Robbery at Logan

A robbery at Logan New Mexico resembles in some respects one which took place near Capitan in our own county a month ago, when the victims were tortured in order to make them tell where some money was concealed.

Lee Marshall a ranchman living between Tucumcari and Logan, had sold a team and wagon for $85 and it is supposed the would be thieves and near-murderers had some knowledge of this. The Tucumcari News has the following account of the occurrence

"Marshall had finished his evening meal, washed the dishes and when he stepped to the door of his dugout to throw the dishwasher out the two men wearing masks, blinded him with a flashlight, shoved him back in the room and demanded his money. When he informed them he had no money he was beaten over the head with a revolver, being knocked unconscious. When he came to they had stripped him of his clothing, all but his underwear, had chained his feet and tied his hands behind his back, and were carrying him out of the house.

He was thrown on the ground, face down, gasoline poured over him and one of the men struck a match and threw it into the inflammable gas.

While he was burning, and his cries of pain were penetrating the air the men were laughing and joking and passing a bottle of whiskey from one to the other.

Finally one of the men threw an old quilt over the flames and when they were extinguished the chain was removed from his feet, he was lifted to his feet, shoved into the house and given a kick as he went in the door.

The brutes then entered their car and drove away. Marshall, as printed yesterday, made his way three miles to a neighbor's home, this neighbor had to walk three miles to obtain a car in which to bring the burned man to town.

Marshall has no relatives living that he knows of, his father the only relative he remembers ever having, died last fall and was buried by the county.

So far as can be learned he did not know the brutes who committed the crime, but says he would be able to identify them if he could see them again.

Physicians said there is little doubt the homesteader will die. His entire body has burns on it and in places the flesh has fallen from the bones.

High School Notes

Saturday night Carrizozo, witnesses the last game of the season to be played on the home court. In this last game the local team meets the Alamogordo High School team and we heartily expect a victory. We solicit pleadingly the support of the Carrizozo township, for, unless sufficient funds are procured from this game this town and the adjacent community will have no representative in the District Tournament to be held soon. For the receipts of this and only this basketball game will be used to defray expenses incurred by traveling to Corona where the tournament is to be held.

Coach Detliff was quite successful in the drawing of competitors for the Carrizozo team and feels confident that this team stands a good chance for state honors. And why should he not feel this way? Has not our team manhandled practically every other group of cagers they have been up against? Surely they have and what's more they are going to continue. But here's the rub. Unless the team is financed, they will have no chance to prove their worth, because without the money with which to make their trips they will be unable to play. So let's all be discriminate enough to be able to say, "Why, yes, I saw Carrizozo beat Alamogordo way back in 1933."

On the night of Feb 9 the Sophomore Class gave a party at the Lutz Hall. Guests were invited and every one had a merry time. Music was furnished by Murel Burnett's re broadcasting apparatus.

Last Friday our boys' basketball team played Capitan. We won, of course. We are developing quite a team.

The Home Ec Club held its monthly social Thursday night. Viola and Eva Kever and Dorothy and Lenor Kelter were hostesses. Members of the Industrial Art Club were guests. Valentine schemes were carried out in the decorations and refreshments. It was a delightful social, enjoyed by one and all.

The Science Club entertained the assembly Wednesday. Murel Burnett brought his recording apparatus and made a record for us. John Jackson performed an interesting experiment with electricity.

The Senior Class is publishing a H. S. annual. This is the first effort of our school in that direction but we believe that it will be successful.

This week the regular six week examination are being given. Every student is working hard so we haven't much time for outside activities.

Examination to be Held March 25th

The questions for the examination in New Mexico History and Civics are now ready. This examination will be held in my office on Saturday, March 25th, 1933, at 10 a. m. Use Certified Seed In Growing Potatoes

Not many Irish potatoes, comparatively speaking, are grown in New Mexico, that is, not as many as should be says G. R. Quesenberry of the New Mexico State College. The potato acreage increased 300 per cent from 1926 to 1932, but a far greater acreage is necessary to produce all the potatoes eaten in the state.

Potatoes are largely water and are bulky and for that reason, if for no other, every farmer should try to grow his own supply. He can not afford to pay the freight on water, often as much as $15.00 per ton.

Irish potatoes are eaten in every community and grown wherever adapted. They are primarily adapted to the cool climate and moist atmosphere. They grow well in north central New Mexico and make satisfactory yields in other areas, on fertile soils with frequent irrigations, provided good certified seed is used.

Farmers growing potatoes for market or for home use are primarily interested in the acre yield of marketable potatoes, a above all yield. To get satisfactory yields, certified adapted seed should be used. The field or plot in which the seed is planted should be fertile, level, mellow, easily worked, and reasonably free from weeds. Well drained soils with a high percentage of decayed organic matter is preferred, one that has been plowed deep and worked carefully to a fine deep seedbed, as potatoes are rank and heavy feeders and require the maximum plant food and plenty of moisture for a quick and early germination.

Adapted varieties, such as Irish Cobbler or Bliss Triumph, should be used for southern New Mexico. These do well in the northern part of the state also, but Peach blows make the larger yield.

Married Sunday

Mr. Nathan I. Reiter of Las Cruces and Miss Marie A. Brunk, our Lincoln County nurse, were married in the Methodist parsonage Saturday afternoon, February 11, 1933. The Rev. John L. Lawson performed the ceremony which was witnessed by Miss Thelma White and Mr. Harold Smith.

The bride has held the position of County Nurse here for the past two years during which time she has endeared herself to everyone by her sunny smile and gracious demeanor toward friends and strangers alike. Recently she has taken a very active part in charity work, assisting the Red Cross and Welfare Associations in the distribution of supplies to needy families. We are glad that she will remain with us in her capacity as County Nurse for some little time.

The groom who is a prominent and successful business man, is a public accountant, and is connected with the law firm of Holt & Holt at Las Cruces. Many friends join in wishing them happiness and success.

Tuesday's School Board Election

More votes were cast in the school board election last Tuesday than in any school election heretofore recorded in Carrizozo. There were so many irreproachable candidates, that there wasn't any place to scratch your ballot. Some wanted to vote for all four who were running, but as only two could be elected, that was impossible too, so it was a difficult task to decide for whom to vote. Votes were as follows:

Dr. Carl E. Freeman 212; Mr. John E. Hall, 182; Otto Prehm, 146; Mrs. Brack Sloan, 107. The two write-in candidates were Mrs. Nettie Brannum, who received 28 votes and Juan Martinez who received 3 votes.

Capitan News

Mr. J. M. Gardner, Clerk in P. G. Peters' store, is sick with the flu.

The Capitan Missionary Society meets every second and fourth Wednesdays at 2:30 P. M. They meet February 22 at the home of Mrs. Lumpkins, having the same subject and leaders that we should have had the last time we were to meet but on account of the snow storm the meeting was postponed.

The Nazarene W. M. Society meets every first and third Thursdays at 2:30 p. m. They met yesterday at the home of Mrs. Maryfields. Study lesson was on China.

Mr. Fred Randels and family have moved here from Liberal, Kansas.

Mr. Joe Sheppard has moved his family out to the Border Hill project, where he is working.

The Nazarene Sunday School is putting on a contest which is creating quite an interest. There were 84 present Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have leased Mr. Kingston's restaurant and are ready to serve short orders.

Washington's Birthday Excursion Rates

Another offering of Dollar Day roundtrip transportation, timed to accommodate excursion travel over the Washington's Birthday weekend, was announced today by the Southern Pacific Company for February 24, 25 and 26.

The cent-mile trip will be in effect between all stations on the railroad's lines in six western states, it is revealed by C. P. Huppertz, local agent. Final return limit, he said, will be March 7.

Among the outstanding attractions brought within reach of excursionists by the low fare offer is the San Francisco celebration of the gigantic Golden Gate Bridge project, scheduled for Feb. 26, it is pointed out. The United States battleship will be in harbor for the festivities.

