FROM THE BEGINNING

At his fur post, Sunset House, in the Canadian north, Jim Stuart, trader in charge, with his headman, Omar, rescues Aurora LeBlond, daughter of Stuart's rival in the fur business, from an overgrown canoe in the lake.

CHAPTER VII

In the gray dawn the canoe nosed out of the river through the blanket of mist making the still surface of Namegami, the Ojibwa's Lake of the Sturgeon. Here, living largely on their sturgeon and white-fish sets, many hunters came with their families to pass the swift weeks of summer before they returned to the far valleys and muskies of their trapping country.

Before the rising sun cleared the smoking surface of the lake, Jim and Omar went ashore and, hiding their canoe in the brush, ate and slept. From now on, the price of their safety would be eternal vigilance. Their escape to the south would mean that henceforth Paradise would be a wanted man—an outlaw.

Before the rising sun cleared the smoking surface of the lake, Jim and Omar went ashore and, hiding their canoe in the brush, ate and slept. From now on, the price of their safety would be eternal vigilance.

But the lake was a large one, with many islands. Other connecting lakes lay beyond. And the sole means of learning whether Esau had avoided Paradise and reached the Sturgeon was by talking to the Ojibwas who might have seen or met him.

After dark the Peterboro started down the lake with muffled paddles. On the shore, in the distance, a fire twinkled, like a star, for the nights were growing cool.

"Shall we make a stab and see what they know?" suggested Jim. "By daylight Esau would have passed in sight of this camp."

"Ah-hah, dese peop' are alone here. Fet might be long tam, before dey see oders an' tell dem about us."

So they landed at the camp. Jim approached the small fire with the customary "bo-jo's" while Omar squatted in the gloom at the bow of the canoe. His right hand, which rested inside the gunwale, gripped a cocked rifle.

"Ho-jo!" The old Indian at the fire rose at Jim's approach. Stuart's roving eyes saw that he was alone. The fire glow fell upon a tipi of caribou hide, the door-flaps of which were closed.

The bright, milk-like eyes of the old hunter measured the tall figure of the white man from felt hat to moccasins, but his weather-cured face, seamed by the years, evidenced neither excitement nor curiosity as he said in Ojibwa: "You come far."

"Yes," Jim answered in the same tongue, "we come far to talk with the people of the Sturgeon-country."

"What have you to tell them? That Jingwak, the shaman, grows fat on the flour and sugar of the trader, Paradise?"

Jim searched the shrewd eyes of the Indian for signs of the derision which the speech implied, but found none. Still, the Ojibwa had used the identical words employed by Stuart at the Pipestone lakes. This was interesting.

"I have much to tell them," Jim answered. "It may be that you have much to tell us. Are you alone? Where is your family?"

The Indian gestured toward the tipi. "She is sick."

close case. It might be that the woman had some slight ailment that he could aid. He had often dressed wounds for the Indians and knew the use of simple medical remedies.

"Yes, she cut her hand and her arm is large, with much pain."

"Infected," thought Jim. "If it hasn't gone too far I can clean it up. That means gratitude—the friendship of these people. They may be useful. And there's no time to waste."

"You have no son to help you on your trap lines this winter?" Jim asked.

The old man gazed grimly into the fire as he shook his head. "I am alone. I had a son, but he is a son no more. He left me to follow the trader Paradise, and the long snows I have seen fall, and melt to swell the rivers, are many."

Here was luck! "Omar, come up here!" Jim called in English to the sentinel at the canoe.

"Go into the tipi and look at the sick squaw," came the guttural demand from the gloom beyond the fire-light.

The wily half-breed was not to be drawn into a possible trap. With cocked rifle, he waited for proof of the Ojibwa's story. Invisible, he commanded the tipi and the fire.

"I have medicine and have cured many Indians at the Lake of the Sand Beaches," Jim said. "Your wife has poisoned her hand. The poison moves fast up the arm. It will reach her neck—then her heart. If you would have her live, I must see her at once."

For a space the Indian scrutinized Jim's frank countenance, lit by the fire glow. Then he entered the tipi from which directly issued a muffled conversation broken by low moans.

"That there was no treachery here, Jim was satisfied.

The Indian emerged from the tent and said: "She is very sick. If the medicine of the white man will help her, she is willing to see him."

Lighting a torch of rolled birch-bark, the Ojibwa led the way into the tipi. As Jim followed, a crouched, invisible figure held a rifle-lined on the lodge. Omar was taking no chances.

On a pile of skins Jim found a squaw writhing in pain, the hand, cut while cleaning fish, was red and swollen, the inflammation reaching to the glands of the forearm. And her head was hot with fever.

As he had guessed, it was a bad case of infection, but there was a chance of checking it as it had not progressed to the shoulder. Returning to his canoe, he took his medicine case from a bag, and had the old man heat a kettle of water. Then he said: "This will give her pain. The wound is full of pus—of poison. It must be cleaned out and washed with medicine. Does she understand it will hurt her?"

The old man smiled grimly. "Has she not been in pain for two sleeps? She says the little knife can be no worse."

So, in the flickering light of the birch-bark, Stuart opened the inflamed hand, cleaned out the wound, sterilized it with bichloride of mercury, and bound it up, while the drawn, gray face of the old squaw wet with the sweat of her agony, held to its stoic immobility.

They went outside to the fire, and the stiff features of the Ojibwa softened as he said: "The white man's medicine is strong. She will be well again."

"I do not know," replied Jim, considering the situation. He might pull the old woman out of her infection if he stayed and dressed the arm. But that meant the risk of showing themselves to camps in the vicinity. And time was precious if they were to help Esau. Omar would never agree to it. But then, there was the brave old soul in the tipi who had not so much as whimpered as he opened the wound, helpless without him. How could he leave her?

