CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1932

NUMBER 20

W. F. Whittingham

Friends here were grieved to learn of the death of W. F. Whittingham, which occurred suddenly at the family home in El Paso on the evening of July 4th. The Whittinghams resided in Carrizozo for a number of years, and Mr. Whittingham was a trusted employe of the railroad company. They moved to El Paso about ten years ago and have since made that place their home.

Mr. Whittingham was about 50 years of age. He was born and reared in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; married there and came west when quite a young man. He was a devoted husband and father, was of a friendly disposition and popular with all classes of people.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Angela Whittingham; two daughters, Misses Angela and Faith; one son, Will, Jr., and a sister, Mrs. Richmond of Philadelphia.

Funeral services were conducted at the Kanter and Maxon funeral parlors in El Paso yesterday morning at 9:30, followed by interment in the El Paso cemetery. The News joins other friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved family.

The Fort Stanton Rodeo July 4th

All roads seemed to lead to Fort Stanton last Monday, and all who arrived seemed to spend a "glorious Fourth." For a wonder it didn't even rain and every minute could be enjoyed.

First were the foot races. Girls foot races, boys under 21, and the cowboys wearing a 11 their accoutrements, and every contestant made a good showing.

Then came the barbecue which was just about right. Every fellow got in line with his plate and was served bounteously by the good-natured boys. Evidently a great amount of time and labor had been expended to make this part of the day a genuine success, and they succeeded admirably.

Immediately after dinner the rodeo opened. We counted 260 cars parked all the way around the rodeo grounds and high up the hillsides. Estimating four occupants to the car, (some had more, some less) we judged well over a thousand people were there to witness this part of the entertainment. The spirit of the rodeo gripped the spectators as horses and riders took their places in the ring for the various events—a spirit of life and fun—as they waited to witness a half day of the old west filled with the thrills always offered at a Fort Stanton rodeo. The skill and daring displayed by some of the riders made quite a hit with the crowd. One very attractive young girl was in the ring riding her cow pony and wearing her cow girl rig.

Steer riding and wild cow milking furnished some laughs. One young fellow rode his steer sitting backwards. In the milking contest, one young fellow got ready to milk his wild cow, but she had other ideas and ran off at a high rate of speed. Some one in the crowd yelled, "grab something and hang on." So he grabbed her by the tail and hung on.

Following these events the crowd dispersed. Part of them went to the ball park to see the ball game between Fort Stanton and Carrizozo. Fort Stanton won with a score of 6 to 7, but it was an uphill fight. Outside of being disappointed that Carrizozo didn't win there wasn't a fan present who didn't enjoy himself.

An appreciative crowd remained for the fireworks display given by the Trowel club then left for the various dances to spend the remainder of the Fourth.

A list of the winning contestants will be published next week.

Democrats Pleased with Convention's Choice

The National Democratic convention nominated Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt for president last Saturday on the fourth ballot. They nominated by acclamation speaker of the house, John Garner of Texas, for the vice-presidency. Governor Roosevelt asked the convention not to adjourn until he could reach Chicago by air plane to formally accept the nomination which in former times has been held after the convention. The convention adjourned and went to the flying field to welcome Governor Roosevelt when his plane arrived.

He arrived at the Chicago municipal airport after 4 Saturday afternoon and was greeted by a throng of 25,000. He was accorded a tremendous ovation, and received it smilingly. His party was comprised of himself, his wife and thirteen others. He has many qualifications and a vast amount of experience in governmental affairs which fit him for the high office to which he aspires. He has been assistant secretary of the navy and is governor of New York. Farley was elected chairman of the national committee and will be the director of the campaign. He was also Roosevelt's pre-convention manager.

John Garner, the vice-presidential nominee is a product of the Texas cattle country and a descendant of Texas pioneers. He is at present speaker of the house and has been in congress for 20 years.

The New Mexico delegation cast their six votes for Roosevelt throughout. W. J. Barker of Santa Fe, state chairman and head of the delegation in Chicago said the accomplishments at the convention had laid a good foundation for the party in the state in the coming campaign. Governor Seligman was there also and was well satisfied with the outcome.

All the Roosevelt supporters are enthusiastic and even of his rivals for the nomination have agreed to support him. Governor Ritchie voted personally for Roosevelt. Gov. Roosevelt arrived at his home in New York July 4th. The party leaders are to meet with him in Albany this week to work out plans for the launching of the campaign.

Nogal Notes

Ira Robinson is back from his ranch near Ocurra. He says they have had good rains and everything looks fine.

A good rain fell in Nogal last week. Everything looks promising now.

Carl McDaniel from Las Vegas is in Nogal on business, accompanied by his cousin Hershel McDaniel.

Elmer Latham was up from Carrizozo Monday and spent the 4th with relatives.

Jessie May is now moving into his new home.

Mr. and Mrs. Marlon Hunt and son came up Sunday from their ranch near Ocurra. They brought their brother and sister-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peacock.

Ethel May, who has been ill for the past week, was able to spend the 4th at Fort Stanton.

Rev. L. D. Jordan spent Saturday and Sunday in Corona, returning home Monday.

From Prof. Helm

The News is in receipt of a most interesting letter from Professor Helm, who has gone back to Los Angeles for the Olympic games. We quote part of his letter:

"As you know, the Olympic games take place the last week in July and the first week in August. I am located about five blocks from the colosseum where most of the events will take place and am within three blocks of the University of Southern California, hence there will be much to interest me for the next five weeks. After the games I may be about ready to sail for Hawaii, (or perhaps New Mexico.) It will depend somewhat on the depression and the prospects for business as to what I do. Give my regards to my Carrizozo friends and see that I am properly registered so I can vote for Roosevelt and Garner."

Comstock-Everett

E. D. Everett and Miss Odah Comstock of Roswell were united in marriage at the Baptist parsonage last Saturday. Rev. L. D. Jordan officiated. They left at once for their home in Roswell.

Corona Notes

Seventeen members of the Carrizozo Business and Professional Mens Club were in Corona last Wednesday on a good will tour and were highly welcomed by the Corona business people. Many good talks aided in uniting a closer fellowship bond. The Ladies of the Community served lunch in the domestic science dining hall at the school and donations were turned over to the Ladies Auxiliary of the Corona Post to be used for the Dental Clinic. The spirit of the business men was indeed inspiring and their donations were highly appreciated. Corona feels honored and complimented over this new fellowship which has arisen between Carrizozo and Corona and Corona business men are anticipating a visit to Carrizozo.

Miss Addie Perkins has been visiting her sister in Hot Springs for some time.

Warren DuBois is suffering with a sprained ankle.

Miss Kemper of Oklahoma is visiting her father, Jack Kemper and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Hilbourne and baby are in Carrizozo where the baby is receiving medical treatment for Spinal Meningitis. Friends are extending their sympathy and hopes for a speedy recovery.

Rev. L. D. Jordan, of Carrizozo, held the Sunday evening service in Corona.

Corona was represented in many localities July 4th. Many folks attended the ball games at Santa Rosa where Corona won both games.

Rev. E. L. Mayfield of Albuquerque, who has been holding a revival here during the past week left Sunday afternoon to begin a revival in Vaughn. His services were appreciated there.

The dance at Gallinas School House was well attended July Fourth.

Mr. E. Boehms received first degree burns when he lighted a cigarette while putting gas in his truck Tuesday morning. Due to level headedness and presence of mind those around him extinguished the fire before seriously burned Mr. Boehms. It is hoped he will be able to be about soon.

Young Democrats Gain

Washington.—George Taylor Ross, son of Governor Nellie Taylor Ross, who is Regional Chairman of the Sixth, or Rocky Mountain District (which includes the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota and South Dakota), of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, and is temporarily in Washington, says:

"The activities of the Young Democratic Clubs of America in the West are becoming effective. Already in Oregon, over half the counties have had local clubs organized with large memberships; in Washington state the clubs have gained amazing strength. Procedure for the organization of clubs in Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota and Wyoming has already been arranged. Information from many county chairmen in all of these states indicates that a new type of political enthusiasm has been brought under the banner of the Democratic party, that heretofore, I think has never been brought into direct contact with large political movements."

Angus-Alto Picnic and Rally

The Alto and Angus organization of Young Democrats were hosts to the Young Democrats of the county and their friends, July 4th, at Angus. This proved to be a most successful and enthusiastic rally. A big crowd attended and heard the splendid speech delivered by M. A. Threet of Las Cruces. Mr. Threet considers the outlook for Democracy better than it has been for years. Perry Sears of Capitan delivered a speech thanking the Young Democrats for their hospitality, and all others for any contribution they made towards the success of the day.

The Community Party which the Auxiliary of Corona Post gave in the Gym Saturday night was a howling success in spite of unfavorable weather. Cooperation was imminent among all who enjoyed Rook, Checkers, Dominoes, Cow-puncher Pitch, Bridge and Polly Anna.

During the evening fortunes were told in a cleverly designed gypsy teepee up on the stage and dancing was indulged in the latter part of the evening. Refreshments of cake, cocoa and coffee were served after which the quilt number was drawn, the winner being E. L. Connelly. The proceeds of the evening were $41.35 and will go for Child Welfare.

