Six O'clock Dinner

The 6 o'clock dinner given last Friday evening by the Woman's Club of Carrizozo was an entire success from every standpoint. The husbands of the members, and the members of the Business Men's Club and their wives, and the general public were invited.

Mrs. B. D. Garner prepared this elaborate five course dinner which was served to about one hundred and fifteen. The Woman's club colors, royal purple and gold were represented in all table decorations and favors. A large gold dollar placed at everyone's place had a 4 leaf clover and other good luck emblems imprinted thereon, but when opened it proved to be chocolate candy.

The menu cards were hand painted folded autumn leaves with menu on one side and program opposite.

The elaborate center piece, "The Ship of Good Fortune" was made by Ben Sanchez of Mr. Ziegler's store. This ship may be seen in the News-Office window. It is 4 feet long, 3 high and is indeed a work of art.

Rev. John I. Lawson lead in prayer which was followed by a round of music in which everyone was invited to join.

Mrs. Glassmire, whose personality irradiates graciousness presided as toast mistress. Mr. Brickley's toast, "Ladies First," was responded to by Mrs. Blaney. Father Brady sang a solo, and in his usual obliging manner responded to two encores which added much to the delight of those present. Miss Melas gave the definition of the words "Woman's Club." The novelty dance number by Miss Hupperts was lovely. This graceful young dancer of ours also responded to an encore. "Cheer Up," by Mrs. Paul Mayer, was the last number, followed by the Hocus-Focus Vaudeville show in four acts. Performers in the show were Mmes. Sam Allen, Mrs. D. X. LaVallee, Mrs. Edith Crawford Mrs. T. A. Spencer. Members of the Kitchen Orchestra were Mmes. Clouse, Lemon, Groce, Kelley, Young, Schaffer, and Misses Melas and Herringa.

Mrs. Glassmire's message to the entire crowd was, "A Brighter 1933." She had a very neat way of putting her message across. It was in the form of a puzzle, placed in an envelope at everyone's place. The first lady and the first gentleman present who solved the puzzle, each received a prize box of candy. Mr. Boughner and Mrs. Degitz were the lucky ones.

Be sure to read the ads this week. You may overlook some bargains if you do not.

Every Young Person Should Finish High School

A business man remarked the other day that he would not employ a young man or woman who did not have at least a high school education, supplemented by a good business training in a reputable Business College. This gentleman expresses the sentiment of at least nine-tenths of the larger employers. If there should be a young person on the verge of quitting high school before finishing, this man's remark should be a solemn warning.

Now that business demands a high school education and all the schools of higher learning have their doors closed to a non-graduate, it makes him almost an outcast so far as his educational status is concerned.

This should be a distinct challenge to the youngster who wants to quit. For when the doors of all the colleges are closed in his face and business demands a high school education, this should make a young person think twice before he quits.

We are told that one of the outstanding business schools, located at Tyler, Texas, is requiring for entrance into its more important courses a high school training. What, then, is there left to the non-graduate but to dig ditches and draw water?

This editor has always urged young men and women to finish their high school training and at this particular time, when all the higher professions seem to be overcrowded, we think a business training in some good school like the Tyler Commercial College and School of Business Administration at Tyler, Texas, is about the most sensible thing for a young person to do after finishing high school.

If you are graduating from high school and write this College for one of its catalogs, it will give you some valuable information about business training. We understand the catalog is free. Adv.

For a Few Cents a Day

The home with a telephone has many advantages—for a few cents a day.

A telephone provides priceless protection against delay in case of sudden illness, accident or life.

It provides the convenience of saving countless errands. It brings social calls, invitations, and banishes loneliness. It's a contact with employers who want to reach folks the quickest way.

These and many other uses, are part of the telephone's daily service.

The Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Co.

Prem's Bargain House have some specials mentioned on page 8.

Mrs. J. S. Cook of White Oaks was a welcome and pleasant visitor at the News office yesterday. By the way, Mrs. Cook writes White Oaks items exclusively for the Lincoln County News. She has been unable to write for us of late, but expects to start again at once.

Sight of a Hearse Works Swift Cure

Pueblo, Colo.—Ignacio Montez was lying, nearly unconscious, and badly beaten up, in a police ambulance when he saw a hearse pull up alongside of the ambulance. That was enough for the twenty-six-year-old Ignacio. He left that place and left right then.

Injuries and all, he scurried away as though in a hurry, and police never did find him again to take him to the hospital for treatment for his bruises.

Ignacio, police said, had threatened a fellow Mexican, and the man he threatened promptly leveled the pugnacious Ignacio with a two by four.

Ignacio didn't mind the ambulance ride, but when he saw the hearse he apparently thought the police were going to transfer him to that.

JILTING BRITISH MAIDENS COSTLY

Fickle Romeos Find That Juries Award Larger Sums.

London.—The cost of jilting layars is going up in Britain.

Fickle Romeos who changed their minds, have paid out something like $100,000 so far this year. This is a record.

Not only are the disappointed Julietts receiving larger sums in payment for broken hearts, but more of them are taking breach of promise action. More than fifteen cases are down for hearing at the next court session.

In 1927 girls were receiving verdicts in the neighborhood of $250. Now they are being awarded five times that much without much trouble.

At Brighton in 1928 a jilting girl received $3,500. In the same year a London jury assessed the damages at $27,000. A similar sum formed the basis of a settlement in a high court action this year.

Claims for breach of promise by men are not unknown. In 1926 a man counter-claimed damages for breach of promise in an action brought against him by the girl's father. Needless to say, he lost the case.

The most novel claim was made by a girl against her dead lover's executors.

She claimed that her lover, before he died, repudiated his promise of marriage. The claim was held invalid, however, because the promise was a personal one which death had made incapable of fulfillment.

Id the Winner; Ego Is Busted; Eric Is Berserk

New York.—Eric Moythaler normally is a peaceful man. He does not know he ever had an id, that mysterious thing hidden deep down in mankind's innermost parts which little limp that it is—strives forever to make a Mr. Hyde, the minister, out of a Doctor Jekyll, the gentleman.

