High Winds Damage Community Hall

Yesterday's high wind blew the roof off the Community hall, parts of which sailed through the air and landed in the courtyard while the remaining pieces fell partly in the city park, breaking down one of the trees and damaging another, and in the rear of the Johnson hospital breaking out the window lights and damaging some out buildings. It is estimated that the cost to repair the damage done at the Community hall alone will be $1,000. The porch was blown from Mr. Paul Mayer's office building also. The posts were buried over the roof and fell near the First National bank. Shingles were flying thickly everywhere and the wind was so dense at times it was difficult to distinguish objects.

The winds were so severe about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon that the teachers decided it was best to dismiss school and send the students home. Windows in one of the school rooms, were blown out.

The Faith That Life Is Stronger Than Death

IN A spirit of solemn festival Easter is celebrated, commemorating to all Christians the miracle and mystery of Christ's resurrection. Its season in the Northern hemisphere is the springtime of nature's rebirth, a perennial drama of life arising anew from the death and darkness of winter.

In the simple words that tell of the earliest Easter, there is evident the wonder of its witnesses and the joy with which they found their hopes come true.

In a more ancient story, written when no legend lacked a meaning, hope was the last gift of the gods to a world infested with evils and sorrows.

It has been said that the times have taught us again the value of faith and the need for it. If this is so, then this year's Easter will be widely observed in serious and thoughtful spirit.

The modern man is perplexed with many problems, but those that touch him closest are old as humanity itself. He seeks life's purpose and its destiny. He is aware of his own bewilderment and troubled by the sardonic certainty of death. Life makes him many promises and asks much of his energy and ambition, but grants no guarantee of peace or prosperity or happiness.

The Christian finds a sufficient answer in the significance of Easter morning. The foundation of his faith is the promise of resurrection and its supreme fulfillment in the risen Christ.

For every flower of spring declares that nature is no pessimist and has kept her promises since the world began.

To Bring an Easter Smile In northern Europe, many peasants still greet one another with the cry, "Christ is risen." The answer comes, "He is risen, indeed." Then colored Easter eggs are exchanged.

Concerning the Origin and Observance of Lent

THE forty days of Lent are regarded as being kept after the example of Moses (Exodus 24:28) and Elijah (I Kings, 19:8), and above all, as commemorating the fasting of Christ (Matthew, 4:2).

The forty-day fast dates to the early fourth century. Its origin is obscure. In the early church the duration either was not fixed or it varied in the churches in different countries.

According to the Catholic Encyclopedia, St. Leo (who died in 461) exhorts his hearers to abstain that they may "fulfill with their fasts the apostolic institution of the forty days."

"The passage of primary importance," it resumes, "is one quoted by Eusebius from a letter of St. Irenaeus to Pope Victor in connection with the Easter controversy. Irenaeus says there is not only a controversy about the time of keeping Easter, but also regarding the preliminary fast."

His Back Broken, Reports for Duty

Atlanta.—Because attendance is one of the strong points in rating efficiency, two members of Atlanta's Naval Reserve battalion went to the annual inspection with a broken back and a broken arm, respectively, but they took part in the three-hour drill and the 1932 attendance record was recorded as 100 per cent.

"MOUNTIE" IS SAVED BY HEROIC INDIAN

Struggles Across Frozen Wilds at 49 Below.

The Pas, Man.—How an Indian prisoner with bones broken in an airplane crash crawl through a sub-Arctic blizzard to bring help for his captors was told in this Canadian outpost as an aftermath to the death of Pilot William A. Spence, star northland flyer.

The Indian, Buster Whiteway, was being returned to civilization by an officer of the Canadian Mounted Police to face the white man's laws. The plane, which bore the captive, Corporal R. Graves of the police, an Indian interpreter and Pilot Spence, turned over in a forced landing on the treacherous ice of Moose Lake.

The engine was ripped from its base and crushed the pilot to death. The other passengers were seriously injured. The Indian prisoner, his ankle broken in the plunge, crawled away from the wreckage.

Into the blizzard lay liberty, but the wounded brave chose the other course. Details of the Indian's sacrificial decision came to this rail-end only recently. It was learned that Whiteway had dug his way through the snow as the mercury stood at 40 degrees below zero until he attracted Indian fishermen.

They left their lines and ran to aid. Muskies took the word to civilization. A relief plane took off amidst swirling snow.

It bore Dr. N. Trimble of The Pas, and Sergt. P. Rose, fellow officer of the dead pilot. Forced to land in the storm, they fought the last four hours of their journey by sledge. The doctor gave first aid to the wounded trio and covered the corpse.

As the weather cleared, the return of the wounded and the body was made possible.

Stepfather Who Adopted Girl Now Would Wed Her

New York.—Surrogate John Hetherington in Queens was asked to make a ruling by which a girl will become the stepmother of her two half-brothers. The surrogate decided to hold a public hearing but indicated he is likely to grant the petition.