Mrs. Lola Jones and Mrs. Reba Williams left Wednesday for Mrs. Jones' home up near Ruidoso where they will spend the next two weeks.

The Womanless Wedding sponsored by the Auxiliary was announced for Saturday night July 16. The men hope to bring down the house in this spectacular comedy.

Thanks

We, the members of the Auxiliary wish to extend our sincere thanks to each and every individual who donated to the luncheon last Wednesday, June 29, which was sponsored by the Auxiliary. We also thank those who gave donations for Saturday night. Your cooperation is possible the largest contribution ever obtainable to Community Health.

Little Breeding of Farm Work Animals

Scarcity Is Looked For in the Near Future.

(By DAVID S. WEAVER, Agricultural Engineer, North Carolina State College.)

There is no surplus of farm work stock and the scarcity of mules and horses will increase as the main breeding centers continue to use tractors for power. Horses and mules suitable for farm power are dying off from old age more rapidly than they are being produced. In the western states, which formerly produced a large part of the horse and mule supply, farmers have gone into tractor farming. This has resulted in a displacement of breeding mares. No other section seems to be interested in producing the animals of the size the southern farmer needs and it looks as if he will have to get into this work for his own protection.

As long as we have small farms, cut up by ditches and other obstructions, we shall continue to need animal power for farming. This means that a market will be available for mules and horses for a long period. From figures obtained from the Horse Association of America, it was found there were eight million horses and mules under four years of age in the United States in 1920. By 1930, this number had decreased to about two and one-half million.

Over half of the mules and horses living on January 1 were over ten years old, which will explain the present high death rate of these animals. These figures show a half million yearly decrease in horse and mule population and means that more and more farms will begin to depend on some other kind of power unless the animals are produced at home.

Dakota Farmer Records Profit in Lamb-Raising

G. L. Seaman of Brown county placed a gain of 12,710 pounds on 500 lambs, or an average gain per lamb of 25 1/2 pounds, in his operations last season. The lambs were received September 12 and marketed in four installments, beginning December 4 and extending to February 10.

The feed requirements per pound gain was 4.0 pounds of grain and 3.8 pounds of roughage. The grain used consisted of 63 per cent barley, 27 per cent corn, and 10 per cent wheat. The barley and wheat was fed early in the feeding period, adding the cracked corn toward the finish. The barley and wheat was fed unground. The roughage consisted of 74 per cent alfalfa hay, the balance consisting of upland hay, corn fodder and chopped sweet clover.

The death loss of 2.2 per cent was attributed to accidents, urinary, calculi and pneumonia. The lambs had access to artesian water and loose salt at all times, and were housed in a straw shed. The lambs were started on a feed of barley and alfalfa.—Dakota Farmer.

Destroying Quack Grass

Controlling or destroying quack grass is largely a matter of using the spring-tooth harrow promptly and often. Start right after small grain harvest, by working the ground thoroughly, dragging out the roots and raking and burning them. The following spring, if the land is frequently worked with a spring-tooth harrow, corn can be planted, and, by clean cultivation, the quack grass can be practically destroyed.

For small patches, an application of dry sodium chlorate at the rate of about two pounds per square rod, in the fall, usually will give a good kill.—Wallace Farmer.

Around the Farm

Frequent cultivation aids in preventing the growth of weeds, conserves soil moisture, and allows air to penetrate to the roots.

Wood fence posts and ground timbers in buildings will last 15 to 20 years longer if crocoted before using. The cost of crocote for butt-treating an ordinary post is about 5 cents.

A broad-sweep weeder cultivates six to eight rows of potatoes at one time, stirs the soil about an inch deep, and removes weed seedlings in the row. It is the cheapest way to cultivate potatoes.

Farmers who make a practice of seeding alfalfa or sweet clover in the corn at "laying-by" time, recommend that cultivations be shallow so that the seed-bed will be left fairly firm for the alfalfa seedlings.

When rye winter kills on the farm of Eastgate brothers, Grand Forks county, North Dakota, barley is drilled into it in the spring. Where the rye is too thin for a stand the barley comes on to a good crop.

More than one-third of the students in the South Dakota College of Agriculture are former 4-H club members.

Blinder twine should never be used for tying fleeces. The coarse twine fibers get mixed with the wool. A paper twine is made especially for tying wool.

Work horses should be turned out to pasture at night, especially mares raising colts while working, advises W. H. Peters, animal husbandry chief, Minnesota University farms.

SAFEGUARDS FOR MILKING UTENSILS

Home-Made Solutions That Do Work Well.

Chemical solutions for sterilizing milking machine teat cups and tubes may be made satisfactorily at home and much cheaper than they can be bought, says Special Bulletin No. 138, issued by the agricultural extension division at Minnesota University farm.

This bulletin, entitled "Care of the Milking Machine," gives directions for making and using about a half dozen of these solutions and also discusses other important points on the care of milking machines. One of the common solutions used is calcium hydrochloride made by mixing 12 ounces of fresh chloride of lime with a gallon of fresh cold water. This should be done in a 2-gallon covered crock, by first adding just enough water to the chloride of lime to make a paste. This should be stirred well and the rest of the water added. The mixture should be allowed to stand overnight in a cool place. A clear greenish-colored liquid, which will appear above the precipitated lime, is the part to be used. This liquid should be poured off carefully, siphoned off, or filtered through a fine muslin or strainer cloth. For use, one quart should be mixed with 20 gallons of water. This home-made solution, says the bulletin, is just as effective as the commercial hypochlorite solutions and chloramine powders and costs very much less.

Pinto Beans Substitute for Cottonseed Meal

By feeding locally grown pinto beans in place of cottonseed meal in his grain ration for dairy cows, M. C. James, Parker (Colo.) dairyman, obtained good results.

Only 6 to 7 per cent of the ration consisted of split beans when he first started feeding them. He gradually increased the amount of beans as the cows became accustomed to them, to 20 per cent by weight, according to a report by A. H. Tedmon, Arapahoe county extension agent, to the Colorado Agricultural college.

The other 80 per cent of the ration was made up of a mixture of equal parts of corn, oats and wheat. "The cows like the beans as soon as they are used to them," says Tedmon. "Beans will thus replace cottonseed meal and help cheapen the ration, especially when you have the beans and have to buy the meal."

Costly to Feed Lice

With present prices for milk, no man can afford to feed lice which may be infesting his dairy cows. In fact, it is not necessary to put up with them because attention given at the right time in the right way will control them.

There are three kinds of lice commonly found on cattle. One type is known as blue lice which get their food by sucking blood. Then there is a smaller family of red lice which feed on skin and secretions from the skin and cause severe irritation. Another type, sometimes spoken of as gray lice, also sucks blood.

There are a number of treatments which can be given for lice. One is to spray thoroughly every ten days with a non-irritating animal spray prepared for this purpose. It is recommended that bedding, stalls, and adjacent walls also be sprayed to kill any lice that may have left the cattle and that, if the weather is cold, animals be left in the stable until they are dry.—American Agriculturist.

DAIRY NOTES

A grating on the floor of the milk cooler is of no aid in cooling the milk.

A cow producing 8,000 pounds of milk a year manufactures nearly 1,100 pounds of dry matter in her milk.

In New York state's first co-operative bull association, 17 dairymen have the use of one of three bulls, each animal worth $320, for an investment of $50.

In a Pennsylvania test where a large number of dairy herds were used, it was found that a cow receiving silage would produce 150 gallons of milk more than when not receiving silage.

In a preliminary study of the effect of culling in 20-cow herds, it was found that on an average, the best cow in the herd produced more milk and butterfat than the two poorest cows.

Special pastures are needed to furnish food for the droughty period. Modern cow men are providing them.

The cow's udder must be free from mud or other filth, the milker's hands must be clean, the bucket must be so clean that a drink of water tastes good out of it.

Three practices necessary to keep cream sweet in warm weather until it is delivered to the creamery are: Washing utensils carefully, cooling the cream and frequent delivery.

Cost Her $4.25 To Reduce 65 Pounds

"Worth It," Miss Bates Says. If you're young and fat read what Miss Bates of Beech, Iowa, has to say about Kruschen Salts. If you are middle aged or old Kruschen shows you the way to lose fat the SAFE way.

"I took one bottle of Kruschen Salts a month for five months. It amounted to $4.25 and I reduced 65 lbs. but it was worth it. Imagine just 22 years old and weighing what I did. I could not enjoy myself as other girls did. I could not get the clothes I wanted. I think it is wonderful the results Kruschen Salts give."

To lose fat the safe, sane way—take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—eat less fatty meats, potatoes and sweets—a jar that costs but a small sum lasts 4 weeks. Get it at any drugstore in the world—but be sure for your health's sake to ask for and get Kruschen Salts. It's the little daily dose that does it.

