W. R. ECCLES,

State Highway Engineer, Santa Fe, New Mexico, November 1, 1932.

Mrs. Ellen Sellers arrived from Santa Fe Tuesday and went on to Fort Stanton Wednesday morning.

Your Taxes Reduced

The Seligman Democratic Administration promised the people of New Mexico relief from the enormous tax burden imposed on them by the spendthrift policies of the Dillon Republican Administration.

That promise has been kept. Here is the proof:

The Taxpayers' Association of New Mexico, a non-partisan, non-political organization, issues an official statement showing the decrease in taxes for 1932 in the state to be:

$1,244,386

An average cut in tax burden for every man, woman and child in New Mexico of approximately Three Dollars.

(Remember, these are not Democratic or Republican figures, but are compiled and published by non-partisan experts.)

The tax reduction in Lincoln County

for 1932 is $9,357

Dillon squandered your money. Sellgman has saved it.

Here is what the Tax Relievers Association of California says of Governor Sellgman:

"What a pity that California hasn't had such a governor in the last few administrations, who might have saved this commonwealth the throes of tax agony which it is now suffering! If we could only have more of such sound, commonsense in our legislative halls—in our administrative seats!"

The people of New Mexico put a good business man in the governor's office two years ago, and are reaping the benefit. They can keep him there by voting the Democratic ticket on November 8th.

Girl Scouts

The Girl Scouts held a meeting the 26 of October. Two new members, P. Kie Ruth Skinner and Elith Norman, joined. A program was given by Wilma Snow and Dorothy Nickels. Refreshments were served by Ruth Barnett, Jane Norman and Evelyn Clark. The meeting adjourned by the singing of "Taps."

Constipated 30 years Aided by Old Remedy

For thirty years I had constipation. Souring food from stomach choked me. Since taking Adlerika I am a new person. Constipation is a thing of the past. Alice Burns. (Rolland's Drug Store)

F. M. Crockett Dies

Sears Crockett returned from Duncan, Arizona, last Monday where he had been to attend the funeral of his aged father, F. M. Crockett who was at one time a resident of this county. The family came to New Mexico in 1897; resided on a ranch on the upper Bonito until twenty years ago when they sold their ranch and moved to Duncan. Mr. Crockett was married to Miss Annie Fisher in Bell County, Texas in 1872. Mrs. Crockett, together with five sons and one daughter are the survivors.

C. H. Thornton of Oscura was in town today on business.

Democratic Rally And Dance

Everybody Come to the Community Hall tomorrow night, Nov. 5th, and hear the County Candidates Speak.

Dance

and Refreshments Free.

Mr. and Mrs. M. U. Finley had the pleasure of entertaining their son, Dave, of Midland, Texas, yesterday and last night. He left for his home this morning.

About Mr. Kelley

Although he is quite well known in the county, it may not be amiss for this paper to say a few words about T. E. Kelley, candidate for Commissioner of the Third District. He came to Lincoln county with his parents in 1907, since which time he has resided here continuously. He is a cultured gentleman; a substantial business man. He has been unable to shake the hard and talk to each voter individually, but he promises in case of his election to be at the service of every citizen in the county at any time he is called upon. Mr. Kelley fully appreciates the outspoken endorsement of his friends throughout the county, and should the voters elect him November 8th he would administer the duties of his office with only the thought in mind of the greatest good to the greatest number of people.

Democrats Speak

A good crowd assembled at Community Hall Tuesday evening to hear the State speakers, Messrs. Lamb and Velarde. Mr. Neumann could not come so Mr. Hendricks, candidate for senator from the Eighteenth District, took his place on the program. Mayor McQuillen introduced the speakers, all of whom spoke briefly and to the point. Mr. Lamb is undoubtedly well qualified for the position of Corporation Commissioner, both by education and experience. Mr. Velarde is a candidate for re-election as State Auditor. He has conducted the office well and his integrity and business acumen are recognized. Mr. Hendricks would also be a wise choice for senator, being thoroughly familiar with conditions in Otero and Lincoln counties as well as throughout the state.

Missionary Society

The Woman's Missionary Society met at the Baptist Parsonage Wednesday at 3:00 p. m. The Society elected Mrs. Berry vice-president and decided to meet every Wednesday at the same hour. Refreshments of cake and coffee were served.

Mrs. Spencer Returns

Mrs. T. A. Spencer, and little son, A. N. returned Sunday evening from Hollywood, California, where they had been visiting Mrs. Spencer's mother, Mrs. W. C. McDonald, who has been ill. Miss Helen Rolland who accompanied them will remain with her grandmother for an indefinite period.

Miller French Transferred

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. French have received word from their son, Miller, who is at Juneau, Alaska, that he will soon be transferred to the home division and will visit his parents in the near future. Miller is connected with the Federal Bureau of Roads and has been stationed in Alaska for the past two years.

Teachers' Meeting at Roswell

School was dismissed yesterday and today so the teachers could attend the convention in Roswell. Mrs. French left Wednesday for the association and will return Saturday. About three-fifths of the Lincoln county teachers are in attendance.

Prof. Helm Still Calls New Mexico Home

The News is in receipt of a very interesting letter from Prof. Helm who is now in Los Angeles. He sends best wishes to his many friends here. He has this to say about politics in California: "It looks as if California will go Democratic this time with a big majority. So many leading Republicans are supporting the Democratic ticket. Senator Johnson is working hard against Mr. Hoover."

Notice

Members of the Woman's Club of Carrizozo are requested to prepare for the annual Christmas Bazaar. Each member will please make some article for this affair and report to Mrs. Stimmel.

Democratic Women's Club Meeting

Yesterday afternoon the regular meeting of the Democratic Women was held with an attendance of thirty members and several visitors. Mr. Hall explained the ballots and the proposed amendments which are to be voted upon. Mr. G. M. candidate for Commissioner First District, and Mr. Corson, Candidate for Probate Judge were present and were introduced. Mr. Hendricks, candidate for senator, 18th district was also present and was invited to headquarters Tuesday night to hear the returns come in. Mrs. Braum and assistants will serve refreshments.

The Woman's Democratic Organization under the efficient leadership of Mrs. T. A. Spencer, president, has been flourishing throughout the campaign. The members have been enthusiastically planning to further the cause, so that on November 8th Democracy will triumph with the biggest Democratic vote ever polled in Lincoln county; and we are sure their faithful efforts will help materially the expected victory.

SYNOPSIS

Wilson McCann, young Arizona ranchman, sends an old friend, Jim Yerby, with a broken leg, Julia Stark, daughter of Matthew Stark, heretofore enemy of the McCanns, to assassinate Jasper, Julia's brother, who attempts to assassinate Wilson. Ann Gifford, with her young sister Ethel, are sheep raisers, and on that account unpopular with the cattlemen. "Night riders" shoot a McCann rider, Peter McCann, Wilson's father, offers a reward for the disclosure of their identity. Wilson McCann, heretofore Jasper, is making practically no resistance. Matthew Stark posts notice he will kill Wilson McCann on sight. Ann Gifford's tragedy is the fate of her dead sister, Nora, betrayed and abandoned by her lover, Jasper Stark and Carl Gifford. A stark rider, Tom McArdie, is beloved by the Stark to have been killed by the McCanns, but rumor links his name with that of Nora Gifford. Matthew Stark is killed, from ambush. Julia finds him dead, with Wilson McCann sleeping over him. She and Phil, her younger brother, accuse McCann of the killing, despite his vehement denial. Wilson is taken from the chapsal, while standing over Matthew Stark's body. Believing him dying, the Stark has him taken to his home. Dave Stone, Stark's rider, a Texan with a record as a "killer," openly doubts Wilson's guilt. Jasper is kidnapped by the father's will. Wilson McCann is restored to health. Jasper Stark, despite the girl's aversion, seeks to persuade Ethel Gifford to marry him, holding over her the threat of revealing Ann as the slayer of Tom McArdie. Ann drives him from the ranch, defying him. Later she admits to Ethel that she is the father's betrayer. No action as to Matthew Stark's killing is taken. An anonymous letter to the sheriff charges Ann Gifford with McArdie's murder.

