McGugin Discusses Silver Question Abroad

Mr. Speaker, the report of the United States Tariff Commission on foreign exchange of December 31, 1931, brings most clearly before the country the embarrassed situation in which the United States finds itself today, on account of the use of the silver standard to other countries. This report shows that the exchange value of money in the other countries that operate on the silver basis with American gold has depreciated from 28 to 37 per cent since September 21, 1931. The depreciation for the following countries is: England, 37 per cent; Denmark, 30 per cent; Norway, 31 per cent; Sweden, 30 per cent; Finland, 28 per cent; Japan, 32 per cent.

The exchange value of the money of some of the other countries that are yet on the gold standard has depreciated, as follows: Canada, 18 per cent; Mexico, 20 per cent; Argentina, 40 per cent.

This means that American agriculture and American industry can not deal with these countries unless we decrease the price of our products from 20 to 37 cents on the dollar or these countries pay a premium from 20 to 37 cents on the dollar for everything which they purchase from this country. It is obvious that these countries can not and will not pay the premium. In that event we must either depreciate our prices on everything which we export from 20 to 37 cents on the dollar or do without the business. As a matter of fact, we have lost our foreign trade of manufactured articles with these countries. They have not paid the premium and American factories have not been willing to take the depreciation.

The countries whose exchange has not depreciated in recent months are Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, and Switzerland. Those are about the only countries left with whom the United States can do business. We can not do a great deal of business with Belgium and Czechoslovakia because they do not have the money to buy and they are not natural customers of the United States. We can not do much business with France due to French tariff barriers. We can not do any business with Germany because she has no money. About the only way we can do business with Germany is to lend her money to buy our products. Germany will never pay us back the money, so in the end, instead of selling something, we have given it away. Switzerland is not much of a customer for anyone. As a result there is practically no place left on earth for America to trade.

During the last three years we have lost 68 per cent of our foreign trade. The most abrupt decline in our foreign trade has been since July 1, 1931. We have lost 17 per cent of it during that period of time. It is obvious that the greater part of this tremendous loss during the last six months is because the rest of the world is dealing in silver, a cheap money, and we are dealing with gold, a high-priced money. To-day, 90 per cent of the governments of the world are without a gold standard or the possibility of obtaining gold for circulation. Since we demand payment for our commodities in gold, how are 90 per cent of the countries of the world going to buy and trade with the United States

Teachers' Convention

The Lincoln County Teachers' Association met in convention at Carrizozo, January 22-23 1932. The convention was, without doubt, one of the most successful ever held in Lincoln county. The addresses were unusual in not only their practicality, but also in their educational and inspirational values. Much of the success of the convention was undoubtedly due to the efforts of Mrs. Alice W. Boyd, retiring president, who secured many state speakers of note, including: Dr. J. L. Zimmerman, President of State University.

Dr. S. P. Nanninga, President of New Mexico State Teachers' Association.

Dr. H. L. Kent, President of A. & M. College.

Dr. A. O. Bowden, President State Teachers' College.

Dr. H. C. Gossard, President N. M. Normal University.

Mrs. Louise Coe, State H. S. Supervisor.

Mrs. Georgia Lyak, State Superintendent Public Instruction.

Mrs. Grace Corrigan, State Rural School Supervisor.

Mr. Paul Fickinger, Secretary of New Mexico Teachers' Association.

Mr. R. P. Larkin, New Mexico Normal University.

Miss Marie A. Brunk, county Health Nurse, gave several addresses especially practical, helpful, and of great value to the teachers of this county.

A special feature was the banquet served Friday evening by the Home Economics class under the direction of Miss Dixie. Approximately sixty guests attended Mrs. Blaney, in her usual able manner, presided as mistress of ceremonies, and many responses were made by state and local speakers. Musical numbers added to the pleasure of the evening.

Saturday noon a very delightful luncheon was served in the Home Economics rooms by the members of the Methodist Missionary society.

The general convention sessions were well attended. The schools of the county contributed much to the success of the convention by furnishing appropriate music for the various sessions.

By popular vote several proposed constitutional amendments were adopted. Captain was selected as the meeting place for the next annual convention. The following officers were selected for the ensuing year:

President—Supt. D. U. Grace, Carrizozo.

Vice-President—Mr. Matson, Captain.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. Albert Moss, Lincoln.

The members of the association are looking forward to greater achievements with each successive year, and have implicit faith in the newly elected corps of efficient officers.

In this situation, the United States is not only losing its exports, but it is helpless in preserving its own markets from a flood of imports. —Rep. McGugin, Rep. Kan.

Benefit Entertainment

The second benefit entertainment given by the local Schools will be in charge of Hazel Melaas who will present:

"The Great Plummer Breach of Promise Case" and other added and interesting attractions at the

High School Auditorium

Feb. 13th at 8:00 p. m.

Miss Melaas needs no introduction to the people of Carrizozo. She has been with us five years and in that time she has been active in school and local affairs, being a member of the Carrizozo Woman's Club, The Woman's Missionary Society and the Music Study Club and participated actively in Sunday School and other Church affairs.

Miss Melaas graduated from the University of North Dakota, holds a B. A. degree and will receive her A. M. Degree from the University of New Mexico at the close of the summer session. She made Phi Beta Kappa, an honorary scholastic fraternity.

Oscura Items

Mr. Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. Nixon, Mrs. Moore and Jimmy Taylor attended the Basket ball game and dance at Carrizozo Saturday evening. All report an enjoyable time.

One of the many good things about Oscura is its nearness to the county seat. In a very short time the people of our place can arrive in town from the scattered village. Their many entertainments and social functions are attended by many of our people. Carrizozo always extends a welcoming hand to her smaller neighbors.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor returned to the I-X Tuesday after a pleasant trip to Roswell and vicinity.

Judge Crews motored to Carrizozo Wednesday taking the train from there to El Paso. There this fine elderly gentleman will visit his son and daughter. He will also visit the resting place of his beloved wife, according to his faithful monthly custom of depositing flowers upon Mrs. Crews' grave.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvo from the Oscura store motored to Carrizozo Saturday. They keep a good supply of commodities and also conduct an excellent restaurant. Mrs. George Dixon who had been attending the Teachers' convention in Carrizozo accompanied them home.

The following have recently enrolled with the P. T. A. of Oscura district No. 19: Mrs. Chas. Thornton; Mrs. Gladys Moore; Mrs. Vance Smith; and Mrs. Nixon. The P. T. A. is doing fine work.

Resolutions of Sympathy

Inasmuch as Miss Evelyn French, daughter of our County Superintendent, has been removed from among us by death, and inasmuch as we greatly miss her sweet-spirited and helpful cooperation and assistance, further, that our hearts are filled with sympathy for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French and her brother, Miller French;

Be it Resolved, That we express to them our heart-felt sympathy; and that this resolution be spread on the minutes of the Lincoln County Teachers' Association, and that copies be sent to Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French of Carrizozo, New Mexico; Mr. Miller French, of Juneau, Alaska, and to the editors of the Lincoln county papers.

