which the picture was made.

Miss Morgan's only bet in Cuba was to the extent of a peseta. She lost it, and, not knowing how much a peseta might be, proffered a dollar in settlement. To her surprise, she got 80 cents in change.

Comes Now Urge to Buy New Hat

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS HAS been and always will be in midseason, the first gesture which a winter-weary woman makes toward spring is to buy a new hat. Seeking signs of spring, fashion's followers will find their fondest hopes realized in the realm of new millinery where millady's chapeau has blossomed forth ere snows have melted from the ground, in full regalia of flowers, ribbons and refreshing straws. Which may be taken literally for more flowers are being used than is usual for this time of the year, and straws of every description are flourishing at such a rate as to lead those who watch "which way the wind blows" to prophesy that it is to be a "straw season."

The new shapes are thrilling. So different! So far as the beret, the sailor and the cloche are concerned; they are staging a sort of all-star performance. All three are in the limelight with, however, startling variations.

High spots on the millinery program are, first of all, the tendency of brims to turn up at the back. Even the familiar cloche makes itself look new by turning its brim up flat to its crown at the back—(see the cloche pictured in lower right corner of the illustration).

Then, too, hats must be worn at an angle. As to the jaunty beret, it simply clings to one side of the head, and how it stays on is often a mystery, yet not such a mystery, for, believe it or not, hatpins are "in" again. That is, some of the smartest berets made of black satin (ever so good looking for midseason) are held in place on the head with two pearl-knobbed pins thrust through the crown. Then, again, the popular quill trimming, as the first model in the picture shows, is preferred. So flat are many of these little hats, they are called pancake berets. Many of them are made of satin ribbon, others of fabric, especially black satin, while those of hand-sewed straw braid will be very fashionable. The toque or beret with a peak is also exploited. In fact, the peaked crown is a favorite topic among designers.

Brimms are taken for granted this season. They excite interest in that their contours are so unusual. A favorite among youthful fashions is what is called the "baby brim," which turns up all around in an even cuff. The hat at the top, to the right in this group, is a version of this new mode. This style is very smart in felt, either in pastel coloring or in street shades. Note the upright positioning of the feather trim. High effects like this express a trend which is being greatly emphasized.

The straw sailor worn with a tilt and a tilt is outstanding for spring. The model centered in the picture is of black straw. Paris hats declare a vogue for rough shaggy straws and for lustrous cellophane effects. Of the sailor here illustrated, it may be said that it has a very conservative pose. In some instances the brim is worn at such an angle that it would seem that only a hatpin would save it from falling off.

As a "last word" hat fashion, we call attention to the pert little shape shown in the lower left corner of the picture. It is one of the Louis Seize models which you will be hearing much about the coming season. Its characteristics are its shallow crown, the narrowness of its brim and, most important of all, the upturn of this brim at the back. Imagine this model in straw or in felt, for it is shown in both. Sometimes it is banked in at the back with flowers, then again ribbon bows are massed in a way to fill in the space over the coiffure. Smart Parisiennes are wearing these little coquettish shapes at a daring angle. It remains to be seen how popular the very shallow crowns will become with American women. Watteau bandeaux hats are very much in fashion!

Beauty Talks

By

MARJORIE DUNCAN

Famous Beauty Expert

It Is Smart to Be Healthy

TIME was when women were pale and wan, when it was fashionable to be frail and delicate, to swoon at the slightest pretext and wilt at will. Where women gathered there was much talk of "operations" and one was a lady to the extent that she was frail and ill.

What changes evolution has wrought. Today's "lady" is treated less like a china doll and more like a human being. Not her frailty but her strength wins her the admiration of the once stronger sex.

She knows enough about anatomy, about her own body, to make her interested in the rules governing its health.

She realizes that she must spend part of her day outdoors, that fresh air and sunshine are sure-fire enemies of many toxic poisons, that deep breathing develops the lungs, that exercising stimulates the circulation, and that a fresh supply of blood means more energy and strength. She delights in being able to do things—in competing with boys and men in outdoor sports—working less for and more with them in business—meeting them on a footing of equality.

She knows her diet, too—our modern version of "lady." Foods are well balanced. All the pretty-pretty, whipped-cream desserts physicians warn against are cut down—not completely eliminated, you understand, because we do need some sweets; but not too much. And meat and eggs—excess proteins—are also cut down. There's no overeating in general, and in these foods in particular. And for balance fresh fruits and vegetables—raw apples, celery, cabbage, lettuce and the like. Plenty of roughage, too—cereals and such. Teeth are stronger for thorough chewing and right diet, and the entire alimentary canal functions properly.

Water—between meals—eight glasses daily—means less waste materials and poisons in the systems—poisonous accumulations are flushed out of the system, the digestive tract is kept clear.

The daughter of the day sleeps "like a top"—restlessness, nervousness are not known to her. And every dawn there's a new supply of energy to face an active, healthy day with.

There's been much talk about sacrificing femininity with the acquisition of all this buoyant health. Humbug! One can be lovely, feminine, gracious and graceful and healthy without. Not one iota less the perfect lady.

Sun Squinting Causes Wrinkles

A GREAT many people do a lot of sun-staring during the summer only to find that a network of wrinkles is the price one usually has to pay for the privilege. Squinting is a very definite cause of wrinkles. People who squint ordinarily should have their eyes examined by a specialist and remedial measures taken. But sun squinting is something we all do.

One way to avoid squinting is to wear sun glasses or sun shades. And a very sure way to avoid lines and wrinkles is via the good old-fashioned and old-reliable "ounce of prevention."

Every woman over twenty should use a wrinkle oil during the summer months. Even if there isn't the slightest trace of a line or a crow's-foot around your eyes, if the skin is so soft and satin-smooth as it was when you were as many months old as you have years to your credit, include a good wrinkle oil in your treatment at least three times a week. It should only be left on lines or wrinkles from twenty to forty minutes. Then followed by a good skinfood.

Because of the astringent action of the oil, it is best to use it after coming in from outdoors. And before going outdoors the preparations you use to prevent sunburn are also excellent as protective measures against lines and wrinkles.