CHAPTER VIII

A Quiet Man Talks

Stone had killed a white-tailed buck in the foothills of the Sierras. Phil was with him, and Julia. All three of them had left the ranch in the early morning.

They were homeward bound now, with night impending. In the valley darkness was beginning to fall, but long shafts of golden glow still ran along the mountain ridges and bathed their rocky slopes in splendor. To Julia the desert always symbolized itself in terms of life. She saw the flash of teeth in its eternal conflict. This little man riding beside her, so lean and sinewy and dangerous, so effective in meeting the conditions it demanded to endure, was a reflection of its gaunt persistence.

All day Phil had been preoccupied with an anxiety that now found words. "I'm worried some, Ma. At Mesa yesterday I heard gossip. He stopped, then added: 'About Ann Gifford.'"

The Texan riding beside him gave by no outward action any sign of interest, but somehow Phil knew that he was intent on catching every word. "They say she shot Tom McArdie."

Julia flashed an indignant retort. "How outrageous! And senseless! What object could she possibly have?"

"They say—her sister Nora."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, that Tom was responsible."

"Oh!" The girl fell silent, her thoughts busy knitting together loose ends of gossip she had heard.

"Who says so?" she demanded.

The boy hesitated. He could talk freely before Stone, for hard and tough though the Texan was, an accredited thief, both these young people seemed to him the same loyalty that bound them to Dominick Rafferty.

"Jas. for one," Phil whispered.

"Jas!" Julia pulled up her horse abruptly. "What does he know about it?"

"Claims he practically saw her do it, him an' Gifford."

Stone spoke for the first time. "Where'd you hear this, Phil?"

"In town. Everybody knows it. They say when Hank Le Page went out to her place she wouldn't even deny it—Jas' told him to prove it if he could."

"But Jas—I don't understand. If he saw her do it, or felt sure she had done it, why did he wait nearly three months to tell it? Why didn't he tell it then, or not at all?" Julia asked.

"I don't know," Phil answered. "But what worries me is that the story is liable to be true. She might a-done it. She's thataway."

Out of the night came the Texan's low drawl. "You needn't to worry none, boy. She didn't do it."

"You think she didn't?" Phil turned with relief to Stone.

"I don't think I know," Julia turned white. "You don't mean that—Jas' did it?"

"No."

"But you know who did?"

"I sure do."

"And you'll tell?"

"Yes, ma'am. I was tryin' to shield him, for Tom McArdie certainly need- ed killin'. But now that Miss Gifford's name has been brought into it I reckon he'll have to stand the gaff."

Both of the young-Starks wanted to ask him who had done it. More than once the question almost passed Julia's lips. But there was something in the little man's manner that restrained her. If he wanted her to know he would tell her.

"Well, I'm glad Ann Gifford didn't do it," she said. "The poor girl's had enough trouble. If she wasn't to stiff with me—I'd ride over tomorrow and see her, just to show her we believe in her."

"I'd do that anyway," the Texan said. "It would be right kind of you. She sure needs a woman friend. Old Jim Yerby is about the only one she neighbors with a-tall."

"Will you go with me?" Julia asked. "You used to know her."

"I'll go with you if I'm footloose," he promised, rather evasively. She laughed. "I believe you're afraid to go."

"That's no josh, Miss Julia. Ladies scare me."

"Some ladies," she corrected. "I notice I don't scare you any."

Snatches of thought began to race in the girl's brain. Usually when a man was afraid of a woman, unless he was her husband and had given offense to her, it was because he was attracted to her. She had observed a painful shyness on the part of the youths about her as a symptom of suppressed emotion. It was an unconscious warning they flung out to Julia to trim the sails of her manner to them. This Texan would not exhibit any awkward bashfulness. He was too self-contained, too much master of every nerve and muscle. None the less he might, within, be as much disturbed as they were. Why shouldn't he be in love with Ann Gifford? She guessed his age about forty, and in a man that is still young.

He had walked dangerous trails, had done dreadful things if rumors were true. But she knew instinctively that there still burned in him that dynamic spark of self-respect which justified him to himself. He had his standards, and he played the game by them. She had no more doubt of this than she had that such a man as Gifford had no standards.

Ann Gifford needed some one to take from her shoulder the heavy burden life had laid upon them. Stone was such a man, strong, quiet, self-reliant. He was dangerous to his foes, but it came to Julia with a flash of clairvoyance that the very qualities that had made his name notorious would be a sure protection to a woman like Ann.

Stone rode up to the office of Hank Le Page, sheriff, swung from the saddle, and dropped the bridle reins. Le Page looked up from the ledger in which he was laboriously entering some items of expense. "Lo, Dave. How's everything?"

"Fine an' dandy."

The Texan found a chair, a cigarette, and a match.

For five minutes there was silence except for the scratching of the sheriff's pen and the grunting with which he accompanied the manual labor of bookkeeping. Then, with a sigh of relief, the official closed the heavy volume.

"Anything new, Dave?" he asked, relaxing.

"Not a thing with me. Hear you've hit a new trail in the McArdie case."

"Looks thataway. Some of you Circle Cross boys tipped me off that the Gifford girl was seen makin' a getaway from the place where Tom was shot. I went out to see her about it. She acted mighty funny."

"How?"

"Oh, kinda defiant. The lil' sister broke down an' cried, I couldn't get a thing outa her, either."

"So you reckon Miss Ann did it?"

"Wouldn't it look that way? Tom McArdie had made his brags about the other sister. That was known. She'd warned him of the place, Ann had. Say they meet by chance an' quarrel. She's got a temper. Well, say it ripped loose an' she shot him."

"Looks reasonable. Only trouble is, it ain't true."

"Think she didn't do it?"

And again Stone gave the answer he had given Phil. "I ain't thinkin' I know."

The sheriff lost his manner of casual ease.

"Did you say you knew? How do you know?"

"Saw him do it."

"Who?"

"I'm allowin' to tell you who—presently."

"Hmp!" The sheriff looked at him, not without resentment. "You've waited three months to tell me. Reckon I can wait another five minutes."

"Sure. Fact is, I didn't aim to tell you a-tall. But when I found out there was talk about Miss Ann—why, that's different. Might as well begin at the start. I usta hang around the sheep ranch some my-own self. Knew old Gifford when he lived at Sanjone, so I drifted in once in a while to advise Miss Ann. I got kinda suspicious of McArdie. He was one of these black-mustached lady-killers, good lookin' an' glib with his tongue. Nora was a mighty nice lil' lady an' I could see she had took a great fancy to him. What I was worried about was that she'd marry him, but that wasn't what happened. If I'd known what I know later, that McArdie had a wife living at Prescott, well I'd sure have sat in an' took a hand."

Le Page nodded. The Texan looked away dreamily and blew smoke wreaths. Presently he took up again his story.

"After Miss Ann came back from Los Angeles she wouldn't have any of us around. On top of the trouble about her sister some darn fools had killed a bunch of her sheep. So she jus' swept us all out. Tom had been ridin' in to Tucson to see Ethel while she was at school an' he tried goin' to the ranch. Wish I'd been there when he showed up, but I wasn't. Anyhow, Miss Ann gave him the gate. For that matter, the lil' sister was plumb through with him when she found out what he'd done."

"You're makin' a long story of it, Dave."

"I'm comin' to business now. The mornin' Tom was killed four of us from the Circle Cross had a camp near the foot of Round Top. There was Tom an' Jas an' Gifford an' myself. We separated to pick up a bunch of vacas to drive back to the ranch. Long about sun-up I heard a shot right close to me, over to the left where Tom was. I rode thataway an' met Tom. He was laughing fit to kill an' right away began to tell me the joke. He'd just seen Miss Ann an' been devilin' her again. I didn't say a word but listened to him dig his grave with his that she'd killed him, so I jus' told the boys I didn't believe she'd done it an' let it go at that."

The sheriff reflected. "I'll have to look you up, Dave."

"Sure. But I've told you the straight of it. Would you mind sendin' some one out to the Gifford place to tell the young ladies that it's all right for as they're concerned?"

"I'll send some one soon as I can."

"Better jus' put it that we quarreled an' I killed him. No use worryin' them with what I told you. I wanted you to know the facts, but there's no need of spreading 'em broadcast."