FROM THE BEGINNING

At his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, with his headman, Omar, rescues Aurora LeBlond, daughter of Stuart's rival in the fur business, from an overturned canoe in the lake. In a spirit of fun, she and Jim arrange to exchange notes on a certain island. LeBlond, with Paradis, his half-breed lieutenant, arrives in search of the missing girl. Paradis displays animosity toward Jim. Going to the island to see if Aurora has left the promised note, Jim is ambushed by Paradis and forced to travel toward the LeBlond post. On the way he overthrows the boat, leaving his enemy on the beach. Jim's superior, Andrew Christie, displeased at Stuart's trade showing, allows him, at his request, one year to "make good." Paradis bribes an Indian to ambush Jim and Omar. The attempt fails, and Jim takes the Indian to LeBlond. After hearing the story, LeBlond discharges Paradis. Jim and Aurora acknowledge their mutual love, though Aurora is returning to Winnipeg, and Jim has planned a canoe trip to make a personal appeal to the Indians, who have persistently refused to trade their furs with him. He finds that Paradis has enlisted their superstition to discourage them from trading with Stuart.

"They'll take her away from Jim, down there in the city, Smoke. They won't let him have her, but Smoke'll always love old Jim, won't he?"

So the man and the great dog he had once carried inside his fur parka as a puppy, sat side by side, in perfect understanding, while the flush of the sky slowly faded through the long northern twilight in the mirror of the lake. Then, as Jim held a lighted match to his pipe, in the indigo gloom of the spruce of the mainland across the straight, there was the flash and roar of a rifle, followed swiftly by another.

A bullet wrenched the shattered pipe from Stuart's teeth. Then he dove headlong for the bushes, as Omar and Esau took cover on the opposite side of the dead fir.

"You heet?" called Omar.

"No!" growled Jim, hunching toward his gun which stood propped against a bush. "If they want war—give it to 'em!"

Again the twilight silence was split by the guns on the mainland, and bullets splattered around the camp, while the excited Smoke yelped as he raced back and forth, still untouched.

"They'll ruin the canoe if we don't stop 'em!" stormed the maddened fur trader, as he drew himself within reach of his gun. "Here, Smoke, they'll get you! Here! Down!"

Then the rifles of Omar and Esau opened on the ambush two hundred yards across the strait. Shortly the repeating guns of the three men, firing at the flashes, made the opposite shore too-hot for the single shot rifles in the ambush. The shooting stopped.

"Well, the war on the Pipestone is on, Omar!" called Jim. "I think they're making their getaway—afraid we'll cross in the canoe in the dusk and hunt 'em."

Knowing that rifle sights were now invisible in the murk of the opposite shore, Jim stood up, to find Omar calmly examining the canoe.

"Now who do you suppose pulled that trick, Esau?"

"Dose young men follow us from de camp."

"I suppose they're some of Paradis's people—only they don't know that they'll never see him again."

Omar approached Jim and thrust a face into his, the fierceness of which even the katting dusk did not soften. "Dey follow us and shoot to keel. Do I use dees now, wen I feel de neck of dat Parades?" The half-breed pointed to the long-slipping knife slung from the sash at his waist.

"Yes, I guess you're justified in using anything, now. They're after us and they'll get us too, in this country, if we're not careful. Came pretty close with that first shot. Got my pipe right under my hand. I didn't know an Indian could shoot so straight."

"Dese peopl' goin' follow us," said Esau. "Wen de moon go down, we drop down de rivere an' wait for dem een de mornin'."

"Ah-hah!" agreed Omar. "We mak' a little ambush for dem."

As the night thickened before the moon died at midnight, the peterboro from Sunset House silently left the island, and dropped down through the shadows to the outlet and into the river. A few miles downstream they turned in and made camp.

Jim wrapped himself in his blanket with Smoke beside him, to wrestle with a difficult problem. Clearly the Indians who had followed them down the lake would stop at nothing to drive them out of the country. With these paid-henchmen of Paradis on his heels, he could not go on. But to allow Omar and Esau to shoot them out of their canoe in the morning, much as they deserved it, would be bad generalship. They had kinsmen among the Pipestone Ojibwas who would take up the feud, thus started, and Jim's mission was one of conciliation. Yet he had to defend himself, and Omar and Esau would be hard to handle.

The sun was high in the sky on the following morning before the three who waited in the river willows saw a canoe turn the bend above them. Clearly the two paddlers were confident that the peterboro was somewhere far ahead of them downstream, for the men in the willows plainly heard their voices.

There was the muffled click of steel on steel as three rifles were cocked. Then the willows were silent. Presently, as the birch bark canoe drifted abreast of the ambush, there was a roar, as the guns spat from the shore. The paddle of the bowman fell, splintered from his hands. With a cry of terror the sternman swung the nose of the craft toward the opposite bank, as the rifles again exploded.

In his fear the Indian in the bow of the canoe plunged headlong into the river and made for the shore, while his mate flattened on the floor of the canoe. Then from the willows, two men paddled rapidly across the stream to the drifting canoe, while the third covered the craft with his rifle. Running the peterboro alongside, Omar stepped into the birch bark and, lifting the gray-faced young Ojibwa in his great arms, with a curse threw him into the water.

"We not shoot jifag, de skunk, an' we not shoot at you, dis tam!" roared the infuriated half-breed, deprived of his vengeance by the commands of Stuart. "Dut de next tam, I weel split your 'troat lak' I stab de caribon."

As the frightened Ojibwa swam for the shore, Omar returned to the peterboro and finished the work of the rifle shots in destroying the canoe, by opening great seams with his knife. Then he tossed overboard the bag of provisions, with the rifles of the Indians, and abandoned the water-logged craft.

"Now travel home in your moccasins," called the half-breed in Ojibwa to the Indian as he reached the shore, "and tell them how wa gave you a swim and let you go!"

Wondering what further evidence of Jingwak's hostility awaited them, but forced by the necessity of breaking the conjurer's influence in the Pipestone country if Sunset House were to survive, Jim continued down the river.

CHAPTER VI

Through the Pipestone chain of lakes traveled the canoe from the south, visiting the fishing camps, and denouncing Jingwak as a false shaman, an imposter, the paid agent of Paradis and LeBlond. Often the appeals of Jim and Omar were met with sneers and shouts of dissent. More than once, superstitious Indians refused to talk to them, and frightened women herded their offspring into the tips at the coming of the white trader with the Evil Eye, but to Jim's satisfaction, most of the older Indians listened, while many were friendly. And notwithstanding sullen and black faces among the younger men, the progress of the peterboro through the Pipestone country had not been again molested. But one night an old Ojibwa came to their camp on the Lake of the Great Stones, which emptied into the Sturgeon.

"You are going down into the Sturgeon river country?" he asked, accepting the tobacco and dish of tea Jim offered him.

"Yes," replied Jim in Ojibwa, "this false shaman, Jingwak, has turned the hunters against us for the pay of Paradis. We are going to find him and make him eat his lies."

For a long interval the old man smoked, his slit-like eyes on the fire. Then he said: "Do not go. He is waiting for you."

Jim glanced at the interested faces of Omar and Esau. Was this man friendly or a spy? He wondered. "I am glad," he said, "I feared he would run away."

The old Indian lifted questioning eyes to the bronzed face of the white man. For a space he seemed to measure the metal of the speaker whose cold gaze met his scrutiny. Then he quietly said, as he again looked into the fire: "You will never come back."

Jim studied the wrinkled mask of the old Ojibwa, framed in its long grizzled locks. Had he come to warn them as a friend, or was he seeking to learn their plans, only to send the information ahead of them?

"You have lived through many snows," he said. "Wisdom has come to you through the years. You know that Jingwak is a liar or you would not sit here and look me in the eye. This Paradis has filled his tipi with flour and tea and tobacco. Why? Because Jingwak keeps the hunters from trading with the old company. But this is finished. LeBlond has sent Paradis far south to the Nipigon."

The old Indian looked up with puzzled eyes. "You say Paradis has gone south?"

"Yes."

The seamed visage of the Indian stiffened in thought as his narrowed eyes sought his moccasins. Then he said: "He has put a spell upon the young men on the Sturgeon river—this Jingwak. If you go there—they will kill you."

At the words, Omar Bolsvert rose to his feet, shaking with rage. Thrusting his clenched fists at the Ojibwa, he opened and closed his fingers. "With these hands," he stormed, "I will choke the breath from the lying throat of this wabeno. Go back and send your young men to tell him we are coming. Tell him that Omar Bolsvert who broke the neck of Big Pierre, at Fort Severn, with his fist, is coming to drive him out of the Sturgeon river country. Tell him if he stays, Omar Bolsvert, who sets bear-traps with his hands, will tear his tongue from his throat."

Inflamed with passion, Omar stood over the squatting figure of the old Indian, who gazed up at him with a look of mingled surprise and regret.

"You think me the friend of Jingwak and this Paradis," he said calmly. "You are wrong. I come here because I am their enemy. Jingwak took my daughter from me."

In silence the Indian rose, shook hands, and went to his birchbark. As he pushed out from the shore, he said to Jim, who followed him with the customary, "bo-jo-a." "Your canoe will never pass this way again."

"Well, what d'you make of him?" asked Jim of the silent figures of his friends. "Was he nosing around trying to find out something, or was he bringing a friendly warning?"

"Ho is fren' of Jingwak," said Esau, "and Jingwak is scare."

"Ah-hah!" agreed Omar. "He ces scare." He got no Paradee to help heem now."