Committee on Resolutions for the Lincoln County Teachers' Association. (Signed) J. Veri Grace, Helen M. Sears, Eva Rose.

The Methodist Church

Sixty-five in Sunday School last Sunday. That's quite a decrease in attendance, but there was quite a drop in temperature also. The coldest weather we have had in Carrizozo in a long, long time. But watch us climb up again. Over a hundred attended the young people's service Sunday evening. And it was a treat in music, song, tableaux and pageant presented by Mrs. T. A. Spencer's class. Lack of space here prevents giving the names of all that took part, but be assured that each one did his or her part well and we can look forward to many more special services from this class.

Donald Danforth now President of Purina Mills

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 22.—There was a stirring note of optimism for the American farmer in the words of Wm. H. Danforth today as he assumed the Chairmanship of the Board of Directors of the Purina Mills, after thirty-eight years of service as its President. He will be succeeded as President by his son, Donald Danforth. Mr. Lewis B. Stuart, formerly manager of the Kansas City plant, was elected Treasurer and will be brought into the Executive offices at St. Louis. These changes were made because of the enlarged program of activities in the agricultural field which requires more concentrated effort on the part of the executives of the Purina Mills.

"The American farmer is going through lean years," Chairman Danforth said today, "but confidence in the farmer is unshaken. What he produces are the very things that are basic and on which business and the world's commerce is built. Wheat, cotton, corn, beef, pork, milk, eggs and all those other farm products, although at a low price today, are the things that make life and make business. They are now coming back to their true value. In all my years of dealing with farm folks I have yet to see during any depression such splendid faith in the future as the farmers now have. Added to this is my positive conviction that business has not lost faith in them in any sense."

For almost four decades since he founded Purina Mills in 1894 Wm. H. Danforth has been close to the farmer and his problems. He has mixed a lot of living, a lot of hard work and thinking along farmers' lines into those

The Girl and The Statue.—A beautiful statue stood in the marketplace of an Italian city. It represented a Grecian maiden of beautiful face, graceful form, and noble expression. One day a ragged, unkempt, slovenly girl came face to face with the statue. She gazed at it in wonder and admiration. She seemed entranced by it. It stirred long dormant instincts within her. She said to herself: "I may be like that something within tells me so."

Moved by this new impulse, she went home and washed her face and combed her hair. Next day she went and gazed at the statue again, and received another inspiration, and she went home and washed and mended her tattered clothing. And thereafter she went every day to the marketplace and gazed at the statue of the Grecian maiden.

Day by day she changed. She straightened up her shoulders, her spine lost its curve, her form grew more and more graceful, her face became refined and radiant, till by and by she did indeed become like the statue of the Grecian maiden.

Thus do our ideals transform our lives. And if we take time every day to look upon the character of Jesus, we shall find ourselves imitating Him, assimilating his character, becoming more and more like him. Even so it is written in the Book: "We all with unguiled face beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord are transformed into the same image from glory to glory."

Mr. Danforth will remain active in his company and in those activities which have long been linked with his name, such as President of the American Youth Foundation, and the Danforth Foundation, which gives scholarships each year to outstanding junior students in Colleges of Agriculture in the United States and Canada. He will still retain a keen interest in writing. Among the volumes of his which already have been published are "Power", "Fight", "Action", "Russia Under the Hammer and Sickle", and more recently "I Dare You", being a challenge to young and old alike.

By WALTER TRUMBULL

Helen Worden, well-known newspaper woman, has a cat by the name of Arnold. Whether the animal was named for Benedict Arnold or Arnold Daly, I do not know, but at any rate it is a highly favored cat, which has long been treated like a king by members of the Worden family, which formerly resided on West Sixty-seventh street. Another resident of that street was and is William Beebe, the famous naturalist and fish man. Arnold, like other kings, grew tired of the cream and trapping of royalty and used to try to get away from it all. His method of egress was by the window. After some time spent in scaling life locusts, he would return in the same manner he had left. Now Sixty-seventh is a peculiar street. On the long block which runs west from Central park are some of the most attractive apartments in the city. Also in that block is one of the city's few remaining blacksmith shops and also a lumber yard and paint shop. In his wanderings, Arnold must have visited the latter because, on one occasion, he returned covered with light gray paint. Now, Arnold, in his natural state, is a black cat. When, therefore, a member of the Worden family saw a gray animal crouched on the window sill, the natural thing to do was to throw a pitcher of water at it. Indignant at such treatment and at not being recognized in his own domain, Arnold departed and was not seen for three days. By this time some of the paint had worn off.

Being treated royally, Arnold was scarcely to blame for getting the idea that anything he desired was his right of birth. It happened that Mr. Beebe, either on his trips to the Galapagos Islands, his descents to the bottom of the sea or on some of his other wanderings, had collected a number of rare fish with weird eyes, fins and tails. These he had in small aquariums in his apartment. In a highly mysterious manner, these fish began to disappear. The story goes that one day Mr. Beebe happened to see Arnold put a paw in his mouth and dislodge a fish bone from his throat. There was a bit of controversy over the matter, which may be the reason that Arnold and the Wordens moved to Park avenue.

A woman I once knew had a cat. It was not a royal beast, such as Arnold. Its pedigree might have read, Stray out of Alley. This cat actually fell into a pot of red paint and became entirely content. The woman who had taken it in had one of the kindest hearts in the world and decided that something must be done. She had heard of human beings who had gilded themselves for some reason, dying, because all their pores were clogged. The only remedy she could think of was to try to remove the paint by turpentine. This took off not only the paint, but the hair. I never shall forget my first sight of that cat after the operation. A cat without its hair is the most startling sight I have ever seen. With a round head, thin body, and long legs it looks like some creature out of a nightmare. I never knew whether that cat became normal again or not.

Thomas Mitchell has a dog named Jenn. Mr. Mitchell, who is the author of such plays as "Little Accident" and "Cloudy with Showers," claims that Jenn is descended from the bloodhounds with which he once played in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and also that he cannot write unless the dog sits beside him. He says that when he gets stuck for a third act, the dog crawls around under the furniture and noses up the rugs until it discovers an idea. Phil Dunning, hearing of the dog's ability, borrowed it while he was writing his latest play.

How It Started

By Jean Newton

WHY IS IT "BOULEVARD"?

THE English word "boulevard" which we know to be practically synonymous with "avenue" is a corruption of the German "Hollwerk," which is a cognate of our "bulwark," and originally indicated the site of ancient fortifications.