Two Minute Sermon (By Rev. Geo Henry)

The Church Glorious

Perhaps no institution on earth is subjected to the severe criticism that is heaped upon the church, and no man is damned with such scant praise as the preacher and yet they survive. How come? It is due to their high ideals rather than to their great achievements. To hold fast to the idea, that's the thing. No organization holds forth such lofty ideals and no men strive more earnestly for their realization. If the church has failed in any way may it not be due, in part, to the adverse criticism and opposition of those whom she seeks to benefit? Her championship of the weak has made enemies of the strong. Her carelessness of her own material welfare has aroused the cynicism of the worldly-wise man. Aware of the common realities of life she persists in raising her eyes to the heavens. Despite her limitations her horizon is continually widening. Whatever you may think of her, this must be admitted: She has thrived on opposition and lives to bless those who curse her, and her glory is in her high deals.

Mrs. Foreman Dies Suddenly

Mrs. Amanda Elizabeth Foreman, one of the best known and most highly respected women of Lincoln county passed away at her home here yesterday morning at 8:45. Mrs. Foreman was apparently in the best of health when she retired Wednesday evening but some time during the night she suffered a ruptured blood vessel in the brain which produced paralysis and she never rallied. When she failed to appear yesterday morning, her sister, Mrs. Davis called her; receiving no answer she entered the room, and discovered Mrs. Foreman's condition. Dr. Johnson was called, but he told them there was no hope and it was just a question of minutes.

Mrs. Foreman was a fine and conscientious woman, a splendid neighbor and friend. She was straight-forward and plain spoken; always doing her duty, ever loyal to her church and her lodge. Mrs. Foreman was born Sept. 9, 1858; died Feb. 16, 1933, aged 74 years, 5 months and 7 days. Funeral services will be conducted at the Methodist church this afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. John L. Lawson, assisted by Rev. L. D. Jordan, followed by interment in the No-gal cemetery. The Rebeccas will have charge of funeral rites at the grave.

Mrs. Foreman is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Alice Roberts and Mrs. Davis of Carrizozo, one sister who resides in El Paso and one in Mexico, and several nieces and nephews, all of whom have the sympathy of friends.

Conoco Will Increase Ads

Advertising appropriations of the Continental Oil company, Ponca City, Okla., will be the largest this year in the history of the company, Wesley I. Nunn, advertising manager of the oil concern, said in El Paso.

"Advertising, a valuable asset during normal business times, is even more effective during times of depression," he said. "We certainly haven't lost faith in business outlook for 1933 and we are going to continue our advertising."—El Paso Times.

The Tomb of Washington

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

DURING the year just passed the various ceremonies connected with the Washington bi-centennial celebration have revivied in the memories of all Americans our debt to "The Father of His Country." Monuments and memorials of all kinds, names of towns, cities, counties, a state and the capital of the nation all serve to remind us of Washington, the soldier, the statesman, the President, the first American, the world figure. But for all of these he remains in our minds something of a dim and legendary figure, the type of person who is just outside the realm of our experience.

Perhaps the best way to get an adequate idea of Washington, the man, the human being, and to dispel some of the awe which surrounds an immortal is to pay a visit to his beautiful estate, Mount Vernon on the Potomac river, Virginia. The history of Mount Vernon goes back to the middle of the Seventeenth century. In 1637 or 1638 a certain John Washington, who had been a Cavalier in England during the Cromwellian period, with his brother Lawrence crossed the Atlantic to Virginia, the refuge of so many Royalists during the Puritan regime in England. John Washington made his home at Popes Creek in Westmoreland county and there married Ann Pope. In 1674 Lord Culpeper sold a grant of 5,000 acres on the west bank of the Potomac river, about 13 miles below what is now the District of Columbia, to Nicholas Spencer and John Washington and on that tract John Washington built his home (now known as Wakefield) at Bridges Creek, about a mile from the Pope home. He saw some military service against the Indians and held the rank of colonel. He lived the life of a gentleman-planter for twenty years, death coming in 1677. His son Lawrence was the grandfather of the illustrious George.

Augustine, son of Lawrence, married twice, and at his death, in 1743, left a widow and seven children. There had been three other children, four by the first marriage and six by the second. Lawrence, first born of Augustine by his first wife, Jane Butler, inherited the estate soon to be known as Mount Vernon. George, first of the five surviving children born to Augustine by his second wife, Mary Hall, inherited an estate in Stafford county, Va., nearly opposite Fredericksburg. In which estate, however, his mother had an administrative interest during his minority, as indeed she had in the estates of her other children.

George was born on February 22, 1732 (according to the so-called new style of calendar), on his father's plantation at Bridges Creek, in the parish of Washington (now Wakefield), Westmoreland county, Va. In the next year his father built a brick barn on his Hunting Creek (Mount Vernon) property, and in 1735, or a little earlier, seems to have erected a dwelling house also, for the record shows that

George Washington lived a few of his childhood years there. He was about eight years old when the family took up residence on the Stafford county estate which George inherited in 1743. His father was a man of landed wealth, and evidently enterprising. He made several trading voyages to England, sent his two eldest sons, Lawrence and Augustine (Auntie), to school in England, profited by the sale of iron ore deposits on his Stafford county estate to a smelting company and the carrying of cargoes of pig iron to England.

All of the children of Augustine Washington received a good inheritance, but inasmuch as the Hunting Creek estate was bequeathed to the eldest son Lawrence, it seems likely that their father looked upon it as his principal estate, though he lived on the Fredericksburg plantation. Lawrence Washington served as a captain under Admiral Vernon in the expedition against Cartagena, in 1740, and never recovered from the effects of that brief campaign, though death did not come to him until another twelve years had passed. Lord Fairfax, whose estate adjoined that of the Washingtons, was also at Cartagena, and this wartime friendship between the two families was to grow closer in later years through the marriage of Lawrence Washington into the Fairfax family and the fondness of Lord Fairfax for George.

In 1743, after inheriting the Hunting Creek estate, Lawrence Washington built a house that was in keeping with his station, and renamed the estate Mount Vernon, in honor of the British admiral under whom he had served. Wealthy and of good family, Capt. Lawrence Washington lived in gentlemanly style at Mount Vernon.

Lawrence was fond of his half-brother George, this fondness developing almost into guardianship. George loved his brother, and was fond of Mount Vernon, too, so, much of his time in adolescent years was spent at Mount Vernon.

In 1751 he accompanied his half-brother Lawrence to Barbados, whither the latter had been ordered by the family physician. But Lawrence did not regard his health, and George himself contracted smallpox. This slightly pitted his face for life. Lawrence died in 1752, and at his death George became responsible for the administration of Mount Vernon and also for the care of his niece, Lawrence's only child. The daughter did not long survive her father, and at her death George Washington, by the terms of her father's will, inherited Mount Vernon.

During the period of peace—the calm before the storm—Colonel Washington saw much of Mount Vernon. In 1750, he married the richest woman in the Potomac region, Martha, the widow of Daniel Parke Custis. Of the next few years in Washington's life one historian has written:

"His style of life as the lord of Mount Vernon was almost baronial. He had a chariot and four, with black postillions in livery, for the use of his wife, while he himself always appeared on horse, back, the finest rider in Virginia. His house was filled with aristocratic visitors. He had his stud of the highest breed, his fox hounds, and all the luxuries of a prosperous country gentleman. His kitchens, his smoke sheds, his fields of wheat and corn, his hundred cows, his vast poultry yards, his barges, all indicated great wealth, and that generous hospitality which is now a tradition. His time was passed in overseeing his large estate and in out-of-door sports, following the hounds or fishing, exchanging visits with prominent Virginia families, amusing himself with card playing, dancing and the social frivolities of the day."

It was this luxury which Washington was willing to give up in response to the call of duty when the fight for American liberties began. After he had successfully led that fight, he retired to Mount Vernon, only to be called upon again in 1789 to exchange his role of Virginia planter for that of President of a new nation. When he was ready to lay down the cares of state in 1797 and retire once more to Mount Vernon, only two more years of life remained for him, for he died on December 14, 1799.

