CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, APRIL 8, 1932

NUMBER 15

Elected Mayor for Fifth Consecutive Term

George T. McQuillen, who on Tuesday, was elected to his fifth consecutive term as Mayor of Carrizozo. Mr. McQuillen has also been named as member of the County Board of Education to fill the unexpired term of John A. Haley, deceased. Mr. McQuillen is the genial and accommodating manager of the Carrizozo division of the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Carrizozo High School in No. Central Association

Carrizozo High School faculty, students and friends are to be congratulated upon the fact that the school has been accepted as a member of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

This is a much sought-after honor, since to attain it requires a high standard of work both in academic progress and administrative organization. Carrizozo High School is one of a comparatively small number of high schools in the State to achieve this distinction.

C. M. T. C. Training Period

The enrollment period for the 1932 Citizens' Military Training Camp is now on, the quota from New Mexico having been fixed at 166 young men. The places of training for New Mexico are Ft. Bliss, Texas, Ft. Logan, Colo., where the basic and infantry courses will be given. Only young men of good moral character, between the ages of seventeen and twenty three are desired, and it is also required that they speak and understand the English language.

The State Department of the American Legion of New Mexico requests that all local Legion Posts assist in securing applicants from the young men of their community, the first procedure being to secure from either the American Legion Department Headquarters, Santa Fe, or from Col. William L. Carbine, Fort Bayard, the necessary application blanks. These will be furnished gladly upon request. Following this, a physical examination will be given and the application forwarded to the 8th Co Area, attention C. M. T. C. Officer, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas.

As the quota for New Mexico is only 166 it is very important that the applications be made at once before our quota is filled from

The City Election

The city election went off quietly Tuesday. The members of the old board were re-elected. This is Mr. McQuillen's fifth term as mayor. They are all well qualified and will give the people a sane and economical administration of the city's affairs. They are not prejudiced toward any group and we feel sure they will give service with a smile and a heart to all. Following is the number of votes received by each:

As there were 202 votes cast we think they did fairly well.

Mr. McQuillen for Mayor	202
Mr. Seger for Clerk	202
Messrs. Bonghner and Kelley for Trustees	202
Messrs. Snow and Ziegler for Trustees	201

Notice

The Democratic Central Committee of Lincoln County is hereby called to convene in the Court House at Carrizozo, New Mexico, Saturday, April 9, at 1:30 P. M.

The purpose of the meeting is to select a Chairman to succeed the late John A. Haley as Chairman of the Democratic County Committee, and to transact any other business which may properly come before said Committee.

A full attendance is desired, but any committeeman who finds it impossible to be present is respectfully requested to send a proxy, to the end that each precinct may have an equal voice.

Mrs. John A. Haley, Acting Secretary.

The Woman's Club of Carrizozo

Tuesday, April 12, there will be a meeting at the Community Hall to finish the Afghan. The meeting will begin at ten o'clock. Every one come and bring a covered dish and thimbles. There will be a covered dish in cheer at twelve o'clock.

The Woman's Club will meet with Mrs. Dewey Stokes Saturday, April 16, 1932.

McQuillen Receives Appointment

Judge Numa C. Franger has appointed Mr. G. T. McQuillen President of the County Board of Education to succeed the late Mr. John A. Haley. General satisfaction is expressed at this announcement, as Mr. McQuillen is a suitable appointee in every sense of the word, and will give his best service in this responsible position. The County School Board held a meeting Monday. All members were present and Mr. McQuillen qualified to fill the vacancy.

other sections. All expenses, including transportation, to and from camp, are paid for by the Government and no better vacation can be had at any price than that enjoyed by the boys who will attend. Young men, get in touch with any official of your local Legion Post at once and take advantage of this splendid opportunity for a thirty-day vacation, or write the undersigned, who will furnish you the necessary blanks.

Arbor Day

Arbor Day this year will be of much significance due to the fact that the George Washington Bicentennial is being observed throughout the nation by a tree planting program, and the people of every state in the Union are turning their attention to beautifying public and private grounds, parks, streets and highways by the planting of shade trees and ornamental shrubs in affectionate memory of the Father of our country.

Our state law requires the Governor to designate a day in the spring of the year as Arbor Day, to be observed by the planting of trees, and flowers on school grounds, and other public and private places; also that county school superintendents request every school in their respective counties to observe Arbor Day by an appropriate tree planting program, and thereafter make a report to the Governor of the Arbor Day activities of each school.

Now, therefore, I, Arthur Seligman, Governor of the State of New Mexico, by the virtue of the authority in me vested, do hereby proclaim Friday, April 15, as Arbor Day in the State of New Mexico.

I respectfully request that all school authorities, mayors of cities, patriotic and religious organizations, service clubs and women's clubs, take an active part in preparing and carrying out an appropriate Arbor Day program this year, such as may be in keeping with the dignity, patriotic and historical significance of the George Washington Bicentennial.

Arbor Day should be observed not only by the planting of trees, but by presenting an educational program of intriguing interest dealing with conservation and preservation of tree life, explaining the economic and recreational value of New Mexico's beautiful forests and magnificent wilderness areas. Arbor Day is an appropriate time for municipal authorities to launch plans for tree planting along streets and parkways. In this day of automobile travel it is most important that municipalities beautify all highway approaches into the respective cities, towns and villages by the planting and cultivation of shade trees along these avenues. Such improvements would be of artistic and economic value.

The name of George Washington is already immortal, but we may also on Arbor Day make his name a household word among us by affectionately giving it the place of honor on our Arbor Day programs.

Done at the Executive Office this 1st day of April, 1932.

Witness my hand and the Great Seal of the State of New Mexico, Arthur Seligman, Governor.

Baptist Revival Closed

Rev. and Mrs. Ben H. Rowland, who have been here the past two weeks conducting a revival for Rev. L. D. Jordan, pastor of the Baptist church, left yesterday for Artesia where they will engage in similar work. Much good was accomplished during their two weeks of teaching and preaching here. Aside from the lasting good and the general uplift to the church, spiritually, there were two additions to the membership. The ordinance of Baptism will be administered next Sunday evening after the regular service.

Oscura Items

Mrs. Brazel of Carrizozo and Mrs. M. J. Olson were visitors at the Oscura school last week. These kind ladies expressed themselves well pleased with the progress and the school. They were especially delighted with the beautiful and useful basket work being done. A number of these baskets have been recently sold at a good price by lovers of artistic work.

Mrs. Sam Ward and infant son, Edwin, made a good long visit to Oscura school Monday afternoon. Baby Edwin being a member of our Cradle Roll is always on his good behavior.

On the last day of school the pupils of the Sunday School and the public school will enjoy a trip to White Sands. Of course there will be a can of ice cream and other refreshments.

A most interesting and important Parent-Teacher's Association meeting was held at the Oscura school house on Monday afternoon, March 21st. Many important questions were discussed, and many wise decisions were made.

One conclusion was that Oscura will prepare an especially fine exhibit to be displayed in Carrizozo next October at the county fair. Aside from the commercial exhibits displayed in competition—just watch for the special art exhibit from our good little town. And be sure to notice the lovely Brand quilt we are preparing. Nothing like commencing in good time for such a grand affair as our County Fair has grown to be.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith kindly invited Mrs. Dixon to accompany them to the fine program given in Carrizozo on Saturday evening March 19th. It was surely an enjoyable affair.

The Easter Festival which was postponed last week on account of Mrs. Turner's illness, was enjoyed March 29th at the beautiful I-X ranch; now more beautiful than usual with the orchards blooming. An egg hunt was enjoyed by the children. The P. T. A. was also present. Such a happy time will long be remembered.

Mr. Whitaker generously sup-

Carrizozo HI School Notes

(By H. S. Reporter)

Miss Melana's English class was wholly responsible for five very good speeches on varied and interesting topics last Friday. You may count on anything Miss Melana directs to be good; she just has a genius for things like that.