But in spite of the confidence of his men, Jim was troubled. What he desired was to bring about the downfall of the sorcerer by peaceable means—to gain the friendship of the hunters, but it looked as if he would fail. If the old Indian was to be trusted, they would be lucky to get out of the Sturgeon with whole skins. How far the adherents of Jingwak were prepared to go he already knew. In the end it meant bloodshed, and that meant defeat—the enemy of many of the hunters whose trade he sought. And defeat meant good-bye to Sunset House—and Aurora LeBlond. For he would have no even a future in the company's service to offer her. As he brooded with his thoughts, the day on the island with the daughter of the man whose wives were fast drawing the net of defeat about the little fur post seemed more like something he had read—more the fancy of a dream than reality. Those brief hours of unalloyed delight had been given him to torment his memory in the years to come. She would never return to the Lake of the Sand Beaches.

The following morning, Esau left them. Traveling in a small birchbark canoe he had got by trade from

Main Dome Distinctive Feature of St. Sophia's

St. Sophia, Constantinople's marvelous mosque, when it was erected by Emperor Justinian as a Christian cathedral, was made in the form of an immense Greek cross. The architect supported the structure with a hundred columns, and the brick which formed the main building material was covered with rare marbles, jaspers and porphyries of a dozen varieties and colors, drawn from quarries in various parts of the empire or from the ruins of demolished heathen temples.

But the distinctive architectural feature of the building was the main dome, probably the first great aerial cupola ever erected. Within 20 years an earthquake destroyed a part of this inverted cup, but Justinian immediately restored it, and it remains intact until now, rising 175 feet above the earth. Gibbon commenting on its lightness and durability says that the frame probably is made of pumice stone or of light brick from the island of Rhodes.

The cathedral adornments and particularly the mosaics of the floors and an Ojibwa, the old man started ahead of them down the Sturgeon on his lone search for Jingwak. Time and again Jim had endeavored to learn how he hoped to circumvent the medicine man who had such a hold on the hunters of the Sturgeon, but Esau had kept his own counsel. With a smile, the wily old Indian had replied: "Eet may be Esau ees too old. Hees back no longer carry de beeg load for de companee. His leg are stiff for de winter trail. But he has seen manee ting and hees memory ees long. Eef he nevalre come back, eet mean hees head, also, ees no good."

More he refused to say, and Omar, when questioned by the curious Jim, had shaken his head doubtfully as he explained Esau's reticence. The old man's plan was so wild in its details and depended for its success so largely on luck that Esau dared not divulge it to his chief.

So Stuart parted with his friend with misgiving in his heart. The loyal old Indian was going down the Sturgeon into the enemies' country, alone, to fight for Sunset House. What could he do to Jingwak there, in his stronghold, one against many?

He gripped the old Ojibwa's hand in parting. "I don't like to have you go alone, Esau," Jim said. "We ought to fight this out together."

"You an' your fader was de good fren' of me," replied Esau, his eyes bright with feeling. "I am ole man. Soon I go talk to your fader. Wen I meet heem, he ask, 'Esau, how you leev de boy?' I wan' to tell heem de boy ees ver' fine wid de beeg trade at de House of de Setting Sun." The old man's fingers gripped hard on Jim's. "Dat ees w'y I go to fin' Jingwak."

Turning, Esau shoved off the canoe and was soon out of sight behind a timbered point. In the gray eyes of Jim Stuart, as he watched the dip and swing of Esau's paddle until the bent back of the old man disappeared, there was the mist of memory and the emotion of a full heart.

The father he had buried on the shore of far God's lake—what would he not give today for his companionship and his counsel?

It was September; the moon of the mating of the caribou; September, when through the wild valleys, the lifting sun rolled back curtains of mist, veiling ridges touched here and there with yellow and gold by the magic wand of the frost; September, when the muskies were blue with ripened berries and the loons, restless with the urge of far journeying, called at sunset across nameless lakes. North, on the vast marshes of the great bay, the legions of the geese were assembling for their autumn rendezvous—later to ride the first stinging winds south over the green sea of the spruce and the flaming islands of the hardwood ridges.

Passing over the spawning beds of the sturgeon, at the outlet of the Lake of the Great Stones, where, for a mile, on the sandy bottom, the dark shapes of the huge fish were visible beneath the peterboro, Jim and Omar entered the river from which the old Ojibwa had warned them they would never return. Two days' journey down-stream, where the river widened to form a large lake, Jim hoped to find the man they sought. How, when he found him, he was to break the power of the sorcerer, he did not know. But the future of Sunset House depended on it, and in his desperation, Jim was prepared to go far—how far, the man who realized that failure in the trade would mean in the end the loss of Aurora LeBlond, did not dare admit to himself.

All the morning the peterboro rode the swift current of the Sturgeon. Toward noon the drum-beat of rapids which the old Ojibwa had warned them they could not run, sounded in their ears. Then, as they dropped alongshore, with their poles toward the first broken water, they saw the portage trail leading from the river shore back into the timber.

They landed, and Omar, first swinging to his back on a tump-line a bunch of the yearling moose they had shot at daylight, balanced the heavy, water-soaked peterboro on its center thwart across his thick shoulders and walked briskly off up the trail. To Omar Bolsvert, the man who had packed five bags of company flour a half-mile without resting, this back load, while awkward to balance in the thick brush, was a toy.

Jacket or Brassiere-Top for Beach

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PREPAREDNESS

It comes to going in for a season of swimming and sun-tanning during the summer vacation. Much of the pleasure and the benefit, too, for that matter, depends on having the right apparel together with all the accessories which add to the comfort of the occasion.

As joyous, as highly colorful, even frivolous and sometimes eccentric and amusing as modern beach and swim fashions may appear to the casual on-looker, they are, after all, about as practical as common-sense designing can make them.

To illustrate the point, consider the pajama suit to the left in the picture. To be sure it is immensely clever and picturesque and gaily colorful, in fact, it is an ornament to the landscape, but it is something more than all that, it is thoroughly practical.

This two-piece is not an experiment or a model to merely catch the eye. It is an outgrowth of the need felt for some sort of a costume which can be worn over the one-piece bathing suit, which will look genteel and modest in going to and from the beach and which simply must slip on and off easily.

However, in the little bolero or elon with separate pajamas made of silk or wool jersey which is a great favorite, or of crinkly seersucker, of pique, linen, or of some one or other of the smart striped materials (stripes are the rage this season) the problem is solved. Looking at the costume illustrated one appreciates the advantage of this model which has a little jacket, to be worn or not, as one pleases, with pajamas so designed as to button or unbutton easily. The desirable arrangement of the stripes adds to the attractiveness of this costume.

Again, it is the practical question which is influencing designers to play up brassiere effects this season for both bathing suits and beach costumes. The basic idea in these brassiere devices is to get the greatest possible benefit from the sun's rays, and this is being accomplished by means of strap arrangements at the back.

The form-fitting ensemble on the standing figure presents an interesting version of the brassiere mode. It is neatly tailored (tailored effects are chic this season) of a very attractive and serviceable durable mesh of diagonal pattern, giving it the appearance of pique—and you know how smart durable diagonals and piques are! The modish brassiere-bodice accents the popular light-top vogue. The two straps which hold up the brassiere-like front join between the shoulders and become a single strap to hold the garment in place at the back.

Although it does not show in the picture, this costume has a matching short jacket with sleeves, to wear when your sun tan shows signs of becoming sunburn.

The dotted parasol is of durable mesh and is a charming adjunct, making its appeal to smart women who go beach promading.

DIAGONALS ARE IN FAVOR FOR SUMMER

Anything that is diagonal in weave, diagonal in pattern or diagonal in cut has the approval of Paris these days. Criss-cross stripes are a success.

They are used for every type of costume; sweaters are hand-knitted in striped patterns, blouses are made of diagonally striped silks, woolen dresses are cut of serges that show plainly their diagonal weave, tweed coats, in plain colors are cut on diagonal lines.

Many of the new dresses and coats are made of vertically or horizontally striped fabrics, but are cut on the bias, so that the result is a diagonal stripe. The whole effect is one of slanting lines, but lines which make the figure look more slender than the old-fashioned "stripes which cut off" one's figure and had a tendency to make it look dumpy.

Beige Holds Place as an Outstanding Color

Paris never fails to find new ways to use beige. This year beige was early predicted as one of the outstanding colors of the season, and Paris women are finding this prophecy come true.

Beige silks and beige woolsens are in great demand in Paris shops, and French dressmaking houses report a large percentage of their clients ordering many beige clothes for summer.

This year's beige fashions are characterized by an alliance with some other color. The first beige costumes of the year—beige coats with black accessories—are still fashionable.

New Silk Organdie Is Greeted With Delight

The new silk organdie that will be seen everywhere this summer is truly a sheer delight. It is a little more sophisticated than its cotton sister and so will be welcomed by the more mature women who feel that an organdie evening frock is not for her. The weave and look of cotton organdie is cleverly kept and simulated and the fabric is grand for evening frocks. It is being used in fascinating prints and in this form is being promoted for formal as well as informal wear and, very charmingly, it is, too, young and refreshing.

HAT AND SCARF MATCH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Polka dots continue to flourish in the mode. Their latest move is to invade the realm of millinery, especially in the sports section where hat-and-scarf sets of dotted fabrics prove as a chief attraction. The dots are either white on a dark background or the order is reversed. Navy and white, brown and beige, red and white or green with white are outstanding combinations. Either the beret or the brimmed hat of polka-dot material is good style and the scarf is emphasized because unusual importance is attached not only to the scarf itself but particularly to smart and original ways of wearing it.

