CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 12, 1932

NUMBER 3

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Claude Braum Thursday morning at the Johnson hospital a 10 pound boy.

We are in receipt of a card from Mayor McQuillen. He is having a "gorgeous" time seeing the sights and taking in the games.

Dr. R. E. Blaney leaves for Las Vegas Wednesday the 17th, where he will meet Mrs. Blaney and go to the western part of the state, returning home about August 21st.

Ruth Kelley Lala Joyce, Frances Green and Edith Dudley are at the Kenney cabin on Eagle Creek. They will have a week end house party, chaperoned by Mrs. Kelley.

Mrs. Phipps and family were pleasantly surprised Monday, when Mrs. Phipps' nephew and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ous, Howard of Oklahoma City made them a brief visit. They were enroute to Albuquerque.

Rev. L. D. Jordan went to Tularosa this morning where he will have the honor of delivering the principal address before the annual convention of the Lincoln Baptist association, which meets there today. Mr. Jordan's sermons are both eloquent and pointed and we bespeak for his hearers a rare treat.

William Booth

William Booth, aged 84, passed away Wednesday evening at 6:30 at his home in the Highroad addition. Mr. Booth had been in failing health for some time. It was thought for awhile he was improving, but two weeks ago he suffered a serious relapse and grew steadily weaker until the end.

A native of Maryland, Mr. Booth came west when only fourteen years of age; he had been a resident of this community more than twenty years. About five years ago he was united in marriage with Mrs. Imogene Smith, who survives him. He was a quiet, friendly fellow, and was known to many of the old-timers as "Uncle Billy." Mr. Booth was a public spirited citizen and until three years ago was an active worker.

Rev. L. D. Jordan, pastor of the Baptist church, conducted funeral services at the residence yesterday at 3:30, followed by interment in the local cemetery.

Mrs. Booth's father, P. G. Peters and her nephew, Jack Norton of Hope, N. Mex., attended the funeral.

The News joins other friends in extending sympathy to the bereaved widow.

Under New Management

Last Monday Mrs. B. D. Garner assumed management of the Garrard house and opened the dining room, which will be a great convenience to the roomers. Mrs. Garner invites the public to give her a trial and promises them appetizing meals and all the courteous attentions within her power.

Billy Allen Has Operation

Billy Allen, the small son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam G. Allen is in the Johnson hospital recovering from an operation for appendicitis, which was performed last Sunday morning, at an early hour.

Griffin Gleanings

Delayed from last week: Mrs. Ino Wilson and family spent Sunday with the Hefner family.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Watson of Canyon, Texas were week end visitors at the Glovers. Mr. Glover and sons returned home Sunday afternoon from the Texas harvest fields. We are glad to have them back.

The play party Saturday night at Mrs. Ino Foster's was well attended and all had a good time.

The business men and women of Carrizozo came out to the Griffin community Sunday afternoon and extended a glad hand.

Mrs. Ella Barclay and Tony Andrews, sister and brother of Mrs. J. M. Frame, arrived from Lubbock, Texas, to visit with the Frame family before Mrs. Frame's return to San Francisco. Mr.

Days to Register

There may be many residents of Lincoln county whose names do not appear on the registration lists and if you are one of these be sure to register tomorrow. The books close at 6 p. m. Don't forget to broadcast to your friends that the last Saturday in this month will be the last registration day. The only way to put your favorite candidates across is to do your bit by registering and getting your friends to register.

Chevrolet the World's Largest Builder

Nearly one out of every three new automobiles bought in the first six months of this year was a Chevrolet Six, according to registration figures for the period, which are now complete.

Latest State reports show that Chevrolet titled 215,811 new sixes in this period, while the industry as a whole was titling 655,764 new cars, giving the largest division of General Motors 32.9 per cent of the total.

This compares with 31 per cent in the same period of 1931; with 24 per cent in the first half of 1930, and with only 20 per cent in the boom year of 1929 up to midyear.

Ten years ago, when the company was getting its start in the volume car field, it obtained less than ten per cent of total business.

During the first half of 1932 Chevrolet sold and titled more cars than the next five other makes of lowest priced cars combined, the returns indicate; Chevrolet's total comparing with combined registrations of 212,115 units for the other five makes in the lowest priced field.

In its present position, it is the world's largest builder of automobiles, having obtained a higher percentage of total business so far this year than at any time in the past, even during the three of the past five full years, when Chevrolet built and sold more cars than any other manufacturer.

Double Attraction at Lyric last week

In addition to his excellent picture program last week manager Walker had a vaudeville performer to give two acts each evening from Thursday until Saturday.

Andrews was accompanied by his son.

Melvin A. Traylor, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, who charges recent runs on Chicago banks were caused by the circulation of rumors by radicals. He expressed the belief that a nation wide attempt to discredit even the strongest banks was being conducted by "Red" plotters.

Boy Scout News

An organization meeting of District No. 2 will be held at the Methodist church in Clovis at 4 p. m. Sept. 22nd. A dinner will follow.

The Scout Executive will visit the organizations at Alamogordo, Mesalero, Tularosa, and Carrizozo for organization and inspection, September 5th and 6th.

The Need of Work for Men is Acute

At the San Francisco meeting of the National Editorial Association, a message was received from Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President of the General Motors Corporation, which stated that the greatest single task confronting the world today was to find productive employment for those who are out of work. To do so, according to the news story in a San Francisco daily, it is necessary "to take things as they are, not as they should be to analyze economic facts, base action upon them, and dispel the general lack of confidence."

In every community there exists at least one opportunity to construct or improve some essential public service. Removing the menaces which are responsible for much of the loss of life by building greater safety into highways, could well be considered. Widening roadways, eliminating dangerous curves, alleviating accidents on loose gravel and dirt roads due to skidding, flying stones and dust are among the most necessary objectives.

"The need was never so great the opportunity never so plainly presented," asserts Dan B. Miller, Managing Engineer, Pacific Coast Division, the Asphalt Institute, "Men and equipment are available at unheard of prices. Materials were never so cheap. Take, for instance, the materials which are required to build the type of surfacings used by state highway departments on intermediate traffic roads—crushed rock and gravel can be bought for approximately half their usual cost; asphalts and road oils are the lowest in years."

A good motto for all states to follow is: "Build better roads now."

Dr. Gamble of El Paso was here Wednesday, and assisted Dr. Johnson in the illness of Billie Allen.

Improvements at the Golf Club

The Carrizozo Golf club is now repairing and greatly improving the greens with new oiled screened sand and we are pleased to state to the people and friends of Carrizozo that the green fees are only $1 per month for associate members. This gives access to the club and golf links any time, mornings and afternoons. It is estimated that more than eight million people are playing golf in the United States. There is no play that will compare with golf from the standpoint of health and pleasure. It makes no difference how good or how bad you play you will always find company. It is good for the old, pleasant for the young, and great for the rich and the poor. For a membership card, see the secretary. M. U. Finley, Sec.

Of course you are proud of your home town and say many nice things about her to strangers, which is proper and no more than could be expected of you. But do you ever stop to think whether or not the town should be proud of you? What nice things can be said about you and your relation to your town? What part do you have in making your town one to be proud of? Everyone can and should have a part in making his town a better town and one that all can be proud to call their home.

Some folks are able to check up on all our errors, but never mark us up for our double play.

Notice to Parents

To the Parents of all School Children: As the time for the opening of school approaches the mother of the family begins to consider whether her children are ready for the opening of school. She gives much consideration to his books and clothes. How many give any thought to the child's physical fitness for another year of school?

There is one point that this department wishes to call the attention of all parents and that is the following Public Health Law; "It shall be unlawful for any child to attend school, or for any teacher to allow such child within any school house unless so vaccinated" against smallpox. Will you not give us your cooperation by seeing that your part of above law is carried out before the opening of school? County Health Department.

"Nia! nia!" cried the excited Sarah, opening the door for the half-frozen Jim. "You are back; all well?"

Jim patted the broad back of the solicitous Ojibwa. "Cold and hungry, Sarah!" he laughed.

"Ah, you not get hurt by dose wild Jibwa? Good!" spluttered the bustling Sarah, brushing the melting snow from Jim's coat.

"No, we've won, Sarah! We've beaten Paradi!"

"Nia! n'go! You find de shaman, Jimgwak?" cried the startled cook, her small eyes, black as buttons, snapping with excitement.