And was Friday a day? And how! The Board of Education kindly granted us permission to take April 1st as a holiday seeing as how we had already made up the time through lengthened periods, extra school time of evenings, etc. and someone suggested to Mr. Groce that we have a picnic. He agreed, and we all went to the Bonita Dam for a jolly good time, good wholesome fun, and eats galore for everybody.

The Orchestra and Chorus, as well as the many solos and group numbers are working every night for that fineness and supremacy which is necessary to compete in the Music Meet April 15th. Are you townspeople behind us? Miss Everard's people are also working hard for the Commercial Contest, to be held also on the 15th.

The Seniors started practicing Tuesday night on the play "Take My Advice". Eight people in the cast, all good, with Miss Melana on the directors stool we should turn out a pretty good evening's entertainment.

We have had several of the Music Meet contestants to render their ditties in assembly, and it looks as if we might have a pretty fair chance.

Alto Items

Spring has come, I do believe. Anyhow people are gardening and playing like it is spring.

Mrs. W. West and children are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Gilliland at Artesia, N. M.

J. H. McMillan left for Sweetwater, Texas. He accompanied his nephew, Oscar Ruppels, and will remain a month or more.

Miss Geneva Gilliland visited Ethel West last week for a few days.

Mrs. Traylor gave a quilting party Saturday. Not many were present, but never-the-less the quilt was finished. It was for Ikey Brook and his new bride.

Applied brilliant Easter eggs, prizes and special gifts to the winning side in the Sunday School contest.

Mrs. George Turner is recuperating from her recent illness and is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor.

Mrs. Dixon spent Easter in El Paso.

Resolutions of Respect and Sympathy

Whereas, Mr. John A. Haley has been removed from among us by death on March 18, 1932; Therefore, be it Resolved, That, in the death of Mr. Haley, his family has lost a devoted husband and father, the county and state, a useful, upright and honored citizen.

Resolved, That we will ever bear in fond and grateful memory the fidelity and zeal, as well as the ability, with which Mr. Haley was wont to discharge his duties as a citizen, educator, editor and friend. Remembering that his example in these things was worthy of our emulation.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved widow and children, and that we commend them to the care of that God in whom Mr. Haley trusted.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Business Men's Association of Carrizozo, and that copies be sent to The Lincoln County News, and to the Carrizozo Outlook, and that copies of these papers be sent to Mrs. John A. Haley, Mrs. W. H. Hamilton, Miss Aileen Haley, to Mr. Haley's sisters and brothers; and to The New Mexico Newspaper Union.

(Signed) E. M. Brickley, R. E. Biancy, J. L. Lawson, Committee on Resolutions The Carrizozo Business Men's Association.

Mrs. A. J. Rowland and son, Walter La Fleur were in El Paso Wednesday.

CHAPTER IX

Portraits by Roberts

In the drawing room Roberts at once looked the door and drew the curtains at the windows. He then opened his bag and took out a quart bottle of whisky. With it he went into the washroom and poured himself a half-glass of the liquor.

After drinking it neat he gasped and coughed, but even in his nervousness he remembered to play host. He rinsed the glass and came out to offer it and the bottle to Stanton who shook his head.

"No? . . . All right," said Roberts. "We'll have lunch here in the room. We'll have all our meals here. Blair and Ashley are on the train. I'll need all the breaks if I can get away from them. It's the luck that I had to run into them at old man Darling's. Without that I'd have had a fair chance."

It might seem that Roberts at this time was overemphasizing the probable consequences of this unfortunate coincidence, however true they proved in the event. Allowance, however, must be made for all the motives animating the Turner well associated. Persons with intimate knowledge of their characters gave more weight to distrust than to desire of money without at all overlooking the strength of the latter. As Malsie later says, it was a panic. Turner undoubtedly knew the men thoroughly. Possibly if Blair and Ashley had not encountered Roberts as they did in Newburgh the temptation to do away with him might have been resistible. This remains conjecture, but it is possible that without the meeting at Mr. Darling's home the murders might have been three and not six.

"I'll ring for the porter," said Roberts. "Have him send a waiter. Whenever anyone comes I'm going into the washroom."

"I'll go through the train," said Stanton, "and see if they're on."

"What good would that be?"

"You'd be able to stop worrying in one case and really begin it in the other."

"Never mind. I know they're on the train. They may or may not know I know it. Let them guess. I'll need all the breaks."

After lunch Roberts slept on the couch and Stanton read. When Roberts lazily aroused himself he played games of solitaire, and enjoyed his bottle, coaxing the lieutenant to join him in a two-handed game of cards or in drinks.

"You're a dull John Law," he said. "Hunt up your friends," said the lieutenant. "We might invite them in."

"That's an idea. A truce. They'd keep it as long as they wanted to."

"What did you fellows do to Turner? You might as well begin cleaning up that."

"That seems to be preying on your mind. Nothing was done to Turner. Incidents will happen in a rough life. We haven't lived in the parlor. Sometimes one man would get a little the worst of it and sometimes another. No one would keep account of them. Turner wasn't the fellow to do it."

"Just a great big boy."

"That's it."

"And the best two-sided hater I've ever heard of. Play your cards, or you'll have me knowing I'm simpler than I am."

With dark and after dinner Roberts appeared almost at ease in his mind. His bottle explained some of his comfort. The cloister sense—he again had the curtains drawn—in the closed room of the speeding train was another reason for his lifting spirits. He was talkative, and the lieutenant thought something might come of that but very little did.

"They'll half for it," he said late in the evening in one of his few references to his flight, "but I may handle them yet. They're always been paired, and it's a queer combination at that. I never could understand how they trusted each other. I don't believe they can. I'll never know why I haven't trapped and shot them. Nothing but scriptures can keep anyone from murder in New York or Chicago. It can't be detected. You know that, Stanton."

"He's a devil. So's Ashley. You said you fancied Ashley. In one fashion you might be right. Blair's a fool about women, and Ashley isn't. He doesn't get himself tied up, and Blair does. He's crazy. And you'd think he was irresistible. Maybe he is with the only kind of women he ever sees or is ever likely to see. It's a wonder he's come out of some of his cases."

"They are all alike. For a month Blair will be obsessed with a girl. You would be sure it was for eternity. So would she. The great lover. If she's Omphale she thinks he's Hercules at the spinning wheel. Oh, don't grin; I know some music. I was an Anglican vicar once, whatever that has to do with it. He makes them think they're all Dellahs. He likes violent ones. His favorite woman is the threes. He quits every one in about a month. It's a wonder he's alive. He laughs at them. I know perfectly well he must have killed some of them to keep himself from being killed."

"You think I'm romancing. I saw a girl, half Spanish, half Brit, come up behind him in a Marcellis cafe with a half-foot knife blade. I was with some American naval officers off a cruiser, the Nashville I think it was. Blair was sitting with Ashley. Blair's back was to the girl, but Ashley was facing her and he saw her. He knew who she was and why she had the knife, but he gave her a break. The only warning Blair got was a sort of anticipatory grin on Ashley's face and the same sort of look in his eyes. That was sport for Ashley. Blair knew him well enough to be warned that something amusing to Ashley was behind him. He knew that. It might have been danger or just a fellow coming up to slap him on the back or knock his hat down over his ears and buy a bottle of wine. That would be champagne. That's always wine to Blair. He's a pig, but he's an old tusk of a wild boar. And it could be something else behind him and it was.

"I don't know how he did it, but he seemed to follow the girl by watching Ashley's expression. Just as she struck. She shrieked and fainted. They said afterward he had broken her arm. She was carried away. No one could blame Blair for what they saw, and it was nothing to the police what emotional suffering she might have had. To the Continental police that's honey. Pulling a knife's something, but you've got to stick it in a heart to have a case for the police. Over here you could have got a jury to hold Blair while the girl sliced him. It might be a good system at that. I wish to God she had been a second quicker or that Ashley had kept his d—n face straight. He could have had his fun later."