At his death Mount Vernon passed as a life interest to his widow, Martha Washington. Under the terms of Washington's will some of his effects had been disposed of and by his widow's will most of the household belongings passed to her four grandchildren. Thus the original furniture of Mount Vernon became scattered. Mount Vernon, itself, passed, in succession, to Bushrod Washington, John Augustine Washington and John A. Washington, Jr., changes taking place in the furnishings and interior decorations of the house, as convenience or inclination prompted the respective owners.

The Washington family, in the generation of John A. Washington, Jr., were desirous that the historic estate should, for better preservation, pass into the possession of the nation. He offered to sell Mount Vernon to the United States, and later to the commonwealth of Virginia. Both projects failed.

But what legislatures could not accomplish private patriotic agencies could achieve. Miss Pamela Cunningham of South Carolina appealed to American women, and in 1830 she was able to organize the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association of the Union. One great American, Edward Everett, took up the cause, toured the country, and gathered $63,294.50 for the Mount Vernon fund. In 1833, therefore, the ladies' association was able to buy from John A. Washington, Jr., 502 acres of the Mount Vernon estate, including the residence and attendant buildings, the gardens, etc., and also the tomb of our revered first President. The price paid was $200,000 and interest. Subsequently, through the generosity of Jay Gould, in 1887; Christian Heuvel of Washington, D. C., in 1898; and Hugh McK. Landon, in 1923, the total area owned by the association has been increased to approximately 200 acres.

CHAPTER V

Which Tells of the Indian Raid and the Masterful Mrs. Bowby and Colin's Return to Cambridge.

There were near fifty men and women in the band which the masterful Mrs. Bowby had so speedily organized for their common defense. Fear had been a constant companion of these sequestered people since war had taken their strong men. They knew what to do when they heard the summons of the conch shell and were prepared for immediate action. Now they waited in a silence broken only by the crackling of the fire and the crying of the children behind the closed door of the inn.

"At last I know what it means to be a back-country American," Colin said to Mrs. Bowby.

She answered with a stern face and without turning:

"There are times when it's very bad, sir."

Her voice had lost its gentle quality. They heard an outburst of scendish yells at the edge of the forest about eighty rods north of them.

"They're drunk or they'd sneak up on us," Mrs. Bowby calmly remarked. "Drink makes them noisier than a flock of crows."

She turned to Colin and spoke in tone of a teacher commanding a pupil in need of discipline: "Put the old women in the spruce thicket beyond the road. Get some of the men behind these big pine back of us and have the rest lie down in the shadow at the end of the inn. Tell them to keep out of sight. When I say 'close in,' they are to rush from cover and surround the raiders."

"Get all the delay you can," Colin said to her. "A troop from the fort will be sure to follow them."

"If they've got guns, we may have a bloody battle, but we'll lick 'em," she said.

Colin answered: "The colonel at the fort told me that they have only three guns and no ammunition."

"That's good news but they will have knives and tomahawks and bows and arrows."

The Indians were approaching. Their kintecawing seemed to fill the depths above them. Every outburst echoed and re-echoed in the distant forest. Its purpose was to appall the hearts of the pale-faced people. It filled the herded children with terror and their cries increased.

It was this element in the situation which gave to Colin Cabot his understanding of the memorable scene. These armed women were like the she-bear when her cubs are threatened. In a moment they are changed and they face the peril of death with no hesitation.

The kintecawing ceased. There was no flight of arrows. A full minute passed filled with anxiety and a silence in which the waiting band heard only the sobbing behind the door. The Indians skulking in the shadows ran suddenly with wild yells toward the two in the freight who stood unmoved while the unsuspecting raiders sped into a ring around them and the fire.

"You No Give Whisky—We Burn House."

To Colin's surprise Mrs. Bowby spoke calmly in the Indian tongue, saying:

"My red brothers, I want peace. What do you want?"

"Whisky," one of them answered as he held up a bottle half full of liquor. "You can get no whisky here," she answered.

The brave drank from his bottle while his comrades broke into derisive laughter. He answered in English easily understood:

"You no give whisky. We git mad. We burn house."

Men and women sprang out of the shadows. In a trice they encircled the band of red men and stood each with a rude weapon ready for use. The braves were filled with astonishment. Again the brave woman spoke to her friends: "Stand still. Make no hostile move till I order it."

Then in their tongue she addressed the red men: "We offer you peace or war. If you choose peace, we will give you food but no drink. There is not a drop of drink in my tavern."

For a moment the braves chattered together like magpies. At that moment an incautious move might have precipitated a hurling of tomahawks and a disaster which would have gone into history. The Indians saw that they were overmatched more than three to one, and that they could not escape a terrible gorjng. Their leader was perhaps sobered a little by his peril. His counsel seemed to prevail. As the red men ceased their chattering he said:

"Wife of Manitou give us meat. We go away."

What subtle devilry may have been in the pence he offered, will never be known. Colin, obeying the order of the woman, gave her his gun and pistol and set out for the kitchen to bring a roasted ham. Before he opened the door he heard the hoofs of horses coming swiftly down the road. When he returned he found that six armed troopers had arrived.

"You people can go to your homes," the captain of the troop was saying. "We'll attend to these lousy wildcats."

The tenacious of the scene was broken. The women hastened to the inn door to get their children. Five troopers (with guns cocked) stood by the red men. Their captain took the ham from Colin and put it down beside him, saying:

"Captain Cabot, take my gun. You and Mrs. Bowby will please stand by a minute. If any red devil shows fight or tries to run, put a hole in him. The rest o' ye hold yer fire till it's needed."

He went among the savages and took away their bottles and tomahawks and flung them on the veranda. He took out his hunting knife and began to slice the ham and throw it to the red men, who grabbed and ate it like hungry dogs. This done, he made them to understand by word and gesture that they were to roll up in their blankets and lie down for the night.

He turned to Mrs. Bowby saying: "Ye can all go to bed. I'll mount a guard and keep a pair o' eyes on these wild men. They'll sleep like tured dogs till daylight. Then we'll give 'em a bite to eat an' run 'em off down a trail to the west. They won't trouble you no more. They found ye bad medicine."

"Your coming was timely," said the woman. "I eye it as a thing from Providence."

"Don't blame God for it," the officer answered. "Our scout was watching 'em an' we was ordered out within an hour after they were heading for this settlement."

The red men and their escort had gone when Colin set out an hour after sunrise. He was to meet Colonel Botts at the village of New Milford. There the colonel had assembled and organized a force of nearly three hundred armed men. The fall work of harvesting and threshing being finished, Botts, with the aid of two able young lawyers, had made excellent progress in the west. With tents and other equipment in heavy wagons, they set out on their march to Cambridge, stopping here and there to pick up the recruits, who had signed for service on the westward journey.

A loyalist youth who feared the little regiment as it was leaving New Milford was quickly seized and compelled to march twenty miles behind the fire and druma corps with a live goose in his arms. He went home adorned with a part of the goose's feathers. The incident signified both the intensity and the overwhelming preponderance of anti-British feeling among the country folk.

The regiment, growing as it proceeded, was a force of more than four hundred men when it joined the army. Battalions were coming in on the north and south roads. The Commander in Chief was in better spirit. Still there was no money to pay officers or men. They were complaining bitterly. For two days there had been no meat in camp and for three days no bread.

Colonel Botts and Captain Cabot arrived at general headquarters at eight o'clock in the evening. The Chief listened with his usual dignity and calmness while Colonel Botts sent up a whirling, prolegomenous flight of words as if in search of an orbit for his patriotic emotions. He was in a bewildering maze when the General interrupted him saying:

"Colonel, this is interesting and I perceive that your report will require more leisurely consideration than I can now give to it. Therefore, please accept my thanks and compliments for your excellent work and submit your report in writing."

He arose and gave the colonel his hand and walked with him to the door. The orator had been so graciously and courteously silenced that Colin smiled with gratitude and admiration. When the Chief returned to his office he brought with him the great Doctor Franklin, who had come with a committee from Congress to confer with General Washington. He was a stout old gentleman of medium height with a large head bald at the crown, white hair and a countenance beardless and amiable. Turning to Colin, the Chief said:

"Here is a young man to whom I gladly lend my ears."