If your skin is oily or inclined to be quite moist during the summer months, use a protective lotion. This will give your skin a lovely and cooling finish, keep powder smoothly clinging and act as a barrier against the burning and blistering rays of the sun. If your skin is dry, use a finishing cream or a special sunproofing oil. Pat and blend the cream or oil over face and neck until it is almost absorbed by the skin. Then follow with a dusting and blending of powder.

Take these important, protective measures during the summer months and at the end of the summer you will have a two-fold cause for rejoicing. First—there will be nary a wrinkle to mar your youthful loveliness. Second, your skin will not be dull, heavy, weatherbeaten or coarsened, and you will not need a complicated program of corrective treatments.

The Mumbles

The tourist in Wales should not fail to pay a visit to the Mumbles, an ever-attractive resort for Welsh, English and Americans, says a traveler. Nestling beneath a bold cliff of limestone, it has a war-battered castle, a sturdy church tower typical of the minor fortresses of this Gower country, a lighthouse redolent with tales of heroism and romance. A road cut through the cliff enables you by gentle ascent to reach the extreme point of the headland and enter Bracelet bay, one of the prettiest of Welsh coast resorts.

Brazil Well Described as "World in Itself"

Brazil has features of distinctive interest both in the universe in general and to ourselves in particular. Kipling once said that the region over which the benevolent and bewhiskered Dom Pedro II ruled, "is a world in itself." Nor did he overshoot the mark.

With an area of 3,275,610 square miles, Brazil is greater in extent than the United States, excluding Alaska and the insular possessions. Some of the states are larger than the largest European countries. Isaac F. Marcasson writes, in the Saturday Evening Post: "Amazonas, for example, is five times the size of Great Britain, while Matto Grosso could cover all France twice."

Putting it in another way, Brazil is bigger than the whole European continent, not counting a part of Russia, and is the fifth country anywhere in geographical scope.

The average man thinks of Brazil in terms of Rio de Janeiro, loveliest of all harbors—it lives up to the advertisement—and his cup of breakfast coffee. The republic accounts for nearly 70 per cent of the total coffee supply. But Brazil is much more. To no land has nature been more generous in the bestowal of her rich gifts of raw material.

An observer has stated that if a deluge should again inundate this world, sparing only Brazil and the United States, the two countries could still carry on their lives and industries with one supplementing the other.

Brazil could supply rubber, sugar, coffee, rice, bananas, meat, cacao, iron ore, manganese and timber, especially mahogany, while we could contribute wheat, corn, copper, cotton, fruit, manufactured articles of all kinds and capital. Practically the only essentials lacking would be tin and platinum.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is limited, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

Marriage Easy in Poland

Young lovers in parts of Poland have adopted a motto of "marriage without priest, incense or vodka." The new ceremony consists merely of the swearing of an "oath" before a local Communist worker, who then declares the marriage valid. An Ukrainian newspaper of communistic tendencies publishes the names of those thus united.

Conversationalist

"That man prides himself on being a conversationalist."
"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "He's never so happy as when he makes a string of people miss their trains while he monopolizes the bureau of Information."

Mother of 7—Still Young

THE woman who gives her organs the right stimulant need not worry about growing old. Her system doesn't stagnate; her face doesn't age. She has the health and "pep" that come from a lively liver and strong, active bowels.

When you're sluggish and the system needs help, don't take a lot of "patent medicines." There's a famous doctor's prescription for just such cases, and every druggist keeps this standard preparation. It is made from fresh laxative herbs, activeenna, and pure pepsin. Just ask for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. Take a little every day or so, until every organ in your body feels the big improvement.

The next time you have a bilious headache, or feel all bound-up, take this delicious syrup instead of the usual cathartic. You'll be rid of all that poisonous waste, and you haven't weakened the bowels. You'll have a better appetite, and feel better in every way. The constant use of cathartics is often the cause of a sallow complexion and lines in the face. And so unnecessary!

Would you like to break yourself of the cathartic habit? At the same time building health and vigor that protects you from frequent sick spells, headaches, and colic? Get a big bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin today. Use often enough to avoid those attacks of constipation. When you feel weak and run-down or a coated tongue or bad breath warns you the bowels need to be stimulated. Give it to children instead of strong laxatives that sap their strength. It isn't expensive.

FOR WINTER SPORTS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here is a practical winter sports suit in blue corduroy. The long fitted Russian blouse, buttoned chin, high, is being featured among fashions at the Lake Placid Olympics. The practical zipper fastening means labor saving for cold fingers. A lamb's-wool lining defies zero weather.

Flag Scarfs

Very new indeed and very smart are the huge square scarfs of chiffon wool made of different colored squares put together so that they resemble signal flags. There are belts to match. They are grand to wear with fur coats.

GO TO BUTTERFLIES FOR SPRING COLORS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

If you would like to know what some of the colors are that will find themselves in conspicuous seats of approval for the spring style shows, take your little net and chase a few butterflies. If it is too cold now then go to the nearest museum, or library, and study the gorgeous colored plates and specimens.

They carry many future fashion secrets on their delicate wings, not alone for colors, but for the graceful, neat-of-their-slender-bodies; and the exquisite combinations of shades and nuances that they seem to have captured while hovering over myriads of brilliant flowers.

Watch the hues carefully and note the delicacy of change in the tones that you find. These same elusive shades will be found in your spring frocks. There will be hints of periwinkle, of dusty sapphires, and of amethysts behind blue mists.

Pick Winter Additions

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

With Thought of Spring Styles are all set for spring. Winter is not over, however, and certain reparations and additions to the winter wardrobe may be necessary before real spring clothes can be worn without menace of pneumonia and other evils. By taking the first spring fashions into account, however, it is possible to choose anything new in your winter outfit so it can be worn this spring, as well.

If you just must have a new frock to wear under your winter coat, then select something you can wear later without that coat. A dress that has the earmarks of a coat dress is the thing to choose, and see to it that this dress is in a springlike color and fabric. Silk serge that looks like wool, or wool serge that looks more like satin would be the smartest choice for such a frock.

Mrs. Struggins has recently returned to her home with her daughter, Mrs. Vance Smith.

We are all looking forward to Mr. Judson's next visit. This excellent and worthy minister brings us a message of good Christian advice. It surely helps the tourist of a village to have a religious service, even if only once a month.

