The Victory Campaign of the Democratic Party

March 11, 1932.

To the Democratic County Chairmen of the Nation:

Two recent achievements strengthen the conviction of the American public that the Democrats are ready and equipped to direct our National Government.

First, is the exhibition of statesmanship given to the country by the Democrats in both Houses of Congress, which has won nation-wide applause. While the opposition is claiming every recent law as an administration product, the fact remains that this administration had nearly three years to enact the requisite legislation, the necessity of which had been obvious during the whole period of the existing depression. It remained for the Democrats in the seventy-second congress to provide constructive action under the leadership of Speaker Garner and Senator Robinson.

Second in achievement, is the Democratic Victory Campaign, for which more than 20,000 loyal Democrats are at work in every state in the Union. The object of the Victory campaign is to obtain $1,500,000, to put the party in a strong financial position and to build a national organization so that victory in November can be assured. In eight weeks alone, more than 40,000 persons throughout the country have contributed to the Victory Fund.

I know you will agree with me that the success of the Victory campaign is essential to the party. Nothing will do more to kindle a militant spirit throughout the Democracy and to insure victory at the polls in November, not only nationally, but in every state and local election as well. We must be in a financial position and equipped with a national army of workers so that we can launch our campaign for the candidates selected the day after the convention.

The opposition is, of course, trying to convince the public that the Democracy is split into hopeless factions. But unity of purpose is clearly shown by the attached leaflet giving representative endorsements of many of our party leaders. Every Democrat in both houses of Congress, as well as every Democratic Governor and state chairman is wholeheartedly supporting the Victory Campaign.

No finer display of the united purpose which impels all Democrats could be achieved than to have you and every County Chairman subscribe to the Victory Fund. I earnestly urge, therefore, that you subscribe now, and

Just as we go to press at 1:50 P. M., word comes from the bedside that Mr. Haley has embarked on the Great Adventure. His death, while a shock to us all was not unexpected, as he had suffered for several months and had been unconscious the greater part of the past, thirty-six hours. Funeral Services at the Methodist Church Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

With highest regards, I am yours for Victory,

Revival Services to Begin at Baptist Church

Revival services will begin at the Baptist church next Sunday morning, and will continue for ten days or two weeks. The pastor will preach Sunday morning and evening, and it is expected that Rev. Ben Rowland, for several years a missionary in China, but now in this country, will arrive Monday, and will do the preaching for the rest of the meeting.

Mr. Rowland comes to Carrizozo with very high recommendations from pastors of churches in New Mexico, where he has held meetings during the past few months. He recently held a meeting in Alamogordo, and is now engaged in one at Hot Springs, which will close Sunday night, after which he will come to Carrizozo. Mrs. Rowland is accompanying him, and will hold services of interest to the women of the town, especially to the members of the Missionary Society.

A welcome awaits you, regardless of the church to which you belong. And if you are not a member of any church, a welcome awaits you. So, come along and hear a sermon and a well-furnished gospel sermon. Mr. Rowland is not only a spectacular, fire-eating evangelist, but is a strong gospel preacher, and will bring a worthwhile message at every service.

Legion Meeting

Southern Pacific Has Special Easter Rates

Re-establishment of cent-mile roundtrip transportation fares on Southern Pacific Lines throughout the West for the Easter week-end was announced today by C. P. Huppertz, local agent for the railroad. The barain offering is expected to stimulate the heaviest Easter travel in the history of the West.

Trips under the low-fare plan may be started on four days—Thursday, Friday, Saturday or Sunday, March 24, 25, 26, and 27—according to Huppertz, with final return limit on all tickets to Portland or El Paso and from San Francisco to Ogden, Salt Lake City included.

Ancho Notes

Mrs. R. E. P. Warden, who has been seriously ill in Carrizozo for the past two weeks, is expected home in a few days.

Mr. R. D. Bloss is relieving Mr. J. M. Frame as agent at the local railroad station during Mr. Frame's absence in San Francisco. Mrs. Bloss accompanied Mr. Bloss to Ancho.

A number of the members of the Woman's Club met at the home of Mrs. L. L. Peters for an all day "sew." Much work was accomplished, and a delightful lunch was served by the hostess.

The regular meeting of the Ancho Woman's Club was held at the home of the Secretary, Mrs. J. E. Frame. Due to the protracted snow storm and bad roads, the out-of-town members were unable to be present and the attendance was smaller than usual. In the absence of Mrs. Drake, Mrs. Hightower acted as president, pro tem. After a short business session, the members busied themselves with preparations for the Colonial Tea to be given at the school house Saturday afternoon, March 19th. Mrs. Bloss was special guest for the afternoon. Delicious refreshments were served. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Hightower, March 26.

The Men on the Dead Man's Chest

by Clifford Raymond

FROM THE BEGINNING

During a "holiday" at the Dutch Mill, Chicago night club, a lieutenant of Police Stanton questions a club visitor, "Buck" Trembley. In Clayton's pocket Stanton found a note signed "Malsie" making an appointment with the dead man at the Dutch Mill. Stanton is inclined to suspect Trembley of the murder. At a Wisconsin winter camp a boisterous crowd includes Preston Brown. An apparent stranger arrives. Later, two men, driving, come on the scene. The stranger leaves in his car, and the two men follow. A man in a white coat is out, and one of the two men removes the danger signals. The stranger, in his car, goes over the embankment. He is dead when found. Brown is dead. In his papers Clayton's name is found. Stanton connects the death of Clayton with the death of Turner, a Wisconsin, and finds the dead man is Trembley. Trembley had caused Brown's death, apparently an accident. A Vermont lawyer, John Whitteless, reading of the case, recalls the names in connection with an act will made by a man named Turner, bequeathing the interest on $10,000 to six men, Blair, Ashley, Roberts, Brown, Trembley, and Clayton. The income, at the death of each beneficiary, is to be divided among the rest. Turner's son, on the death of the six beneficiaries, is to inherit all. Turner dies shortly after making the will. Whitteless suggests foul play in the three deaths, and writes to the Chicago police. Stanton interviews Ana Darling, one of the executors of the will. Darling tells him he believes Turner wanted and expected the six beneficiaries of the will to kill one another, they having in the past injured him. The will is his method of revenge. Turner's son is contented and happy with his small income. Roberts, one of the three survivors of the six named by Turner's will, visits Darling. He reveals the fact that Blair and Ashley, supposed to be abroad, are in this country.

"Probably?" the lieutenant asked. "Couldn't you know?"

"Frankly, I kept to my cabin after I saw Ashley. I assumed Blair was with him. I didn't trust them. If I wanted to commit murder a ship's the place I'd choose."

"You'd be an awful fool if you did," said the lieutenant. "But why did murder occur to you? You didn't know anything of Clayton, Brown and Trembley then."

"I'll refer you to the Turner will," said Roberts, "and then to anyone who has had a chance to know Blair and Ashley. The whole thing was only a question of who and when. Turner wrote that plot. Europe wasn't big enough for the three of us. That's why I was coming back. Blair was with Ashley on the boat. I saw them both on Fifth avenue yesterday. And look here, Mr. Darling, I'm declaring myself out of this. I don't want any more of your d-n checks. I don't want anything to do with the d-n will. I'm not going to be hunted down."

"Mr. Roberts," said the lieutenant, "as you may have surmised, I am in doubt. I have some convictions and some of them concern you, but there are many doubts. We know Arthur Trembley shot Dunn Clayton or had him shot. We know Arthur Trembley threw Preston Brown on a knife blade. We know Arthur Trembley ran off the road and was killed. But we don't know, you see, who took away the red lights. If you and Mr. Blair and Mr. Ashley had been in Europe at the time and had remained there you might have left us speculating as to what agencies you could have employed, but we could not have placed any one of you on the road by the lights. But it appears that you were all three in this country. When did you arrive, Mr. Roberts?"