The girl is Ida Tatzreiter Drugowitz, born twenty-two years ago in Austria. Her mother, Mrs. Polde Tatzreiter, brought her to America and married Leo Drugowitz. There were two children by the Drugowitz marriage.

In June, 1930, Mrs. Drugowitz died. The next month, Drugowitz legally adopted Ida Tatzreiter, the half-sister of his children. Since then, Ida has acted as "mother" to the other children in the Drugowitz home. Recently Drugowitz and his adopted daughter decided to marry.

Drugowitz happened to mention the matter to his lawyer. He was advised to have the adoption abrogated. Papers were filed.

South Dakota Ranchers Fight Cattle Rustlers

Deadwood, S. D.—Cattle rustling again has become prevalent in the Black Hills. Stockmen have reported losses of 15 to 20 head of cattle from their herds, and some ranchers are missing as many as 30 head.

Croton-on-Hudson, N. Y.—Cornelius Playford, of Ossining, is through with lame ducks. Playford saw a disabled wild duck struggling on the shore near Croton Point, captured it, took it home and was nursing it back to health when a game warden arrested him for possessing a wild duck out of season. Playford pleaded guilty before B. Steward Baker, justice of the peace, and was fined $12.50.

Prison authorities have sold his handwork and Harvey has thus earned enough to give his family $1,502.18 within the decade.

Tales of Pirate Gold Not All Mere Fiction

Pirate gold exists mainly in legend and in fiction, but some genuine treasure turned up recently when a poor Bahama fisherman led the police to a cache on the shore of New Providence island. Here he had found five bars of gold bullion worth about $50,000 which had been buried beneath a wild plum tree among rocks bearing a sign of Freemasonry.

In many a tale of pirate gold or other hidden treasure, a pile of stones, a tree, a cross, perhaps, and a map with mysterious symbols appear. Hence the most recent Bahama treasure, yarn runs more or less true to form. And it is quite true that pirates and buccaniers found safe havens among the numerous islands of the Bahamas group. One recalls sinful old John Watling, who gave his name to Watling's Island and who died by a bullet while engaged on one of his raids.

And there was another nest of pirates who harried the Bermuda salt rakers when they went yearly to the Bahamas to harvest their "crop" from the ponds they had established as early 1678 on Turk's Island. The Bermudians, in their 20-ton sloops with slave crews, raked the salt in winter, selling it in the American colonies or exchanging it for foodstuffs which they took home and sold. It was a lucrative trade for sixty years or more, despite the interference of pirate bands.—New York Times.

Easter, the Birth of Sunday

EASTER, by the derivation of its name, is intimately connected with the East, the sun-rising, day-dawning point! It symbolizes for us the beginning of a new era, with death no longer a blank door closing upon human existence, opening upon only uncertainty or fear beyond; with sin no longer interposing a dense veil between mankind and an offended Creator.

Instead, it tells of life as the Spring-time of a glorious summer, illumined by the beauty of a gracious Father reconciled to mankind—of death as but the entrance to a fuller life in another sphere.

A new life-blessing Sun issued from the garden tomb on Easter morning, and ever since that day of the opened grave we have called the same first day of the week Sunday and made it a happy and should-be holy rest day as a weekly memorial of the most beneficent and most revolutionary event this earth has ever witnessed since upon it light was first made to shine.

FRIDAY, APRIL 14, 1933
Mrs. E. Smith, Editor and Publisher

For several years the government has been making an effort to give away or destroy the wheat surplus. Ed Howe who believes that some time sooner or later man is called on to account for the mismanagement of his affairs, predicts that the next great calamity will be a shortage of food staples and a famine.

If this ever happens it will put to rest for a long time to come, the question of which is the greater hardship, over production or food shortage.

Taxes are the uppermost object before our government and must come down to conform to the times. Everybody must get down off their high horses. Labor and the farmer are down, and please do not forget that toll and soil pay all the taxes eventually. They produce the wealth therefore they pay.

You can't advertise today and quit tomorrow. You're not talking to a mass meeting. You're talking to a parade.

Mr. Finley handed us the following letter from the County Clerk of Chaves county which we publish. This letter speaks for itself.

Roswell, N. M.
April 4, 1933.

Mr. M. U. Finley, Carrizozo, N. Mex.

My Dear M. U.:—
Si, es con mucho gusto, that I advise you that the County Board of Equalization at its regular session Monday, April 3rd, reduced all real estate and its improvements (except ranch lands) by 25 per cent for 1933 valuation. This reduction is in line with your request of January 31st and I hope that the Board's action will give you as much pleasure and satisfaction as a "Birdie" on a 500 yard hole.

Yours very truly
Geo. L. Foreman
County Clerk.

Democrats Met Saturday to Settle Misunderstandings

In response to a call issued by the County Chairman, a meeting of the Lincoln County Democratic Central committee was held at the Courthouse at Carrizozo, New Mexico on April 8, 1933, the purpose of said meeting being to iron out difficulties which had arisen within the Democratic organization.