The new swings and teeters are being installed on the school grounds. This will add much to the healthy pleasure of the pupils and help Oscura to rank in the A-1 class.

Old Firearm Lavishly Set Off With Pictures

The lavishment with which many ancient firearms were adorned is shown by a recent acquisition of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, says an article in the New York Times magazine. This is a gun with a stock carved by a German artist, Johann Michael Mascher, who flourished at the end of the Seventeenth century.

The stock is of walnut, inset with a series of ivory plaques. On it Mascher carved a number of spirited hunting scenes and one showing the birth of Venus—apparently a favorite subject with him, for it appears on four other guns in foreign collections. Next to the lock a stag and a wild ass are shown, each with a grotesque bird's head in front of it.

Point Made by Homely Lawyer Was "Clincher"

They still tell stories about old Dave Nicholson, the colorful New England lawyer. He had the reputation of being one of the homeliest as well as most able lawyers in Vermont and in this particular case, a youthful opponent, lacking legal arguments, tried to sway the jury to his side by making remarks about Dave's personal appearance. Then Dave got up for the last word.

Indian Rice Cultivation

When the early fur traders extended their activities northward through the then little-known Louisiana territory and entered the Sioux, the Chippewa and the Cree nations, they found the Indians using wild rice in much the same manner as the coastal and southern Indians used maize, writes Lawrence W. Great Fun Is Dead!

Any member of the old school who strolled through Ellenberger woods on a recent Saturday afternoon will not wonder that the sunshine of that magic grove inspired a literary aunt to recite to her six-year-old niece the Greek myth of Apollo and Daphne.

Only a member of the old school will appreciate the aunt's chagrin when, in the height of her enthusiasm, grasping a beech, portraying in turn the attitude of the sun god and the growth of leaves, roots, branches and roots from Daphne's fair body, she was inspired by the most disgusted of looks from the tiny philosopher and the impatient remark: "Now, Aunt Bess, make up a good one!"—Indianapolis News.

Orchestra Music

An orchestra is a band of performers on various instruments, including especially those of the viol class, adapted for rendering the larger kinds of concerted music, as symphonies, overtures, etc., and the accompaniments of operas, oratorios, masses, and the like, or for playing the slightest concerted music for theatrical performances, dances, etc. It is commonly distinguished from the military or street band of players on wind instruments, and from a group of solo players for rendering chamber music.

"Movie of a Movie"

It is not possible, so far as we can find out, actually to make a real movie of another movie. Light would be necessary and consequently the movie being photographed would not be visible and could not register on the film. The experts say that, of course, through double exposure the effect of a movie of a movie could and has been given or that the same thing might be done through pen or wash drawings. In other words, an advanced form of animated cartoons.—Washington Star.

Carrizozo Hi School Notes

(By H. S. Reporter)

Last Wednesday we were favored by an address by Mr. Demeter of Albuquerque. Mr. Demeter made a very interesting talk and one which should be of help to all of us should we ever care to take out Life Insurance. Although Mr. Demeter is at present in the Life Insurance business, he did not make a sales talk but merely talked to us on Life Insurance as a business, outlining the different classes of companies and which of these were best to patronize. Also, he stated the tremendous value of Life Insurance to the general public.

Another very interesting phase of Mr. Demeter's talk was his very interesting and clear-out description of the Public School System of Europe. Being foreign born and educated, he was able to give us a very intimate view of their systems from his personal experience. There is really a very pronounced contrast between their system and ours.

And now we have had three games. On the sixth came that long anticipated game with Capitán. The boys and girls went up full of hope, and confidence but came back rather crestfallen. The girls lost their first game to Capitán with a score of 19-39. Too bad, but this is the first loss of a game by the girls this year, and I think we should give the little girls a great big hand.

The boys held 'em to a 9-9 tie in the third quarter, but then that old jinx which seems to be following them around stepped in, and Capitán ran the score up to 18, while the best our boys could do was one more point making it 10-18 for Capitán.

On the twelfth Vaughn boys and girls came down here, and our girls gave them a good slam, 14-49 for Carrizozo. In the boys game, the final score was 8-13 for Vaughn, with the best playing of the season so far behind our boys.

The next night, the 13th, the boys went to Alamo and played Pularosa, only to be defeated again with a score of 4-22. Come on, you Grizzlies, let's go! As Pularosa has no girls' team the girls did not go. And by the way, the girls are finding a hard time to fill their schedule so if you hear of any girls' team with an open date, pass the news on toward old C. H. S.

The next game is with Mountainair on Saturday, the 20th. This should be a good game, and let's come out and stand behind the boys. Maybe all they need is a little support from the rear. Mountainair has no girls' team either, so the boys only will play.

On Friday, the 19th, you are all invited to attend a free George Washington entertainment at the Auditorium and also to attend the meeting of the Parent Teachers Association afterward. You are all welcome.

The District Music Meet has been definitely awarded to Carrizozo, and will be held in the early part of April.

Also the County Declamation and Essay Contest will be held here on March 18. We will have entries in this contest and have high hopes of doing big things then.

On Thursday we had the town radio expert here with a very interesting and enlightening talk on Radio in Relation to 20th Century Civilization.

On Tuesday this week, we were glad to have Mr. A. L. Burke, local editor, address us on Lincoln's life. This was a very interesting speech in which Mr. Burke brought to light facts which we would probably never have heard elsewhere. Thank you, Mr. Burke, and remember that you are always welcome here.

Remember the American Legion Dance, Monday night at the Community Hall, Washington's Birthday, February 22nd. Everybody invited to attend.

Falcon Brown

Friends are grieved to learn of the death of Falcon Brown which occurred at the Johnson hospital this morning at 7 o'clock. Mr. Brown became ill a week ago today, pneumonia developed and he was removed to the Johnson hospital last Tuesday, but the trouble was too deep-seated to be successfully combated.

Falcon Brown was born in McClean county, Kentucky, 47 years ago. He came to Carrizozo about nine years ago, since which time he has been employed at the City garage. Mr. Brown was a quiet, unassuming Christian gentleman, well liked by every one. He was a kind and indulgent husband and father, a good neighbor and friend.

Besides his wife and four small children, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. S. J. Riddle of Shawnee, Okla.; three sisters, Mrs. Bigelow of this place, Mrs. J. C. Beatty of California, and Mrs. Coleman of Kentucky; four brothers, B. T., A. L., Fletcher and Newton Brown of Oklahoma.