A story in a nutshell—but what, you may reasonably inquire, have fortifications to with "avenue"? Therein lies the story of the age-long press of humans to escape their confines—the eternal struggle for elbow-room.

Most ancient fortifications took the form of a wall which encircled the city. As the population grew, the overflow settled beyond the walls, which had to be removed, leaving a lane through a crowded quarter, this lane subsequently being known as a boulevard—corruption of "hollwerk" or foundation.

"He Is Above-Board"

A PERSON known to be straightforward, who is "honest, trustworthy and does things without concealment—such a person is one who enjoys the reputation of being above-board.

A colorful word is this, though not upon the surface. For investigation reveals that "above-board" comes to us directly from the gaming table.

Literally, "above-board" means "over the table." It was originally applied to describe so-called "honest" gamblers who were known never to cheat; who handled all of their cards above the table.

There, it was presumed, no opportunity was afforded for the changing of cards or for any other form of deception.

Medford, Mass.—A certain local dog doesn't cry over spilled milk. It was sunning itself on a curbstone when a motor truck appeared, John Amlaw, driver, swerved to avoid the dog and wrecked the truck, spilling 800 quarts of milk and cream on the street.

After drinking its fill of milk, the dog, unharmed, departed.

Cut the raisins into quarters and place in a warm place to rise overnight. ### Island Has Seen Conquerors Come and Go.

If newspapers had been invented sixteen centuries before Christ, Cyprus would have made the front page as often as any other 3,850 square miles of territory on the face of the earth. The Old Testament refers to it as Chittim. Copper, which takes its name from the Greek appellation for the island, and timber, with which its now denuded mountain slopes once were covered, attracted Greeks and Phoenicians to Cyprus in the Iron age. The island formed a bridge across which the Mycenaean civilization communicated with Syria and Egypt. Assyrians, Egyptians and Persians successively dominated it between the Eighth and Sixth centuries before the Christian era. Alexander the Great won it. After his death it became again a valued possession of Egypt. Cato brought it under the aegis of Rome. Christianity used it in spreading to the West.

The Jews on Cyprus rose under Trajan and slaughtered 24,000 of its people. When Rome fell, Cyprus went to the Byzantine emperors. Arabs and Greeks battled for and successfully dominated it for two centuries. Comnenus set up an independent sovereignty on it in 1187; but in 1191 Richard the Lionhearted ousted him and installed Guy de Lusignan as king, whose dynasty lasted for 300 years. Venice seized it in 1489 and held it for 80 years. Venice seized it in 1489 and held it for 80 years. The Turks conquered Cyprus in 1570, and possessed it until Great Britain seized it during the World war, although the island had been under Great Britain's suzerainty, with the sultan's sovereignty formally acknowledged, since 1878. An island with a history like that, whose soil has run so often red with its own and others' blood, ought to be familiar with implications of insurrection.

A queer mixture these Cypriotes. Anciently they carried the worship of Aphrodite, who rose from the seafoam to their shore, to a degree of sensuality that made the name Cyprian symbolic. That was a long time ago. The Ephraim goddess has long since sown their groves; but the spirit of protest against subjection to things they do not like seems to have survived among them as strong as ever.—Detroit Free Press.

Developing Powers of

Observation in Child

Teach a child to be observant of everything around him, and you give him one of the soundest starts in life, for observations are very fairly wasted.

The Japanese are a race who appreciate to the full the value of observation, and their babies are taught it unconsciously almost from their cradles. They learn it as a game. The Japanese mother will give her child a tray of objects to look at for a few minutes, then the tray is taken away and the child tells her all about its contents. It is quite a thrilling game when here are lots of things to remember, and children take to it very quickly.

To be able to observe swiftly and accurately will often help one very substantially in life. To take in one's surroundings quickly, and to be able to sum up characters fairly accurately, are two very useful assets and each derived to a certain extent from observation.

When there are decisions to be made, it is possibly the man or woman—who has been taught to observe from childhood who stands the best chance of making happy ones.

When one is old he can get a kick out of annexing $10,000 and out of very little else.

to tell You . . . . . You've Lost Your Oil!

Two cars raced along the highway east of Abilene, Texas. The second driver finally overtook the leader and signaled to stop.

"I've been chasing you twelve miles to tell you you've lost your oil," he called to J. W. Bell. Mr. Bell found that a rock in the road had knocked a hole in the crankcase, allowing the Conoco Germ Processed Oil to drain out.

But examination of the motor showed no damage done. The "Hidden Quart" had protected the motor!

Only Conoco Germ Processed Oil offers the extra protection of the "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and never drains away.

Only Germ Processed Oil actually penetrates and combines with metal surfaces.

You need that extra protection during the starting period, when almost half your motor wear occurs. Oils not Germ Processed drain away, leaving parts unprotected. Germ Processed Oil stays on the job to cut down starting wear, giving your motor longer life, with fewer repair bills. It is the safest, surest lubrication you can buy.

Change to Germ Processed Oil now at the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle.

We neither encourage "dry crankcase" experiments nor guarantee success under all conditions. But unsolicited letters from motorists, now in our files, tell of this and hundreds of other runs with empty crankcases but without damage.

Did Veterans Cause Present Treasury Deficit?

One who holds a high position with our Government has made the charge that the present deficit in the Treasury has been caused by loans made to veterans on their adjusted-service certificates. The charge is untrue. Two funds have been utilized in making this loans. Eight hundred and forty million dollars has been loaned from the adjusted-service certificate fund, which is a reserve fund built up over a period of years from annual appropriations by congress. The remainder has been loaned from the Government life-insurance fund, which was created by insurance premiums paid by veterans on their Government-life insurance. Not one penny has been loaned by the Treasury of the United States on these certificates. Therefore, not one penny of the deficit has been caused by such loans. —Rep Patman (D.m.) Texas.

English Church Beacon Founded in Gratitude

In the porch of old Chelsea church, London, England, stands a bell that is never rung, and high up in the steeple the clock shines like a lighted beacon for travelers by road and river. And thereby hangs a tale. On a winter's evening in 1670, the king's cofferer came from a rout at Whitehall in all his bravery of lace and velvet, and hailed a boat to take him to his house at Chelsea. It was cold and the heavy mist over the river was developing into one of London's yellow fogs. The silence and darkness got on the cofferer's nerves. His dainty boots of soft tanned leather were soaking wet, and the boat was rapidly filling with cold and very dirty water; and still they did not reach the opposite bank. Then the crazy vessel sank and left boatman and passenger struggling in the stream. Just as the king's cofferer thought all was over, the clock of Chelsea struck the hour, and, swimming in the direction of the sound, he foundered into the thick black mud of Chelsea's foreshore. The king's cofferer had a conscience; also he thought something was due to the power whose clock had struck so conveniently in the nick of time. So he invested in a great bell, and directed that it should be hung in the church tower and rung every night from November to March, between the hours of 9 p. m. and 6 a. m. And so it was until 1822, when the tower became unsafe, and the money provided for the bell's upkeep was used for turning the church clock into a shining beacon for travelers.