"Yes, Esau's medicine was too strong for him."

While Sarah bustled herself with a hot supper for her returned master, Jim stepped across to the trade-house. He closed the slab door against the drive of wind and light snow to find Omar and Esau smoking beside the sheet-iron stove.

"Something dere for you," announced the half-breed with a nod of his black head toward the trade counter.

On the hand-hewn spruce planks lay a white envelope.

Aurore! She had written before she went south and sent it by an Indian! Jim's tanned face was radiant with the joy of the surprise. Her writing! He had never seen it! Aurore had left him her first love letter!

Conscious of the scrutiny of two pairs of black eyes at the stove, Jim thrust the letter, unread, into his pocket and left the room with a mumbled: "I'm starved—go in to eat!"

Loath to read the letter before the curious eyes of his men, Jim crossed to his quarters and entered the living room.

She had written me! And I've won, Aurore! I've come back, black-eyed succress of mine, they can't take you away from me now!" he said aloud, his voice thick with emotion, as he opened the letter.

"Dear Jim," it ran.

"You've been gone three weeks and I've been so lonely, oh, so lonely for the big gray-eyed boy who made love so beautifully that day, years ago, on the island."

Then a look, dazed, uncomprehending, drove the joy from his eyes as he read:

"But if you had cared for me as I loved you, you couldn't have gone away. You couldn't have held what you called your duty above love. Every day I have gone alone, somewhere, to fight this thing out, and always had the same answer. I know now that yours is not the mad love I've dreamed of—a love which counts no cost, knows no law. No, Jim, we made a mistake—you and I. But it was beautiful—that day of ours on the island; I'll never forget it."

Good-by, Jim!

AURORE.

The adverting eyes of Stuart lifted to stare out at the fast darkening lake. His nervous fingers opened and the letter fell to the floor.

It had come like a knife-thrust in the dark. With his heart quick with love for her she had struck him.

So it had been make-believe, that day on the island? Her eyes, her lips—had lied. For the pleasure of an August day her vanity had demanded the soul of a man, to destroy. Had he stared, it would have been no different, she would have played the game, and then, as now, cast him aside. After all, there was no heart in her. Red blood, charm, reckless courage, yes; but heart, there was none.

His lips curled bitterly at the memory of her radiant face—her kisses. Again her arms circled his neck in parting. The scent of her dark hair was in his nostrils.

But to wonder him this way! Leave this farewell for a man who had toiled and fought through the weeks with only the thought of her—the love of her, to buoy him!

Her face, her eyes, and her lips!

CHAPTER XI

Late in the night the body, which days of drudgery with pole and paddle in the race against the freeze-up had numbed with weariness, brought the successe of sleep to the tortured brain of Jim Stuart. It had been a will-o'-the-wisp, a phantom, the vision of the girl which had companioned him into the heart of Kiwedin. He had had his dream, now he once more faced reality.

In the trade-room, the following morning, Esau, Omar and Jim sat in a council-of-war.

"Did LeBlond send Paradi to the Sturgeon country?" demanded Jim of his swart counselors, who scowled in thought as their mouths emitted smoke like wet wood. "And if we think he did, do we face him with it or lie low?"

Omar filled his capacious mouth with smoke, and slowly emptied it, before replying: "We lie lak de fox een hees hole."

Esau nodded in agreement.

"I think that's the game," agreed Jim. "If he thipka Paradi went to Nipigon he won't hear what happened at Sturgeon lake until the Christmas trade. Now Esau and I start north to get the early for the first week in December. We'll need two more dog teams. We'll start this morning. Omar, for Expanse, and bring them up on the first sledding."

Omar stared in amazement at his chief. "De cano' weel freeze een, for sure. Een two-tree week we can travel de ice wil de dog," he murmured.

Jim's face darkened. "You're not afraid of being caught by the ice?"

With a shrug of his heavy shoulders the half-breed yawned and knocked out his pipe. "All right, we go now wil de wind behind us."

Down the Lake of the Sand Beaches through the gray October day traveled the canoe, seeking to reach the post far to the south before the waterways closed, while the silent sternman wondered what new folly swayed the mind of the man whose paddle tore at the sullen black water. Breaking a lane with their poles through the half-ice he breathed the winding inlet of Expanse, the voyagers who had barely nosed out ahead of the fast following freeze-up, at last paddled in to the beach at the headquarters of the company.

At their appearance in the door of the trade-house, the whistled jaw of Andrew Christie dropped.

"Well, I'll be skinned!"

"Good day, Mr. Christie," said Jim casually. "There was a matter of business that couldn't wait for sled-travel, so Omar and I took a chance."

As the inspector perceptively gave Jim a gripeless hand, his face betrayed curiously mingled with disapproval.

"Business, eh? It's about time there was some business between yeh and me beside freighting yeh supplies to be et up by yer people while the fur goes to LeBlond. Well, what's the business that brings yeh in the freeze-up? Man yeh're crazy!"

Jim met the usual Christie wall with a complaisant smile. "I've come for two dog-teams."

"Dog-teams?" Andrew Christie raised a bony hand in protest. "Two dog-teams! So yeh've wasted all this time comin' to Expanse, thinkin' I'll let yeh have two teams, did yeh?"

"No, I've wasted no time, for I'm going back with the teams!" Jim grinned into the purpled face of his irritable superior. "You gave me a year in which to double my trade, didn't you?"

"Yes! And I don't mind tellin' yeh that your successor's bin piked."

Jim's wind-burned face stiffened. For an instant his deep-set gray eyes grew dark with the anger he fought to control. "This," he thought, "this is my reward for losing her." Then, buttressed with the knowledge of his sure victory, he said mildly, "Thanks for your expression of confidence."

Evidently ashamed of the frank speaking into which his anger had led him, Christie compromised with: "What is thunder d'yeh want of these dogs?"

Briefly Jim told of his promise to the Indians to visit the Pipestone lakes in early December.

"So ye, bin up there this fall, eh?"

"Yes, it's a long story. I'll tell you later. Do I get the dogs, Mr. Christie?"

"Well, if yeh can't get 'em down for the Christmas trade, I suppose ye'll have to go after 'em."

"So, it's agreed I get two dog teams?"

"Yes."

"Thanks, I think I'll drop over and see Mary."

"Alem!"

The inspector scratched his bearded chin as he coughed. He seemed embarrassed, to the man who waited for him to speak.

"I—I wouldn't bother Mary—dow. A-hem!" Again he cleared his throat.

"I see, she's always thought pretty well of you—but we've had some news. She—ye'd better wait and go over to supper with me."

"What could she have heard?" Jim wondered, as he followed Christie into the house. "Poor Mary, if she only knew the truth!"

But the desolation in his heart numbed him to indifference to the attitude of the daughter of Andrew Christie. It mattered little to Jim Stuart what rumor the moccasin telegraph had brought from Mitawangama.

Grave faced, she met him at the door and gave him an unresponsive hand, patently avoiding his eyes, and, when she had served the men their supper, returned to the kitchen. Doubtless a highly colored version of the rescue of Aurore and his trip with Omar and Pierre to LeBlond's had reached Expanse. In his misery, however, he ignored her coolness.

After supper, in the trade-house, when he told of the ambush on the Woman river and of the banishment of Paradi, the red face of Christie beamed with satisfaction.

"Now we've got something to hold over LeBlond!" chuckled the inspector, rubbing his bony hands.

"Yes, but I don't think he knew anything about this ambush."

"Maybe not; but I've me own idea about that. Now yeh learned up on the Pipestone what's been keeping the trade from yeh?"

Behind a cloud of tobacco smoke the small eyes of Omar twinkled as he waited eagerly for Jim's reply.

"Why, the friendly Indians told us that Sunset House was supposed to be prestered with evil spirits—devils!"

"Well, I'll be skinned!" The thin lipped mouth of Christie stretched in a loud laugh. "Devils! That's pretty good!" One pale blue eye closed under a bushy brow. "Since yeh fished that gosh lookin' girl of LeBlond outta the lake and sneaked over under her father's nose to spend the day with her, I figured there was a devil among the weemen up there. But evil spirits?"

Jim's cold eyes met the other's smirk. So Aurore's Indian girl had talked! This was what Mary had heard.

