The Spin Game

First mount the card diagram on some cardboard to make it last. Take small pearl buttons and paint them different colors. These are your men. Six players can be in the game. Place one man on each little section in the center and shake up six numbers, each player choosing one. The player who gets same number of spaces on the diagram and so on. Each also has the same number of spaces on it. Player number one plays first, shaking a pair of dice to find out the number of spaces he may move. Each player then does the same in turn and the player going down one side of his aisle and up the other, coming back into the center with a throw of one, wins. The last throw must be a one or the player must lose his turn and wait until he does that one.

The Centipede and Me

Now what in the world can a centipede do with one hundred legs, when I've only two?

I sometimes do manage to trip one of them. Does he do the same, with his whole body rise?

My mother says, "Gracious, your shoes are all right!" But what would she say if I'd one hundred feet?

My two muddy shoes leave their prints on the rug. It's true I'm not one of those centipede bugs!

If I had it hard to tell left foot from right. Oh dear me! I think of the centipede's plight!

And isn't it lucky when time comes to eat!

That I have two hands instead of just feet? No, certainly, you have hundreds or more. If I did, I'd never know what they were for.

Swings; here is one: Make a plate of seasoned soft cheese—a bit of cream may be added to soften—add a suspicion of mustard and a dash of chili sauce. Spread on strips of bread, cover with thinly sliced bacon and toast under the broiler until the bacon is crisp and the cheese soft and melted. If one does not like mustard add a dash of horseradish. For bacon with sliced chicken, a dash of prepared mustard, sautéed in butter, or toasted, is a fine filling for sandwiches to be served hot.

Toast bread, cover with a generous dab of Welsh rabbit and top with a poached egg. Serve with a nice slice of pineapple or any preserves or a slice or two of orange.

Hot bacon in toasted sandwiches with a silver of Bermuda or mild onion between makes a most appetizing tidbit.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

WALTER TRUMBULL

She was a light opera singer, young and beautiful, and she married a well-known playboy. Two temperaments were one too many in the same family, so finally they were divorced. Then she married a wealthy broker. This time it looked as if everything was smooth sailing. They had plenty of money, a lot of friends, and they got along beautifully. Then something took the wall out of Wall Street and in the tidal wave which followed, the man's fortune was washed away almost to the last dollar. They must have been fond of each other, for poverty has not parted them. She has a job as a singer in a cabaret. He always is on hand to take her home. That is not hard. He is, you see, one of the waiters.

Residents of East Fifty-seventh street were startled to see a young man walking along, grappling a large bird. The bird rigidly held its head high and made no resistance. As a matter of fact, this may have been due to the fact that it was stuffed. The man was Dr. Laurence M. Gould and the bird was the giant penguin which usually stands in a corner of his living room. A book store wished to use it in connection with a window display of Doctor Gould's book, "Cold," and he was searching for a taxi to transport the penguin to its new setting. Moreover, he was becoming a little annoyed as several taxmen, after a quick glance, appeared deaf to his halloo and drove rapidly away. This might have been due to the fact that, as he held the bird in front of him, its head towered above his and rather hid him from view. The general effect was that of a mooring and weird looking fowl about seven feet tall. When Doctor Gould did induce a taxi to stop, he poked the bird in so forcibly that its bill almost went through the glass behind the driver's head. Then there was more delay while he convinced that driver that the penguin was really dead and had not tried to bite him.

Here is a tip for housewives: Should your husband happen to bring Maximilian Otto Selgried Schmelling, present heavyweight champion, unexpectedly home to dinner, don't worry if you don't happen to have ducks or chickens in the ice box. All you need to do is to take what remains of the steak or roast beef and put with it some potatoes, onions, tomatoes or whatever else happens to be hand. Mr. Schmelling's favorite dish is meat stew.

SANDWICH IDEAS

Sandwiches are in season all the year, although we serve them more often perhaps during the warm weather when food is served out of doors. Coffee goes with hot sandwiches, served, too, all the year round but enjoyed more perhaps in the cool and chilly days of autumn and winter. Here are a few suggestions which may be varied as one finds an ingredient lacking and supplies it with another: Cheese is so well liked that it is one of the most popular of sandwich

The new Zeppelin will be able to carry 62 passengers and eight tons of freightage on upper deck. Deck A, will comprise 20 cabins with two beds each. Its lower deck will include a promenade deck 45 feet long, a spacious dining room, a parlor, a reading room, smoking room and library. Latest Frocks of Lacy Open Mesh Beauty Talks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHIONLAND is enjoying the thrill of a new enthusiasm. It's for open lacy mesh effects, if you please. Sock-logs, shoes, hosiery, gloves, Texas goods, sports frocks, evening and afternoon gowns, wraps, suits, sweaters, or a blouse, millinery, handbags, or "what have you" in shops, you will be reminded every day in every way that open mesh effects are "it."

Some of the woolen materials are woven so open and lacy one has a feeling they surely are knitted or crocheted. Often these "meshy" weaves are made up with touches of hand-crochet to finish them off. At any rate, if madam or mademoiselle aspires to follow in the footsteps of fashion, an openwork knitted or mesh-fabric gown on the order of the up-to-the-moment models pictured is inevitable for midseason and spring.

The good-looking spectator sports dress which you see to the left in the illustration is of bright orange woolen in a knitted pattern which looks very much like allover lace. Its smart tailored handling adds "class." The coat repeats the white accent which occurs in the yoke of the dress, a whole fox skin forming the collar. The swanky shoes enter into the color scheme most beautifully. Observe that they are very smart open-heel sandals made of exquisite orange-toned kid. According to the style program a big vogue is in promise for dainty footwear of finest kid in very lovely coloring.

Black, tangerine and white are cleverly combined in the early spring street costume shown to the right. The open square-mesh material is in tangerine. Its many-gored skirt which slenderizes at the hipline and flares at the hemline is one of the outstanding features of the model. The surplice yoke of white mesh is also voguish.

VELVET IS SMART FOR SPRING WEAR

Many velvets are popping up here and there in the shops. One of the most effective suits for formal wear combines a white velvet jacket with a black satin skirt. The velvet of the jacket is the new dull-surface variety, and very smart. Short velvet evening wraps are to take the fashion-trenches by storm this spring. They are being shown in every conceivable color, from black and white, through the pastels, to the bright jewel tones.

A black velvet coat for spring wear has barrel sleeves starting to flare at the elbow, and gathered into a tight-cuff of white ermine. A standing white ermine collar is finished by a black velvet bow, like a Windsor tie.