"It's a kind of lending that pays if you get interest," Doctor Franklin answered with a benevolent smile.

As they sat down the General asked the young captain to give them an account of his adventures. The distinguished patriots were interested and amused by his vivid recital. They shook with laughter at the gentle humor with which certain parts of it had been flavored.

Without mentioning his name Colin described the oratory of one of his co-workers. Franklin, sitting near the fire, mopped his smooth-shaven face with a large, colored handkerchief and moved his chair, saying:

"When a man's head is filled with nothing he is eager to get rid of it. We mustn't blame him. He is only obeying a law of Nature. A vacuum can make a lot of noise. A whirlwind is a great spinning bottle of nothing and in hot haste to get rid of it."

"Yet it is very capable," said Colin. "Most energetic!" Franklin agreed.

"Our people have no need of being convinced. Any kind of noise will serve to remind them of their duty. A sife and drum is enough. I think that their souls have heard a voice more convincing than yours or mine."

They are preparing for hunger and hardships and disappointment. We must rub along as best we may until we come to better going. Powder is arriving and we shall soon be able to pay a part of the sum we owe."

"Meanwhile the chimney-corner heroes everywhere criticizing our inactivity," said the General. "I wrote to Robert Morris of my feeling about that. His answer has amused me."

He read from a letter on his desk: "Heaven has blessed you with a firmness of mind, a steadiness of countenance and a patience in sufferings that give you infinite advantage over other men. You are not to depend on other people's exertions being equal to your own."

"He feels the need of more optimistic reports from me. He seems to think that with all these flattering qualifications I should be able to shoot without powder and to feed the men without bread and meat."

Franklin was laughing as he suggested: "Tell him that you have turned your steady countenance and your firm mind on the British army in Boston and that no damage is yet reported. It refuses to move. Therefore you have concluded that your mind and face are in need of assistance."

"No, I shall try another remedy of yours. I shall retaliate with flattery and ask him to tell his wealthy friends that if they desire good news they will have to pay for it."

With a good-natured chuckle Franklin answered: "The rich men are so set in the habit of receiving money that they need what the French call 'massage' to get their hands accustomed to a new type of action. Both the body and the soul have to be converted. I know some of them who are pained by the necessity of paying for coats and breeches and shoes and bread and meat. When they are asked to pay for liberty and human rights, naturally they hesitate. They have been frugal. Because of that they have prospered. So Morris gets well wet with perspiration every day of his life."

The Chief answered: "The generosity of these poor farmers and mechanics who leave their homes, where they are needed, without pay or sufficient food, ought to shame the money-layers."

"A man said to me that with our stony wealth and poor officers we couldn't make out," said Franklin. "I told him that we mustn't stop pumping because there are men aboard who deserve to be drowned. We shall pull through. We have friends who are tireless and incorruptible. They are the sea, the winter and the wilderness. You remember what happened in the wild country?"

"One night of that fighting I shall never forget," said Washington. "We were entrenched in the Great Meadows."

It was dark as Topheth. The skies opened and a drowning rain descended. We were put to it for breath in the flood and were soon breast deep in water. We stopped about in blinding darkness. A bad night! Not so bad as when I met the wounded men trying to get back to their homes. That is a matter of which I never try to tell."

"Building up a new world is an expensive process but it will pay," said the old prophet. "We cannot fail because the Lord is in need of a land where the only king is Intellect looking forward to the good of man. I like to think of the future. It is impossible to imagine the height to which the power of mind over matter may be carried in a thousand years. We may perhaps learn to deprive large masses of their gravity and give them absolute levity for purposes of transportation. Agriculture may diminish its labor and double its product. Our lives may be lengthened. We may discover a plan to compel nations to settle their differences."

The talk of these great men was of deep interest to young Captain Cabot. His report was finished, and feeling that his presence might be unwelcome, he arose and bade them good night.

In the hall he met Lady Washington. She kissed him and said: "I've been lying in wait for you. I'm plumb tired of all this military business. Come into the library a few minutes and we'll talk of more important matters."

She led the way chattering, as she went, of a matter in which her interest was deeply engaged.

"Your girl has made me a visit—oh, yes—a real visit. She is a dear girl. What devotion! Good land! You rank with Julius Caesar."

They sat down together. The Lady as usual had her knitting with her. She was laughing.

He exclaimed: "Oh, the lonely greatness of young lovers! We look down from a lofty height and feel sorry for the rest of the world. I wonder how she got through. Her last letter said that General Gage had refused to give her a pass."

"You see the boy got better," said the Lady. "He did not lose his arm. It will be a withered arm and no help in love-making, but better than none. So General Gage relented. No well-bred, gallant Englishman could resist the entreaties of a girl like Pat burning to see her lover. He let her go through on condition that she would not ask again for that favor. She came and you were gone! It was maddening, but we made the best of it. She sat down and wrote a long letter to you and gave it to me. Here it is. I am going to bed. You sit down here and read the letter and then go to your room. You look tired."

She left him. He sat down by the fire and read the letter. He discovered a new, unexpected and illuminating note in the missive. This much of it the historian is able to quote:

"My brother returned with a good opinion of the American army. He reported twenty thousand men under Washington. He got his information from private talks with General Greene's orderly. I began to find a deep, hidden meaning in this education he received at General Greene's house. So I fell in with it. I shall give them more good news when I go home. Gage will be eager to talk with me. Our General Washington is a skillful man. I think that my brother's information has delayed an advance and probably some bloody days. I thank God for it and ask Him to forgive my selfishness in thinking mostly of you."

This part of the letter showed a degree of penetration which surprised the young man. As to its sentimental content, the diary gives only a slender clue. We learn that it was a cheerful letter full of Pat's merry quaintness with a note of sadness between the lines. "It reminds me," he wrote, "of a woman who once told of the funny sayings of her dead child and who laughed with tears in her eyes."

"War is cruel," he said to himself as he went to his quarters. "I wish it were over. I agree with the women that love is the only big thing. Still we must have liberty or the kings may decide even to abolish love, save the dirty sort which they indulge in."

Next morning he and Amos with a troop of ten were ordered to escort a distinguished engineer who was making a careful survey of the southern front. Colin was glad to see his old friend Amos and asked how he was.

"Ruined!" Amos answered. "I had Satan on the run an' was feelin' peart. I was tryin' to nail a board over the door o' my lodge an' hit my thumb with the hammer which the board fell an' cut my face. I sot down on my center an' wrestled with Satan. He floored me. I done my best fer to hold in but ye can't bile water without makin' steam. One o' the boys blessed like a goose at me. I turned round an' thar stood Mrs. Washington. She had come to my lodge every day with a basket on her arm to see one o' my boys who was took poorly."

"I'm 'shamed o' you," says she. "I'm 'shamed o' myself," says I, 'an' may the Lord forgive me."

"Well, if He can't I can," says she. "Let me see yer thumb."

"I showed it to her. The nail was broke an' bloody."

"Oh, dear," says she. "You come to my house."

"Her say was right nigh. I got on with the driver an' Lord o' Mercy!—if she didn't take me to headquarters an' treat that o' thumb o' mine like it was a sick baby. Washed it with hot water an' put on balsam gum an' a bandage. Then she mended my face. I tell ye, boy, she's got a hand as soft as a kitten's ear. Uh huh! She has. It drew the flint out o' me."

Ribbed Velvet for High-Style Coats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

RIBBED velvet, for the midseason and early spring coat is a style suggestion which should prove particularly good news to the woman who covets distinction in dress. Th haute monde in Paris are all enthusiastic when it comes to this handsome material, while the best shops here are displaying new coats and suits made of it in both dark and light colors.

When signs of spring stir within a desire to discard one's cumbersome fur coat, comes the problem of a timely substitute which shall measure up in chic appearance to its worthy predecessor. The coats pictured give a highly satisfactory answer to the question. Ribbed silk velvet fashions each of them. Notice how the strips or ribs are worked for the model shown to the left. In the body of the coat the ribs run vertically, thus contrasting the horizontal direction of the sleeves. The scarf collar takes a diagonal movement. An interesting touch in connection with this soft-fitted collar is that it is attached to the beige wool dress underneath, for this model is really an ensemble costume. This same coat worn with one of the new so-fashionable separate or removable fur neckpieces makes an ideal wrap with most any gown for midseason wear.