Nor does Moythaler know that he also contained a super-ego; the thin veneer of civilization which, superimposed over the id, constantly battles with the latter for the good of man. He did not know that only his super-ego restrained him from battling papa over the head with a sledge-hammer or dropping baby down the well.

Mr. Moythaler was content to do his best as a wholesale grocery salesman, a job which necessitates much calling over the telephones.

Many, many times he got "phone's busy," "wrong number," or "your time is up; deposit another nickel, please."

Some days ago Mr. Moythaler's super-ego wore thin. One more "line's busy" and the id burst through, destructive as Vesuvius.

Mr. Moythaler snatched the wires off the telephone and threw them out of the booth.

"(O! O!) shouted the id. "I'm free and loose and its my night to howl." Since that time Mr. Moythaler has occupied himself with sneaking into drug stores and subway stations to snip off the wires of the public booth phones. He wrecked 301 phones in the midtown section.

Police caught him and Mr. Moythaler will have four months in a quiet cell that his super-ego may have a chance to squelch and subdue his id.

Hunter Misses Rabbit and Injures Eight Men

Plainfield, N. J.—Eight members of a road gang employed by the borough were slightly wounded when they were showered with buckshot from a gun in the hands of John De Blase, who had been hunting rabbits.

A charge that missed a fleeing rabbit carried the shot into the gang of workmen. The injured men were taken to a hospital and after receiving treatment were able to return home. De Blase was arrested and is being held pending an investigation.

Bright Youth Holds Out $31 on Tough Bandits

Chicago.—When two bandits pointed revolvers at Lawrence Hellert, fifteen years old, a school boy, the youngster did not flinch. He handed them 15 cents he had in his pocket and the gunmen allowed him to go his way. Concealed in a watch pocket which the bandits did not search was $31 belonging to the school treasurer, fund which the boy was taking to the bank.

For Sunday Night Supper, or Lunch

Well to Keep Supply of Canned Delicacies on Shelves.

Whether you keep house seriously or "kitchenetly," as some put it, you are almost certain to keep a supply of canned crab meat, tuna fish, salmon and lobster meat on hand. They are called on then for main dishes and salad, for lunch and for Sunday night supper and for canapes and for entrees—if you go in for formal dinners.

Of these four foods, lobster perhaps has the more distinct flavor. A very good brand of canned lobster must be selected on this account. Packs of lobster vary more than packs of the other fish unless it is the crab meat, which is of two distinctly different kinds. The Japanese crab meat comes in larger pieces, keeps its natural flavor, and is packed in such quantities that it is used largely. It is particularly good for salad whenever large pieces are desirable. Personally, a household authority says, I like both lobster and crab left in "nirly large pieces when a salad is prepared. At least a third as much celery as fish is used for these salads, and mayonnaise is mixed with them. Tiny capers or minced green olives improve these salads. Tuna may be used the same way. When salmon is used as a salad, it is better left in larger pieces—as it comes from the can. Plenty of mayonnaise should be arranged, with hard cooked eggs—cut into lengthwise eighths—around the salmon. Eggs are, of course, often used to garnish the other fish salads. Any one of these fish may be put into an aspic jelly with celery and sliced stuffed olives. A ring of salad of this sort may be served with cucumbers cut into dices and mixed with mayonnaise or with a mixed vegetable salad—dressed in the same way.

For canapes, the fish is usually finely minced and well seasoned before it is spread on rounds of toast or fried bread. Sometimes the salad mentioned above is molded in tiny molds—not more than one inch in diameter. When these are turned out of the mold they are put on toothpicks and eaten with canapes, as an appetizer.

For a creamed dish, or for its richer relation the Newburg, lobster and crab are the favorites. The creamed fish is served on toast in patty cases, or is put in ramekins or in a large baking dish, covered with crumbs and browned in a hot oven. When high seasonings and pimentos and green peppers are added to a creamed dish

It is sometimes known as "devil'd." Any of these fish make delicious timbales and squaffles. One is as good as the other. Sometimes a Hollandaise or a Tartar sauce is served with these hot dishes.

One other delicious use for these sea foods should be mentioned. They make such delicious cream soups as "bisques," as they are called. Of course, they are a little heavy for dinner, but I know of one household where this is a specialty of the hostess and where guests are always hopeful of having a meal begin with her famous lobster bisque.

In either of the recipes given, of product can be used to better advantage, but we are quite likely to find good use for them often in their canned form.

- Salmon Timbales.
- 2 tablespoons butter
  - 2 tablespoons flour
  - 1 cup milk
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - 1/4 teaspoon chopped parsley
  - 1/4 teaspoon onion juice
  - 1/4 teaspoon white pepper
  - 2 slices pimento
  - 1/2 cup ripe olives, minced
  - 1 cup flaked salmon
  - 1 cup bread crumbs
  - 1 tablespoon butter

Heat two tablespoons butter and add the flour, gradually add milk and stir until it thickens. Add salt, parsley, onion juice, pepper, olives, pimentos and salmon to mixture. Pour into buttered ramekins, cover with crumbs over which one tablespoon of melted butter has been poured. Place ramekins in a pan of hot water and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) until the crumbs have browned. Garnish with parsley. This recipe may be doubled for a luncheon dish.

Spinach Ring Filled With Lobster and Crab.

- 3 cups cooked or canned spinach
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups cream sauce
- 1/2 cup fine bread crumbs
- 1 cup flaked lobster meat
- 1 cup flaked crab meat

Chop spinach—no and add grated onion, which has been browned in butter. Season with salt, black pepper, paprika and add the well-beaten egg yolks. Mix the spinach with one and one-half cups of cream sauce and pour in the well-beaten egg whites. Place in a buttered ring mold and dust with bread crumbs. Place in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for twenty minutes. Loosen the spinach by pressing from the side of the mold with a knife, turn out on a hot platter and fill the center with lobster meat and crab meat heated with rest of white sauce. Garnish with strips of pimento or slices of lemon or hard-cooked egg.