"When Blair sat down again he ordered some more drinks and began to cuss Ashley. Ashley just laughed. The madder Blair got and the louder he cussed, the more fun Ashley had. I thought there'd be murder yet, but Ashley had one hand spread out on the table and there was a blue shadow between two of his fingers. He had one of those d—n little single shot .33's covered. Blair saw it. If he had made a pass it would have taken him right through the stomach and the spine. So pretty soon he began to laugh, and Ashley took his hand off the table. They knew each other pretty well. They do yet.

"They sat there two hours, and every once in a while Ashley would lean back and laugh. He certainly enjoyed that girl's visit. When they were comfortably drunk they went away arm in arm. That's Blair and Ashley."

"You said Malsie was Trembley's wife," said Stanton.

"Did I?"

"Well, maybe it was Blair said it. Where's she living now? Chicago?"

"I don't know."

"There are some things I want you to know tomorrow. You're going over to talk to the state's attorney."

"I am, like h—l. And why? What am I charged with?"

"Nothing. You're helping us partly in return for helping you. And you're being decent to me. Who do you suppose would believe my story without something to show for it? You're that something."

"I'll see," said Roberts. "Probably I shan't mind."

"I hope you won't, partly for your own sake. I think it will be better for you. Now you can go into the washroom, or you can come with me to the smoking room. I'm going to call the porter to make up the berth. If you stay here tell him what you want."

"I'll stay here," said Roberts, "and I'll take the upper berth. Ring three times when you come back. Then I'll know who it is."

CHAPTER X

Roberts Bolts for Safety

When Stanton awoke the following morning there was no sound from Roberts in the upper berth. The train was an hour and a half's run from the La Salle Street station, and the lieutenant did not disturb his roommate but quietly set about dressing and shaving. Then he considered whether to have his breakfast without awaking and speaking to Roberts or to arouse him. He thought it best to arouse him.

"Roberts," he called, "are you awake? Want to get up?"

There was no answer.

"Say, Roberts," he called again. "I'm going to breakfast."

There was no sound from the upper berth, and Stanton reached in to shake the sleeper. He could feel nothing but the bedclothes. That astonished him, and he stood up on the couch to look in the berth. Roberts was not there.

This was so completely beyond Stanton's understanding that he looked in the washroom on impulse although he himself had just stepped out of it. Then he looked for Roberts' bag. It also was gone, and the case was clearer.

Stanton rang for the porter and opened the door. The porter was at work on a near-by section.

"That was my ring," said the lieutenant. He did not say George. "The man who was traveling with me isn't in his berth. I thought he was asleep. His bag isn't in the room. Do you know anything about him?"

"He got off at Elkhart," said the porter. "Didn't you know that?"

The porter had no plantation idiom, which would require an attempt at phonetic type. He did not say "Captain" or "Boss."

"No, I didn't know it," said the lieutenant.

"Nothing wrong, is there?" the porter asked.

"Nothing at all. If he wanted to get off it was his business. If he didn't want to tell me that also was his affair. He probably made a sudden decision and didn't want to disturb me."

"Have you—" the porter checked himself.

"Have I what?"

"What I started to say might not sound so good," said the porter, smiling. "So I'll not say it. I was thinking that your friend might have left a message with me for you and since he didn't—"

"I'd better see whether I have all my belongings? That's all right. I didn't have enough to worry about, and I guess he wouldn't want any of them. I'll go to breakfast."

"Yes, sir," said the porter.

By the time Stanton was seated in the dining car the whole episode had become amusing, his own part in it as much as any other. His ward had absconded. He was returning home with some fantastic stories and nothing else. He knew one of the murderers and had talked to him but was not able to lay a finger on him. He could not bring him home, and it was a Wisconsin case even if anything ever could be made of it. He had been retreating with a possible victim who had run away from him.

He thought he knew why Roberts had bolted. The man was convinced Blair and Ashley were on the train. He also was persuaded that they thought he didn't know it. They would expect him to get off at the La Salle Street station without any suspicion that they were back of him. Therefore it would be easy to deceive them, get off and make a dash by any route he wanted, for the Pacific coast and his dive into the obscurities of the Far East.

After breakfast Stanton sat in his room reconciling himself with amusement to his predicament. I never said I was a detective, he thought to himself as an answer to the whole thing. His murderers had flown out of his ken and jurisdiction.

"Is everything all right?" the porter asked when he came to take the bag out of the room.

"Everything," said the lieutenant. As he walked down the train shed toward the gate he decided to stand there a moment and satisfy himself as to Blair and Ashley. If they were on the train Roberts would have to be conceded something more than agitated romancing. The lieutenant was not required to wait. The two had preceded him, and they were waiting at the gate.

Blair's expression was puzzled when he saw only Stanton, but Ashley was grinning. The lieutenant, seeing them, found that he was getting angry and was on the point of shouting it. He stepped out of the way of the stream of passengers and stopped beside the two.

"Welcome home, lieutenant," said Ashley. "Hardly expected to be here before you. Didn't Mr. Roberts come with you?"

"I think I'll call the wagon for you," said Stanton.

"Why, lieutenant?" said Ashley. "We're here to meet my Uncle Hiram Greene, of Oshkosh."

"Then you'd better go to the North Western station."

"D—n you, Blair, you had to be so cock-sure. Here we are at the wrong station."

"Oh, dry up!" said Blair. "Who is this cheap copper? On your way, flat-foot."

Stanton lost his temper. He drew his pistol. Blair started back, but Ashley continued to grin. People nearby stumbled and pushed back out of the way. A few women cried out. A station policeman hurried up.

"I'm lieutenant Stanton, of East Chicago Avenue. Call a wagon for these men."

"Blair," said Ashley, "sometimes you're certainly an awful d—n fool."

"I'll break you for this," said Blair to Stanton.

"In Chicago?" said Stanton, amused again. "Big boy, just now you're one of two vagrants. I may give you a murder charge later. Anyway, Roberts gets a break."

"He'll need it," said Ashley amiably. He was grinning when Stanton left him and Blair at the defective bureau. The man's amusement was not feigned. Blair having made a fool of himself, Ashley, although he was in no better case than the other, was enjoying it.

"He couldn't win," said Ashley, "but a thing like that never stops the big boy. Lieutenant, you love him when you know him better, but you'll have to protect him from Roberts. I'll never be able to."

Stanton went directly to the state's attorney's office in the Criminal Court building. Corvaleski had just come in, and Horde, the first assistant, entered the room before they had sat down.

"Telegram just came for you, lieutenant," he said, holding out a yellow envelope, "from some one who thought of addressing you here."

Stanton opened it and read: "Decided best to leave you. Am indebted to you for consideration and kindness. Am playing the game safe and will win. R."

The telegram had been sent from Elkhart, Ind.

"That's where he left the train," said the lieutenant, laying the paper in front of the state's attorney.

"Who is R? And why did he leave the train?"

"R is Roberts. He is one of the three survivors of the Turner will. He left the train while I was sleeping, to get away from Blair and Ashley, the other two survivors. They have him marked for number four. They were on the train. They are over at the bureau now. That's what I came to talk to you about. It will all seem crazy to you, but I'll tell it as it happened. First I'd suggest you have Mr. Horde telephone the bureau to send over exhibits A and B. You might do well to talk to them."

"Do that, Horde, will you? Spin your yarn, lieutenant."

For a half-hour Stanton gave a concise narrative.

"And there you are," he concluded. "I've always told you I was no detective. I've got my birds and no cage. I've just let a man slip me. He's dodging his own murder. I've got a murderer, or two of them, and we can't lay a finger on them."

He Seemed to Follow the Girl by Watching Ashley's Expression.

anticipatory grin on Ashley's face and the same sort of look in his eyes. That was sport for Ashley. Blair knew him well enough to be warned that something amusing to Ashley was behind him. He knew that. It might have been danger or just a fellow coming up to slap him on the back or knock his hat down over his ears and buy a bottle of wine. That would be champagne. That's always wine to Blair. He's a pig, but he's an old tusk of a wild boar. And it could be something else behind him and it was.