Roberts looked at his questioner as if he suspected his answer would not be satisfactory.

"I landed October 7," he said.

"And your boat?"

"The Empress of Australia."

"Oh, a reflective exclamation from the lieutenant. "Did I misunderstand you, Ron, when you said you landed in New York and that Mr. Ashley was on the boat with you?"

"That was a slip, an inadvertence. We were on a Canadian boat. I came direct from Montreal to New York."

"You landed at Montreal and not Quebec?"

"Naturally, for the connection for New York."

"Odd. The Empress of Australia does not go above Quebec. Another inadvertence probably. The ship's list will prove you were on the boat. Your hotel registration in New York will prove you were there. Consequently you didn't go from Quebec to the Eagle River region of Wisconsin. You were not there October 3 because you did not land until October 7.

We've got to give the three of you that break, Ron. All we need is a verification of it on the ship's list and the hotel register."

"You'll not find it. I didn't use my name in coming over."

"You d-n little louse! Will you come clean? Pompey, bring me three feet of garden hose."

The lieutenant arose to meet Roberts face to face, and Stanton's bulk and conviction dwarfed the other's physical and moral nature.

"Come clean, before I handle you. Come on, now, Pompey, get me the hose."

Mr. Darling arose in horror.

"Stop!" he cried. "What is this in my house?"

Stanton turned to him and smiled. "Your Roman centurion, Professor. Your lieutenant, of Chicago police. Come through, Ron, or I'll put you remains out in the street. You'll have to pardon me, Mr. Darling, but this requires it. I want the truth from him. I'm going to have it. I may have to prepare him for it. Look at him. A rough word and he's not so hard-boiled."

Roberts had quailed but was recovering, and he was to recover enough dignity in another minute to make use of his outraged position in Mr. Darling's home.

"I wasn't prepared for this treatment," he said. "It startled me, it was so entirely unexpected."

"It startled me," said Mr. Darling. "I had more confidence in Lieutenant Stanton."

"Sorry, Mr. Darling, but it was necessary to startle Mr. Roberts. I must remind him that I can and will throw him into a cell. Now I want the truth. When did you land?"

Roberts was silent a moment, looking down at the rug.

"I think I made a mistake in trying to conceal anything," he said finally. "It's only as to the time. I came over September 15 and landed in New York."

"Was it the truth that Ashley and Blair were on the same boat?" Stanton asked.

"Yes; that is, I saw Ashley as I said. I kept to my cabin, but I saw Blair with Ashley a few days after landing."

"Not just yesterday, then?"

"No, it was five or six weeks ago."

"So the entire six of you were here two weeks before the first of these killings?"

"That's true, but now listen, Mr. Pompey. I'm not an assassin. I've been covering, but it's been to protect myself. That's all. I don't mind inward and danger. I've had them in my day. But I can't stand being stinked like game. I haven't got the nerves to be expecting a shot from the brush or the alley. So I've been going to pieces in a way. D-n them, if they would shoot it out I'd take them on, but I'm not equal to this assassination. That's all there is to it, Lieutenant. I can't stand it. I'm not hot enough. I can't kill first. So I've got to wait for it. I can't do it. You can say I'm yellow. I guess I am, if this is the game. I could have killed both Ashley and Blair. There wasn't much chance of its being difficult or dangerous. I could have got Ashley any time at night, out on the deck, even in his room. Who in h-d would have suspected me? I could have got Blair in New York. What's another murder in New York? But I can't do it. I want to throw them off me. That's why I came here. I give up my share. I'll get along."

"But, Mr. Roberts," said Lieutenant Stanton, "you can't give up to their satisfaction. So long as you live there is an impediment to the redistribution of the estate in the hands of the sole surviving beneficiary. And that, I think, is the object being pursued."

"I think you're right," said Roberts. "I've tried to think it otherwise, but I can't. I may be yellow, but I can't go through with it."

"Of course you're yellow," said the lieutenant.

Roberts turned on him. "No copper can tell me that. I've been more places which asked for guts than any copper ever saw."

"One of them made Thomas Turner your enemy," said Stanton. "You might tell us that piece of yellowness."

"Lieutenant," Mr. Darling protested, "this has been interesting but—"

"I know what your objections would be, Mr. Darling, but isn't our pattern defining itself? You may know why Mr. Turner made this will. I can guess. Mr. Roberts here knows. Roberts, do you want to tell us?"

"I presume Turner thought he had been injured. He was wrong as to me."

"How were you six associated with Mr. Turner?" the lieutenant asked. "And where?"

"Once, for me," said Roberts. "I don't know about the others. The seven of us were in a Peruvian jungle. Turner was taken desperately ill. I volunteered to make a dangerous trip to get a doctor. I don't know what happened. I got out, but I couldn't get back. I was too sick myself. I don't know what the others did."

"You were inclined to think that Mr. Turner was sincere when he said his bequest to you was in gratitude?"

"It was unexpected, but I had no reason to think it was in enmity."

"It would seem that he planned a massacre and evidently not in gratitude. He must have been pretty sure of the character of some of you."

"Well, I want out of it. His money can't compensate me for life on these terms. I tell you I'm not an assassin, and I can't protect myself."

"I intend to meet and talk to your two friends," said Stanton. "It may add to your sense of security. Frankly, Mr. Roberts, I do not know whether you removed the red lights or did not. My guess is that you didn't. My guess is that one of the other two did. Whoever it was had a d-nable brutality. He did not care who went off the boat. He took a chance he would get the man he wanted. Who's the greater brute of the two?"

"Acton Blair, I'd say. But Ashley is trickier. He might be crueler, although he's physically weaker."

"It must be apparent to all three of you," said the lieutenant, "that a fourth death will be highly suspicious. We have actors and mollies rather plainly before us. I shall advise all three of you to take your increased dividends and trust to luck we can't find the man who took away those lights."

For the first time Roberts, standing on Mr. Darling's hearth-rug, smiled.

"Don't be simple, Lieutenant," he said. "Murder needn't be legal murder, not if you know Ashley or Blair or the others. Look at the way Brown died. You'd have some difficulty proving anything there, I think, even if Trembley hadn't been killed almost immediately afterward. Suppose a man is stalked by an automobile. Easy, isn't it?"

"Blair did that one," said the lieutenant. "No one knows how often it has been used."

"It's too simple. They'll not try that."

"You leave yourself rather out of it," the lieutenant suggested.

"Good lord, do you suppose I'd be here talking as I am if I wanted to play this game?"

"Yes, that's exactly what I'd suppose. You're getting your plausible alibi in advance, aren't you? But my guesses don't have to be plausible. So I guess you're on the square to being a quitter. But I'll have a talk with your friends. Do you want protection?"

"Don't be ridiculous," said Roberts. "How could I get it?"

"Mr. Roberts," said Mr. Darling, "I'm sorry for your agitation. I'm almost sorry my friend, Turner, had this idea to his nature. I probably should have refused to countenance it. I should have declined to participate in it. I was incredulous, and he was determined."

Roberts, who constantly had fingered his watchchain, took out his watch.

"I'll be getting back to the city," he said. "I'll protect myself as well

"You D-n Little Louse! Will You Come Clean?"

"You've heard me say I'm not a detective," said the lieutenant as the door closed on Roberts, "or haven't I thought to mention it? This case seems to recognize my hat size. My mystery plot is to detect three known characters killing one another for an explained motive at a place easily discoverable. It will probably be too much for me."

"I find an immoral enjoyment in incidents which should be shocking to a person of ethical integrity," said Mr. Darling. "What do you think of Mr. Roberts' fear? After all, aren't they a little eccentric?"

