CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1932

NUMBER 7

American Legion Activities--Dance

The Benjamin I. Berry Post No. 11, of the American Legion at Carrizozo, New Mexico met in session last week for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. The following officers were elected:

Commander, Carl E. Freeman.
Vice-Commanders, E. I. Griffin and James Perry Sears.
Adjutant, E. M. Barber.
Chaplain, Joe West.
Historian, S. E. Graisen.
Sergeant at Arms, Claud A. Branum.

Several new members have joined the local post lately and it is hoped to have a membership of over fifty members in the very near future.

The Legion has many activities which they are sponsoring, but the major activity for 1932 in which they are interested is that of unemployment. A national drive has been started by the American Legion in which they hope to place one million unemployed in jobs during the month of February. This activity has the endorsement of Congress and President Hoover, and National Commander Stevens expects to reach the goal set by the Legion.

A dance is to be given in Community Hall, Carrizozo, on Monday night, February 22, 1932. As this is Washington's Birthday and a national holiday it is hoped that a large number of people, both young and old will attend.

Annual Boy Scout Council Meeting

Carrizozo will be well represented at the annual Boy Scout Council meeting at Roswell February 14, according to information from Mr. T. E. Kelley who has the responsibility of getting the crowd together.

A banner is to be awarded the best delegation, on the basis of number attending and miles traveled and the total score will be divided by the number of troops in the town.

A program of fact, fun and feed, and fellowship has been arranged and every one going is assured a great time. Meeting opens at 2:45 and will continue until 8 p. m. The meeting is open to Scouts, parents and any adult interested in boys. Parties desiring to go please get in touch with Mr. Kelley at once.

An inventory of America's assets would list very near the top its 900,000 Boy Scouts and their leaders. February 8th marked the twenty-second anniversary of the founding of the Boy Scout movement in this country.

While a lot of men in the community have given time and money the excellent results of the work is due to men who are giving their time as leaders.

This dance proceeds will be devoted to charity and unemployment in our own locality, that of Lincoln county.

New Mexico Cattle Growers Association

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Feb. 10, 1932—Plans are nearly complete for the eighteenth annual convention of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association, to be held at Carlsbad, New Mexico, March 4 and 5th.

The convention will be held in the Court room and the executive board meeting which always precedes the convention will be held in the parlor of the Crawford hotel at 7 o'clock the evening of March 3.

All questions to be taken before the Convention on March 4 and 5, will be thoroughly gone in to, committees appointed and every thing put in readiness for the convention the next day.

All cattlemen are urged to attend the executive board meeting as well as the convention.

Entertainment is being planned which with the program being planned will make an unusually enjoyable as well as profitable convention.

Abraham Lincoln in 1864, From a Portrait
Considered by Many to Be His Best

Simple Beauty
Marks Rebuilt
Tomb of Lincoln

Shrine at Springfield Now More
Worthy of the Great President.

PRESIDENT HOOVER dedicated a transformed Abraham Lincoln tomb at Springfield, Ill., June 17, last year.

When the monument over the spot where the body of the Civil war President rests was given to the world again pilgrims to the grave found that it is a place of simple grandeur besting a national shrine.

For months it was closed to the public while skilled artists plied their arts to repair and rebuild it and gave it beauty, simplicity and dignity.

The reconstruction was made possible by the passage of a $175,000 appropriation by the general assembly in 1920.

Much the Same Outside.

Outwardly the monument appears the same, except that it has an air of newness, of freshness. In a terrace, created at the south or entrance side of the monument there is a bronze head of Lincoln by Gutzon Borglum on a pedestal of granite.

The great transformation is in the interior of the monument. Under personal supervision of C. Herrick Hammond, state architect and former president of the American Institute of Architects, the previously unused and unfinished area at the base of the monument was opened and architectural skill and art combined to fabricate a rotunda connecting galleries and sarcophagus chamber.

LINCOLN'S TOMB

All the solemnity and decorum befitting the last resting place of America's beloved President has been accomplished in the re-designing program.

One of the main features of the galleries joining the rotunda and the sarcophagus chamber are nine Lincoln statues of bronze depicting Lincoln at various stages of his career. These are the handiwork of internationally famous sculptors.

At each of the four corners of the central unit of the monument there is one of these statues, about three feet in height, resting on a pedestal in a niche. Diagonally across from each of these is a statuette in a similar niche.

These bronze statuettes were obtained by the state through the efforts of Mr. Hammond and H. H. Cleveland, director of the state department of public works and buildings.

The sculptors, Daniel C. French, Fred Torrey and Leonard Crunelle, are each represented by two models, while Lorado Taft, Adolph Weinman and the late Augustus St. Gaudens each have one.

As a background for these statuettes there are rich, warm-colored panels of marble.

Supreme Effect in Chamber.

Beautiful as are the rotunda and the galleries, the supreme effect is attained in the sarcophagus chamber. There the pilasters and frieze are of French black marble, as dark as midnight, with walls of St. Genevieve golden vein marble. On the upper portion of each jet-black pilaster there is a bronze wreath.

The ceiling of the chamber is covered with gold leaf, and the room, like the rotunda, is lighted indirectly by lights hidden by an ornamental cornice.

There over the spot where Lincoln's body lies beneath many feet of concrete has been placed a new sarcophagus of solid marble of warm red hue. On it is the simple inscription:

"Abraham Lincoln,
1800-1865."