Out of the murk Omar suddenly appeared at the fire.

"This is Omar, my friend," said Jim, as the two men exchanged "bo-jo's" and the customary handshakes. "You have not told me your name."

The old man's seamed face expanded in a chuckle. "My name is Jinaw."

It was Ojibwa for rattlesnake, and Omar's black eyes snapped as he said, significantly thrusting a menacing face into that of the other: "Yes" got your poison fangs ready for somebody?"

With unblinking eyes the Indian answered the strange question. "My fangs are waiting for the trader, Paradise, and Jingwak, the shaman."

Jim glanced at Omar's surprised face. Could it be that they had stumbled upon a possible ally—or was Jinaw leading them on to betray the object of their search? And yet he had trusted Jim with his squaw's arm.

"Why did you ask me if I had come to tell the Ojibwas that Jingwak grows fat on the flour of Paradise?" Jim demanded.

"Because, the sun before the last sleep, Jingwak was here and said so."

"He was here?" Jim was thrilled. This old man might have news of Esau. "Was he alone?"

"Yes, he was waiting for Paradise who had been up river."

"Did he say why Paradise went up river?"

"He said that Paradise went to drive from the country the trader who had been telling the Indians at the Lake of the Great Stones that Jingwak was a false shaman. I told him he could prove that a lie by curing my squaw who was sick."

"What did he do?"

"He said he had no time to set up his medicine lodge, but would drive the devils from her arm," said the old man with a grimace.

"And he proved he was a wabeno, for the devils stayed," laughed Jim. The face of Jinaw twisted with hate. "That is why the fangs of Jinaw wait for him," he said.

"Has Paradise returned?"

"I have not seen him."

"Have you seen an old man in a bark canoe traveling this way?"

"No."

"Your son went with Paradise?"

"Yes, Jingwak said there were nine with him, in two canoes."

Then, with a glance at Omar, Jim said: "Your son is not killed. We spared him."

Jinaw's face reflected his amazement. "You met them—ten of them and they did not stop you?"

"My medicine was too strong for them. We left them lying on the trail, but they are not hurt."

For a long space Jinaw's shrewd eyes scrutinized the frank countenance of the white man. Then he said quietly: "You have the face of one whose heart is a stranger to fear; you should have killed them. They will never let you leave this lake alive."

Ignoring the cheerful prophecy, Omar broke into the conversation, which had been carried on entirely in Ojibwa. "Do all the people here believe in this wabeno, Jingwak?"

"No, but many of the young men do."

"Will the old men listen to us if we talk to them?"

"They will listen, but Paradise will find you with his young men and kill you."

Omar grimaced in Jinaw's grave face. "The medicine of this white man laughs at knife and bullet. Ask Paradise what he did with his nine men." Then Omar's swart face hardened into a menacing mask. "The fangs of Jinaw seek the trader Paradise and this wabeno. They, also, are our enemies. Jinaw is old, his son has left him, and he needs friends. We will be his friends."

This three fluted their pipes and sat down by the fire, while Omar, now convinced that the old Indian was sincere, lost no time in planning to make use of him in their search for Esau. As an earnest of their friendship, Omar brought from the canoe, flour, sugar, tea, and tobacco, none of which the old man had, and gave the sick squaw a dipper of stimulating tea, which she gratefully swallowed. Then, heartened by the good fortune which had led them to the tipi of Jinaw, the Rattlesnake, they paddled a mile down the shore and hid canoe and outfit as the young moon broke through the clouds above a lake drifted with shadows.

While the sky cleared and, here and there, the mirror of the lake picked up the stars, one question harassed the thoughts of the two men who had been told by Jinaw that their canoe would never turn south up the facing Sturgeon: Where was Esau?

As the night deepened and the moon dipped toward the black buttresses of the spruce ridge flanking the western shore, its beams touched two blurred shapes stretched in an open space beside a stony beach. Far out on the lake the funeral night wall of a loon lifted from the shadows. Then, for a long space, forest and lake slumbered, until, at last, on the heavy silence of the timbered shore broke the deep-toned "who-hoo-hoo, who-hoo-hoo!" of the horned owl. But the shapes in the blankets lay like dead men.

Again the hush of the tomb returned to the forest, while the moon rode from sight behind a drift of cloud, and dark swallowed the muffled figures on the shore. For a time the patrols of the forest night gave no voice, then the hunting call of the feathered assassin of the shadows again marred the deep peace. But the shaggy sentinel, Smoke, no longer kept guard beside his sleeping master. The sinister sound was unheard. The blanketed heaps did not stir.

Time passed and the moon broke from its curtain of cloud to light the lake shore and touch the wrapped shapes near the hidden canoe. Then, close by, like the stealthy movement of padded feet, sounded a faint rustle. For a long space, silence; and the sound was repeated. Again, silence, while the night grew older; until, with the noiselessness of a snake, something left the packed gloom of the scrub and writhed into the moonlight.

Near the two still shapes now lay a third.

Again movement in the black murk of the brush, the swift progress of a dark body, and where two had lain—now lay four.

Heavy with silence the forest slumbered on.

Then a moonbeam touched bright metal in the lifted hands of two kneeling men as they struck at the huddled figures between them—struck again. But their knife hands did not lift for the third blow at the sleeping men, for, like the rush of stalking wolves, the impact of two heavy bodies ground their faces into the soil, as the skinning knives of Omar Bolwert and Jim Stuart drove deep into their backs.