"I don't know how he did it, but he seemed to follow the girl by watching Ashley's expression and he whirled just as she struck. She shrieked and fainted. They said afterward he had broken her arm. She was carried away. No one could blame Blair for what they saw, and it was nothing to the police what emotional suffering she might have had. To the Continental police that's honey. Pulling a knife's something, but you've got to stick it in a heart to have a case for the police. Over here you could have got a jury to hold Blair while the girl sliced him. It might be a good system at that. I wish to God she had been a second quicker or that Ashley had kept his d—n face straight. He could have had his fun later."

"When Blair sat down again he ordered some more drinks and began to cuss Ashley. Ashley just laughed. The madder Blair got and the louder he cussed, the more fun Ashley had. I thought there'd be murder yet, but Ashley had one hand spread out on the table and there was a blue shadow between two of his fingers. He had one of those d—n little single shot .33's covered. Philosopher Sets Fifty as Golden Age of Man

While drinking a bumper of apple cider, there awhile back, one day at a roadside caravansary, a man asked us what age would we choose to be if we could live for a thousand years.

It was a funny question to ask. Maybe we would not care to live a thousand years more. And yet we sometimes think we would. It might be interesting to see what the world will be like a thousand years from now.

Well, anyway, we said if we could have the say about it, we would decide to go through the thousand years at the age of fifty. Not twenty-one nor ninety-one, but fifty.

Fifty seems to be the ideal age, writes John Steven McGroarty, in the Los Angeles Times. A normal man or woman ought to be in ideal shape at fifty. Still virile, not yet senile; all the mistakes and follies of youth left behind.

No doubt others will not agree with us, but anyway, fifty would be our choice.

HOW JOHN SAVES MONEY... AND LIKES IT...!

IN hard times it's possible to make a husband save money. But it's hard to make him like it. I've found a way. "John used to smoke at least a package of ready-made cigarettes a day. I suggested that he roll his own, when hard times came. He sneered at the idea. "I bought a package of Target and made John try it. Now he says he won't smoke anything else, because Target is real cigarette tobacco, just like the ready-mades use. He says those forty gummed papers you get free with every package would make any dub a good cigarette roller. "Well, John's happy, and I'm happy, and we save at least 50¢ a week!"

AND GET THIS: The U. S. Government Tax on 20 cigarette amounts to 6¢. On 20 cigarettes you roll from Target Tobacco the tax is just about 1¢. No wonder you get such value for a dime!

SAVE MONEY ROLL YOUR OWN SEE WHAT YOU SMOKE

A Spellblader "Your wife makes a splendid speech." "Yes," replied Mr. Meekton, "and I noticed she impressed an entire audience the same way she does me. She says what she likes and no one even thinks of talking back."

Probably Right Mr. Youngbub was declaiming to his wife. "Next to you, my dear, work is my greatest blessing. In fact, if I didn't have work, I wouldn't have you."

YOUNG GIRL SEEKS ROMANCE, ASSISTS LOVER IN HOLDUPS

Mountain Belle—Elopes With Stranger Who is Arrested as Bandit.

Kansas City, Kan.—Pretty Lola Denton's quest for romance, caused her to flee her farm home at Steele, Mo., where she was called the "Belle of the Ozarks," with a stranger whom she later learned was a bandit and an accused killer.

Worse than that for the fifteen-year-old miss was the fact that she came near being implicated in one of the murders.

In the Wyandotte county jail here, she calmly discussed the fast-moving four months that had preceded. She told of two holdups in which she aided her dark-haired lover, Henry Long, twenty-two years old, but firmly denied any connection with the murder of the Topeka (Kan.) butcher, Long is charged with killing.

Life at Home Dull. It was an uneventful life that she had led at Steele, she related, until Long appeared and wooed her at several dances. He told her of the romance they could enjoy if she would accompany him.

Long promised her the glamor of the city, his love and the admiration of his many friends. It sounded good to Lola, so she left the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Denton, for the first time in her life, last fall. Ten days later, two men attempted to hold up a filling station in Topeka. John Gardner, the operator, was killed. A girl, who answered the description of Lola, waited in the car outside. One of the men, Roy McDaniel, was arrested and found guilty of murder. He was sentenced to life imprisonment. The other bandit fled. The girl left with him. Lola has denied she was the girl.

Her itinerary with her companion led her to many cities in Kansas. She recalled January 8, when she and Long entered a grocery store here, operated by Art Grube. Long brandished a revolver and obtained $12.

Lola said she was at the door, amazed. Grube said she stood there, smiling, her right hand in her sweater pocket from which something like a gun projected.

In Rain of Bullets. They left the scene of the robbery in a motor car amid a rain of bullets. Grube said he heard a woman scream, but Lola denied that she screamed, despite the fact that she was badly scared.

Lola was uncertain what happened between that time and January 14, when she and Long held up a sandwich shop at Coffeyville, Kan. After that robbery, Long let Lola out of the car. A posse was searched for them. She would lessen his chance for escape, he said. Lola hid behind a fence, where she could hear the conversation of the searchers. When they had finished the search, she walked to a farmhouse and called the police.

"I knew nothing about the robbery," Lola said. "That is, until after they happened. I didn't know where Long got his money. I never asked him where he got it."

Lola is tall and weighs about 125 pounds. She shrugged her shoulders when Sheriff A. G. Becker told her she would be questioned concerning the murder.

"Well, it's all in life, I guess," she philosophized. "I never thought things would end up this way. Long promised to marry me. Then he promised to take me home. I guess we were on the way home when we got in that trouble at Topeka."

Young Man Lives With Bullet in His Heart

Falls Summit, Kan.—Although a 22-caliber bullet has remained lodged in the fibrous covering of his heart more than a year, Virgil Bennett, nineteen-year-old youth of Falls Summit, Kan., has suffered no ill effects.

Virgil was wounded accidentally when a younger brother, Darrell Bennett, dropped a rifle. The gun went off when the trigger struck a door-knob. The bullet struck Virgil behind the right ear, penetrating the mastoid, passed through his throat and lodged in the covering of his heart.

It took surgeons several hours to locate the bullet with an X-ray. The case is recorded as "most unusual" by medical experts.

COMFORT for COLICKY BABIES

THROUGH CASTORIA'S GENTLE REGULATION

The best way to prevent colic, doctors say, is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste. But remember this: a tiny baby's tender little organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. This is just the time Castoria can help most. Castoria, you know, is made specially for babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. For years it has helped mothers through trying times with colicky babies and children suffering with digestive upsets, colds and fever. Keep genuine Castoria on hand, with the name:

FRIDAY, APRIL 8, 1932

Words of Sympathy from State Press

Many Alamogordo friends were grieved Saturday to learn from the El Paso dailies of the passing of John A. Haley, veteran Carrizozo editor and Democratic leader in Lincoln county for more than three decades. Mr. Haley died at his home Friday afternoon, after an illness of many months. He was 64 years of age.

John A. Haley, editor of the Lincoln County News, passed away at Carrizozo March 18th of cancer of the esophagus. Mr. Haley has taken an active part in political affairs of the south west and he leaves a host of friends who will miss him. —Hot Springs Herald.

John A. Haley, editor and publisher of the Lincoln County News, Carrizozo, passed away last Friday. He was a prominent and useful citizen of his community and the state. He was prominent in political and fraternal circles. —Alamogordo Advertiser.

Carrizozo, March 17—(AP)—John A. Haley, 60, editor of the Lincoln County News and pioneer southern New Mexico newspaper editor, died at his home here yesterday. He is survived by his widow and two daughters.

Editor's Note—For many years Mr. Haley published the Lincoln County News at Lincoln. When the town declined and the county seat was moved to Carrizozo, Haley moved his paper to the new county seat.

Mr. Haley was an ardent Democrat and believed firmly in the policies of that party. His paper was one of the now fading type of party newspapers and never an issue was published but bore in some way his declaration of allegiance to the Democratic party. —Roswell Record

Shocking

The most shocking condition in the political life of New Mexico is the so-called "absentee" ballot law. This measure leaves wide open the most flagrant abuse of the franchise of its citizens that any state probably has ever seen or known in the history of the United States. There is almost no known abuse of the elective franchise that this measure does not make possible and put a premium on. —Magdalena News.