Spring Suit Must Have Jacket to Be Success

You must have a jacket with your new spring frock if it is to be a grand success. Of course, the jacket is sometimes a long coat, especially when it comes to the ensembles that are so liked just now. But it is jackets and nothing but in the evening, when the younger set, almost to a girl, steps out wearing some sort of jacket, however brief, with her frock.

Mostly the jackets are of the same material as the frock, and what they lack in length they make up in chic. But to put back to the frock with its coat, that does not match in color or material and yet manages to show that it is the soul-mate of the accompanying frock.

Flaid Gingham
Another southern fashion that will bear watching is the shirt made just like a man's, of brilliant plaid gingham. These are worn with trousers or with sports skirts and have a chic all their own.

The kid opera pumps, knitted turbau, and abbreviated fur jacket are in black. A chain motif in gray beige to match the hose trims the shoes. Waist-depth jackets of every type of fat fur or of velvet, corduroy or velveteen are outstanding in the new modes.

It is not only for the dress entire that mesh fabrics are scoring a triumph, but for the making of the suit-blouse these loose-woven effects are the rage. In this connection mention should also be made of the latest blouse as per Schiaparelli and other Paris dressmakers, which is hand-crocheted of coarse mercerized crochet cotton and worn with the new spring suits.

Another use of French square-mesh hand-crochet or of the materials which simulate these effects is that of making of them the deep yokes and sleeves such as top fashionable frocks this season, in contrast or of like color.

So popular has the theme of openwork novelties become, some of the shops are displaying accessory sets that include gloves, scarf and bag, all of matching mesh material, either in black, white or bright colors.

Likewise, latest footwear plays up to the hair for open mesh in that ultra-chic shoes made of suva cloth (open mesh that looks like lace) are shown at all leading booteries.

Not only are the now-so-voguish mesh and lace-effect fabrics sponsored in street colors and in vivid shades, but they are sprouting in spring and summer in a series of delicate colorings designated by stylists as "water lily shades." These include such delectable tones and tints as pink petal, water lily green and other as fascinating colors.

HIGH WAISTLINE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The built-up waistline is important this season. This smart black and white check wool suit achieves the desired silhouette via a skirt which is brought up high over the blouse. The lining and the blouse are a vivid green crepe. Even when there is a belt, the newer skirts are made to look as if they extend above the normal waistline by means of tabs and various other clever devices.

Beauty Talks

By MARJORIE DUNCAN
Famous Beauty Expert

About the Coiffure

"TONY, Madame X in there wants her hair plaited," a beauty operator was saying to the hairdressing specialist. "And it will take some tall talking to convince her that she should not have the marcel. You are, a wonder if you can sell her the idea of having an individual hair arrangement."

A look of recognition as Tony glanced in the direction of Madame X. He knew her. And he refused to marcel her hair. With an emphatic gesture he added "My marcel her hair, have it look so hard, so set, make her face look older. Then she will say at the musicale 'Tony, he set my hair today.' No, let George do it!"

It is so surprising to see the majority of women still clinging to the self-same haircut and arrangement they wore a year or two ago, when fashion is so conducive to a change for the better.

Ask any number of Tonys who have studied coiffures as a science and applied it as an art and they will tell you that waves to look natural should swirl in and out, this way and that. Waves need not be uniform, each the same length or width or depth. Fashion favors individuality and softness.

Uneven wave lengths need not and do not give the hair an unkempt appearance. A coiffure can be different, individual and well-groomed as well.

If you go to a hairdresser with definite instructions to follow your present coiffure which you happen to have worn for years, or if you insist on a too-set marcel which gives an obvious and unnatural look to the head and a hard look to the face, don't blame the hairdresser.

On the other hand, if your hairdresser asks you for suggestions or instructions when you come to him with the request for a new and individual cut or arrangement, grab your hat and run. Don't stop to politely say thank you. Don't stop until you have arrived at another establishment which boasts an expert coiffure artist with a fine reputation and a flair for creating individual arrangements, a style of haircomb at once fashionable, flattering, soft, one that will bring out all the loveliness that is YOU and even enhance the beauty of your hair.

Wrinkles Not Fashionable

WITH fashions so eternally youthful, with emphasis continually placed on beauty, wrinkles, are definitely taboo. And if there is one skin difficulty that women dread above all others it is wrinkles. Lines may be the result of squinting, they may be a sign of scowling or similar emotional strain, they may signal "shoes of comfortable proportions necessary"—but to the great army of women wrinkles stand for only one thing and they are ever ready to war against them. For a young girl of twenty feels fully forty the day the first wrinkle is etched under her eyes.

This cause lies within you. For, while it is true that the very dry, delicate and fragile type of skin is prone to line and wrinkle unless compensating nourishment and protection is given to it. It is also true that nervous strain, eye strain, squinting, scowling, and emotional tension are all contributing causes of wrinkles. The woman with the very thin, dry, sensitive skin is wise to take the proverbial ounce of prevention. You will find it in a jar of nourishing, cream-rich in delicate oils—truly a "preserving cream."

When lines have definitely traced their way around your eyes, or from nose to mouth, or on the forehead, or on the neck, or around the chin, add before your cream a very soothing and penetrating oil.

"As easy as pie" is an expression I remember children using when they mean "the easiest thing in the world." Precisely that simple are the facial treatments for erasing fine lines and wrinkles. Providing—and thereby lies the real root of the beauty secret—providing you help your beauty treatments along—from within.

Every facial expression sets the face in motion. And overwork can cause more wrinkles in a month than a decade's calendars combined.

Time alone does not do such damage. Why the look of youth in a woman of fifty if the calendar were really cruel? It is in the skin—its tone—its resistance—its ability to stand overworking. And it is in habit of living and thinking. Obey the health rules and you make a fair bid for beauty. Think quiet, peaceful, beautiful thoughts and a calm, smooth exterior you will show the world. I am not advocating a perpetually placid expression. Too lame—that. But allowing emotions to have free reign and to leave their traces is folly—pictorially speaking. You have only to study your face in a fit of anger; in the depths of self-pity, worry, or the well-known blues. Everything falls. And too oft repeated emotional outbursts leave that old look via traces known as lines and wrinkles—hateful things—the bane of every woman's existence.