The sheriff assented.

A puncher riding the grab line passed the Circle Cross and stopped at the bunkhouse.

"I would of liked to a-got home, but I reckon I'll kick in here tonight," he told himself plaintively.

Jasper came to the doorway. "Lo, Bud! Light an' look at yore saddle," he invited.

"I'd ort to be pushin' on my reins," the puncher demurred. "My wife'll sure give me a cussin' when I get home. She knows I quit the Open AB three days ago, because old Caldwell was in town an' seen me there. I had hard luck in Mesa. It's sure enough one high-tariff town."

His predicament pleased Jasper. He guessed that Bud had been "given his time" at the Open AB and had disappointed his check in drink and gambling.

"Did you get nicked at Pedro's place?"

"For forty plunks, in a stud game. My luck's something scandalous."

The rider dropped from the saddle and came into the bunkhouse. After he had taken a couple of drinks he forgot the story he meant to tell about quitting his job because he didn't like the foreman.

"I'm sore as a toad on a skillet," he explained confidentially. "Me, I'm a top-hand with a rope. You know that, Jas. I aim to hold up my end always. Course I can get plenty of jobs. That ain't it. 'Lo, Carl!"

Gifford had drifted into the room and seated himself at the table. "Anything new in town?" he asked.

"Why no—I reckon not. Except about Dave Stone."

"What about him?"

"Both of the cowpuncher's horts had become instantly intent, but he failed to notice it."

"Why, he's been arrested for killin' Tom McArdie. He rode in today an' confessed to Hank Le Page that he done it. They had some kind of a row an' he plugged Tom."

Jasper drove a clenched fist down on the table. "He's lynx, to get that Gifford girl out of it. Why, he couldn't a-done it. We practically caught her."

The eyes of Gifford met those of Stark. A sly and furtive cunning flitted them. The germ of an idea was filtering into that brutalized brain.

"I dunno, Jas. Maybe he could. There was somethin' funny about the way he looked when he come outa that manzanita gulch, come to think of it. He didn't really act surprised when he saw Tom lyin' there. He played like he was up to me. O' course if he waylaid Tom from the brush—"

Jasper started. The idea and its possibilities had come home to him. If it could be made to appear that Stone had shot Tom McArdie without giving him a chance for his life the Texan could be got rid of quickly. It was a country of swift action. Stone's reputation as a "bad man" would tell against him. Sentiment could be worked up. He had delivered himself into their hands.

If Jasper had not been thoroughly tongue. What tickled him so much was that he'd riled her so that she'd shot at him an' he'd pretended to fall from his horse over a dugway like he was dead. I asked him what he'd said to make her so mad. He'd told her he was coming up to the ranch to see her lil' sister."

The Texan stopped. He looked out of the open door at a freight duff coming down the dusty street. The male-skinner was using raucous and explosive language. Dave Stone did not see him except automatically. Another picture filled his vision.

"The Gifford woman shot at him an' missed," the sheriff prompted.

"Like I done told you, I said to him, 'You don't really figure on going back up to the sheep ranch after what you've done?' He come back at me right quick, that he sure did. I taken a hand there an' then. I said he had another guess comin', that I wouldn't stand for it. He got mad an' wanted to know what business it was of mine. Then he began to lay the blame on what had happened on that lil' girl lyin' in her grave out in California. I told him what he was an' gave him first chance to draw. His gun was in the open when I killed him. It was me or him an' I beat him to it."

"Jas Stark and Gifford didn't know you did it?"

"No, I couldn't prove it was a fair fight, so I rode back into the chapsal when I heard them comin'. Pretty soon I showed up an' they began to tell me how Miss Ann had shot McArdie. I'd a-told them how it was but I saw Jas was all for hushin' it up

Explosion of Krakatoa Believed to Be Record

The greatest explosion which the world has ever known took place in 1883 when the volcano, Krakatoa, located in the Sunda Strait between Java and Sumatra, blew up. "At that time a huge crater stood there, with a rim of islands 2,600 feet above the sea," writes Charles Baker, Jr., in Boys' Life, the monthly publication of the Boy Scouts of America. "The whole cluster of islands were blown into bits, leaving a hole in the sea 1,000 feet deep; 3,000 vertical feet of rock were thrown aside."

"These explosions were caused by steam from sea water in the throat of the new crater meeting the first of the molten lava," continues Mr. Baker. "After the first explosions, water probably chilled the lava to a crust, enclosing enormous quantities of steam within. This finally burst through the chilled crust in the most violent explosion, hurling a vast mass of cool lava, pumice and dust late the air. The sound of the explosion was heard 3,000 miles away. Never before or since have sound waves carried so far on earth. Long tidal waves 60 feet high reached Cape Horn, South America, 7,818 miles away. Thirty-six thousand people were killed. Thousands of ships were destroyed or carried high and dry, far inland."

Famous Irish Race Course

The word "curragh" derives from the Gaelic curraich. Curraich means race course and also low-lying or marshy ground. The double meaning is understandable in that flat land would naturally be selected for a race course. The Curragh of Kildare is one of the most famous race courses in the world. Beside the River Liffey, near Dublin, it is the scene of the Irish derby and many other famous races. Also, the great Dublin horse fair is held there annually. In the 17th century the king of Leinster granted the Curragh of Kildare, which embraces some 4,800 acres, to St. Bridget, who gave it to the people as a common. For 1,000 years it has been preserved as open land.

A gentleman is often seen, but very seldom heard to laugh.—Chesterfield.

DAIRY FACTS

NEED CALCIUM IN DRY-PERIOD FEED

Cows Should Be Fleshy in Parturition-Time.

As they usually lose flesh for three or four weeks after calving, because they cannot consume sufficient feed to provide adequately for both the milk flow and maintenance of body weight, dairy cows should carry considerable flesh at the time of parturition.

It is a well-known fact that cows in good condition at calving time will start off the lactation period at a higher level of production than thin cows. This results in larger milk yields for the year.

The feed during the dry period should be high in minerals. This is especially true of calcium, since investigations at several agricultural experiment stations clearly show it to be the mineral most likely to be depleted. A supply of calcium may be insured by a good pasture in the summer and properly cured leguminous hay in the winter.

A good grain mixture to condition a dry cow is: 3 parts by weight of ground corn, 3 of ground oats, 3 of bran, and 1 of linseed meal. The quantity of feed supplied should be sufficient to bring the cow to a proper state of flesh at calving time. About two weeks before the cow freshens she should be fed a light laxative ration such as wheat bran, ground oats and linseed oil meal. The ration should not contain too much roughage, as its bulk adds to the discomfort of the cow. As soon as the cow freshens it is a good practice to give her warm water, to drink and follow with a warm bran mash.

Conditions Tending to Make Milk Unpalatable

Only clean, wholesome feed should be given cows producing milk for human consumption. S. V. Layson, writes, in Hoar's Dairyman. Spoiled feed has a detrimental effect upon the health of cows which will alter the composition of milk and possibly cause digestive disturbances in babies being fed on such milk. Feeding should be done after milking, especially any feeds of strong flavor or odor, as milk readily absorbs odors in the barn which may cause it to be unpalatable.

The cow barn should be located where it may be kept in reasonably good sanitary condition regardless of weather. Well-drained cow yards adjacent to the barn will aid materially in preventing soiled udders and flanks. Mud and filth picked up on udders and flanks contain germs which may be very harmful to the quality of milk if they get into it. A small amount of labor spent in grading the barnyard may save many hours of man labor that would otherwise be necessary to properly clean the cows before they are milked.

Manure attracts flies and offers a breeding place for them. It should therefore be so handled and disposed of as to prevent these conditions. Frequent removal to the fields or, in case it must be stored near the barn, it should be so handled that cows will not be compelled to wade through it to get in and out of the barn.

Salt for Cows

Cows in their search for salt and minerals are likely to eat poisonous materials that will be fatal to them. A number of instances have been reported in the corn belt where cows ate partially oxidized zinc storage batteries that had been thrown aside in woodlands and pastures and died from the effects. All such debris should be buried. Salt should be available for cows at all times. When rock salt is used loose salt should be given frequently because a cow cannot lick an ounce or more of salt from the rock each day without injury to her tongue. When cows get an ample supply of salt they are not so likely to eat foreign materials and be poisoned.—Prairie Farmer.