Union of Pawnbrokers Commemorated in Flag

Five long-dead pawnbrokers are commemorated by the flag that the duchy of Cornwall, of which the prince of Wales is duke, had made for itself. The design of this flag, which flies over the duchy offices in London; is 15 yellow balls arranged in triangular form on a black ground. This is the coat of arms of the duchy, which came into being thus: In the days of the early Plantagenets the pawnbrokers of Cornwall were among the most enterprising and prosperous merchants in all England. Five of these "uncles," whose names appear on a manuscript in the British Museum, formed an association to finance—the crown jewels being pledged—a war which King John had planned against France. For a trademark, the five pawnbrokers combined the balls of their five shops and adorned the symbol with the motto "One and All," to indicate that no business could be arranged unless all of them were present.—New York Times Magazine.

Lord Nelson's Charmer

Lady (Emma) Hamilton, contrary to the impression gathered by popular stories, was not totally repudiated by her husband, Sir William Hamilton, on account of her liaison with Lord Nelson, by whom she had a daughter in 1801. On the death of her husband, says the Washington Star, she received a life rent of £800 and the furniture of the home in Piccadilly, London. She then lived with Nelson openly at his home in Merton, which he left her at his death with an annuity of £500, as well as the control of the £4,000 he left to their daughter Horatio. Her gambling and extravagance, however, left her poor, and in 1813 she was put in prison for debt, remaining one year. She then went to Calais to escape creditors, where she died January 15, 1815.

"Nine Points of the Law"

The old saying that "Possession is nine points of the law" is merely a saying, and does not refer to any actual principle of law. It means simply that in a dispute over real estate, actual possession is an advantage equal to a great majority of the legal points involved; and by extension it figuratively signifies the enormous advantage those in power or possession have over those resisting them. The number nine is not particularly significant in this connection. In fact, the original phrase was "possession is eleven points of the law." Nine and eleven are favorite numbers in folklore and popular phrases and sayings.

The Real Spaniard

He who wishes to become acquainted with the genuine Spaniard, must seek him not in seaports and large towns, but in lone and remote villages, like those of the Sagra. There he will find all that gravity of deportment and civility of disposition which Cervantes is said to have sneered away; and there he will hear in everyday conversation those grandiose expressions which, when met with in the romances of chivalry, are scoffed at as ridiculous exaggerations.—George Borrow in "The Bible in Spain."

Yawn is Therapeutic

In sleep people do not yawn, because their neck muscles are relaxed and the body is in a horizontal position, permitting the heart to pump to one part as easily as another. Every animal, bird and most reptiles yawn. The insects probably never yawn, because nature removes fatigue toxins in some other manner. The yawn is probably one of the oldest of nature's simple therapeutics, and we have yawned all the way up the evolutionary family tree.

The Daisy.

The daisy is also called the Marguerite. Daisy is a corruption of "Mary's Eye," or small copy of the sun. There are many varieties of the flower, some of them known as trembling star, govan, little Easter flower, a thousand charms, meadow pearl, goose flower, Mary's flower, and measure-of-love. This flower was the favorite of the poet Chaucer. It is the emblem of innocence, was used as a symbol of the purity and innocence of the infant Christ and was consecrated to babies. Our field daisy was brought to us from central Germany, being carried here during the Revolution in fodder to feed the English horses of General Burgoyne's army. It first bloomed here on the battlefield of Saratoga.

Case in Point.

A well-known author was being put through a searching interrogation by a rather garrulous acquaintance. "Don't you ever feel that eventually a day will come when you will have written yourself out?" continued his persecutor. "Have you ever thought that, when that happens, you will have to find another means of earning your living?" The author was at a loss for a minute or two. "But, my dear lady," he said, "such an idea is fallacious. In your own case, you have been talking for forty years and haven't talked yourself out, have you?"

The Men on the Dead Man's Chest

By CLIFFORD RAYMOND

CHAPTER I

Dead Man Number One

Dunn Clayton was shot September 26, 1928, at midnight, as he sat at a table in the Dutch Mill dance restaurant on the near North side of Chicago. It was Saturday night, with its usual filling of the Mill's space, but because of unusual circumstances, of which the murderer evidently took quick advantage, only one person was found who could or would say he had seen anything of the man who fired the shot.

It was assumed that whatever its intention or motive, the murder stood alone, which it did not. It was not strange, to people who knew Clayton, that his life should end with a pistol shot; but there was no apparent reason for the place or the time of it, and such an explanation as arose from the circumstances and the coincident events could not be sufficient or satisfactory.

The Dutch Mill was a place of expensive amusement, but it and its kind were too garish to have been in Clayton's habit for at least a year. In post-meridian life he had settled down to an exemplary respectability which was impressive against the turbulent background of his past. He never had been known to have much money until this apparent retirement when he indicated by his way of living the use of a considerable income. (The relation of this to his death became apparent later.)

He was a powerful, handsome man of resolute and reserved appearance. He had chosen a good tailor and a good hotel. He had been seen occasionally at the opera, only at the best prize fights and of a Sunday now and then, when it was pleasant walking on the Drive, at the Fourth Presbyterian church.

If he was with a woman companion at the theater she was in effect irreplaceable. Clayton was a person of complete respectability even if it were now, as were his spats.

As the story of his death at the Dutch Mill was pieced together on the spot and at the time, it appeared that three men had entered the dance restaurant shortly before midnight and had been given a table at the wall, one by the waiters' door to the kitchen and, being in a poor position, not acceptable to anyone who could avoid taking it.

At an interval between dances, just as the dancers had returned to their tables and were again seated, there was a loud command for every one to remain quiet. The three men had arisen from their obscure table and with pistols in their hands were moving to the center of the floor.

"All of you put your arms on the table," said the spokesman. "Both hands. Don't move them. Don't anyone be dumb or fresh and no one will be hurt."

All of the guests and employees questioned later by the police said that their first thought was of enforcement officers. Even that was disturbing. Evidences of liquor law violation were on nearly every table. This conjecture was immediately proved wrong. The shot which killed Clayton was fired, not by one of the three men who had the center of the scene, but by a fourth man who had been almost entirely unobserved. It was probable that no one had seen him.

The diversion was startling and its effects instantaneous. There were screams, the breaking down of a tension, a shifting of many bodies involuntarily, and the men with pistols, as yet unexplained, broke in a run for an exit.

A police squad car was passing as three men without overcoats or hats ran from the restaurant door to an automobile in which a fourth man sat at the wheel. The engine was running, but the police were able to stop the car and hold all four men.