No matter which way the wind is blowing it can be made to sail a ship if the sails are properly set to the wind. Like-wise changes in business conditions offer opportunities. If people will confidently attune their plans to conditions as they really are, and not to conditions as they have been, or as we wish them to be, we feel confident that the next twelve months will be profitable ones.

The heads of many business concerns occasionally spend time waiting for the day to come when business will "happen" their way. Such people may become blinded to the eternal fact that business comes where it is invited and stays where it is well treated. It is best not to wait for business to "happen," but to Advertise and encourage it to happen.

Taxes will be Reduced

If anything could forcibly illustrate the law of diminishing returns resulting from increasing costs beyond a reasonable figure, the three-cent letter postage has turned the trick.

Postal revenue has been lost which will never be regained from the same class of mail, for the simple reason that the public has devised ways to use third-class mail instead of first

The same thing will take place with gasoline. As gas taxes are shoved up beyond reasonable figures, smaller cars will be used less, and the volume sold will diminish, thereby producing less revenue for the state.

The public is something like the horse. You can lead the horse to water, but you can't make him drink. You can tax the public beyond its ability to pay, but you can't make him pay.

The political subdivisions of this nation, from the smallest hamlet to the Federal government, should readjust the tax bill and public expenditures to fit the ability of the people to pay.

The papers are filled with reports of meetings of tax experts, tax commissions, and other organizations of "tax spenders" who are in some measure to blame for the present taxation problems of the people.

As advisors on the financial affairs of the people, they have for years taken the easiest course, acquiescing in public demands for extravagant public expenditures without raising their voices in protest or showing where exorbitant spending was leading the people.

experts," instead of recommending drastic cuts in public expenditures, are hunting ways and means to increase existing taxes or find new methods of taxation.

The same thing is going to happen to every city, county, state and the nation itself, that has happened to millions of families--they will be forced to get along on less money than they thought was possible a year or two years ago. Instead of increases in taxes or new methods of taxation to balance public deficits, there will have to be decreased taxation and decreased public demands on a balanced scale, which will eventually wipe out the deficits.

Families are paying up their bills now on reduced income simply by reducing their expenses below their income. Governments will have to do the same thing.

Control Your Thirst

The Senate and House of Representatives are far apart upon the question of prohibition repeal, or amendment of the Volstead Act. There is no one in Washington who expects any legislation upon this subject during the present Congress. When the new Administration comes into power a few weeks hence the issue will be before Congress but it is expected that the stress of the new Administration will be upon economic and party promises directed toward curing unemployment and rehabilitating agriculture, industry and banking matters. So we might add a gentle suggestion to the wets to control their thirst. The brewers are scheming for the return of the saloons to retail their beer.

Some people worry because they receive enough salary to make it necessary to make out an income tax statement, and the rest of them worry because they do not.

It used to be that men who stole horses were hung for it. Nowadays, when a man is tried for stealing an auto, it is the jury that is hung.

The 20th Amendment

On Saturday, January 21st the State of New Mexico was the 35th to ratify the federal constitutional amendment changing the terms of the president and congressmen so as to eliminate the "Lame Duck Session." Idaho ratified the amendment the same day. Last Monday the Missouri legislature ratified the amendment, making the 36th state or the necessary three-fourths required for it to become effective. Several other states tried to be the 36th in line, in order to have the honor of the deciding vote.

The new amendment will--
1. Convene newly elected Congresses on Jan 3, following election instead of thirteen months later.
2. Abolish the holdover short sessions which bring back a previous Congress for three months

2. Change the date of presidential inaugurations from March 4, to Jan 20.
These provisions come into force Oct 15, under the terms of the amendment. This means that Mr. Roosevelt's term will end Jan. 20, 1937, instead of March 4 of that year. His term will be 43 days shorter, meaning a loss of $10,954 from his salary.

Can We Exist Alone?

In a world where space has been annihilated by fast transportation and instantaneous communication, can any nation exist alone, remote from others?

Most economists answer with a decisive "No" to this. They point out that the problems of all peoples are much the same, that a brotherhood of purpose is more necessary than ever before, that world cooperation is vital not only to economic recovery but to the future maintenance of international prosperity. They believe that good and liberalized foreign relations, acting as the basis for stimulated trade between countries, holds the hope of the future.

There are sound grounds for believing that. The collapse of American exports trade which was caused as much by tariff wars and embargoes as by hard times—has closed hundreds of factories. It has thrown thousands of men out of work. It has caused bond defaults and lost dividends. It has made itself felt in every business and retarded purchasing power and industrial expansion.

We cannot sell to other lands unless they can sell to us. The entire world wants the products of American factories—the automobiles, typewriters, tractors and similar machine products we make. They can buy them if we buy products of theirs that we need. This does not mean that we should subject American factories to cheap-labor foreign competition, but it does mean that all the phases of the problem of foreign trade need overhauling and readjustment.

The Livestock Situation

Los Angeles, January 29, 1933. Although the demand for stocker and feeder cattle has shown marked improvement and there has been some strengthening of values on that class of stock, the general fat cattle market has lacked a healthy undertone. A huge amount of meat is being consumed in Southern California but there appears to be quick protest against any upward revision of prices. With feedlots near Los Angeles practically emptied of cattle, many in the trade had been optimistic of some improvement in cattle prices. So far, this optimism has not been reflected among buyers.

As indicated by the record slaughter of cattle and hogs in Los Angeles County in 1932, there is a tremendous demand for all kinds of fat livestock in Southern California, and actual sales indicate a generally higher market on the Pacific Coast than prevails on the eastern market.

