CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, MARCH 17, 1933

NUMBER 34

Gold Hoarding Prohibited By Treasury Rules

New regulations to hold tight the government's control of gold and to prevent what President Roosevelt calls the "unpopular pastime" of hoarding governed the banks that were told they could reopen.

In issuing these regulations, Secretary Woodin reminded that no business could be done with gold coins or gold certificates. In fact, he appended the proviso that a number of federal and private institutions taking advantage of the opportunity to reopen must deliver all gold or gold certificates to the treasury within 30 days.

And he likewise gave to the banks the power to demand statements under oath that money to be withdrawn will not be hoarded.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

"I think that the air is good."
"You are like all men."
"Is that a compliment?"
"I like men."
"Still, I fear that you have no high opinion of them," he said.
"I have been warned."
"And no wonder. There is a lot of gunpowder in men and women and often they are near the fire. If you could see yourself in that black costume with the waving plumes and the golden braids, if you could see the glow in your face and eyes, I am sure that you would think of us with charity."
"But you—you are glow-proof. You are buried treasure. You are in love with Pat. You could not be induced to think of other girls."
"I am in love with Pat but I have not ceased to be human. I can still enjoy beauty."
"And love it," she answered with a smile. "You were quite frank about that at the dance. Don't worry. I shall not tell her."
"What I said I do not remember. If my gallantries were excessive, I should be pardoned. Your grace-and-beauty filled my eyes, and then I was not quite myself."
"Yes, I am not deceived. It was you and the old Madelon."
"It gave me a headache."
"And me a headache—an amusing headache."
"Why?"
"You spoke like a knight of old and my heart ached because men are not sincere. You do not care a straw for me, and yet, when we went out for a look at the stars, you kissed my lips and said that I was irresistible. You deceived! Look into my eyes and tell me how may one know when a man is speaking the truth? Have I changed or have you?"
She drew close to him and her eyes were filled with that power which has often checked and turned the currents of history.
He laughed saying: "Coquette! You are the most charming privateer in the world."
"Is such amusement only for gentlemen?" she asked with a red glow in her smile.
"You are better armed," he said. "Let's have a truce and a parley."
"There was an unexpected note in his voice. His gentle words had somehow suggested that he thought this playing had gone far enough. Her manner changed. Her face had turned serious.
"I want you to be worthy of Pat," she said. "Pat is my dearest friend. Are you quite sure that you love her?"
"As sure as you bluebird that the spring is here."
"There's only one way to keep sure of it."
"And what is the way?"
"Give up the good things of life. Stop drinking wine and kissing girls and go to meeting and to prayers. Some day I want to see you married."
Having heard galloping hoofs behind them, Collin turned his mare and saw a familiar horse and rider rapidly approaching. The rider was Amos Farnsworth. He slowed his pace and drew up beside them asking:
"Is this Miss Woodbridge?"
"It is," she answered.
"I have a message from Lady Washington which it's very particular," Amos began. "She wants to see you as soon as horse-foot can take you to general headquarters, which I'm to escort you. She says there's a robber on this road."
"Oh, d—n the robber!" Nancy exclaimed in a whisper.
She drew on her gloves and smiled as she turned to the young man saying, "We must delay our parley, I will lend you a little token. There's magic to it. Perhaps it will bring Pat to us."
She withdrew her glove and took from her breast a small arrow of perfumed ivory. Breaking the silken cord that held it, she gave him the token. Thereupon she wheeled her horse and rode away at a swift gallop with Captain Farnsworth. Collin surveyed the shining trinket still as warm as the blood of Nancy. On its surface he found the legend:
This talisman worn on your breast will lead to the one that you love best.
"Oh, the superstitions of women!" he exclaimed as he resumed his journey. He laughed as he put the curious trophy in his pocket. Pat would have been above that kind of folly.
He was now in a thrilling part of the pretty comedy of a young gentleman's life. The indirect methods and subtle motives of women were now a part of the play. Those of Nancy were easily discovered. Her black plume was a pirate's flag. Her beauty lent its power to her purpose and excited his interest. Still, he felt secure and quite innocent. He knew all the implications in the coming of Amos Farnsworth. Nancy's character was to the Lady Washington as transparent as water behind glass. With a motherly interest in Pat and Collin, she kept an eye on this beautiful interloper. Somehow she must have learned that Nancy had gone out on the west road. The girl's purpose was apparent to the dear woman. She resorted to strategy. Amos went to her every morning with news of those "took poorly." He knew of all that happened in the rear part of "Army Town." Naturally, he had been her helper in this matter. All the bother seemed quite unnecessary. He loved Pat as deeply as any man could love a woman. She was his sacred, incomparable ideal. These thoughts were passing in the mind of Collin as he rode on.