City of Santa Fe Goes Democratic

Nine hundred votes were cast at the municipal election held in Santa Fe this week. It went overwhelmingly Democratic—the entire board of councilmen elected being Democrats.

Lower Fee Saved Half a Million Dollars

Santa Fe April 1—Lowering of State automobile tax and license fees, in accordance with pledge of the Democratic party, has saved the people of New Mexico approximately $500,000, it was reported today by William J. Barker, Democratic State Chairman. Mr. Barker's statement was based on the report made by J. M. Lujan, State Comptroller on automobile license sales from July 1, 1930 to March 1, 1931, and from July 1, 1931 to March 1, 1932.

The report of the comptroller shows 62,089 licenses issued for 1932, as compared with 56,193 for 1931, an increase in 1931 of 5,896. Despite this increase in the number of license sold the income in 1932 was $731,214.34, as compared with $1,112,320.85 in 1931, a decrease of 381,106 $1.

The average cost of tax and license in 1931, it is shown, was $19.80 for all classes of vehicles. In 1932 the average cost was $11.77.

Had the old scale of fees, as charged by the previous administration, been in effect in 1932, the income of the motor vehicle department would have been $1,229,362.20, an excess over the amount actually paid in by motor vehicle owners for 1932 tax and licenses of $498,147.86.

"In accordance with its promise to the people," said Mr. Barker, the Democratic administration has left in the pockets of the people of New Mexico, virtually one-half million dollars. In these days of 'Hoover prosperity' it should be gratifying to the people to know that, in the face of the Republican national administration's attempts to increase all forms of taxes and excises, the Democratic State administration is reducing by one-half million dollars their automobile taxes.

There were 10.4 per cent more licenses issued in 1932 than in 1931, indicating, according to Mr. Barker, that the economy program of the administration had reacted favorably for the automobile industry, as well as for the people.

The report by the comptroller shows that the actual cost to the State in handling each license in 1932 was 87 cents, as compared to a cost in 1931 of $1.18, a saving of 26 cents on each 1932 license.

Comptroller Lujan also furnished to the Democratic State Chairman a report of the disbursements of all branches of his department which includes gasoline tax collection, motor vehicle license and auditing, for the two calendar years of 1930 and 1931. The Comptroller's department, according to the report disbursed in 1931 the sum of $13,966.61 for operating expenses less than was disbursed during the calendar year 1930. The gasoline tax department in the calendar year 1931 operated for $3,110.40 less than in the calendar 1930. The motor vehicle department saved $14,668.32 in 1931, as compared to 1930. There was an increase of $1,898.93 in the disbursements by the auditing department.

The report shows that, despite the increase in the number of licenses handled, the operating cost of the motor vehicle department was reduced 23.3 percent. In addition to the reduction already made for the tax payers of approximately $500,000, Mr. Barker said an additional saving will be effected during 1932 for those who purchase licenses throughout the remainder of this year. Based on previous records of license sales he estimates this additional saving will amount to at least $100,000.

A father who has tried it, gives it as his opinion that the old saying that two can live as cheaply as one means that the father and mother at home can live as cheaply as one son in college.

Notice of School Budget Hearing

To Taxpayers of Lincoln County: This is to advise you that the Educational Budget Auditor will be at Carrizozo, on Thursday, April 7, for the purpose of holding school budget hearings for rural and municipal schools of the above county. It is very important that taxpayers be present at these hearings and you are urged to attend them yourself and get as many other taxpayers as you can reach to accompany you. This will be an opportunity for all taxpayers of the county to know how their taxes are spent and to participate in planning a program for school expenditures for the ensuing year beginning July first next, on the basis of strictest economy and with due regard to the limited ability of taxpayers to meet public expenditures.

These hearings will be held before the County Budget Commissioners of your county, consisting of two taxpayers of your county of opposite political parties and Mr. R. H. Grissom, the Educational Budget Auditor, who is a member of each county budget commission. This commission will receive from the County Board of Education and from the several municipal boards of education in the county estimates of their needs for the ensuing year. Every item of expense will be considered carefully and all who attend these hearings will get a clear idea of what it costs to educate the children of their county. In the meantime taxpayers should assemble such information as it may be possible to obtain with a view to taking part in the discussions at the hearings.

Young Democratic Club

J. R. Wrinkle, president of the Young People's Democratic Club of New Mexico, began this week a state-wide organization of democratic work with the opening of state and regional headquarters in Santa Fe.

The immediate objectives of the club are to further the success of the democratic party in the approaching campaign and election and to enlist a wider participation of the young members in public affairs.

Its policy, according to spokesmen, will be absolutely non-factional. It is not designed to hinder or promote any pre-convention candidacy for the state election or for any county office, but on the contrary is a spontaneous and voluntary effort by the Young Democrats to enlarge the organization including those counties not now represented and to secure the affiliation of all existing organizations of the kind.

All sections of the state are enthusiastically accepting the cooperation and the suggestions of organization and participation made by Mr. Wrinkle.

During the democratic state convention to be held at Clovis, May 16, 1932, the Young Democrats will give a luncheon and at that time discuss the culmination of young democratic work in the state.

Lack of Courageous Leadership One Cause of World Depression

Melvin A. Traylor, of Chicago Cites Human Failure in World War Crisis

"New Era" Theory a Myth

Speaking before the International Chamber of Commerce at Washington, Melvin A. Traylor, President of the First National Bank of Chicago, said in part:

Reams have been written, countless addresses have been made, and more will follow in the search for the genesis of the present world depression; and, likely, recovery will come and the crisis be only a memory without there having been found a universally accepted cause or unanimous agreement on methods for the prevention of future defaults.

But I cannot escape the conclusion that the dawn of the present situation broke over the world in July, 1914, and it came not from ignorance of the ultimate results of the course chosen, but because of a complete breakdown of world political sanity.

There was no lack of knowledge of the consequences, but rather of courage to face the facts, to throttle national pride, and to demand common counsel in an honest search for a basis of peace. Such a search might have failed, but unfortunately, history does not indicate that it was honestly made.

Leadership Was Lacking

I am not a pacifist. Until enlightened understanding points us to the council table of peace rather than to the battlefield, there will be a need for armies and navies. But let us not say that we choose the latter course in ignorance of the tremendous costs of the game. Rather let us admit generally the lack of courageous leadership which dares to align itself with the right at the risk of being unpopular.

The point I would make is that, without prejudice as to guilt, the human element did fall in 1914, and the world then began its march to the tragedy of 1930-31. For it is tragedy when in a world of plenty there should be so much poverty, and when, in a nation which boasts of its riches, five million or more people willing to work should be unable to find employment.

It is a challenge to the world, and especially to American business and political leadership, which cannot be ignored and must not be shirked. Causes must be determined with some degree of accuracy and remedies discovered and applied. The task is largely that of business leadership.

We would follow almost endlessly the literature on causes and remedies for the world situation, most of them dealing with the purely economic or the semi-political-economic side of the question. To the lay mind it is all more or less confusing, and to the man at the desk frequently beyond the realm of the practical.

Human Angle of Problem

In speaking more particularly of the character of responsible leadership in America, I am assuming that human conduct has differed little in most countries of the world. It is my purpose to talk about the human side of the problem.

If it is the responsibility of business and political leadership to promote the economic and social welfare of the community, it may be worth while to take stock of our conduct and see how we have measured up to our duty in recent years. This much, however, seems certain. The "new era" theory current in the days of our inflated prosperity was a myth, and is equally valueless in our search of relief.

The forces that have been and are at work are as old as the history of economics. Why should there be in this land of plenty, with unlimited facilities for production, abundant harvests, and a surplus of credit, millions of hungry and unemployed? It is not the fault of those who would work, but can find no work to do. They have little or no choice in shaping their course and while it is true that society owes no one a living, society as far as humanly possible does owe everyone an opportunity to earn a living.

In that obligation we have failed, and until we know wherein we have failed and why, we will not have found that stability which is the universal desire of mankind today.