Leaving the tricked henchmen of Paradise stiffening beside the blanketed heaps which the men from Sunset House had cunningly arranged to simulate the shapes of sleeping men, Jim and Omar listened in the murk of the shore willows for the sound of muffled paddles or men moving in the forest in the rear of the camp.

"I told you de trick would work," Omar breathed into the ear of his chief. "Jinaw, he fool me, but I have fear Jus' de same. He told dem we go little piece down de lak' to sleep."

"Old Jinaw! To think he would betray us!" murmured Jim, bitter with the thought of the treachery of the Indian whom he had befriended.

"Dee see us from de lak' wils we talk to de Rattlesnake at de fire. Hees fangs weel spit no more poison wed' Omar squerz hees' throat."

"And his squaw—poor old soul!"

"Ah-hah! She sees de moder of wan or dose who come to keel us een our sleep, mebbe. You sorry for her?"

"Yes, I am sorry for her. She was so game when I hurt her. I believe I could have saved her, too. Now she'll die—if you put Jinaw out of the way."

"Shah!" The steel-hard fingers of Omar closed on Jim's arm as the straining ears of the two waited for the repetition of a sound back in the forest. Shortly it came.

Indorsement Given Legume From Japan

Kudzu Makes Good Pasture and Holds the Soil.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service. Kudzu, a perennial legume introduced into this country from Japan, is finding a place in the lower lands of the southeast Atlantic states because it thrives on soils too acid for alfalfa or clover, and still makes good hay and pasture, says Leaflet O-L, "Kudzu, a Forage Crop for the Southeast," published by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Not only does kudzu, which is a vine, thrive on acid soils, but it helps prevent soil erosion. Planted on steep slopes, it develops a heavy growth and holds the soil.

Kudzu must be managed somewhat more carefully than ordinary legumes. It should not be overgrazed, nor should it be cut too often. The usual way to start kudzu is by setting out small, two-year-old plants. As these grow the vines spread and make new roots where they come in contact with the soil. Later these new plants may be set out.

The leaflet emphasizes the important steps in planting kudzu, and tells how to handle the crop for grazing and for hay. There is no place for kudzu where alfalfa, clover or lespedeza can be grown profitably, but in regions in the Southeast where these crops do not do well, kudzu offers a good substitute, both for hay and grazing.

Leaflet O-L may be obtained from the office of information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., upon request.

States Report Victory in Fight on Bovine TB

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—WNU Service. By completing state-wide tuberculin testing of their cattle and reducing the degree of infection to one-half of 1 per cent, Wisconsin and Ohio have been designated by the United States Department of Agriculture as modified accredited areas. The recognition of these important cattle-breeding and dairy states is a culmination of 13 years' effort during which more than 10,000,000 tuberculin tests were made in Wisconsin and 4,000,000 in Ohio.

Four other states—North Carolina, Maine, Michigan and Indiana—previously freed their herds of this disease. With the addition of Wisconsin and Ohio the tuberculin-free area of the country is materially increased. Moreover, in the east central region most of the free areas adjoin. Though highly gratified by the rapid progress of bovine-tuberculosis eradication, the co-operating veterinary officials warn that vigilance against the introduction of infection, together with periodic re-testing of herds that have contained reactors, is essential.

Fighting Hog Influenza

The basic treatment for influenza in hogs is withholding the feed and protecting the herd against exposure. If the onset of the disease is sudden and a large percentage of the hogs stricken within a few days, all of the feed should be withheld. If the outbreak is less virulent, the sick hogs should be separated from the apparently well ones, and the latter animals fed only what they are able to eat in about 30 minutes, twice daily.

It is not possible to find suitable quarters on all farms for a herd of sick hogs. During the cool or cold weather, when outbreaks of the disease commonly occur, a deep bed of straw and clean, well-ventilated quarters free from drafts should be provided for the entire herd. A deep shed open on one side only is more satisfactory than the farrowing or hog house. They should be confined in these quarters until they are back on feed. It is usually advisable to sort out the animals that show symptoms of pneumonia before increasing the feed and turning out the well animals.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

Looking to Herd's Future

When selecting a herd sire the following points should be considered: Only pure-bred bull should be used; the production of the ancestors of the bull, especially that of the dam and the sire should be high; the individuality of the bull and his ancestors should be good; the production of the daughters of the bull, or of related cows, should be high; the stockman should pay enough to get a bull that will improve the herd; a proven bull is a more dependable sire than a young untried bull; where two or more farmers purchase a bull in partnership they can well afford to get a better bull than where each buys one; the dam of the bull should have a better record than the best cow in the herd.

Bran as Hay Substitute

Hay was a good crop in most sections last year and the quality was good, also. Nevertheless, there may be some of our readers who were short of good hay this winter. If such is the case, it might be well to know that bran at the present low prices is a fairly good substitute.

If possible, some hay should be fed, of course, but if there is plenty of good silage, and when bran is cheap as it is at present, the amount of hay may be cut down or almost eliminated without damage to the cow.—American Agriculturist.

Legumes to Reduce Cost

Facing another lean year in farm returns for 1932, farmers are advised by John Slipper, state extension specialist, to place greater dependence on legume hay to produce their portion feed for live stock feeding. Alfalfa surpasses red clover for western Ohio conditions in larger yield per acre, and also it is 40 per cent richer in protein and minerals. Instead of the common corn-wheat-clover rotation he suggests two years of alfalfa following corn and wheat.—Ohio Farmer.

Let Live Stock Help

"Let your live stock do the worrying about weed control," is the suggestion of O. H. Nelson, who farms near Kempton, N. D. From solid patches of sow thistle in the 1930 sweet clover field to a clean, weed-free stand of wheat last year is the short story of one field on this farm.