"Paradi spread the tale through a medicine man that the place was haunted," Stuart explained, ignoring the insinuating grin of his chief. "But Esau convinced them that it was simply a trick to get the trade."

This was Jim's sole report of the Odyssey of the three friends to the Sturgeon valley and many a new moon was to swing above the white desert of Lake Expanse before Andrew Christie heard the story. Until the petals of the Pipestone and the Sturgeon country paked the fur-loft of Sunset House, the lips of three men were closed.

When the ice grew strong enough for sledding on the great lake, and the snow deepened in the forest, Jim and Omar would start back with the dogs; until then, they were held prisoners at the post. One windless day, a lead-hued sky blanketed the sun and the air slowly went white. The "long snows" had come.

By the early dusk six inches had fallen. Outside the trade-house two toboggan sleds, their loads covered with tarpaulin wrappers and lashed, waited for the early start, before dawn, under the stars.

At Christie's house—Jim, the clerk, McComb, and the inspector sat at their supper. Following her custom, Mary had served the men and retired to the kitchen.

"Yeh have plenty of fish on yer cache, Stuart?" demanded Christie.

"Two extra teams'll make a hole in yer supply and I don't want my dogs underfed."

"We made a big haul of whitefish and lake trout this fall; there's plenty. I'll have your dogs back here in good shape before Christmas."

"What's all that noise about over at the trade-house?" broke in McComb.

The three men stopped eating to listen. "I hear dog bells," said Jim, rising. "Don't suppose they've sent a packet through from the railroad?"

"That's just what it is," agreed Christie, rising with a mouth full of food.

Leaving the house, the three men walked through the falling snow toward the yellow glow of the trade-house windows. In front of the building the post dogs circled and snarled around a panting team, whose driver held of Christie's huskies with a heavy whip while he talked to two company Indians.

"Mail packet!" Jim surmised. "She'll get my letter, then, next week."

While the driver led his tired dogs off to be fed, the mail pouch was brought into the trade-room and eagerly opened.

Hoping against the inevitable, Jim waited as the inspector, squinting leisurely at the address, went through the pile of letters and papers dumped on the trade-counter. Fitting Miss, possibly regretting the raw brutality of the note she had sent to Sunset House, Aurore might have written—might even have softened toward the man she had so suddenly thrust from her life. He waited, hands desperately clenched, his heart stinging him with its beating. Then he stiffened as Christie picked up the last letter.

"Hani! Miss Joan McCoy, Jack-fish—"

Jim turned away to hide his dimpled face from the light of the lamp. She had gone with him. He was a fool to think that Aurore LeBlond carried pity in that wild heart of hers—pity for a former plaything of a fur trader barred far in the forest. Opening the sheet-iron stove, he dropped the letter he had written into the flames.

They returned to the inspector's quarters where Christie and McComb greedily read papers weeks old, while Stuart smoked apart with his thoughts.

He had finished his pipe and was about to turn in for the sleep he would need before the early start, when he suddenly looked up to surprise Mary Christie watching him from the doorway leading to the kitchen. The eyes of the girl, which for days had worn the cold indifference of a stranger, were now soft with pity—gentle with the sympathy of a friend.

She beckoned to him, and rising, lit at ease, he followed her to the kitchen, where she closed the door. Then he noticed that she held a Winnipeg paper.

Without a word Mary handed the sheet to the man who vainly strove to fathom her swift change of mood. "I'm so sorry, Jim," she said, quietly, "that it has come to you as well as to me."

He glanced at the sheet he held in his hands, and there, laughing up at him, was the face of Aurore LeBlond. Under it he read: "Miss Aurore LeBlond, daughter of Louis LeBlond, of the North-West Trading Company, who is to marry Bruce MacLauren, well-known Winnipeg business man."

Jim let the paper slide to the floor. So it was MacLauren, all the time! MacLauren, the smooth city man, her father's financial backer. While the three from Sunset House went north to search for Jimgwak, MacLauren had wasted no time with the girl who doubted the love of a man who could leave her.

Her eyes soft with compassion, Mary Christie watched the stricken face of Stuart.

After a space, he raised his eyes to hers. "Thank you, Mary," he said thickly. "We're getting an early start. I think I'll—"

Impossible to his surroundings, like one in a dream, he stood staring at the floor; then, with a deep breath, said: "Good-night! Good-by, Mary!"

Like a blind man he groped his way from the room.

CHAPTER XII

Stuart was usually very civil and respectful toward women, but there was one trick he delighted in playing on them, wrote Jonathan Norton Leonard in "Leak, the Life of Melameta." He had part of his establishment lighted with the same mercury vapor lamps which made things hideous in the conservatory. Near a doorway he placed a full-length mirror.

When any girl came to the house, whom Melameta suspected of being proud of her looks, he would carefully maneuver her to the doorway and then on the mercury lamps. The expression on the girl's face never failed to delight him. Reflected in the mirror, she would see herself with ghastly green skin and dark purple lips—rather as if she'd been dead for two weeks.

Melameta said this proved everything was real.

It Still Works

Tearing for special knowledge, a youth writes the Efficiency Magazine that he sometimes hears reference to the "Rule of Three." "Please," he requests, "what is it?" "Forget yesterday; work today, and plan for tomorrow," replies the sagacious editor.

As a temporary adjustment of freight rates on oil from the Wichita Falls and Electric fields, the Santa Fe railroad has granted a substantial reduction to New Mexico points. The rates apply to the Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Las Vegas territory.

Preliminary plans for setting up numerous small road projects in the state, to be financed by the initial $1,600,000 loan asked by Governor George W. P. Hunt of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, have been made by the Arizona highway department.

Approximately 23,000 acres of desert land in Yavapai county, Arizona, has been opened for entry, former service men and others with preferred rights having until Oct. 19 to file claims. The remaining unreserved land will be opened to the public for entry on Oct. 19.

Arizona may have, in effect, a lieutenant governor after the 1934 elections. States not having a lieutenant governor are in addition to Arizona: Florida, Georgia, Maine, Maryland, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Oregon, Utah, Tennessee, West Virginia and Wyoming.

More than one-fourth of the $39,351.36 spent for child welfare in Arizona during the fiscal year which ended June 30, was disbursed for Maricopa County children, according to the report filed by Mrs. George Eberle, secretary of the state child welfare board.

Planning a drive to secure a share of a million-dollar reservation road appropriation for the continuation of Highway 666 across Zuni reservation, a meeting of Gallup, St. Johns, Ariz., and Zuni representatives will be held at Gallup, N. M., preceding the Inter-Tribal Indian Ceremonial.

The highest death rates in the birth registration areas of the United States, according to a survey completed June 22 by the Bureau of Census, Washington, D. C., rate Arizona second with a percentage of 15.2. New Mexico leads all states for its population with a slightly higher rate, 15.5 per cent.

Excavation of the ruins of four levels of prehistoric American culture which are piled one on the other, will begin shortly. Smithsonian Institute scientists have completed plans to excavate in this location, which is in eastern Arizona on top of a low mesa which overlooks the Puerco River.

Arrangements have been completed for the second annual flower show of the Prescott (Ariz.) Monday Club, which will be held this year on August 26.

A new type placer mining machine at the Gold Dust properties, eight miles northeast of Hillsboro, N. M., recently constructed in Durazno, has been pronounced a success by mining men following a ten day test. The machine extracted $1,000 in gold from 1,200 yards of gravel upon sands where other methods had failed to cope with the hazards of rough areas.

Boy's Playful Pal

Just a Big Rattler

Santa Barbara, Calif.—Robert Bissell, five years old, had lost his "lizard."

For 20 minutes he importuned his mother to "come and look my lizard." Finally the mother looked.

She saw Robert wrestling with a four-foot rattlesnake. The snake was stupefied with cold.

BRAKES SAVE BOY ROPED TO TRACKS

New Brunswick, N. J.—A seventeen-year-old boy, tied to railroad tracks by robbers, went through a horrowing experience recently, but a train stopped just in time a few feet away.

The boy, Mitchell Hellelsh, stock clerk in the clothing store of J. J. Newberry, was released from his perilous position by Harry F. Bartlett, conductor of Pennsylvania train No. 3034. Hellelsh was treated for shock and severe laceration at St. Peter's hospital. His body had been slashed in 20 places, apparently with a razor blade.