Directly above what formerly was the north door, but now transformed into a window covered with a wrought-iron grill, there is cut in the marble this famous tribute to the emancipator:

"Now He Belongs to the Ages."

Across from the sarcophagus in a crypt sealed with slabs of marble rest the bodies of Mrs. Lincoln and three of their sons, Edward Baker, William Wallace and Thomas.

Flags Form Honor Guard.

Arranged along the semicircular wall of the sarcophagus chamber, flanking the sarcophagus, there is an array of nine flags.

In the place of honor, at the right of the sarcophagus, stands the Stars and Stripes. The official standard of the seven states in which the Lincoln family lived from the time of their arrival in America until the end of the emancipator's career—Massachusetts, New Jersey, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois—occupy the next seven positions.

President Hoover personally installed the flag of the President of the United States.

Looking at Lincoln

February 12 means Lincoln. On that day we of this nation and many in other nations honor the name which connotes struggle, achievement, patience under an avalanche of rebuffs and the saving grace of humor brightening a persistent upward fight for a great ideal. All these things about "Lincoln" when February 12 comes around.

"A Great Task"

Lincoln is out of the soil and strain of life in a Middle West community, to attain the greatest heights. He held the nation together until it was finally joined in such a way that it will not separate again.—Exchange.

WHEN the victory shall be complete—when there shall be neither a slave nor a denier of the earth—let us not let the title of that land which may truly claim to be the birthplace and the cradle of such a revolution that shall have ended in that victory.—Abraham Lincoln.

A PROPHECY
(From "Lincoln's Grave.")

Old soldiers true, ah, them all men can trust,
Who fought, with conscience clear, no other side,
Who heeded death and thought their cause was just;
Their stainless honor can not be denied;
Ring it and sing it up and down the land,
And let no voice dare answer it with sneer,
Or shut its meaning out;
Ring it and sing it, we so hand in hand,
Old infantry, old cavalry, old cannoniers.
And if Virginia's vales shall ring again,
To battle-yell of Mosby or Mahone,
If Wilder's wild brigade or Morgan's men
Once more wheel into lines, or all alone
A Sheridan shall ride, a Cleburne fall—
There will not be two flags above them flying,
But both in one, welded in that pure flame
Uplifting in us all,
When kindred unto kindred, loudly crying,
Rally and cheer in freedom's holy name!
—Maurice Thompson.

Lincoln Wrote His Own Autobiography

Document in Possession of Milwaukee Family.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S autobiography, consisting of slightly more than 500 words in his own handwriting, is in the possession of Mrs. Harriet E. Richardson and her son, of Milwaukee, Wis.

They were willed the document by the late Miss Fannie Fell. Jesse Fell, Miss Fell's father, shared law offices with Lincoln in Springfield, Ill. He prevailed upon Lincoln to write the autobiography in 1859 when it became apparent that the great emancipator would become a Presidential candidate.

Extracts from the autobiography follow:

"I was born February 12, 1809, in Hardin county, Kentucky. My parents were both born in Virginia of distinguished families, second families, I should say. My mother, who died in my tenth year, was of a family of the name of Hanks, some of whom now reside in Adams, and others in Macon county, Illinois.

"My paternal grandfather, Abraham Lincoln, emigrated from Rockingham county, Virginia, to Kentucky about 1781 or 1782, where a year or two later he was killed by Indians, not in battle, but by stealth, when he was laboring to open a farm in the forest.

"His ancestors, who were Quakers, went to Virginia from Berks county, Pennsylvania. An effort to identify them with the New England family of the same name, ended in nothing more definite than a similarity of Christian names of both families, such as Enoch, Levi, Mordecai, Solomon, Abraham and the like.

"My father, at the death of his father, was but six years of age and he grew up literally without education. He removed from Kentucky to what is now Spencer county, Indiana, in my eighth year.

"At twenty-one I came to Illinois and passed the first year in Illinois—Macon county. Then I got to New Salem, where I remained a year as a sort of clerk in the store. Then came the Black Hawk war and I was elected a captain of volunteers, a success which gave me more pleasure than any I have had since. I went into the campaign, was elected, ran for the legislature the same year (1832) and was beaten. Only time I have ever been beaten by the people. The next three succeeding biennial elections I was elected to the legislature.

"During this legislative period I had studied law and removed to Springfield to practice it. In 1841 I was elected to the lower house of congress. From 1849 to 1854 I practiced law more assiduously than ever before—always a Whig in politics, and generally on the Whig electoral tickets, making active canvasses.

"If any personal description of me is thought desirable, it may be said, I am 6 feet 4 inches in height, lean in flesh, weighing on an average 180 pounds; dark complexion, with coarse hair and gray eyes—no marks or brands recollected."

LET every man remember that to violate the law is to trample on the blood of his fathers, and to tear the charter of his own and his children's liberty.—Abraham Lincoln.

Wisdom in Advertising
When Business Is Dull

There are certain businesses, and comparative ones, too, that show no decline during this period of business depression, either in volume or profit! What is the reason for this? An examination of published financial statements reveals this to be true even in the case of quite a few large retail merchandising corporations. An examination of certain other available figures indicates that these same concerns have not reduced their advertising appropriations during this depression and in many cases have even increased them.

Any business, large or small, that keeps up its advertising in both good times and bad has a powerful advantage over its competitor that reduces or discontinues its advertising! The average business at the first blush of depression begins to cut expenses, and the first item is usually advertising. Its larger or wiser competitor keeps right on advertising in depression and takes what business there is away from the concern that has ceased to advertise. In other words, the concern that does not advertise is out of competition with one that does!