Capas

Formal afternoon and informal evening dresses of chiffon have capas reaching to the elbow, by way of sleeves, that are edged with thick ruffles of chiffon flowers.

Patent Leather Trifles

Dark blue sailor hats, bright colored belts and gay bags of the shiny leather are used as accessories for many smart costumes.

A. S. McCamant.

I hereby announce my candidacy for Sheriff of Lincoln County, subject to the will of the Democratic Party.

What we Think

We've been asked what we think about the wet plank in the Democratic platform. We think if the Republicans go in on their prohibition "straddle" plank things won't be any drier; if the Democrats go in on their "wringing wet" plank things won't be any wetter.

The fear is often expressed that the hard surfaced roads will sound the death knell of the small towns. We are not prepared to say whether this is true or not. We do not believe that it will affect the live small town and the citizen who is loyal to his community only because he has no means of transportation to a neighboring city has no love to boast of. The small towns that are equipped to furnish comforts and the necessities modern improvements will, we believe, suffer greatly. Good streets, well kept parking lots and lights and water provide most of the needs of the average citizen. The big town can give little more. There is no better place to live, and raise and educate a family of boys and girls than the small, modern town of the land. They have something that the big city can never, can never instill into it. The small town of today would spend every dollar it justly could in the purchase of improvements and modern conveniences. It is its only insurance against decadence.

We have reached the highest standard of living, unparalleled in the world.—Herbert Hoover at Newark, Sept. 17, 1928

The standard of living is such that in St. Croix 65 per cent of those who die have a pauper burial.—Report of the Governor of Virgin Islands.

President Hoover apparently is perfectly willing to cooperate with Congress on any and every measure he proposes and also to try something different from anything Congress proposes.

The worst political hoax this country has ever known is the Hawley-Smoot trade-destroying tariff guaranteed to bring prosperity.

The worst enemies of the church in this country, are not the people who are fighting it openly and bitterly, or the evolutionists who have frequently attracted so much attention. The worst enemies of every church are the members who have their names on the roll, yet do not attend church.

People not Deceived by Platform Promises

It was not to be expected that there would be any forthright declaration upon any controversial issue within the party from a Republican National Convention made up largely of officeholders in the Hoover Administration, including six Cabinet members. It could be taken for granted in advance that these delegates, together with those who were looking for administration favors, would willingly do the bidding of the administration strategists in charge of Mr. Hoover's campaign to retain the Presidency. Naturally they would have as a model of ambiguity Mr. Hoover himself. Therefore the prohibition plank in the national platform adopted by that convention, susceptible of various interpretations as verified by the conflicting comments thereon by individuals and the press.

During all the controversy that has been carried on with respect to this question no one has been able to state with exactness the attitude of President Hoover. What utterances he has made upon the subject are as vague or as confusing as some of his messages to Congress, which baffled the interpretation of even the Administration spokesmen. And now his own party, in a national convention controlled by his own officeholders and would-be officeholders is committed to the same ambiguity and evasiveness on one of the most highly controversial questions before the public.

The Republican platform declaration on prohibition is most commonly characterized as a "straddle," an effort, in common parlance, "to work both sides of the street." Some comments of the press indicate not only its ambiguous character, but also the design in purposely making it so.

The Rutland (Vt.) Herald (Ind. Rep.), for instance, declares it "was written with the view of satisfying both sides of the controversy and, as inevitably follows such an effort, it must fail to satisfy either." The Spokane Spokesman-Review, on the other hand, paradoxically asserts that "it will be generally satisfactory to wet and dry Republicans." A third view is that of the Buffalo Evening News (Ind. Rep.) that much depends upon the way the plank is interpreted. Still another point is that of the Akron (O.) Beacon Journal which characterizes it as " pompous but empty words, strung out into nebulous phrases."

The Democratic press generally condemns it as "obscure," "side-stepping" and "a straddle." The New York Sun (Ind.) adds to these phrases "a pitiful example of ducking and dodging," and says the plank "is described as having been drawn by 'friends' of the President." His enemies could have written nothing more damaging.

The framers of this plank could not have chosen a more inopportune time for an exhibit of "ducking and dodging," "side-stepping" and "jugglery." There is abundant evidence that the public has been thoroughly "fed up" on such arts and practices during the Hoover Administration. The masses of the people still have fresh in mind the long list of misleading statements made by officials of the Hoover Administration greatly minimizing the amount of unemployment in the earlier stages of the Hoover panic. They still remember the dose of soothing syrup administered by the President himself concerning the depression, that it would all be over within sixty days. They can recall the estimates of surpluses that resulted only in deficits, and the various sets of figures offered by the Treasury when Congress was attempting to balance the budget.

mean one thing to one person and something else to another. Unless all signs are wrong they want forthright declarations from their public men and political parties that say something and mean what they say and are susceptible of but one interpretation.

Most fortunes and in fact nearly all of the comfortable incomes of those in any community who have been built a nickel and a dime at a time. People as a rule do not keep themselves poor through the casual loss of expenditures. Like the drop at the sunset, they do not rather through expensive habits their surplus slips away gradually. The person who has learned to refrain from buying things he does not need merely because they are cheap or happen to strike a passing fancy has laid the foundation stone of success and thrift.

The fellows who only work when they feel like it are, as a rule found seated on the shady side of the street.

Recipe Really Simple.
Aunt Maria was without a peer among Negro cooks. Her specialty was molasses cookies. One day she was asked her recipe.

Without hesitation she replied: "Ah takes a cup of flour, but Ah don't use all of it, then Ah adds two gullups of molasses."

"But," interposed the guest, "what are 'gullups'?"

"Honey, don't you know? Well, when you has a jug of molasses, and turns it up, the molasses say, 'Gullup' and then run a little more and say 'Gullup' again. Ah takes two."—Exchange.

Evolution of Parachute.
The invention of the parachute is accredited to Sebastian Lonormand, and the device was used by him in 1784 in making a descent from an upper window from a house in Lyons. The first descent from a balloon was made by Garnerin in Paris in 1797. The first descent from an airplane was made in 1912 by Captain Berry, at St. Louis, Mo. A medium sized and light parachute was used. This parachute was folded and shipped into a conical cylinder which was tied underneath the front end of the skid on a Benoist pusher biplane, piloted by Tony Janns. As far as we have been able to ascertain, Lieutenant Macready was the first man to make an emergency jump from an airplane.—Washington Star.

Chemistry's Triumph.
If all the flowers lost their perfume and colors, and the spices their pungence and most fruits their flowers, chemists could closely imitate most of the lost factors synthetically.

The indigo blue of India comes today from Wilmington, Del.; the precious musk of the Tibetan mountain deer is imitated in Delawanna, N. J.; the equal of tannin from Argentina, quebracho, hales from a Kenscheler, (N. Y.) chemical vat. Balsam of Peru (a natural product of Salvador) might logically be renamed balsam of Pennsylvania.

Ancho Notes

Those who attended the 4th of July celebration at Fort Stanton were the Wardens, Frañes, Hales, Hightowers and Jess Vanderford. All reported, a good time.

George Henderson and a party of three came in from Tulsa by plane last week in the interest of their placer gold holdings in the Jicarillas.

J. E. Frame and wife made a business trip to Corona Wednesday.

Good rains throughout the Ancho neighborhood during the past week, have put a smile on the faces of the ranchmen and bean farmers.

B. L. Stimmel and wife accompanied by their son, Roy and family of Hanford, California were up from Carrizozo Tuesday visiting the Eakers and Frame families.

Mrs. Bilon, wife of one the Jicarilla mining men is visiting her mother in Horton, Kansas.

Graver Pruett of the Highway Department spent the Fourth with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Frame were Carrizozo visitors Tuesday.

John Buckley made a business trip to El Paso this week.

The M. T. Pruett family spent the 4th with S. J. Pruett.

A large crowd attended the dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sweet. Among those from Ancho were Miss Edwina Peters, Miss Doris Greyson, Virginia Peters, Mitchell Ems and Ferris Greyson.

The barbeque and rodeo given at Rolland's was well attended and everyone had a good time.

The Brack Steam family visited the Frames Saturday.

Grace Lee Hale was hostess at a party Thursday afternoon when she celebrated her eighth birthday at the R. L. Hale home. Games were played and refreshments enjoyed. Refreshments of ice cream cake and cookies were served. The birthday cake was white with pink candies. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Jack Lemaster and Miss Frances Pruett.

Special guests were Mrs. W. H. Fisher of Capitan and Mrs. S. E. Greison of Carrizozo.

Just received car of Plaster and Sheet Rock. Prices are lower. The Titsworth Co., Inc. at Capitan, New Mex. 11.

If there is any consolation in it to you, the other fellow is having the same difficulty to get by that you are. He is having the same strenuous fight to keep the rent paid, meet his notes, buy a new car, put the children through school, pay life insurance and meet all the thousand and one demands that come to him the same as yours come to you. He may, as they say put on a better front and seem to be getting by easier, but in the majority of instances it is merely because he is a better actor and is better able to conceal his effort.

MUSIC HELPS HIM

An accident that years ago left him a cripple has not prevented Melville J. Webster of Elkhart, Ind., from mounting to the position of one of the nation's most eminent clarinet soloists.