He said he had gone to the store to arrange truck late at night. Three men confronted him, two young men and an older one. The latter thrust a revolver against him, while the others tied him with rope. They carried him across the river to Highland Park, where they lashed him to the tracks.

In terror, he squirmed and strained at the ropes, fearful lest a train come pounding on. He finally moved the upper part of his body away from the rails, then lost consciousness.

How long he remained there was not determined. Lights of an incoming locomotive revealed the form and the engineer brought his cab to a stop a few feet away.

Police investigation indicated the boy could not possibly have tied himself to the tracks.

More than $300 worth of stock had been stolen from the store.

Weasel Kills Rats in Jail as Crowd Cheers

Richmond, Va.—The best weasel story of the year comes from Halifax county, Virginia.

A weasel effected the delivery of 40 inmates of the jail there. The inmates in this case, however, were rats, and they were brought out one at a time by the weasel—all dead.

A prisoner first discovered the weasel at his deadly work and a crowd gathered to watch him.

The weasel didn't seem to mind the crowd and paid no attention to the cheers, steadily following the same path each time he made the trip from his home to a jail window. The animal made 40 trips, and 40 rats were no more.

Man Keeps Vow, Finds Killer Sought 15 Years

Salt Lake City—Fifteen years ago Policeman George Phillips' best friend was killed here by John Anselmo, and Phillips vowed he would never rest until the slayer was brought to justice. Anselmo was tried and convicted but escaped from prison.

Phillips quietly began a man hunt by mail that lasted throughout the years. The other day his quest was successful. He had located Anselmo in Italy, where the man is serving a prison sentence. As soon as the killer is released he will be returned to Utah, where he will be tried again.

"Victim" Appears at Lake During Search for Body

Oakland, Calif.—While police were dragging a lake for his body after ending suicide notes bearing his name, William De Marzio, who said he was from East Dedham, Mass., walked up to watch the operations and was arrested.

De Marzio denied he wrote the suicide notes, which asked that his mother be notified at East Dedham, but admitted having written 30 pages of a manuscript headed, "The Murder at Dedham," found in a bundle near the notes.

Turtle Dove Replaces Nebraskan's Alarm Clock

Columbus, Neb.—Herman Becher, supervisor of Platte county, has put his alarm clock on the shelf for the summer. His turtle dove, which caws every day at 6 a. m., has become so content with a cage that it will not leave. The dove, nursed back to life by one of Becher's daughters after it had been knocked out of a nest by a windstorm, has become a pet.

Bites Wife's Ears

Krisevac, Jugoslavia.—Jealous of her beauty and the attentions paid her by other men, a peasant of this village bit off both ears of his comely young wife. When arrested he was indignant, contending that police had no right to interfere in his private affairs.

Tooth Trap Slayer

Fall River, Mass.—When he wrote to the government asking for a pension, William Brown explained he intended to use the money to buy false teeth. Officials looked up his record—and he was arrested for the slaying of his wife 14 years ago.

She Hadn't Forgotten: She's Written Me! And I've Won, Aurore!

no different, she would have played the game, and then, as now, cast him aside. After all, there was no heart in her. Red blood, charm, reckless courage, yes; but heart, there was none.

His lips curled bitterly at the memory of her radiant face—her kisses. Again her arms circled his neck in parting. The scent of her dark hair was in his nostrils.

But to wonder him this way! Leave this farewell for a man who had toiled and fought through the weeks with only the thought of her—the love of her, to buoy him!

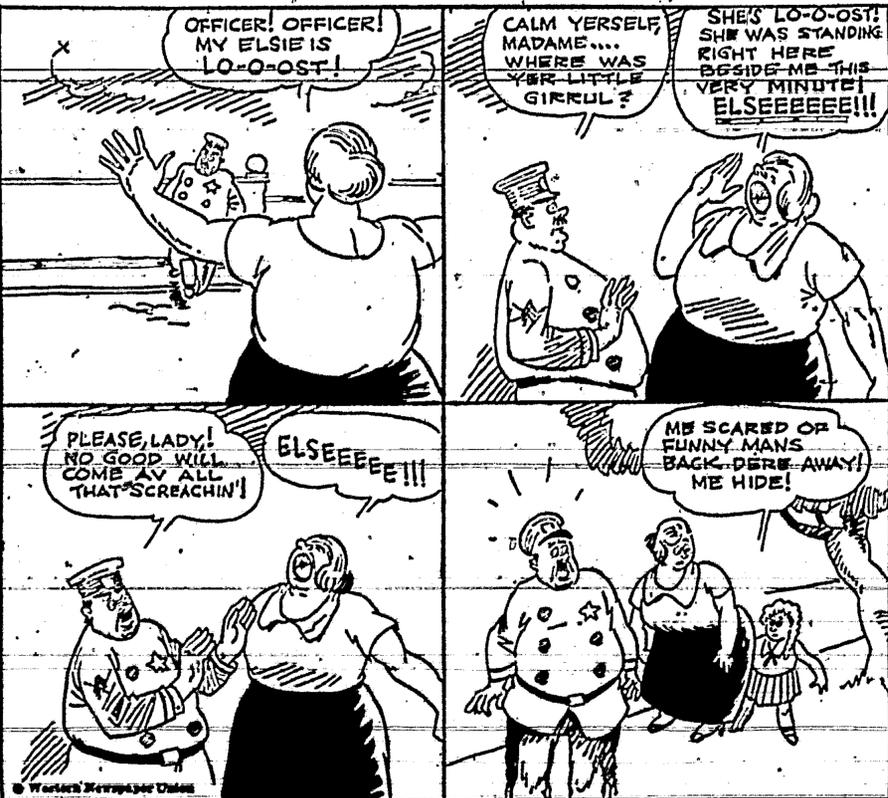

Her face, her eyes, and her lips!

The ranking according to the population of the states is almost reversed compared to the ranking with regard to area. The states are ranked according to area, as follows: Texas, California, Montana, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Colorado, Wyoming, Oregon, Utah, Minnesota, Idaho, Kansas, South Dakota, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Missouri, Washington, Georgia, Florida, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Arkansas, North Carolina, Alabama, New York, Louisiana, Mississippi, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Tennessee, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Maine, South Carolina, West Virginia, Maryland, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut, Delaware, Rhode Island and District of Columbia. According to the census population of 1930 they rank as follows: New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Texas, California, Michigan, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Missouri, Indiana, North Carolina, Wisconsin, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Minnesota, Iowa, Virginia,

To Water Desert Land

The great dam at Assuan across the Nile river and 531 miles south of Cairo, is now being heightened for the second time. When completed in 1934, the capacity of the Assuan reservoir will store five billion cubic meters of Nile water, which will be utilized for the year around irrigation of thousands of acres of land in the northern delta.

"Wonderful, the things that are invented—horseless cars, wireless telegraph, power without smoke—
"One thing more is needed."
"What is that?"
"Dowry without a bride."—Vancouver Province.

After 4,000 Years

A great cemetery has been discovered by an expedition working at Tepe Hissar, near Damghan, Persia. Scores of graves have been opened, revealing the remains of a people some 4,000 years old. Their racial origin is unknown, but it is possible that they form a connecting link between India and Mesopotamia. "It is an awe-inspiring sight," says Doctor Schmidt, the leader of the expedition, "to look upon the remains of a hundred people, dead ages ago, exposed with their mortuary equipment to the sunlight, in one great necropolis. Thus we found them in the main mound at Tepe Hissar."

Impediment

Women said—

You can't have snowy white clothes without rubbing

BUT they hadn't tried the New Oxydol that makes 50% more suds

MADE BY THE MAKERS OF IVORY SOAP

Richer, longer lasting suds—that's why the New Oxydol can safely float dirt out of clothes and hold it out so no rubbing is needed. Oxydol suds don't collapse and let the dirt fall back on the clothes. Rinses clean, softens water. Fine for dishes, too.

The Ring

BY JANNIS PARKER

(Copyrighted by Jannis Parker, 1932)

SHE lay on the Indian blanket she had bought from an old squaw in Reno, and the slim wedding band from her right hand to the left hand then back again, thereby confusing the man, hidden in the sumac, who watched her avidly.

His painter eyes loved the set. A grove picketed by tall trees, a willow girl in white reclining on a bright blanket.