One of them excitedly tried to explain that they were getting away from a fight in the restaurant dance hall—an explanation not without plausibility—but it might not have been satisfactory even if at that moment the door of the Dutch Mill had not become the vent for people in hysterical flight. Women without their wraps and men without their overcoats or hats rushed forth, as if pepped out by pressure, ran a few feet or a half block and then stood uncertainly, conscious of needing the possessions they had left behind. Also waiters and other house employees in their work clothes were soon outside shouting. The police took the four men back into the Dutch Mill.

The floor was in a disorder of overturned tables and chairs, evidence of the fight which had emptied the room. The body of the dead man had slumped out of the chair, and at first sight there was nothing visible except the litter of the rush to the outside.

"Honest, Chief," said one of the prisoners to the lieutenant of police who was holding him, "we didn't do it." "You didn't do what?" the lieutenant asked.

"We didn't kill him. We didn't do it." "What's he talking about?" the lieutenant asked of the head waiter who had come up.

"I think there may be a dead man over here," said the head waiter, walking toward the wall.

There the body was found. "But we didn't fire a shot, Chief. Cross my heart, we hadn't even loaded our guns. We weren't going to have any such thing as this. Please look at our guns."

"Where are their guns?" the lieutenant asked.

"They threw them away as they ran," said a sergeant. "We've picked some of them up."

"Get them all, Mike," said the lieutenant, "and call the wagon."

"Honest to G—d, Chief," said the bandit-spoken man.

"Take those bums outside," said the lieutenant, "and straighten out this body so I can look it over."

The frightened guests were returning to claim their checked clothing.

"Let them all in," said the lieutenant, "but don't let any of them out again. Go out on the street and gather them in. When the wagon comes take those four bums to the station. Let me see those guns, Mike. How many you got?"

"Five," said the sergeant.

"Honest to G—d, Chief."

"Shut up," said the lieutenant, "Mike, take a piece of paper. Take that menu card. Write this down: Colt .38, number 489001, not loaded and not fired; Smith and Wesson .22, number 184850, not loaded and not fired; Colt .38, number 208807, not loaded and not fired; Colt .45, number 384503, not loaded and not fired; Smith and Wesson .32, number 140234, not loaded and not fired. Now give me that card. And don't plant anything in these' guns."

"Chief, honest to G—d, you're a square guy."

"Take those bums away," said the lieutenant, "and get me. Don't try to plant this case. I like it as it is. And

"You saw some of this, didn't you?" he asked the door man. "You know, this shooting."

"I didn't see no shooting."

"No, of course not. But you saw the people running out. You saw us take those fellows. Did you see them when they drove up at the curb over there?"

"Yes. I saw that. That's all I saw. I didn't see nothing."

"Wait a minute. How many men got out?"

"Three."

"Sure there wasn't four?"

"I'm not going to be sure about anything."

"Don't get this wrong," said the lieutenant in a friendly way. "Nothing's going to happen to you. You'll not be brought into it. I just wanted to know if the fourth man who was at the wheel of the car got out or if he didn't get out. Now, do you know?"

"I'd say he didn't."

"You think he sat there?"

"That's what I'd have to say."

"That's what I think," said the lieutenant. "All right, boy."

He recrossed the street to the small candy store and found a more assured witness in a white-jacketed young man at the pop-corn popper. He saw the car when it came to the curb. Three men got out of it. The fourth remained in the driver's seat. He was there when the three came rushing out. The young man was positive. The fourth man had not been out of the driver's seat.

The lieutenant went to the cigar store. The tobaccoist had seen the car as it was driven to the curb, but that was all. He did not know what its occupant had done. He had been behind his counter. The driver could have been in or out. The lieutenant re-entered the dance restaurant where the guests who had been at first startled and then panic-stricken were now only nervous, indignant, or anxious to get away from a scene which was unpleasant in fact for some and in possibility for others.

"I'm sorry to keep you, ladies," the lieutenant said as the crowd turned toward him. "Not so sorry for you men, but no one will be hurt. The quicker I get answers to some questions the sooner we'll all be out of here. No one will be held now as a witness and probably none of you will be bothered later. The man who has been killed sat at this table."

He walked to it, and touched it.

"Now, if anyone who saw the man sitting here and who saw the man who shot him will tell me what he saw

There were five guns found on the premises and examined by the lieutenant. Later he examined the pistol of Buck Trembly. The five, as the hold-up men had said, had not been loaded. Trembly's was loaded but it had not been fired. The lieutenant, it will be observed later, did not assure himself that Trembly did not have or had not had two pistols. He did assume that two of the robbers might have had more than one gun. As none had been loaded it was of small importance. Irresistible deductions soon forced the frightened hold-up men completely out of the picture of the crime rationally contemplated.

The gun which was used was not found. That left it for ever undetermined whether Trembly committed the murder or procured the commission of it.

The lieutenant went out, passing indifferently the excited groups of guests who, returning for their wraps, found that they were detained. From the sidewalk he looked to see what places of business were open. There was a drug store on one corner and a tobacco store on another. In the middle of the block there was a moving picture theater with a tall negro doorman. In the same building with the dance restaurant was a small candy shop with a pop-corn popper by its one large window.

Across the street the late movie crowd was coming out. The lieutenant crossed over.

"You saw some of this, didn't you?" he asked the door man. "You know, this shooting."

"I didn't see no shooting."

"No, of course not. But you saw the people running out. You saw us take those fellows. Did you see them when they drove up at the curb over there?"

"Yes. I saw that. That's all I saw. I didn't see nothing."

"Wait a minute. How many men got out?"

The man who has been killed sat at this table."

He walked to it, and touched it.

"Now, if anyone who saw the man sitting here and who saw the man who shot him will tell me what he saw you may all go. If no one will volunteer this I'll call the waiters and find out who was seated near here. You know," he said, "for a while you haven't any rights because you can't get any lawyers and because you are all reasonably suspect. Some one who was in this room shot the man. I don't think he is here now, but he was here, he or she, and you're here. Any takers?"

The people shifted position and looked about them. There was a moment of indecision broken by a man who stepped forward.

"I saw everything you want to know," he said. "I mean as to what happened. I don't know who shot him or why, but I saw how and when it was done. I saw it so distinctly that it was impressive."

The volunteer was of robust middle age. His black hair was graying at the temples, but he was apparently in the prime of vigor and muscularity. He was well dressed and entirely self-possessed.

"Anyone with you?" the lieutenant asked, looking him up and down.

"No," he said, "and that is one reason I saw everything. Another is that I sat at the next table, between him and the door. Then, also, I was interested in him. It occurred to me that he was in the same boat I was, and that amused me. So I was observing him and speculating."

The lieutenant beckoned to the sergeant.