I am not saying that advertising would totally turn the tide of present business conditions—it is not the complete remedy for the disease that besets us, but it would aid to a large degree. At all events, if all competing businesses would continue their advertising, why, the available business in times of depression would be more evenly divided.—David Gibson, in Lorain Journal.

Presumption
Dr. P. K. Ollsky, head of the trachoma research department of the Rockefeller Institute, ended a description of the Geneva anti-trachoma conference with a story.
"So to think, even after the germ is found that the malady is conquered," he said—"well, that is to be like the boy in the swimming pool. The boy was displaying, one by one, the treasures that were contained in his pockets.

"And this," he said, "this here is a washer—for makin' automobiles."

Is Your Gasoline Tax Money
BUILDING GOOD ROADS OR ENRICHING RACKETEERS?

You pay a tax on every gallon of gasoline you buy. Your state levies this tax to pay for building good roads.

But your state is not getting all the money paid as a gasoline tax. RACKETEERS ARE TAKING AN ALARMING AMOUNT OF IT! They are selling bootlegged gasoline on which they pay the state no tax—but they make motorists pay all or a part of the tax. The racketeer keeps this tax money himself!

You get your tax back in the form of good roads when the state collects the tax. You get nothing when racketeers get your money. And remember—if your state got all the money paid as tax, it could well afford to lower its gasoline tax!

If you want your money to go into road building instead of into the racketeer's pockets, make sure the gasoline you buy is not bootlegged. Buy gasoline made by a reliable, law-abiding company and sold under a dependable, well-known brand name, and be certain that your tax money goes to your state and not to the racketeer. That's the only way to beat the racketeer.

CONOCO Gasoline is a branded gasoline you can buy with safety at the sign of the CONOCO Red Triangle.

Oscura Items

Mr. Moore arrived in Oscura on Tuesday of this week, after spending some time in California and El Paso.

Mr. and Mrs. Thornton entertained Mrs. Geo. Dixon at a Sunday dinner. The Thornton home is an unusually attractive and hospitable dwelling place.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. R. Ellis, of Ft. Worth, but who are now vacationing in Cloudcroft, spent the week-end with their mother, Mrs. Dixon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor and son Jimmy, joined Mr. and Mrs. George Turner in Socorro. The occasion was the celebration of Mr. Taylor's birthday, the Taylor family extended their trip on up the beautiful Blue Canon to Magdalena where Mr. Taylor formerly had some sheep interests.

Judge Crews returned to his pleasant home in Oscura after spending a number of days in visiting friends and relatives in El Paso.

The monthly church service was well attended and a most excellent sermon was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snow and family, also Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Snow visited Mr. and Mrs. Max Brazel last Sunday.

Miss Nettie Brown is detained at home with a bad case of flu. The I-X ranch entertained the village school teacher for the week-end. There are many interesting features at their beautiful and hospitable home.

Ancient Methods for

Measurement of Time

The most ancient sundial that has come down to us is on the Cross at Bewcastle, Cumberland, England, supposed to date from about 675 A. D. The Anglo-Saxons followed the decimal and duo-decimal systems. At the little church at Kirkdale, Yorkshire, one of the few pre-Conquest chancels in existence, is a most remarkable and valuable one, made about 1036, with a long Anglo-Saxon inscription to the right and left, a most valuable example of the pure English of the Eleventh century.

About this time Mass clocks were introduced into the land. Probably every church had one, for, so far as we know, they formed the only means, then known, for the measurement of time. They were cheap, easily constructed and durable, but except for what can be learned from the remains of them carved on our old church walls, nothing is known.

When the Normans conquered England they brought with them the duo-decimal system of measuring time, which had long been in force on the Continent. The day being now divided into 12 hours, the old Anglo-Saxon dials, with their four tides to the day, became useless. But on many ancient dials of this period, the two systems have been found combined, somewhat puzzling to the antiquarian. Notwithstanding the decay of centuries and exposure to the weather, hundreds of these little time-makers still exist—London Tit-Bits.

Little Things Tending

to Make Life Brighter

There are many things that we ought to learn in this world, things that we all can learn. For example, we ought to learn to laugh. The sages say that laughing is better than medicine. It will not chase away a gloom, but it will chase away a good deal of it.

Then we ought to learn to tell a story well. A good story is like a sunbeam in a dark place. Then we might learn to keep our own troubles to ourselves. As a matter of fact, the world does not care for our ills and our sorrows. "Burn your own smoke," it says. Then we ought to learn to do something day by day for others. If may not be much, but a few words of cheer or some little bit of helpfulness makes a wonderful impression.—Robert P. Anderson.

Great Friend of Man

From the beginning of man's appearance on earth, trees have been his staunch and constant friends, writes Charles Lathrop-Pack in "Forest Facts for Schools." To tell the story of our forests is to tell the story of man's loyal ally in his long pilgrimage from furtive cave dweller to builder of the civilized world. Here in North America our forests present a unique background to man's conquest of the New world. Without abundant wood, without the far-reaching effects of widespread forests, the history of this country would certainly have been greatly modified. Indeed, without its forests, it is doubtful that North America could have held even a small part of the lure of settlement that brought the peoples of the Old world flocking to its shores. Man could never have made this continent his own so quickly or so easily without those forest allies of his.

Rome's Department Store

Ostia was the vast emporium of Rome, where powerful corporations had the task of providing wheat for the plebs and luxuries for the patrician, the emperor and his court. Excavations indicate that there was a great deal of wealth in the city.