The range of prices continues very narrow on cattle, with good quality steers selling at a very small premium over mediocre and plain stock, and at prices that make steers appear relatively low in relation to cows and heifers. One of the chief difficulties faced in the cattle market is the very low value of hides and other by-products. When it is remembered that the average hide weighs roughly seven per cent of the total weight of the beef animal, and with cured hides selling at only three cents a pound, it may be seen that the hide is generally selling for less per pound than beef cutters.

There has been some strength in the lamb market, due in part to smaller numbers of lambs available, and also to the fact that the wool market is in much healthier condition than the hide market. The 1933 crop of lambs is already being marketed, mainly from Imperial Valley of California and Salt River Valley of Arizona. "Baby lamb" is meeting with good reception from consumers and rightly so because the early lambs offer the consumer strictly choice meat.

Two Burglaries In Alamogordo

From Alamogordo Advertiser. The burglars operating in this locality seem to be perfecting a chain system in carrying on their work. Two stores were broken into last week, one on Friday night and another Saturday night. Sometime past midnight Friday the burglars made a raid on the Allen Grain Co., corner Eighth street and the railroad and got away with about two thousand pounds of flour. The lock was broken on the front door of the storeroom and the sacks were taken to the back door and it is supposed loaded on a truck and hauled away, as a railroad man living nearby said he heard a truck starting in the vicinity sometime after midnight. The robbers operated so quietly and in such haste that the watchman in a building across the street failed to detect them.

Saturday night a raid was made on the Thomas Grain Co. on Ninth street near the railroad, and about 1000 pounds of flour stolen. Entrance was made by breaking in a side door, and the intruders scattered books and papers promiscuously around over the floor. The lock was broken on the safe, although there was a sign that the safe was unlocked, indicating that it contained no money or valuables, except to the firm. The yeggs—there must have been more than one—did all the unnecessary damage they could in scattering records and papers, while searching for money or something of value. They must have been unable to read the sign that the safe was not locked or were in too much of a hurry to pay attention to it. The flour stolen was the extent of the loss except the damage to the safe and the door by which the entrance was made.

Plaids and Checks Next on Program

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT IS plain to be seen that plaids, checks and stripes are making rapid strides toward the center of the stage. Nor is their vogue confined to any one phase of fashion. The influence of these colorful, daintful patternings is being felt all along the line from bathing and beach frocks, sports outfits, tailored suits and daytime frocks even unto the most formal of evening gowns.

Having turned their attention in this direction, designers are keying up the mode to a dramatic point, tuning it as it were, to every hour of the day, on into scenes of midnight festivities. Beginning early in the morning plaids and stripes are scheduled to make their appearance in the form of adorable little gingham frocks to which are given an added charm via fresh looking plique and organdie details. As to stripes they are choosing the very chic crinkly seersucker for their avenue of expression. Go into the smartest dress shops and you will see more cunning plaid and striped wack frocks than you have seen for seasons and seasons past.

For later in the day the program carries to a series of charming plaid woollens which are delightfully youthful in their make-up. Two such are illustrated in this group. The model to the left is of lightweight gaily colorful Scotch plaid flannel with white organdie trim. The wearableness of this attractive dress for informal daytime occasion is told at a glance.

The plaid for the other dress to the right is more modest in its tone. It is a one-piece though it gives the impression of a two-piece. Green and metal decorate it. The collar and cuffs are of eyelet embroidery.

As you will see by the jaunty scarf and beret pictured, millinery, as well as our suits and our coats and dresses, is inclined to follow a checkered career this season. Matching sets such as this are one of the smartest fads of the present moment. The combination is black and white in this instance. The pompons of the same wool yarn add a touch of coquetry to the headgear which is most fetching.

However, the group illustrated does not begin to tell the story of plaids and checks as they are now being featured. To see plaids in a full measure of glory, one must visualize the stunning new swagger coats which are made of soft woollens which are patterned in big bold plaids, the ambré plaids being especially good-looking.

The continued call for striking contrast, which is more than ever insistent for spring, has proved an urge to designers to make up either gorgeous plaids or femine neutral checks with plain material. Outstanding for spring are the ensembles which top a dress of plaid or check woolen with a three-quarter coat the lines of which flow loose from the shoulders, with the plaid or check of the dress repeated in a conspicuous scarf.

TEA GOWN IS BACK IN FASHION WORLD

The tea gown—relic of the mature decade—is back in the fashion spotlight.

For tea for ten or dinner for two the style world has revived its trailing lines. The 1933 version, however, is slim, silky and the last word in chic. No ruffles or flounces mar its simple lines; no "fashion truth" appears in its design.

Luxurious fabrics fashion these new tea gowns. Jewel tinted velvets bordered in fur and faces draped over shimmering silks are favorites. The bodices are simple and fitted, sleeves plain or drooping, while the skirts cling closely about the hips and sweep into a train.

Tucked-in-Blouse Being Revived by Designers

With the abandonment of the priceless-waisted skirt, Paris couturiers seem to have revived the tucked-in blouse, which languished for a season. If the blouse is not tucked in, it stops at the waistline just over the skirt.

Because of the high neckline on so many, the style of fastening them at the top of the back by a short row of buttons is a feature to be noticed, as this permits the blouse to be slipped off over the head.

Angora Beads Suggested as Splendid Neck Warmer

Angora beads strung together by little disks of copper are just about an unusual looking as they sound.

The "fuzz" of the angora might tickle a sensitive throat, but for others it forms a warm little circle under the chin and takes care of bones so unbecomingly to those unfortunate enough to have them. The best combination is white and copper, but colors may be had to match particular ensembles.

Little Shaved Hats

The latest little hats of closely plaided crepe feature a new shade of pale beige, particularly smart with either black or brown. They fit the head closely, reveal a new slant over the eyes and are altogether intriguing.