The meeting was called to order by the Chairman. There were 24 members present in person and 11 by proxy.
A motion was made by Mrs. Marie Cavanaugh to have a committee of five, headed by Dr. Barry of Corona as Chairman of same, to formulate a set of rules and regulations for the purpose of straightening out any difficulties or problems which might have appeared or might come before the County Democratic organization, and for the handling of patronage. A discussion followed and Mrs. Cavanaugh withdrew Dr. Barry's name as head of the committee before the vote was taken. The motion was defeated by vote of 26 to 9.

A motion was made by Dr. Barry that the committee of nine, whose appointment was authorized at the Democratic Central Committee meeting of December 10, be rescinded. Motion carried by a vote of 30 to 5.

A motion was made to concur with the resolution adopted regarding postoffice endorsements at the state meeting of County Chairmen held in Santa Fe February 11. The motion passed unanimously.

Dr. Barry moved that other vacancies in patronage positions which might occur in the various precincts should be filled by people who were recommended to the County Chairman by the precinct committee after consultation with the Democrats of their precinct. Motion carried 30 to 5.
The following resolution was read by Mr. L. D. Merchant and was unanimously adopted.

A RESOLUTION
"Be it Resolved, By the Democratic Central committee of Lincoln county, New Mexico, in session at Carrizozo this 8th day of April, 1933; That Whereas "Disension in our ranks threatens to destroy the friendly relations of members of the Committee, and the efficiency of the organization; that we, the members of the Committee, now endeavor to act in a spirit of justice and fair dealing in all matters which may now properly come before the committee.

"Be it Further Resolved, That in order to accomplish the great end good for the Democratic party, that a spirit of harmony and confidence should prevail between members of the Committee, and between committee members and their constituency, and that personal and self interests tend to defeat rather than to aid the true cause of Democracy.

"Now Be it Further Resolved, That in the premises aforesaid the committee shall enter upon the task of settling honest differences of opinion as between members; that members individually, and collectively as a committee, shall appear in a better light in assuming blame for mistakes of the past, rather than by casting reflections on others.

"Now Therefore, Be it further Resolved, That the Democratic Central Committee, in appreciation of the high order of efficiency and integrity of its officers, and wishing to give expression to that sentiment of appreciation, do hereby extend to the Honorable Herman E. Kelt, Chairman of the Committee, a vote of confidence and thanks for services rendered in the cause of Democracy."

Mrs. Marie Cavanaugh then took the floor and apologized to Mr. Kelt for a statement which she had made to the effect that Mr. Kelt had not filed the minutes of the Central committee meeting of December 10th, with the state Democratic headquarters. Mr. Kelt accepted the apology.

Secretary,

Rail Innovations for Chicago Fair Travel Announced by S. P.

Planned to meet all travel needs the lowest and greatest variety of roundtrip railroad fares to Chicago for the World's Fair this summer will become effective May 15, it was announced here today by Southern Pacific officials.
The travel bargains for this season such innovations as roundtrip coach and tourist tickets having return limits of 21 days, and similar short limit "vacation" tickets for standard Pullman travel with stopover and other privileges. These are at considerably lower rates than the regular summer excursion fares that have limit of October 31, which will be available again this season.
In addition to the exceptionally low rates for World's Fair trip to Chicago, it was pointed out that proportionate fares for the various types of travel will be available to cities west of Chicago. Diverse routing will be permitted on all classes of tickets from most cities in western states. It was made known.
The Chicago Association of Commerce has announced a surcharge from hotel men and others not to increase prices during the fair. Detailed estimates for visitors in that city, as well as full information concerning the new travel rates, may be obtained at the local Southern Pacific ticket office.

Excursionists will have until April 25 to complete their journeys, it was stated.

The Livestock Situation

Los Angeles, April 14—As a step towards reducing the marketing expense to western stockmen, reductions are announced to take effect not later than April 15 by the Los Angeles Livestock Exchange and the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards. Lower commission charges and yardage charges were made voluntarily by the stock yards interests as a part of the general movement to reduce marketing costs and thus aid the livestock industry to get back on a sound footing.

After all, the costs of marketing livestock are very small in relation to the volume of sales. While all stock yards charges are on a flat basis, even at today's relatively low price, there are few products of any kind that are marketed at such a small percentage of total value. In ordinary times, the entire cost of marketing cattle at a public market figures only about one percent, and today's values still leave the marketing costs very little in excess of two percent. I don't know of any other agricultural marketing machine that does business on such a small marketing expense, nor do I know of any manufacturing industry that is able to hold its entire selling expense down to one or two percent.

An outstanding feature favoring the livestock industry throughout the business depression has been the fact that at all times it has been possible for the stockman to find a ready, cash market for anything he wanted to sell. This has provided stockmen with ready cash at a time when many other products of the soil were difficult to turn into money.