First Aid-Home Remedy Week

Chicago, Ill.—"Insure Yourself Against Needless Suffering" is the intensive slogan of personal action which prefaces national announcement that the eleventh anniversary of First Aid-Home Remedy Week has been fixed for March 13-19. The National Association of Retail Druggists, sponsors of the plan which Sterling Products, Inc., dedicated to the drug world in 1922, is joined in this campaign for nation-wide preparation to meet unexpected accident and sudden illness, by the National Wholesale Druggists' Association and the National Association of Retail Drug Clerks. For the first time all State Pharmaceutical Associations are also co-operating for greater preparedness for the physical emergencies of life. Several governors and mayors of municipalities have by proclamation called attention to the week which has enjoyed a decade of increasing success. "Fill That Medicine Chest Now!" is the command that has been made from the first week to the present campaign, and all of them have been timed during housecleaning days. Secretary S. C. Henry of the N. A. R. D. in an awfully suggestive to the retail druggists predicted record-breaking co-operation this year when the week affords opportunity for live wire druggists everywhere to use timely advertising in their local newspapers and thus insure additional sales in a helpful effort to maintain volume.

Animosity of War

Softened by Time

A sword taken from the Uhlan officer, Baron von Lersner, in 1914, has been returned to that gentleman by Wing-Commander Marix, D. S. O., who received it. Wing-Commander Marix had landed at Ypres when he heard that a squadron of Uhlans were holding a chateau about two miles away, and that they had two British prisoners with them. He set out for the chateau with a force of marines. The Germans came out, fired some shots and fled. He chased two of them and the marines shot down the horses. Marix covered the officer with his revolver and the German surrendered and gave him his sword. He saw that the officer's horse was struggling in agony and was about to shoot it when he thought the German would like to do this himself. The Uhlan gave his word of honor that he would make no use of the revolver other than to shoot his horse, and he returned it immediately after. Marix then gave him back his sword. Arriving in Ypres von Lersner once more surrendered his sword, and Wing-Commander Marix promised that if he came through the war alive he would endeavor to return it. Now after 17 years this promise has been redeemed when Marix heard that his old enemy was alive and working in a Berlin bank.—Montreal Family Herald.

Big Man Not Always Strong

W. Leonard Johnson, physical examiner for the New Jersey civil service commission, finds that size requirements for policemen are based on the belief that big men are strong. By tests on 450 applicants for police positions, he found that size bore no relation to strength in men over 5 feet 6 inches tall, says Popular Science Monthly.

Further tests revealed that up to 165 pounds, weight bore some relation to strength, but above that none. He said these facts showed that physical requirements for patrolmen needed revision.

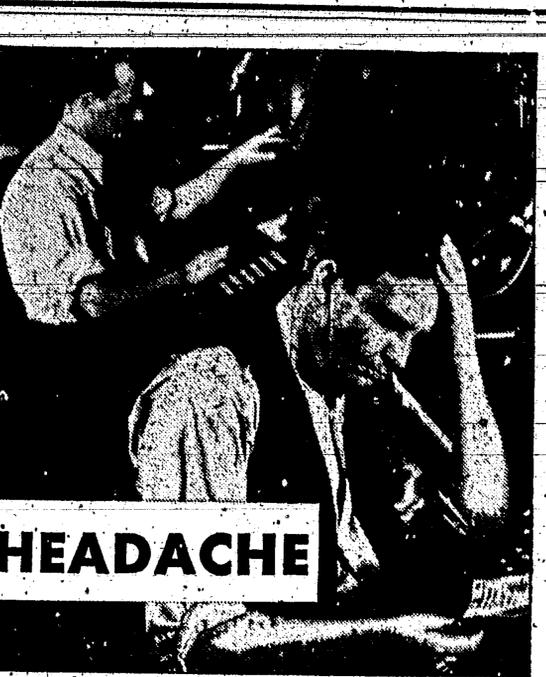

Peculiar Affliction

A motorcycle rider, riding on a main road near Weymouth, England, heard a voice calling from a ditch: "Can you oil my knee joints?" The cyclist dismounted and found a former soldier, who apologetically said: "I've got artificial legs, and they've got so stiff through sleeping out in the rain that they won't work."

Carrizozo Hi School Notes

(By H. S. Reporter)

Well, it won't be long till school will be out again. The time surely does fly after the Junior play and that's out of the way now. The Juniors presented "The Patsy" at the High School auditorium Saturday night and I have to admit it was a pretty good play. I even enjoyed a little of it. Under the skillful direction of Miss Eppard, those Juniors worked out a good play, no foolin'.

The boys went to Vaughn last Friday, and won their first game in the tournament by beating the team from Stanley. They then lost to Corona, and were eliminated. The boys have played in hard luck all winter but next year they will make a brilliant showing.

And more about basketball. The Inter class Tournament began Monday night, the Frosh and Sophs starting the ball rolling at 7 o'clock. The Frosh played a mighty good game, and noded out the Sophs 22 to 1.

The next game those mighty Juniors picked on the grades, and only beat them by five points, 11 to 6.

Then the Frosh played the Seniors, in the most exciting game of the evening. The Frosh were surely "on" that night, and beat the Seniors 10 to 9.

The evening's entertainment wound up by the grades beating the Sophs 22 to 8. And we all went home from the biggest time's worth of fun and enjoyment of the year—some of us grinning and some of us with faces a yard long.

After the Senior-Freshman game, the Juniors went wild with joy, and all of Tuesday we had to listen to their crowing around. But it was a different story on Wednesday and here's why. They had to play the Frosh on Tuesday night, and the Frosh beat them worse than they beat the Seniors— 9 to 6 was the score, and you should have heard the excuses Wednesday morning.

The other games Tuesday night were as follows:

Seniors-Grades 22 to 7 for Seniors.

Freshmen-Grades 13 to 8 for Freshmen.

Sophs-Juniors 24 to 6 for Juniors.

They were all good games, and worth a dime of a n y b o d y's money.

Basket-ball season is almost over, and baseball season is almost here. Let's hope for some hot times in baseball soon.

And last Thursday came the best Assembly entertainment of the year. The physical education girls put on a show of gymnastics which was very interesting as well as entertaining.

Chevrolet Leads in Detroit

Detroit, Mich., March—Registrations for Wayne county, which includes Detroit and occupies an important place on the nation's automotive map in that it is the manufacturing center of the industry, reveal that Chevrolet tilted more cars and trucks in February than in February, 1931, or in January of this year. Complete returns for the month ended credit Chevrolet with registering 760 cars and trucks, compared with 650 in January and 640 in February of 1931.

February was the third successive month in which Chevrolet led all other makes of cars in registrations in the county, tilting 52.5 per cent of all makes sold in the low priced class during the month.

Congress fiddles as usual. The first thing that Congress should do is to guarantee bank deposits. That is one of our major troubles now—the lack of faith in our banks; and too many people are using their old sock for a bank.