Webster started the study of his instrument at the age of fourteen, according to the Conn Music Center. For seven years he was soloist with the famous John C. Weber prize band of America. For years he was the sensation of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra.

"There is nothing unusual about my musical career," says Webster. "Almost any boy, at some time or another, cherishes a secret ambition to play a band instrument. It just happened that I was given an opportunity to carry out that ambition. I was the happiest youngster in the world when my father bought me an instrument and secured for me a competent instructor. Music became my one interest. I plunged into it with all of the enthusiasm a boy can command, greedily absorbing as many as four lessons a week.

"When my unfortunate accident came I blocked those hours of study. I was able to 'carry on' in the game of life, and on my own.

"I would advise the boy who is contemplating a musical career to consider the clarinet. In our modern music it is becoming more and more an outstanding member of the band family."

Lights of New York

By WALTER TRUMBULL

The New Yorker does not have to go to Long Island, Westchester or New Jersey to swing a golf club or a tennis racket. He usually can get all the exercise he needs near his office. Not only are there any number of gymnasiums and health institutes where he can box, toss the medicine ball or use apparatus under supervision, but most of the downtown skyscrapers have in door-golf courses, swimming pools, and handball and squash courts. There is one downtown club which has squash courts presented by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. In other parts of town are elaborate indoor tennis courts. One of the most palatial places of this sort has only a few members. I am told that for the ground, building and furnishings, they chipped in about $200,000 each. But that was previous to 1930.

The snootier New York clubs have grown vastly more democratic. There are clubs where the waiting list used to be as long as a bread line. If a man were proposed in his youth, he stood a good chance of being elected about the time he was ready to be pushed inside the sacred portals in a wheel-chair. Progress was slower than promotion in a peace-time army. One of these clubs has taken in twenty-five new members in the past year. Nobody with enough money to pay the dues is safe passing the door.

I am told the expression "stage-door Johnnies", originated at the old John street theater. This playhouse was torn down before most of us were born, but was famous in its day.

If you want to see girls from musical shows, which have faded, look in the cheap restaurants. Some of them eat there, and some of them work there.

I am told that visitors to the curio room at police headquarters, where charming mementoes of murders and murderers are kept, must obtain passes. When no such restriction obtained, it was necessary to watch the guests too constantly to see that they didn't swiped any of the stuff.

Madison Square Garden, which used to boast of its 600 millionaires, is said to have taken a 90 per cent cut.

Hotel porters depend largely upon their tips. There was a highly dissatisfied porter in one hotel recently. A woman arrived with more than a dozen pieces of baggage, including four extra heavy trunks. After the porter had finally wrestled everything to her suite she rewarded him with twenty cents.

RETAINING HER YOUTH

"She's retaining her youth well." "Yes; somehow or other she seems to be holding on to that chap she caught."

How It Started

By Jean Newton

Why Do We Say "Landscape"?
WHEN we hear the word "landscape" we understand immediately its reference to the so-called "lay" of the land, to the views and vistas that greet the eye as it takes in the unfolding terrain.

The word "landscape" also brings to the mind another sense, a more recent acquisition, many authorities think, and that is the sense of land artistically created so to speak, of views and vistas manufactured by man to improve upon nature.

Curiously enough, it is this latter meaning which we find embodied in the root source of the term. For the "scape" part of "landscape" comes to us from the German "schaffen" indicating "to create" "to labor." In this same category we have the word "sculpture" and the phrase, "landscape gardening."

Increase in Insanity Blamed on Fast Living

Bolivar, Tenn.—The fast pace of modern life must be slowed down in order to stop the alarming increase in the number of young people who are losing their minds, in the opinion of Dr. E. W. Cooke, superintendent of the Western Tennessee Hospital for the Insane.

"Fast living" is the cause, and "apply the brakes and slow down," Doctor Cooke urges.

Wine, women and song—an age-old story—constitutes Doctor Cooke's definition of fast living.

Less liquor, fewer wild parties, and longer hours of good sound sleep are the things that make up the slowing down process.

SENDING SPEECH OVER SPACE ON BEAM OF LIGHT

John Bellamy Taylor (right), consulting engineer of General Electric's research laboratory, talking into the apparatus he developed for sending human speech on a beam of light. A program "narrowcasted" from the navy dirigible Los Angeles from 2,500 feet in the air was picked up at a ground station, as at the left, and rebroadcast over a nation-wide chain of stations. The light beam was picked up by a large concave mirror mounted on the tripod where a small "electric eye" converted the light waves into electrical impulses which were in turn converted into sound by the same means as used in an ordinary radio receiver.

The Kitchen Cabinet

ATTRACTIVE FOODS

NO ONE cares to feast the eye at the expense of taste, yet "good digestion waits on the appetite" which has been stirred by appetizingly appealing foods.

Thus we serve little garnishes of slices of lemon dipped into parsley, small molds of jelly, dainty fritters, pipings of cream and mayonnaise, sprigs of fresh green, and we know that the extra time and trouble is well worth the pleasure it affords.

A fair trial of the art of garnishing will prove that the relish of a dish properly and tastefully served is much enhanced.

One must be consistent in the use of garnishings. Taste will have much to do with the result. Flowers except nasturtiums are used only with sweet dishes. Ribbons are used by some artists in decorating foods, but the only really appropriate food that a ribbon seems to fit is the wedding cake, when tied up in a box.

A stew or dish of creamed vegetable or fish, if heaped daintily on a hot platter, surrounded with a ring of delicately browned potato, shoe strings or chips, will awaken the desire to partake much more than if it is dished up any old way.

The esthetic side of serving food should be in the mother's mind. It will be easier to teach proper table manners and the children will more quickly learn to eat foods good for them if they are nicely seasoned, garnished and served.

One must avoid extremes, as it is not necessary for ordinary occasions to dress up a dish elaborate enough for an exhibition, neither should it call forth the remark, "It tastes better than it looks."

Ancient Dungeon Yields Skeletons of Prisoners

Dover, Del.—An ancient dungeon in which prisoners of early Delaware were incarcerated and in which many were left to die, has been unearthed under the old Kent county building on Dover Green.

Between moulding brick walls, broken only by small slits to admit air, but constructed in such a manner to exclude light, workmen discovered a number of skeletons.

It is believed they are the bones of prisoners of the early governors of Delaware—men who were "forgotten" after the cell doors clanged behind them.

The discovery was made by excavators making ready for a new state building program here.

Early records of Kent county reveal that on this site the first jail was built in 1740. Old maps show the cells, designated as "offices," laid out under the old county building.

Later, between 1759 and 1763, James Hamilton, then governor of Delaware,

Insurance Companies Lift Ban on Air Travel

Chicago.—The old bugaboo of "How does flying affect my life insurance?" has been removed by insurance companies as a result of the operating record made by companies flying licensed planes with licensed pilots in regularly scheduled operations, shows a survey just completed by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

Several years ago, most life insurance companies would not pay the face value of a policy if death occurred in an airplane accident. Today, the majority of companies make no prohibition against air travel, either in policies already in effect or which are now being written.

Twenty-four out of twenty-five companies questioned stated their policies covered passengers traveling on a regular transport air line. In addition to paying the full face of the premium in the event of an airplane accident, approximately half of the companies answering the questionnaire said they would, in addition, pay the double indemnity provision.

and a number of citizens were designated as trustees and ordered to sell the jail and purchase another lot for a new prison.

The building now being moved was built on the brick walls of the old dungeon.

Plan Underground Air Fields for British Army

London.—The British air force has decided henceforth to build all its airports underground. The air ministry's decision was taken after long and careful reconnaissance from the air, which revealed that no landing field, with its hangars, would escape by camouflage the powerful lenses now used in military cameras.

The new airfields will be at a minimum depth of 30 feet. There will be inclines for planes to come to the surface and take off. It is probable that the gentler slopes of the downs between London and the south coast will be used, since they could be developed more easily.

A FLOWER TWISTER

Concealed in the medley of words are names of flowers. See if you can solve them.

In the spring the olive, macon, nees, and uceores bloom in colorful array. In the fall yehnersummas, gdlairmos, and pretty gehyrilana do come to stay. While in the summer aroos, psukair, lpothetra bedeck the land and winter sees the gay tsapnoelas in great demand.

MAKING A FLOWER POT AND FLOWERS

Here is a design for a flower pot. Cut it out and paste the edges together. Cut a round base for it to sit, out of the same cardboard upon which you paste the pattern. Fill the little flower pot with sawdust or any light mixture like cornmeal. Cut out the flower blossoms and leaves, coloring them different colors, but the same on backs and fronts, and paste the blossom portion on to a thin strip of heavy cardboard which will serve as a stem. If you have some drinking straws these make nice stems also. Then paste the leaves so that they will show above the flower pot. You can make the blossoms as numerous, as varied in color as you like and you can make a whole row of little flower pots to decorate your window sill. You can also copy the patterns given here and make very much larger ones if you wish to. The small size shown here make very nice and attractive place cards for parties when you have friends, or you can fill them with candy and use them for favors.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

By Editha L. Watson
POCAHONTAS AND MILLY

Her real name was Matoaka, and she was the daughter of Wahunsunacock, chief of the Powhatan confederacy. She was a frolicsome child, and her playfulness earned her a nickname from the father; Pocahontas (she is playful).