Sheep, horses, and cattle bring profitable returns on Nelson's land by grazing on rotated pastures. During the drought in that section in 1929 the stock grazed the sweet clover pasture closer than usual. Late in the fall the land was plowed and after that followed only the usual spring seed-bed preparation.

Nelson has had other similar experiences in weed control, and believes that with the live stock system of farming, keeping down sow thistle is not such a serious problem.—Successful Farming.

GOOD MARKET FOR SPECIAL PRODUCTS

Demand Solves Problem of Extra Butterfat.

(By R. J. RAMSEY, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.)

Many farmers are making money marketing their surplus butterfat in the form of whipping cream, sweet cream butter, honey butter and other special products which are easily prepared on the farm.

Sweet cream butter was originated to meet the demands of the housewife for a very high-grade product. It requires no equipment that is not used in churning sour cream. However, the flavor of this butter is so mild and delicate that only the very highest quality of sweet fresh cream can be used. Even the feed of the cows must be watched carefully to avoid undesirable feed flavors. All milking utensils, and even the separator, should be sterilized with boiling water each day before being used. If boiling water is not available, chemical sterilizers, such as bleaching powder, may be used.

The milk should be separated immediately after milking and the cream cooled to 60 degrees. The cream must be kept cold until churned in order to prevent souring and to make churning easier. It is best to churn every day, provided enough cream is available. Sweet cream is somewhat harder to churn than sour cream, so it must be aged at a low temperature for several hours before churning. For this season of the year the churning temperature should be about 50 degrees.

The churning should be stopped when the granules of butter are the size of a wheat kernel. The butter-milk then should be removed and the butter covered with fresh cold water. The churn should be revolved a few times, the rinse water removed and the washing repeated. The butter is removed and placed on a chilled butter worker and worked until no moisture is visible in large droplets. Care should be taken not to overwork it. Only a fine grade of butter salt should be used in salting it, as table salt is likely to cause grittiness.

If sweet cream butter is not salted, it may be made into honey butter. This makes a delicious spread for those who like honey. It is made by adding one pound of light-colored honey to one pound of soft cream butter. The two should be well mixed and then placed in containers and put in a refrigerator to harden.

Sanitary Measures to End "Ropiness" in Milk A slimy orropy condition in milk is brought about by the growth of bacteria and usually does not appear until 12 to 24 hours after the milk is drawn. The bacteria may come from the water in which the utensils were rinsed, from dust in the barn at milking time, or occasionally from an infected udder. Unless the infection comes from the udder, it can be eliminated by the practice of good sanitary measures, which consist of milking in a place comparatively free from dust, cleaning the cow's rear flanks and udder with a damp cloth, and handling the milk in vessels that have been thoroughly washed and sterilized.

DAIRY HINTS

There is always a demand for proved sires.

Cows need from three to four pounds of water for each pound of milk they give.

The price of a pound of grain is about the same as the price of a pound of milk. If an additional pound or two of grain makes a cow give an additional two or four pounds of milk, feed the grain.

Dog Shares Kennel

With Three Rabbits
 Ashland, Ky.—Ollie Manley missed three of his finest rabbits the other day. A search of the pen failed to reveal a trace of them—and Manley concluded the pets had been eaten by rats. Several days later he heard his hound dog growling at the children when they walked near the kennel. That surprised Manley for the dog was generally amiable. An investigation revealed the three young rabbits sleeping in the dog's bed. Manley said the dog gave up the rabbits only after considerable coaxing.

EXPLORER LIVES ON PORCUPINE LIVERS

Braves Perils to Aid Marooned Companions.

Fairbanks, Alaska.—The story of how Nicholas Spadeveckia, one of five scientists on an expedition into the Northland, lived for almost two weeks on porcupine livers while futilely seeking aid for his companions was related here by an Alaskan airplane pilot who had been marooned by a broken axle at the scientists' camp.

The story forms a page of bright heroism in the gloomy chapter of tragedy which the expedition enacted. They were seeking to learn the secret of the cosmic ray in the upper reaches of the atmosphere.

Two, Allen Carpe and Theodore Koven, toppled into crevasses. E. P. Beckwith, another of the group, was rescued from their glacier camp by a comrade-pilot of the man who related the story. Percy T. Oldton, director of the research, is still marooned at the camp, along with Spadeveckia.

Spadeveckia had started out for a settlement for aid. He could make only two miles a day, and when he saw his food would not last he began killing porcupines with his ski-stick. He ate their livers. Finally Spadeveckia decided he wasn't progressing so he turned back. He returned to camp almost exhausted, two weeks after he had left and had been given up for dead by Oldton.

The pilot predicted that both men could soon mush out of the area and reach Fairbanks, Alaska, on foot.

300 Youths Will Make Amity Tour of Europe

New York.—Three hundred boys and group leaders from twenty states and seventy-nine cities will sail in July to spend forty-five days in Europe as members of the largest "good will" party to visit abroad in the history of boys' tours. Twenty-four groups, numbering from fifteen to twenty-five each, will follow five itineraries. The average cost per boy for the entire trip will be $275.

Entertainment in each country by citizens' committees, made possible by special arrangement with the national councils of the Y. M. C. A. in European countries, will be a feature of the tours this summer. Each group of boys, upon arriving in a country, will be met by officials and citizens—members of the Y. M. C. A. in that country, who will escort and entertain them until they cross the border of the next country.