Few people realize the vastness of the livestock industry in the western states. On the Los Angeles market alone, stockmen were paid in cash, approximately twenty-eight million dollars and this sum is only about one half what was paid out in 1928. In addition to this enormous cash outlay, sheepmen had their wool sold into cash. In view of the fact that slightly more than 40 per cent of all livestock slaughtered in California is purchased by Los Angeles packers, it is evident that Californians last year, spent approximately seventy million dollars for cattle, calves, hogs

Economic Highlights

The drive against depression continues. A this writing legislation affecting the railroads and the issuance of securities is being pushed principally. Rigid restrictions will be placed over security issues. Railroad legislation will be designed to give the rails better opportunity to compete with trucks, waterways and other carriers, and to effect economy in operation. It is believed that a "federal coordinator of railroads" will be appointed by the President, with authority to direct the elimination of wasteful practices and needless competition among carriers. This plan has the backing of the security owners' group and of New York savings banks. There has been no official announcement as to whom the rail coordinator will be, but the name of Carl Gray, president of the Union Pacific System, is being put forward and has received wide backing. The President recently announced that there was, as yet, nothing definite about his rail program. A possible exception to this is his broad project for resolving Federal regulation of transportation into a single agency composed of five divisions, each dealing exclusively with railroads, highway and waterway carriers, aviation, radio and telegraphic and telephonic communication.

The Farm Board will die officially on May 27, unless there is some unexpected change in the attitude of Congress. Death-knell was the signing of the President's farm credit reorganization order. The Board started in June, 1929, with $300,000,000 of government money called a revolving fund. Its speculations in farm commodities attracted international notice. Two-thirds or more of the original fund has been lost. The Board will be replaced by a different kind of government relief body. It is doubtful, however, if the Administration's farm bill will apply extensively to 1933 crops, due to delay in its becoming a law. The bill is frankly an experiment, and if it does not succeed it is promised the plan will be abandoned and another tried.

It was widely said during recent weeks that the best sign of the hour was waning public confidence. Now we find evidence of recovery beginning to appear in the business statistics. The index of wholesale prices which has been declining steadily for months, recently made its first sustained rise. Farm products have shown an improved trend. An upturn in carloadings has appeared. There is a substantial increased demand for such household appliances as washing machines, of which sales in February were the best in five months.

Indications toward the end of March were that commercial failures would be the lowest for that month since 1925 or 1926.

and sheep to be converted into meat. Many millions of dollars additional are spent in other states for pork products which are shipped to California.

The amount paid out to stockmen does not complete the financial picture, at the most packing and distributing business represents an investment of many millions, payrolls and supplies run into more millions. More millions are spent by retail meat dealers for wages, rent, advertising and so on.

It is important that our bankers and business people generally come to a fuller realization of the importance of the livestock and meat industry, which turns such a huge volume of cash into circulation all thru the year. Anything that adds to the value of livestock and meats immediately adds to the general volume of business for the entire industry is operated on a strictly cash basis.

Everyone is agreed that recovery will be gradual—most agree that it will be steady as well, and that there will be no fear of important recession. New money is appearing, due largely to the war on hoarding, and it is providing jobs and stimulating production.

Business is writing itself down, by enormous figures, as even a cursory glance at current annual corporation reports demonstrates. Millions of dollars are clipped from the figures at which concerns have been valuing themselves. These reductions in assets, of course, require a corresponding decrease in stated liabilities. This is accomplished by cutting surplus or reserves. As far as the stockholder is concerned this does not change the real value of his holdings in the least. It is simply a change in book value which, in many instances, had no connection with real value. It is heralded as a healthy sign for all concerned.

Tax reduction remains uppermost in the public mind. A definite start has been made with the cut in veterans' compensations, and the 15 percent reduction of Federal salaries. Many of these cuts have already been compensated to the recipients more or less by the decline in the cost of living. The next Federal move is expected to be drastic reorganization of bureaus and departments to eliminate waste, unnecessary activities and duplication of effort.

The Treasury has been disappointed in the yield from the new miscellaneous taxes. Revenues to the government from sale of such articles as oils, matches, pistols and revolvers, etc., have been below the estimate. On the other hand there was a substantial recent gain in revenue from the automobile tax and the gift tax.

Tax losses from other sources were offset by a rise in income tax receipts. This is nothing to be proud of because the rise was due simply to higher individual tax rates, rather than to increased personal or corporate earnings.

The local postoffice has revenue stamps for sale. They are to be used for bond issues, sales and transfers of bonds, real estate conveyances, foreign insurance policies, etc.

"Which, being obliged to speak honest, an' beggin' yer pardon, it don't make no difference," Amos began. "Which, the fact is, Satan picks out his help careful like he done in the Garden of Eden. I may be a gram mistrustful but I never let a word out o' me till the wrath o' God is in my spirit an' I have to spit it out. You've promised to marry the d—dest, purtiest, neatest, Goddiness gal that ever a man set his eyes on. This infernal war has showed us apart which I say that's ten thousand us tore away from our hums an' families an' the work we should be a-doin'. If we can stan' it why—hell an' blazes—you ortn to be able to keep yer tender yo an' I say it knowin' the power o' Satan."

"Thank, Amos. It's all very true. I had never thought of that. I take off my hat to you. Satan has had me belly-deep in the mire."