The remains will be taken to his former home, Lucy, New Mexico, for interment, where the funeral services will be held. Rev. L. D. Jordan, pastor of the local Baptist church of which he was a member, will accompany the family and conduct the services.

The Nation's Greatest Son

This portrait of George Washington, highly prized possession of Marshall Selberg, Chicago, is claimed by him to have been painted by Gilbert Stuart. It bears the year 1794, and is signed by the master in the conspicuous way. Some have thought that the earliest Stuart Washington was painted in 1786, but such is not the case, for John Jay gave Gilbert Stuart a letter to Washington which Stuart delivered while congress was in session in the year 1784 and Stuart refers to this in correspondence with relatives. It was then that one of the three sittings occurred. There were many portraits of George Washington painted by Gilbert Stuart, but there were only three sittings, so that many of the portraits were copied by Stuart from either completed pictures or sketches. It was, of course, not entirely unusual for great painters to make preliminary sketches of their subjects, although they did on many occasions entirely complete their paintings at sittings. This latter procedure was followed, it is thought, by Gilbert Stuart in this portrait. If this is so, it stands unique among the "Stuart Washingtons." According to a volume in Mr. Selberg's library, Gilbert Stuart admired this picture so much that he retained it himself and would not part with it for many years thereafter. When it landed in the hands of Congressman Gilbert of western New York he loved it so much that he asked that it might be the last object for him to gaze upon in this life.

Washington, Man, Patriot, Statesman

COURAGE, physical and moral, was a part of his nature; and, whether in battle or in the midst of popular excitement, he was fearless of danger and regardless of consequences to himself. (Sparks, Jared—The Life of George Washington, p. 453.)

At all times and amid all conditions Washington rang true to the note of a splendid manhood, hypocrisy and a trafficking in expedients for popular applause no more match with his life than the crime of murder. He had little of the capitulating style of speech or manner but regard for the nobility of his character, rather than any rhetorical art or element of personal address on his part, kept wavering lines from retreat in battle and from mutiny amid privation and suffering to which our neglect had exposed the soldiers of the Revolution. (Underwood, Oscar—The Career and the Words of Washington, p. 12.) (State Society of Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Pa., February 22, 1912.)

His Personal Triumph
Then came the horrors of Valley Forge and of the winters in Morris county. These were the days when desertions were many and enlistments were few, when Washington dared not give open battle and there was hardly left to him a place for retreat. Then came the Conway conspiracy, and the ambition of Gates, and the cowardice of Lee and the treason of Arnold, and a series of persecutions so petty, so bitter, so malignant, that it is amazing how Washington survived them. Then, too, came defeats like that at Brandywine, and battles of uncertain meaning like that at Monmouth.

It is easy for us as we read these events in the light of the facts to keep up our courage and understand the triumph that finally came, but it was a very different thing for Washington. Congress was weak, meddlesome and vacillating. The soldiers were raw, undisciplined and sometimes mutinous. There were jealousies and libels and forgeries and slanders almost beyond our present ability to believe. When I recall Washington's calmness in the midst of exasperating annoyances, his unselfish loyalty when surrounded by enmity and jealousy and hatred, his faith that put courage into the hearts of men who marched hungry and left bloody footprints in the snows when I remember how after eight years of this and more he emerged victorious, as calm in victory as he had been serene in defeat, I do not wonder that Frederick the Great is said to have pronounced George Washington's campaign in the Jerseys the most brilliant in military annals. (Barton, William E.—George Washington.)

Shared Man's Sufferings
Washington did not leave his men and go home to live in luxury, but stayed to endure privation with them. Only he who reads his letters written during these trying times can appreciate his troubles and anxieties. (McLaughlin, Andrew C.—History of the American Nation, p. 163.)

Behold him (George Washington) in 1776 taking leave of his family and his home, and hastening to the relief of a distant and then unknown part of America. See him transforming and cementing a band of rustics into an army. Follow him to the field of battle, and see him frate in danger and last out of it. Go with him into Valley Forge, and see him sharing the hunger, the cold, the fatigue of every soldier in the camp. Was there ever such fortitude in adversity? Was there ever such moderation in the hour of victory? (McMaster, John H.—History of the People of the United States, Vol. I, p. 365.)

Washington's Victory
An only one point did there seem to be unanimitly and accord. That was that the bogged prosecution of the war and the ultimate victory must be credited to George Washington. Others had fought valiantly and endured hardships and fatigues and gnawing suspense, but without him, who never wavered, they could not have gone on. (Thayer, William H.—George Washington, p. 124.)

The American revolution from a military point of view was a group of little wars rather than a single war. The one integrating force was the person of the great commander, but George Washington held the army and the cause together by his exhaustless patience and courage rather than by any comprehensive plan of war. (Sparks, David S.—History of the American People, p. 190.)

To Washington no duty, however obscure, was unimportant, and no deviation from duty, however trifling, was possible. (Honor, George F.—Washington, p. 31.) (Chicago, February 23, 1903.)
Put Patriotism First
Washington was an incorruptible patriot. He was one of the very rich men who was not a Tory. A very large proportion of men of large means aided with the British crown, nor must we too hastily condemn them. But Washington, who had more to lose than almost any other man in the thirteen colonies, was not blinded by vested interests, nor bound to conservative action by his wealth and station.

For the sake of the country which he loved he suffered innumerable hardships, was stung by ingratitude and hurt by slander, but he stood firm in his loyalty to the cause he had espoused, and was faithful to the end. (Barton, William E.—George Washington.)

There is a life that is worth living now, as it was worth living in the former days, and that is the honest life, the useful life, the unselfish life, cleansed by devotion to an ideal. There is a battle that is worth fighting now, as it was worth fighting then, and that is the battle for justice and equality. To make our city and our state free in fact as well as in name; to break the rings that strangle real liberty, and to keep them broken; to cleanse, so far as in our power lies, the foundations of our national life from political, commercial, and social corruption; to teach our sons and daughters, by precept and example, the honor of serving such a country as America—that is work worthy of the finest manhood and womanhood. . . . The well educated are those who see deepest into the meaning and the necessity of that work. Nor shall their labor be for naught, nor the reward of their sacrifice fall them. For high in the firmament of human destiny are set the stars of faith in mankind, and unselfish courage, and loyalty to the ideal; and while they shine, the Americanism of Washington and the men who stood with him shall never, never die. (Van Dyke, Henry—The Americanism of Washington, pp. 70-72.)