What is entirely new in the archaeological discoveries is a department store where imported goods were displayed for visitors who flocked to see the beauties of Ostia. There is nothing new under the sun—and even in ancient times a department store proved to be heaven for bargain hunters, and special sales not only of rare jewels, but silk, embroideries and other "imported" goods took place.

Responsibility for Theft

The Hammurabian code, which antedated the code of Moses by about a thousand years, included the following provision: "If anyone has committed a robbery and he is caught, he shall be killed. If the robber is not caught, the man who has been robbed shall make claim before God to everything stolen from him, and the town and its governor within the territory and limits of which the robbery took place shall give back to him everything he has lost."

Johnson Searched His Wig

The famed Doctor Johnson's wigs were usually very shabby and their fore parts burned away by the near approach of the candle, which his short-sightedness rendered necessary in reading. At one home he visited, the butler always had a new wig ready and as Johnson would go to the dining room the butler would change his wig and this ceremony was sometimes performed every day.

The Men on the Dead Man's Chest

by Clifford Raymond

(WNU Service)
Copyright, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

FROM THE BEGINNING

During a frustrated "holdup" at the Dutch Mill, a fashionable Chicago night club, a patron later identified as Dunn Clayton is shot and killed. Lieutenant of Police Stanton, investigating, questions a voluntary witness, calling himself "Buck" Trembley. His testimony is apparently straightforward. Stanton had known Clayton in France during the World War, and is personally interested in the case. In Clayton's pocket he had found a note signed "Stakie," making an appointment with the dead man at the Dutch Mill. Stanton does not believe the holdup "man" killed Clayton, and is inclined to suspect Trembley.

CHAPTER III

Dead Men Two and Three

A large camp on the shore of Lac Vieux Desert near the rise of the Wisconsin river was known in its region as the lodge of Little Butte des Morts. It had its name from some obscure Menominee or Winnebago source. Although of only local ken, "Little" had been probably to distinguish it from Grand Butte des Morts far to the south on the Fox river near Lake Winnebago.

The early French penetration of Wisconsin has its vestiges in the charm of names percolating along with melodious Indian derivations against the homely nomenclature of Anglo-Saxon pioneer and settler. Etienne Brule, La Salle, Tonti, the Griffon, Claude Allouez, Jacques Marquette, Jean Nicolet, the explorers, searchers for La Chine, fur-traders and forest runners keep at least their shadows alive in Lac du Flambeau, the Brule, Lac Court Orellien, Fond du Lac, et cetera, alongside Shantytown, Post Lake, Hickory Corners, Jump Lake and Enterville.

The central lodge and cabins of Little Butte des Morts were log built in a stand of white and Norway pine with a smaller growth of balsam and with some hard woods to flame in the coloring of the fall. The club membership was in part of solvent half-yearly idlers and in part of men who followed the whole calendar of outdoor sport from Canada to Florida and in part of men of active affairs who could have a fortnight or month of fishing in the year.

Two caretakers, with their wives who were the camp cooks, were in charge the year around, for the lodge was never closed. In the season the guides came from the region about. In the winter they went into the woods lumbering, except for a few odder fellows who shackled themselves in near by and loitered about the fireplaces of the lodge and in its furnace-heated comfort as much as the caretakers' wives would tolerate and permit. Occasionally members who liked the pine barrens after season and who had nothing to engage them elsewhere would stay for the deer hunting in November without going home.

The morning of October 3 brought a turn in the weather, breaking a succession of brilliant, sparkling days with a storm, with a snow sky, and with blue clouds piling up as folds in a range of mountains. A whipping wind arose and brought the snow, and the lake was whipped into whitecaps. The wind was cold, and the snow was driven straight as a flight of spears, was caught in swirls to break as an upward flutter of white moths and was whipped out again in straight drives.

It was a day for every one about the lodge to knock off early from anything that was being done and to give up thinking of doing anything more if anything else had been thought of. Only one member, Preston Brown, had remained into the fall at the club. He was out with a gun for partridge, rabbits or a chance at a duck.

By mid-afternoon the men about the place, caretakers and guides, with a young Menominee Indian from the reservation and a traveling meat salesman who had been driving to Hurley and who had stopped in out of the snow, were making free with the main room of the lodge. A log fire had been lighted. Brown's tolerance was understood and taken for granted. Several bottles of liquor were produced.

In the woods a rustic playfulness may be a part of an early period of drinking; another period may mean rough action with boisterous humor; while a third may be violent with humor. Within a half-hour the group in the lodge room was playful and was on the turn to rougher humor when a Buick sedan was driven up the camp road. The driver got out of his car and stood looking at the lodge, the snow quickly whitening his clothes. He wore hunting breeches and leggings and a leather coat. He was of robust middle age. His black hair was graying at the temples.

After a moment's observation of the place he went to the entrance. The Menominee had seen him from a window, and one of the caretakers opened the door. The stranger said that he had been bound for the Ontonagon country to the north but was having trouble driving on account of the snow. He was invited inside. Shortly afterward Brown returned to the lodge with two partridges.