"That ain't nobody that's safe—not nobody. We got to feelin' peart an' the fust we know our heels fly in the air an' down we go which I pray God to keep us from the flames o' hell an' help us to find pleasure in the way o' grace."

"After a little silence Amos continued: 'I've fetched myself to the pint o' tellin' ye suthin which fer the time bein' it's a mortal secret. I'm in love an' calculatin' on bein' married as soon as the war'll let me.'

"I congratulate you. Tell me about the woman and how it happened."

"She's a spick an' span widder woman where I was billeted on the Long Island—'bout my age, good, honest, Christian woman, well put up an' a good worker which she runs her own farm an' has it all paid for. Ain't so handsome as some but pleasant spoke an' she can ride a horse an' pull a trigger. It was slow hard work to intention her which she wouldn't have no private talkin' till she'd heard all 'bout me from General Greene. Then she was easier to get along with but she kep' me an' arm's length away. I was never worse afflicted which it wasn't easy to see the pointin' o' Providence.

"One evenin' when we was alone together I draws out my watch an' I says, 'Betsey, that bein' her name—'Betsey' I says, 'I'll give ye one hour. Afore it's up ye got to say yes or no. I'm purty nigh wore out.' My constitution is breakin' down."

"I showed her the watch an' put it on the table which she only smiled and kep' on a-knitin'. I walked up an' down in this here new blue uniform. She watched me smilin' which I guess she liked o' liked the looks o' me. I went away an' tried to make up to her. She draw' back an' says: 'Eyes on an' hands off!'

"I sets down an' takes the watch in my hand. Byn by I says: 'Ye've got just three minutes more.'

"Not a word, 'eck o' heci! The last minute come."

"I says, 'Betsey, I'll not do us no harm to ketch down an' pray.'

"She look' at me an' I prayed as I never prayed afore. Kep' her on her knees yer half an' hour. I could say to the Lord what I couldn't say to her an' I puts white good licks which I laid down all the facts in the case.

"Byn by I stopped prayin' an' I says to her: 'Betsey, if ye ain't convinced now I'll pray some more.'

"Don't she says: 'My constitution has broke down. I ain't know that you could be so anxious.'

"Anxious' I says. 'In like a dog chasin' a rabbit.'

"Well, I believe it, she says. 'You come here an' give me a kiss.'

"She were just waitin' to see how anxious I could be. We done some kissin'. She fetched a bottle o' rum an' we had a good time together an' you better believe it. I'm a lucky man which that ain't nobody's mistake."

"I'm happy to know about it," said the young colonel. "I hope now that Satan will let you alone."

"A man let a letter when he's intentioned proper as to women," said Amos.

"Which that ain't no doubt o' that," Colin answered, laughing as he imitated the dialect of his friend.

They parted at a fork in the road. When Colin returned to the great house on a hill in the lower highlands, which the Commanding in Chief had chosen for his headquarters, he found Mrs. Bowly waiting for him. The General having ridden out with his staff, the young man went with his friend to a rustic seat in the gardens for a talk.

"Did you find Miss Fayerweather?" he asked. "She's here."

"I did."

"I fear that you risked your life in doing it. I am very grateful, and my ears ache for the news. But first tell me how you found her."

"My life was in no danger. I got well down the lake when a wind came up. It was hard going, around the points. I hid my canoe in a cove, marked the place, and took the trail. A British scout overtook me, going north. It was a funny part o' the woods. He kept my pace and we went on together. I told him that I was a loyalist woman going to see my sister in Montreal. He began to make love to me. I didn't like him. He was a hard-looking man. Of course I couldn't put up with it. I warned him to let me alone. He wouldn't."

Colin interrupted her, saying: "You've had a hard time. I'm sorry."

"You needn't be sorry for me. I felt sorry for him. He didn't know me. He undertook to hug and kiss me. I threw him against a tree. It hurt him. It made him mad. You're a d—d rebel in disguise," he said. "Reckon he thought a woman couldn't be so stout. He drew a big God-o'-mercy pistol and fired at my head. He missed me. I didn't miss him. It was him or me and he got it. Tried to bring him to but I couldn't. Carried him off in the bush and looked over his papers—mostly maps of the country around 'Tl' and Wood creek and the upper Hudson. There were also a few letters. There were also a few letters. I put on his clothes and cap and left mine there. With a pair of scissors and a small-looking glass in my pocket, I trimmed my hair to about the length of his. His hair and mine were alike in color. With his hanger and pistol and the papers in my pocket, I went on."

"Got to the big river, saw an immense log raft with a hut on it coming in the distance. I made a rough paddle with my hatchet, pushed a strand of plus log free, straddled it and rode it out to the channel. When the raft came along I boarded it. The raftsmen, eager for news from Yankeealand, gave me a welcome and a good dinner. They worked their raft out of the current and behind the great boom near Montreal. I went ashore and to the house of my sister, who is married to a loyalist. I filled my friends with astonishment when I told my story. They helped me. I did not change the garments I wore. Was there nigh a week.