The next night he put up at the famous Red Cock tavern in the New Providence plantations, a few miles west of the important port of Providence. There after supper he found Slim Botts with the freside delivering meditations to a group of men who surrounded him. Botts, having left the army, had lately been elected to congress. Collin shook his head. It was evident that Colonel Botts had been declaiming against General Washington, for a citizen asked:
"Who is the best man to take Washington's place?"
Botts began: "The muse of history commands us to a survey of all possible candidates with great circumspection for, as Shakespeare says, he must be a man of 'unfiring and contemning' excellence, capable of the eagle's flight, our extremity being great and the fire in the flint shows not till it be struck and the body of our people has been sickened by futility and delay and their pockets drained. Who can name the man?"
There was a look of honest longing in the expansive countenance of Colonel Botts framed in hair, and its bilateral adornment.
"Gates," a voice answered.
Botts arose and shook hands with the owner of that voice saying, "My knowledge of the great and noble qualities of General Gates—the great champion of liberty and human rights—of his skill as a soldier, of his devotion to our common cause, inclines me, sir, in spite of my respect for Washington as a man, to endorse your opinion and to put my humble talents behind it in the face of stern necessity and with the fond hope of seeing victory perch upon our banners."
Collin was indignant. With the knowledge in his possession he was able to comprehend the recent history of Colonel Botts.
"Who is the gentleman who mentioned Gates?" he asked.
A man in the uniform of a brigadier answered with a touch of the Irish

"He could not hold his best officers. Many of them have left him. Here is one of them."
He pointed at Colonel Botts who sat as if holding the people like a baby in his lap, with a look of sanctimonious devotion.
"Pardon me. That is not quite true," Collin went on. "The army was chaos. It had to be organized. The officers, unfit for the duties they had undertaken had to be replaced. I am sure that I do no injury to Colonel Botts when I say that he is not a soldier. I am told that he is an able politician. I know that he is a capable recruiter; but I cannot believe that he would claim to be prepared to command a regiment in battle. Every officer who has left the army has left it for a like reason. The division which they and you and men like you are seeking to create among our people will be our worst enemy. It will prolong the war. It may defeat us. With no knowledge of the facts—you, a foreigner, lately arrived, should be slow to give your support to a purpose inspired by personal ambition and which no well-informed American is able to countenance."
A number of men clapped their hands.
Colonel Botts was inarticulate with indignation. Conway sprang to his feet, saying, "No man can address me in that manner and challenge the truth of my statements and the honor of my chief and go unscathed. By G—d! I challenge you."
The little argument had come to an unexpected climax. The hot blood of youth was again in trouble.
Collin arose and answered calmly: "If correct information hurts your feelings, I am sorry, but I am not afraid of you, sir. I cannot take the chance of being put to bed. As I am challenged, I have the privilege of choosing the weapons. I therefore propose that we fight with our fists. You are young and of equal stature. We could show our courage and bind up our wounds and go to our tasks tomorrow."
"That kind of fighting is for bar-room scufflers, not for gentlemen," Conway shouted. "I have heard much of your gouging, kicking and biting here in America. I am no human dog."
"Do not misjudge me, sir," Collin answered. "I am proposing a fight with our fists strictly in accord with the rules of John Jackson."
The master of the inn, named W-with Reverend Allen, Colonel Botts and two helpers.

Collin took his pipe from his pocket and filled it. He lit a splinter in the fire. The shaking flame as he raised it to the pipe-bowl betrayed his inner emotion. The courage of an American soldier was soon to be tried. He felt sure that he would win. Conway did not act like a man of courage. "Are they going to be all night doing that little job?" he asked himself as he smoked. Conway was writing in his diary. Others were whispering together.
The tavern keeper returned with Mr. Allen and Colonel Botts. The latter stood twirling a side whisker that stuck out like a horn, his mind pregnant with great thoughts of and for "the people." The tavern keeper said in a solemn voice:

"That Kind of Fighting is for Bar-room Scufflers."