"He isn't as yellow—" Stanton broke off in his sentence, leaving "as I pretend to believe him" unsaid. Roberts was re-entering the room.

"Ashley and Blair are coming in at your front gate, Mr. Darling," he said nervously.

"Indeed," said Mr. Darling. Roberts went to stand on the rug.

"You'll hear their knock at your door in a minute," he said. "They did not see me. They are at your door." Roberts' voice was muted.

Mr. Darling's door-knocker sounded three times.

"Pompey," Mr. Darling called, "admit the gentlemen and have them come directly in."

There was a moment while Pompey opened the door and the callers laid aside their overcoats. Then Ashley and Blair entered.

"Good afternoon, gentlemen," said Mr. Darling. "Mr. Roberts you know, of course. You may not know Lieutenant Stanton, of the Chicago police."

Both men stopped instantly and looked first at Roberts and then at Stanton. It was as if they saw a trap. Then the smaller of the two, a fellow with lively eyes and a square chin, chuckled, and the larger, he was much larger, stepped forward.

"Hello, Roberts," he said and turned toward Stanton. "I'm Blair, Lieutenant and this is Ashley."

The smaller man—it was rather in bulk than in stature—smiled and bowed. Stanton, having arisen to shake hands, sat down again. He said nothing. He perceived that Blair and Ashley were caught a little off their balance, and he intended that for a while they should guess at the constable.

Blair had addressed Mr. Darling.

"Come up to see you," he said, "and I see Roberts did. Hello again, Ron. You see, Mr. Darling, it's getting so we're noticed. Why, d-n it, we're getting to be public characters. What's all this? I'm going to sue some one for libel."

"You do that, Acton," said Ashley, "and then take it to the bank and see what Mr. Morgan will give you on it."

Boston Scene of First Conversation by Phone

It was on October 9, 1876, that the first conversation ever held over a telephone line took place between the Boston and Cambridge offices of the Watworth Manufacturing company. Professor Bell was at the Boston end of the line and Mr. Watson was at the Cambridge end, the distance apart being about two miles. In the early days they used to say, instead of "Hello," "Ahoy," doubtless a relic of New England's familiarity with shipping. The first telephone exchange was opened by Edward T. Holmes. The first woman telephone operator was named Miss Emma Nutt. A year after the discovery of the telephone practically all the telephones in the world were in Boston and immediately surrounding cities and towns.

The New England Telephone company was organized in February, 1878, and was followed in July of that year by the incorporation of the Bell Telephone company, which was the predecessor to the American Telephone & Telegraph company, at present with its associated concerns the largest company from the standpoint of assets in the world.—Boston Herald.

Weather Lore

People began speaking of the weather "k long time ago. The first scientific treatise on the weather, says the United States weather bureau, was written by Aristotle more than 300 years before the Christian era. The weather bureau library, which is the largest meteorological collection in the world, has a big book on the weather by Albertus Magnus, printed in 1493, and a facsimile of a weather journal kept by Rev. William Merle of England, who recorded the weather day by day from 1837 to 1844. The first weather records in America, so far as known, were kept by Rev. Johann Campanus, who recorded the weather each day in the colony of New Sweden near the present site of Wilmington, Del. for the years 1644 and 1645.

As I can. A thought I could resign. I see I can't. But you've heard the last of me. You'll not need to send any more checks. I haven't a great deal, but it's enough. I'm on the wing in a few days, and the person who ever finds me or knows he will be welcome to use his knowledge. Good day to you gentlemen."

"Pompey," said Mr. Darling, "assist Mr. Roberts."

"Yes, sir," said Pompey.

[Ronald Roberts had been a Church of England vicar with a small living. An Easter service with twenty dull communicants brought him to a decision to hereticate, if that were still a way of looking at it, and to become a non-conformist, evangelistic worker in the London slum where his considerable power of vivid expression might attract attention, possibly a heiress or a tolerable woman with money. In doing so he was a dramatic success of pale and earnest ostentation, but the heiress did not appear. However, Mr. Roberts made some acquaintances outside his mission and became Art Twitcheley, a character later wanted by Scotland Yard. In emigrating the ex-elder and evangelist reverted to his proper person as Ronald Roberts, but he did not resume his priestly function or title. He had not been an Oxford man, and this lack enabled him to disguise the otherwise fatal quality of English accent in American crime.]

Letters received by the Farmington chamber of commerce from Senators Sam Bratton and Bronson Cutting and Representatives Dennis Chavez were read at a C. of C. meeting, recently and show that all three men strongly favor the project and are making determined efforts to put it across.

"The dominating factor in the agricultural outlook for 1932 is the general business situation and the general price level." This is the opening statement made in the Agricultural Outlook for New Mexico, prepared by the New Mexico Agricultural College for the year 1932 which continues as follows: "While individual commodities will be affected by the production and supplies of these commodities, and farmers should make it a point to study the situation regarding each commodity which they might produce, little relief can be expected for agriculture until the general business situation improves."

Recently the State Department of Education of New Mexico sent more than twelve thousand books in equal units to county superintendents for the establishment of circulating libraries in their schools. Since many counties have some library facilities, the State Department made it attempt to superimpose any system of cataloging and distributing these books. County superintendents are free to handle the books in ways most convenient and helpful to the various rural schools under their supervision.

Be Persistent and Consistent

UNBELIEVABLE as it may seem, there are many women who at this day and age still expect magic and miracles. Intelligent women too. A well-written letter from one, a personal visit from another, a telephone call from a third. All in the same vein. The first has used a tissue-tightening astringent "for two weeks," with no noticeable improvement in her contour. It was claimed for the astringent that if used faithfully, gradually lift the sagging muscles and drooping contour. Nothing was said about the time limit. To be sure if you go on using a preparation month after month, year in, year out, without a noticeable improvement there is something wrong some place, either with the preparation itself or with your reaction to it.

But "two full weeks," it would be utopian indeed if a double chin and drooping contour (which probably took years to reach the sagging stage) were to be magically lifted in so short a time by the use of an astringent. Plastic surgery could do it in that length of time, but plastic surgery is for the very brave and very rich. And the subject of our discussion is an astringent.

Another instance: "Really, I have exercised faithfully every single night, followed every one of your bending exercises for the waist, but that 'spare tire' has not left me yet." Perhaps with patience and persistence that "spare" will disappear as gradually as it accumulated—and perhaps, too, you will as suddenly notice that it is no more. Day after day and very likely month after month the fat cells were forming. And I'm willing to wager (something I never do) that you noticed only the lump sum. Your own case may be the stubborn type that hangs on—but exercise is sure to win out if it is patience ye have.

Then there's the weak-willed one; "I know I must not eat so and so, the doctor warned me against it, yes, but just this once" (and this once happens over so often), and the next day there's a case of billiugness and distress. Then the cry "but I do love that dish, and what is a body to do."

Be persistent and consistent in your beauty treatments and health habits; and meticulous in your cleansing methods.

Surround Yourself With Beauty

AN INTERIOR decorator and a beauty specialist were having luncheon together. Said the interior decorator: "Beauty editors, lecturers, and specialists are to be congratulated, for their preachings are largely responsible for the raised standards in feminine loveliness. But—if you don't mind my saying so—speaking from a selfish point of view, I don't think that feminine beauty has been linked sufficiently with interior decoration. You emphasize a hat as part of the picture and fashion is made a co-partner to beauty. But a woman chooses her sofa and hangings for her home with a very impersonal attitude. If her clothes are an important part of the picture she presents, isn't she just as important a part of her home?"