The Buick had been followed along the main road by a Cadillac in which there were two men. When the Buick was driven into the grounds of Little Butte the Cadillac continued on its course, but a half-mile farther it was turned back, the driver using a farm road to the side to make his turn about. At the lodge entrance he also drove in, but several hundred yards from the lodge itself he turned off the roadway and came to a stop behind a covert of balsam. The two men in the Cadillac sat there for a half-hour, the car becoming almost as heavily crusted with snow as the trees behind which it stood. Then the driver's companion got out and walked toward the lodge. He was not dressed as either a townsman or a woodsman of the region but had a heavy ulster with its great collar turned up. That and his soft hat pulled down in front almost concealed his face.

He went to the nearest window of the lodge and looked in. He walked around the corner. His actions were peculiar in that he seemingly had no intention of entering the place and apparently was indifferent to being discovered in the strange behavior of walking about it in a snow storm and looking in windows. Presently he returned to the car, shook the snow from his ulster and hat as well as he could, and let himself back into his seat beside the driver.

Thereafter the men remained in the automobile for an hour. Then the man in the ulster got out again and went to the lodge, looking in a window as he had done before.

At the first glance he turned and ran back to the car. Several men came hurriedly out of the lodge. One was the stranger who had come in the Buick. He went to his car, entered it and drove out of the grounds, turning south. The men in the Cadillac backed out from the covert of balsam and drove out, also turning south. The other men from the lodge ran to the caretakers' cottages and presently were running back with two women, all much agitated.

The Menominee Indian met the women at the steps.

"He's dead," he said. He then got his car out of the long shed used as a summer garage and departed for the reservation. The traveling meat salesman got his car and drove away toward Watermeet to the north, on the way to Hurley. The caretakers and their wives and the guides were left dismayed with the consequences of the afternoon's rough hilarity: the dead body of Preston Brown, the club member. He had been impaled on a hunting knife.

The man in the Buick was driving at forty miles an hour. The man driving the Cadillac followed at that speed until it was certain that the Buick was taking the main traveled road south. Then the speed of the Cadillac was increased to sixty miles. As it passed the Buick it swerved in so closely as to suggest either a peculiar indifference to safety or an intent to force the other car into the ditch, but before the Buick driver could be really aware of that the Cadillac had swung well into the other lane, passed without sounding the horn and disappeared around a bend in the road.

It was now nearing dusk, and the snow was no longer falling.

Thirty miles from Little Butte des Morts on the main traveled road south a wooden bridge over a thoroughfare between two lakes and the marshes through which it flowed, had been taken out. The concrete posts of the new bridge were in and there was a detour by an extemporized plank road. The approach from the north was by a sharp curve over a small hill.

The snow storm had sent the men home from the construction work October 3, but late in the afternoon an employee had put red lanterns along the approaches as warning of the dangerous road conditions. The snowfall stopped; the wind died down, and at sundown there was a burst of dark red in the west. As it faded out a Cadillac was driven from the north to within a hundred yards of the warning lanterns. A man in an ulster got out of the car and set about taking up the lights quickly. The driver of the car turned it into the brush by an old trail. When the man in the ulster had taken up all the lanterns on the north side of the bridge construction he carried them into the brush and hid them and himself where he could keep the road in view.

The dusk, cupped in the enclosure of balsam, oak, spruce, pine and scrub brush, deepened and darkened. There was then what always must seem a miracle dropped from a casement of Heaven, the song of a white-throat sparrow singing in this waste of growing and forbidding darkness in which he was so bold a singer.

The white-throat stopped his song at the sound of a motor coming from the north. The car was a Ford. The driver knew his road. He swore as he came up slowly, evidently at the carelessness which had neglected to put up the lights, but he took his way across the plank detour.

The hiding man remained hidden and quiet, and waited. It was now dark. There was the sound of another car approaching at high speed. Its bright lights covered the road, but it took the bad curve without any apparent understanding of what might be ahead. It hit the concrete post of the new bridge just as its driver shut off the power and set his brakes. The post was taken out and the broken car went over the embankment into the thoroughfare. The hiding man came out of his place of concealment. He looked into the thoroughfare into which the car had gone. In the darkness there was nothing to be seen. He replaced the red lights where they had been and returned to the Cadillac. The driver brought it back into the road, drove carefully over the plank detour and on south at high speed.

As if there had been no wintry interruption, the following day, October 4, was another of the brilliant warm days of the Wisconsin autumn. White mists arose from lakes and thoroughfares in the chill of the morning as the sun came up, but they cleared away. The snow mantle on the pine, balsam and spruce dropped in thawing and the ground covering melted quickly into the sandy soil.

The construction gangs at the bridge came on the job and had been at work a half-hour before a foreman saw the top of a sedan in the thoroughfare. It was by a pine trunk which stood two feet above the water. Some drift of dead limbs had washed against it and had obscured its outlines. The foreman looked at it a moment or two before he was certain that it must be evidence of a road accident. Then he called his men. One entered the water and attached chains to the car. A tractor dragged it out, and the death in it was disclosed. The wrecked car and the body were sent into Eagle River, where the owner of the Buick identified it as one rented from his garage and the dead man as the one who had taken it out.

Further identification came when the body of Preston Brown was brought from Lac Vieux to Eagle River. The men from Little Butte lodge looked at the victim of the bridge accident and found that he was the man on whose hunting knife Brown had been impaled. They were concerned in part for their own conduct, but they agreed that Brown's death had been accidental. They had been drinking, Brown, the stranger and all of them except Jim, the Menominee. Although they had drunk a great deal, everybody had been good-natured. Brown and the stranger had been cordial. There had been some rough play, scuffles, some wrestling, dancing and a great deal of bragging and loud talking.