"Gentlemen, we are ready for you."
Collin took the arm of Mr. Allen, Conway that of Colonel Botts. They proceeded to the stable yard followed by the tavern guests. The seconds conducted their principals to the rock. There they drew lots for the choice of positions. Collin won and chose the charge nearest the open stable door about thirty feet away. The two sat down, each above a loaded bore in the rock.
Again the tavern keeper spoke: "I advise all my guests to go to some safer place. I will assume no responsibility for the safety of spectators. You, who are fighting this duel, will please bear in mind that the fuses are two and a half feet long and that the fire moves rapidly. The holes are fifteen inches deep. You will have not more than three or four seconds in which to move to a safer position after the fire enters the hole. Mr. Conway will head for the opening toward the house, Mr. Cabot for the stable door, within which I and the two seconds will find shelter."

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

At Boston, in July, 1775, Collin Cabot, ardent young lover of Liberty, bids good-by to his sweetheart, Patience "Pat" Farnsworth, daughter of a loyalist but herself a "rebel." He joins the Revolutionary army at Cambridge, and is numbered into the company of Capt. Amos Farnsworth. Collin impresses Washington, and makes him his informal secretary, with the rank of captain. A letter from Pat tells Collin she is to visit friends outside the American lines, and asks him to meet her. He sets out, leading a British pilot to capture Collin, Farnsworth, with a troop, ride to the rescue. A British pilot, led by Harry Gage, Collin's rival for the hand of Pat, threatens the young patriot. Farnsworth and his troop come upon Gage's halcyon Collin to a duel. They fight and Gage is wounded. Collin returns to Cambridge. Washington, having forbidden dueling, reduces him to the ranks, but Mrs. Washington, affectionately known to the army as "Lady" Washington, remains his staunch friend. Returned to his rank, for meritorious service, Collin is sent with Col. "Tom" Botts, a "civilian" soldier, on a recruiting mission to the West. He meets a typical pioneer woman, Mrs. Bunker, the mother-in-law of drunken leader by her bravery and shrewdness. Returning to Cambridge, Collin is sent to aid in the transportation of the guns of Thompson to the help of Dunbar, to bombard Boston. Facing the bombardment, the British army and many loyalists evacuate the city, the Farnsworth family going with them, to Canada. Collin is promoted to a colonelcy, and is sent on duty to New York.

kins, a big, brawny, bearded man with sleeves rolled to his elbows, came from behind the bar saying:
"Gentlemen, all you need is to prove your courage. There is a rock in my stable yard with two holes in it drilled for blasting. We could use them to settle this difficulty. I will put a charge of powder in each hole with a fuse and lamp it in. You are to sit, side by side, over the two blasts. When you are in position I will light the fuses. The man who runs first is beaten. The man who sits there longest wins the fight. He will be the man of iron nerve. My prediction is that neither of you will be hurt unless one or the other wishes to commit suicide."
A roar of laughter greeted this unique plan of the tavern keeper.
"It's a fair proposal," a citizen declared, and others audibly fell in with his way of thinking.
A man who had listened to the quarrel and said nothing now arose. He spoke in a tone that commanded silence and respect, saying, "I have heard the able argument of this young man, whose name I do not know. I cannot see why the challenger, or any man who has an interest in the welfare of our Colonies, should be offended by it. I have heard the plan of our host. It is the only kind of duel for which there is the slightest excuse. It will afford these gentlemen a chance to commit murder if either of them is bent upon it, but it will be self-murder. Therefore, Mr. Landlord, I move that it is the sense of this meeting that the duel shall be fought as you propose and that if either gentleman is unwilling to submit to your test of his courage he shall apologize to the other or accept the stigma of cowardice."
It was a cunning bit of strategy. A chorus of voices seconded the motion. It was put and carried. Botts and Conway were out-tricked. They had come to a pass that gave neither principal a chance to back water.
Collin arose and said, "I am ready."
"So am I," Conway declared.
"I will go and charge the holes," said the tavern host. "You may each send a second to witness the charging."
Conway sent Colonel Botts, and Collin named the stranger who had made the motion. He was Rev. Thomas Allen of Pittsfield, a sturdy American out on a speaking tour.
He pressed Collin's hand saying, "Success to you, my boy, but don't be too brave."
The landlord took down his great powder-horn that hung on the wall, fastened his lanterns and left the room