Burglar Alarm Stirs Up Gobs on Shore Leave

Los Angeles.—Sailors on shore leave usually aren't anxious about getting back to their ships. Such wasn't the case at San Pedro harbor, recently. Hundreds of middles bounded into view when the quiet of the morning was suddenly rent by the wild clanging of bells—six bells—eight bells—20 bells.

"It's a war," yelled the blue jackets as they scrambled toward the docks.

William Fox, janitor in a nearby bank, denied this, however. He had accidentally turned the dial to the bank's burglar alarm.

Police Squad Summoned by Frolicsome Kitten

Indianapolis, Ind.—In response to an emergency burglar alarm at a warehouse here, a police squad rushed to the scene but could find no burglar. Then a cat appeared, and just to show the police he was ready for a frolic jumped against the burglar alarm wire, and again the call to arms went into headquarters.

Kills Wife in Church

Sikeston, Mo.—Quietly walking into a church near here, Larry Hargraves, twenty-five, drew a pistol and fired three bullets into the head of his estranged wife, Beulah Ervin Hargraves, eighteen, and walked out again. The woman died instantly.

To Arrest Splinters

Rumford, Maine.—The motorist who drives his car through local puddles, splashing pedestrians, will be subject to prosecution on an assault and battery charge, according to Police Chief John H. Dennis.

Dies in Own Chair

Chicago.—Phil Harris, forty-five, unemployed, soldered electrodes onto the power wires of his radio set making it a virtual electric chair. Then he turned on the current, killing himself.

ROBBER LOSES LOVE OF DOTING MOTHER BY "ONE MORE JOB"

She, Toiled as Scrubwoman to Establish Wayward Son in Honest Business.

Kansas City, Kan.—Mrs. Della La Trasse, eighty-year-old mother of William La Trasse, train robber, and old-time bandit, said that she had renounced her son forever as she trudged slowly out of the police headquarters here without asking to see "Willie." She had toiled and saved for 20 years to build up a nest egg to establish her son in an honest business at the end of his prison term. That ended the chapter in La Trasse's life that retold the chronicle of a mother's love for her child. The chapter dealt, simply enough, with an aging woman, scrubbing floors, taking in extra washings and sewing far into the night so that she might save enough pennies to provide $1,000 for her son.

Takee Yegg into Home. The mother had learned on her visit to the office of William McMullan, chief-of-police, that "Willie" had taken a yeggman into her home to live and that La Trasse and his new friend were on their way to blow a safe at Victory Junction, west of here.

She bemoaned the fact that she had given "Willie" the money to purchase a cobbler's shop here.

Meanwhile, La Trasse married a woman he had known while he was an escaped prisoner. He took his bride to the home of his mother. A few days before La Trasse's arrest, differences between the wife and his mother caused them to move into a bungalow here.

La Trasse fell in with a yeggman, and took him to his mother's home as a boarder. His mother did not know of it until her talk with Chief McMullan.

"I'm through with Bill," she said, nervously stroking one gnarled hand over the other. "I am through with him forever. If they send him back to prison, I will not even go to see him."

Threw Away Pistol. She had learned that Pat Carroll, who accompanied La Trasse on the night of their arrest, was a safe cracker. The police told her that Bill had thrown away a revolver when they sought to arrest them.

The police found nitroglycerin and dynamite caps in Carroll's room at Mrs. La Trasse's home.

La Trasse admitted that he was going with Carroll to perform "just one more job," so that he could get enough money to go to Arizona for a rest preparatory to undergoing an operation at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn.

The confession was prompted by the discovery of a complete safe-breaking outfit in La Trasse's car.

His mother blamed her son's present plight on the fact that he had his wife had been living too extravagantly.

Different Makeups for Women Urged by Expert

London.—Browning wrote of a man having two faces. The modern woman, London beauty experts say, should have fifteen.

A color chart describing the kind of face that should be worn with each of fifteen dresses has been prepared by a prominent firm of cosmeticians. A few of the rules follow:

With light sports clothes, wear a dark makeup.

With dark evening clothes a light makeup is desirable.

For a scarlet dress, rachel powder, pink rouge, bronze eye shade, bright red lipstick, dark brown mascara for eyelashes.

With a bright blue evening dress, avoid green eye shade; use blue on the lids and black or blue on the lashes.

Don't retain a "daylight face" after changing into an evening gown.

A shrinkage of more than $300,000 or approximately 25 per cent in the school apportionment to be made this summer, is estimated by Deputy State Treasurer R. L. Ormsbee of New Mexico. Last year the apportionment was $1,277,778, but this year Ormsbee estimates that only about $950,000 will be available to be apportioned among the counties. The school census, compiled by George I. Arizona's 1932-'33 highway budget, appropriating $4,970,560.32 for road work, is in effect, having been adopted by the state highway commission. In connection with the regular budget an emergency budget of $2,625,365.77 was approved. It is dependent on passage of the Wagner-Garner relief measures in congress. Reversing previous action, the commission took into the state highway system the fifty-two-mile stretch of road from Hope to Parker and provided $100 for its maintenance. This was done so that work might be started on the Parker-Colorado bridge for which the legislature has provided $75,000 to be matched by California and the federal government.

The total collections did not include funds received from the University of Arizona, all of which were spent in Pima county.

FIRST-CHOICE or SECOND-choice

Which tire will you buy at the same low price?

Why do you suppose that Goodyear Tires lead all others in public preference by better than two to one? Why do you suppose that more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind—and have for 17 years? These tires must be FIRST-CHOICE because they're better. They must outsell all other tires in the world because they outrun them on the road. On a straight quality basis, then, it certainly looks like common sense to buy FIRST-CHOICE tires. Which brings up the question, "how about price?"