He completed the picture, he with his shock of jet hair against the flaming sumac, his bright blue eyes riveted spellbound on the unsuspecting girl. Under the sustained pressure of his moccasined foot a twig snapped.

"I thought you were in Europe," she spoke in a throaty monotone, her creamy cheeks and neck hotly tinged.

"I was." There was an awkward pause. "Can't you remain awhile? It can't be called collusion now that we're nicely divorced."

"I can think of something," planting himself squarely on the blanket. "First, who told you I'd gone abroad?"

"So you still see him?" he snapped. "Don't be ridiculous, Ronald. Andy is my adopted brother."

"He forgot that," he revolved past events. "All right—the man loved you—he couldn't help it. But he could have helped lording around! He with his legal mind framing situations and buttoning them on me! Then gooding you till you saw things that weren't there. Why did you seek his advice? If you wanted to lose me why didn't you tell me?"

"Because he wanted you himself he imported a fabric of lies to hold over your vision and distort it. He picked his time when I was slaving on that fresco order, spending every minute with my model. You should have been your usual sane self and realized an unknown painter doesn't reap orders like that every day."

"You might have let me know when you dug me back to the world's other women."

"What do you mean?" "Isn't it customary to let a fellow know when you're through with him? When the matrimonial bond is severed shouldn't an impressive document go forth?"

"Never mind," he continued tenderly, his tone went the blood surging up her neck. "I never wanted to know."

He sighed and rose heavily to his feet. "Maybe you're right. Reminiscing isn't so good. Instead of switching that poor ring around why not throw it away? Why, Ann! You're crying!"

In an instant he was on his knees, had gathered her quivering form close. "Ann—Ann!"—it was his pet name for her—"darling, don't leave like that, you'll wear yourself out!"

"I've done something terrible!" she sobbed. "No took his big handkerchief and mopped her eyes. 'Sweetheart, we're both in a fog. Pull yourself together, dear, you're marrying me again tonight. I don't want to take a woman to the altar who's crying her heart out.'"

"But Ann, muddled up in her own straining confession, hadn't heard. 'Ronny, I couldn't get it on non-support. You provided beautifully. You actually spoiled me.'"

He stroked her hair. "I'll provide better in the next world. Artists aren't appreciated till they die."

"I couldn't get it on cruelty! And I knew it wasn't another woman. Although I could have clawed out that Gertrude's eyes the way she oozed you."

The Republican strategy seems to be that anything that is not reactionary is radical. Under the present leadership of the party there are no such words in the Republican lexicon as liberalism or progressivism.

We do not see any occasion to be greatly alarmed by the drift of population to the cities. The tide will turn when the time comes. When there is a surplus of labor in the cities wages will decline and when there is a dearth of producers on the farm, the prices of foodstuffs will advance and make farming more attractive with the result that more people will engage in it.

Hog Price Rise due to Shortage

Washington, Aug.—Average prices of farm products received at the farms as of date July 15 advanced five points from June 15 as a result of an upturn in the prices paid for hogs, cattle, eggs and cotton, and minor advances of five other agricultural commodities, according to the monthly report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The report further says:
"Hog prices advanced about 50 per cent; eggs, 13 percent, and cotton, 11 percent. These advances were partly offset by continued declines in prices for small grains. Wheat, came within three-tenths of a cent of reaching the lowest price per bushel recorded during the period of 1908 to date, while farm prices of oats, barley and rye dropped to new record low points for the same period."
The increase in the price of hogs is attributed to "an unusually seasonal reduction in marketing and an indicated decrease in the spring pig crop." In the West North Central States a shortage of hogs is reported. In other words, the law of supply and demand is again at work, despite political "stabilization" schemes.

The general index of prices, however, which is 57 per cent of the pre-war average, is still 22 points below a year ago and less than half the July average for the preceding five years.

He is a member of the Grange, and told me if there were a Farmers' Union near him he would be a member. He understands and believes in our National Farmers' Union legislative program. All this is a very good background for a presidential candidate. In his acceptance speech in Chicago given to the delegates who nominated him he developed and elaborated on the agricultural and unemployment planks in a way that shows he will interpret them very liberally in behalf of the common people of the country."
Hoover—"Unconscious ly Hoover has come to a conviction of judgment that all things small are uneconomic. He believes in big-unit farming as against small home-owning farmers. He believes in merchandising on a large scale as against the small-town merchant. He believes in big banking institutions as against the little home-

Today our parks truly deserve the name of playgrounds. Each year has seen new roads built and new places made available to the motorist, until it is now possible to reach almost every section over smooth highways, which are well cared for and made dustless by oiling.
A visit to any one of the national parks and monuments is an education as well as a pleasure and should prove to be attractive to more and more people each year as long as the present progressive policy of adding new oiled roads is continued. The cost has been more than repaid by the benefit which has been gained.

Nearly every community has within itself the elements that make for its success if they are properly exploited and the benefits allowed to accrue toward the upbuilding and enrichment of the community. If all the money earned in the community were re-invested in the community, there would be plenty to finance every local project. The practice of sending the money out of town to enrich the big cities and develop some one else's industry and some one else's oil fields and turn some one else's wheels is what keeps many good American towns down and helps to build up the big centers.

Every community the size of our town wastes enough money during the year to finance a good band, to employ a good musical director, to promote community singing with all its instructive beneficial results and to put on a high grade lecture course and chautauq.

There is a theory held by some that the world owes them a living. Theoretically this may be true, but the world does not hand out that living to the person without faith to believe he is able to win. Success only goes to the person who puts the dynamics of faith in his efforts to collect. There is almost nothing that one can not accomplish if he has faith.

THAT WISE OLD BIRD

Peter had been a much prized member of Jacob Benn's bird and pet shop for a long time now. So long, in fact, that hardly anyone remembered the day he had arrived. Jacob remembered if anyone asked him about it. He had been sitting in the front of his shop thinking how very dull business was when a man came up to him carrying Peter in a cage. The man was pale and hungry and frightened looking.

"You buy my parrot?" the man had said to Jacob. "I poor man, cannot feed both him and myself."

Jacob had been very surprised that such a poor man possessed such an unusually fine and rare bird as Peter turned out to be, but taking pity on him he had bought him for a few dollars and the man had gone on his way.

Again today Jacob was sitting in front of his shop, sunning himself. Peter was happily chattering in his cage doing the same thing. Around the busy street corner came a man and a woman arm in arm. Suddenly Peter straightened in his cage and grew very angry. "Stop thief! Stop thief! Morris stop that thief!" Peter continued to shriek this excitedly. Jacob had never heard him use these words before, but apparently the man and woman had for they quickened their pace and hurried down the street. Jacob watched them and putting two and two together, he reckoned to a policeman who had also heard Peter's excited call. Peter was still chattering after them, more excitedly than ever and he was dancing about in his cage in a pretty fury. "Stop thief! Stop thief! Morris stop that thief!" The policeman came rushing over. "Say," he said, "that bird knows something. When did he start making that racket?"

"Just as that man and woman came in sight," Jacob said, getting excited himself.

"That's all I wanted to know," said the policeman. "If they pass here again get them into your shop. We're after those two and it looks as if we'd have to put your bird on the detective squad."

A few days later when Jacob was wondering what had taken place the policeman again walked up to his shop and handed him a check for five thousand dollars. Jacob did not know what to do with it. "Well," he said, "Big check. Whose is it?"

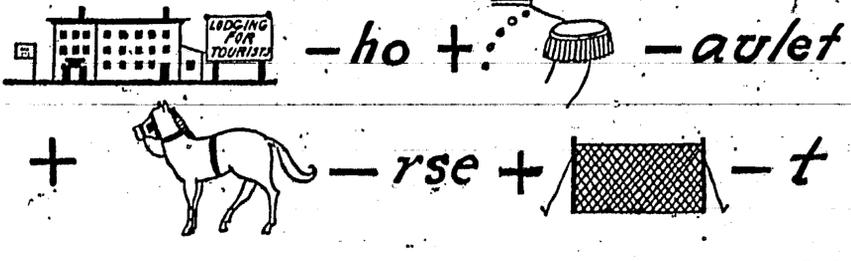

"Yours," said the policeman. "Or maybe we should say your parrot's. It really belongs to him I suppose. Those people he got so excited about the other day were the ones we've been looking for for about ten years. They robbed this city and its residents of over half a million dollars and the last place they tackled was where this bird lived. I got in touch with that place the other day after I left here, and Mr. Banks who owned the bird before you got him—the was stolen and sold by his gardener while they were away) said Mrs. Banks was shrieking that 'Stop thief, stop thief,' when she discovered the robbers' work. That's how the bird learned it. That's how we finally caught the thieves. So I guess you get the reward all right."