The guides and caretakers had roughed one another, tipped one another out of chairs, come to grips and thrown one another about the room and had wrestled over the floor. It wouldn't have happened if it hadn't been just that kind of snowy afternoon when a little drinking seemed to be about right. Rough, but nothing out of the ordinary for such an occasion except possibly the knife-throwing.

The Menominee had started that. He hadn't been drinking and he hadn't been tussling, but after there had been some bragging incidental to the rough fun the Indian began pitching his knife at the wall. Possibly he wanted to show how dangerous his dexterity could be. He called two knots in the wall the eyes of a man. The guides and caretakers tried their skill at it, but the Menominee was easily the best.

Brown did not throw. He even demonstrated that it might hurt someone. The stranger teased him a bit brusquely about his prudence. The stranger also made one throw with his hunting knife. It was a large two-bladed knife, a blade opening from each end of the handle. Both blades were open as he threw it. He wasn't expert, but he imbedded a blade solidly in the wall something over four feet from the floor. His effort was awkward. The men laughed at him and turned to have another drink and forgot the knife in the wall. Later the stranger teased Brown into a scuffle in which they suddenly began to exert themselves to the limit of their strength, almost angrily as men will in adult foolishness of the kind.

The unfortunate end came when Brown was thrown against the forgotten knife blade. He gapsed, clutched his breast and sagged at the knees. Then he fell. The other men were too astonished to understand it at first. Then they were sobered and horrified.

The stranger must have lost his judgment in his consternation and remorse, which would account for his disappearance and for a wild drive resulting in his death at a place in the road dangerous to a distracted man at the wheel of an automobile. The identification failed, however, to give the county authorities the stranger's name. There was nothing to be found in his pockets or on his clothing to reveal who he was. He remained the stranger who had impaled Brown on his hunting knife in a wrestling scuffle.

It was, moreover, discovered that the men from Lac Vieux knew in reality nothing of Preston Brown. They could not recall that they ever had heard where his home was or who or where his next of kin were. His effects at the lodge yielded nothing except, curiously, the name of Dunn Clayton who had been killed the preceding Saturday night in Chicago.

"The Thinker" Explained
Bobby was a sore trial to his mother because of his slowness in getting dressed. He never seemed to remember where he had put this and that article of apparel.

On one occasion he was taken to a museum where he saw a reproduction of Rodin's "Le Penseur." His mother explained that the title meant "The Thinker."

Bobby studied the figure intently for a moment, and then said, "He's probably trying to think where he left his clothes."

Fighting Pheasant
Ring-necked pheasant cocks are notoriously good fighters, routing domestic roosters and even cats, but the "fighter's" one of record is in Pennsylvania, according to Norman Wood of Coatesville, in that state. This particular pheasant was holding sway in a part of a field in which it is believed there was a brood of chicks. A bull, followed by cows, entered the cock's domain. The pheasant, resenting this intrusion, proceeded to prove his right to the title of "game" bird. Repeatedly he flew against the cattle which, overcome by surprise, gave ground until the herd, followed by the astonished bull, made a hurried though dignified retreat.—Exchange.

It has to be pretty important when a majority of the people get mad about it at the same time and vote that way.

Sometimes a good intention needs dynamite to make it work.

Warning About Neglect Credited to Franklin

The authorship of the old saying about "for want of a nail a kingdom was lost" is attributed to Benjamin Franklin. In the preface of his "Poor Richard's Almanack for 1758," Richard Saunders, the name Franklin assumed in the writing, quotes a man named Father Abraham as saying: "And again, he Richard adviseth to circumspection and care, even in the smallest matters, because sometimes a little neglect may breed great mischief, adding, for want of a nail, the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; and for want of a horse the rider was lost, being overtaken and slain by the enemy, all for want of care about a horse-shoe nail." No historical incident of this nature is known, and it is believed that Franklin invented the story. In old school readers, Franklin's precept is given as follows: "For the want of a nail the shoe was lost; for the want of a shoe the horse was lost; for the want of a horse the rider was lost; for the want of a rider the battle was lost; for the want of a battle the kingdom was lost—and all for the want of a horse-shoe nail."

Soldier's Idea of Action
This is my philosophy of action: Every time you've a task before you examine it carefully, take exact measure of what is expected of you. Then make your plan, and in order to execute it properly create for yourself a method. Never improvise. The fundamental qualities for good execution of a plan are, first, naturally, intelligence; then discernment and judgment which enable one to recognize the best methods to attain it; then singleness of purpose; and, lastly, what is most essential of all, namely, will—stubborn will.—Marshal Foch.

Lace Frock Repeats Its Triumphs

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It, through the winter style program the lace frock for afternoon and evening wear proved a favorite and now at the threshold of a new season the world of fashion is yielding to the lure of lace with renewed enthusiasm. With milder weather coming on and with the opportunity to wear light garb which sunny winter resort environment presents, the fair for lace is taking on an outstanding significance.

It makes it the more interesting that the midseason and resort fashions reveal the use of so many kinds of lace. Furthermore, when one considers that not only party and afternoon frocks are scheduled to be of lace, but that jacket suits tailored all of lace are foretold in advance Paris collections, one realizes that lovely and fluttering lace is destined to play a very important role during the coming months.