VILLAGE HAS HAD ITS DAY OF GLORY

Old Tadoussac Now Quiet Summer Resort.

The oldest white settlement in America, and once the center of the American fur trade, the quaint little French Canadian village of Tadoussac, on the lower St. Lawrence river, is today a quiet Canadian summer resort. Nestling among the foothills of the blue-capped Laurentian mountains at the junction of the St. Lawrence and Saguenay rivers, the village itself is still living in the past, the natural beauty of its surroundings and the quaintness of its people attracting each summer a large number of holiday-makers who are seeking to leave behind the rush and bustle of modern life.

Woven around Tadoussac is a long and romantic history. Here Jacques Cartier, the first explorer of New France, landed in the summer of 1535, and there are numerous tales of visits by those fierce sea rovers, the Vikings, at a much earlier date. Tadoussac, with its natural protected harbor, was long used as a whaling station by the Basques and Bretons, who were the first to form a settlement there, and it was in 1600 that the first house in Canada was built.

At the opening of the century, Tadoussac became the center of the fur trading industry, which extended as far as Labrador and Hudson Bay.

Species of Hawks That Are Friends of Farmer

The saying, "the only good hawk is a dead hawk," has been proven false by modern biological studies. Some hawks, of course, prey at times on poultry and valuable game birds. Many, however, live mainly on rodents, insects, and other destructive forms of wild life. It is not easy to distinguish between the harmful and harmless species of hawks, that in itself being good reason for erring, if at all, on the side of protection. In general, say biologists of the United States Department of Agriculture, harmless hawks have broad wings and wide, fan-shaped tails, and the harmful ones have relatively long tails and rounded wings. Study of the appearance and habits of the hawks in any section should enable farmers and sportsmen to tell which are likely to visit the chicken yard and which will confine themselves largely to feeding on injurious animals, and thus be useful.

Woman's Chief Charms Not to Be Purchased

The mouth is a photograph of the disposition. Someone has said that we are not responsible for the disposition we are born with, but we are responsible for the one that we die with. It is the same with the mouth. The sweetness and kindness and dependance of a baby's mouth are not dependent on the shape or size. Baby's mouth is sweet because his soul is sweet. No brand of lipstick, nor any art in its use, can camouflage a sour mouth and make even a casual observer believe it is sweet.

Then there is the eye, which the contents of the vanity case cannot change. "The eye is the window of the soul." You can buy something that will lengthen the fringe on the curtains to your soul-windows, you can change the cut of the lambrequins above, but you can't keep people from looking in sometimes, unless you pull the shades down altogether and put yourself in darkness. No vanity case, not even a whole drug store or beauty shop, can make attractive the windows out of which looks a quarrelsome, envious soul.

Keep sweet within, if you want to get full value from your vanity case. —Nellie S. Russell in the Farm Journal.

Progressing Progressives

Senator Norris (Rep., Neb): "I won't support President Hoover on any platform."

Senator Frazier (Rep. M.D.): "I cannot support Mr. Hoover on that platform. It provides nothing for agriculture or unemployment relief and straddles on prohibition."

The Country at Stake

Pity Mr. Hoover? Of course. He's pitiful. He's pathetic, but it is far more pathetic that our fortunes should be in his hands at this grave crisis which he says is worse than that of the war. Reelect him? I cannot imagine anything worse for the American electorate to do. But the time has really passed for any consideration of the man.—Oswald Garrison Villard in The Nation.

From the State

Highway Department

The News was handed the following letter by Mrs. Marie Cavanaugh, with the request that we publish it. It is self explanatory, and therefore needs no introduction.

Santa Fe, N. M., June 26th, 1932.

Hon. Arthur Seligman, Governor of New Mexico, Santa Fe, N. Mex.

My dear Governor: With reference to your letter from Mrs. Marie Cavanaugh of Fort Stanton, relative to the condition of the road from Capitan to Angus, Alto and Ruidoso, which she states is State Road No. 37, I wish to advise that the improvement of this road has been up quite a number of times for consideration before the State Highway Commission. The Commissioners have held a check time that this is a forest road and should be repaired or maintained by the Forest Department. At the present time the Forest Department is entirely without funds with which to do any work on this road. From my conversation with different members of this Department, I believe that they will perhaps do some work on this road as soon as the Forest appropriations become available from Congress. The Highway Department is also without funds with which to maintain the road.

The State Highway Commissioners have also called attention to the fact that a tremendous amount of state and federal money has been expended in Lincoln County during the past two years. This Department alone has expended between twelve and fifteen thousand dollars for right of way for these different Federal Aid Projects which have been constructed within the county. In all other counties of the state the counties themselves have furnished this right of way without cost to the State Highway Department. Lincoln County, however, has received such a large amount of this construction work that they have been financially unable to purchase the right of way and for that reason this Department has advanced them the money and has purchased it for them.

In view of these facts, I am inclined to think the Commissioners have taken the right stand in not wishing to advance more money for the improvement of forest roads in Lincoln County.

Yours very truly, W. R. Eccles, State Highway Engineer.

The Democratic platform is the shortest, the clearest and the best advanced by either of the two parties in recent times. On prohibition repeal and Volstead modification it goes all the way. On economic issues in the main it is boldly progressive. As a whole and as a major party platform it is unique in its clarity and its courage.—Washington News.

Oregon Slashes Auto Allowance

Santa Fe, July 16.—Oregon has fixed 5 cents as the maximum amount to be paid a mile for the use of private owned cars in state business, according to a letter received by the state highway department. The maximum per diem allowance is $3.65 the letter says.