She considered that several smart women had sent their sisters or maids to select fabrics for the former's dressing rooms, that personal coloring and temperament was not considered and their own individuality neither expressed nor flattered.

All of which is a rather sad but true state of affairs. "Surround yourself with beauty—and let your surroundings express YOU, enhance your charm and reflect your individuality."

Haven't you heard a rebellious young one threatening, "Wait until I have my own place, it will be something different, more expressive." And, lo, when opportunity did knock—well, if it wasn't the same, stereotyped, set order of affairs. The same sort of furniture, a bit newer, of course; the same color scheme, arrangements, accessories.

Study your coloring and know what colors and shades are most becoming to you. It is impossible to give a list of definite suggestions because of the infinite variety of shades and intensity. But a general color knowledge is inherent, I think. Breathless there a red head who didn't know when she was a year old that green is the most enchanting color for her, and aren't our blue-eyed babies told long before they can say da-da, that they should wear blue to bring out all the depth of their eyes.

In the matter of colors, let fashion guide you. Now, just one word of warning with respect to lines. Avoid extremes. Modern, harsh lines may have a definite dash, but only the dashing, exotic type seems to "belong" and be at home with them. Make your home a setting for your beauty and surround yourself with flattering and enhancing accessories expressive of all that is YOU in you.

Reason for Town's Name
A company of settlers, in naming their new town, called it Dictionary, because, as they said, "that's the only place where peace, prosperity and happiness are always found."

Diet Didn't Do This!

HAPPY little girl, just bursting with pep, and she has never tasted a "tonic!"

Every child's stomach, liver, and bowels need stimulating at times, but give children something you know all about.

Follow the advice of that famous family physician—who gave the world Syrup Pepsin, "Stimulate the body's vital organs. Dr. Caldwell's prescription of pure pepsin, active senna, and fresh herbs is a mild stimulant that keeps the system from getting sluggish."

If your youngsters don't do well at school, don't play as hard or eat as well as other children do, begin this evening with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This gentle stimulant will soon right things! The bowels will move with better regularity and thoroughness. There won't be so many sick spells or colds. You'll find it just as wonderful for adults, too, in larger spoonfuls!

Get some Syrup Pepsin; protect your household from those bilious days, frequent headaches, and that sluggish state of half-health that means the bowels need stimulating. Keep this preparation in the home to use instead of harsh cathartics that cause chronic constipation if taken too often. You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store; they have it all ready in big bottles.

Here's Another Stab at Age of "Mother Earth"

One of the most remarkable discoveries of recent years is the radioactive metal, uranium, which gradually changes into lead, says London Tit-Bits. The rate at which this process is carried out is well known, and it is invariable. By taking rocks which contain both uranium and lead and finding the proportion of each, metal now existing in them, the length of time necessary to bring about the present state of affairs is not difficult to calculate. Such a calculation shows that the earth must have been solid not far short of two thousand million years ago. The paths of the earth around the sun and the moon around the earth are not what they were originally. Science can reconstruct them and discover the time needed to give them their present shapes.

All of these methods show that the age of the earth must be more than one thousand million years and less than four thousand million years. We shall, then, not be far wrong if we fix the earth's birthday at about two thousand million years ago.

When fortune is upon our side, our family always bears her company.

"Primitive Areas" for Parks
For the benefit of large numbers of people who crave the "back to nature" type of forest recreation, the forest service is establishing "primitive areas" in each of the national forest areas. The idea is to leave unimpaired unique natural values and give to the public so inclined an opportunity to experience conditions which existed in pioneer phases of the nation's development. Tourist parks filled with little cabins, facilities for cooking, running water, showers, etc., are a boon for the traveling, sight-seeing public, but there are thousands who will enjoy, appreciate and help conserve these "primitive areas" which will eventually form a part of all our national parks of sufficient area.

The difference between being a columnist and writing a letter is that when a letter writer can't think of anything worth saying, he can bring his letter to a close, whether he has one page or ten pages. A columnist has to fill his column whether he can think of anything to say or not. That accounts for the reason that the productions of columnists are no better than they are, and explains why this is as bad as it sometimes is.

If anyone has the idea that governmental expenses are not coming down, he is due to an awakening. The manner in which federal government expenses have pyramided in the last few years, if allowed to continue, will bankrupt any nation that ever existed. Every department of the federal government asked for and received from three to twelve times as much in 1931 as in 1924. More and more federal employees have been added to the payroll, and so far every effort to remove any of them or to reduce their salaries has been defeated.

The efforts of Congress to balance the budget by seeking new sources of revenue by adding a sales tax and lowering the income tax exemption is not of itself going to be satisfactory to the people of the country. The tax-payers are going to demand that Congress also make an effort to reduce governmental expenses. A good many are beginning to wonder what is to be gained by keeping expenses up to the present level and laying on a heavier and heavier tax burden to do it.

Poverty and wealth are relative. We judge our condition and our circumstances largely by comparison with others. The other day we visited a friend in the country. He had a big crib full of corn and hay and feed for his stock in an abundance. He had chickens and hogs and milk cows and a cellar full of canned fruit and vegetables. But he felt poor because he had no money, although he had little present need for money. He says he is broke because his corn and stock will not bring much money. On the other hand there is the fellow in the grasshopper infested sections of Nebraska and Dakota. On many of these farms there is not even a straw stack that the stock might feed on, and as little food for the family. In comparison with the second party the first is well fixed. He is rich.

News dispatches from Little Rock, Arkansas, tell of 36,000 rural children forced out of their studies by the closing of 756 public schools and of the prospect that 1200 more will be closed before spring, because of lack of funds. Moukeying with tax assessments may reduce taxes, but it may also play smash with the social order and do more harm than good. It is as impracticable to attempt to correct a bad economic situation all at once as it is to attempt to cure a sick man by pouring all the medicine down him at one time.

Moderns Perfect Ideas of Ancient Machinists?

Speaking of steam-driven coaches, Prof. John S. Worley, of the University of Michigan, says there was a steam engine in Alexandria in 300 B. C., thousands of years before James Watt sat and watched his grandmother's tea kettle bubble. The steam engine invented by the scientist, Hero of Alexandria, was portrayed in a scientific book in 1600. The engine was merely a toy, but the outgoing steam whirled a large globe on the ornate apparatus and blazed the way for power by steam.

The water turbine is supposed to be a modern invention, but Professor Worley points out that one was credited by the Roman, Vitruvius, in 300 B. C. and was, historians say, used to grind grain. "Looking it all over," Professor Worley said, "modern man must find gratification in the invention of several key implements that have made the perfection of old discoveries possible. We take, for instance, the invention of the Bessemer converter, with the resulting steel tools, the construction of forges and the building of intricate gauges. These are things that our generation has contributed to bringing into use the discoveries of the ancient machinist, who labored alone and unrecognized in his laboratories to produce brain children that people centuries later were to claim as their own."

Man Has No Monopoly of Sense of Gratitude

Gratitude in a human being is an indication of culture of heart. Those who give their lives to uplifting, spiritualizing their fellows, and are often rewarded by crucifixion upon the tree of indifference, wonder sometimes if it is a humanity, a quality peculiar to man by which he may be distinguished from other beings, says J. Otis Swift, in the New York World-Telegram. The wise cultivate gratitude to their environment and the universe as an attribute that, in giving, will make them sought after, will surround them with friends, and return to them in wealth—since wealth flows toward those who are beloved, whose personalities attract friends. The celandine, gone wild from some beloved garden of the grandmothers, grateful for the long summer, stays green long after other plants are bare, and even after the first snow flurry. It gives its yellow juice to color Christmas ball dresses of milkweed silk for fairy ladies of Queen Mab's court. The weeping willow, Salix Babylonica, among the first to put out color in spring, gratefully stays green until after the first snows to cheer a world that made it smile through its tears all summer. Drooping heads it defied sadness in "Africa" as when "by the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion. We hung our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof."