"Take the names and addresses of these people and then release them. Take all the license numbers before you let their cars go. We may want some of these people to check up with. But, mister, I'll take a chance with you. The rest of you may go, but remember if one of you tries to cheat it may be unpleasant. Play fair, and I will. A place like this doesn't have so many innocent people in it night by night, but ordinarily that's not my business. Play fair, and you'll probably never hear from me again. Try to cheat me, and your husband or your wife or your cousins and aunts may learn of it. Let them go, Mike. Mister, will you come into the office here with me? I'm taking a chance on you, as you see."

"It's all right with me—let's see—I don't recognize police insignia—how should I say—those scared boys called you 'chief'?"

"I'm Lieutenant Stanton, and I don't mind telling you the only reason I was in that squad car was because it was running home. And I'm glad I was. What the squad would have done with this case makes me uneasy to think of it. But that's nothing you're much interested in, mister."

"But I am interested in it," said the man as they went into the restaurant office.

The manager of the Dutch Mill came to the door.

"We'll not disturb anything here," said Lieutenant Stanton, "and we're not enforcement officers. I'll want you later. Sitck around but get out and close that door. Now, mister, why are you interested in the way I handle a police job?"

"Because I saw that you knew those poor amateurs did not do it."

"That's no compliment," said Stanton. "Any copper with any sense would have seen in a minute that they hadn't done it."

"But a lot of coppers would have wanted to solve a case right there."

"You're right, mister, but I don't. Now, mister, what's your name, if you don't mind?"

"Arthur Trembly," said the man.

It was curious that Trembly gave his name. Stanton later could not explain it. It might have been due to his confidence in himself, to some egotistic gratification in seeming to assist the police in their inquiry into a murder he had committed or procured—which of the two never was discovered—to indifference, carelessness or natural assurance. Whatever influenced him it was a part of the impulse or design which led him to volunteer information when he could have remained unnoticed among the other detained patrons. It was cool behavior and inasmuch as fate had him on another string it had no consequence for him.

"Resident of Chicago?" Stanton asked.

"Been almost everywhere in the world, but this is my first time in Chicago."

"Well, Arthur," said the lieutenant, "go ahead and justify me in letting all those other fellows go and relying on you."

"When people call me Arthur," said Trembly, "they usually call me Buck. And if they don't know me well enough to call me Buck, they don't know me well enough to call me Arthur."

"Buck, I may never know you well enough to call you what you ought to be called, but I'll light a cigar and listen to you for a while to find out for myself whether again I've been a d—n fool or an intelligent guardian of the public peace. You know what I want to know, Buck. Shoot it."

Trembly said he had particularly noticed Clayton, if that was his name, because both were waiting for a person or persons to join them. For most people, particularly in such a place as the Dutch Mill with its high note of merry-making, it was an uneasy posture to maintain confidently. Its embarrassment or boredom protruded. It made the person self-conscious as a rule. Trembly had been waiting for a man and two women and had been given a table for four.

How Old?

He doesn't look a day over fifty. And feels like forty. At the age of 62.

That's the happy state of health and pep a man enjoys when he gives his vital organs a little stimulant!

When your system is stagnant and you feel sluggish, headachy, half-alive—don't waste money on "tonics" or "regulators" or similar patent medicines. Stimulate the liver and bowels. Use a famous physician's prescription every drug store keeps. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

This appetizing syrup is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. One dose will clear up almost any case of headachy, biliousness, constipation. But if you want to keep in fine shape, feel fit the year 'round, take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin every few days. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better in every way. You will never need to take another laxative.

Give the children a little of this delicious syrup two or three times a week. A gentle, natural stimulant that makes them eat and keeps the bowels from clogging. And saves them from so many sick spells and colds.

Have a sound stomach, active liver and strong bowel muscles that expel every bit of waste and poison every day! Just keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin on hand; take a stimulating spoonful every now and then. See if you don't feel new vigor in every way. Syrup pepsin isn't expensive.

Familiar With Economy of Every Other Kind

An irate citizen stormed the citadel of the Los Angeles board of supervisors the other day. He was all burnt up because some project or other that he had in mind had not by ordinance, and Supervisor Shaw had immediately adopted as a counter-measure, by the victim of his plait.

Mr. Shaw took the trouble to point out some of the weaknesses in the visitor's scheme, cited a number of points which made it utterly impracticable and finally remarked:

"Of course, we always appreciate public interest such as you have displayed, but I believe you will be a greater help to us if you would study a little political economy."

"Well," sighed the visitor, "I suppose I might as well; I've studied every other kind."

Harold's Mother Knew Answer

"Yes, sir, I am certainly proud of my little boy," says Mrs. H. M. Smith, 421 Topeka Ave., Topeka, Kansas. "He's five and weighs fifty-seven pounds. He's the picture of health as you can see, and I feel like he'll always be that way as long as I can get California Fig Syrup. I have used it with him ever since he was a year old. I knew what to give him for his colds and his feverish, upset spells, because Mother used California Fig Syrup with all of us as children. I have used it freely with my boy and he loves it. It always fixes him up, quick."

In many homes, like this, the third and fourth generations are using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup because it has never failed to do what is expected of it. Nothing so quickly and thoroughly purges a child's system of the souring waste which keeps him cross, feverish, headachy, bilious, half-atek, with coated tongue, bad breath and no appetite or energy as long as it is allowed to remain in the little stomach and bowels. Fig Syrup gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act as Nature intends them to do, and helps build up and strengthen weak, pale and underweight children. Over four million bottles used a year shows its popularity. The genuine, endorsed by physicians for 50 years, always bears the word "California."

Postal Cards "Caught On"

When postal cards made their appearance in England about sixty years ago, people were so eager to purchase them that small riots took place in the post-offices, nearly 1,000,000 being sold the first week.

All the "good old days" were full of plagues and annoyances, too.

Best way to keep a secret is not to think about it very much.

"Both Hands. Don't Move Them."

another thing: these fellows aren't gold fish. Throw them in, but let them alone. Have you searched the car? Any more guns?"

"No," said one of the policemen.

"No what?"

"No more guns."

"Then don't find any more when I get back to the station. I like this case. Let it alone. Now, let's see who this guy is."

"Chief, honest to G—d."

"Mike, if that bum calls me 'Chief' again you can sock him, but that's personal. If he shuts up I'll bust the man that touches him or any of them. I'll take care of them. Let's see the guest of honor at this party."

The body had been lifted away from the wall.

"Dunn Clayton!" the lieutenant exclaimed. "Well, I'll be d—d! Keep those people back and get me something to cover this body with. Take a tablecloth."

He bent over the body, gently straightening the arms. As he did so he reached into the pockets of the dead man's coat exploring and from one of them took what he changed upon, a letter envelope which he put in his pocket. A policeman brought a cloth which was spread over the body.