Those figures compare with 12 1/2 cents a mile maximum allowed for travel by private car in New Mexico and $5 per diem within the state.

By reducing the mileage rate from 6 to 5 cents a mile the state saves $3,600 annually the letter says.

As a reward for righteous conduct here on earth, the promise of an opportunity to spend eternally playing a harp doesn't attract much attention nowadays.

What the world wants today is a new class-in model with plenty of gas and parking space.

Barker Prefers constructive program

Santa Fe.—"I am glad to see candidates announcing themselves for office," Democratic State Chairman, W. J. Barker said today in connection with John Simms' announcement for governor.

"But I believe it would be good politics to start out with a constructive program rather than with criticism of the party in power, which happens to be democratic.

"I was very much interested in statement of the most recent candidate in which he is quoted as saying, 'The democratic party is not wholly satisfied with the partisan arrangement which the present democratic administration has with the junior senator, Bronson Cutting.'"

Mr. Barker said it was well known that there is a large independent vote in the state and the party which can attract this vote usually wins.

This condition is recognized by leaders of both parties he said. "It is also a well known fact that when a man runs for office he does so expecting to win."

Commenting on Simms' platform, Barker says, "His first proposition to reduce taxes on real estate will appeal to all property owners. "That is what people want,

Straight-out and Honest

This Democratic plank, a simple and clear-cut and direct, would give a new aspect to the whole Presidential campaign. Great numbers of Republicans have expressed their disgust with the uncertain sound of their own party's trumpet on the question of prohibition. They have said that they long for a straight-out and honest utterance. President Butler went so far as to predict that if the Democrats would come out openly and courageously for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, they would attract 6,000,000 votes from the Republican camp.—New York Times (Ind. Dem.)

A Noble Experiment

The Democratic party has gone far across the Rubicon on the question of repeal of the eighteenth amendment. It not only commits itself and its candidates to repeal, but "pending repeal," it demands immediate modification of the Volstead act. . . . It is a noble experiment. . . . The platform adopted by the Democratic national convention has the merit of clearness and brevity. It bears the marks of master hands.—Washington Post (Rep.)

Last Words

Last words of dying persons are like the mutterings in a delirium. Why then are they so treasured? asks Dr. J. Shelton Horsley in an article in Hygeia Magazine. The melodramatic picture of relatives hovering over a deathbed is based on the wrong conception. Last words are of no value when they come from a mind numbed by approaching death. It is better to remember the words spoken while the person was in a healthy mental and physical state.

The figure exceeded by 10,000 units domestic production for the month and was within ten per cent of the reported sales for May, Mr. Knudsen said.

second ten days, 18,544 units, and in the last ten days, when the new tax was in effect, 12,367 units. Normally the last period of the month is the largest, Mr. Knudsen said.

All sections of the country showed a favorable comparison in the last ten days with the first ten days of the month.

On Treasury Estimates

"Furthermore, it is perfectly clear that Mr. Mills has known all along that his figures were misleading and that the budget would not be balanced if all treasury recommendations were accepted, because his estimates of income and expenditures were off by not less than a billion dollars."

On G. O. P. Platform

"What I object to is that the Republican party, assembled in a national emergency, had no program with which to meet it. Where a positive stand is taken in the platform it is on the wrong side. Where the issue is controversial the party takes no stand at all, but lies recumbent on a feather bed of pious hopes."

The Republican platform is 9,000 words of self-satisfaction, evasion, and blindness, blindness to the only important question of the hour: how shall we establish economic security and social justice in our country?"

On The Democratic Party

"The greatest mistake the Democrats can make is to behave like the Republicans. They can be as different as possible from the Republicans by stating a progressive, truly Democratic program in unmistakable terms"

President Hutchins then presented a platform of 560 words, the main features of which are reflected in the platform later adopted by the Democratic Convention. The planks included the promotion of peace, the revival of international trade, reduction of the cost of government, intelligent farm relief, sound banking, elimination of special privileges, and the regulation of monopolies.

All of these are dealt with in the Democratic National platform, together with President Hutchins' advocacy of a Constitutional amendment repealing the 18th amendment.

The Young Democrats of America had an attendance of more than 700 at their dinner, which was regarded as an auspicious event in the beginning of their campaign for a million or more members before the election.

Scientists have figured it out that the oil supply of the earth will be exhausted in a few hundred years. The prospect should not be alarming. Things move so rapidly these days that it is possible most of the uses of oil will have disappeared in a few hundred years and something more efficient will have taken its place. It is unreasonable to believe that we will still be driving automobiles that will make only 20 miles on a gallon of gasoline. In a hundred years we will drive our cars on electric energy pulled out of the air as the radio waves is nowadays and all wearing parts will be constructed of anti-friction metal which will need no oil. When the need has presented itself human genius has always met it.

We believe that the Ninth Wonder of the World should be reserved for the first piece of constructive work to be done by a critic. The man who does things not only are required to overcome the natural obstacles to progress, but they are also required to fight against the senseless criticism of the crowd who successfully evade responsibility.

"What we don't know won't hurt us" is the doctrine of the flippant and irresponsible. It is untrue. The greatest tragedies of life are brought about because we do not know, experience teaches but too often in gaining experience the mischief has been done.

Transportation Methods
The extremes of transportation methods are to be encountered at a certain Cuban airport, where the most modern of airplanes land and at the same time supplies are brought to the place by an ox team, which is of the same type as was in use for a century or more. The vehicle is a crude lumbering affair, with wheels cut from a solid tree trunk.