How It May Pay

On a recent farm tour in Skagit county, Washington, the value of testing was very clearly demonstrated. At the farm of Roosevelt Olson, we found a cow that Mr. Olson intended to sell to the butcher. Her first test was 4.1 per cent. He decided to give her another chance and the first four months after freshening she has produced 231 pounds fat and $31.40 over feed costs. This cow will easily make $50 over feed costs for the year. Deducting what she would have brought for beef, $20, he will have $30 left or about what it cost to test the entire herd. Testing finds the good as well as the poor cows.—Hoar's Dairyman.

Feeds Rich in Protein

Protein is more efficient in one feed substance than it is in another, says the Farm Journal. For example, proteins of milk are 65 per cent efficient, those of cereal grains only 30 per cent efficient in feeding pigs. In dairy feeding, there has been a feeling that the ration with most protein in was the most efficient. Now experiments have shown that the source of the protein and the variety of protein are just as important, maybe more important, than the amount.

CHAPTER IX

Ann Rides to Mesa

In town with a pack horse for supplies, Jim Yerby stopped at the Gilt Edge saloon to get a bottle of snake-bite medicine. The old-timer admitted that he never had been struck by a rattler but you never could tell when your luck would turn bad. He took the cure in advance to forestall the evil day.

While Yerby talked to the bartender his quick beady eyes darted round the room on voyages of discovery. Something was in the air, something that caused unwonted excitement. The patrons of the place were gathered together in knots, and at the heart of each group a man was talking in a low urgent voice. Jasper Stark was one of the murmuring orators. Another was Carl Gifford.

The bartender took Yerby's money for the bottle of liquor he bought but pushed back the quarter proffered for the drink.

"It's on some of the boys today," he explained.

"A lil' celebratin'" asked the nester with lifted eyebrows.

"I reckon the celebratin' will be later," the man in the apron said significantly.

Yerby sauntered to the outskirts of the nearest group. It was the one in the center of which Jasper Stark sawed the air.

"You say he was our friend when he did it," Jasper was repeating, in a voice dry as a whipper. "Leave it lay at that. Say he was. So was Tom. But that ain't the point. I wouldn't make no holier if he'd plugged Tom fair an' square in the open. No, gents. I'd go through from B-I to breakfast for him. You're a-n whittling I would. If it had a-been thataway, which it wasn't. Like I been tellin' you, this Texas killer an' Tom had quarreled. Stone told Carl an' he told me that he would sure get Tom. When we saw the Gifford woman lighting out so sudden we figured naturally that she'd done it. All the same, both Carl an' I thought Stone acted mighty funny when he came out the brush an' found us beside Tom's body. He played like he was surprised, an' it didn't get across to us. We suspicioned somehow he knew more'n he said. Maybe he was in cahoots with Ann Gifford."

Yerby spoke up promptly. "Not on yore tintype, Miss Ann hadn't a thing to do with this. She's a right nice young lady."

Bleaky Jasper looked at him. "Sorry if I hurt yore feelings by namin' yore sheepherding friends, Yerby," he sneered. "But leave that go. Say Stone played a lone hand. Question is: Can a Texas killer come in here an' shoot down our boys from the brush an' get away with it? I'll gamble on it he can't."

"Meanin'?" asked Yerby.

"Meanin' that the boys aim to take a hand pronto."

The nester knew the crowd had been drinking. He had met before the lust to kill that makes a mob cruel and inhuman. For some reason, he saw at once, young Stark was working up the men of Mesa to an act of summary vengeance.

"Hold yore hawises, Jas. I'd like right well to hear Stone's story before you get rampageous. He's a killer, I reckon. Leastways he's got that rep. But he don't look to me like one of the kind that shoots you whilst he's shakin' hands with you. No sense in going off half cocked."

"What's eatin' you, Yerby? This Stone has confessed he did it," Jasper interrupted rudely.

"Has he confessed he shot Tom from the brush?"

The sly and shifty eyes of the younger man met those of the old-timer and slid away. "Not necessary. The facts show it. Carl an' I were the first folks on the ground. Tom hadn't fired a shot. The coward that shot him never gave him a chance."

"When you tell that to a jury—"

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

By Editha L. Watson

OURAY

The little Ute camp at the head of Republican river was in a turmoil. Everyone was excited—everyone was hunting, high and low, for a little boy of some three or four years.

His father had been out hunting buffalo when the Cheyennes raided the camp. He looked grimly at the bodies of his people, and thought that had he been with them, they might still live. He, Ouray, the warrior who had killed many Sioux, would have killed the Cheyenne also.

Then, as the battle died down, and the morning light gathered for council, it was noticed that several of them were missing. This explained the absence of Ouray's child; the Cheyennes had taken prisoners.

Years passed. Ouray enlisted the Indian bureau to help him find this beloved only child, and had patiently followed every clue with nothing, but disappointment at the end. Now a new hope had risen; in Indian territory was a lad, who might prove to be his stolen son.

Ouray traveled the long distance, hoping and praying that he might find his child. But a certain mark, which had been on his son's body, was absent from this lad, and the journey had been in vain. Ouray never mentioned his loss again.

Ouray was one of the most famous of western chiefs, and justly so. Born in 1820, when the Ute country was still wild and Ute life primitive; he grew up amid wars with plains tribes, and became a spectacular and daring fighter. But the life of a warrior, while it developed in him leadership and a love for discipline, was not enough for a man of his mental energy and adaptability. As the white men increased in the West, he saw the need of friendliness toward them; there was much to be learned from them, and their friendship was worth more than their enmity, in any case.

After observing their mode of living, the chief evidently concluded that his position in the tribe necessitated a certain adoption of civilized ways. Accordingly, he had a cartage, in which he traveled in state, and lived like a white man, in a good house, with tables, beds and cooking utensils. He had a large easy chair for himself, and when an honored guest was at his home, he brought out wine (though he did not drink) and cigars.

Chilpeta, his wife, was a great aid to him in keeping up this state of things. She was as remarkable in her way as he was in his; adaptable, industrious, a good manager, and, some say, even more intelligent than her famous spouse. Many an old-timer has expressed his admiration of the excellent Ute woman, and averred that it was really she who ruled, and that an appeal to her often won an otherwise lost cause.

Discipline, also, was an indication of Ouray's rank, which he did not neglect. When he retired from the active life of a raider, his warlike spirit remained with him, although he was not tyrannical. As chief, it behooved him to be just and firm, and disobedience to his orders might mean death.

The Utes, however, were a rebellious and high-tempered people. They obeyed him fairly well, but an occasion came when he was powerless to control them. This was the "Meeker massacre," in which the Utes burst all bonds of discipline, and their chief was powerless against them until their fury had subsided.

For his efforts to keep peace at this serious time, Ouray was given an annuity of $1,000, so that when he died, at the age of sixty, he was perhaps the richest Indian in America.

Every year, on the 24th of May, there is a gathering of Utes at Ignacio. From their homes in Utah and Colorado they come, all who are able. Ouray has gone to the spirit land; he is no longer there to counsel and command them, but no year passes that they forget the memorial rites to honor him, their last great leader.

He Knew the Signs

"Well, my wife's started housecleaning."
"Place torn up, eh?"
"Not yet."
"Rugs in the back yard?"
"No."
"Then what makes you think she's started housecleaning?"
"She ordered two pounds of coffee today this morning."

Have Seen Value of Grazing Crops Livestock Men Fully Awake to Possibilities.

By L. L. CASE, Animal Husbandman, North Carolina State College.—WNU Service. Growers of live stock have found by two years of experience that it pays to have some annual-grazing crops to supplement the permanent pasture if the stock is to be kept in the best of condition.

These supplementary grazing crops are emergency or insurance crops for the live stock man. The drought of 1930, the winter-killing of carpet grass that following winter, the March freeze of 1932, and the extended drought this summer has demonstrated the full value of such temporary grazing crops. Some of the crops which might be used to advantage are soybeans, sudan grass, Cherokee clover or lespedeza. Good farmers have found that a definite area in these crops each year is necessary. If not needed for grazing they may be harvested in the usual way for seed or hay.