The man who puts off beginning a savings account for his old age, as a rule does not begin. There is never a favorable time to begin a savings account. The man who puts everything before his savings plan will not have any savings. The best and the only way to accumulate a savings account is to put the savings plan ahead of everything else.

Just as fast as we reach around the corner we see prosperity disappearing around the next corner.

Nearly two million people in England draw a dole of a dollar a day.

Some other folks are beginning to see the light, and that is that all wages and everything must get down to the farm level before we start up.

One hundred and fourteen in Sunday School last Sunday morning, and thirty-six, at the Epworth League service in the evening. Watch those young people! Next Sunday morning the music and song service will be in charge of Miss Dia Herringa and her chorus from the fifth grade. About twenty-five of the children will take part. There will be a short sermon for the children. Here's a suggestion for you parents. Wouldn't it be well for you to come with the children to Sunday School and remain for their service at eleven o'clock? Remember Sunday School at nine forty-five, and the children's service at eleven. And some of you older people might look in on the Epworth League service at 6:30 also. We are rather proud of these young people. The orchestra will be with us for the evening service at seven-thirty. And you "Show Me State" people, we want every one of you at that service next Sunday night. In other words it will be Missouri night. All former Missourians are urged to be present. That does not mean Missourians only, but Missourians especially. Let's see how many there are here from the "Show Me" State. Special music for you, including Missouri songs. Later we will hear from Texas and other states, and there will be a special service for native New Mexicans also. But let's all gather and see and listen to the folks from the Big Muddy next Sunday night. The meaning of Missouri is "muddy water." But Missourians are wise, remember that, else there wouldn't be so many in New Mexico. They have to be shown, but they know a good thing when they see it. More of them ought to see New Mexico.

The choir is busy practicing for the Easter service. And we can look forward to something good. Remember that Christmas Cantata and govern yourself accordingly when the Easter Songalogue is announced. If you can sing come and help the choir.

Chemistry May Yet Do

Away With Wheat Field

Without the help of skilled chemists to analyze soils and fertilizers, our scientific plant breeders would be powerless. They could never have given us new types of wheat which grow farther north than ever before, wheats which ripen from seed to harvest in so short a time that immense new corn belts have been opened up, while the world price of wheat has tumbled.

Chemistry may, any day, produce an artificial wheat product, as it has given us artificial dyes and drugs which amount to exact laboratory copies of what nature grows. Fifty years ago all the dyes used by man were obtained from plants, bark of trees, roots, insects and so on. Today, these are superseded by thousands of exquisite artificial dyes made in an infinite variety of shades, practically all derived from coal tar.

This chemical development killed the wood-growing industry which went on for two thousand years in these islands. It finished madder-growing in France and ruined the indigo plantations of India. Many thousands of acres were thrown out of cultivation, and millions of money were lost. During the next fifty years, who can say that wheat may not become a factory product?

If a drug like guanine and a dye like indigo can be made in the laboratory, what is to prevent problems of nutrition from being dealt with in the same manner?—London Tit-Bits.

Raleigh Not Introducer of Tobacco to Europe?

Authorities have tried to pin the introduction of tobacco into Europe on one man or another but the reasonable theory is that it was brought back by Spanish sailors and sea captains, names unknown, who bought it from Spaniards that cultivated it commercially in the West Indies, as far back as 1635. The tobacco of the island of Trinidad, for instance, became famous all over Europe, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Still, in the effort to be specific, one writer of records made the claim that a famous physician, Francisco Fernandes, who was sent to Mexico by Phillip II of Spain in 1568, was the first to take specimens of the plant back to Europe. But this was several years after the Spaniards began exporting tobacco from their plantations in the West Indies; and it was in 1600 that Jean Nicot, of nicotine fame, French ambassador to Lisbon, found the tobacco seed there that he sent to Paris.

Sir John Hawkins was the first to take tobacco to England, which he did in 1605, and history tells us that tobacco was growing there in 1670. However, Sir Walter Raleigh was a much more romantic figure, so it was more thrilling to pin the fact on him, in much the same way that we pin facts and sayings on those among our own prominent contemporaries whom we wish to credit—or discredit.

Tobacco as Healer

When tobacco made its debut in Europe, everything was expected of it that the Indians expected. It was believed that it not only cured but ward-off disease, and the plague was fought with tobacco smoke in Spain, France and England. Even now there are those who think that a chew of tobacco, placed on a wound, will heal it.

Before the end of the sixteenth century tobacco was grown not only in Europe but in Turkey, China and many other outlying places. In the course of centuries it changed in flavor and appearance because of the differences of climate and soil, so that now experts can tell where tobacco was grown when they look at it or smell it.

"The Thinker" Explained

Bobby was a sore trial to his mother because of his slowness in getting dressed. He never seemed to remember where he had put this and that article of apparel.

On one occasion he was taken to a museum where he saw a reproduction of Rodin's "Le Penseur." His mother explained that the title meant "The Thinker."

"Bobby studied the figure intently for a moment, and then said, "He's probably trying to think where he left his clothes."

Short Night

It was Willie's first ride in a railway train, and the succession of wonders reduced him to a state of continuous astonishment. The train rounded a slight bend and, with a shriek of its whistle, plunged into a tunnel.

There were gasps of surprise from the corner where Willie was. Suddenly the train rushed into broad daylight again, and a small voice was lifted in wonder. "It's tomorrow!" exclaimed the small boy.—Christian Register.

Unavailing Worry

There are many men who have felt positively suicidal in that "crucial hour before the dawn when men see themselves and their failures at their worst"; but the next morning, when daylight and a reawakened vigor has enabled them to think clearly about their problems, and see their bogeys in proper proportion, they have found themselves full of renewed courage and faith, and have wondered why they were ever so foolish as to allow themselves to fall victims to unreasonable despondency.—London Tit-Bits.

FINNEY OF THE FORCE

A Little Misunderstanding

By-Products of Rice for the Live Stock

Splendid Fattening Ration, Experts Declare.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture, WNU Service.)

Rice by-products, as feeds for live stock are coming into more general use in the United States now that the production of rice is increasing. The process of milling rice for human consumption removes about 10 per cent of the protein and 80 per cent of the oil content of the kernel in the form of rice bran and rice polish. These by-products and another known as brewers' rice make excellent feeds for live stock. The proteins of rice are similar in nutritive value to those of other grains and oil-bearing seeds.