Generally speaking, the new laces are divided into three classes, namely, cotton, wool and silk with some very attractive linen types also being shown. Alencons and valenciennes are dividing honors in the cotton range, and they are as a rule of the most exquisite sort. A most beguiling effect and one which promises a program of lovely debutante gowns is valenciennes lace in dress width. It comes in white or in pastel shades. Many of the alencons laces employed are also dyed, and if the dress is not entirely of lace, then this colorful and designful fine mesh is worked in for yokes or for the popular contrasting bodice top. Some designers are showing black frocks topped with this sort of lacy dyed perhaps a vivid green or red or deep pink or a delectable old blue.

The revival of Irish crochet lace is also a matter of moment. At a recent style display, a dress entirely of this type lace was greatly admired. It is said that for lingerie touches on the spring frock, Irish crochet will be very smart.

There is also a new variety called angel skin lace. A suit fashioned of pink angel skin lace comes from the atelier of a French style creator. The jacket and skirt are somewhat tailored, a distinguishing feature being a spiral banding of dainty gray fur on each sleeve.

Favor for wool lace continues especially in glowing red tones. The lovely gown with the bertha collar developing into a cape effect at the back as shown to the right at the top of this picture is of ruby red wool lace. The soft undulating movement of the flare of the skirt accents a graceful silhouette.

Chantilly in delicate shadowy patterning is a foremost favorite when it comes to handsome silken meshes. Dresses of these filmy silks are often enhanced with charming scarf arrangements or by clever deep-shoulder treatments. The exquisite dress to the right below in the picture is just such a woman of discerning taste recognizes at a glance as being exclusive. This charming model has a shell-like cape of the lace which ties in a generous soft bow at the front, at the same time that it achieves a quaint and lovely neckline. Whiffa cordings stiffen the tiers of the full skirt and the petunia.

Speaking of colorful effects, the handsome costume to the left is fashioned of almost green lace. The picturesque cape of lace is fur colored. It is designed to serve, also as a dainty wrap with other dresses as it is delectable.

ACCESSORIES MAKE BIG RUN ON METAL

Winter necessities are making a big run on metal. Handbags are using wide bands of shining silver to finish off the flap of an envelope, or to construct the top, imposing monograms in gold or in silver, are featured impressively on street handbags.

The ever-present belt fastens more often with an important-looking metal buckle than with any other kind.

Aluminum is making bracelets of assorted widths to wear with winter woolen outfits. Metal buttons and Schipardelli's metal clips are proving both useful and ornamental in dress and coat fashions.

Tiny metal kid splines are featuring upon formal afternoon and evening slippers—metal kid heels on the latter—Mingy-Rouff sponsors the return of old-fashioned colonial buckles for shoes, made of silver, or of cut-steel.

Nothing So Flattering as Magnificent Fur

Nothing is more luxurious or flatteringly becoming than magnificent fur or fur-trimmed coats and the rich velvets and lames that glorify our afternoon frocks.

Any woman becomes a figure of delight and romance when she wears, say a velvet coat with rich fur providing a soft frame for her face, a slim velvet frock and perhaps a cluster of snowy gardenias to set off the deep black of the velvet. And if she seeks color, surely she lams frocks and the lovely coats in brown, red or green offer ample opportunity for colorful attire.

Winter Sports Trousers to Be More Voluminous

Trousers for winter sports costumes will be more voluminous this season, but will keep a very neat waistline at the same time.

Many of the smart skiing suits just appearing at the big sport designers have the blouse buttoning on to the inside of the trousers, with a slimming belt outside. Others have a belt attached to the bottom of the blouse and still others join the two garments with a zip fastener which keeps the waist trim and snug.

CHIC CAPE WRAP

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Cape wraps are the last word in Paris. This one is typical of those favored by the haute monde. While the original model was in bright blue the same style would be equally as effective in black or any color which would relate to the dress with which it is worn. The inevitable trimming of white fur is accented on this beautiful evening wrap.

White Winter Hats

Paris says that even in town on wintry days, the white hat will be chic. Chenille, felt knitted wool, suede and velvet is used. One adorable hat of white is made entirely of closely-matted feathers.

Utterly Feminine A double row of net ruching in the unusual finish to the skirt of a recent velvet gown.

Forgotten HEROES

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Forty Bushels of Wheat "PEACE hath its victories, no less renowned than war." And it also has its heroes, who do brave deeds far from the sound-of-bugle-or-drum. Come up to the tloptop of Indian Hill in Holderness, N. H., and there in a grassy sunny nook look upon a simple granite monument which bears this inscription: "1771—Reuben Whitten—1847—Son of a Revolutionary soldier, pioneer of this town. Cold season of 1810 raised 40 bushels of wheat which kept his family and his neighbors from starvation."

Life was hard for the early settlers in the foothills of the White mountains away back in 1810 when Reuben Whitten moved his family from the little village of Plymouth and began a pioneer's life on a little farm near Lake Umbagog. In the summer-time they raised a little grain and a few vegetables but for the most part they depended upon fish and game for their food.

So when the summer of 1810 came and it rained week after week they did not worry even when their grain and vegetables rotted in the ground. The woods still were full of game and the lake was still full of fish that could be taken through the ice. Reuben Whitten was more fortunate than the rest. His corn and vegetables had been a failure but he had raised 40 bushels of wheat and that was carefully harvested.

There was no autumn that year. Winter came in on an icy blast in October and for two weeks it snowed and rained and melted. The whole country side was deep in snow. Most of the cattle perished, as did much of the wild game. Asquom lake was frozen over deep and the fish congregated deeper in the warmer holes so that fishing was futile. The specter of starvation began to stalk through the settlement.