The experiment station at state college uses soybeans and sudan grass for grazing sheep. Twelve ewes and their lambs are carried on four acres from May 15 to November 15 and they make better gains than do others carried on permanent pasture and treated for stomach worms every two weeks. W. W. Jarvis uses temporary grazing crops for his herd of beef cattle and turns them on the crops when the pasture gets short.

Sowing and Caring for Black Locust Seedlings

Black locusts are easily propagated from seed. In fact, this is the regular nursery practice for producing black locust seedlings.

The following directions should give success. Prepare the ground as you would for garden. The best soil is a pliable one. Lay the ground off in rows 30 inches apart and drill the seeds in rows. The seeds should be rather thick in the row, because the germination value of black locust seeds is generally about 60 per cent. The seeds should be planted at a depth of about two to three inches. After the seeds are drilled in, the soil should be firmed on the sides of the drill-row but not on top.

To obtain hardy stock one must stimulate a too rapid growth the first summer. Keep weeds and grass cultivated out. Do not give water after the middle of August, so as to slow down the growth and allow the young trees to harden up for winter.—Exchange.

Fighting Orchard Pest

One of the hardest destructive orchard insects to fight is the cherry case bearer, which spends almost its whole life cycle inside of a protective case. The state agricultural workers in Door county orchards have found that the summer spray measures against this insect do not furnish much protection.

The best method to combat the case bearer, they point out, is to use dormant spring sprays of oil material. The announcement states that the dormant spray used consisted of 94 gallons of water, one pound of an emulsifier, and six gallons of paraffin oil.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Rape for Hogs

Rape is one of the best pasture crops for hogs. It does better in cool weather, and may be seeded early in the spring. To secure the greatest returns per acre, the crop should not be pastured too closely. It is preferable to have two or three separate lots and alternate the grazing, though this is not necessary for good results.

Five to seven pounds of seed per acre is the usual rate of seeding. Drill or broadcast the seed on plowed ground which has been well worked down. Rape also may be sown in the corn at the last cultivation.—Michigan Farmer.

Agricultural Hints

Farm wastes total about 200,000,000 tons annually.

There are 313 good days in every year to lime the soil. The other 52 are Sundays.

The wheat crop of central Europe is expected to be 40,000,000 bushels less than last year.

Wisconsin cattle feeders are feeding 20 per cent fewer beef cattle now than a year ago, according to estimates of state crop and live stock reporters.

Garden plots that are to be planted with flowering bulbs should be spaded and worked thoroughly now so as to kill weeds and get the ground in shape to hold moisture next year.

Among the advantages of live stock on farms is to provide a use for legumes and other feed crops needed in weed control and soil improvement. Live stock also enables use to be made of roughage which is a by-product of grain growing, and of low-grade grains.

The wise shepherd is taking advantage of the present price of a good purebred ram so that he can receive the margin paid on high quality market lambs next year.

Fish Story? Well, He 'Hooked' Coyote

Brownsville, Texas.—J. W. Wilson, fisherman, claims to be the only man who ever caught a coyote on his line. But like most of the "big ones," the coyote got loose. While fishing near Santa Maria Pass, northern Mexico, Wilson baited a hook on a strong line, fished it 50 feet from camp, and tied the other end to his wrist. A violent jerk awoke him. A coyote had been hooked in the jaw, but managed to pull loose.

GIRL WHO POSED AS MAN MARRIED

Female Truckman and Crew Boss Is Bride.

Cleveland.—Variously known as Harry, Harold, and "Lil," Lillian Hoffman, forty-eight-year-old Ohio woman, was married for the second time in the office of a justice of the peace in the man's clothing she began to wear 33 years ago when she couldn't get a job as a girl.

Lillian has been a truckman, freight handler, and ice man and is now a crew boss for a distributing company. Seven years ago she "married" an Akron girl and grinned delightedly during all the ensuing clamor which followed discovery that Lillian was a woman.

"The girl's in Akron now, I guess," she said. "Somebody got the marriage annulled. I didn't want to get married. I just wanted company."

Since then the woman has continued working at men's jobs. Lillian was "sure enough married" the second time to John McCarthy, fifty-four, also a crew boss for the same company, who said he couldn't understand why everybody was making such a fuss just because his bride happened to wear trousers.

"He's my pal," Lillian said of her husband as the pair waited for the justice of the peace to perform the marriage. "I've known him for six years, and he's a good guy."

"Where did you meet him?" someone inquired. She looked at her new husband and seemed to hesitate before replying. "Him? Oh, I met him in an alley some time ago," she said, grinning.

Horse Starts Blaze; Three Buildings Burn

North Branch, N. J.—Hundreds of acres of grass and brushwood land lay a flame-blackened waste and three buildings were in ruins, as a result of a fire apparently caused by a horse.

Charles Hurling, negro, said he placed several bundles of paper as bedding in his horse's stall and that the horse's stamping apparently ignited a packet of matches which had fallen in the paper.

The fire burned the stable before the horse could be rescued, swept on to Hurling's shack and flamed into the under-dry grass.

Farmers fought the fire, but it spread to Peter Palmer's farmhouse. Fire companies went from North Branch, Lamington, Oldwick and Far Hills, but the fire swept swiftly toward Lamington, driving the men before it. Rain extinguished the blaze.

Sucide Lake Is Fatal to Boastful Swimmer

Newark.—Joseph Mullin is dead somewhere in the never fathomed waters of Sucide lake because of a fifty cent bet.

Mullin, who was thirty-one, was one of the athletic stars at the annual outing of the Thomas Jefferson club in Livingston, N. J. His closest rival was Edward Flanagan, twenty-six.

"I'll bet you fifty cents to nothing I can beat you swimming across Sucide lake," said Flanagan.

Mullin dived in first and swam easily across the 325-foot lake. Flanagan stripped and dived in to join him for the start. When Flanagan came up from his dive he couldn't find Mullin. In those few seconds Mullin had vanished.

Baby Pig Lives for 75 Days Under House Floor

Vinton, Iowa.—F. J. Reider, farmer, missed a small pig from a litter two weeks old. Seventy-five days later Reider found the pig, still alive, under a hog house floor, where it presumably had received neither nourishment nor water. The pig, given a special diet, recovered.

Condemn Old Jail Locks After Prisoners Flee

Sunbury, Pa.—Cell locks, believed to be sixty years old, will be replaced in the Northumberland county prison here, from which five prisoners escaped in a single jail delivery. The county commissioners ordered repairs to the prison following the escapes.

Single Leg Saves Hen

Fort Worth, Texas.—A one-legged chicken on the J. L. Brumbaugh farm here is not menaced by the frying pan. This chicken, born without even the trace of a second leg, has been adopted as the household pet.

Scolded; Kills Self

Merredite, France.—Dennis Denin-celler, fourteen, was killed when he threw himself in front of an express train because he was scolded by his mother.

With figures from all but six of the thirty-one counties available, indications are that the number of votes to be cast in the coming New Mexico election will exceed by 25,000 or more the total number cast in the 1930 election.

The second annual Arizona open golf tournament will be held at Phoenix Country Club the last week in January or the first week in February. The dates will be set by the bureau of Professional Golfers' Association.

The Santa Fe railroad's tie-treating plant near Albuquerque has been reopened, with the employment of a full force of 100 men. The plant will be operated indefinitely for six days a week with a payroll of between $10,000 and $12,000 a month.

Sportsmen who have visited the Lincoln National forest in New Mexico said there is an oversupply of deer and they predicted state game officials will permit a second open season after the first one this month. The sportsmen estimated there are 13,000 deer and 2,250 turkeys in the forest.

Elliott Barker, New Mexico state game warden, states that 175,000 rainbow trout at the new Parkview hatchery in Rio Arriba county will be ready for planting in streams of the state within the next thirty days. The trout, he said, will range in length from three and a half to five inches. Some 300,000 trout will be left at the hatchery for planting in the spring.