For most purposes rice polish and brewers' rice have practically the same feeding value as corn in fattening rations, according to E. W. Sheets and A. T. Sepple of the bureau of animal industry, who conducted experiments. The only exception is the hog ration, in which the quantity of rice polish must be limited because of its tendency to produce soft pork. When fed in limited quantities rice polish may have 25 per cent more value than corn, because of its high fat and protein content. Rice bran, which also has a high feeding value, apparently is valuable in preventing nutritional leg weakness in growing chicks. Rice hulls, on the other hand, have practically no value as feed and are commonly used for fuel by the mills.

Miscellaneous Publication 132-MP, "Rice and Its By-products for Feeding Live Stock," published by the department, gives specific information regarding the use of rice and rice by-products in feeding cattle, horses and mules, hogs and chickens. Suggested rations containing rice or rice by-products are also included for various kinds of live stock. Copies may be obtained on application to the office of information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Gave Bride Blood; Now He Sues Her.

Washington.—Albert P. Hall, 906 B street, N. E., who last March gave blood for a transfusion to save the life of his bride, now is suing for absolute divorce from Verna, Mae Hall, whom he charges with deserting him and marrying another man.

The petition filed in District Supreme court through Attorney H. P. Long, complains the wife left home 107 days at a time shortly after their marriage less than a year ago, and that on September 14 of this year she married the man Hall names as co-respondent in Rockville, using the name of Eleanor Galney.

Mrs. Hall cut an artery in her right arm last March, a month after her marriage and was taken to George Washington hospital in a critical condition. The husband, who gave his blood for a transfusion, said it was the sixth attempt she had made to take her life.

ELECTRIC WIZARD DIES IN MYSTERY

Fired as Middy for Pranks in Electricity.

Baltimore, Md.—Suicide or experiment?

Which caused the death of John A. Sygon, nineteen-year-old former midshipman, whose wizard-like pranks in electricity caused his resignation from the United States Naval academy at Annapolis?

The young genius was found dead in his bed by his father, Col. Joseph K. Sygon, U. S. A. In one hand the youth clutched a tube of gas used to deaden pain. The youth had died of asphyxiation.

The coroner's verdict was "suicide," but Colonel Sygon insists that his son died while carrying his experiments past the limit of safety.

The phenomenal scientific gifts of young Sygon nearly set his austere Naval academy on its ear while he was there. He established a system of remote control in his room which enabled him to operate the elevators, the lighting system, clocks, bells and even the telephones. All sorts of queer things began to ensue.

Finally the mysterious wires were located, and there was only one thing for the young cadet to do—resign.

After young Sygon's resignation, he was offered positions by several large electrical firms, who felt that they could use the talents of the young jackanapes, but refused.

Hog-Cholera Outbreaks Brought Under Control

Swine growers in many of the hog-producing states experienced serious losses from outbreaks of hog cholera in September, October and November, 1931. An estimate made by veterinarians of the United States Department of Agriculture indicates that recent losses were about equal to those experienced in some sections during the severe outbreak of 1929, when the disease caused losses at the rate of 70 hogs in each 1,000.

The outbreaks last year, however, diminished rapidly with the liberal use of anti-hog-cholera serum and the advent of winter. December showed a marked reduction in the prevalence of the disease, in some states the number of outbreaks receding almost 50 per cent. This 1931 experience is a reminder that the disease is by no means conquered, says the department, and that constant efforts should be made to prevent these destructive waves of hog cholera.

Emptying Pit Silo

Hay barn equipment helps John Jacobson, Hamilton county, Neb., to get feed out of his silo. The silo is 12 by 40 feet. Ten feet of it is above ground and 30 feet below the surface. Mr. Jacobson installed a track and carrier at the top with the track extending several feet beyond the edge of the silo. Last summer when pasture was short, a feed bunk was placed under the track and the dairy herd was given its silage there. The track is high enough so a wagon may be run under it for unloading. The silage is lifted with a horse. A bucket with false bottom is used.—Capper's Farmer.

The Mortgage Debt

The farm mortgage debt in the United States is estimated at $3,241,000,000, January 1, 1930, which is a decline of 24 per cent from the peak of farm mortgage debt in 1923, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. The farm mortgage total in 1920 was $7,857,000,000. It is pointed out that substantial amounts of the decrease since 1923 have been due to foreclosure of mortgaged farms and to scaling down of loans as a condition of renewals.

Around the Farm

A farm business without records is like a clock without hands. You can't tell whether it is gaining or losing nor even where it stands at any one time.

Sixty-six management demonstrations conducted in 35 many communities under the supervision of the state college extension service during the past year brought better methods of handling sheep to the attention of 1,506 Pennsylvania farmers.

Wisconsin produced 263,508 bushels of certified seed potatoes in 1931.

On twelve farms in Ohio in 1931 the official yield of corn was in excess of 100 bushels to the acre, according to R. D. Lewis, extension professor of crops at the Ohio State university.

The dust treatment of seed corn does pay, according to results obtained during 1931 in ten counties in Iowa, involving 120 plots. The average gain per acre was four bushels obtained at a cost of 4 cents per acre.

Captain Sticks to Job at Sea as Home Burns

Norfolk, Va.—A story of how a coast guard captain stuck to his work of trying to salvage a sinking vessel while his home burned to the ground within plain sight was related here. George H. Freeman, representative of the underwriters who carried insurance on the lost tanker St. Rita told the story.

The St. Rita, he said, bound from the Carolina coast to Hampton with 175 barrels of fish, went aground on a quicksand near the Paul Gamiel coast guard station on the North Carolina coast.

Coast Guard Capt. G. G. Snow and his crew, rescued Capt. Frank Favors and crew, and were rushing salvaging operations when Capt. Snow saw his home afire 200 yards distant on the shore. He decided it was useless to try to save it and continued with his work. His house was destroyed.

The St. Rita, too, was a total loss.

Husband Kills Suing Wife; Takes Own Life

Kansas City, Mo.—The filing of a divorce suit by Mrs. Anna Couch against Thomas R. Couch led to his shooting her fatally on a downtown street and then killing himself.

The wife was forty-three years old and the husband was fifty-one. They had been separated only a short time before the shooting. They had lived together about twenty years, Mrs. Couch said before her death.

When the divorce case was called by Judge Allen C. Southern a deadly silence fell over the assemblage because Mrs. Couch was at that time in a hospital. She had filed the divorce suit a week before.

Girls Raising Goats

Goat raising is becoming a favorite vocation for girls in Britain. The milk of the animals is becoming increasingly popular there, and girls at the recent dairy show in London said that the work is easy and pleasant. "To say that anyone is as silly as a goat is to pay him a very high compliment," said one fair exhibitor, "for the goat is a most intelligent animal."