New Chevrolet Prices

DETROIT, April—Chevrolet price reductions ranging up to fifty-five dollars were announced here by W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager of the Chevrolet-Motor Company.

Same time Mr. Knudsen stated that the Chevrolet Six would continue to be built exclusively by the company for an indefinite period, and that at no time has there been thought of changing the present six cylinder car which has led the industry in sales during the last fifteen months and brought the company its highest percentage of total business Chevrolet has ever enjoyed. The price for the passenger line is $445 for the roadster, lowest priced model.

Mr. Knudsen pointed out that the announcement, which came on the eve of the opening of the National Exhibit of General Motors products, at 55 leading cities beginning April 2, served to arouse renewed interest in motor cars, and that the cumulative effect of developments now under way in the industry should be a major factor in stimulating the automobile, which admittedly is the key to American business recovery.

The Chevrolet announcement was enthusiastically received in automotive circles in this city inasmuch as it places the company which led the industry in three of the past five years in an outstanding sales position.

Reduced prices on individual models, all f. o. b. Flint, Mich., as announced by Mr. Knudsen, are as follows:

Roadster	$445.00
Sport Roadster	$485.00
Phaeton	$495.00
5-Window Coupe	$495.00
3-Window Coupe	$490.00
Sport Coupe	$535.00
De Luxe Coupe	$510.00
Coach	$495.00
De Luxe Coach	$515.00
Standard Sedan	$590.00
Special Sedan	$615.00
5-Passenger Coupe	$575.00
Cabriolet	$595.00
Landaun Phaeton	$625.00

The reduction took effect April 1st, Mr. Knudsen said, and all have been advised to make immediate delivery of all models at the new low price scale.

The Kitchen Cabinet

Foods Uncommonly Served

A NORMAL child has a wonderful gift of imagination. If properly trained this same gift will make a most helpful quality in a housekeeper and cook.

The happy cook who enjoys her work will always be on the alert to find new ways of serving foods to make them more attractive to those she serves. "Everything is new that comes to her net." This is the kind of information that all cooks are seeking—more ways of serving the same old things.

For example, a can of peas will not call forth much enthusiasm, but just drain the can into a shallow baking dish, season with salt, pepper, a bit of sugar and several pieces of butter, then add half a dozen slices of bacon cooked and cut fine, one cupful of cream or canned milk, cover with buttered crumbs and brown in a hot oven and see how quickly that food will disappear. It will be different and so interesting.

Remember—to scallop oysters never have more than two layers, keep plenty of moisture and season with pepper, butter, lemon juice and salt, with cracker crumbs between and on top.

If the gravy is not brown enough add a teaspoonful of browned sugar, or keep a bottle of the caramel for such occasions. This adds to the color but does not sweeten.

Wrapping a fowl in cheesecloth when boiling not only makes the meat more tender, but the dark meat is more moist and is as tender as the white.

Before molding an aspic or jelly, oil the mold; it not only removes easier but it gives it that beautiful glaze so desired.

An aspic is not such a difficult dish to prepare with canned soup of beef or chicken; add gelatin and set away to mold. A bit of onion juice will improve most such dishes. Jellied vegetable soups make fine salads treated in this way.

If new enameled saucepans are placed in a pan of warm water and allowed to come to a boil they will last much longer without cracking or burning, than if they are used immediately.

Sweet potato croquettes are very good served with chips or patties.

Discarded flatirons with iron handles, if painted with a bright-colored enamel, make excellent book racks.

My Neighbor Says:

WHEN making jams, be careful that only dry fruit is used. If it is wet there will be difficulty in keeping the jam and it will become moldy very quickly. Boil the fruit as soon as possible after gathering.

Digging Well, He Finds Richest Radium Field

Vienna.—The richest radium field in Europe has been discovered at Neuhaus, near Linz, in upper Austria, by a water diver, Herr Franz Niesl. A peasant, Franz Moler, about to dig a well, summoned Herr Niesl, who, using an old silver watch as a silver chain as a pendulum, obtained such violent reactions that he guaranteed the abundance of water would be found nine feet down. When borings were made twice this depth without any sign of water, the puzzled diver sent samples of the earth to the government research institute in Vienna. The institute announces that the earth has the highest radium content yet discovered in Europe. It is stated that 11,000 tons would yield a kilogram of pure radium. The field is buried only nine feet down, has a depth of from four to eight feet, and extends a considerable distance.

Aged Italian Arranged Plans for Own Death

Parma, Italy.—Girolamo Piarra, eighty-eight, feeling himself near death, dressed in his best, and visited the parish priest, begging him to give him the last sacraments, as he felt his end was near. Surprised at the apparently healthy man, the priest heard his confession and gave him communion. When Piarra had finished, he visited the undertaker, requesting him to take his measure for a coffin that would shortly be required, "as I am about to leave this world." Then he returned home, greeting all his friends and acquaintances whom he met on the way and telling them he was leaving them soon. The old man went to bed early. He was found dead in bed the next morning.

HOW IT STARTED TO GO TO POT

"HE'S GONE all to pot," we hear about a man who has suffered a breakdown—perhaps nervous, perhaps physical, more likely both. For "gone to pot" is synonymous with "gone to pieces," "broken down"—and we might use other terms such as disintegrated, wreckage, sotsam! While it may have appeared at first sight to be rather obscure, the metaphor is obvious when it is pointed out that the allusion is to the receptacle into which worthless and discarded odds and ends are thrown—the things that have gone to pieces. The expression is a very old one, its first recorded use being traced back as far as 1581 in Nat Woodes' "Conflict of Conscience."

The Seraphina Story

Although not far from five years old, Sweet Seraphina Stone had never before liked to stay all by her very lone. She was frightened in the city, of noises near and loud. Of each bird, kind policeman, of every nattering crowd. She was frightened in the country, of gentle cows or sheep. Of all the things that fly about and all the things that creep.

Her wiggling, woofing pup-dog was filled with wild delight. He romped and strolled, he ran and rolled, with all his might and might. Dear-Dolly-Bear and Teddies smiled many a wide, wide smile. With Ducky-Buddies cheering quite quackly the while. That night was pinned on Seraphina a silver star that shone. "A badge of courage," Mother said. "For BRAVE Seraphina Stone!"

Questions:
1. What makes the Northern Lights?
2. Why do some animals see in the dark when we can't?
3. Why is it warmer in the summer than in the winter?
4. Why is a cat's tongue prickly?
5. It is said that soft-shelled crabs and hard-shelled crabs are really the same?

Answers:
1. The Northern Lights, otherwise called the Aurora Borealis, are made by some sort of a discharge of electricity into the atmosphere. This discharge may come from the sun.
2. Because the pupils of the eyes of those animals open much more widely than the pupils of the human eyes.
3. It is warmer in summer because the sun is higher in the heavens than it is in the winter and its rays are therefore more direct; and then also because the days are longer and the earth has more chance to store up heat during the day.
4. So the cat can lick the meat off the bones by eating.
5. Yes, the hard-shell crabs shed their shells every once in a while, and when they first pull out from the old shell, the new shell is soft. In a few days the new shell is as hard as the old.

He returns here infrequently but said he would be back to celebrate his one-hundredth birthday anniversary.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

by WALTER TRUMBULL

Julian Street has "been qualifying for the Explorers club. He recently discovered New York. True, Mr. Street has been a man of Manhattan for years past, but this was another city. It was the New York of the dawn age. Because of an early operation on a member of his family, Mr. Street was obliged to reach the hospital by 6 a. m. Knowing the night before that he was to make the trip, he conferred with Mrs. Street as to transportation. "Take a taxi," she said. "Don't be silly," he responded. "What would a taxi be doing out at that hour?" "I think there will be taxis," said Mrs. Street, "but, of course, one could always charter a milk wagon."