After five years of intensive work, health officials believe a campaign to wipe out malaria fever in Dona Ana county, New Mexico, has shown results which indicate complete success within a few years. Dr. C. W. Gerber, county health officer and director of the malaria control campaign, said the number of malaria cases has decreased from 935 in 1928 to 40 this year.

Edward Romange, 65, died of injuries received when the car in which he was riding plunged off the highway near Elephant Butte dam, New Mexico, at the same spot where E. J. Schmalhausen, reservoir superintendent, was fatally injured in an auto accident recently. Friends said Romange's car left the road as he looked into the arroyo in which the Schmalhausen car had plunged.

Five of eleven defendants in the state bank superintendent's suit to recover nearly $1,000,000 have filed a motion in Superior Court at Phoenix, asking inspection of the records of the closed Arizona bank. Those seeking access to the records are H. J. McClung, the Northern Arizona Securities Company, the Grand Canyon Sheep Company, the Three-V Livestock Company and the Collin Campbell Livestock Company.

The State Game and Fish Commission extended the quail season in eleven counties an additional fifteen days. The counties in which the extension applies are Grant, Luna, Hidalgo, Lea, Lincoln, Chaves, Eddy, De Baca, Quay, Harding and San Juan. The season in these counties, Elliott Barker, state game warden, said, will be from November 10 to December 25. The regular season elsewhere in the state will last from November 10 to December 10.

The second half of the $250,000 granted Arizona by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for relief purposes has been received in Phoenix from the Los Angeles Federal Reserve bank.

Ruling the state had failed to make its case, Judge Fred W. Mickett instructed a Superior Court jury in Tucson, Ariz., to return a verdict acquitting J. E. Brown, former Casa Grande banker, of a charge of forgery. Brown was accused of forging the mark of E. E. Diggers to a $1,000 note and negotiating the note for its face value.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs. At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active scents, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

London History in Models For more than 20 years J. B. Thorpe, an English model maker, has devoted all his spare time to modeling portions of old London. At a remarkable exhibition of his work which he had been holding, two of the most interesting models have been his 20-foot replica of London bridge in 1030, and his detailed copy of the lord mayor's show of 1010. Over 200 figures about six inches high had to be made for this model.

Ice Cream Patterns Martha Louise's family had moved to an apartment that had an electric refrigerator. Her mother told her that when they went to grandma's they would get her receipt for making ice cream in the refrigerator. They had only arrived when she said: "Grandma, we want some of your patterns for making ice cream."

Second Thoughts "Fred isn't going to marry Winnetta after all," said the knowing miss. "But I thought he fell in love at first sight," put in her friend. The girl smiled. "Yes; but Fred took another look."

A Losing Fight

The Hoover Campaign has now reached the stage of desperation. All efforts to explain and defend the wretched failures of the Administration not only have failed, but have involved the President and his Cabinet officers in fresh contradictions and further exposures. Report is now had to the most reprehensible and discredited methods of American politics at its worst: (1) An attempt to create a psychology of fear and (2) to intimidate and coerce employes by a class of employers whose prototypes were the feudal barons of the days when individual liberty was unknown.

Mr. Hoover himself set the example in the first instance when he revealed the mythical secret that the United States was within two weeks of being forced off the gold standard. Had this "revelation" been received at its face value it would have gone a long way to destroy the confidence of the people in the financial security of their government. This was the cue from which spokesmen for the Administration began to parade a hobgoblin of fear that conditions would be worse than now in the event of Governor Roosevelt's election.

This was a challenge to the patriotism of every Democrat, every Independent and every independent minded Republican who intends to vote for Franklin Roosevelt: Governor Roosevelt promptly scotched this challenge when he said: "This policy of seeking to win by fear of ruin is selfish in its motive, brutal in its method and false in its premise. . . . I assure the badly advised and fear-stricken leaders of the Republican party that Democrats and those of the rank and file of their leadership are still American patriots and cherish in their hearts as I do, the safety of the country, the welfare of its people and the continuance of our institutions."

What must be thought of a leadership which has for months been pleading with the people to have confidence in Herbert Hoover and his leadership to attempt now to create a hysteria of fear concerning his opponent? Is it not the best evidence that public confidence in such leadership, if given, would be wholly undeserved?

The efforts of those industrialists, who by reason of benefits received or expected, to intimidate working men to support an administration which had promised them release from poverty and brought them to idleness or part-time employment is not new, but there is no more reprehensible way to play politics with human misery. However veiled such efforts may be they are just as bad if made by implication as they would be by a forthright command.

Every employer of labor who attempts to intimidate or coerce his workmen should be pilloried by the public scorn and indignation of those who are free from duress to exercise the privileges of American citizenship, and particularly should such conduct be resented at the ballot box as a lasting warning that such methods are execrated in a land where the citizen is still a sovereign, at least, on election day.

Mr. Hoover in his Cleveland speech twice referred to the tariff act as the Hoot-Smalley Act, and then spoiled the apt designation by quickly correcting himself.

What Hoover Has Cost

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, Chairman, House Appropriations Committee, estimates that Hoover has needlessly cost the country $20,000,000,000

It is too soon after Halloween for the Hooverites to scare the American people by exhibiting a hollow pumpkin as evidence that times will be worse when Mr. Hoover is defeated.

While Hennery is embracing Herbie and the latter's Hawley-Smoot tariff which the former had utterly condemned, wind-shield signs may be seen on every hand proclaiming: "This Ford Votes for Roosevelt."

The Republican propagandist who is now busily engaged in spreading the doctrine of fear is taking a brief vacation. In private life he is the fool on the picnic who rocks the boat. ---George Rothwell Brown.

Cabinet Officers and Other Hoover Officials Involved in Charges

Washington, Oct. — A Hoover Cabinet officer, an assistant to another Cabinet officer and the Republican National Committee are chief figures in unpleasant campaign incidents.

Secretary of Labor Doak is charged in effect by Senator Norris of Nebraska with having intimated to Donald R. Richberg, of Chicago, attorney representing a number of railway unions interested in the enactment of the Senator's anti-injunction bill passed by the last Congress, that he might be able to exert influence to get Mr. Richberg an appointment as a Federal judge at a conference to effect a compromise on the bill. Mr. Richberg confirms the statement and Secretary Doak denies it. A Congressional investigation is likely.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Jabucke, as reported in the press, is charged with placing on the navy pay roll, at a salary larger than is paid many rear admirals, a young newspaper man, who admits little knowledge of the Navy, but who displays a breadth of political knowledge. His title is "Civil Administrative Assistant to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy," at a salary of $6,500 a year. He was appointed just before the presidential campaign opened. Senator Walsh (Dem., Mont.) has called attention to the employment by the New York Republican headquarters of Joseph R. McCuen, secretary of the Federal Power Commission, on payless furlough from his official duties.

At the Power Commission offices it was said that the commission did not know, when it granted McCuen's furlough application, that he intended to work in Republican headquarters.

Dance at White Oaks

The Democrats will have a rally and dance at White Oaks tonight. Cake and coffee served free. Cordial invitation to all.

School Notes

Delayed from last week

Our pep rally Friday night didn't turn out so well. The rain chased us all away. It seems that we didn't need the extra pep to help us win the game with Alamogordo though.

Miss Brunk has started a home nursing class in the high school. It will deal mostly with child care. We have a doll not to play with. We really expect to learn something.

Miss Brunk has been weighing and measuring the high school pupils. This resulted in many corrective measures for under and over weight.

Wednesday Father Brady gave a vocal concert for us. It was a delightful performance and the students received it with more than pleasure. We are all hoping that there will be a "next time"

Miss Davis went to Albuquerque the first of the week. Mrs. Penna Bigelow substituted.

School notes for this week

There were only three days of school this week. There is a teachers meeting in Roswell our teachers are attending.

Clubs are being organized this week. The aim of the school is to have every pupil belong to at least one club.

There will be a mock election in the High School on election day. Everyone is planning how he or she will vote. It promises to be interesting as well as educational.

An independent voter of Carrizozo went into the Methodist church last Sunday evening and sat down. He picked up a red letter Testament, opened it, looked puzzled, shook his head, laid it down; then repeated the performance. Someone asked him what the trouble was. He said, "Well, I've just discovered that Hoover even has the Bible in the 'red'."