This idea of working the stripes or ribs of the velvet in a designful way is stressed throughout the garments which are fashioned of this swagger material. One is especially impressed with this when it comes to observing the high-style resort apparel which the better shops are now displaying. Some perfectly ravishing little sports coats are shown with the most unique yokes and pockets, likewise belts, tabs, flaps, scarfs and cuffs which make a play on unimpeachable—the ribs of the velvet in ingenious effects by contrasting verticals, horizontals and diagonals.

String color, beige and various tones of gray are favorite colors for these resort coats, which later on will feature fur wraps to wear over one's summer dresses. Even more alluring are the sports coats which are made of white ribbed velvet. Of course these are strictly tailored, their only trimming feature being conspicuously large buttons.

In the opinion of leading French style leaders white ribbed silk velvet qualifies as a superb material for the formal evening gown. Just so you may see how effectively it is handled we include a tiny sketch in the illustration of an evening gown which Magic Touch creates of white ribbed velvet. The sleeves are unique in that they are fashioned of white silk floss to simulate soft feathers.

CHECK WITH PLAIN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here's how they are combining check with plain this season. The picture happens to be of a beach costume and is therefore made up of washable materials. However, the rule holds good for the newest spring suits which have their swagger coats lined with checked silk adding jaunty scarfs of the check. One piece dresses with bodices or yoke tops of check or plaid are also good style. These often have soft tie fastenings of self material.

NEW SPRING MODELS NOW BEING SHOWN

The Worth mid-season collection hints at spring fashion's trend and introduces a new range of colors, but principally combinations of beige, gray, sand, black and white in a delightful manner.

Aside from the fur trimmed long coats and suits shown at this time, Worth has shown a number of models which will have a decided influence on spring fashions. These are the flaring shoulder cape, worn over light wool or crinkly crepe frocks with fur around the bottom.

"Fontainebleau," a black and white crepe satin afternoon ensemble, is already a favorite with Parisian clients. Its bodice of draped white satin, with its curiously shaped puffed and shirred short sleeves of the black, matching the simply cut skirt offer a smart afternoon costume, suitable for many occasions.

A brownish beige woolen costume, consists of a simple sports dress and jacket with cape sleeves, the distinguishing feature of which is its trimming of stitching. It is called "Eyreux" and is particularly young and charming.

Bustles Are Back Again, but in Pleats and Folds

The younger generation will have to run to the dictionary, for the "bustle" is back. It was to have been expected, after the return of the Empress Eugenie into a few months ago and the leg-of-mutton sleeves.

Madame Schiaparelli is the culprit for she stepped in where other style creators feared to tread and put bustles back where they once were flouted. Here are not the same old mistress-like flairs of horsehair and canvas; she makes her bustles out of pleats and folds.

Dress Designer's Return to Fringe for Trimming

Fringe is in again. For evening it borders capes, capelet sleeves and scarf ends. For daytime it borders round collars. It always matches the color to which it is joined and black fringe or black and white on white are the colors most frequently used.

The President's Lincoln Day Address

Last Monday night local radio fans heard President Hoover deliver his last public address during his term of office as president. It was delivered at a dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York City before 1500 guests, members of the National Republican Club. His speech was mostly about the gold standard. He said, in part, that the restoration of the gold standard would help rescue civilization from its present plight. At the same time he said a place should be retained for silver, at least in large subsidiary coinage. One suggestion was that some part of the debt payments of the United States which are due from foreign governments, could be temporarily set aside to help stabilize the currencies of the world. In another reference to these foreign loans he said, if we are called upon for sacrifices because of inability to pay, then "We should have tangible compensations in restoration of our proportion of their agriculture and other imports."

A safe guide for the individual to follow in mapping out a course of conduct is, will the practice harm me mentally, physically or spiritually? If it will, it is a good thing to leave alone if one is interested in getting the best out of things and in having peace and content.

It is nonsense to say a woman never means what she says. She means it either to mean yes or no when she says no or yes, or to mean neither when she doesn't mean it to mean what you think she means it to mean.

The responsibility for the failure of a town or its declining business is not the business men who are giving of their time and money to make it a better town, it lies with those who fail to get behind the community program of development.

Life is what we make it, and the majority of people have come to the conclusion that they might as well make the best of it.

Deputy Tax Collector To Be In Carrizozo

Scholarship Contest

High school girls of this place, and throughout New Mexico are to be given the opportunity to win a university scholarship.

Local teachers of home economics have just received an announcement of the 1933 National Meat Story Contest, in which the scholarships, together with other prizes, are offered to students writing the best essays. This contest is sponsored by the National Live Stock and Meat Board, which works closely with the U. S. Department of Agriculture and leading colleges and universities, to furthering research and education on the subject of live stock and meat.

The contest, the tenth annual event of this kind, is said to be attracting wide attention throughout the state on the part of girls who are studying meat in their school work. Hundreds have already enrolled.

These enthusiastic students are seeking up-to-the-minute information on the relation of meat to health, the value of meat in the low cost diet, the selection and preparation of meat, as well as facts about the industry from a national and world viewpoint. It is stated that more than 100,000 home economic students have participated in this contest since its inception.

The contest closes March 15. It will be judged by nationally known home economics authorities. Last year the chairman of the judging committee was Miss Frances Swain, president of the American Home Economics Association.

For purposes of competition, the United States is divided into districts, New Mexico being in the western district. Winners in each district are awarded university scholarships and other prizes. New Mexico had the honor of winning first honors in the western district last year. The winner who received a scholarship as her award was Miss Katherine Buckley of Las Cruces.

New Mexico teachers, who are cooperating in every possible way, assert that state-wide interest in this contest increases each year. They point out the excellent opportunities offered by scholarships and stress the fact that knowledge gained in writing meat stories should be of practical and permanent value to every entrant in her future profession as a homemaker.

Chevrolet Sales Highest Since 1929

Chevrolet dealers reported delivering 16,826 new cars and trucks to consumers in the last ten days of January, bringing the total of retail sales for the month to 39,701 units, compared with 35,199 in January of last year, H. J. Klingler, vice-president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, announced today. This is a gain of 12.8 per cent.

January sales were the largest since June of last year, and the last ten-day sales were larger than any reporting period since June 20—just prior to establishment of a federal excise tax—and compare with 13,438 sales in the last ten days of January, 1932, a gain of 25.2 per cent, Mr. Klingler announced.

To date over 50,000 of the new 1933 models have been placed in owners' hands since the announcement of the new line despite the fact that a field shortage existed. With field stocks at normal now, he said he expects February sales to score a considerable gain over February of last year.

In the first ten days of January dealers delivered 10,162 units, in the second ten days 12,713 units and 16,826 in the last period, the increase reflecting the availability of cars for delivery, Mr. Klingler stated.

He said the National Automobile Show sales indicated the upturn experienced all over the country during January. At the Chicago show, just closed, Chicago Chevrolet dealers sold 1,053 units during the week of the show as compared with 710 in automobile week last year, a gain of 48 per cent and secured 1786 prospects as compared with 1323 in the like 1932 week. Should I Become A Teacher

The young man or woman who will graduate from high school this mid-term or in June is faced with an unusual problem. He will surely be puzzled to know which step is best to take along educational lines.

There seems to be one of the largest surpluses of teachers ever known. Thousands will be unable to secure schools. Those who are fortunate enough to get a school will be faced with a diminished income on account of the financial distress in which the states find themselves. This is surely a discouraging outlook for the young person who has ambition to teach.

Other professions, too, seem to be overcrowded. There is a surplus of young lawyers who are barely eking out an existence. There are too many doctors for the number of patients; the talking pictures have killed the profession of music, and so on down the line.