"But I will be rich, rich," exclaimed Jacob. And he was still saying it as the policeman disappeared, and Peter resumed his sun bath.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

by WALTER TRUMBULL

A New Yorker interested in politics poured "This into my car," and while I get the idea, I refuse to be responsible for his accuracy. "Twenty-five thousand votes," he said, "will elect Senator Borah. These votes are cast by citizens living something like 2,000 miles from Washington. Hundreds of thousands of votes are required to elect a senator from New York state. These votes are cast within 250 miles of Washington. Borah has very few constituents calling on him in Washington. He has plenty of time to devote to affairs of state. New York senators, if they saw all who wished to see them, never would get onto the senate floor or have time to attend a committee meeting. When compared with the labors of a New York senator, the labors of Senator Borah are as those of the grasshopper compared to the ant."

Gen. Charles G. Dawes has a great reputation for speaking his mind. He does it at home in Chicago, when he comes to New York, and even when he is in Washington. In a recent appearance before the house and means committee of the house, he said to one of the members, "Congressman, I make a habit of refusing to talk about something I don't know about. And that's a damn good idea for some congressmen, if you want it."

The New York Central building is literally built on cushions, which are designed to absorb the vibration caused by the rumbling of railroad trains beneath it. When you consider the size of the building, you begin to realize what an architectural feat this was. But one of the tenants said the other day that the cushions might take up the train vibrations, but that he wished the builders had put in a couple of extra cushions to take up the jolt of the stock market.

John Golden recently was in a minor automobile accident. He claims it was first-class smashup, but it happens that about the only cuts he suffered were on the inside of his nose. This required a delicate operation, involving four stitches. The trouble is the stitches are invisible, unless somebody looks for them with a searchlight. If they were on the outside, John Golden might get some sympathy.

When Amelia Earhart Putnam was

WHY NOT GO SOUTH

"Yes, Willie, when the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock it was dreadfully cold and they suffered terribly. 'Why didn't they go to Florida for the winter!'" driving in from the Putnam home in Connecticut to meet Hernal Malchen and take off on the first hop of her flight, she was in a hurry and drove a bit fast. A motorcycle cop, patrolling the Boston Post Road, and they are about as thick as black bean soup up there just now—stopped her. He was going to give her a summons. She didn't want to take it because she didn't expect to be in the United States when it was returnable. Nor did she want to tell the officer where she was going and why she was in a hurry. So she just used her natural charm and finally talked him out of it.

They tell me that Paul Whiteman once became great friends with a man who had made a lot of money in a manufacturing business, and that he agreed to give a benefit concert in the man's home town. The man was very excited and said he would attend to all the publicity. When Whiteman and his band arrived at the little town, they found all the local belles selling tickets and the main street adutter with flags. They hadn't the faintest idea what the worthy cause was for which they were to play. They made discreet inquiries and found that they were aiding in the establishment of a sort of municipal fish hatchery.

Capt. Ashley McKinley reminds me that one of the first and one of the greatest of women flyers was Ruth Law. When the war came, she actually tried to enlist in the army flying corps.

The KITCHEN CABINET

FEEDING THE CHILDREN

THESE are few parents who are not troubled and many who are not vastly worried over the problem of proper food for their children. It is often hard to induce children to eat foods that they should eat, with any willingness. Our physicians today tell us (those who are making a study of child feeding) that bulk in the diet is absolutely essential and much of the digestive trouble is due to a lack of cellulose in the diet. While we need bulk in our food we may with it get the mineral matters which are so essential to a good blood stream.

Spinach, Swiss chard, broccoli, turnip tops, beet tops, dandelion mustard, cress, cowslip greens, are all fine bulky foods; they all carry iron and other elements so needed to keep the blood in good condition.

The idea of eating spinach and such greens should be early taught the child. To make them attractive, appetizing and so served that they will eat them without protest is the mother's problem.

Take large cabbage leaves, parboil until they are well wilted, then wrap some cooked greens, chopped meat and plenty of seasoning with a few bread crumbs in the cabbage leaves, tie up or skewer with tooth picks and place in a baking dish. Baste with beef broth or butter and the liquid in the pan and cook until the cabbage is tender. Remove the strings and serve piping hot.

A spoonful or two of spinach can be used in many dishes, and the child will thus get his greens without hearing about it.

Find Slayings Cost 90 Cents in Spain

Madrid.—Murders have been procurable at 90 cents apiece, according to the discovery of a committee investigating social conditions in the south of Spain, which ascertained that gunmen received 10 pesetas apiece, or 90 cents in American money, for "doing a job."

Twenty-two of the worst "pistoleros," youngsters most of them, have been instrumental in creating a fallacious appearance of social unrest in southern Spain by intimidating workers into abandoning jobs en masse.

The government is fast eliminating them. Whether this action will lead to an advance in the price of homicides has not been disclosed.

How It Started

"Savoir Faire"

THIS is one of the most popular of foreign phrases which have found a permanent and popular place in our language. That is if it is one of those expressions that is so frequently used with practically no consciousness that it is foreign, that it may really be said to have a place in our language!

When a person is said to have "savoir faire" we mean he has poise, tact, the ability to make himself at home anywhere and to handle any situation in which he finds himself.

The French words "savoir faire" mean literally "to know how to do," and their first recorded use in the general and broader sense in which we now find them constantly in English context is in Sir Walter Scott's "Guy Mannering," published in 1815.

Before and After Six o'Clock Modes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TO SUM it up briefly, modish cottons tell the major part of fashion's story for summer. And what "airs" they are putting on now that the smart set is arraying itself in fine cottons for the very most formal before and after six o'clock occasions on the social calendar.

The costumes pictured herewith "speak louder than words" as to how cottons are carrying on in the environs of high society at the present moment. It would be difficult to conceive of anything smarter to wear for dining, dancing and calling during the afternoon hours than the swagger outfit illustrated to the right. No, my dear, the stunning little frock is not a printed silk as one might naturally suppose it to be, but guess what! It is a printed pique, if you please. Now, "ain't that sum'n" worth "thinking through" when it comes to planning what to wear to the next smart afternoon affair dated in your engagement book?

It is interesting to note that the pique used for this good-looking dress is the fine-rib kind, for it is as stylish as are the wide-wale types. A striking black rambling design is imprinted on a background in light beige. A charming scalloped-all-around little jacquette of black transparent velvet accents the note of elegance which pervades every detail of this ensemble. Right through the summer style program we are being made to feel that life in the world of fashion is largely a matter of just one cunning little velvet jacket after another. The model pictured is really one of the most youthful and flattering types brought out this season.

As to the color scheme of this costume, it is faultless. The hat tones in most artfully, being a beige straw, with a red flower motif at the front just to give a splash of vivid color. By the way, had you heard that it's the latest to pose a flower or bouquet of flowers at the front of the crown—ever so new and chic looking and it is the style.

There is really no limit as to how formal pique may be. Leading couturiers are making some of their loveliest evening gowns of monotone pastel pique, with such distinctive details as the new shoulder butterfly effects via ruching of self-fabric or in some instances bands of flowers formed of the material, with perhaps a full ruching outlining the hemline of the skirt.

As to organdie, and similar sheers also nets and lacy cotton meshes, they are flourishing in the evening festivities as never before.

Those who sense the last word in fashion express no end of enthusiasm for mousseline de soie, because of its being so exquisitely sheer and dainty. The delightful creation shown to the left is Vera Borea's (Countess de Regoll), who belongs to the younger school of French designers. It is Mme. Borea herself who posed for this photograph. Note how prettily the hemline of this very full skirt flounces rows of delicately wrought shirtings. The bodice is likewise daintily adorned. The jacquet, which is made of chartrreuse transparent velvet, also makes shirring a decorative theme. In that its collar and short puff sleeves show this treatment.