EPIDEMIC OF GANG MURDERS WORRIES NEW YORK POLICE

Fear Chicago Underworld Armies Have Been Transported to East

New York.—Gang guns are roaring on a half dozen fronts of renewed racket warfare here in the East and word is being passed from one alarmed police department to another that Chicago underworld armaments have been moved East to carry on the interstate struggle.

Here in the metropolitan district week-end outbreaks took a toll of six lives with the names of as many more wounded on the casualty list. Two of the victims—identified as gunmen of the late Frankie Yale, overlord of Brooklyn racketeering up to the time of his sudden death—from "lead poisoning"—were found bound in burlap bags and beaten and stabbed almost beyond recognition in a vacant lot on the outskirts of Harrison, N. J. They had been "rubbed out," the police decided, in some Greater City "execution chamber," carted across the North river by automobile, and pitched out into the grass.

Another Sack Murder. Only a few days before another sack murder, so called, had developed in Brooklyn, when the body of a gang victim, similarly trusted and bound had been found lying in a gutter and a short time before that New York detectives were asked to co-operate in the search for a squad of "imported executioners" who had killed the three Volpe brothers, so-called "big three" of racketeering in Pittsburgh and western Pennsylvania and set avenging gang guns barking with renewed ferocity in that troubled zone of underworld activity.

The new outbreak of gang murders herabouts was precipitated, in fact, by the Pittsburgh massacre and police investigators attribute some of the subsequent killings to revenge by henchmen of the "big three" and others to continued efforts by rivals to wipe out the remainder of the Volpe gang "headquarters staff."

Volpe's Aid Murdered. Thus John Bazzano, the Brooklyn "sack murder" victim, was a chief lieutenant of the Volpes, and the police theory is that he fled to New York after the massacre and was trailed here and killed by members of the gang back of the attack on the Volpes—James, Arthur, and John. It was in front of a coffee house conducted by Bazzano, in fact, that the execution took place, a place which the racketeer bosses had used as their headquarters.

Fourteen men, four of them from Pittsburgh were rounded up by the New York police for the Bazzano killing and although detectives announced at the time that they had evidence to show that the fourteen had arranged to celebrate the massacre with a banquet at a midtown Manhattan hotel here on the night following their arrest their stories were not convincing enough to induce a Tammany Police court magistrate to hold the prisoners, all of whom were promptly discharged upon arraignment.

Three unidentified "ride" victims were found in the metropolitan district, within thirty-six hours of the Harrison "sack murder" discovery. The body of one of these, riddled with bullets, was found lying on the bank of the Shrewsbury river near Monmouth Beach, N. J., where it evidently had been thrown from a boat. The two others, one found by a roadside just outside Long Island City and the other on the outskirts of Union township, near Newark, had both been dumped from automobiles, the police said.

Burned by Hot Water

Paris.—Her legs burned by hot water bottles while under the influence of an anesthetic, a French woman here was recompensed to the extent of $240 when the Paris court rendered a decision against the hospital authorities.

Ruling that surgeons and physicians are directly responsible for treatment of patients after operations, the court awarded the damages.

After being removed from the operating room, she was placed in bed, attendants put hot water bottles about her. Her lawyers, Marcel Herand and Jean Mirat, declared that her legs were badly burned and disfigured.

Dog Finds Its Owners After 18 Months' Trip

Los Angeles, Calif.—Mutt, five-year-old pet bulldog belonging to Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Stone, and even more especially to the three Stone children, came back home after a year and a half of wandering and a 175 mile limping journey from the former home of the Stone family.

The dog had wandered away from home shortly before the family came to Los Angeles and sought his masters since that time, Stone said.

Thief Steals Banknotes but Their Value Is Nil

Pasadena, Calif.—A burglar who found a double handful of banknotes in the home of Prof. J. W. Kalkowski must have been disappointed when he got home. The notes included 10,000 Russian rubles of the post-revolution era, not worth the paper they were printed on, and 1,000 German marks of the post-war years.

Unkind Comment. What Chicago thought of Cincinnati back in 1882 is shown by this piece of reprint from the Herald of that city, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. "We learn that Cincinnati is to have a College of Physical Culture. Unless it is at the head of an inclined plane and run in connection with a brewery and a German band it will be declared unconstitutional."

Many Buttons, the More the Smarter

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It has a peculiarly interesting story to tell. At first glance it might well be taken for a one-piece dress or perhaps a skirt with a bodice top. It is none such. What it really is, is a dress-and-jacket combination of novel design. To explain in detail, a bodice-like jacket with fur-bordered sleeves buttons up the back, or down, if you prefer to have it so, over a one-piece dress made of the self-same black rabbit's hair wool. The long sleeves belong to the frock. However, the point we want to make is that it buttons up the back in latest approved manner.

When it comes to coats a many-button fastening gives them a decidedly new styling. The coat pictured has buttons from tip-to-toe. It is of beige woolen and the bow is of wide brown moire ribbon, pulled through a slot in the cape and then tied. Of course the wearer need not stop and meticulously button every button into its buttonhole. The ultra thing to do is to fasten three or four casually at the waistline as pictured to the left in the picture. Even the sleeves are buttoned at the wrist and the cape likewise subscribes to the button vogue.

Which all goes to show that there is absolutely no such thing as overdoing the button fastening. What's more, every sort of button from the simplest bone types to the most gorgeous jeweled effects are employed.

When buttons are not actually used to fasten, they play a decorative role, one of the cleverest movements being the placement of buttons in a single row, outlining necklines and other edges. They are using button trims on hats, too. Velvet berets with velvet-covered buttons grouped on their crowns are among the new Paris showings.

© 1932 Western Newspaper Union

AUTUMN—modes call for buttons and then some. Whole battalions of them are ranging themselves on the new frocks, coats and blouses. They are apt to park most anywhere, these legions of buttons, maybe in a prim row up and down the front or back, or like as not diagonally across the bodice front or fastening the sleeve even up to the shoulder line or in ornamental groups. There's really no feeling what course buttons are apt to pursue this season, for they seem to be having it all their own way as to when, where and how they shall be used.

When you button that new frock, coat or blouse, be sure to button it in the once old-fashioned but now new-fashioned way with honest-to-goodness buttonholes. It is really the chic way of doing it. Crowd as many buttons into space as you will, the more the smarter.

As to whether you button this or that up the front or down the back or vice versa, well, that is really a matter of choice, although we must say the new woolen dresses and crepe blouses which button down the back are frankly good looking. The outfit which the modishly attired young woman is wearing in the picture, turning her back to us so as to better display the buttoned fastening, bears out this statement.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of intestinal flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Cadwalder St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her. Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to be sure you get the genuine.

Across the Atlantic

The first air crossing of the Atlantic was made by the United States Navy's seaplane NC-4, which made the crossing in May, 1919, from Trepassey Bay, N. E., to Plymouth, England, with stops at the Azores, Lisbon, Moudogo river and Ferrol. Two other seaplanes which attempted the feat at the same time were unsuccessful. The NC-4 was commanded by Lieut. Com. A. C. Read, U. S. A., under whom was a crew of four.

The first nonstop flight was that of John Alcock and Arthur W. Brown, English and American flyers, who crossed from St. Johns, N. E., to Clifton, Ireland, in June, 1919.

Garden Varieties

Little Thelma Jane, on hearing the grownups speak of the old fashioned flowers in her mother's garden, was impressed by the names of the various vines and plants.

Two of her aunts came for a visit. After lunch she asked them to go with her and see the flowers. When they reached the garden, she called out:

"Oh, Aunt Alma, come over here and see the holly-hops; they are in bloom, and over on this side is fox-citria."

WHEN DEWEY FIRED ON MANILA FORTS

Spanish Pilot Recalls Day of Apprehension.

It was evening on Manila bay. Out of the purple dusk the American fleet loomed into view drawn up in battle line.

In a little pilot boat, alone except for one sailor, stood Francisco Aquado, the Spanish pilot of the port. He gave an order to the sailor, and they sped through the channel to where the Spanish man of war were anchored.

"The Americans have come," he said to Admiral Montojo.

"Go tell them at the fort," said the admiral.