Pocahontas

The adventures of Capt. John Smith—his perils among the hostile Indians, his capture, the sentence to death, and his rescue by the maiden scarcely in her teens, are told in song and story. But that is only the beginning of the narrative of Pocahontas. John Smith returned to England in 1609. The promises of the English were not fulfilled, and the Indians were kept unhappily busy by the exactions of the white people.

There was intrigue among the Indians also. Lured by the false stories of a treacherous chief, Pocahontas went aboard the ship of Captain Argall, in the Potomac river. She was held on board while the boat sailed away from land, and for some time she was kept a prisoner and ransom was asked for her. "Pocahontas," as her father was known, had become openly hostile when his favorite daughter was thus kidnaped. He agreed to a kind of peace, however, to effect her return, but was ready for trouble—a dangerous neighbor for the whites.

But Pocahontas had not spent all her time in English hands bowing her fate. One of the Englishmen had found favor in her eyes, and she saw that her affection was returned. She accepted Christianity, partly, perhaps, because of this personable gentleman, and was baptized as the "Lady Rebecca." Her savagery thus transmuted, John Rolfe no longer delayed, and in April, 1613, the two were married.

This alliance pleased Powhatan. The old chief, who was sixty when he first met the white men, had great ambitions for his beloved daughter.

Three years after the wedding, the Rolfe and several of the Powhatan Indians set sail for England. Pocahontas' story had preceded her, and since her father was a powerful ruler, the daughter was everywhere acclaimed as a princess. Her visit was a triumph; her portrait was painted; people crowded around her in admiration, and her romantic story was on every tongue.

Happy over her reception, yet eager to return to her own people, Pocahontas prepared for the trip back to America. She was aboard the ship, lying at Gravesend, when an unforeseen calamity occurred. Smallpox, an enemy which rarely spared Indian victims, attacked her. Everything possible was done in the hope of saving the young "princess," but nothing availed. She was only twenty-two when she succumbed to the scourge, leaving her husband and their son to mourn her.

While Pocahontas is perhaps the most romantically famous Indian girl in history, there have been other rescues by other Indian maidens. That of McKrimmon by the Seminole Milly is also well-known, and has a happier ending.

In December of 1817, McKrimmon, an American, was captured by the Indians and taken to Mikasuki, Hills Hadjo's town. This famous chief had been on the British side in the War of 1812, and was still a foe to the Americans. He ordained that the captive be burned to death like any other enemy.

The American, his head shaved, was bound to a stake, and wood was piled around him, ready for the "burnt-offering." Then began a hideous dance. The Seminoles circled round and round their captive, uttering cries of contempt, and of joy at his capture.

We are not told how the American stood the ordeal. However, our national pride in our countrymen, as well as Milly's intercession, speak well for him, for if he had begged for mercy, no doubt the Seminole maiden would have steered her heart against him.

Just as the fatal spark approached the wood, the young and lovely daughter of Hills Hadjo rushed to her father. At his feet, she begged for the life of the captive, but the chief was stern and denied her request. Finally she threatened to die with him unless he were liberated. Not until he was convinced that his daughter meant what she said, did the chief order the captive unbound. Although McKrimmon's life was safe, he was not free, however. The Seminoles held him as a prisoner until he was bought by some Spaniards for seven and a half gallons of rum, and these "owners" released him.

Shortly after these events, the chief was captured by Americans and hanged. His wife and daughters, among whom was Milly, surrendered. The Americans paid marked attention to the brave and beautiful young Indian girl, and McKrimmon offered to marry her. After a long courtship, in which McKrimmon finally persuaded her that he had not made the offer from gratitude, but from love, they were married, and so, as the fairy-tales say, they lived happily ever after.

Mice Chew Police Fingerprint Files

Springfield, Ohio.—Wanted: A Fied Elper. James C. Hale, head of the police identification bureau, entered his office to find his fingerprint files reduced to confetti. Investigation disclosed the destruction had been committed by mice. The visitors, Hale believes, were the celebrated "Three Blind Mice," as they chewed the trousers and nose from a picture of Al Capone in preference to the foodstuffs section of a mail-order catalog contained in the files.

MANIAC USES KNIFE ON GROUP OF GIRLS

"Have to Kill Millions," He Shouts to Policeman.

Cleveland, Ohio.—A knife wielding maniac killed one girl and slashed two others here when he ran wild among a group of children on their way to school. The victims were Elaine Macken, eight, dead; Rose Marie Parker, eight; severely slashed; Lena de San, twelve, cut across the abdomen and throat.

The madman, Jake Gordon, thirty-eight, was captured a few minutes later by a traffic policeman near the scene of the attack. Dropping at the feet of Patrolman Charles Mitschele, who came running toward him, the killer brandished a knife with a four inch blade and cried:

"Shoot me. Kill me. I killed two of them. But I haven't killed enough. I have to kill more—lots more. I have to kill millions."

Scores of men, women and school children stood frozen with horror at the attack, then the throng of more than 100 sought to lynch the killer, but Mitschele kept the crowd back until reinforcements arrived.

Gordon is being held in the county jail in a straight-jacket. The children were on their way to school when they encountered Gordon, who had just emerged from a barber shop.

Questioned in the county jail, Gordon muttered: "I killed them so they wouldn't kill others when they grow up. I'll be forced to kill a million more. For a year and a half God has been after me to start."

It developed that Gordon was under treatment in one hospital here for periods and six weeks early in 1930 and another doctor had been treating him for extreme nervousness. He was a carpenter by trade.

While He Chases Hat in Wind His Car Runs Away

Chicago.—John Harbaugh of 1345 Argyle street jerked the brake of a costly new car just north of Michigan avenue bridge, jumped out and began running. So did Policeman Thomas Dunleady.

Both were after Harbaugh's hat. And they got it. Then they turned and began running again. The car had started to roll down grade. Before they caught up the car crashed into the window of Almee, Inc., a block away across the street.

"And the car," groaned Harbaugh, "belongs to John Ferris, who owns the garage where I work."

"But," consoled Dunleady, "you got your hat."

Criticism of Phone Girl Brings 30 Days in Jail

Waterville, Maine.—John McCellan is serving 30 days on the rock pile in jail because he criticized a telephone operator for giving him the wrong number. He took so long telling the operator that she was terrible that the manager of the hotel where he was staying had him arrested for drunkenness.

Youngster Is Rescued From a Giant Octopus

Le Levandou, France.—A young man at this Riviera resort recently saved the life of a five-year-old child about whose arm a giant octopus had wrapped one of its tentacles. The small boy was watching the octopus in a shallow pond when seized. After much effort, the young man succeeded in cutting the animal loose.

Fall Into Hot Soup Kills Year-Old Baby

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Steve Fadal, eighteen months old, died recently from burns received when he fell into a pan of steaming soup. The child's mother had placed the soup on the floor near a door to cool. The baby, toddling unsteadily about the floor, fell into the container. He died a few hours later.

Skunk Texas Firebug Torrrington, Conn.—An incendiary that no one dared arrest was observed spreading a forest fire here.

Forest Ranger Edward Hawkes reported seeing a skunk, with fur ablaze, leaping through underbrush away from a fire, setting a new fire at every jump. The explanation is that a hawk caught the fish in its beak and flew to the tree; so Elstone cast aside his rod, took up his gun, and blazed away, scoring a direct hit on the fish as well as the hawk.

Burned Fourth Time Hermon, Maine.—Four times within the last 80 years, Hermon's town hall has been razed by fire. Citizens are preparing to rebuild the structure.

FRIGHTENED FLYER KILLED IN A JUMP; TUTOR LANDS SHIP

Plane Tailspins 3,000 Feet; Student Leaps but Fails to Open Parachute.

Chicago.—High in the air over Cicero a pilot instructor fought a terror-stricken student of flying for control of a spinning airplane. The struggle ended when the student plunged from the swirling ship and fell 1,000 feet to his death.

With the student gone the pilot was able to take the controls, right the plane when it was only 230 feet up, and bring himself safely to a landing. The man killed was Harold Burke, twenty-one years old. The instructor who escaped is Victor Lindemann, twenty-three years old.

Goes Up for New License

Burke, who already held a private pilot's license, was taken into the air by Lindemann for the preparatory flight that would make him eligible for a limited commercial pilot's diploma. To get this coveted slip of paper it was necessary that he be able to put a plane into a tail spin and bring it out.

It was this part of the course that Lindemann was to take him through. So, with Burke sitting in the pilot's seat, and the instructor behind him in the passenger's seat, they went aloft.

Burke flew for about 20 minutes, gaining altitude and following his instructions perfectly. At a height of 4,000 feet he tried the unfamiliar tail spin. What happened after that was told by Pilot Lindemann later in the Cicero police station.

"We spun as we intended," he said. "Burke should have taken only three spins and then righted the ship. But he lost his head. He froze to the controls. I tried to get them away from him and couldn't. His grip was like iron on the control stick."

"Spin followed spin until there were 14 in all. By that time we were little more than a thousand feet up. I yelled at Burke, and it made no impression. Finally I slugged the side of his head with my fist, hoping to bring him out of his daze.