Not a Nice Pose

The famous duke of Wellington was sitting for the sculptor, who was unsatisfied with the pose of the famous general. "As I am going to make a statue of your grace," said the sculptor, "can you not tell me what you were doing before, say, the battle of Salamanca? Were you not galloping about the fields cheering on your men to deeds of valor by word and action?" "Bah!" said the duke, "if you really want to model me as I was on the morning of Salamanca, then do me crawling along a ditch on my stomach, with a telescope in my hand."

Perilous First in Field

The fellow who thought of the automatic toy, or the mechanical cartoon in which silly things get themselves accomplished by elaborate, but nonsensical means, seems to be just about 700 years behind the times. The Persians beat him to it way back in the thirteenth century and made elaborate drawings of their foolish devices in beautiful books which are now among the priceless treasures of the art world.

Stone Age Relic?

The skull of a rhinoceros that might well have been the target of Stone Age spears is among the exhibits in the Field Museum of Natural History, in Chicago. The animal was a woolly rhinoceros, coeval in Europe with the great hairy mammoths and other beasts now extinct that roamed the valleys during later ice age times. The specimen was sent by the Royal museum, Brussels, Belgium.

Big Mouth Has No Value

Although the mouth of the baleen whale, the largest creature in the world, is so large that a man could stand upright in it, its throat is scarcely large enough to admit a man's fist and the tube by means of which its food reaches its stomach is about the size of a walking stick. Since this huge animal is toothless, it can therefore eat only very tiny creatures.

Grapes Almost Universal

The original home of grapes seems to have been Asia, but they now grow in northern Africa, southern Europe, and in North and South America. Grapes were introduced into France and Italy, presumably by the Phoenicians, and were taken to England by the Romans; the Dutch carried the plants to South Africa and the Spaniards brought them to America.

Oscura Items

(For last week)

Having planned beforehand for a pleasant picnic, the following group of youngsters loaded with good things to eat, — and armed with walking sticks, repaired themselves to the famous Malaga spring: Paul, Jesse and Bill Brazel; Leo, Irene, Maurine Keene; Bessie and Mary Brown; Johnny, Lenelle and Henry Ward, with Mrs. Dixon for chaperone. This event took place immediately after Sunday School and church. We were all very hungry when we arrived at the picturesque and interesting Malaga spring. On the way Paul Brazel distinguished himself by digging little cottontails out of their burrows; we went up to Mrs. Brown's for skillet, lard and salt, so we had fried rabbit. We also toasted bacon on sticks and made sandwiches. Mr. Ward visited our picnic for a short time after playing "Follow your Leader" and getting some good soil for our school plants. We wended our way homeward happy and carefree, resolving to come often.

The Oscura school property is very enjoyable and attractive.

Two acres of level ground, fenced in, and lovely flowering cedars about. The building is substantial and comfortable. One well equipped school room, — a large room with good stove, platform and lights for entertainments; one room which makes a very good teacherage and a room for preparing refreshments. Also plenty of hall space for wraps.

Miss Cora Crews is spending some time in Oscura at her attractive home. Her brother, Mr. Floyd Crews, a friend, Mrs. D. B. Smith and son of El Paso have been her guests. Mr. Crews and Mr. Smith returned to El Paso, but the ladies will remain for a time.

Rev. L. D. Jordan gave a most appealing message to the church people of Oscura. It was decided that the P. T. A. and Sunday school each contribute a small monthly fund to Rev. Jordan to assist in defraying the expense of his trip. These messages do us a great deal of good and giving is one of the best parts of service.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor and son, Jimmy, attended the Cattle men's convention at Carlsbad. While there, they enjoyed a visit to the wonderful cavern.

Mrs. Edith Nixon was called to her mother's bedside last week. She is sadly missed at the I-X and Sunday school. We are hoping for her mother's speedy recovery.

Lillian Brown took charge of Mrs. Nixon's Sunday School class in the latter's absence.

HIGHEST BRIDGE IS SPANNING COLORADO

New Structure Will Open Up Vast Territory.

Phoenix, Ariz.—Replacing the ancient ferry that has served northern Arizona and southern Utah dwellers since white men first began to travel the uncharted area of the Painted Desert, the Lee's Ferry bridge, highest structure of its kind in the world, is to be formally put into use with elaborate dedication ceremonies next June.

The bridge will open up a great expanse of country and eventually result in a direct mountain states automobile route from Canada to Mexico. Located at the upper reaches of the Grand canyon in the wild, unsettled portion of northern Arizona, the bridge will provide for the first time a land route of transportation between Arizona and Utah.

Is Only Bridge.

It will be the only bridge crossing the Colorado river in Arizona north of Tropic, near Needles, Calif., and will provide an easy way for motorists from Arizona to reach Bryce canyon, Zion National park and Rainbow National bridge in southern Utah; the north rim of the Grand canyon and the great virgin forests in northern Arizona, and for travelers through southern Utah to visit the Painted Desert, south rim of the Grand canyon, petrified forests and other natural wonders in Arizona.

It is expected to open up trade and traffic between Utah and Arizona, helping states that have been separated by the great cliff known as one of the wonders of the world. It will be a means toward developing commerce and of opening a vast land that is known to hardly anybody except the Hopi Indians, who roam the desert.

487 Feet High.

The three-inged, steel arch bridge, conceived by engineers to be more rigid than the suspension type, is 407 feet above the stream bed, and its ends rest in precipitous cliffs which border the Colorado river. The span itself is 616 feet long, with the bridge over all being 800 feet. So far as can be determined, it is the highest automobile bridge in the world.

Because of the height, engineers encountered difficulty in devising a way to construct the bridge, as there was no way of building false supports from the bottom of the canyon. The cantilever plan was employed and the supports were constructed in the granite walls. As the bridge was built out from the wall, first on one side, then on the other side of the river, toggle joints were used to extend the huge steel beams until the two sections met in the center and were joined.

Material had to be trucked 135 miles over a seldom traveled desert road to the site. Some of the steel sections used in the construction were 50 feet long and weighed 14 tons. These had to be hauled by truck and trailer.

Special Service Campaign

Detroit, Mich., Mar. 15—A special service campaign of interest to the more than 4,000,000 Chevrolet owners in the United States is to be launched on a national scale by Chevrolet dealers beginning Mar. 28. M. D. Douglas, general parts and service manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company announced here today.

Designed to improve the operation and appearance of cars now in owners' hands the campaign will have the further effect of adding to the safety of the highways by insuring against any possible mechanical defects in the cars serviced during the campaign, Mr. Douglas pointed out.

Some vital operation, ranging from brake adjustments to wheel alignment and complete tightening of every part of the chassis, is to be offered by the dealers at sizable reductions from the flat rate charge, for a period of ten weeks.

National newspaper advertising as well as special newspaper campaigns for the dealer's local use, are to publicize the event and the featured services each week. Radio announcement on a national and local scale also are to be used.

Special rates during the campaign will induce many people who otherwise might not have their car serviced, to check at least vital points pertaining to safe performance before they get out on the highways during the heavy motoring season.

The Kitchen Cabinet

GOOD THINGS WITH MEAT

How much more appetizing and appealing a dish of fish, kind is, if nicely garnished.

This does not mean the need of hours spent in doing fancy work in food, but simple foods that are appropriate to serve with the meat. A thick, juicy, tender, well broiled steak needs no sauce but hunger; yet transferred to a hot platter, plentifully buttered and a bit of prepared mustard spread over it before it is finished.

then with sauted slices of pineapple to serve with it, one has a real treat. Green gage plums drained from their sirup and stuffed with raisins, give another decidedly nice finish.