NEW BELT IDEAS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

This good looking daytime dress swaggers from start to finish. It is styled of a dark green crepe which has an almost laviable patterning in its weaves. The sleeves show the trend to mottled fullness which is being so strongly advocated for the coming season. The belt is of newest type, in that the metal arrangements as you see here is the last word in stride fastenings. The scarf ends are casually drawn through a metal ring matching those at the waistline. By the way, the latest metal trappings which adorn the new costumes are in copper. They blend handsomely with the tangerine and brown shades which are now so fashionable.

Patterns for Spring
First look at spring silk collections discloses that a large percentage of both printed and woven patternings is based on variations of crossbars, plaids, stripes and checks, the rating of popularity being in the order named.

NOTORIOUS BANK ROBBER EXPOSED ON WEDDING EVE

Girl Badly Shocked When Police Break Into Room and Take Him.

Kansas City, Mo.—Torn by stern policemen from the arms of the polished, cultured man she planned to marry the next day, Miss Alfreed Niday of Galena, Kan., has returned to her home to recover from the shock of learning that he not only is a notorious bank robber, but an ex-convict as well.

Speeding back to California, heavily shackled and closely guarded, Jay Sherwood Smith, World war veteran, is bowed down by the shattering of his romance and the knowledge that he not only must serve a term for the single-handed robbery of the Bank of America branch in Berkeley, Calif., but must complete a previous sentence on which he had been paroled.

Whirlwind Courtship.

Miss Niday, twenty years old, met Smith in Windsor, Ont., several months ago. He told her he was H. E. Foster, a real estate broker, and when she returned to Chicago to her job in a night club he followed. A whirlwind courtship ensued but Miss Niday was reluctant to marry, because back in Galena her elderly parents were depending upon her for their support.

Then "Foster" disappeared, after sending the girl a telegram that he had been enticed to California on business, but he did not mention that the business consisted of trying to explain to a prison board why he had not reported regularly to the parole officer after serving part of a six-year sentence in San Quentin. Nor did he tell her that this trip was being made in handcuffs following his arrest in Chicago.

Two weeks later he telegraphed her again, that he was starting east and wanted her to meet him in Kansas City. Again he omitted to tell her the rest—that he had obtained the money to rejoin her by holding up the Berkeley bank after the parole board had listened to his plea to be permitted to retain his freedom.

All that Miss Niday did know was that she wanted most eagerly to see him again and that if he repeated his proposal she would say "yes" this time. They met in Kansas City, he did propose again and they set the day for the marriage.

Police Tell Her Truth.

Then detectives broke into the room where they were holding hands and making plans—and told the startled girl the truth!

Smith, it developed, had gone to Florida after being discharged from the army following the World war, had become a land dealer and prospered until the collapse of the land boom beggared him. Then he turned to banditry, was caught after he obtained $3,000 from a San Diego (Calif.) bank and went to prison.

"I'll promise to go straight after I get out if you will wait for me," he told the weeping Miss Niday at police headquarters here.

"I'll wait," she sobbed. "I'll come west and be at the prison gate when you come out."

Which, indications are, will not be for a good many years. Will her love survive them?

THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

THERE is one characteristic of the American people that constitutes something of a puzzle to me. Whenever they have dealings with their government that result in disagreement, they simply rebel against a compromise. They want to go to court and fight it.

That reference, of course, is to civil matters. Criminal charges of which the government necessarily is the prosecutor occupy a different status. In theory, there may be no compromise in this respect.

Since the government must protect its own rights as well as prosecute individuals who violate the rights of others, it is readily seen that it requires a great law office to look after the business of the distinguished client, Uncle Sam. He really has an immense amount of litigation and in view of that fact he has his lawyers scattered in every important city in every state in the Union. They are so distributed as to make them available to the greatest number of people and thus avoid as much expense to the individuals and to the government as may be, since it would be impossible to place them in every community.

The government's law office, the Department of Justice with a cabinet member, the attorney general of the United States, at its head, naturally, has to have its headquarters in Washington. The attorney general is just like the general attorney for a railroad or a bank or any other organization. He is the legal adviser to the President of the United States, among his other duties, and represents the United States in every matter in which the United States has an interest. He, or one of his representatives, represents the United States likewise whenever penal statutes are invoked against anyone who transgresses the law of the land.

There is no better way to show the varied interests with which this immense law office is concerned than to set out its administrative organization for handling the vast amount of work.

The attorney general, of course, is the boss. His right-hand man is the solicitor general of the United States, who appears in behalf of the attorney general at all times in the Supreme Court of the United States. There is an assistant to the attorney general, an office created especially to deal with one type of prosecution, namely, the anti-trust law violator.

Seven assistant attorney generals serve in their respective fields with more or less limited subjects that they may become specialists in their work. One of them deals exclusively with questions involving tax laws and enforcement of prohibition; a second devotes his time to defending the government's interests in the United States court of claims where Uncle Sam is always a defendant and never a complainant in suits for money; a third has an assignment of work in connection with admiralty litigation and foreign relations as well as much of the financial controversies in which the government is concerned; a fourth does nothing but consider the government's rights in land matters, and with the memory of oil scandals still in mind the job embraces great detail; a fifth, assistant attorney general is the official criminal prosecutor of the great law office; a sixth is a highly trained lawyer in matters of customs, the laying of duties at the customs houses, appraisements of merchandise and such like, and the other official of this class seems to be the general superintendent, for it is he who watches over the scores of United States attorneys who represent Uncle Sam in their respective jurisdictions throughout the country.

It must be remembered, however, that before the automobile thief or the bootlegger is convicted, there must be evidence to satisfy a court and a jury that the defendant is guilty. So this law office has a group of highly trained investigators who do nothing but run down criminals and gather evidence.

The Department of Justice now has charge of enforcement of the prohibition laws, too.

But the policy of the government is to look after its citizens who have been found guilty of law violation, and the attorney general is charged with that duty as well. He manages, through his subordinates, of course, every penal and correctional institution operated by the federal government, and in connection with them carries out the national policy of trying to make better citizens out of violators before they are released again into society. There is a parole system and an arrangement for pardons, the latter a matter left to the President, and constant attention is given to means of improving those prisoners who will accept instruction as a means of equipping them to earn a livelihood without resorting to crime.