MUSCULAR—RHEUMATIC PAINS

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant" because its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. It gets action and is not just a salve. Do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area three or four times for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Tuning in on Heaven

Neal's Mother Has Right Idea

Impudence is not "personality."

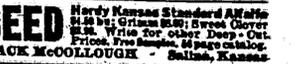

Within a few months there will be no more feverish, bilious, headachy, constipated, pale and puny children. That prophecy would surely come true if every mother could see for herself how quickly, easily, and harmlessly the bowels of babies and children are cleansed, regulated, given tone and strength by a product which has proved its merit and reliability to do what is claimed for it to millions of mothers in over fifty years of steadily increasing use.

As mothers find out from using it how children respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup by growing stronger, sturdier and more active daily they simply have to tell other mothers about it. That's one of the reasons for its overwhelming sales of over four million bottles a year.

A Western mother, Mrs. Neal M. Todd, 1701 West 27th St., Oklahoma City, Okla., says: "When my son, Neal, was three years old he began having constipation. I decided to give him California Fig Syrup and in a few days he was all right and looked fine again. This pleased me so much that I have used Fig Syrup ever since for all his colds or little upset spells. It always stops his trouble quick, strengthens him, makes him eat."

Always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name and see that the carton bears the word "California." Then you'll get the genuine.

The Men on the Dead Man's Chest

by Clifford Raymond

(WNU Service.)
Copyright, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

FROM THE BEGINNING

During a "holdup" at the Dutch Mill, Chicago night club, a patron, Dunn Clayton, is killed. Lieutenant of Police Stanton questions a club visitor, "Buck" Trembley. In Clayton's pocket Stanton found a note signed "Miles," making an appointment with the dead man at the Dutch Mill. Stanton is inclined to suspect Trembley of the murder. At a Wisconsin winter camp a boisterous crowd includes Preston Brown. An apparent stranger arrives. Later, two men, driving home on the scene, the stranger leaves in his car, and the two men follow, passing him. A viaduct is out, and one of the two men removes the danger signals. The stranger, in his car, goes over the embankment. He is dead when found. Brown is dead. In his papers the name is found and Stanton connects the deaths. He goes to Wisconsin, and finds the dead man is Trembley. Trembley had caused Brown's death, apparently an accident. A Vermont lawyer, John Whittlecox, reading in his car, recalls the names in connection with an odd will made by a man named Turner. Turner had bequeathed the interest on $5,000,000 to six men, Miles, Ashley, Roberts, Brown, Trembley, and Clayton. The income, at the death of each beneficiary, in the order named, among the rest, Turner's son, on the death of the six beneficiaries is to inherit all. Turner dies shortly after making the will. Whittlecox suspects foul play in the three deaths, and writes to the Chicago police. Stanton interviews ASA Darling, one of the executors of the will. Darling tells him he believes Turner wanted and expected the six beneficiaries of the will to know one another, they having in the past injured him beyond forgiveness. The will is his method of revenge.

Lieutenant Stanton did not know much of old New England houses but he knew something, and after he had clicked the gate he stopped to observe that in the transplanting of the idea into the Hudson valley the bastard second-story dormers over the purity of the straight pitch of the roof had not been carried along with it. The roof came down unbroken from the ridge and a two-foot overhang protected the dormer. Here, also, he noted, the supports were Doric in spirit and not Corinthian.

The lieutenant, observing these conformities, looked about confidently for what he then necessarily must find, and there it was: a clump of hollyhocks with narrowed lime blossoms serene in the sun at the top of the stalks. Flagstones led around the house to what the lieutenant knew to be the front of an old New England home, the kitchen.

In 1923 the lieutenant had gone to Boston to see Bunker Hill monument on Breed's hill. From Boston he had gone to Plymouth to see the Rock in its half-portion Greek temple, and from Plymouth he had gone to Duxbury to see what is offered for visitation as John Alden's house. He remembered its kitchen.

Now he went around by the flagstones, knowing what he would find as to its persons. A young man was working in the kitchen garden, pulling out and piling up the stems of the summer vegetables.

As the lieutenant came around the corner the young man was standing up with a tomato stem in each hand. He saw the lieutenant, dropped the stems and came forward. He smiled as if any person coming around his kitchen porch and garden, even to put him to the trouble of giving directions or of saying that he could not take any more magazines, had brightened the day a little. It was that sort of boy and that quality of smile. He said good morning. A gesture apologized for his staid hands.

"My name is Stanton," said the lieutenant. "I came around the back way."

"Quite right," said the boy. "I see, you did."

"I mean, it seems to be the thing you do at a New England house."

"Isn't it true?" the boy said, with a chuckling laugh. "You're probably Massachusetts. . . . No, I shouldn't wonder if you're just over the line in, maybe, Vermont; maybe New Hampshire."

"No, Mr. Turner, I'm a lieutenant of Chicago police."

"Boom! Boom!" said the boy. "No offense, lieutenant. And you want to see me about my father's will and about me and the beneficiaries. Of course. Shall we go in the house or sit out here on the bench?"

"Will you let me see the house later?" the lieutenant asked. "If you will I'll not take you in now—or put you in the goldfish bowl."

"The goldfish bowl?"

"Our third degree. You have heard of the third degree?"

"Have I? The extortion of confessions, of course. But I have nothing to confess. Let's sit down on the bench. If you had some a fortnight ago, I could have shown you some 'de dabbles. We feared frost and cut them all. It was a good garden year. Tomatoes? Well, you'd never believe the tomatoes. Agnes has the cellar full of them in cans and crocks. Tomato butter in the crocks. Agnes is my wife. I'm rather impressed by that when I say it. You see, she's been my wife only three months. I suppose one gets over being unduly impressed, but it doesn't seem possible now."

"Tell me, Mr. Turner," said Stanton, "why you didn't contest your father's will. Most sons would have done so. Courts aren't easily persuaded to set wills aside, but your father's was so eccentric that it might have been regarded as bad public policy to let it stand."

"But why should I have done so, lieutenant?" the boy asked. "My father knew what he wanted to do. I liked him. He was always considerate of me. He made all his money himself. He left me ample for security and comfort. If I wanted more I should be obliged to get it myself. I know he loved money, but he loved earned money. I disappointed him. You mustn't think he was bitter about it. He was eminently reasonable. I was what I was. He was what he was. He'd have liked a son who could have stepped out with him, you know. A fellow who would have been berserker when he was berserker. I wasn't that fellow. He had to swallow his disappointment and go his way, while I went mine."

"He had some compelling reason for making this will. Do you know what it was?"