It was Willard Fairchild who discovered the horse and sleigh. This was in the hills of Connecticut at a village which has no railroad station and plenty of snow. The horse and sleigh belonged to a farmer, who before trusting the outfit to Mr. Fairchild, asked him whether he was an experienced driver. Mr. Fairchild assured the farmer he had been around with horses a great deal, but neglected to mention that it had been with the artillery during the war, when he rode the caisson and others handled the horses. Still, all went well. Mr. Fairchild got his family into the sleigh and when the farmer handed him the reins clucked in the approved fashion, which

Phoned Her Hourly, So Law Takes Hand

New York.—When passion burns Frederick Meder, twenty-four, it burns. He just can't keep his love for Paula Reithmayer, nurse, to himself. Back in West Side court, he was charged with violating a suspended sentence given him two months ago, by phoning Paula as often as twenty times a day to demand marriage. The previous time he was arrested after tricking his way into Paula's apartment wearing a false mustache. Magistrate Irwin held him in $100 bail.

WANTED LIGHT READING

"I want a book." "Something light?" "Oh, no. I have a young man here to carry it home."

apparently threw the animal into first speed, and away they went. The horse took them for a very nice ride and brought them back safely. It was then that the difficulty developed. The farmer wasn't around, but his small boy said his father had told him to ask Mr. Fairchild just to unhitch the horse and tie him up in the stall in the barn. It seems that when you stood alongside this horse, it seemed about the size of a small elephant, which made some of the buckles and things hard to reach. But Mr. Fairchild unhitched them all, except that he kept the bridle and reins intact. When he had managed to get the horse out of the shafts and all the other straps and things off the horse, he realized he never had known how many parts there were to one horse's harness. Taking the reins into the barn, he passed them around a post at a corner of the stall. Then, by walking away with them—a good deal as you might hoist a mainsail—he pulled the horse into shelter without taking a chance of being stepped on. That was a smart idea, as when the horse reached the post, it automatically put on the brakes. This accomplished, Mr. Fairchild, who was now out in the yard, returned to the barn. Being careful to permit no slack, he wound the reins half a dozen times around the post and tied a good truck-knot. He then went out again and collected the pieces of harness and laid them on the floor under some pegs, where other harness was hanging. He had paid the farmer in advance, so he didn't wait for him to come back. But he knows the old chap will be pleased at all the care he took to leave his property in good order. A lot of city fellows might not have taken so much trouble with things.

Iron Roads for England A number of cast-iron roads are to be laid in England, following successful experiments with short sections. The advantages of such roads are said to be that they are guaranteed to wear about twice as well as stone and three times as well as wood; that the short projections on the surface of the metal prevent skidding, and that British iron can be used instead of foreign materials. The cost of building iron roads is reported to be the same as for the best wooden paving. The metal is laid not in long sheets, but by putting triangular castings on a cement base.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know. For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drugstore—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

Spring Coat Fashions Go Military Beauty Talks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION'S followers are sure going "on parade" this season, all dressed up in red, white and blue with brass buttons and epaulettes in everything that's military. It's quite exciting, this patriotic gesture of the mode. Even the very fabrics which go to make our apparel have been designed to commemorate the George Washington bicentennial celebration, in that the motifs of the newest silk prints center about the famous cherry tree incident, while stars and stripes and triangular hats and kindred items enter the scheme of things.

But that is another story which has to do with spring weaves. What we started to talk about is the latest, smartest coats which have such a military bearing they quite overawe one, being so broad shouldered and all a glitter with nickel or brass buttons and the like.

Perhaps the most outstanding reaction to this martial spirit which is pervading the style realm is the importance of blues in the color range, very keen blues some of them, for the spring coat. Most military in matter of color and all other details as well, is the coat shown to the right in this picture. It's a color combination is bright navy lined with military red, the huge shining nickel buttons contributing their share of pomp and glory.

You should see the coat pictured to the left in its original color, for it is bright red—red corduroy, if you please, for corduroy has come back and there is no mistake about it. This model is for a young girl. In a more conservative color, say the new beige, it would be wearable for any age. Designers are using corduroy for most everything, for the swagger little bell-hop jackets for pajama costumes, for sports dresses and suits with lots of white corduroy in prospect for summer wear. As to the coat mentioned, the diagonal lines of brass buttons dramatize its broad shoulders, while its trim, narrow waistline emphasizes the military mode that is scheduled to lead in the Easter style program. Note, too, its collarless neckline which is a style feature worthy of comment, since many coats are sans collars so as to make way for these "nifty" separate fur neckpieces which fashion has planned for us.

A new treatment inspired by the general trend manifests itself in the use of considerable military braid; applied in rows, or perhaps for epaulet shoulder effects as well as many other attractive expressions. So, if you like braided trimmings, the hour has come to indulge your fancy. Suits as well as coats show this ornamentation.

It is very evident that the military spirit has pervaded every realm of fashion, from knitted wear to furs. The former adopts, for instance, the tricolor schemes which are so exceedingly popular, with double-breasted treatments employing flashing metal buttons. Then there's the new scarfs flaunting their reds, whites and blues via all sorts of whimsical stripes, stars and other design.

The little short spring jackets developed of gray kidskin accented with nickel buttons are a possession to be coveted, seeing that they blend with current fashions of military aspect. And have you seen the detachable military capes which are of fur or of cloth and which boast of buttons in rows according to the latest dictate of fashion.

Dresses are military minded also in that many of them are fashioned of blue sheer woolsen with trimmings of red and white print silk.

DOUBLE DUTY ROCK FINDS WIDE FAVOR

The time seems to be over, for the present at any rate, when we had a different costume for each occasion. Now, our frocks have to do double duty and be just as good looking at tea as at a smart restaurant or night club.

For this reason we now dress in layers, slipping on over a décolleté gown a bloused effect, jacket or bolero to make it perfectly presentable when the bright lights are not yet gilding the blue of night. This is an extremely practical and workable fashion and no matter how much the great houses may charge for such a model, the purchaser feels virtuously happy that she is effecting an important economy by buying a two-in-one frock.

Ensembles of Shoes and Bag Add Chic to Suit

It seems to be that although the shoes and the handbag are of necessity so far apart from each other, they are really soul-mates. But at last this fact is receiving proper recognition, for nearly every smart shop here now shows ensembles of shoe and bag and rare it is nowadays to find a shop without several examples of this smart combination.

For smart it is, guaranteed to dress the simplest spring coat or suit and give it new charm and chic. More and more, we are co-relating our accessories and doing away with slipshod methods of selecting things that are totally unrelated and have no reason for being worn together.

Lacquered Hair New for Evening Coiffures

Lacquered hair is a new note for coiffures for feminine heads. The hair is treated with a lacquer which does not change its color, but which makes each hair almost twice its normal size. It is then arranged in ringlets and swirls and allowed to dry. The lacquer, which is used only in the evening, may be easily washed off next morning.

CHIC LACY MESH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

No, this very pretty and very chic afternoon dress is not lace. It's a young and extremely popular first cousin to lace. The technical name is durable cotton lacy mesh. This knit weaves of softly lustrous durable is of diagonal construction. The designer of the frock has furthered the diagonal feeling through clever handling of the stripes. A dull suede belt contrasts the subtle luster of the material. The scarf is tied to give a cowl neckline which to slender faces is amazingly becoming.

The New Cottons

In material, cotton has been raised from humble rank to high favor. Printed cottons are shown for dresses, blouses and coat linings. Cotton day dresses are found in open weaves. Pique, wool and some boucles are seen in daytime costumes.

Conflicting Beauty Theories

AT LEAST once in every day of a beauty editor's life comes the cry: "What's a body to do—So and so says do and so and so says don't—and how can one avoid being bewildered by so many conflicting beauty theories?"

The answer invariably is: Study yourself, your own needs, accept the theory that appeals to your best judgment as being good, sound, sense. Give that theory a chance, be persistent, have faith and your efforts should bring results. Beauty experiments should be thorough, not haphazard, fly-by-night affairs.

No one hears more conflicting beauty theories than beauty students themselves. In quest of the reason for being of feminine loveliness, one finds that successful exponent number one observes every fundamental beauty rule on which most beauty experts agree. Her daily ritual consists of exercise, a faithful eye to balance in her diet, sufficient fresh air and restful sleep, a daily facial with all the preparations of the same brand, careful hair brushing and similar beauty details.