At this time, we would advise young people to divert their minds toward the field of business. It seems to offer a quicker comeback than most of the professions. Business is dignified. It offers remunerative responsibilities. It is now considered by the masses as one of the few lucrative professions. "If I were starting my career now," says a well known educator, "I would first finish high school and then enter some reputable Business College and get a business training. Then I would become connected with some large business concern and work hard and soon I would find my name listed as one of the executives." Quoting further, "From my knowledge of various Business Colleges, I surely would investigate the Business College at Tyler, Texas. I am told this school is the best in the south."

This editor agrees with the gentleman quoted above and if you will write to the Tyler Commercial College and School of Business Administration at Tyler, Texas, they will send you a catalog. Or, drop by our office and we will let you look over our copy of their catalog which we have in our files. Adv.

Serve Pinto Beans In Different Ways

Pinto beans may be used as the basis for many delicious dinner soups or desserts says Miss Veda Strong of the New Mexico State College. As New Mexico produces large quantities of these beans, they should be found more often in the weekly menu.

Pinto beans are good food when properly cooked, are most palatable. Their concentrated form makes these beans cheap sources of energy. The large amount of protein contained and relatively large amount of calcium make valuable additions to the diet at any time. As these beans are a good source of vitamin B they are especially desirable in winter because during this time of the year the diet is likely to be low in this much needed vitamin.

Pinto beans need not always be served boiled or baked, when used in combination with such foods as salt pork, tomatoes, cheese, onions, or other vegetables and meats, they make inexpensive variations to any meal.

Bean loaf, scalloped pinto beans, bean salads and bean pie are some of the various methods in which beans may be used.

 4 cups cooked beans
 1/2 pound salt pork
 2 medium sized onions
 4 tablespoons flour
 1 teaspoon salt (depending on saltiness of pork)
 pepper
 2 cups water
 1/2 cup bread crumbs

Place the cooked beans in a greased baking dish. Cut the salt pork in about 1/4 inch cubes and brown in a skillet. Add the

Oldsmobile Autos Radio Equipped

Oldsmobile owners may now have their cars equipped with a specially designed and built radio set that is declared to be far superior to any that has heretofore been available for Oldsmobile closed cars, it is announced by R. M. W. Shaw, Sales manager. This is the new B. O. P. all-electric superheterodyne radio set, designed and built especially for the Buick Oldsmobile Sales Company of Detroit.

As all Oldsmobile closed models are wired for radio at the factory, the radio can be installed at slight cost. The dial control unit of the set is so built that it can be installed without injury to the instrument panel and can be easily removed if desired.

A leading feature of the new set is its fine tone quality. The advanced superheterodyne circuit, with new type tubes, produces a tone pleasing to people accustomed to the best home sets. Only seven tubes are used to do the work of nine ordinary tubes. An automatic volume control provides constant volume and eliminates fading while driving.

Unusual depth, brilliance and resonance is provided by a full electric dynamic speaker. This reproduces a complete range, from deep bass to high treble. A tone selector in the control unit permits adjustment to emphasize either high or low pitch tones, as desired. Quiet tuning is another feature, sounds usually heard between stations being reduced to a minimum.

The entire set operates at high efficiency, with a minimum of current consumption. No batteries are required except the regular car battery, an exclusive type of "B" power unit being located in the speaker housing. This minimizes the tendency toward interference from the car's electrical system.

Lights of New York By WALTER TRUMBULL

Selena Royle is one of the stars of John Golden's production of Rachel Crother's highly successful comedy, "When Ladies Meet." Carl Larrimore, one of the Theater Guild's prized performers and Selena Royle's husband, did not play for a time, and so generally went around to take her home after the evening performance. Like many husbands waiting for their wives, he found a small nearby speaker, where the bartender was tough, but the beer good. In fact, in the course of several evenings, the two men became friendly and discussed things in general. But one evening, when Mr. Larrimore dropped in for his usual ten minute chat, he found some strangers at the bar and a rather alien host. The strangers were men of keen and hard glance. Their stare was fixed, cold and questioning. The bartender spoke up as one of them moved to block the door.

"I know him," he said. "Friend of mine. An actor."

The eyes of the visitors thawed and Mr. Larrimore was regarded with considerably more favor. This induced further volubility in his sponsor, the bartender.

"These lads," he explained, "are just in from Chicago and they like to know who's in a place with them. It just might be somebody unfriendly."

Mr. Larrimore trusted that they would perceive he was delighted to know them. He trusted they would have something to remove the dust from the larynx after their long trip. The whole atmosphere radiated good will. They asked him things concerning his profession. He didn't know just how far it was best to go in his playing a like interest. Finally he said:

"I am going to ask a favor of you

HOW IT STARTED By JEAN NEWTON

'Addition, Division and Silence'

HERE is a phrase which somehow or other keeps cropping up every now and then, particularly in reference, as might be correctly imagined, to public officers and quasi public officials or others who take advantage of their position to plunder their benefactors or neglect those responsible for placing them in vantage points of authority.

It is to the corrupt practices of unscrupulous politicians that the expression "Addition, division and silence" owes its inspiration.

W. H. Kemble, at one time treasurer of Pennsylvania, is credited with the authorship of the words, which were employed in a letter published in the New York Sun-March 15, 1872.

Ever since their first appearance they have found constant use since no other phrase could so eloquently fill the bill.

gentlemen. In my next show I am supposed to play a gangster. I'd like to do it right; make it a real part. I want you, who have been around a lot, to advise me. How shall I make up, and what shall I wear?"

Seriously and critically, the visitors regarded him. They looked him over with the care a purchaser might bestow on a considered automobile. At last, they reached a decision and the apparent leader spoke for them all. "Don't," he said earnestly, "change a thing."

There have been a lot of statistics published on the Manhattan telephone directory. They will tell you how much paper is required to print it, how many subscribers are listed in it and how much distance would be covered if the subscribers or the book. I forget which, were laid end to end. But they have left out some very important figures. In this Manhattan directory, for example, there is, or are, be exact and as the case may be, 1 Rod, 5 Yard, 1 Foot, 3 Foot, 25 Feet, no Feet, but 2 Inch. Furthermore, there is, or are, 1 Arm, 9 Legg, 14 Finger and 84 Hand, not apparently including Charlie Hand, who is now living at the Biltmore. Many hands make light work, which may be why the Democratic campaign went so well, although Charlie was the only hand assigned to both Mr. Garner and Mr. Smith. There are a round dozen head in the directory, a Braine and a Liver.

Owen Davis writes plays about as fast as Clarence Buddington Kelland writes short stories. That's record speed. George Jessel and a friend once met Mr. Davis on a morning walk, and the friend asked Jessel if he knew whether the playwright if he knew whether the playwright was engaged in any work.

"When I saw him," said Jessel, "he had stooped over to tie a shoe lace. It just happened that he saw a pencil that somebody had dropped on the sidewalk, and before he straightened up he had written two new plays."

EAT FRUIT FOR YOUR DAILY DIET

Many Varieties Contain at Least Four Vitamins.

By EDITH M. BARBER

Fruit in the Twentieth century has taken an entirely new place in the daily diet. There are two reasons for this—the first and most important being the fact that there are certain fruits now distributed so widely throughout the country that it is possible to get them at a fairly moderate price all the year round.

The second reason which has promoted the idea of fruit in the diet is the new knowledge of the existence of vitamins and the discovery that fruits are most high in this content, a number of them containing liberal quantities of at least four vitamins. There are other reasons as well for the importance of fruit in the food plan, the alkaline quality of products of digestion which neutralize acid products of meat and cereals and at the same time the natural acids in their original state, which, with the natural fiber content, have a part in hastening the digestion of foods.