Francisco hastened up the river in his little boat to tell the captain of the fort. Then he went home through the streets of Manila where the news was spreading wildly from group to group. He went home to await the bombardment.

The way he recalls the suspense of that night, listening for the big guns which opened their bombardment with the first light of dawn, makes one feel the terror of the populace, who thought of the American sailors and bluejackets as cutthroats and bandits.

"And now I am returning to Manila," said the white-haired captain. "I want to see the bay again before I die."

Born of Spanish parents of years ago in Manila, Aquado was educated in Cadiz, Spain, and Glasgow, Scotland. He was a huge, strapping youth, over six feet tall and sixty-six inches around the chest.

When he gave orders he needed no belaying pin to make the sailors obey. His iron fists were argument enough.

He became pilot of the port of Manila shortly before the Spanish-American war, and after peace was signed became an aid to Admiral Power. Then from 1903 to 1927 he was harbor master at Manila, and during the war had charge of Count Folz von Luckner's vessel after it was interned.

"Since 1927 I have been at Washington fooling away my time and spending my money," said the old captain. "But I have six of my children still alive in Manila and I want to go back there."

Like a figure out of a novel by Conrad the old harbor master and sea captain looks back over half a century of adventure and tells his tales. Ships and men nowadays aren't what they used to be when he was a boy.

He will be welcomed back to Manila like a returning hero, navy men say, for he is one of the best known and best liked figures in that part of the world.—Kansas City Times.

Roadside teeling is charming to think of if there were not so many dangerous men.

Golden Dinner Service Not Alone for Wealthy

Would you like a gold dinner service or, rather, one that looks like gold? If so, it will not be long before you can buy it just as cheaply as the familiar nickel plate.

Curiously enough, the new "gold" is made in Sheffield, England, the city of steel. The first just-like-gold dinner service was made as the result of a joke. Messrs. W. Turner and company had been experimenting for some time with a new alloy of aluminum and bronze which has all the appearances of good red gold. "Why not make poor men feel like millionaires?" someone suggested, and for a feat the first near-gold dinner service was made. To the surprise of the firm it aroused an immediate demand. People liked the idea of eating off gold, and the new metal is easy to look after, since it is almost stainless.

The biggest demand, though, is likely to come from South America and other Latin countries, where there is a deep love of gold itself or of metal that looks like it.

SMART TOWN WEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Materials were never more versatile or novel or richly colorful than they are this season. The sentiment is all in favor of quality-kind weaves. The fur-trimmed coat-dress sketched to the left is outstanding, both as to its styling and its material, which is a patterned rough spongy silk and wool weave called rogodura. Its little geometric pattern is unobtrusively interwoven. It is dull, thick, drapy and delightfully lightweight—very desirable for high class street and spectator wear. The contrasting scarf collar has a bit of astrakhan about it which adds to its tone. The other dress is fashioned of a deeply pebbled, lusterless heavy crepe. It cleverly simulates, in its styling, a modish wrap-around effect.

Trimming Is Confined to Paris Above Hips

Paris continues to confine all trimming—if any at all is used—to the portions of frocks or coats that are above the hips. The wide-shouldered, narrow-hipped, long-legged figure continues to be fashion's idea of the perfect silhouette, and clothes are designed to either accent or emphasize these features.

FALL BRINGS NEW NOTE IN SWEATERS

The vogue for suits this fall has brought all sorts of new ideas in sweaters in its wake. Every woman who has a tweed or knitted suit wants to vary it with at least three blouses, and one of these is sure to be a sweater. The latest in sports sweaters are gay plaids, combining the costume color with bright contrasting shades. These sweaters appeal to the school and college girl—for you can't get too much color on the campus.

They are very simply styled, for their gay patterns are sufficiently decorative without further elaboration. One especially smart one, in a bright green, red and yellow plaid, for wear with a great tweed suit, has a high crew neckline, fastened with three buttons. It is finished at the waistline with a wide-ribbed band, and the slightly full sleeve has a tight ribbed cuff.

Another favorite with the school and college set is the crew-necked slip-over, usually in hand knit effect, in solid color. This is youthful and practical, and is worn in color to contrast with the skirt.

Paris Sets Out Show of New Winter Modes

Cosack hats are displayed in Paris centers of fashion, with a form-fitting silhouette as the last word in winter styles. Black and colored felt astrakhan are to be worn tipped over the forehead with virtually aklight clothes.

The new silhouette shows shorter skirts, 12 inches from the ground, and has plain bodices and sleeves. The skirts are emphasized by widened and padded shoulders, with the waistline high in front and dropped decidedly in back.

Knitted stocking caps, with a high rolled rim, the outstanding headgear with sports wear. The colors are smoke blue, hyacinth blue, cabbage red, geranium red and pumice gray.

Veil Fits Tone of Chic to New Fall Fashions

With her high pinched-in waistline, leg-of-mutton sleeves, high neckline, and hat perched at a precarious angle, this fall every woman will want to indulge in her secret ambition to wear a veil. The coquettish possibilities of the veil, as part of the Edwardian silhouette, are irresistible.

There are a lot of new wrinkles, literally and figuratively, in the new fall veils.

What a famous clinic discovered about this amazing Baby Food!

ORIGINATED 75 YEARS AGO
: : : NEVER SURPASSED IN DIGESTIBILITY : : : EAGLE BRAND NOW PROVED IDEAL FOOD IN PHYSICIANS' TEST WITH 50 BABIES.

WHEN Gail Borden originated Eagle Brand back in 1857, he did so because there was a crying need for a pure, safe milk for babies. No one knew then what we know now of food values. No thorough scientific research had as yet been made in infant feeding.

Yet, amazing though it seems, this baby food created by Gail Borden proved so remarkable in its nutritive value and in its digestibility that it has survived 75 years of revolutionary discoveries in nutrition—has raised three generations of splendid babies—and today, in as thorough a test as was ever given to a baby food, has proved itself unsurpassed in baby building!

Today, Eagle Brand is hailed as a most modern baby food—second to none in its scientific proof of performance.

How the test was made
Recently, two famous baby specialists conducted a feeding test with fifty average babies. For months, Eagle Brand was the only food these babies received, except for the supplementary foods* now given with mother's milk or any milk. X-rays were taken of their bones. Blood counts were made. Tooth development was watched. Heights, weights, strength were recorded. And all these records were compared with records of other groups fed on other baby foods.

At last came the verdict. In every way, the comparison was favorable to Eagle Brand. For those Eagle Brand babies showed themselves superbly nourished. This simple diet—Eagle Brand with the usual supplementary foods*—was wanting in nothing that a baby needs for health, growth. Your grocer has Eagle Brand. See directions on label.

*The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic vitamin D.

Oscura Items

The Halloween party at Oscura was a decided success and a most enjoyable occasion. The program was excellent especially the Ghost play which was organized and given by the pupils. The hall was beautifully decorated, and bats, owls, witches, and goblins were everywhere in evidence. The music was good and everyone was gay. The prizes for the contest waltz were won by Mr. and Mrs. Martin of Tularosa. The gifts were a bead necklace, and a bead watch fob. The fun lasted until the wee sma' hours.

On Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, Mrs. J. V. Taylor gave a very enjoyable dinner party in honor of Mrs. Geo. Dixon. A in every phase of life, Be it high or be it low, If we need some good advice Then we always seem to go To Maggie.

When the clouds are in the sky And we all are feeling blue As the flowers to the sun Then we always turn to you Dear Maggie.

In these days of sad depression When the skies are overcast We have met to give expression From the first unto the last Dear Maggie.

Of our keen appreciation And our boundless love for further treat was bestowed upon Mrs. Maggie Brazel who was the recipient of a shower of beautiful and useful articles. Mrs. Dixon presented the gifts in the guise of Depression, and recited the following lines:

To Maggie

you For your fine consideration And your deeds of kindness too,

Dear Maggie.

So we hope that you'll receive These souvenirs—tho. small And we trust that you'll believe They are gifts of love from all To you, Dear Maggie.

Miss Bruuk very kindly took Mrs. Dixon to the Roswell New Mex. Educational Association last Wednesday. They arrived in time to attend the Educational Council meeting.