But exponent number two, equally as young, looking and equally as beautiful, points with pride to the fact that she observes nary a beauty rule. No air. Not she. But—she is a beauty student bewildered. Just as emphatically—no air. For they know that there must be a catch some place.

It may be that the beauty under discussion is just naturally healthier and lovelier than the average.

Then there's the owner of a beautiful figure who never exercises. But every day she walks two miles, and every evening she swims in the pool in her apartment hotel. As though these aren't the two best all-around exercises. Furthermore, she keeps her muscles under splendid control by perfect posture.

A screen star I know, says: "Diet—bah—I eat anything I like," but evidently from what I've seen of the luncheon she had with her, she has no desire for rich, fatty foods.

The moral of these stories, far don't be bewildered and don't attempt to imitate. If your favorite actress thrives on a mixture of cosmetics, that is no indication that your skill will stand the same kind of treatment.

Or, if your latest crush seems alive and alert a night three hours of sleep, that is no clue for you to start staying up nights. Know yourself, know your system, your resources. Just what you can stand and what you can't, and work only for what will be becoming to you.

Importance of Health

WOMEN are tired of Pollyanna talks and skeptical of the sermons "beauty is as beauty does" and "to be beautiful you must be in love." Vibrant beauty depends on many things for support. The very first in the line of important contributors is physical health. For without health, beauty can at best be only temporary—it may last for a fleeting moment or for a month, but it cannot live long.

You cannot be beautiful if you are not healthy. Have you ever seen a man or woman suffering from ill health who did not wear the "give aways"—dull eyes and a heavy skin? Sooner or later "the skin will show." For the signs of ill health are not confined to inner aches and pains.

You cannot be beautiful if you are fatigued, for "that tired feeling" does damage in many ways. Allow it to become chronic and it is sure to dim the sparkle in your eyes, rob your step of its spryness. Fatigue can claim more credit for "premature age" than all the calendars and chronologes records man ever invented to mark time. As you value a smooth, young skin and sparkling eye, avoid fatigue. Two of fatigue's busiest assistants are overwork and nervous strain and tension. So steer clear of these, too.

Boredom is another arch-enemy of beauty. Be it but the mood of a moment—it is had enough. But perpetual boredom is dynamite to bubbling, interesting beauty. When life goes base, when there's no joy in living, no thrill of anticipation or hope, nothing to anything, then the luminous, vivid quality of the skin is suddenly shut out and all bodily beauty goes "smash."

Akin to boredom is a general, disinterested attitude or a gloomy aspect. People who have hobbies to concentrate on, usually find the fates quite kind to their beauty. I think that is why they say people in love are lovely.

The actual cultivation of external beauty—silky skin and glossy hair—is simple—particularly in this day and age when science is contributing so lavishly. But that inner peace and contentment, the beauty within that seems to shine right through the outer covering is often difficult to hold on to. But with courage—with interest and enthusiasm—with hope—beautiful and optimistic thoughts—in a word a healthy mind and a healthy body one has a high bid for "that lovely look."

WHAT TO DO WHEN RULES DON'T FIT

Being Able to Guess Right Is Great Gift.

"I have none of that feeling of scorn for red tape that so many people enjoy," said Mr. Cato Ninetalls. "It may be overdone; but properly applied it is an unsurpassed method of regulation and discipline, and it is always to be remembered that in an emergency it can be cut. Rules are for routine, and as most progress—barring the eccentricities of genius—is the result of routine, they are the salvation of routine, and thus are the salvation life. They tell what to do, and how and when to do it; they save time, trouble and expense; they enable the unoriginal and even the incompetent to do a large part of the world's chores, and do them very well. In fact, without rules—that is to say, without red tape—I suspect that most of us would be rather puzzled about how to carry on."

All this, to be sure, is assuming that things are running in their regular groove where most things run most of the time. There are exceptions, infrequent, of course, and sometimes extremely disconcerting, when rules won't apply, and something else has to be substituted. Then good judgment is demanded, which is even rarer than exceptions to the rules. It is the business of inferiors to obey the rules; it is the business of superiors to break the rules, and they must do so at their own risk; taking all the responsibility for their action. If they guess right it is a soul-satisfying triumph; if they guess wrong it is an extremely unpleasant experience.

A knowledge of how and when to break the rules—that is, to guess right—is one of the greatest gifts that nature has bestowed on him who has to deal daily with the practical world, which does not readily forgive mistakes. It is, or should be, the attribute of all those in authority from kings to foremen, and they are good kings or good foremen to the degree that they possess it. With some of them—who are generally regarded as lucky rather than wise—it is little more than genius; with others it is a desperate and nerve-racking struggle, which generally indicates that they have undertaken somewhat more than they are equal to. They deserve the world's sympathy, but more often hear its complaints.

"I suppose," I said to Buck, "that even you doctors have rules that you generally follow, but sometimes find it wise to break."

"We do, indeed," he replied. "As for instance?"

"The most important is never to tell the patient a lie, but to be mighty discreet about telling him the truth."—Indianapolis News.

Find Stone Tools That Were Used by Indians

How the Indians of the Mimbres valley lived and farmed 2,000 or 3,000 years ago is shown by discoveries made in a great 125-room pueblo or prehistoric apartment house by Paul H. Nashitt, leader of the Logan Museum-Southwest expedition, sponsored by Beloit college, Beloit, Wis. The ruins of the cultural area being explored by Mr. Nashitt and his students date, according to the archeologists, between 1000 B. C. and 200 B. C.

In a statement to Science Service, Mr. Nashitt said: "One cache of twenty-five stone hoes was found on a stone ledge a few inches above the floor of a room and another lot of forty-eight stone hoes was found in association with a male skeleton. Such hoes are rare and the number above represents a greater total than has ever been found in any single ruin in the Southwest."

"With another burial was found a copper bell, a product not manufactured here, but brought by trade from Old Mexico. Only one other such bell has been found in this area. W. Bradford, state archeologist of Santa Fe, in 1924 found one at Cameron creek ruin, near Durley, N. M. The bell is of great importance, as it throws additional light on the age of these ruins.

"The early inhabitants lived in pit rooms (entirely subterranean); later the houses became semisubterranean."

"FATIGUE?"

I just postpone it!

"No, I don't have 'nerves.' You can't have them, and hold this sort of position. My head used to throb around three o'clock, and certain days, of course, were worse than others."

"Then I learned to rely on Bayer Aspirin." The sure cure for any headache is rest. But sometimes we must postpone it. That's when Bayer Aspirin saves the day. Two tablets, and the nagging pain is gone until you are home. And once you are comfortable, the pain seldom returns!

Keep Bayer Aspirin handy. Don't put it away, or put off taking it. Fighting a headache to finish the day may be heroic, but it is also a little foolish. So is sacrificing a night's sleep because you've an annoying cold, or irritated throat, or grumbling tooth, neuralgia, neuritis. These tablets always relieve. They don't depress the heart, and may be taken freely. That is medical opinion. It is a fact established by the last twenty years of medical practice.

The only caution to be observed is when you are buying aspirin. Bayer is genuine. Tablets with the Bayer cross are safe.

Designs in Light

The photographic portrait artist requires a background for his pictures and recently the idea of making a background by the use of electric lights has become popular. The rays from a lamp are projected onto the plain background through a loosely arranged piece of foliage and the effects are often very beautiful. Decorators have taken up this idea and shades are being arranged over electric lights which throw a pretty design upon the wall or ceiling in light and shade.

A girl's face may be her misfortune—and still be a beautiful one.

Food for thought

Men and women find that those recurrent spring colds reduce their alertness of mind and body. To avoid such ailments, doctors advise them to increase their bodies' store of Vitamin A. It is recognized that Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil contains a wealth of this valuable protective vitamin... as well as Vitamin D, so indispensable for sound bones and teeth. Children and adults find the emulsion an easy, pleasant way of taking cod liver oil. Scott & Downe, Bloomfield, N. J. Sales Representative, Harold P. Ritchie & Co., Inc., New York.