Man of Firm Friendships
The chief thought that runs through all the sayings is to practice self-control, and no man ever displayed that most difficult of virtues to such a degree as George Washington. (Lodge, Henry C.—George Washington (American Statesman), Vol. I, p. 61.)
Solitude, indeed, is the last quality that an intelligent student of his career would ascribe to him. Dignified and reserved he was, undoubtedly; and as this manner was natural to him, he won more true friends by using it than if he had disguised himself in a forced familiarity and worn his heart upon his sleeve. But from first to last he was a man who did his work in the bonds of companionship, who trusted his comrades in the great enterprise even though they were not his intimates, and who neither sought nor occupied a lonely eminence of unshared glory. (Van Dyke, Henry—The Americanism of Washington, pp. 43.)
His passions were strong, and sometimes they broke out with vehemence, but he had the power of checking them in an instant. Perhaps self-control was the most remarkable trait of his character. It was in part the effect of his discipline; yet he seems by nature to have possessed the power to a degree which has been denied to other men. (Sparks, Jared—The Life of George Washington, p. 400.)

Fight Fruit Pests in Winter Months

Oil Sprays Effective When Leaves Are Off.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service.
Eight years of spraying of dormant fruit trees under a wide range of weather conditions indicates that there is comparatively little danger of injury to fully dormant trees from a properly prepared oil-emulsion or miscible oil at the recommended strength.

Oil sprays are particularly effective in the control of the San Jose scale, as well as of several other important fruit pests, and are now in common use for the spraying of fruit trees when the leaves are off, says a bulletin on dormant tree spraying, published by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The publication, Farmers' Bulletin 1076-F, "Lubricating-Oil Sprays for Use on Dormant Fruit Trees," gives directions for preparing several oil sprays and lists nine kinds of insects and related creatures against which the oil-spray method is especially effective. These include the San Jose scale, scurfy scale, leucophaea-scale, cottony peach scale, European red mite and clover mite, fruit-tree leaf roller, pear psylla, and apple aphids.

Value of Concentrate in Hogs' Ration Shows

Pork costs go up when the proteolytic concentrate in the ration runs too low, says a writer in Capper's Farmer. Eric Peterson, Pembina county, North Dakota, raised 61 pigs last summer on cracked wheat, barley, oats, alfalfa pasture and a protein concentrate. Eager to know what the shotes were doing, he weighed them each month and computed the cost of the gain. The cost ranged from $3.50 to $6 a hundred for the various months. The highest cost, $6, was for the month in which harvest fell. At that time he ran short of concentrate, and thought he did not have time to get more. As a result gains were slow, and the amount of gain for each hundred pounds of gain was increased. The following month, when the pigs had plenty of concentrate, gains were speeded up, and the cost dropped to $4.50 a hundred.

Despite the slump the pigs averaged 204 pounds each at 180 days. They brought $1,100. Production cost was about $400.

Roughage for Cows

Roughage is the foundation of any dairy cow ration. Without a good home-grown roughage, a profitable dairy enterprise is almost impossible. Grain or concentrate feed is purchased more or less on nearly all farms to enable the cows to pay more for the home-grown feeds.

There is a vast difference in the value of roughages. The high-protein legume hays reduce the cost of the grain ration needed to maintain production. Alfalfa hay, oats, barley and corn make an excellent ration for cows giving up to 45 pounds of butterfat a month. Above that, some high-protein supplement, such as linseed meal, cottonseed meal or gluten meal, is necessary.

The low-protein roughages like timothy, wild hay, fodder and oat straw need a considerable percentage of the high protein feeds in addition to the cheap grains.

Feeding for Profit

The "art" of feeding may not be entirely a misnomer. Keith Kenagy, Page county, Iowa, says it plays an important part in getting profits from a dairy herd.

Mr. Kenagy had been feeding cows a variety of feeds to maintain production through winter. In April he kept his cows off pasture and bought more hay. May 1 he turned the cows to pasture. Tests showed production increased in May from 24.1 pounds a cow to 37.5 pounds.

The extra ton or two of hay Mr. Kenagy bought in April enabled the pasture to get a good start so the cows got the full benefit of the change to green succulent feed.—Capper's Farmer.

Around the Farm

The acreage of winter wheat sown this fall, according to estimates, is about 10.5 per cent less than in 1930 and 11 per cent under the average for the last three years.

Colony or individual hoghouses are easy and inexpensive to build. They are warmer and more sanitary than most central farrowing houses. If such houses are not available, they can be built during the winter so they will be ready for farrowing time.

The farm well should be located on high ground, 800 feet from toilet and manure pile, and properly developed.

With fertile soil at least 20 bushels of potato seed may be used profitably to the acre, using one and one-half ounce pieces spaced 10 to 11 inches in the row.
Plant alfalfa seeds of a bright olive-green color nearly always germinate well. Shrivelled seeds or those of a brownish color usually germinate poorly.

The Men on the Dead Man's Chest

By CLIFFORD RAYMOND

(WNU Service)

FROM THE BEGINNING

During a "holdup" at the Dutch Mill, a fashionable Chicago night club, a patron later identified as Dunn Clayton is shot and killed. Lieutenant of Police Stanton, investigating questions of voluntary witness, calling himself "Buck" Trembly. Stanton had known Clayton in France during the World war. In Clayton's pocket he had found a note signed "Malsie" making an appointment with the dead man at the Dutch Mill. Stanton is inclined to suspect Trembly of the murder. At a Wisconsin winter camp a boisterous crowd is gathered, including Preston Brown. An apparent stranger arrives. Later, two men, driving, appear to be deeply, though secretly, interested in the party. The stranger leaves the camp in his car, after Preston Brown has been accidentally killed. They follow the stranger's car, passing it. A viaduct, being repaired, is out, and one of the two men removes the red lanterns, danger signals. The stranger, in his car, goes over the embankment. He is dead when found. The lanterns are replaced. In Brown's papers Clayton's name is found.