"Near the town was a large camp of the British and the headquarters of Sir Guy Carleton. Got through all right. I wrote a note to Miss Fayerweather in care of General Carleton, thinking it possible that she would be at his house for I remembered that the letter signed 'Nancy' had been sent in his care. I told her that a scout then quartered at the address of my sister had just returned from Yankeealand with important news for her. She was there. She came in a shawl with an' studs of the general. She dismissed the aide. Never have I seen such a beautiful maiden—like a young fawn in midsummer. I fell in love with her myself. I shall never forget the look of her when she opened the letter and ate it up with her eyes. She kissed it and held it before her face. I know what that meant."

"Is it too late?" I asked.

"She arose and looked down at me proud and kind o' scornful.

"You do not know him? That is what she said.

"Yes I know him and I know about Nancy."

"Again she looked at me with big wide eyes.

"Then I shall tell you that you have come in the nick of time."

"She came and took my face in her hands and kissed my forehead and says she:

"I could love every one who knows me. Can you take me back with you?"

"It is a long hard journey with many nights in the open," I said. "It is not for you. There are dangers and my canoe would not hold two of us."

"If she had been one of my scholars I would have had to give her a slapping," Mrs. Bowly went on with a chuckle. "She said some very bad words about her luck. I will not quote them. They sounded so funny I had to laugh. Of course I do never met a high-up city gal."

"Forgive me," says she. "I've lived in hell so long I'm losing my religion."

"She sat down at a table and wrote a letter to you with my sister's pen. Here it is."

Mrs. Bowly drew the letter from the pocket in her skirt and gave it to the young man. He read it eagerly:

"My beloved: Your letter is like a warm wind in the spring. It has blown the clouds out of my sky. A few drops of rain fell as they were going. God is good to us. I can no longer doubt that our love has His favor in spite of the fact that I have learned how to swear. Even the best of Americans know how to do that. It's in the blood. I have heard General Burgoyne say that America is so full of trouble—rocks, stones, trees, stumps, swamps, roots, mosquitoes, bad weather, plagues and savages—that even religion is hard work so that every one who tries to practice it needs a minute of rest now and then. When you add war to all this even women should have a minute or two, often, for needed relaxation. I am happy now—like a ship come to anchor in quiet water with green trees in sight after a hard voyage. I was dreading tomorrow. I had promised to give Harry Gage his answer tomorrow. Now I know what it will be. I shall be going into Yankeealand, with the army, if I do not find a way to go before it leaves. I should try to go with the bearer but he is a curious-looking stranger and since he has heard me talk he might be afraid of me. I am only a maiden—God help me—and what can I do but wait? When you learn that the British army has moved south you may know that I am with it if I am not dead of old age. I think that we have had enough of this suffering for the sake of posterity. Mother Enslow tells me of an old tradition among her people that when three Americas will be free and independent. She reminds me how often the number seven has been honored in sacred history—how God rested the seventh day and made it the Sabbath.

She tells of the seven vials, the seven trumpets, the seven golden candlesticks, the seven spirits of God, the seven wonders of the world, the wise men. I asked what were the seven wonders and—think of it!—she didn't mention you. Worst of all I am three times seven years old and it is 1777. The British may not be worried but these seven threaten you with a new peril—me. I am superstitious enough to believe that you and I are going to be free and independent this year and that future generations will no longer need our help. I hope, at least, that they will give us an honorable discharge and that we can go away to a quiet spot far from the hateful smell of gunpowder and all the talk about rebels and redcoats and let the nations do as they please. Meanwhile I am "Your true and devoted "Pat."

When he had finished reading the letter he said with action fitting the words: "I kiss your forehead just as she did. You have been a good friend to us. Neither Pat nor I can ever forget what you have done."

"I have more to tell you," the good woman went on. "I gave her one of the letters which I had found in the pocket of the scout. I did it because I recognized the handwriting. It was addressed to Col. Harry Gage. I knew the devilry that was in it. If you ask how I knew it I answer only because I am a woman. I gave the letter to Pat. She looked at the address. 'That is the handwriting of Nancy Woodbridge,' says she. 'I wish that I knew what is in that letter!'

In Anger He Turned His Horse Toward the Enemy.

"Let me look at it," I said.

"She gave it to me. I tore it open and read it to her. Here it is. I brought it with the other hidden under the lining of my coat. The penmanship is that of a man. The envelope was addressed by Nancy. It's a beautiful plot to capture you and Pat. I put my heel on the serpent's head."

Colin read this letter written in New York:

"Dear Colonel: It's a stupid place with nothing going on but tavern riots and old ladies' teas and dinner parties. The loyalists are mostly gone save those who are stricken with palsy. The beautiful Nancy Woodbridge is here exclusively for the entertainment of Colonel Cabot of the Washingtonian regiment. He is with her often until midnight. The naughty old baroness, her aunt, is rushing their little romance. I hear that there will be a wedding early in September. This news of your rival is all I have to send save my love to my father, and best wishes to you. From "Your bored and devoted friend—

"Robert St. Leger.