SMART SPORTS TOGS SUGGEST MILITARY

There are still no fashions that have endeared themselves to all Paris as much as those which suggest the military. Coats with shoulders like the epaulets of an officer's uniform, caps in the dull pale blue worn by the French army, gold buttons and anchors and other insignia that suggest the navy—all these are still favorite fashions of young people in Paris.

Sports clothes, especially take frequently the military line and color. There is much blue and bright red, many combinations of red, white and blue, and many brass buttons about the suits and coats and dresses that are designed for golf, for yachting, for the beach and for general country wear.

Velvet Is Latest Entry in Midsummer Fashion

The arrival of velvet as a midsummer fashion was one of the surprises of the recent group of fashion collections shown by the Paris dressmakers to foreign buyers and members of the press. Lightweight velvet, woven in new textures as fine as other silk materials, was used to make dresses designed to wear even in the warmest summer months.

Velvet raincoats were shown by some houses. Velvet jackets for day-time town wear, long traveling coats of velveteen and many evening costumes were among the velvet fashions introduced during the collections.

The newer velvets are of two varieties—those which are firm and stiff, and those which are soft and supple and fall in deep folds. Mirande shows an evening cape, knee length, made of the stiff velvet.

Smart Handbag Fiber Cover Can Be Washed

One of the most practical as well as smart handbags seen recently has a fabric cover that can be removed for washing. The cover is of pique or linen, and comes in most any color you like. Of course, it solves the problem of keeping the white handbag clean.

WHITE HAT VOGUE

It does not matter whether you wear a light frock or a dark one, Paris says to "top it" with an all-white hat. Quite recently the best modistes are turning to fabrics for inspiration. The model pictured is a white ribbed transparent velvet beret-like turban. It has a rolled brim coming down low on the right side. A chic bow of self-material trims it.

Newest Frocks Are Cut on Bias With Few Seams

The triangle line is more and more in evidence in the new dresses. Bias cutting—so important in getting soft, smooth surfaces with as few seams as possible—marks a big majority of all frocks that are not in the tailleur class.

The double bias line, which ends by forming a triangle, appears to be the distinguishing feature of many of the new afternoon dresses.

Lines Coats Top coats of heavy linen tailored with all the precise attention to details that mark coats of woolen fabrics are worn by the smartest young persons with linen or cotton dresses.

Cut Manure Losses by Right Methods

Distinct Loss in Leaving It Uncovered.

By E. C. BLAIR, Extension Agronomist, North Carolina State College, WNU Service.

Manure from the barn lot or cow shed piled out-of-doors and left uncovered during summer is not only a breeding place for troublesome flies but loses considerable of its plant-food value. Now that the depression makes it necessary to get the most from every pound of farm fertilizer, it might be wise to scatter this manure in summer if no good place is available for holding it over until next winter.

I can cite the case of an experiment made in another state where barnyard manure mixed with bedding and left out-of-doors in a pile from April 1 to October 1, lost 41 per cent of its nitrogen, 47 per cent of its phosphoric acid, 76 per cent of its potash and 57 per cent of its total weight. Cow manure exposed in a similar manner lost 41 per cent of its nitrogen, 19 per cent of its phosphoric acid, 8 per cent of its potash and 49 per cent of its total weight.

Losses are greatly reduced by leaving the manure in the stables, where it is well tramped and not exposed to the weather. The smallest losses occur, however, when manure is not allowed to accumulate but is spread out over the land every few days. This also reduces the fly population of the farm.

Consider Clover Seed Production This Fall

That clover seed is the source of noxious weeds on many farms and that the best way to prevent infestation with these weeds is through the use of home grown clover seed is the opinion of R. A. Moore, agronomist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

A field of clover should be examined for clover dodder, curled dock, buckhorn, Canada thistle, and other noxious weeds before it is allowed to stand for seed. Fields which contain more weeds than can be hand-pulled should be cut early the second time for hay to prevent the weed seed from maturing, Moore declares.

In order to determine whether the second crop should be cut for hay or seed it is necessary to estimate the probable seed production which, according to Mr. Moore, is when the crop has just passed the full bloom stage. If the stand is good and 25 to 30 seeds are found per head, the crop will yield nearly three bushels of seed an acre.

Mr. Moore advises that the proper time to cut the crop for seed is between September 1 and October 10. Out the crop for seed when the heads are brown, the flower stalks yellow, and the seed a violet color. If the crop is allowed to become overripe, there will be a loss of seed due to the breaking off of the heads. If cut while some of the leaves are still green, the stems will dry to better advantage.

Truck Crops After Clover

The nitrogen-gathering power of legumes is well known, but not everyone realizes the importance of making sure that this nitrogen is used after the legumes are turned under. R. C. Collier, soil specialist at the Geneva (N. Y.) station, has been making tests regarding such losses, with striking results. He finds that if no crop occupies the soil after the legumes, the losses of nitrogen may be very great, as for example, where legumes are used for orchard cover crops, early fall plowed and no crops sown until the following spring. From station experiments, it was found that when alfalfa was grown for two years, then turned under and the soil allowed to lie fallow for two years, the soil lost nitrogen in the drainage water the equivalent to 537 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre. Thus Professor Collier concludes that it is necessary to choose a crop after legumes which will make the best use of the nitrogen, a heavy feeding crop or one of high money value being preferable. Corn, cabbage or potatoes, or any of the truck crops that are grown on a large scale are suggested.

Agricultural Hints

Large orchards with judicious planting of different varieties will ensure pollination to some extent, but even then bees will be an insurance of good setting of fruit.

Illinois escaped the grasshopper plague last year, but these pests this year threaten to be had enough to cause damage in many scattered localities of the state.

A good legume or rape pasture will greatly reduce the amount of protein supplement a pig will eat from a self-feeder, because these crops contain a goodly amount of protein.

Definite reduction in hog production can be looked for in 1923 in Europe.

There was an 8 per cent increase in volume of anti-hog cholera serum and virus handled by the Illinois Farm Bureau Serum association during the first three months of this year.

Cattle usually cost more per pound as feeders than older cattle but they require considerably less corn to produce a hundred pounds of gain, while the consumption of roughage is slightly in favor of the older cattle.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

By Editha L. Watson

SETANGYA, SATANTA AND BIG TREE

The excitement of a raid against the whites must have held considerable fascination for the Klowa. There were the gathering of a war-party, the ceremonies, the preparations; the stealing out, every sense alert; the first glimpse of the white men; and the mad gallop down upon them, feathers flying, yelling, shooting. Then there was the battle itself, in which the startled white men sometimes were victors, but oftener not, and the return to camp with the spoils, where the women admired the warriors or wept for the slain.

Setangya

The danger of such a raid only added to its excitement. It was the great outlet of the Klowa people, and when the tribe was compelled by Custer to come in and settle on the reservation, even the presence of Fort Sill in their midst could not stop them from raiding.

Setangya (Sitting Bear) was the leader of the principal Klowa war society. Satanta (White Bear) was second in rank, and Adocetis (Big Tree) was not lacking in importance. Setangya and Satanta were signers of the Medicine Lodge treaty of 1867, by which the Klowa agreed to go on the reservation. There seems to have been a mental reservation, however, with regard to raids, for the three chiefs were leaders in these forays.

Setangya's son, while engaged in raiding in Texas, was killed by the whites. The aged chief—he was sixty years old at the time—visited the scene, and managed to collect his son's bones. These he tied into a bundle and took them back with him to Oklahoma. A special horse was assigned the task of carrying this bundle wherever the old chief might go, and from this time until his death, the bones of the son accompanied the father.

In May, 1871, a year after Setangya's son was killed, the three chiefs assembled a large war party and prepared for an elaborate raid. The warriors rode into Texas, attacked a wagon-train and killed seven men. Forty-one mules were added to their herd, and the success of this exploit was the subject for much boasting, after the Indian fashion.

The agent at Fort Sill heard the news direct from Setangya, who could not keep from telling the story of the fortunate raid to all who would listen. Unfortunately for the three chiefs, the agent did not view this "battle" with the Indians' eyes, and caused the leaders to be arrested. They were to be taken to Texas and tried there for the murder of the seven men.

Setangya, however, bitter old Indian as he was, felt that he knew a better way of dying than being hung by the white men, as he thought would be his fate if he submitted to arrest. His son died fighting, and he determined to do likewise.