Governor Arthur Sellman will appear upon the program of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' convention, to be held at Tucumcari, N. M., March 19-21. Governor Sellman is slated to present the response to the welcome address on behalf of the state.
Senator Bratton has informed Albert N. Moriarty of Silver City, N. M., that the Bratton bill to reduce governmental expenditures will not cause abandonment of Fort Bayard hospital, nor will it reduce compensation, disability allowances or pensions of ex-service men.
Santa Fe railroad paid the Sandoval, N. M., county treasurer $6,600 of its April taxes in order that schools might be kept open a month longer. Payment of the railroad's taxes almost two months before due was made at the request of Representative W. E. Rose.
The outward movement of cattle from Arizona in 1932 was approximately 213,000 head, based on figures of the first ten months furnished by the Arizona Livestock Board of the University of Arizona. On the same basis of calculation the number of cattle slaughtered was 75,000 head.
Figures compiled at the University of Arizona indicate that the 1932 spring lettuce deal in Arizona consisted of 10,744 acres in the Salt River valley, 2,490 acres at Yuma, 660 acres at Eloy, 320 acres at Buckeye and 200 acres in the Rillito house district, totaling 14,414 acres. From this acreage 4,432 cars were marketed, or a yield of ninety-six crates per acre.
Over 400 copies of Brass Tacks, the official booklet prepared by the Las Cruces, N. M., Chamber of Commerce on this valley are being sent out to the members of the southwestern division of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which will hold its annual convention at State College on May 1, 2, 3 and 4 of this year. Eight hundred sacks of federal government flour, to be distributed to needy families in Coconino county, Ariz., by the Red Cross, arrived recently. The shipment consisted of 400 sacks of twenty-four pounds each and 400 sacks of forty-nine pounds each. Two hundred and fifty barrels of flour have already been allotted to destitute families here through the Red Cross agency in cooperation with the federal government.
If the enthusiasm and spirit with which the local business and cattlemen are preparing for the nineteenth annual convention of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association, to be held at Tucumcari March 26 and 27, is any criterion to go by the success of the convention is assured. The cattlemen will be welcomed to Tucumcari by Governor Arthur Sellman and Mr. W. A. Foyl, president of the Tucumcari Chamber of Commerce.
Dr. Walter Hough, head curator of anthropology of the United States Museum at Washington, is inspecting the canal work of the valley's earliest inhabitants, the nucleus of which lies in the vicinity of Mesa, Ariz. Fields surrounding Mesa are criss-crossed with sometimes faint indentations which were once the source of water supply for the early day Indians. Other larger canals now in use were dredged from the primitive, though accurately graded, canals.
Members of the state committee to survey possible sites for the proposed San Luis valley fish hatchery arrived in Alamosa and are on their tour of inspection.
Decision of the Arizona State Banking Department and the Grand Canyon Sheep Company to turn over to the National Wool Marketing Corporation for sale nearly 1,000,000 pounds of Arizona wool, has been reached. This decision expresses the effort of the financial organizations controlling wool in the West to protect interests of the wool producers.

ONE WORTHY "MOB"

All mobs are not to be denounced—the one that emptied the tea in Boston harbor, for one.

The little girl who wouldn't EAT

Nature knows best! Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of "stomach." Children who don't eat are sluggish. Not to correct this is incurable. It is so easy to do, if you will only use the "California treatment." Read what it is doing for listless children in every part of the country!

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children any constipating cathartic that drains the system and weakens twenty feet of tender bowels! California syrup of figs is the only "medicine" they need!

That girl or boy with a furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts! California syrup of figs will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food, digest it, gain weight.

Try the California treatment! Begin tonight, with enough of the pure syrup of figs to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Give less tomorrow, then every other day, once a week until the child's appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, and you the stasis is gone.

Be sure to get the real California syrup of figs. Any druggist has it, all bottled, with directions. It's a natural, vegetable laxative. Just as good for babes of two years as boys of ten. They all love its taste!

There are imitations of California Syrup of Figs and those who would sell you some substitute even when a child's health is concerned. Don't ever take any bottle that is not plainly labeled CALIFORNIA.

End Serious Coughs With Creomulsion

A TENSE MOMENT

Teacher was instructing his class in past, present, and future tenses.

"Now I will give you an example," he said, "Supposing I said 'I am a very handsome man.' What tense would that be?"

Jackie Brown, to whom the question was addressed, rose to his feet, with an artful smile on his face.

"Please, teacher, that would be 'pre-tence'," he replied.—Boston Herald.

"Sign for it?" she exclaimed. "What shall I do?"

"Sign the book," said the carrier. "We've got to have proof of your having received the parcel."

She took the book and commenced to write.

Later, when the carrier's man opened his book, he saw what she had written. Obviously she had never signed for anything before, for all she had entered in the book were the words: "I got it."—Answers Magazine.

U. S. Farm Exports Boosted by Cotton

Volume of Products Leaving Country Is 120 Per Ct. Pre-War Record.