The local correspondent of the Chicago papers had read of that murder and knew of Clayton. The adventurous association of names gave an additional news value to the two accidents, both being regarded as such. The Tribune and the Herald Examiner published the story, the Tribune on the first page (the death on the two-bladed knife was unusual enough for that), and Stanton, reading his newspaper at his desk the morning of October 5, was stopped by it. He took up his telephone and called the state's attorney.

"Read your newspaper this morning?" he asked.

"Not thoroughly," said Corvaleski.

"Why?"

"There's something which might interest you. A man named Brown had some bad luck in a Wisconsin camp two days ago."

"Yes, and what was it and what of it?"

"He was killed in a wrestling bout."

"But I'm still asking you what of it?"

"He was impaled on the blade of a hunting-knife stuck in the wall."

"A man can't be impaled on a blade that's buried in a wall."

"He can if the knife has a blade opening from each end of the handle."

"All right, and then what's on your mind?"

"It's interesting, mister. The man who threw Brown against the knife and killed him was killed himself a few hours later in a road accident. He ran off at an unfinished bridge. And two more things. Brown and Dunn Clayton must have known each other. Dunn's name was found in Brown's belongings, but the other man was a stranger, and they don't know his name. Something to think about, Mr. Corvaleski."

"Do you think there is a continuity? Anything more than the incident of Clayton's name?" the state's attorney asked after a pause.

"There's not much to guess on," said the lieutenant, "but I'd like to see the third man. I've an irresistible hunch it's Buck Trembly. Even if it's fantastic, that's the feeling I have."

"Go on up there, lieutenant," said the state's attorney. "I'll assign you and put in a request for you. Stop in here for your expense money. Will you do that? If you are right, if it is Trembly, your assumptions regarding the Dutch Mill will be conclusive with me. I'll not indict the men taken at the Mill for murder."

"I'll go," said the lieutenant. "I've got a natural curiosity to see that third man."

Stanton took the early morning train and arrived in Eagle River the next afternoon. He made the identification of Trembly but did not disclose it. He was driven to Lac Vieux, to the Menominee reservation and to the place of the bridge construction and returned on the fourth day.

"It having been proved that it was Trembly who had thrown Brown on the blade of the hunting knife and who himself had been killed on the road, several things became apparent to the lieutenant and the state's attorney as they considered what Stanton had learned in Vilas county.

First: if they accepted natural and even insistent conclusions it was Trembly who had killed Dunn.

Second: if that conclusion were admitted, Illinois Justice must be satisfied, even if not served, providing no accomplices in the Dutch Mill murder were to be looked for. The deaths of Brown and of Trembly were of Wisconsin jurisdiction.

Third: although a continuity of purpose and event was at least plausible no motive was discovered which could explain the three crimes, if they were related to one another and had a common origin. Malsie, whose letter had made her identity important in the Dutch Mill murder, might possibly compute of matrimony, eroticism, irregularity and multiple murder of a peculiar craftiness and remorselessness, but such an assumption was a strain on the probable meaning of facts as known.

Fourth: if the death at the bridge opening had not been caused by ignorance of the road conditions or by careless driving or both but had the intent to kill back of it and contributing to it or causing it, then there still remained an unknown person or unknown persons who had contrived or committed murder. The purpose was as hidden as the person or persons themselves.

The state's attorney was not so willing as the lieutenant to dismiss all consideration of accident "even in Brown's death and less so in Trembly's."

"Doubt dismisses itself," said the lieutenant. "Trembly went from the Dutch Mill to Lac Vieux. The Menominee says he saw as the two men met each other in the lodge that they were not strangers, although they introduced themselves to each other. This boy may be a liar, but he tells an intelligent story. Something about all these men, Clayton, Trembly and Brown, makes them want to meet as strangers. My guess is that they are watching for breaks and considering their alibis. They're not gunning for one another in anger. Brown was surprised by Trembly, just as Clayton was, but it is my guess that both knew what it was all about as soon as the other man appeared. The trouble is that we don't.

"The hold-up was the break of luck for Trembly in the Dutch Mill. The knife throwing was his break in the Little Butte lodge. The Menominee boy started that. He said the men were wrestling and roughing to show how good they were, and he thought he'd change the game. Maybe he had more in mind, but Trembly couldn't have foreseen that."

"Yet he had a peculiar knife which could be used as he used it," said the state's attorney.

"I know it," said the lieutenant. "It's peculiar. It's startling, but I didn't invent it. Haven't I heard that each crime has its own peculiarity? Why did it know the day Buck called at Little Butte? If it had been the weather of two weeks before or of the next day the gang wouldn't have been drinking and roughing in the lodge. Why was there a hold-up at the Dutch Mill when Buck was hunting Dunn? Why did Buck's killers know and remember that the bridge was out on his road route, and why did Buck, if he knew it, forget it? He had the knife. It was a beauty, a teakwood handle, silver mounted with four-inch blades of Spanish steel. A Spanish shield in silver was set in the handle. An unusual knife. I'd like to know where he got it."

"The lieutenant forgot to say, if he had observed, that the handle also had inset in silver of exquisite and minute lettering the words: 'Español a sangre, a carne, a fuego, a acero'—the cry of the troops in the Spanish Fury of the massacre and sack of Antwerp. Trembly had stolen it in Peru when he was there on the Turner gold hunt."

"My guess is," continued the lieutenant, "that Trembly expected to think quickly whenever he saw an opening and that he did when the Menominee gave him one. It might have failed. Then he would have tried something else. He had nothing to lose. Assume that it was the same when Trembly was killed. Whoever took the lights away from the bridge approach couldn't know that Buck would be sent off the road. There was a chance he would be. If he got across the detour safely something would have happened to him farther along the road. He might have been crowded off into a ditch. He might have forced the other fellows to some crude work. They might have had to shoot him, probably safe enough on those stretches of road in October."

"You're sure the lanterns were taken away and replaced?"

"There's perfect evidence of that. A farmer came along just after dusk and was a-mad because they weren't on the road. He thought the construction concern had neglected the job. He knew the road and didn't need the lights to warn him, but when he got home he decided something had to be done about it. He drove back intending to go to the construction camp and raise hell, but the lanterns were there."