"P. S. As I write my name I am urgently called to New Jersey so I give this to a friend who agrees to dispatch it for me."

"It has been a lucky trip," Mrs. Bowly went on. "That man's letter was the best part of it. Nancy is out of gunpowder. She's harmless so far as Pat is concerned. She must be a cute miss; she and Harry were a good team. Pat told me of Nancy's beauty. Don't let her get her arm around your neck. She's dangerous. You helped me in my trouble with the Indians. I've never forgotten it. I like you and I was glad to help you."

The masterful Mrs. Bowly arose and offered him her hand.

"You great, intrepid, woman plucker!" he exclaimed. "I wonder if any man could have done what you have done. You have a singular astuteness and there are few men who have your strength and courage."

"From the cradle I have had the heed of all that. Men have it. My husband is like me. But I am mortal fond of a love story. I'd foot it to Canada any time to keep a good story from going on the rocks. A man wouldn't. I get stirred up when I see low-down dirty work."

He gave her a five-pound note saying:

"You would make a good soldier."

"When the British come from Canada I may be fighting with my husband. A lame man and his wife are looking after the children."

Colin went to his task. She took a ship to Albany.

Two days later Clinton landed four thousand British on York Island three miles above the city under the cover of five big gunboats.

It was an impressive array that crossed the Brouwer farm that day pushing toward the American line. What a variety of color! Horse guards; Fusiliers! Dragoons! Redcoats with blue and yellow facings, broad belts over the shoulder, clubbed hair tied with ribbons, officers' hats laced with silver and gold, the polished metal gorgets under their chins glowing in the sunlight! As they advanced the cannonading was severe. The American line could have been defended but its fighters were sorely out of courage since their recent drubbing. They had seen men shattered by cannon-balls and ripped by bayonets. With little experience they had no heart for that kind of weather. A panic spread among them and soon they were all in retreat.

General Washington hurrying to the scene met and tried to rally them. They could not be turned. They went on leaving him exposed to the advancing enemy. A new Washington was now with Colin Cabot who had been riding at his side. Mortified and dismayed, the Chief was in a rage. He snapped his pistol at the retreating men. He threw it on the ground. He threatened them with his sword. "My G—d!" he exclaimed, "are these the kind of men I must depend upon?"

In anger he turned his horse toward the enemy. It seemed as if he were of a mind to end his humiliation in a brave and sudden sacrifice rather than join the rout of men fleeing from their duty. Colin Cabot seized the bridle of the white horse and turned his head. In a moment they were behind a hill riding rapidly northward. The Chief was himself again. The revolution was not dead. In the two minutes of time just behind them the tide of war had turned. As they rode along the young colonel got a vision of its effect upon human history. He writes:

"In this hour the one great captain in our force got a baptism which made him equal to all discouragement."

A sense of shame overtook the fleeing men. The next day they fought well. A force of English light troops were roughly handled by Connecticut and Virginia men and nearly destroyed, three hundred of the enemy being killed and wounded. It was a victory. Followed by the British the American army made its way to the western side of the Bronx River valley where retreat was possible.

The Chief advised the evacuation of Fort Washington on the North river. Greene, in whom he had much confidence, opposed his plan. The blustering, rooco General Lee was in command of it. He was then saying that his army and that of Washington must each stand on its own bottom. Soon the fort surrendered with a loss of two thousand men. It was not an unequalled misfortune, for Lee was at heart a traitor. The less power in his hands the better.

Late in November, Washington defeated an effort to surround him while he was retreating with daily losses to New Jersey. When he had crossed the North river only three thousand of his men were with him. They were dependable. They were willing to die for the man who led them. The retreat continued to the shore of the Delaware without tents or entrenching tools. The weather resisted them with snow and cold wind. The men were poorly clad. The feet of many were naked or covered with blanket rags. Those were the first days of shivering and bloody footprints. Lee was ordered to cross the river. He loitered at his post and was captured on the way by dragoons.

But the time was near when the enemy was to be filled with dismay by the genius of the big American Chief in the Fabian arts of swift movement, frustration and delay. Preparation for a decisive battle is expensive and when it is suddenly discovered that the enemy has safely moved to Paris unknown, the effect is disheartening. Crossing three thousand miles of sea to make war in a strange, unfamiliar setting, is at best a costly enterprise.

The expense of it was vastly increased by a corrupt administration of its finances and a scarcity of ships and seamen. Food went bad on the long journeys and was soon a store of maggots. Horses starved to death, men rotted with scurvy and were thrown into the sea or came through sickened by the hundred and unfit for service to be a charge on supplies. Chaos and confusion were at work with each other. General Washington knew that continued frustration and delay must, soon or late, break the spirit of the strongest empire.

December 8, 1776, Washington crossed the Delaware and broke down all the bridges. He had commandeered every boat on many miles of the river. While the last men in the rear were landing, the British van, baffled in its pursuit, arrived on the shore behind them. The little army was safe in the shelter of a forest.