Pineapple fritters are still another method of garnishment that may be used as well with lamb.

Another tasty garnish for steaks may be confined to vegetables. Sauté thick slices of ripe or green tomatoes, chop, mild onion and green peppers together and cook in a little butter, make a few potato puffs and garnish with all of these alternating them in small portions. Meat thus dressed will be taken out of the ordinary and made an exceptional dish.

So many new and novel ways of using the common things will occur to the cook who delights to originate new things and has an imaginative mind. Take pork chops. We all like them well cooked and moist. Put them into a pan with just enough water to par-broil them, turning once before the water is evaporated, then brown and season well just before taking up.

Steamed raisins, a mound of them in the platter, makes a tasty garnish. Rings of fried apple, cored, and unpeeled, cut into thick slices, a bit of sugar, salt and pepper added, are also well liked.

Hot, ripe olives served with chicken or lamb. These white meats should be thoroughly cooked and spiced sauces, condiments and bottled sauces make a great difference when a dash is added to the meat or gravies.

A WHITENED SEPULCHER

THIS is a term of opprobrium that is used against each other. Which faction is so termed at the moment depends of course upon which one is being investigated. The term is appropriate when a "public servant" who professes to be "a friend of the people" is revealed in an unsavory light. The expression is familiar in modern speech to describe anything which is outwardly fair but inwardly corrupt.

"A whitened sepulcher" had its origin in the Bible, whence it comes down to us in common speech today. It is in Matthew 23:27, that we find these words:

"Whitened sepulchers, which indeed appear beautiful outwardly, but are within full of dead men's bones."

Bride Freed From Sleep-Walking Mate

Berlin.—A Berlin bride has obtained a divorce on novel grounds. She had been very happily married a few weeks when one night she awakened terrified to see a white apparition on top of a wardrobe. Switching on the light she was amazed to find that her husband had clambered up there in his sleep.

When the next night he repeated the performance she packed her bags and returned to her mother. It transpired that he was addicted to wandering in his sleep at the time of full moon, and the court ruled that he should have informed his wife of that fact before he married her.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

by WALTER TRUMBULL

Sometimes we think that the most colorful persons in New York are artists' models. Practically everyone of them has a story, if you can get it. Take, for example, a pretty girl who has been posing for George Van Weyke, among others. Her family lived in a small town outside Manhattan, where her father was a prosperous grocer. Everything went well for the girl and her sister until their mother died. The mother had been a thrifty woman. She had made her husband save and invest enough in income bearing bonds so that it looked as if he could retire and still keep his family comfortable for life. After the mother's death, the father ran the store for a couple of years. Then he married again. The new wife didn't wish to be in the grocery business. She considered the real estate business more fashionable, so she persuaded the man to sell his store and his bonds, and go into real estate. He did pretty well at it until the depression came along. Then, with plenty of company, he went broke.

He went broke to the extent that he became a superintendent in an apartment house. Then, as an artist we know expressed it, "one of the girls went to work and the other went to modeling. The one who went to work got a job in a shop and makes barely enough to support herself. The other, who has more looks and rarely more initiative, happened to be a good model and has been in constant demand. She attended strictly to business, except that she always accepted any invitation to eat, and finally managed to save $300. Just about that time, her stepmother's mother became ill and had to have an operation. A surgeon, who had been a friend of the family in more prosperous days, took care of her and kept expenses down all he could, but there were certain obligations, which could not be avoided. There was no other money in the family, so the model, a good sport, paid the bills. They came to about $500, which meant that she was starting over again.

But the old lady also was a good sport. Recently, some unexpected windfall brought her a couple of thousand dollars and she paid the girl back her five hundred. She has decided to spend it before anything happens to it. With this idea in view, she has bought a round-trip ticket to Europe at the cheapest rate she could discover. Painters, who studied abroad, and illustrators for whom she has posed have told her where to get the most reasonable lodgings and have given her letters to artists in Paris. They assure her that the married man and their wives certainly will ask her frequently to tea and dinner, and that the unmarried ones will invite her to restaurants. So the girl is starting off gaily, apparently without the slightest misgiving, believing that she can make what is left of her money see her through for at least six weeks or two months. Then she plans to return and earn some more.

The American Museum of Natural History has announced that it will be amply able to balance its budget, but that no more dinosaur eggs will be served until some one discovers which corner prosperity is just around. The museum has called off about a dozen expeditions. Many of these expeditions were for birds, which apparently made the money fly.

Russell Patterson and Arthur William Brown were speaking of a friend who was a director in a financial institution and had been sitting up day and night, trying to keep the breath of life in it. "I wonder why he looks so much happier lately," said Mr. Patterson. "Why, didn't you hear?" answered Mr. Brown. "His bank bust."

And there is a lot in that. We may worry over trying to prevent something, but once it happens, there is nothing more to worry about. The thing is done, and that is all there is to it. (C. Neil Brundage) - WNU Service.

One-Lane Roads Widely Used in Rural Sections

Chicago.—Motorists accustomed to driving over full-width highways will be surprised to know there are 2,500 miles of single-track concrete roads in the United States, roads on which only one traffic lane is paved. In spite of the limitation by width, these roads are serving the traffic they are called upon to carry almost as efficiently as two-lane pavements could.

Single-track roads have one paved lane with a wide shoulder of gravel or dirt alongside so that cars can pass each other.

Two hundred and seven counties in thirty states have built single-track roads. In addition to the mileage for use at the present time, more than 500 miles have been widened by laying a second strip of concrete beside the first to meet increased demands of traffic.

A Fleet of Boats

Billy was wishing for a new adventure and while he lay dreaming of all the exciting ones he might have, if he were lucky, he saw a small pool of fresh, cool water, left from yesterday's rain.

"Oh, ho," said he, "there's a sea for you! I'll build a harbor and a fleet of boats, and I'll sail them around the world."

Whereupon Billy found all sorts of small pieces of wood, round sticks, nuts, pieces of soap, and as much other material as would float on the surface of the water. He hastened to find some toothpicks or old burnt matches for masts and some small pieces of colored cloth from mother's piece bag for sails. For some of the boats he found heavy paper would do as well.

He built a wharf from a board upon which he could unload the tiny cargoes or to which the boats could be tied, and a boathouse from an old shoe box. He planted, for trees, some twigs well covered in leaves, and held them firm by rocks. He even found a gold wooden box for a boathouse, in which the small ships could be put for repairs.

Here with is a picture of Billy's fleet. Could you make one like it?

KIDNAPING OF LINDBERGH BABY STIRS WHOLE WORLD

No Crime in Modern History Has Aroused Such Universal Indignation—Tops Long List of Abductions.

No crime in recent history so aroused the entire American public as the kidnaping of the young son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh. Little Charles Augustus, Jr., is the nation's baby. He is a national character and has been since the day he was born. His abduction was a dastardly crime resented by every red-blooded American, grown-ups and children alike.

Every parent grieved with the stricken father and mother. They knew the anguish they endured. They could feel the heart throbs and the immeasurable grief. They could realize what the finding of that empty crib meant to the grief-stricken parents. They knew the darkness that settled over Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh as they viewed the dirty footprints left by the villains, and the ladder on the lawn outside the window, that told so vividly the fate that had befallen their young son. It is one great American heart that grieved with those grief-stricken parents.

A little delicate child, only twenty months of age, had been dragged from the affectionate embrace of his parents, from the tender care with which he had been surrounded, and spirited away into the foul hands of the most detectable type of criminals. There was no more touching incident of the whole dastardly affair than the pathetic appeal of the mother to the kidnapers to feed her sick baby properly. It was addressed by Mrs. Lindbergh to the bergh the devastating blow that had been struck American motherhood, not one of them but suffered the keenest of all agonies—fear for the safety and life of the child she had borne, and not one of them but said in her heart, "What if it had been MY baby?"