The courts, of course, beside the machinery through which much of the Department of Justice work is accomplished, but the judiciary constitutes the third branch of the government and ought to be treated aside from the executive establishment, of which the government's law office is a part.

Seven assistant attorney generals serve in their respective fields with more or less limited subjects that they may become specialists in their work. One of them deals exclusively with questions involving tax laws and enforcement of prohibition; a second devotes his time to defending the government's interests in the United States court of claims where Uncle Sam is always a defendant and never a complainant in suits for money; a third has an assignment of work in connection with admiralty litigation and foreign relations as well as much of the financial controversies in which the government is concerned; a fourth does nothing but consider the government's rights in land matters, and with the memory of oil scandals still in mind the job embraces great detail; a fifth, assistant attorney general is the official criminal prosecutor of the great law office; a sixth is a highly trained lawyer in matters of customs, the laying of duties at the customs houses, appraisements of merchandise and such like, and the other official of this class seems to be the general superintendent, for it is he who watches over the scores of United States attorneys who represent Uncle Sam in their respective jurisdictions throughout the country.

It must be remembered, however, that before the automobile thief or the bootlegger is convicted, there must be evidence to satisfy a court and a jury that the defendant is guilty. So this law office has a group of highly trained investigators who do nothing but run down criminals and gather evidence.

The Department of Justice now has charge of enforcement of the prohibition laws, too.

But the policy of the government is to look after its citizens who have been found guilty of law violation, and the attorney general is charged with that duty as well. He manages, through his subordinates, of course, every penal and correctional institution operated by the federal government, and in connection with them carries out the national policy of trying to make better citizens out of violators before they are released again into society. There is a parole system and an arrangement for pardons, the latter a matter left to the President, and constant attention is given to means of improving those prisoners who will accept instruction as a means of equipping them to earn a livelihood without resorting to crime.

The courts, of course, beside the machinery through which much of the Department of Justice work is accomplished, but the judiciary constitutes the third branch of the government and ought to be treated aside from the executive establishment, of which the government's law office is a part.

East Indian Caste Born to Servitude

When the Aryan race invaded India in the thirteenth century B. C. it devised the caste system to perpetuate its position of dominance. At the head was the class of Brahmins, identified with the ritual of the Hindu religion. Next came the fighting class of the Kshatriya, and the mercantile class of the Vaishya. The conquered races became the Sudra, whose duty was to serve the other three.

Because social position was determined by inheritance, on purely religious grounds, the system has endured longer than any other aristocratic rule. The Brahmins and the Rajputs, representing an amalgamation of the middle two castes, control the life of the people. They number about 240,000,000 and are graded into high and low strata among themselves. But all despise the Sudra, or untouchables, numbering 60,000,000 who are relegated to the bottom of society and menial occupations.

Among the Sudra, nevertheless, are some of the most enlightened minds in India. They owe their unfortunate position simply to the chance of birth. But they cannot be emancipated, as other Indians lost caste if they hold any intercourse with them, and are polluted by their touch. The question is religious and can only be settled by the Indians themselves. Gandhi, high caste himself, is fighting their battle, and though his fast brought undeserved odium on the British government, it ought to help emancipate the untouchables from their own race servitude.—Boston Post.

English Land Held by Lincoln Family

Antiquarian research has unearthed an interesting reminder of what is believed to be a link in the early history in England of Abraham Lincoln's family.

A record collated by J. E. Ansell of the Society of Genealogists shows that one Abraham Lincoln was a holder of land in Norfolk in the early part of the Eighteenth century. This record as published in the Times tells how in 1720 Abraham Lincoln and Sara, his wife, were joint vendors with Isaac Lincoln and Edward Rush and Lydia, his wife, of Garboldisham and Aldeby, Norfolk, to one Sir Edmund Bacon—Exchange.

HERE'S QUICKEST, SIMPLEST WAY TO STOP A COLD

Almost Instant Relief In This Way

If you have a cold—don't take chances with "cold killers" and nostrums. A cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICKEST, safest, surest way. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

That is because the real BAYER Aspirin embodies certain medical qualities that strike at the base of a cold almost INSTANTLY.

You can combat nearly any cold you get simply by taking BAYER Aspirin and drinking plenty of water every 2 to 4 hours the first day and 3 or 4 times daily thereafter. If throat is sore, gargle with 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets crushed and dissolved in a half glass of warm water, repeating every 2 or 3 hours as necessary. Sore throats ease this way in a few minutes, incredible as this may seem.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets dissolve with sufficient speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness. Get a box of 12 or bottle of 100 at any drug store.

Negro Kills-Froak Snake With Head at Either End

Columbia, S. C.—South Carolina has a snake with two heads. This is no figment of the imagination but a reality. J. A. Crawford, director of physical education at the University of South Carolina, received it a few days ago from a negro in Edgefield county, who killed it in capturing it. The snake had a head perfectly formed at each end of its body, which was about 30 inches long.

Mr. Crawford said the negro's account of the snakes being able to raise both heads and protrude its tongues probably was true. He doubted, however, a statement by the negro that the reptile could crawl in either direction.

Dr. Raymond L. Dimars of the zoological gardens in New York has requested the snake for study.

Court Hears Wife Killer Play "Woman Is Fickle"

Berlin.—Max Ironwald, a musician, unslung his trumpet in court and blew a ray of light in memory of the wife whose slaying he had confessed.

"Have you anything to say before I sentence you?" asked the judge.

"I should like to play my trumpet for the last time," replied Ironwald, who is sixty-one years old.

The request was granted. In a wretched contralto he played "La Donna e Mobile" ("Woman is Fickle"), from Verdi's opera, "Rigoletto."

Ironwald choked his wife in a quarrel over his drinking. He is not likely to get the death sentence, which would entail beheading with a battle-axe, in cases such as his, the sentence usually is ten to fifteen years.