Simply Old Superstition
The word "lunatic" comes from the Latin word "luna," meaning moon, and it is a old superstition that the moon has a direct effect upon the brain of human beings, hence the superstition that sleeping in the moonlight causes blindness, insanity and kindred calamities. This has long since been disproved by scientific investigation.

Man Still Gropes

Vainly for Truth
I told a philosopher once that all the other philosophers would have to go out of business if one of them should happen to discover the truth. It is true that we have acquired a great deal of material knowledge in recent years, but so far as knowledge of the truth itself is concerned, I cannot see that we are any nearer to it now than our less imaginative ancestors were when they cracked each other's skulls with stone hatchets. It is easy, and just now rather fashionable, to say that there is no soul, but we do not know whether there is a soul or not. If a man is a materialist, or mechanist, or whatever he likes to call himself, I can see for him no escape from belief in a futilely so prolonged and complicated and diabolical and ungrateful as to be worse than absurd; and as I do not know that such a tragic absurdity is not a fact, I can only know my native inability to believe that it is one.

There is nothing in the thought of annihilation that frightens me; for it would be, at the worst, nothing more terrible than going to sleep at the end of a long day, whether a pleasant or a painful one, or both. But if life is only what it appears to be, no amount of improvement or enlightenment will ever compensate or atone for what it has inflicted and endured in ages past, or for what it is inflicting and enduring today.—Edwin Arlington Robinson in Red Book.

Feels Stronger Than Ever
Just to prove to any doubtful man or woman that Kruschen Salts is the SAFE way to reduce—let us take the letter of Mr. F. J. Fritz of Cincinnati, Ohio, recently received. He writes: "I've tried extreme dieting, getting up exercises with very little results—but the results from Kruschen are almost incredible. In 3 months I reduced from 245 to 179 pounds and feel stronger than ever—no more wheezing or gasping for breath—friends say I look 100% better." Bear in mind, you fat man, that there is danger in too much fat—try the safe way to reduce—one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning—cut down on fatty meats and sweets—one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle—get it at any drugstore in the world.

Economy Measures Under Consideration

Santa Fe, July 16.—Savings of approximately $2,060,000 in governmental expense could be made by a special session of the legislature according to a schedule submitted to Gov. Seligman by the special and sub-committees of the federation of taxpayers association here Friday. The governor may call the session. The committee recommended that Seligman go over the proposed legislation for tax relief with his legal adviser and a member of the sub-committee and determine which of the proposals he could support. It is the Governor's plan to study the committee's recommendations, endorse certain features of it if he believes it for the benefit of the state, and then back the committee in its efforts for tax relief if the legislative members will agree to vote for the bills advocated.

The governor plans to limit the number of days the legislature can be held to three or four, if that is possible. The Law limits the session to 30 days.

Before giving the committee his final decision, the governor wishes to call in the representatives of the livestock industry, agricultural, homebuilding, bankers, etc., and get their views on the proposed legislation.

The committee however, urged the need for immediate decision since the legislature should act in time for county assessors to make up their tax rolls in conformity with the new legislation.

Reduction of ten per cent in county salaries, $60,000; reduction in state appropriations on ten per cent basis, and other expenditures in proportion.

Besides making suggestions for the special session, the committee intends to work on plans to submit to the regular session of the legislature next January.

Suggestions made to the governor Friday are only tentative and from the suggestions the governor may select all or part on which to base his special call.

The governor himself urged that the tax problem be gone into thoroughly and if all necessary relief could not be obtained at the special session, the work be carried through until the regular session.

The governor said that all educational institutions should be brought under one board as an economy measure and that all penal institutions should also be placed under one board.

He urged legislation regulating expenditures possible in the land office. The law provides 20 per cent for operating expenses and at times this has amounted to $400,000, he said, with nothing to prevent the commissioner from paying his clerks $500 per month.

The department has operated on about three per cent instead of 20, however.

The $8,000,000 delinquent taxes should be wiped out, he said, as only about ten per cent is collectible. It should not be carried on the books as an asset any longer.

The governor declared he believed a great saving could be made by pruning salaries in educational institutions in the higher brackets; from $4,000 on up. He expressed opposition to cutting the salaries from $100 down.

The governor expressed belief that a tremendous lobby of sheriffs, county officials and employees might try to prevent the legislature from making cuts.

Members of the association declared there would be a tremendous lobby favoring the cuts and this would more than offset the other lobby.

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Taylor of the I-X ranch were in town today.

Mrs. Calvin Carl and sons, Earl and Charles, and Mrs. Charles Smith and son, Bradley, motored to Hot Springs and Elephant Butte Dam the first of the week. Earl acted as chauffeur and consumed less than four hours in getting us there. Winding mountain roads and double curves aren't anything in his young life.

While there we met Mr. and Mrs. Heath and son, Hubert of the Herald. They are extremely pleasant, and in fact, so are all the citizens of that town. They meet you with a smile and glad hand and try to make everything pleasant. We talked to a number of the business people, and invariably hard times and the depression were mentioned, but all seemed hopeful that things would be on the up-grade soon.

Colonial Furniture
Colonial refers usually to the time before the American Revolution. New England and Virginia were settled by the English, New York by the Dutch and Louisiana by the French. The Colonial furniture of each region resembled the furniture which had been brought to that part of the country. Almost all Colonial furniture was a simplified reproduction of the more elaborate furniture made abroad. A few designs originated in this country.

Controlling the Nile
Before the flow of the Nile river was controlled by the dam, its average rise was about 3 feet. Thirty feet meant a destructive flood, while 18 feet meant poor crops and starvation. The reservoir behind the dam assures a regulated flow and makes possible the cultivation of 3,000,000 acres that were formerly desert.