It is no exaggeration to say that 100,000,000 Americans immediately formed themselves into a searching party, in spirit if not in body, with the sole purpose of restoring the Lindbergh baby in safety as soon as possible to his mother's arms. From the highest to the most lowly, news of the Lindbergh kidnaping was the all-important topic.

It is not often that a President of the United States puts from his mind even for a little while momentous affairs of state because of concern over what has happened to some individual. But that is exactly what happened in this case. Herbert Hoover, in the midst of pondering over the solution of pressing national and international problems, forgot for the moment that he was Chief Executive of a nation and remembered only that he was an American father. So he gave orders that he was to be kept informed of the latest developments in the case no matter at what hour of the night the news should arrive at the White House.

What was true of the President was true of other high government officials, both state and national. The kidnapers of her son and broadcast through the press of the nation. In it she said:

"To the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby:

"Here is a heartbroken appeal direct from the mother of the child you stole.

"The baby has been sick and its recovery may depend on the treatment it gets from you. You must be especially careful about the diet.

"Mrs. Lindbergh issued to the press today the strict diet she has been following since the baby fell ill. She did this in the hope you might read this story and that there was some spark of humanity even in the heart of a baby thief.

"Here is the diet, accompanied by the fervent prayer of a grieving mother:

"One quart of milk during the day.

"Three tablespoons of cooked cereal morning and night.

"One yolk of egg daily.

"One baked potato or rice once a day.

"Two tablespoons of stewed fruit daily.

"Half a cup of orange juice on waking.

"Half a cup of prune juice after the afternoon nap.

"And fourteen drops of medicine called Viosolol during the day.

"That's all, kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby. That's what the baby's mother wants you to give the boy. Follow her request and you may in some small part redeem yourself in the eyes of a contemptuous world."

The fathers of the nation in spirit trumped with Colonel Lindbergh the woods about the large estate, searching with him for clues that would lead to the recovery of the stolen child. In spirit they repeated his prayers and his curses. To the mothers of the nation the abduction was a real, a personal tragedy. Not one of them but felt with Anne Morrow Lindbergh the devastating blow that had been struck American motherhood, not one of them but suffered the keenest of all agonies—fear for the safety and life of the child she had borne, and not one of them but said in her heart, "What if it had been MY baby?"

It is no exaggeration to say that 100,000,000 Americans immediately formed themselves into a searching party, in spirit if not in body, with the sole purpose of restoring the Lindbergh baby in safety as soon as possible to his mother's arms. From the highest to the most lowly, news of the Lindbergh kidnaping was the all-important topic.

It is not often that a President of the United States puts from his mind even for a little while momentous affairs of state because of concern over what has happened to some individual. But that is exactly what happened in this case. Herbert Hoover, in the midst of pondering over the solution of pressing national and international problems, forgot for the moment that he was Chief Executive of a nation and remembered only that he was an American father. So he gave orders that he was to be kept informed of the latest developments in the case no matter at what hour of the night the news should arrive at the White House.

What was true of the President was true of other high government officials, both state and national. The first activity in trying to run to earth the criminals was, of course, on the part of local police near the Lindbergh home in New Jersey.

Through the agency of the teletype the alarm reached the police of New York, Newark, Jersey City, Elizabeth, Camden, and Philadelphia within a few minutes of the receipt of the first news at Trenton. All of them quickly swung into action, as did the New York and Pennsylvania state police.

Orders were flashed to every precinct by the police teletype system to be on the alert for suspicious cars, while the new police radio station WPEO flashed word to the short wave station of the patrolling detective cars to join in the watch.

Similar steps, though on a smaller scale, were being repeated simultaneously in every city for many miles around the Lindbergh home. Posses of motorcycle and bandit squad policemen from Philadelphia, Pa., and New Jersey state troopers, clamped down a heavy guard on every bridge over the Delaware river.

But the circle of activity soon widened beyond state borders. Within a few hours the news reached Washington, the full co-operation of the federal government in hunting down the kidnapers was offered to the New Jersey state authorities. Attorney-General William D. Mitchell hurried to the White House for a conference with President Hoover and immediately afterwards the Department of Justice announced that every agency of the department would co-operate to the utmost with the state authorities.

Following a second conference between the President and his attorney-general, it was announced that the government had placed its prohibition enforcement officers as well as all of the other department of justice agents on the case. All agents in the eastern section of the country, acting under direct orders from the President, transmitted through the justice department's bureau of investigation in New York and Philadelphia, were instructed to be on the lookout for suspicious characters. Between these two offices the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey and Connecticut, were immediately covered with a network of investigation by the most skillful sleuths in the service of the United States.

But more striking than the immediate action taken by the constituted authorities of the law for dealing with the criminals who had stolen away the Lindbergh baby was the instantaneous reaction of private individuals everywhere to the crime. It is doubtful if ever before in the history of America have so many millions of her citizens felt the personal obligation to aid in a gigantic manhunt in spirit if not in reality.

Aviators, who had been buddies of the famous flying colonel, immediately placed themselves and their planes at his disposal to aid in the search. Thousands of amateur detectives were busily engaged in watching for "clues" which might aid the authorities in catching the malefactors. In New York the clergy of three religious denominations joined in broadcasting a prayer for the safe and speedy return of the Lindbergh baby—a prayer which found an echo in the hearts of millions.

Nor was the excitement over the case confined to the borders of the United States. In far-off China, the kidnaping was told in big headlines alongside the news of the Chinese defeat on the Chapei-Woosung battlefield. The French press, to which Colonel Lindbergh has been a hero since his conquest of the Atlantic in 1920, was filled with the story of the crime. Germany forgot for a moment its heated political atmosphere arising from the presidential election campaign and was swept by a wave of sympathy for the parents of the lost baby. All Berlin newspapers published the kidnaping on their front pages, along with numerous photographs, an extraordinary occurrence in that country, where political issues invariably occupy all available front-page space, even when an election campaign is not in progress.

England's anxiety over the fate of the little boy was nearly as keen as America's. The news of the abduction caused a sensation in Mexico where the baby's grandfather, the late Dwight Morrow, had been ambassador from the United States. A stream of telegrams was sent to the Lindberghs from their many friends in Mexico. President Ortiz Rubio, Foreign Secretary Manuel C. Telloz and J. Reuben Clark, who succeeded the late Senator Dwight Morrow as ambassador, asked to be kept closely informed of any developments in the search for the kidnapers.

The abduction was brought home to Mexicans all the more vividly because of the fact that it had occurred on the third anniversary of Colonel Lindbergh's arrival in the Mexican capital on the visit before his last trip to Mexico, in the days when he was courting Anne Morrow in the romantic atmosphere of Cuernavaca.

Just as the news of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby circled the globe within a few hours after it had occurred, so had the news of the birth of this baby been a item of world-wide interest. Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was born June 22, 1930, which also was the anniversary of the birth of his mother, the former Anne Morrow, daughter of the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey. She was twenty-four years old the day her son was born. The baby was born in the Morrow home in New Jersey, in which his parents were married May 27, 1929.

In the four days interval between June 22 and the day the birth certificate was filed members of the Morrow and Lindbergh family participated in an amicable discussion as to what the infant would be named.

That question was settled when the birth certificate disclosed he was to be "Junior." And it was understood to have been Mrs. Lindbergh's choice all along. It was reported, too, that Lindbergh had favored calling his son after his father-in-law, but that for the first time since he hopped the Atlantic three years before he was turned back from his goal.