The index of the volume of exports of American farm products in November was 120 per cent of pre-war, reports the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

The index of all farm products exported in November, 1931, was 137 per cent of pre-war, and with cotton omitted the index was 114 per cent of pre-war.

Fruit exports in November were in volume 423 per cent of pre-war, cotton 147 per cent, and unmanufactured tobacco 144 per cent of pre-war.

Cotton exports for the five months ended November 30, 1932, totaled 3,873,000 bales compared with 3,287,000 bales for the corresponding period of 1931.

World Wheat Bins Groan; Shipments May Be Larger

The world wheat market is burdened by heavy stocks which are largely the result of restricted demand in importing countries, says the bureau of agricultural economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Shipments of wheat and flour from July through mid-December, from the principal exporting countries, have totaled 261,000,000 bushels as compared with 355,000,000 bushels in the corresponding period last season.

This low level of shipments, the bureau continues, has left the principal exporting countries with somewhat larger stocks of wheat as of December 1, 1932, than on December 1, 1931.

World shipments, it is expected, will be larger during the second half of the crop year because supplies of wheat from the large European crops in 1932 are being reduced, and although some countries have such large crops as to make it unlikely that they will import significant quantities, other countries, says the bureau, will have to depend more largely upon supplies of foreign wheat.—Missouri Farmer.

"PERFECT MYSTERY" REMAINS UNSOLVED

Woman's Disappearance From Party Baffles Police.

Memphis.—Mrs. F. Harry Long, twenty-four, society matron of Memphis, left a bridge party at 5 p. m. two years ago, thus creating a "perfect mystery" that has baffled police.

Her whereabouts have not been discovered since she drove away from the home of Mrs. W. Cole Kelly, to go home and feed her two-month-old baby.

That was January 4, 1931. Her disappearance is just as baffling to police now as it was when they first were called into the case.

Her husband, an insurance broker, has reconciled himself to the theory that Mrs. Long drowned herself in the Mississippi river—although he can think of no reason for such an act.

But Police Inspector Will, Griffin, who has solved many mysteries, believes that some day she will appear. He has no evidence to support that belief—it is just a hunch.

When Mrs. Long failed to appear at her home that night to care for her baby son, her husband notified police. Some hours later, her automobile was found on the Harahan bridge, which spans the Mississippi river.

With daylight detectives found a woman's footprints in the mud between the river's edge and the lower end of the steps from the river. A pair of Mrs. Long's shoes fitted the tracks perfectly.

Strangely the footprints led through the river's edge. Three two prints stood even and close together, as if the person who made them stood contemplating the muddy waters.

Gross, the merchant prince of prisoners, went "over the hill" from the Colorado state penitentiary, he took big business with him.

In 1929 Gross set up a radio business within the prison. He bought, sold, and repaired radios—for a sum.

Gross was the owner and proprietor of the inmate canteen and the prison curio shop. He also had the concession at the soda springs, a tourist stopping place.

In all his ventures Gross took in an average of $2,000 a month. He had credit of $10,000 and at one time used it to the extent of $20,000.

During the three years Gross conducted his ventures at the prison he made thousands of dollars for himself and thousands for the prisoners' fund.

Roosevelt's Address

Everybody feels greatly encouraged over the way President Roosevelt has waded into things, especially the banking situation. Last Sunday evening at 8 o'clock (our time) while listening to his radio address, I felt as if our problems were almost solved by this great man. When he had finished my husband glanced at his watch and remarked, "He just talked 12 minutes." He crowded more comforting assurance into those 12 minutes than most speakers put into a full hour. The people apparently could never have made a wiser choice for president.

We noticed a wise crack in a daily paper the other day that said, we "swear our presidents in" on March 4th and start "cussing them out" on the 5th. It hasn't been the case with Mr. Roosevelt. Since swearing him in everybody is swearing by him it seems, even the Republicans.

Spring Gardens

Spring is here. It's planting time. Let's plant!

Everyone feels the spring time urge to get out and dig in the garden. It is the primitive instinct to plant seeds, watch them sprout, see the plants grow and produce vegetables, fruits or blossoms—depending on the sort of plants they are.

If you have a bare, dull yard of which you are ashamed two months hence instead of a lovely garden it will be your fault. Plant flower seeds. Set out shrubs. Get ready for flowering beauty—but do it now before the season is too far advanced. You can, if you will, have a garden that will be the admiration of your neighbors and friends, of everyone who drives past.