"They might have been late in setting them out."

"The man who was responsible for them swears they were in place long before dark, and there's other evidence that they were. Somebody took those lights away, and Trembly went through the barricade, off the road and into the thoroughfare. You have to accept it as intended, and that leaves us a killer still at large and a story we don't know."

"It's Wisconsin jurisdiction," said the state's attorney.

"In a county which has no way of getting at non-resident 'hoods' who haven't left a trace. You couldn't expect the sheriff there or the state's attorney even to try it."

"What do you want done?"

"I'm curious now," said the lieutenant. "I'm not a detective, but I'm curious. I'd like to know this story. The detective bureau will have to take it. They'll get into Brown's history and Trembly's. Anything that comes of that will come of it. Suppose you try what comes of some publicity. This is a newspaper story which hasn't been really told. Three murders, all with unusual angles, unknown motives and some killers still at large. If you extend yourself a bit it will go all over the country. It's making a cast blindly but you may hook something. And it won't be bad publicity for our young prosecutor."

"I'll think it over," said the state's attorney.

"Don't kid me, mister," said the lieutenant. "I'll read it to-morrow."

"Preston Brown was the son of a Tennessee Baptist clergyman. At an early age it was evident that he was not disposed to satisfy his father's desire to have him in the ministry. He could sing mountain songs and play the guitar. He joined a troupe in time to avoid appearance for questioning in a paternity case. He had measurable luck as a card sharper and later made a respectable success as a bucket shop broker. He married the widow of A. Peyton-Sharpfield. She divorced him in Paris in 1924 and afterward was killed by Apaches who robbed her of her pearls. It was obvious to the surety that a Parisian gang had been guilty, but no one was apprehended. The stolen necklace, however, was a paste imitation of Mrs. Peyton-Sharpfield-Brown's pearls which were never found after her death but which, it was later known, she was not wearing when she was murdered. She was wearing the paste. The story might have been interesting and Mr. Brown might have told it. He was destitute when his wife divorced him, but her death marked the beginning of a solvency which endured for the remainder of his life. It was beyond doubt that the necklace for which the Apaches murdered her was synthetic, but the genuine pearls were very valuable."

CHAPTER IV

Mr. Whittlesex Pops In and Out

John Whittlesex in Dorset, Vt., reading his New York paper at home, the early morning of October 12, laid it on his knee and closed his eyes. Little furrows came in his forehead. He opened his eyes, picked up his paper and reread the story which had caused him to close his eyes and think.

"Damn it," he said. "Martha," he called to his wife, who was in the kitchen, "you remember the names of those fellows in that story I told you about the will I wouldn't draw up some years ago? Wasn't one of them Clayton? Dunn Clayton? You remember me telling you?"

Mrs. Whittlesex called back that she did not remember.

"You know what I mean?"

Yes, Mrs. Whittlesex knew what he meant, but she did not remember any of the names.

"I can't blame you for that," said John. "I can't remember them myself. No one ought to have a memory like mine. Damn it, yet I'm pretty near sure. Anyway, I'm going to call up Matilda Field. What's her number, Martha?"

"Four-six-eight, two rings."

"Sure, I remember that."

He went into the hallway where the telephone was fixed to the wall and in calling asked for three rings. When there was a response he said:

"Matilda? Oh, Mrs. Bartlett, sorry to disturb you. Yes, I wanted Matilda Field. Oh, she's here! Yes, two rings. Sorry, Mrs. Bartlett, I'll blame it on Central, but I certainly did ask for three rings."

He replaced the receiver for a moment, put it again to his ear and waited.

"Central," he said, "I'll bet the best way is for you to give me Miss Matilda Field's number. I'll be obliged to you. Thank you. Matilda, is that you? Matilda, do you remember the names in that will we didn't draw? You know what I mean. Wasn't one of them Dunn Clayton?"

You said you kept your notes. Will you look them up and give me the names? I'll be obliged, Matilda. Call me up, after supper."

"What's plaguing you, John?" Mrs. Whittlesex asked as he came and stood in the kitchen doorway.

"Plaguing is the right word, Martha. If Matilda telephones me what I think she may be going to write to the state's attorney of Cook county in Chicago and tell him something that may interest him. Of course, it was passes as a memory for me has done me another of its tricks, I won't be writing him anything."

October 16 the state's attorney in Chicago had a letter from Dorset:

"My dear Sir, I am a practicing attorney in Dorset in the state of Vermont. Five years ago I was asked to draw a will. A number of circumstances have impressed it on me. It was Thanksgiving day. My wife had been called out of town by her mother's illness and that knocked our Thanksgiving dinner into Christmas. The house was too forlorn to be abided. Consequently I was at my office. I should inject here that this letter relates to your Dunn Clayton murder and others and not to my Thanksgiving tribulations five years ago. Nevertheless, I must say that my resentment of the small steak and German fried potatoes I ate that day is permanent.

"The man who visited me in my office that afternoon was casually known by me. He had bought an extensive and lovely tract of land near here the year before. Some touch of eccentricity attached to him. I do not recall why.

"When I asked him, after his knocking at my door, why he had looked for a Vermont small-town attorney at his office on Thanksgiving day he said he understood that I was an eccentric. This on top of the small steak and almost cold potatoes was almost too much. I hardly refrained from asking him to close my door and be on the other side of it at the time. I am the soul of conventionality, almost its victim. The man was big, not fat but hard. He had a smile you might like or not. I couldn't tell whether I did or didn't, and can't now.

"We finally got down to business. I mean there was some preliminary chaff in which he laughed a great deal and asked me if I believed in a benevolent God, and if I did how could I prove him up. He asked me what I thought of hate as an ennobling emotion, as a cherished possession. I said that he might persuade me of it if he remained a half hour. He laughed at that.

"He then explained what he wanted. It was a will to be drawn, signed, witnessed, attested, etc. It was necessary to take notes and I was fortunate in persuading Miss Matilda Field, a very good diction taker, to come over with her notebook. Then we got down to cases.

"That man's name was Thomas J. Turner. He started out when Miss Field was ready to take him, by asking me if I ever had been an accessory to murder before the fact. Well, you're going to be, he said. I saw Matilda give him a look. Here in Vermont we have a different fund of humor. I was glad then—but didn't care afterward—that she didn't hear him talking about a benevolent God. Vermont doesn't ask anything to be benevolent. That would cheat us of opportunity and character.