"There's a capable citizen gone," said the lieutenant. "Whoever got him was good. Stay by him, Mike. I'm going outside for a minute."

No Longer Doubt as to Where the West Begins

Arthur Chapman wrote a poem, "Out Where the West Begins," which will never sink into oblivion. He wrote it in Denver, where it was published, so that the conclusion may be drawn that Mr. Chapman's West takes its initiative somewhere near the Rocky mountain latitude; but westerners generally place the beginning of the West much farther east than that; and it was long regarded as including everything beyond the Mississippi river.

Perhaps a more definite line would be where the Sunday chicken dinner begins, and that is distinctly in Missouri, F. H. Collier writes, in the St. Globe-Democrat. To the eastward the hot-dog monopolize all roadside eating places every day in the week; but cross the Father of Waters and you are in the Land of the Chicken Dinner. Not only is it honored of the Sabbath day, but it sends up its fragrant and alluring fumes at any hour on any day in many locations. Leg-horn, Shanghai, Plymouth Rock or Rhode Island red, the chicken goes in to the pot or pan for the wayfarer everywhere. The West begins where the chickens begin.

Lip Pronunciation

Forms of the letters in a recently discovered old Phoenician alphabet show evidences of having been chosen to represent the forms of the mouth used in speaking them. This theory is advanced by Sir Richard Paget, an authority on human speech, who finds that nearly every one of the twenty-nine symbols used is suggestive of the lip formation to produce the sound symbolized. He does not suggest that the scribe who selected the mouthlike characters did so intentionally, but believes instead that the forms were chosen unconsciously. The letter "P," for instance, is represented by a sign suggestive of the closed lips, used as the start of pronouncing it.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Second Educational Series of Radio Lectures Started

Authorities on economics, psychology and other subjects have inaugurated the second series of "Listen and Learn" Lectures under the auspices of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, over coast-to-coast networks.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, started the spring series in January when he had representatives of the Council outlined the lecture courses to follow. The programs are heard every Saturday over NBC-WEAF facilities.

The series is scheduled for twenty weeks, closing with a valedictory program the last week in May.

Among the Speakers:

International trade, the tariff and industrial planning are economic subjects to be touched upon by speakers such as James Harvey Rogers of Yale, Ernest M. Patterson of Pennsylvania, F. W. Taussig of Harvard, George Henry Soule, Jr., editor of The New Republic, and Walton H. Hamilton of Yale.

Changes and growth in personalities, animal behavior and psychology in education are topics to be taken up by Fred A. Moss of George Washington University, Henry W. Nissen of Yale, Frank N. Freeman of Chicago, and others.

Public response to the initial ten lectures broadcast in the fall indicated, according to the Council, that they reached listening groups in the home, school, special neighborhood gatherings and even fishermen of Nova Scotia.

PATRIOTIC SONGS

The songs that thrill Americans, patriotic selections written by inspired composers, will be played in the February National 4-H club program of the National Farm and Home Hour by the United States Marine Band.

The concert will be another program in the series by the Marine Band on "Learning to Know America's Music."

Beginning with "The Star-Spangled Banner," the renditions will swing through "America," and the lively strains of "Dixie." These will be followed with "Yankee Doodle," "America, the Beautiful," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "Hail Columbia," and a more recent song written when the United States Army was moving to the European battle front, "Over There."

The programs are designed to acquaint and familiarize the 800,000 4-H club members of the United States with the music which is typical of America.

Each month an additional concert will be provided by the Marine Band. On March 5 America's hymns and religious songs will be featured. The programs are broadcast over a coast-to-coast network.

The series, which promises to be one of the most entertaining features of the National Farm and Home Hour during the winter months, will contain much basic forestry information of interest to both town and country listeners.

Caryeth Wells, adventurer, explorer and lecturer, who starts a new series of programs over an NBC network next month under the title "Conoco Adventurers," says that if all the hogs in Texas were rolled into one hog, they or it, could root out a Panama Canal with ease and dispatch.

In presenting Organ Melodies, Irma Glen has the three-fold job of speaking the verse, while she plays the organ with feet and hands, and watches the music, prose, and stop watch.

Harvey Hays, well known to radio listeners for his interpretations of outdoor roles, will play the part of the forest ranger. Wise in the ways of forest uses and protection through long experience in the fields, the character will often find himself in amusing situations with his sub assistant whose eagerness sometimes overwhelms his better judgment.

Alfred Corn, who plays the part of Sammy in The Goldbergs NBC daily feature, is nearing his sixteenth birthday, and is a student in high standing at the Art Students' League.

Puff Sleeves in Versatile Mood

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PUFFS, puff, puff goes the modern sleeve. Most often the sleeves in the newest party and afternoon frocks make the gesture of a single puff at the top, which is quite early Victorian and ever so quaint and charming according to the lovely gown pictured. This girlish velvet frock tells a fascinating story of the little puff sleeve. It is an ideal dress for the college girl. It is chic for all informal occasions and may even be worn for evening, as it is quite the latest for party gowns to have tiny puffed sleeves. Thus a gown of sheer velvet, as is the model pictured, has the advantage of doing double-duty. It is not only the naive puff sleeves which intrigue for the new square neckline of the dainty lace yoke is likewise beguiling in this frock.

A puff or puffs are apt to locate anywhere on the sleeve, singly, doubly or in numbers as fancy may dictate. The little pen-and-ink sketches, grouped about the attractive velvet gown in the illustration, reveal a versatile fashioning of sleeves which make puffs their feature.

When two little puffs are set at the top of the sleeve, as sketched below to the right, then the effect suggests a Florentine painting of a medieval lady, especially if the gown which that distinguishes be made of royal velvet or handsome brocade—all very formal and picturesque.

However, all sorts of puffed treatments are depicted in the outline drawings herewith, from formal to informal, some showing intricate workmanship. The elaborate sleeve with its series of puffs arranged row and row at the bottom of the sleeve, as delineated in the oval, shows a characteristic trend where self-fabric is ingeniously worked as in the instance of many of the handsomest velvet evening coats which have no other trimming save their own material, which has been extravagantly puffed and shirred.

In the latest dresses there is a general tendency to emphasize width at the shoulders. The sleeve with a puff plays an important part in this movement. In this connection even the once popular leg-of-mutton sleeve has been revived by certain Paris designers of high standing.

Speaking of sleeves in general, not for years have they been so capricious. Their eccentricities are the more accentuated in that frequently the rest of the gown is severely plain, a highly ornamental note being sounded in the sleeves only. One notes this tendency especially in the simple evening gown of velvet or satin preferably, which has a deep-cut armhole, the short sleeve being of spangled chiffon or some other sheer material, which scintillates with sparkling embroidery.