During his first few months of life, when his parents were making occasional short jaunts by airplane it frequently was reported that Charles Jr. was to accompany them. They did not take the infant on any of these trips, however, though the reports were so persistent that they gave rise to the impression that Charles Jr. would be brought up from earliest youth with the idea of making an aviator out of him.

So widely was this conviction held that his reticent father declared in an interview, which was printed in October, 1930, in the Pictorial Review, that Charles Jr.'s future was in his own hands.

"Our son," Colonel Lindbergh was quoted as saying, "has hardly reached the age to have his future determined for him, and, in any case, it is a question that he can decide for himself when the time comes.

"Personally, I do not want him to be anything or do anything that he himself has no taste or aptitude for. When word of the birth of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. went around the world and even before it was announced, gifts began to arrive at the Morrow home for him in such profusion that they soon became an embarrassment. His parents were quoted as saying that the boy would have to remain an infant for ten years at least merely to wear out the baby clothes which had been sent to him.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of intestinal flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Cadwalder St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her. Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to be sure you get the genuine.

"Holy Thorn" Draws Throngs of Devout

Visitors to Glastonbury at Christmas see the celebrated "Holy Thorn" which blooms at Yuletide. Romantic tradition informs us that the thorn sprang from the staff of Joseph of Arimathea, who came here bearing the Holy Grail. The tired saint stopped to pray at Wyrall Hill (Wearryall), leaning on his staff, and "lo, when the prayer was ended the staff had taken root and blossomed."

And so the "Holy Thorn" was venerated till the Seventeenth century, when it was hewn down by a fanatic, who cut off his own leg in the process.

But slips had been taken from the parent thorn, and one of them is still growing in the beautiful grounds of the venerable abbey, while another overshadowed the Chancel well.

This is another legend-haunted spot, for here men say St. Joseph buried the Holy Grail, and immediately a spring gushed forth and was found to be tinged with the holy blood of the Redeemer, and has ever since shown a reddish color.

Actually, it is a chalybeate spring, and a reddish fungus grows on the surface, but it has been a object of veneration for many centuries.

It was visited by Saxon and Celtic saints, St. Patrick, St. Bridget, St. Adhelm and St. Dunstan, and by numerous kings, while King Arthur himself is said to have been buried nearby.

There are traces of pre-Roman mystery in this wonderful well, and there is little doubt that it was a holy well resorted to by the devout for centuries before Christianity.—London Times.

Furrow to Stop Fires

For the purpose of heading off forest fires, a piece of mechanism has recently appeared which is reported to be effective. It is a powerful tractor with a wide plow fixed in front. The plow is used for constructing fire lines to prevent the spread of forest fires. It can make a furrow 15 inches wide and will throw out the dirt 10 inches on either side, making a fire line almost four feet wide. It will accomplish in one hour work that would keep ten men busy for a whole day.

Where Men Are Scarce

A serious shortage of husbands is suggested by the publication of the voters' lists for the nine parliamentary divisions in the county of Cheshire, England. In each district the women voters outnumber the men, and the total excess of women over men in the county approaches 30,000.

Generosity Wanted

"Is that, ex-gambler good to you, Polly?"

"No, I'll trade a husband with a past for a man with a present any day."

WORLD'S DEBT TO WHITMAN AS POET

Modern Writers Fulfilling His Prophecy.

American poetry in the still young Twentieth century underwent momentous changes of mind and heart. We have witnessed a renaissance, a new birth, almost a revolution, which is not concluded, but is in vigorous process.

It is a chapter in the complex chronicle of thought, culture, life of our time; it is a beautiful, vital, heartening chapter in a record much of which is not lovely, as many of the poets have felt and sadly sung. They have done much to interpret and redeem the evil and to glorify the good.

Our poets are intensely American without being provincial; modern as man's morning's sun, but not ignorant of man's oldest traditions or unaware of the timeless values. Even when there is no visible trace in them of Whitman's form and individual thought, many of them are fulfilling in their private ways the prophecy which he made of poets to come after him, the declaration of independence and of which he was in his own time the solitary signer.

It is our generation—not the decades before us, not the men who were children during his maturity—it is we and not our fathers who have fully understood Whitman. He set American verse free long before "free verse" was talked about. It was not in form, but in substance that he sought liberation for himself and his successors.

He believed, and his successors all believe, all take it for granted no matter what their special subjects, that anything under heaven or beyond can be expressed in the open daylight of poetry. He protested against bookish words and poetic diction.

Our poets can be erudite and rhetorical and swing through the heavens with verbal voluptuosities, but most of them aim at simplicity and find new richness in the old words that are the life of us and can never be worn out. The versifier who uses a rubber-stamp phrase will be puffed or laughed at by his brethren, sent to the foot of the class until he learns better.—John Macy in Current History.

Black Locust Has Many Uses

Black locust is a four-purpose tree, says the United States forest service. It quickly produces good timber for posts and other uses; it ranks strongly, thereby checking soil erosion; its flowers enable bees to make a good quality of honey; and it is a legume. The nodules on its roots store nitrogen in the soil, enriching it for future crops. In addition, it is a tree of beauty and is valuable for shade.

Pride of Halifax

That it possesses the perfect baby is the claim made by Halifax, England. Twins on view at the town's baby show were pollarded 99 per cent perfect. One mother proudly stated that her baby weighed 12 pounds when he was born, and had been singled out for special merit at three different shows.

Fight those colds!

When winter begins to break up, wet weather brings on a host of annoying colds. Men and women often lose fitness during such seasonal changes. It's an ideal time to take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil every day. Doctors find that the wealth of Vitamin A in this emulsion is stored up by human bodies and builds resistance to the common cold. This is the pleasant, palatable way for adults to take cod liver oil. Plans have been laid for a program for the remainder of the year, and it is not all for fun and pleasure. There are many worthwhile things to be done in the way of Religion, Missionary enterprises, Citizenship and Learning.

The first big bunch of fun and entertainment will come in the early morning hours of Sunday, March 27. Everyone in the League is planning a big time at the sunrise breakfast that morning. And won't their ham and eggs taste good?

We received our charter from the National Board the other day and are now a member in good standing. Come on you young people. It's no crime to come to Sunday School, even if some people think it just a bit old-fashioned.

Odd Sounds Gave Rise to Belief in Demons

South America has a moaning mountain. At certain seasons a deep note hounds from Mount El Bromador in the Chilean Andes. In former days the natives listened to it with superstitious fear, while even a white man, hearing it for the first time, is startled at the mountain's "power." Another curious mountain exists in Nevada, though this one usually gives out a note resembling at first the jingling of bells and ending with a deep organ like swell. In both cases the sounds are due to a peculiar formation of the earth, which under certain conditions of weather allows the separate particles to rub against each other and so produce uncanny effects.

Elig Island, off the Scottish coast has its "singing sands," where at times each grain rubs against its neighbor, the whole making a singing noise. Similar sands are found in China. In England is a mountain which howls in such a way that formerly it was supposed to be the haunt of demons. This is Cross Fell, in Westmoreland, where local conditions produce a gale with several peculiarities, including an awe-inspiring scream that at times can be heard for miles.

New Device "Cans" Sound and Then Gives It Back
London.—The Daily Express said recently a device had been perfected which recorded sound and reproduced it immediately in full volume and with clarity and accuracy.
A short test speech spoken into an ordinary telephone microphone came back with startling distinctness one minute after it was finished. It was recorded on a few inches of magnetized wire; no wax, chemicals or other fixing materials were needed.
The device can be attached to a telephone and the entire conversation heard immediately after it is finished. The paper said the device was the simplest, cheapest and most practical system of sound reproduction ever invented. It is a development of an invention known to experimenters for thirty years.