"Not as much as you'd like to have me. Here, you see, is one consequence of my being the kind of son I was. I was not much in my father's confidence. I suppose he wanted these men to make one another miserable. He may have thought or have known that they would try to kill one another."

"But you don't know why? You don't know what they did to him?"

"I don't, not in a satisfactory way. I know he nearly died years ago from exposure in a jungle, Panama or maybe Peru. What he was doing there I don't know, but you may be sure it had something to do with money. I think he had been deserted by men with whom he was associated or whom he had employed. There were a great many ventures in his life which might have made him hate men. He hated quickly and hard and long. There's my wife in the doorway now. Oh, Agnes!"

"Yes, Bill."

"Come on out. You'll want to see Agnes, lieutenant."

A young woman came toward the garden as Stanton stood up. She was comely and smiling.

"My wife, lieutenant," said the boy. "Agnes, this is lieutenant Stanton of the Chicago police, actually of the Chicago police, where they need them. We've been talking, as you'd guess, of my father's will. Let's sit down again. Maybe you've heard that father did not like Agnes. That wasn't true. He did, but when he saw her it was confirmation of what he already knew about me. I never was going to die in a Panama jungle. I wasn't going to be in the whirl of anything. So he passed us up. He knew neither one of us ever would even ride a horse across country. He was fair enough to admit that some people must be like that. One happened to be his son and another was to be his daughter-in-law."

Lieutenant Stanton looked at the young wife inquiringly.

"I've never been quite so tolerant of Bill's father as he is," she said. "I feel as Bill does as to our share of the will. It's enough. I prefer Bill to go the rest of his way on his own feet. But the other intention of the will—it's been terrible."

"He had a reason," said the boy. "I'm not soft that way. I've no doubt the men deserve whatever they do to one another."

"Even now," the lieutenant suggested, "the courts might set the will aside in your favor. There have been three murders. There are probably two more to come."

"No," said the boy, "I wouldn't interfere if I could."

"But, Bill," said the young woman, laying her hand on his arm, "I feel that we're sharing responsibility if we neglect something we could do. We don't want the money, as you say, but think of the ways good use could be made of it and think of what it is doing now."

"No, Agnes. It's not our concern and I do not believe the courts will find it any concern of theirs until these men are charged with murder. Let's go in and show lieutenant Stanton the house. He likes New England houses."

CHAPTER VI

Mr. Roberts Makes a Call

"Occasionally you'll hear from me," Stanton said to the young couple as they stood in the front doorway of old burial and coffin-length uncertainties. "Did you ever consider how they will get you out of that house if you are in it until you die?"

"It's the window for us," said the boy. "We're anticipating it, cordially."

"My Wife, Lieutenant," Said the Boy.

It will be a romantic escape. Like a bird.

"Don't be in a hurry about it," said the lieutenant.

"Certainly not," said young Mrs. Turner.

"You'll hear from me," said the lieutenant as he clicked the gate. "You're only three removes from a lot of money."

"We couldn't abide it," the girl called after him.

The lieutenant waved them farewell. He looked at his watch and saw that he had an hour of the morning before lunch, and when he came to his hotel he walked on by it to the Hasbrouck house, headquarters of Washington when the army marched back from Yorktown to the Highlands.

The late October sun was warm, and the lieutenant strolled about within the inclosed grounds, reading the inscriptions on the French guns of His Christian Majesty and observing contemplatively the tomb of Uzal Knapp, "the last of the Life Guards."

[Even more than an Unknown Soldier in Arlington, Westminister, at the Arc de Triomphe or elsewhere, Uzal Knapp is the military apotheosis of the enlisted man. His is the lone watch in the Highlands. His name is known, not unknown. His tomb on the bluff by the Hudson is in the living shade of his commander in chief. The spot is Uzal Knapp's with the old cannon of an eclipsed Sun King blazing with darts and their assertion of "sec pluribus impar ratio ultima regnum," castings of Berenger at Douay.

Royal Soup Calls for Variety of Ingredients

The recipe for the famous "ollo" soup made for the Austrian court since the time of the Empress Maria Theresa's father has been printed in Budapest. It is said to have originated in Spain, and the secret was revealed by a pensioned court chef. The stock consisted of veal or ham, mutton, venison and other game roasted in butter and then boiled. Calves' feet and ox feet, turned into jelly, were added, together with white cabbage stewed with smoked and fresh pork, maize seed, chestnuts, lentils, pearl barley and carrots roasted with sugar.

The combination was laid on ice for four hours, so as to remove every trace of grease. Next a bouillon was prepared of beef and veal bones, mushrooms and other vegetables, making a liquid to be cleared by the addition of hashed beef, ox liver and white of eggs. The boiling bouillon was strengthened by cooked wild ducks, turkey, pigeons, pheasants, goose and wild duck. It took two days and two nights to complete the process.

The last thing done was to drain the concoction through muslin bags. When porcelain jugs were filled, the guests were served in small china cups.—New York Times.

Invention of Telescope

A letter nearly three hundred and fifty years old in which Galileo Galilei expressed great excitement over his invention of a telescope that would "discover ships two hours before they could be seen by natural vision," is said to have been acquired by Thomas F. Madigan, of New York. The letter, written to the grand duke of Tuscany, Cosimo II, concludes: "I assure you I will keep this invention a great secret and exhibit it only to your highness." Cardinal Pietro Maffei, of Pica, Italy, has written that the letter is authentic, as it compares perfectly with other Galileo letters in the Pisa collection.

Democracy has lived. The Sun King is dead. Three cheers for Knapp!

Stanton gave Uzal a soldier's salute and walked back to the hotel. In the red-carpeted dining room of the Palace the colored head waiter came to him.

"Lieutenant Stanton?" he asked.

"Yes," said the lieutenant.

"Mr. Darling has telephoned asking you to call him at your convenience."

"Thank you," said the lieutenant. He finished his lunch and went to a telephone booth.

"Who do you think is standing on my hearthrug?" Mr. Darling asked.

"An unfair question. Unless it's Pompey."

"It's Donald Roberts, a bit nervous."

"No," said Stanton.

"I assure you, yes. And as I've told him you are here he wants to see you. The gentleman is slygety."

"May I come right over?"

"I'd suggest it."

The map Stanton found on Mr. Darling's hearthrug was trim, of medium height, black-haired with gray above the ears, restless, dandified, shifty-eyed and undoubtedly in a state of mind. His tailoring was good and his little body took it very well. A slender gold watch chain crossed his vest and almost constantly he fingered it with one hand or the other.