Abraham Lincoln

The Great Emancipator

THE MAN WHO WAS BORN IN A LOG CABIN

He WAS born in a one-room cabin in the backwoods of Kentucky, and died in a tiny bedroom in a boarding house at the nation's Capital, while President of the United States.

He never had all-fold more than a year's schooling in the most elementary subjects, yet he lived to write impeccable English, and to be judged by learned professors as master of purest literary style.

He grew up far removed from cultural influences and the niceties of polite society, yet wooed and won in marriage a Kentucky aristocrat, a society belle, and an accomplished linguist, Miss Mary Todd.

He never had the heart to kill any living thing, looked with disfavor on fire arms, but became by virtue of his high office, the commander-in-chief of the Union forces in a war which resulted in half a million slain.

He was smooth shaven for fifty-one of his fifty-six years, and grew a beard the winter before his inauguration. In good-natured compliance with the suggestion of a little girl who thought the change might improve his looks.

He was a voracious reader as a boy and young man, borrowing many a treasured volume, but he never owned a library of as many as a hundred volumes, excluding his law books.

He did not unite with a church, though he was a frequent attendant; sometimes called a "free thinker," he was unusually familiar with the Bible and during his Presidency, on his own confession was a praying man.

He was often of a melancholy mood, subject to seasons of gloom and grief, yet was as often buoyant, laughing heartily over a good joke and told droll stories intimately.

He loved greatly all children, and was most indulgent with his own, permitting "Tad" to make a play room of his office in the White House.

He never could wear gloves with ease; formal society functions bored him, and at his first inauguration he was puzzled as to the disposal of his gold-headed cane and high hat—until his great protagonist, Stephen A. Douglas, came to his relief.

He wrote a neat hand, devised clear and uninvolved sentences, avoided big words, never padded his speeches, was frequently laconic and pointedly brief.

He was fond of poetry, wrote verses of a homely sort and liked best poems of a somber or pathetic appeal, as for example, "The Last Leaf" and "O Why Should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud?"

He observed the faults and follies of his friends and associates, but seldom commented upon their shortcomings and never rebuked them either in public or private; for a notable instance—William H. Herndon and his intemperate habits.

He revered George Washington, admired Thomas Jefferson, at one time idolized Henry Clay, read with avidity the speeches of Daniel Webster.

He numbered among his friends an unusually large company of ministers of the Gospel, yet when he ran for President, only three of the twenty-odd ministers in Springfield voted for him.

He loved to sit with the "boys" about the stove in the village store on winter evenings, crack jokes, and listen to the gossip of the neighborhood, delighted in minstrel shows, was tickled by the antics of clowns and comedians, thought a traveling circus was great fun.

He had one of the best "forgetter-ness" of all our public men, thus he "forgot" the shabby treatment he received at the hands of Edwin M. Stanton in Cincinnati, 1835, and appointed him secretary of war in his cabinet.

He was indifferent as to his personal attire, yet was distinctive in his choice of a high topped hat, long-tailed coat, and a black bow tie, worn around a low turned-down collar.

He was in life mercilessly criticised, treacherously misrepresented, cruelly maligned, and basely slandered, and in death he was all but deified.

He was scrupulously honest, long suffering, and patient beyond most mortals, magnanimous and just, forgiving, and a stranger to hate.

He was not a demigod, but very human; he made mistakes and profited by them; he was a lover of his kind and made generous allowance for the imperfections of humanity, and because of these all too rare virtues "Now he belongs to the ages."—Detroit News.

Abraham Lincoln Always

Of, By and For the People

"So long as there is a man willing to work, but unable to find employment, the hours of labor are too long."

The words quoted above are not those of a modern-day economist; they came from the mind and lips of one who long ago had his finger on the pulse of American affairs. He came from the people and rose to high estate and esteem by mere force of character and indomitable will. He was more self-educated than learned. He held no degree from a great university; he discovered no new planets; he flew no oceans; he amassed no colossal fortune. Yet he did, at a time when it required a degree of courage rare in history, stand firm for his convictions. Class meant little to him beyond a division set aside for self-centered ends. He was of, by and for the people.

He had visions, yet was not visionary. His judgment may not have been infallible, yet it was based on logic and foresight. His work was arduous, yet he never turned aside. Hard labor was his portion in early life, his choice later. Of lowly origin, he rose to heights never dreamed of. Outwardly unassuming, perhaps, but polished as the finest steel beneath. Rough at times, perhaps, yet tender as a woman to those in distress, he who spoke the words quoted saw far into the future and the thought came from the heart. He was the workers' friend.

He is so still. As long as the world exists, down through the ages will reverberate Abraham Lincoln's forceful words of consolation and encouragement to all who earn a livelihood by the sweat of the brow. The world may never see his like again, but his memory will never perish.

Stand with anybody that stands right. Stand with him while he is right and part with him when he goes wrong.—Lincoln.

Slaves Freed January 1, 1863. The proclamation of emancipation, which freed all the negro slaves, was proclaimed by Lincoln, September 22, 1862, and became effective January 1, 1863.

Romantic Origin of Package Medicines

Some of the most interesting romances will be found in the march of industry; for back of nearly every product which gains public acceptance is the very human story of somebody's ideal, ambition, ingenuity, enterprise, disappointment, struggle and final achievement of the goal of success.

The privations and hardships which accompanied the early years of the development of package medicines are an important part of the history of our nation. The public seldom appreciates the doubt, the ridicule, the ostracism and the enormous financial risks which were suffered by the early pioneers in medicine. Their faith, determination and pioneering spirit were responsible for developing and bringing to our medicine shelves those well known package medicines which afford economy and convenience, and which are so essential to our everyday lives.

Today we take our family remedies for granted as naturally as we accept the air or sunshine.