Col. Alexander Hamilton, a slight but handsome youth, scarcely twenty years of age, had handled his artillery company so admirably in the retreat that Washington summoned him to headquarters that evening. The young man spent an hour in conference with the Chief.

With no bridges and no boats, Howe cantoned his troops on the New Jersey shore at Trenton, Bordentown, White Horse and Burlington. They settled down comfortably to wait for a time when the river would be roofed with ice to give them a smooth march upon Philadelphia.

Congress prepared to move and the inhabitants of the Pennsylvania city were in a panic. Many were leaving their homes. Soon there were few carriages in the city. He was happy who could press a milk cart or a market wagon, to move his family. They took to the river on "wood flats" in whose grimy cabins no one could sit erect. Refined ladies slept on deck until driven to cover by falling snow.

The British were in need of rest and, sheltered in their retreats from the severity of an American winter, with taverns and markets to satisfy every need of the body, the spirit of joy and slumber fell upon them.

"Oodles" of Joy in Birthday Cake

A birthday cake is one of the good things to eat which children always expect at a birthday party. It is the main feature of refreshments. There is something so gala about it, surrounded as it is with lighted candles, few, but full of significance. When one is young, there is a proud feeling of importance when candles are many, which is entirely lost in later years.

Sponge and Angel Cake. Simple sponge cake is just the kind to have for a youngster's birthday. It is easily digested, and nourishing. Angel cake is another good kind. Avoid layer cakes. A top frosting supplies enough sugary sweetness, and this frosting should not be too thick. But let it be gay with name and dates.

Layer Cake. For a child about twelve years old or in the teens, a rich cake can be used and it can have layers. The name and dates are not so important, but the candles continue to be. Fun is instilled into the party refreshments if tiny favors are baked in the cake, the sort of favors that come just for such purposes. Be sure to tell the young folk that there are favors so that they will be on the lookout for them and not bite hard on them. Each favor is supposed to have a meaning. A wee boat or train signifies a trip, a ring means marriage, a thimble indicates an old maid, a dime means riches, etc.

Decorative Frosting. A good frosting for ornamenting cakes is made as follows: 2 egg whites, 3 teaspoons freshly squeezed lemon juice, or 1 teaspoon orange juice to 2 of lemon juice. The lemon gives zest, and is not for flavoring purposes. Use any preferred flavoring. If vanilla is wanted use 1 teaspoon of it. Lemon and orange requires but 1/2 teaspoon. Add 2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar to the unwhipped whites of eggs. Beat 3 minutes before beginning to add more sugar, which do slowly, beating one or two minutes' each time after adding sugar, before putting in more. When frosting is heavy enough to spread, put in a pastry tube and press in a stream over the already iced cake. Use any preferred vegetable coloring for the decorative icing, which must, of course, be of different color from that already on the cake. The flavoring and coloring should be added to frosting after three of four additions of sugar, so that both get well distributed.

Aged Lady Dies in Fort Worth

Mrs. Katherine E. Lipscomb, age 97, died at her home in Dallas, Texas, April 8th, 1933. She was a daughter of Dr. S. Dixon, who as major in the United States Army led troops in the Indian wars.

She was a granddaughter of Jeremiah Dixon, who, with Charles Mason surveyed the Mason-Dixon line.

Among her survivors are, a brother Sam Houston, Dixon of Houston, Texas and Mrs. Allie Dixon Reasoner of Carrizozo, New Mexico. Fort Worth Record, Fort Worth, Tex.

The Methodist Church, Easter Sunday Meeting

We will have a special Sunrise service on the Mal Pais Easter Sunday (next Sunday) morning. The Sunday School and Epworth League, as well as the church, will participate. This will be our only service for Carrizozo for the day. Plan now to attend and reserve the sunrise hour. The sun rises at 5:30 Easter Sunday. We want to be on the Mal Pais and singing the praises of our Risen Lord as the sun comes up.

Be at the church at four thirty. A good wood fire will be built at the meeting place sometime Saturday night. But wear your wrap.

The Glorious Game of Golf

The game of golf is very healthful and popular, we have played all out of door games and none of them so attractive as golf. If I were a sculptor and had the power I would chisel my thoughts on a marble stone eulogizing and praising this wonderful game. It is a social good fellowship friendly sport. I can't visualize a person who has the time and desire for out door sport remaining away from the golf links. We all know it is there that health, clean exercise and friendly fellowship exist. All normal people are sportily inclined and when possible do get a bunch of pleasure out of this modern game.

Jones; School Song, Crimson and Black; Presentation of Diplomas, Mrs. R. E. Blaney; Presentation of Perfect Attendance Certificates, Mr. M. C. Quillen; Closing Song, by the School.

Our two young 8th grade graduates, Bessie Brown and Paul Brasel, are a credit to any community. They are thoughtful, thorough students, finishing their grades with high marks. They have planned to go on and on in the educational field and any high school enrolling them is fortunate.

It is to be regretted that after two very successful years in Oscura, Mrs. Dixon has been called to another field of labor. Her work will be in Grant county next year, near Silver city. Lincoln county's loss will thus be Grant county's gain.