Sleeves in many a modish afternoon gown call attention unto themselves in that they are made of an entirely different material than that of the dress proper. That is the sleeves may be of lace or richly embroidered effects, or that which is especially favored, sheer metal weaves.

The fur-trimmed sleeve continues to be a theme of interest. The evening or afternoon gown of sheer fabric with a jacket or sholder usually displays a band of fur on the short or long flowing sleeve as the case may be. Ruches of pleated material also border many sleeves. Sometimes these ruchings are formed of flowers.

Another Abduction
The debarment of man is the cause of the breakdown of the American home, says some one. You are right; a man said it.—Los Angeles Times.

THREE TYPES OF SLEEVES ON VIEW

There are three types of sleeves on daytime frocks that stand out from the general mass, as it were—the balloon-top sleeves, tight between wrist and elbow or a little higher; the rather loose, straight-sleeve which is attached to a wide shoulder yoke that ends midway between shoulder and elbow, and the peasant-puffed sleeve, with the puff over the elbow, and tight above and below this. Coats, of course, don't have puffed sleeves, but they do interesting things with fur just the same. Sometimes the sleeve is fur from wrist to elbow, or else from elbow to shoulder—and the very smartest and newest are entirely fur!

And shoulders? These are drop-shoulder effects, given by wide shoulder yokes; kimono-style, or raglan. They are rosy and generally square. And though there is an occasional sloping shoulder, it, too, is comfortably roomy.

Black and Red
This gay color combination is featured in an evening gown which first saw the light of day in Paris. It is of black velvet, long and slinky with inserts of coral red velvet set in under the armholes.

MANY BUTTONS

Ocean pearl buttons of matching color serve as a practical fastening at the same time that they ornament this tailored blouse of Algerian yellow silk. The suit is of brown tweed colored in red fox. The new midwinter and resort collections stress the importance of buttons. Pretty effects are achieved in that many of the new buttons are very colorful and are made to enter into the color scheme of the costume. (© 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

He Saved New Orleans
ASK the average American, "Who saved New Orleans in the War of 1812?" and he will probably answer "Why, Andrew Jackson, of course." That answer is correct, but it would be equally correct to say "Capt. Samuel Chester Reid." And what is more surprising is the fact that Reid saved that historic city by fighting a battle on the sea several thousand miles away.

During the War of 1812 Reid was commander of an American privateer, the General Armstrong. On the night of September 26, 1814, his ship lay at anchor in the harbor of Horta in the island of Fayal in the Azores. Despite the fact that Horta was a neutral port, a large British squadron, commanded by Commodore Lloyd, came to attack the little American ship.

It was a bright moonlight night when Lloyd sent his first attacking party of more than 100 men in four large launches into the harbor. The enemy opened fire as they approached, and Reid immediately replied, driving off the launches with heavy loss. Another attack was made at midnight with 14 launches and 500 men who succeeded in boarding the General Armstrong but were driven out by the desperate resistance of the Americans, suffering a loss of 120 killed and 130 wounded. At daybreak another attack was made by the British brig, the Carnation, but she was beaten off.

Realizing that he could not resist another attack and finding his ship badly damaged, Reid scuttled his vessel and barely conveyed all of his men ashore. He had lost his ship but he won a victory that was more important than he realized. The British lost over 300 killed and wounded while the Americans lost but two killed and seven wounded. But the important fact was this: this squadron was part of the expedition then gathering at Jamaica for the purpose of seizing New Orleans and they had attacked the General Armstrong to capture her and use her as an auxiliary vessel.

But the British squadron was so crippled that it did not reach Jamaica until ten days later than the expedition had expected to leave there. The expedition waited for Commodore Lloyd and that delay was fatal to its expected results. For by the time it arrived in Louisiana, General Jackson had completed his defenses for that city and the world knows the result of the battle which he fought there on January 8, 1815.

Forgotten—By His Own Choice

SUNRISE on the morning of December 4, 1900, in the sleepy little town of Vigan in the Philippines. The town is held by 84 men of Company B of the Thirty-third United States volunteer infantry, operating against the insurgent General Tino. Also it is a supply depot where are stored 60,000 rations for the campaign and a hospital in which lie some 150 sick and disabled soldiers.

Tino has a force of 850 men. He will steal into the town under the cover of darkness. Then when reveille sounds and the American soldiers turn out without arms, to answer roll-call they will be met with a leader ball from the insurgents' rifles. But the plan doesn't quite work. Outpost No. 5 of Company B discovers the Filipinos stealing into the town and opens fire. Immediately the fight is on. Capt. Charles Van Way rushes forth and takes command. At one place he stations Private Joe Epps and Private Smith. His orders are, "Don't let them get across here. Hold them, don't let them ever get in, they've got me cut off." And Private Epps and Smith "held them."

The insurgents were repulsed, but snipers lingered, and from time to time poured in a galling fire upon the Americans. One group behind a churchyard wall was especially annoying to Private Epps. Finally he went to Captain Van Way and said, "I want to go and get those fellows behind that wall." "All right," replied the captain, "Take the men you need and get them out."

As it turned out, all the force Private Epps wanted was one man—Private W. O. Trafton, a big Texan. Creeping along cautiously, they located their quarry. Before the enemy knew what had happened, Epps was on top of the wall and shouting down at them in Spanish and English both to throw down their rifles and get their hands up in the air. To Private Trafton he shouted orders as though that individual was a whole company, and the Texan let loose a typical Texas whoop. The insurgents dropped their guns and holstered their hands. There were 17 riflemen and four others armed with bolts, all of whom Epps herded into camp as prisoners. Eight Americans and over 100 insurgents were killed at the battle of Vigan. There were 40 prisoners taken—more than half of them by one man.

Epps was voted the Congressional Medal of Honor for his feat. But when he got back to this country he deliberately dropped out of sight. Finally 24 years later he was discovered in Muskogee, Okla., and there at a great gathering in a ball park the medal was pinned on his coat.

The Men on the Dead Man's Chest

By Clifford Raymond

Ingredients of this very different mystery story:
GORE--Many buckets of blood. But very expert blood letting, we assure you. Not fifteen murders, as you might suppose from the old song, but enough, all very deftly accomplished, all very satisfactory, and a hint of more at the end which can leave nothing to be desired.

GATS--Of course. The story opens in the Dutch Mill dance restaurant on the near-North Side of Chicago.

GALLANTRY--Of a sort. Every one wanted to take care of poor Maisie, though she always fixed her clock so she never had a chance at a breach of promise suit and never got within miles of alimony or a dowry. And the Tiger-Lily inspired ardor to a shivery degree.

GAILETY--More of this than anything. The most entertaining, unexpected and erudite foot-notes. Is the gentle author's tongue in his cheek?

You will want to read it as it appears serially in these columns