Citrus fruits and pineapple have the highest vitamin content. Apples and bananas, two of the most widely distributed of foods, rank nearly as high. If these are available and less expensive than citrus fruits, there need be no fear of a lack in the diet. Although tomatoes are not usually classed as fruits because we have used them so long as a vegetable, I must remind you that they rank with all citrus fruits in vitamin content, that this content is not injured by canning and that canned tomatoes can be found at every grocery store, large or small—in the city or country—at all times of the year. I should also mention that the pulp is just as valuable as the juice and that it can usually be bought at a lower price. In the form of tomato juice, however, tomatoes

GAME OF PRAIRIE DOG CHASE

Directions for playing: Cut some plain white paper into inch strips, 52 in all, marking an equal number of them with each of the following directions: move one; move two; go back two; wait one turn; go back to start; extra turn. When playing turn these slips face downward, each player drawing one in turn and following instructions given. The first player to reach the point marked stop, wins the game. For men use small buttons, each player having one and either of a different color or of a different marking from his opponents'. If in the first drawing a player draws any slips except the ones indicating the number of moves he must wait another turn and until he draws one of the two slips giving a number. Be careful that none of the slips are marked or torn in any way. Each time you play make fresh slips for otherwise it would work out unfairly. Players should close their eyes when drawing.

have come to have a place on the breakfast table as well as on the luncheon and dinner table.

We have been learning a great deal lately about the importance of vitamin C in tooth formation and in protection from decay. Experiments using large quantities of orange juice have been successful in improving mouth conditions wherein improvement was most desirable. Most persons could not afford to use daily such a large quantity as was used in the curative work reported but fortunately if diet has been generally liberal from the fruit standpoint these serious conditions are not likely to occur.

If you include in your diet plenty of fruit, of whatever variety, you will be contributing to your good health as well as to the pleasure of eating. It is fortunately seldom that we find any one who does not like fruit. Most persons can digest it easily and occasionally we will find some one who has an excess of gastric acid who can not take extremely acid fruits. For these persons, there are, however

Orange Ice Box Cake

Lady fingers or sponge cake slices
1 teaspoonful cornstarch
¼ cupful sugar
1 tablespoonful butter
3 eggs
1 cupful milk

Orange Juice and Grated rind
Grated rind of 1 lemon
Orange sections

Line the bottom and sides of a mold or cake pan with lady fingers, serrated, with the rounded side toward the pan, or thin slices of orange cake. Place the cornstarch, sugar, butter, egg yolks and milk in the double boiler and cook until smooth. Add grated fruit rinds and orange juice and stiffly beaten egg whites while mixture is still warm. Spread a layer of filling over the lady fingers. Add another layer of lady fingers. Repeat until all the ingredients are used. Place in the refrigerator for 24 hours. The filling will sink into lady fingers and all will solidify. Decorate with sections of orange in flower fashion on the top.

Grapefruit and Stuffed Celery Salad

2 large grapefruit or 1 can grapefruit
6 stalks celery
½ oz. sharp cheddar
French fruit salad dressing
Lettuce or other salad green

Stuff the celery stalks with the soft, yellow cheese; sliced into half-inch sections. Mix in the center of salad plate; surround with grapefruit sections. Serve with French dressing. (One finely chopped canned pimento may be added to the cheese before stuffing.)

Banana and Apple Brown Betty
3 cupfuls bread, diced
3 tablespoonfuls butter
2 apples
3 bananas
½ cupful sugar
½ tablespoonful cinnamon

Cut bread into dice and moisten with butter until bread cubes are brown. Peel apples and bananas and cut very thin and dredge same with sugar mixed with cinnamon. Cover bottom of baking dish with the bread, add fruit and remaining bread in alternate layers, mixing a few of the crumbs to put on top. Bake one-half hour covered and the last 15 minutes uncovered in moderate oven 375 degrees (Fahrenheit).

Billion a Year Poultry Trade of U. S. Is Shown

Chicago.—The United States produces and consumes 800,000,000 eggs annually and the chickens hatched each year number between 800,000,000 and 700,000,000. The poultry business of the entire nation last year amounted to a billion dollars.

These figures were presented at the annual fact-finding conference of the Institute of American Poultry Industry by Dr. H. V. McCosham of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

City of Philadelphia in Biblical Records

Although there is no evidence that Penn had any knowledge of the vanished Egyptian city of Philadelphia, it is nevertheless possible that the name of his settlement derived from the same gay and dissolute Ptolemy Philadelphus who gave the Egyptian city its title, for there was another Philadelphia, also named after him. This city was in eastern Palestine. It has fallen into ruins, but remains, both of pagan temples and Christian churches survive.

There is no definite record as to just how Penn came to choose the name "Philadelphia" for his settlement, but Philadelphia is mentioned in the Apocalypse, or Book of Revelations, as one of the "seven churches of Asia," and it is possible the founder of Pennsylvania, finding the name there, was struck by its connotation of "Brotherly Love."

That's the Trouble

A man can live to be one hundred, but the trouble is, he looks it.

TO MOTHERS whose children won't EAT

Nature knows best. Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children a constipating cathartic that drains the system. California syrup of figs is all the "medicine" they require.

Specialists will tell you that a sluggish appetite almost always means the child has a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a listless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children seem to need is pure, unadulterated fig syrup.

Children who get syrup of figs, now and then, soon have the appetite and energy of young animals! They keep well and avoid colds and sluggish spells.

Nature never made a finer laxative for children; and they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California syrup of figs. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. The very next day, your child will be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and see amazing improvements in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

The promises made by the bottlers of California Syrup of Figs are true, and it will do the same for you, if it's genuine CALIFORNIA. Don't accept substitutes.

A WOMAN'S TROUBLE

WOMEN who suffer from miserable pains every month or the dragging or irregularities which drag them down, should take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Read what M. Leon K. McCall of Mecclesville, Wyo., says: "Eight months ago I was in very poor health. It was almost impossible for me to be on my feet long. I was a sufferer of woman's trouble. I started taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and used Dr. Pierce's Kidney Tablets and now I am able to do my work without pain, can take long walks without weary to me, and am enjoying my life as a new woman." MAKES WOMEN LOSE FAT

Miss Rosa M. Nelson of Dayton, Ohio writes: "I weighed 120 so started to take Kruschen. I never was so surprised as when I weighed myself the first week—I lost 11 pounds. I just bought my 2nd jar and am down to 105—am still taking them and never felt better in my life." (June 17, 1922)

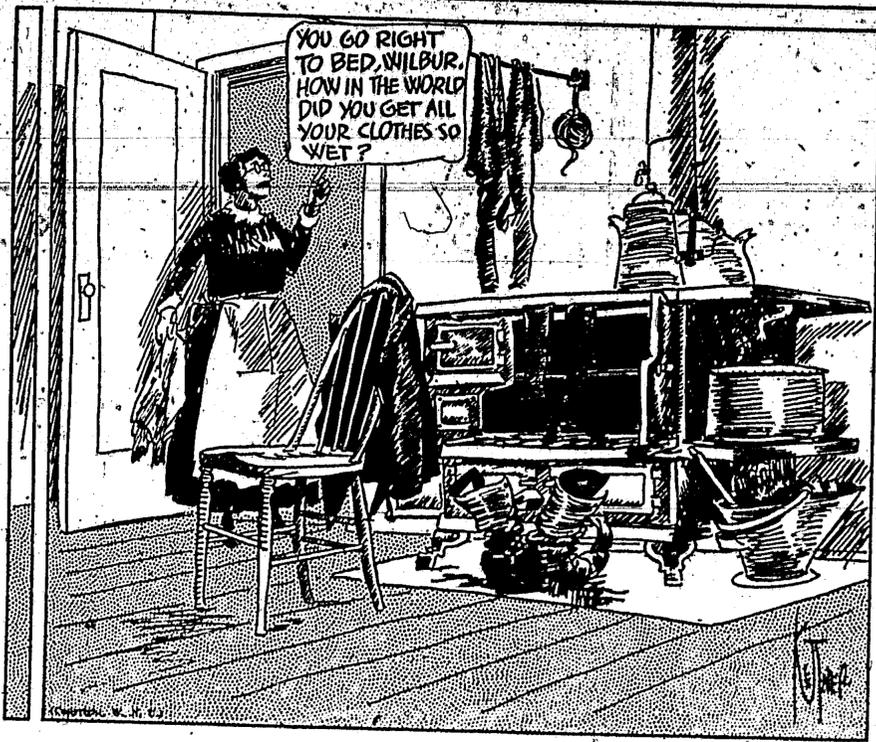

To take off fat—take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a few cents—get it at any druggist in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you on this is the SAFE and harmless way to lose fat—your money gladly returned.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts—imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

Our Government — How It Operates

By William Bruckart

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

THERE is every evidence that when, in 1913, congress passed a law creating the Department of Labor, that few of those who were most vociferous in support of the proposal had any conception of what the new department of the government was to do. A review of the debates of the time indicates rather clearly that somebody wanted to do something for labor, but they did not know exactly what that something should be.