Then came the word from Reuben Whitten that so long as his little store of wheat lasted, all the others in the settlement should share in it. It was little more than enough to carry his own family safely through the winter and whatever lay beyond, but he would portion it out, a little each week to other families.

The winter increased in severity. In other parts of New Hampshire, and Vermont whole families were wiped out; others were weakened by starvation that they fell prey to disease; fathers and mothers went without food to keep the spark of life in their children. But in the Indian Hill settlement Reuben Whitten's wheat with what little fish and game could be secured kept the half-dozen families alive till spring.

Three Hundred to One

Dawn in Oklahoma stands a monument of native stone which commemorates one of the most remarkable stories of desperate valor in all frontier history. It marks the spot where Pat Hennessy bravely faced odds of 300 to 1 and true to the frontier code "sold his life dearly."

Pat was an old-time Fort Sill freighter and in the spring of 1876 was on his way from Caldwell, Kan., to the fort with a wagon train. He was accompanied by three other men. When "Jumped" by a band of some 300 "Cheyenne warriors, his companions became confused and tried to escape north along the trail. Immediately they were surrounded and cut down. In the meantime Hennessy had sought shelter among some rocks—a little natural fortress, from which his rifle menaced the savages as they approached. Confident in their overwhelming numbers, the Cheyennes swept forward to within 20 yards of Pat's stronghold. Resting his rifle on the rock in front of him and not taking the trouble to aim, he cocked it with one hand and pulled the lever and trigger with the other. A continuous hail of bullets poured into the mass of savages. They broke and retreated.

But they came back again—this time in front and at both sides. Again Pat's deadly fire in front caused them to break and they swirled around to the side where they attempted to climb up the overhanging rocks and get at him from there. Falling in this they tried another frontal attack and surged up to within ten feet of the white man, who fired his revolver point-blank into their faces until he had emptied it. Picking up his rifle again, he continued to fire. And then—the gun jammed!

"The rifle had become so hot and dirty from constant firing that a cartridge stuck fast and his desperate efforts to extract it were useless. In another moment the Indians would have been retreating. But when the firing stopped, they believed his ammunition was exhausted and pressed forward. Hennessy met them with clubbed rifle but the surging mass overpowered him. Insulted by the toll he had extracted for 30 Cheyennes lay dead on the ground, they scalped him, tied him to the wheel of one of his wagons, emptied sacks of oats around him and set them on fire. For a few minutes there was a writhing figure surrounded by flames and then the spirit of Pat Hennessy passed on to that Valhalla reserved for warriors who know how to die but not how to surrender.

BABY

FRETFUL, RESTLESS?

Look to this cause

When your baby fusses, tosses and seems unable to sleep restfully, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation. To get rid quickly of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Castoria, you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a young infant to relieve colic. Yet it is as effective for older children. Castoria's regulative help will bring relaxed comfort and restful sleep to your baby. Keep a bottle on hand. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

"Ingredient X"

St. Louis, Mo.—"Cluck, Cluck. Have you had your ingredient X today?" Such will be the daily interrogation of mother hens to baby chicks as the result of an announcement today of the development of Ingredient X in the research laboratories and on the experimental farm of the Purina Mills.

"Ingredient X," explains Dr. H. J. Smith, in charge of the research work which developed this growth factor, "is simply the blending together of the proteins in a ration in such a way as to make them work together perfectly, much like the gear wheels of an automobile. In other words, Ingredient X is proteins synchronized or properly meshed together."

Not all proteins, Dr. Smith says, will work together. The protein combination that will make milk will not necessarily produce growth in chickens economically.

In beginning this far-reaching protein study some six years ago, many sources of proteins—all that can be obtained in commercial quantities—were used in many and various combinations and fitted with what is known as a basal ration made up of the carbohydrates, fats, vitamins, and minerals known to be essential to growth.

Proteins were studied singly and finally in many combinations in order to get the right combination that would work together and produce in chicks good feathering, rapid growth, high livability, palatability and still not be prohibitive in cost. The right combination of proteins was finally found.

The experiment involved the studying of some 52,000 chicks in battery brooders and on the Purina Experimental Farm. They were weighed 308,502 times in order that everything be checked to the minutest detail.

Starting feeds for baby chicks with ingredient X are handled by the Titworth Company, Inc., at Capitan.

Baptist Church

Rev. L. D. Jordan, Pastor
R. V. Shaw, S. S. Supt.
Our Sunday School is showing a decided growth in interest and attendance.

7:15 P. M.—Song Service. The old-time gospel songs have not yet lost their appeal.

7:45 P. M.—Sermon, by the Pastor.

The Pastor expects to preach at Ancho Sunday morning, but will come back to Carrizozo for the evening service.

New Light on an Old Question

"Do you think a man could get to Heaven without joining the church?" asked several men of a preacher. "I think he could," replied the preacher. The men laughed, patted the preacher on the back, and called him broad-minded. "But," said the minister, "let me ask you a question—why do you want to go to heaven that way?" They could not answer. "Why don't you ask me another question?" suggested the preacher. "Why don't you ask me if a man could get to England from America without going on a boat or a flying machine?" "Well, we'll ask you that. Could he?" "I see no reason," said the minister, "why a man could not get to England without going on a boat or a flying machine, provided he was a good swimmer and carried sufficient food about his person to eat on the way, and furthermore had sufficient strength to buffet the waves, and also lucky enough to get by the sharks—but suppose he eventually would arrive on England's shore, do you think he would get there ahead of the fellow who goes by ship?"—Selected.