Singing his death-song, the old Klowa wrenched the fetters from his wrists, drew a knife, which he had hidden in his clothing, and sprang upon the guard. A volley of shots stopped him, fired by the surrounding soldiers. And so died Setangya, as he wished to die, fighting.

Satanta and Big Tree were brought to trial, and their sentence was life imprisonment in the Texas penitentiary. This sentence was not served, however, for only two years later they were given their freedom on condition that the Klowa would become peaceful and behave well. But the Klowa were still a raiding people. Peace imposed such a burden upon them that in 1874, they uprose and caused considerable trouble.

Satanta was arrested again. The popular chief, princely and dignified, as he has been described, was taken back to the Texas penitentiary. Perhaps the memory of Setangya's death came to him, or perhaps he felt that he was disgraced by the outbreak of his people after his release. At any rate, he jumped from an upper story, and was killed.

Big Tree, the last of the chiefs who were on the fatal raid, was held at Fort Sill. He was younger, and therefore less firmly an Indian in his ideas, than the other two. He became friendly, accepted Christianity, and lived on his allotment of land in peace.

Shortest Course on Ocean The shortest distance between two points on the same parallel of latitude (except on the equator) is not this distance on the parallel of latitude but rather the distance on a "great circle" around the earth, passing through the two places. This can be understood more readily by reference to a globe or ball. Books dealing with navigation point out that a great circle course is shorter than the "rhumb line" or simple Mercator track. The assertion that it would be shorter to take a course that goes north of the parallel of latitude is correct.

Oaths of Office The custom of an official taking an oath of office to administer the laws did not originate with the Christian religion. From the earliest records of the Jews such oaths were required.

Merry Christmas Shortly before the holidays one of those personal tragedies overtook Jack's mother with the result that she had to acquire some artificial teeth. She was sensitive about it, and had told no one outside the family, though, of course, Jack had heard it discussed in the home circle. Imagine his mother's feelings, then, when, the day after Christmas, she heard her son boasting to a neighbor: "Gee, we had a dandy Christmas this year! We got a new car, and a

BABY "WENT TO ALMOST NOTHING"

Then Eagle Brand saved the day!

"WE ARE sending you a picture of our daughter, Alice Ann," writes Mrs. Joel Buttgerreit, 132 Arch St., Verona, Penn., "to show you what Eagle Brand has done for our baby when three other baby foods failed.

"Our baby weighed 9 pounds at birth and went to almost nothing. Then we tried Eagle Brand, and with her first feeding, she seemed satisfied. She started to pick up right away and at eight months weighed 26 pounds and had 8 teeth.

"Writing could never express our gratitude for what Eagle Brand has done for our baby."

If your baby is not thriving on his present food we suggest that you and your doctor consider Eagle Brand. Send for free booklet. The new and complete edition of "Baby's Welfare" contains practical feeding information and suggestions for supplementary foods—orange juice, cereals, cod-liver oil, etc.—advised by doctors.

Every picture and letter published by The Borden Company is voluntarily sent us by a grateful parent or other relative.

Riley McPherson and wife and children visited Lincoln last Friday.

Mrs. Edith Beck and daughter, Miss Iris, of Hayti, S. D. arrived this week and are visiting the Dudley family. Mrs. Beck is a sister to Mr. Dudley and will remain about two weeks. They visited the Bonito Dam Wednesday, and every day have been taking in the different points of interest in the mountains.

Miss Katherine Mackel of Las Vegas was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. B. L. Stimmel and her cousin, Mrs. Tennis Smoot. On Saturday Miss Mackel's sister Miss Vera and Mr. Herbert Loos came down and accompanied her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Johnson and son Briggs, of McKinney, Texas, stopped here Thursday to visit Mrs. Haley and the Lesnet family. Mrs. Johnson is a sister of Mr. Haley's. They were in a rush to get home but took time to drive to Borte Creek for the afternoon and night, then will return via El Paso.

Mrs. B. L. Stimmel handed us a letter stating that A. J. Lahann a former resident of this place passed away in Alhambra California, on July 26th, of typhoid pneumonia. Mr. Lahann moved to California about 1920, but has visited here frequently since and has many friends who will regret his passing. He is survived by his widow and two daughters Edna and Adele.

Vincent Astor Lauds

Governor Roosevelt

"I am wholehearted in favor of the election of Governor Roosevelt to the Presidency of the United States.

"The country... has been passing through the greatest and longest economic crisis in history.

"Certainly no one panacea or formula will suffice nor, for that matter, will any one man be found who single-handed can effect a cure. One man, however, at the head of our nation, can supply leadership which will inspire once more our people with the confidence they have lost and lead them effectively to happier days of deserved economic security. Such a man in these times must possess vision and imagination as well as the other qualities essential to successful leadership.

"I believe that he can and will be found in Franklin D. Roosevelt."—Vincent Astor.

He may walk to work and live in four rooms, but if he leaves you warmed and thrilled by the contact of his human touch, he is worth more to the community, as far as the average individual in it is concerned, than the fellow to whom fortune has been more kind.

Mrs. R. E. Reeder will spend Saturday and Sunday in Tucuman with her husband.

Mrs. Ida Gallacher and a friend Mrs. White of Oklahoma City, who have been visiting Mrs. Gallacher's sister Mrs. Jack Gleghorn will leave Sunday for their home.

Delaware the Lowest
Delaware has the lowest average elevation of any state. If leveled, it would be only 60 feet above sea level. Colorado would, under these conditions, be the highest. It would be 9,900 feet above sea level.

Mrs. W. F. Turrentine, Jr., and sons, Edgar and Herbert arrived from Delphos, Kansas, on train No. 11 Sunday morning for a visit at the homes of her uncles, Paul and C. D. Mayer. Mrs. Turrentine was born and reared in White Oaks and will be remembered as Gertrude Mayer, oldest daughter of Fred Mayer. Mrs. Paul Mayer and guests are spending the week-end on the Ruidosa.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Byron were in town this morning and called at the News office. Mr. Byron is improving slowly, but is still unable to work. The Byrons had received a letter from Mrs. Nettie C. Funk of Whittier, Calif., stating that her son, Fred, died there July 14th of tuberculosis. The Funks formerly lived here, but have resided in California about 12 years.

Remember two signs that a bridge is good. $500 for a drive over this bridge more than makes up the cost.

A young man named William MacLeod Raine offered a very serious accident on the highway last Sunday just at the bridge below where a cable broke as they were crossing, a heavy bridge collapsed, and it was one of our wisest men so that it had to be repaired, and possibly the other it may have to be replaced after that.

Missionary Society

The Women's Missionary society held a day meeting at the home of Mrs. Roy Shafer last Wednesday. The order of the day was quilting at which fifteen or more ladies took turns. The subject was the "Golden Ladder" and it was completed in one day, which shows that fingers as well as tongues can be made to work. At 12 o'clock a covered luncheon was served, then the regular business meeting followed. The afternoon found some additional quilters present, which brought the number up to about 35. Several visitors were present, among whom were Mrs. Ida Gallacher and her friend, Mrs. White both of Oklahoma City.

"Where is the Devil's bridge? And why so called?" asks a correspondent. The legend of the devil throwing himself over a bridge is told of any natural arch spanning a great chasm. The most celebrated in the British Isles is on the Plynlimmon road, between Aberystwyth and Rhayader.

William MacLeod Raine
AUTHOR OF
"The Desert's Price"

William MacLeod Raine was born an Englishman, his birthplace being London, but he came to America with his parents when he was ten years of age, and settled with them in Arkansas. He attended the Searey (Ark.) college as a preparatory school, and was later graduated from Oberlin, and later received a degree from the University of Colorado. For a time he taught school in Seattle, Wash., then turned his attention to newspaper writing, serving as a reporter and editorial writer on Seattle and Denver papers. In 1902 he began writing stories, and has at all times specialized on western romances. Among his books that have achieved a place in American literature are "A Texas Ranger," "Ridgway of Montana," "Crooked Trails and Straight," "The Highrider," "The Fighting Tenderfoot," and others.

During the World War he served as a member of the Committee on Public Information. For five years he lectured on journalism in the University of Colorado.

William MacLeod Raine is recognized as one of the distinguished authors of America, and as a man who knows the West. His story, "The Desert's Price," will appear serially in our columns, and we know our readers will enjoy every line of it.