Most package medicines were originally prescribed by that beloved individual, the memory of whose self-sacrificing life is most beautiful—the old family physician. Being prescriptions of merit which produced results, they survived. They became much in demand, and consequently much prescribed by their originators. Perhaps the demand grew so rapidly that the old doctor found himself unable, with his limited equipment, his modest kit, to fill the need. Often he, sometimes assisted by his kinsmen or friends, prepared to meet the demand by a quantity production, that the meritorious prescriptions might receive the widespread use which their popularity justified. Then came years of soil, hardships, risks, struggles; with life's earnings and life's efforts invested. Eventually the laboratory and the machine entered the picture.

Whether an individual package medicine has been on the market for scores of years, or whether it is the more recent product of medical research, a large proportion of package medicines in general are based upon solid scientific knowledge, and deserve the confidence of the public. Proprietary remedies which can ease human suffering, mitigate human distress, or add to human health and physical efficiency, at a price within the reach of the poor man's pocket-book, are indeed worthy adjuncts to American life, as well as American commerce. "They can be safely relied upon," as Lord Bacon expressed it, "to tune the curious harp of man's body."

ODD WAY TO PUT END TO DROUGHT

African Rainmaker Makes Use of Snake.

Weird myths and strange superstitions concerning snakes, believed in by various native tribes of Africa, are related in "Serpent Worship in Africa," a publication issued in the anthropological series of Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. Wilfrid D. Hamblin, assistant curator of African ethnology, who led the recent Frederick H. Rayson-Field Museum Ethnological expedition to Africa, is the author.

One of the most amusing tales related in Mr. Hamblin's book is that concerning the use of a snake to break a drought. When rain is needed a tribe known as the Gageyas send a rainmaker and a priest for a spring in which a snake lives. Nearby they construct a large trough which they fill with beer. When the snake comes out to attack them it gets drunk on the beer, and while in a helpless condition its fangs are removed by the men. From the well it has left unguarded they fill pots with water. The water thus drawn is believed to attract rain, which will continue to fall until stopped by the priest. When it is desired to stop the rain the snake is again tempted to indulge too freely in beer, the water pots are then overturned, the rain ceases and the sun shines to ripen the harvest.

ute to sacred serpents a fondness for beautiful girls, and many instances of sacrifices of the most attractive maidens are cited by Mr. Hamblin. Corollary to this was a superstition that once prevailed in Dahomey that the sacred python appeared to the most beautiful girls to induce madness, whereupon they were obliged by tribal laws to enter the service of the snake temple. As a result of this, certain rogish priests of this temple are reported to have persuaded girls to feign frenzy so that they would be sent there.

Among certain tribes snakes are regarded as the reincarnation of the souls of dead people and treated with ancestral reverence. There are also beliefs in the affinity of certain living people's souls with those of snakes whereby the persons involved derive special powers, usually for evildoing. "Engras" is a "paid" medicine to introduce a python into men and women desiring such activities.

General.--Present outlook is little changed from recent weeks but there is slight improvement in car loadings and electric power production.

Commercial failures continue high. Stabilization, rather than expansion, is the goal of the moment. Decline of commodity prices seems to have been arrested, always an encouraging sign. Highest class bonds are registering steady advances.

Business leaders, as with one voice, continue to reiterate that a balanced budget, tax reduction and strong and constructive Washington leadership are essentials of recovery.

The Farm.--Farm prices recently showed a slight advance, led by strong grain quotations. Cotton markets strengthened, with demand improved. Hog and lamb market helped by better meat prices. Cattle and veal lagging. Butter market unsettled because of excess supply.

The general farm situation in the middle west is still extremely bad, with many counties collecting but 35 to 50 per cent of taxes due.

World traffic in wheat rose sharply during the week ending January 14, with North America and Australia clearing the major share of the 16,632,000 bushels cleared during this period. During the first six months of the current crop season, weekly shipments averaged only 10,800,000 bushels.

Retail Trade.--Retail dry goods sales registered a decline of 22.6 per cent in 1932.

Wholesalers believe the usual spring buying movement will spread out over the season, instead of being lumped at one time. Current activity among wholesalers is largely confined to "odd lot" sales.

Famous Mine Sold

The famous "Little Joe" gold mining property, located near Oro Grande, was sold for taxes amounting to $958.00 last Tuesday by County Treasurer Earl Sanders. The purchaser was H. C. Farley, of Denver, Colo., who it is understood will undertake the development of the property as soon as the equipment can be placed upon the ground.

The "Little Joe", originally located as a lode claim, has been the most productive placer gold property of the district, and still contains much unworked placer ground. While no detailed information has been given out by the new purchaser, it is surmised the property will be developed both for its lode and placer values.--Alamogordo Advertiser.

crude oil and declining sales of gasoline have resulted in reduction of gas prices to lowest level in many years in various parts of the country.

Automobile executives expect a 10 to 15 per cent gain in automobile sales this year, with some leaders forecasting 30 per cent.

The volume of steel business has gained moderately, and the industry is encouraged in spite of disappointing sales to railroads.

During 1932 the iron ore industry mined 9,588,000 tons, a decrease of 65 per cent from 1931 and lowest output since 1885. Total 1932 value was $13,042,000, as against $74,153,910 in the preceding year.

Bankers are opposing the issuance of scrip to be used as money, while the movement gains headway in many small towns. Bankers feel that if movement becomes national in scope, financial chaos will result.

Farm tool firms opening 1933 sales drive. Pin hopes on certain new features such as low priced trucks. Farm equipment export business growing.

Federal regulation of workers' wages is being urged by representatives of various labor organizations.

Abroad.--The unusual export activity that marked the past two months in French Indo-China has now ceased; favorable trade balance continues, but the public finance is unsatisfactory. Copra trading is dull in the Philippine Islands and but one coconut oil mill is now operating. Shrinkage in Rumanian imports has followed tariff and foreign exchange restrictions. Chilean business sentiment, recently reported as improved, has received a setback; seasonal turnover extremely low.