"This Mr. Turner began to dictate. He provided a trust fund for his only child, a son, then seventeen years old and in a preparatory school in Westchester county, New York. The boy's education was to be provided, and when he had been graduated from a college to be selected by himself he was to receive five thousand dollars a year. When he married this was to be increased by one thousand dollars a year and if there were children there should be another one thousand dollars a year for each child.

"The boy, Mr. Turner said, would not need and should not have any more. He will select a small and probably obscure college," said the father. "He will select and marry a girl of no ambition or get up. They will have insignificant children. From my point of view such people are of no consequence. The world doesn't need them, but after all, Mr. Whittlesex, I am the parent of one of them and I acknowledge the responsibilities. I have no feeling of disappointment in my son. If he had been of a different character I would manage his future otherwise."

"He said that his son indicated too much conscience and no hardness. Hardness, he said, was essential. The trust fund as stipulated would provide for him adequately and satisfactorily. I may be wrong, Mr. Whittlesex," he said, "to do anything at all for him. It is a social wrong to preserve and propagate weakness." He hit the table with his fist, and then he laughed. Part of the time he was beyond my analysis. Miss Field made to put her book away, but I stopped her with a look. I don't mean that I am a lion-tamer or that Miss Field is a Sweet Alice Ben Bolt to tremble at a frown, but one Vermont under-stands another, although none of us would understand Mr. Turner.

America's Trust in God Perpetuated on Coins

The religious motto "In God We Trust" first appeared on the coins of the country in 1864. It was the result of the increased religious fervor brought on by the Civil war. The then secretary of the treasury, S. P. Chase, received many appeals from people all over the country urging that the Dally be recognized on the American coins in a like manner as those of foreign nations.

Secretary Chase wrote to the director of the mint at Philadelphia, November 20, 1861, stating that "the nation can be strong except in the strength of God, or safe except in his defense. The trust of our people in God should be declared on our national coins. You will cause a device to be prepared without unnecessary delay with a motto expressing in the fewest words possible this national recognition."

Several forms were suggested. Some of the coins prepared in 1862 bore the motto "God Our Trust" and some coined in 1863 were marked "God and

Our Country." The familiar form of the motto was decided upon and the two-cent piece, which appeared in 1864 were the first to carry it. The motto is not used on all coins.

Subject of Static Technicians are examining many steps that make up the sound process with the object of overcoming that disturbing scratch and static which often accompany voice reproduction. Without laying claim to supernatural powers, the engineers are sure that such noises will soon cease to be troublesome factors. Nothing radical may be expected in sound films five years hence; but a small invention here, an innovation there, will so improve recording and reproduction that the ultimate goal of perfection will be approached.

MIND READER ASKS CHANCE TO SOLVE MURDER MYSTERY

Will Forfeit $1,000 in Cash to Charity in Event of His Failure.

Preston, Ont.—"Prof." Henry Gladstone, widely known western Canada criminologist and "thinking machine," has offered the Ontario authorities a wager of $1,000 that he can solve the mystery of the death of Mike Wasalewicz here last July.

Gladstone, who claims to be a direct descendant of William Ewart Gladstone, "Great Commoner" of England, and who is credited with bripping at least one slayer to justice in western Canada by his mind-reading ability, has asked the authorities to guarantee him a fee of $1,000 if he solves the Wasalewicz case; and has agreed to collect no fee and to forfeit $1,000 to charity if he fails.

Outline of His Theory. Wasalewicz was found dead in his shanty here, after it had been swept by fire three months ago. At first he was believed to have been burned to death, but further investigation revealed that he had received a fractured skull and other injuries, and gave rise to a theory that he had been murdered, and that the fire was an attempt to conceal the crime.

"Prof." Gladstone has already submitted to the authorities an outline of his theory on the case. He states that Wasalewicz was badly beaten in a fight and was afterwards carried, in a dying condition, to his home by two men, whose identity he is confident that he can establish. The authorities have given no intimation thus far that his offer will be accepted.

Gladstone sprang into prominence in western Canada more than a year ago when he solved the seven-year-old mystery of the fate of James ("Scotty") MacLachlan, farmer, near Beechy, Saskatchewan.

Solved Death Mystery.

At a mind-reading demonstration, Gladstone informed one member of his audience that he was thinking of a murder. The man in question admitted that he had been pondering the fate of MacLachlan and that he had had suspicions of murder.

Gladstone, who insisted that he had never heard of the case before, asked police to be allowed to investigate it. He visited MacLachlan's former farm and declared that he "sensed" a body there. The farm had been thoroughly searched several times before, but at Gladstone's instructions the police dug again and recovered the missing man's body.

John Schumaker, a former partner of MacLachlan, was thereupon arrested. He denied all knowledge of the matter, but Gladstone, professing to read his mind, told of a violent quarrel between the two, culminating in MacLachlan's death. Schumaker thereupon broke down and confessed that he had killed his partner in the manner described by the psychologist.

Pleading self-defense, Schumaker was acquitted of murder, but was sentenced to seven years in prison for manslaughter.

Girl, Aged 7, Charged With Theft of U. S. Mail

Merced, Calif.—The full force of the government of the United States appeared plied against Amalia Villabolo, seven years old, and the frail little girl was in jail, weeping.

No formal charge was against her name, but federal officers who placed her in jail four days ago accused her of the theft of mail, a felony.

Amalia was so frightened when officers took her away from her father and mother and her two brothers and sisters, that she was unable to talk. Amalia is accused of going through post office lock boxes and removing the contents.

Frequently she found colored slips of paper in envelopes, Amalia said she cut out paper dolls from them.

Post office investigators said many of the dolls were cut from checks.

Shop Manager Was "Out"; Caged in a Rear Room

Detroit.—Something in the demeanor of the strange grocery store "clerk" aroused Mrs. Mattie Scripps' suspicions.

"I want to see the manager," she said.

She was told the manager was "out." "Then," she said, "I'll wait." While she waited the "clerk" served seven other customers. Then he left to "find the manager."

It was Mrs. Scripps, however, who found the manager—bound and gagged in a rear room.