Student Leaps From Plane.

"He looked around and I pointed down to the ground to indicate to him that we were going to crash unless something like a miracle happened. He seemed to understand and he leaped out with his hand moving toward the ring on his parachute.

"Maybe he could have opened the chute and gotten down safely if he hadn't been hit by the left wing. We were still whirling and the wing caught him on the left arm and side. My guess is that his left arm might have been broken then. Burke dropped. Then I went to work and just managed to right the ship and get back to the airport."

The pilot said that after his student jumped he made the quick decision to stay with the ship rather than to follow and take to his own parachute. "My plane is all that I have in the world," he said, "I had to save it."

Bomb to Strike Terror Into Heart of Thieves

London.—The spread of motor banditry in England has at last made these somewhat insular islanders realize that their kingdom is not exactly a crimeless Eden.

SCOUNDARD is now working on a "scheme of frightfulness" which they declare will strike terror into the heart of the law breakers. Their principal anti-bandit weapon is to be a "treacle bomb."

For some time this bomb has been submitted to daily tests, and now an order has been placed with a well-known munition firm to supply an adequate number to the police.

The missile contaminates everything it touches on explosion. The chemicals it contains are of an adhesive character, and once it strikes its objective the sticky substance can only be removed with the greatest difficulty.

If a car used in a raid or its occupants be struck with one of these treacle bombs shaped like an egg, which will probably soon be in the possession of every police officer, whether on or off duty, the vehicle will cry out for capture no matter where it travels. Even when the car is abandoned, every step of the fugitives towards the wash-basin will be a step of danger.

Gamecock Aids Bulldog Pal in Fighting Foes

Menlo Park, Calif.—A gamecock who will fight anybody or anything to protect his bulldog pal is one of the proudest possessions of J. C. Walrath of Menlo Park. The rooster, "Cockie," and the dog, "Boots," are inseparable. Walrath said. The chicken, he explained, rides around on the dog's back and at the first sign of an attack on the dog, goes into action with wings beating and spurs flashing.

Angler Shoots Big Bass From Tree Top in Idaho

Wallace, Idaho.—So good is the reputation of Earl Elstone for veracity that no one doubted his word when he told how he shot a four-pound bass out of a pine tree with his shotgun. The explanation is that a hawk caught the fish in its beak and flew to the tree; so Elstone cast aside his rod, took up his gun, and blazed away, scoring a direct hit on the fish as well as the hawk.

RIGHT now, Goodyear is building the best tires that ever came from the world's largest rubber factory.

Right now, you can get the lowest tire prices ever featured before a July 4th holiday.

This statement is true, even though the prices shown here include the new U. S. tax.

Read them and be convinced. These prices buy Goodyear Speedways—the tires that have been making such a sensation in this low-price year.

They're real Superwrist Balloons—built to Goodyear standards—marked with the Goodyear name and house flag—with the extra mileage of Goodyear balanced construction.

When you look at these big, busy, sturdy and sturdy Goodyears you'll certainly say to yourself:

"Why buy any second-choice tire when FIRST-CHOICE costs no more?"

You can count six layers of cord here, but the first two under the tread in this tire (or in any so-called "six-ply" tire built this way) do not run from head to head. Some tire-makers count these as "plies," but they are really "breaker strips," so we call them that.

Real Test of Morals Is Made in Adversity

Morals consist not alone in doing good, but in enduring hardships and wrong. The severest moral test which most of us meet lies in doing something that at first seems intolerable.

The archaic philosophers who theoretically separate the good life from all extraneous relationships might profitably face, as a working minister faces, the outrageous misfortunes which ordinary men and women are called on to endure, and might well study there the good life in terms of fortitude, constancy, patience and heroic courage.

Morals, more often than the theorist takes account of, are morals. Some meeting their Armageddon in the experience of disaster, grow rebellious and petulant; some grow stoical and talk about their heads being bloody, but unbowed; some become resigned and try to bend to the wind without breaking; but some lay hold on their calamity as Jesus laid hold on his cross, and use it as the most effective instrument for good which life ever fitted to their hand.

Cache of Jewelry

A viking cache of pearls, gold ornaments and initial jewelry was found under a large stone near Visby, Sweden, by two fishermen. There were 150 pearls, 9 gold pendants and 25 necklaces of bronze with silver inlay. There is no burial place near the spot, indicating that the jewelry was hidden by the owner for safe-keeping. Gothland, the Swedish island in the Baltic sea, of which Visby is the capital, frequent finds similar ancient relics. It used to be an important trading point during the time of the Vikings and later in the days of the Hanseatic league.

Monotony

"Do you enjoy going to social gatherings?" "Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "It's a pleasure to meet old friends. But I must admit that, after a few years, ice cream and chicken salad do seem a trifle monotonous."

Car Turns Over. Last Saturday as J. H. Fulmer was driving to Ruidoso his car got out of control some way just the other side of Alto, ran over an embankment and turned over. Fortunately Mr. Fulmer escaped any serious injury, but suffered numerous abrasions which prove rather painful. Frank English came by took Mr. Fulmer on to Ruidoso and L. B. Crawford drove the Fulmer car back to Carrizozo.

Remo's Department Store. Ostia was the vast emporium of Rome, where powerful corporations had the task of providing wheat for the plebs and luxuries for the patrician, the emperor and his court. Excavations indicate that there was a great deal of wealth in the city. What is entirely new in the archaeological discoveries is a department store where imported goods were displayed for visitors who needed to see the beauties of Ostia. There is nothing new under the sun—and even in ancient times a department store proved to be heaven for bargain hunters, and special sales not only of rare jewels, but silk, embroideries and other "imported" goods took place.

The Methodist Church

Rev. John L. Lawson, Pastor.

Let us try a little experiment. Pick up a silver soup spoon and look at your image as it is reflected in the bowl of the spoon. You appear to be standing on your head. Now look at the back of the spoon. The reflected image is upright. Now which is right? Are you upside down, or right side up? Better forget about it and eat your soup. But you can't eat soup while you are standing on your head. Neither do you make much headway with the bowl of the spoon turned downward. Nevertheless this little experiment proves that there is a whole of a difference in the view point, doesn't it? Now political questions are like that. There are millions of intelligent people in the Democratic party who can't see anything upright in the Republican platform; likewise there are millions of intelligent people in the Republican party who cannot see anything upright in the Democratic platform. There is much in the view point. Which is right? We will let the politicians engage in political controversy. This church will take no part in politics. Great political questions have arisen. Others will come. It is natural, and easy, too easy, for a preacher to take sides with one political party or another. But the pulpit is no place for political controversy. The preacher's commission is to "preach the Gospel." And the greatest of all preachers said, "My kingdom is not of this world." So we repeat, This church will take no part in politics. The members, as well as the preacher, will vote according to the dictates of their own consciences. But the pulpit will be reserved for the preaching of the Gospel. Regular preaching services next Sunday morning and evening. Sunday School at ten in the morning and Epworth League at seven in the evening.

The 4th at Eagle Creek. About ninety people took their dinner to Eagle Creek the 4th of July and spent a delightful day. After lunch they had an election of officers for the Southwestern Game, Fish and Forest Protective Association. The old officers and directors were re-elected with one exception, J. B. French was elected to succeed L. J. Adams director. Officers are M. U. Finley, president; Aliah Johnson, vice president; G. T. McQuillen, Secretary; E. M. Brickley Treasurer.

One's Own Burden. Every man has a burden of his own to bear, and that is the burden of overcoming his own faults and imperfections. If he does that, he will have cause for rejoicing; and, having overcome himself, he will be better able to help another to overcome. Unless we do help ourselves, no one can really help us. The help offered by another will be of no use to us unless we put forth our own efforts in this great struggle of life.—"Uncle Henry," in Wallace's Farmer.

Where's His Watch? Jan's pet bulldog had spent much of the night barking. At the breakfast table mother remarked: "Jack has certainly turned out to be a great watchdog." Later in the day Jan was noticed inspecting her dog carefully. At length she came to the door and asked: "Where does Jack keep his watch? I can't find it on him."

Government Buys Chevrolet Trucks

Detroit, Mich., July—First of 550 post office trucks complete with bodies, recently contracted for by the Federal Government with the Chevrolet Motor Company, are to be delivered July 15, Chevrolet officials announced here today. This contract, one of many awarded Chevrolet by users of large commercial fleets, brings the volume of this type of business for the first six months of the year considerably ahead of any previous six-month period, according to H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager. The federal contract calls for the 550 units, representing more than $250,000 in new business, to be standard post office trucks with a gross load-carrying capacity of not less than 4,200 pounds equipped with a standard mail truck body having a capacity of 200 cubic feet. Postmaster General Brown announced awarding of contract to Chevrolet early last month following comparative tests of other cars in the same general price level. Something to Sell? Advertise it.

Little Jimmy, who lives on the East side, asked his father for a nickel one Sunday morning. His father, not having a nickel, gave Jimmy five pennies. But five pennies were not the same as a nickel to Jimmy, and his mouth puckered up as he whimpered: "Now I can't get out!" His father asked: "You can't get out of where, Jimmy?" "I can't get out of Sunday school." "Why can't you?" "Because you have to give the lady a nickel, or you can't get out."—Indianapolis News.