So I am prepared to say that it was the administrative officers who have filled the several posts from secretary of labor down the line of rank who have made the Department of Labor something of value. Some of those observers who watched proceedings when congress enacted the law tells me that the movement had every appearance of a "sop" to organized labor, and if their conclusion be true, it certainly can be said how that the legislators bulldozed much better than they know. The law which those legislators passed said the Department of Labor was to promote the interests of labor, of the working people of the country, that their working conditions might be improved and that their opportunities might be advanced. While I still entertain some doubt concerning what congress thought this would mean, it has become quite evident that it is possible for the great intangible thing, called government, to act in a very personal capacity when occasions require. It has so acted through the Department of Labor.

Here is an illustration: In a great textile mill of New England, the workers clamored for better conditions; they wanted shorter working hours; they wanted assurance that they would not be dismissed without notice; they wanted certain agreements with the owners as to the rates of pay, and they sought an agreement with their employers to reach these understandings through a committee of their own numbers. The employers turned a deaf ear to the proposals and would not even discuss them. A strike was the alternative which the workers offered.

One might say that was a private matter and that the government had no right to mix into it. But the Constitution's preamble says that the government is, among other things, "for the people." Surely, here was an instance where something could be done for the people, for workers and employers alike.

The Department of Labor did mix into the controversy. It sent several men to the scene. They listened to the grievances of the workers and to the statements of the employers. They suggested ways out, one after another, until they were able to get a committee from the workers and a committee from the owners to sit in the same room. Eventually, these secret discussions, always with a conciliator from the Department of Labor participating, developed a compromise on which each side had yielded certain concessions.

The terms are not material here, but suffice it to say there was no strike in that mill and there probably never will be one for the reason that each side learned something about fairness and the rights of the other fellow.

That controversy was simple compared with some that arise and with which the department has to deal in order to do what its officials regard as their public duty that there may be peace in commerce and industry. It shows, nevertheless, how the multiple eye of the government is upon us all.

And in connection with this last reference, one must recall that in this same department there is what has come to be known as the children's bureau. It goes beyond the working man in its course of duty. The welfare of children of all classes come within its surveillance, and throughout the country one now finds juvenile courts, orphanages and other institutions having to do with children who are receiving constant advice from the bureau in Washington, D.C. It watches industry, too, that there may be no undue dangers developed, that conditions conducive to disease may not be continued and that every aid within the power of the national government is extended to correct them.

Another phase of the department's work gives it control of the entry into the United States of foreigners. Our immigration law is perhaps the most stringent in the world, because it is our policy to conserve our racial standards. The "melting pot" is receiving no more foreign blood in quantity. The department watches this closely, and it sees to it that those who are admitted either become American citizens, swear allegiance to our flag and adopt our traditions, or else they go back home. And this job of Americanizing foreigners is one which obviously must strengthen our nation in order that it may live in the future.

Osprey's Vulture The osprey, if protected, or permitted to live in peace, is capable of adapting itself to civilized conditions, and the presence of one or more acres of this handsome and harmless bird about a large body of water would provide much of interest and entertainment.

WHOLE WHEAT FOR DAY'S FIRST MEAL

If you have never tried whole wheat as a breakfast food, or in various other dishes, you have a treat in store. The flavor is rich and nutty, all the nutritive value of the grain is retained, and, best of all in these trying times, whole wheat is cheap. This is because a great many farmers have surplus wheat. Many relief agencies are sending whole wheat to the families of the unemployed who need help, because it gives them so much real nourishment for so little cost.

The dweller in the city may not be able to buy whole wheat at a grocery store, but can generally get it at a feed store. Grocers do not like to carry whole wheat because it does not store well. The "germ," which is taken out in milling flour or refined cereals, causes wheat to spoil easily, but it is the most nutritious part of the grain. So when the entire grain, whole or cracked, is used, the full value of the wheat is available. You can keep well-cleaned whole wheat in the house for three or four weeks in a dry cool place without its deteriorating.

A pound of whole-ground wheat will make breakfast porridge for two days for a family of five, with generous servings. Even at three cents a pound, the cost of such servings would be less than a third of a cent each, or one and one-half cents for the family. A peck of wheat (16 pounds) is enough to provide a family with breakfast food every day for a month.

Whole wheat takes a fairly long time to cook. You can use a pressure cooker if you have one, or a fireless cooker—or you can simply cook it in boiling water three or four hours, or over steam. Perhaps you would prefer to save time and also fuel in cooking by grinding the wheat in a coffee mill or a meat grinder. Sometimes the feed store will grind it for you.

To cook the ground whole wheat, use six parts of boiling water to one pound of wheat, with three teaspoonfuls of salt. Simmer for an hour to an hour and a half, stirring occasionally. For cooking in a double boiler, use equal quantities of wheat and water, and cook until tender, or until all uncooked starchy flavor has gone. It is often convenient to cook enough for two days at a time. Re-heating on the second day will improve the flavor and texture of the wheat. Serve with milk.

Besides breakfast porridge, once your wheat is cooked, you can have wheat chowder, scrapple, plin, muffins, pudding, or cookies. Or the wheat may be served at dinner as rice or hominy is served.

A Matter Opened by Mistake

HOW TO STOP A COLD QUICK AS YOU CAUGHT IT

A New Method Doctors Everywhere Are Advising

1 Take 1 or 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets.

2 Drink Full Glass of Water.

3 If throat is sore, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in a half glass of warm water and gargle according to directions.

Almost Instant Relief In This Way

If you have a cold—don't take chances with "cold killers" and nostrums. A cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

The simple method pictured above is the way doctors throughout the world now treat colds.

It is recognized as the QUICKEST safest, surest way. For it will check an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

That is because the real BAYER Aspirin embodies certain medical qualities that strike at the base of a cold almost INSTANTLY.

You can combat nearly any cold you get simply by taking BAYER Aspirin and drinking plenty of water every 2 to 4 hours the first day and 3 or 4 times daily thereafter. If throat is sore, gargle with 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets crushed and dissolved in a half glass of warm water, repeating every 2 or 3 hours as necessary. Sore throat eases this way in a few minutes, incredible as this may seem.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, see that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And for a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets dissolve with sufficient speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness. Get a box of 12 or bottle of 100 at any drug store.

Ancho Notes

The Women's Club met Saturday, February 11, with Mrs. Henderson. The meeting was opened by repeating the club collect. The roll call was St. Valentines' day. After a short business meeting the study of Gran Quivira took place, this was very interesting. Several members gave personal experiences of their visits to the ruins. Mrs. Belknap, social leader, gave a series of contests, Mrs. Wilson winning first prize, Mrs. Hightower second and Mrs. John Straley the consolation. There were also Valentines for all the children. The house was very artistically decorated with hearts and valentines which were the handwork of the hostess. An elaborate refreshment course was served which carried out the valentine motif. Favors were paper-sweet peas, the club flower. We were glad to have with us Mrs. Kite, our president, although not able to preside it is good to have her with us again. Next meeting will be with Mrs. J. M. Frame.

"To the man who never doubts the good will of God the spirit of good will toward his fellow men comes easy." "On earth peace, good will toward men." "On earth peace among men in whom He is well pleased." "Good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people."

We reviewed these scriptures at Christmas time, but they are ours the whole year through. The parable of the Good Samaritan is perfect commentary of "Men of Good Will." Christ made no distinction between races as He offered salvation to the Jew first and also to the Gentile. Here is a bit of internal evidence that God's word is divinely inspired; the life and teachings of our Lord fit perfectly into all the prophecies concerning His coming to earth.