"This is lieutenant Stanton, Mr. Roberts," said Mr. Darling.

"How do you do," said Roberts. "I'm told you're interesting yourself in this thing."

"Anyone might be interested. I was assigned to it."

"The lieutenant will have a great deal to do with it, Mr. Roberts," said Mr. Darling, "and maybe it would be the simplest start if you would tell him as you told me why you paid me this visit."

"I've just learned of the death of Clayton and Brown and Trembley," said Roberts. "I've been abroad. When I arrived in New York I read of it, and yesterday I saw in the World that a Chicago detective was in White Plains examining the Turner will."

"That was my general little friend, the probate clerk," said Stanton. "He wished me luck and then gave the boys the story. And why not, at that? Let's see, when did you read this?"

"Yesterday morning."

"That's right for what I seem to have asked you, but when did you read of the death of your friends?"

"A week or ten days ago."

"If the story interested you, you might have cut it out. Sometimes people do."

Roberts took a clipping from his pocket.

"That's right," said Stanton, glancing at it and returning it. "You are familiar then with the principal known facts, but that story was printed October 11. This is October 23. What caused you to come to Newburgh today?"

"Is this a police examination?"

"Yes. The beginning of one."

"I'm not sure I'm prepared to submit to one."

"Don't give that dilemma a thought. Just answer questions. Why did you come here today?"

"I've been perplexed and concerned. It suddenly occurred to me that Mr. Darling was the one for me to see."

"Well, Mr. Roberts," said the lieutenant, "you observe that your income has been increased, whether the method perplexed you or not."

"What do you mean by that?"

"The divide is only three ways instead of six, as I understand it," said the lieutenant. "Even if the news of the death of your friends was a shock there was that consolation."

Roberts fingered his watch chain with both hands.

"Friends!" he exclaimed and laughed sharply. "What I want to know is what's it all about? Who is killing these men and why? You can't explain it by coincidence. That's too fishy."

"What do you make of it? You don't imagine that it is all among friends, reducing the overhead to increase the dividends?" the lieutenant asked.

"What else can I think?" Roberts made a gesture of impatience which suggested dismay.

"Why should you think so? You three who are alive were supposed to be in Europe. We find you here. Are we to conclude that you were the one who took the red lights away from the bride's approach?"

"O—d, no, man!" Roberts almost yelled it.

"Well, then," Stanton persisted, "the whole theory breaks down. Even if Turner's beneficiaries did start cracking one another out for increased returns there must have been a character not in the plot on that Wisconsin road. You are here but innocent. The other two are abroad."

It was at this point that Roberts' nervousness became quite apparent as "There's where you're crazy," he said. "They're both here. H—A, man! They're here. Wasn't Ashley on the boat with me? Blair probably was too."

Extinction of Gigantic

"Cat" Hard to Explain

A giant lion—considerably larger than the African animal of today and representing one of the highest developments of "killing" effectiveness in the mammal world—lived in North America at about the time this continent first was invaded by human beings.

Bones of the "atrocious cat," as it has been named in the Latin of science, have been found in asphalt deposits near Los Angeles by paleontologists of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, together with bones of about 1,000 other animals of the cat tribe.

"Fellisator" was a true king of cats, and probably of the whole animal world of his time. In the same deposits were found many bones of the almost equally ferocious "amiodon," or saber-toothed cat, those of a puma closely related to the present American species, and those of a wildcat apparently identical with a type still living in California. All these animals were flesh eaters. They were drawn to the asphalt beds to devour the carcasses of animals caught there, became trapped themselves, and perished.

The puzzle the paleontologists are trying to work out is why these great and frightful creatures, strong and fierce enough to get all the food they wanted by devouring other animals, perished completely at about the beginning of the historical period, while the little wildcat lived on into the present.

All Virgin Islands Not Controlled by America

The Virgin islands are a group of some 40 of the northern end of the Leeward chain of the Lesser Antilles. They begin about 60 miles due east of Porto Rico. About 30 of the easterly islands of the group are British and constitute one of the "presidencies" or governmental districts of the Leeward Islands colonial government. Altogether these British Virgin Islands have an area of 53 square miles, and a population of a little more than 5,000.

Larger and more important are the westerly islands, formerly constituting the colony of the Danish West Indies. The chief of these are St. Croix (84 square miles), St. Thomas (28 square miles) and St. John (20 square miles), having a total population of about 26,000.

This westerly group was purchased by the United States in 1917 for $25,000,000. They were given as an official name the "Virgin Islands of the United States." But Americans often bob off the latter half of the official name and forget all about the Virgin islands which do not belong to the United States.

Gastronomic Map

More than any other country in the world, France can be very pleasantly described not only by its scenery and its historic locations, but by the food and drink which its chefs and cellarmen are able to put before the tourist. A gastronomic map of France could be drawn showing where in Alsace it was possible to get the best pate-de-foie gras, where in La Rochelle the finest small stew could be found, where in Normandy the best elder and Camembert, where in Brittany the tastiest fish products, where in Touraine the finest fruit and nuts, and, of course, a prominent place for Marseilles with its unforgettable Bouillabaisse and for Provence with its famous truffes, with wines from Burgundy to Bordeaux.

Tobacco in Old England

For fifty years after tobacco began to be used in England, all classes smoked, from the peers to the peasants. Presently the medical profession abandoned it for use in combating sickness, but by that time smoking had become fashionable. Sir Walter Raleigh's true place in tobacco history is that long before his death, in 1618, he taught the world to smoke for pleasure.

However, tobacco had enemies from the very beginning. King James I taking it upon himself to write the "Counterblast to Tobacco," and Dekker, the dramatist, referred to it as "that beggarly monarch of Indians, and settler-up of rotten-lunged chimney sweepers."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Too Well Known

All reputable monarchs years ago kept jesters who were allowed considerable liberty of speech. The story is told of Paece, Jester to Queen Elizabeth of England, who so embittered her majesty by his remarks that he was forbidden her presence. In time he was taken back, however, and the very first time the queen and jester again met, the queen in a gracious humor said, "Come on, Paece, now, we shall hear of our faults." "No, my lady," said the jester, "I never talk of what is discoursed by all the world."

French "Goddess of Reason"

On November 10, 1793, the French revolutionists entered the cathedral of Notre-Dame, in Paris, and placed with elaborate ceremonies, an actress from the opera named Mlle. Malliard, dressed in white with a phrygian cap and the tri-color, on the high altar, installed her as the "Goddess of Reason." The church was named the "Temple of Reason" and it was not restored as a shrine of religious worship until by the order of Napoleon in 1802.