And all this beauty costs nothing but a few dimes for seeds, a little fertilizer perhaps, a little water and a little pleasant, health-building work.

Vegetables will appeal to many. Especially to farmers. Every farm should have its home garden and a surplus to sell. Do you know, it is the surpluses of milk, eggs, butter and vegetables, that just now are keeping many a farm household supplied with a little ready cash to spend for the things the farm does not produce?

It's Spring. Let's give the old planting urge plenty of room for free expansion.—El Paso Times.

Rep. J. V. Taylor said "This legislature had a chance to cut out nepotism and do many other things." A "lot of constructive work might have been done," he said, "but it hasn't. It looks to me like the newspapers have got us down the chute where they can apply the brand to us."

Roosevelt Likely to Win

Washington, March 13 (AP)—The senate today tabled a motion by Senator McCarran (D. Nev.), to refer the Roosevelt economy program to the judiciary committee.

Failure of the attempt to send the bill to committee represented a severe setback for foes of the legislation. Its advocates immediately expressed more confidence that the drastic authority requested by President Roosevelt over veterans and federal payroll costs would be granted within the next several days, the house having already voted in favor.

After a Republican conference today, Senator McNary—the party leader—said no effort was made to bind the Republicans on the bill, but he "was led to believe from the discussion that a substantial majority will support the president in the passage of this measure."

All the discussion, he said, dealt with the veteran's section by which the president hopes to save $400,000,000 in federal expenses. Some Republicans favored changing the bill to limit the cuts

One Year Loans To State Banks

Washington, Mar. 13 (AP)—Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, today introduced a bill to authorize direct loans from federal reserve banks to state banks and trust companies for one year.

"This is to meet some of the criticisms that have been directed at the emergency bank bill we have already passed," Robinson said in having the measure read to the membership.

Senator Long (D., Ala.) who had offered a bill to permit state banks not members of the reserve system to enter the system for emergency period without subscribing to the capital stock of the reserve banks said the Robinson

A wasplike insect, called the Ichneumonida, has a tail like a slender hair from a horse's tail, with which it drills through wood with this hairlike drill and with such accuracy that hits the spot where wood-boring larvae lie buried. Just how these insects know where to bore with such unerring accuracy is a mystery, but it is of great economic value, as it destroys many insects harmful to agriculture.

Pitcher Proverb.

"The pitcher goes so often to the water that it is broken at last." This is the form in which the English proverb is generally quoted. It belongs to the common folk sayings of several nations. Its most famous expression in literature is in Cervantes' Don Quixote: "So many times the pitcher goes to the fountain!" Meaning that it gets broken. But the same proverb is found four centuries earlier in a French writer, Gautier de Coland.

"Because It's Better..."

By Henry T. Ewald

President, Campbell-Ewald Company, Detroit

Merchandise is advertised because it is better--also, it is better because it is advertised.

That is neither a paradox, nor a wise-crack. It is a truism.

The influence of advertising is two-fold. It reaches out into the world, and sways public opinion in favor of a worthy product. It reaches back into the factory and inspires the manufacturer, the shop foreman, and the humblest workman to build better and better and still better value into the product.

It establishes a standard of quality that leads the buyer to expect much, and that impels the maker to measure up to the expectation.

To this extent then, merchandise is advertised not only because it is a better product--but it actually becomes a still better product because it is advertised.

Consistent advertising is the manufacturer's pledge of quality. It is a visible proof that he has faith enough in his product to back it with his name--and with his money.

People know instinctively that a product so sponsored is worthy of their confidence. They prefer it, naturally, to its unheralded, unsung competitor.

Advertising cannot work miracles. It may sell inferior merchandise for a short time, but it cannot keep on selling it. When you see a motor car, or a breakfast food, or a fountain pen advertised consistently, year after year, you know that it is a good product and that it is giving satisfaction. You buy it with confidence, and you are seldom disappointed.

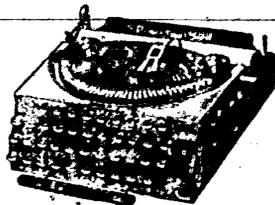

Advertising is educational in its influence. It carries the news of business into the far-flung corners of civilization. It displays the new styles on Main Street the same day that they make their appearance on Fifth Avenue. It makes familiar to millions of people, the names and trade-marks and qualities of innumerable products.

It makes it possible for the woman in Tucson or Bangor or New York to shop with equal confidence, knowing not only what she wants, and what it will cost, but what she can expect from it, in satisfaction and service.

No time is lost from guessing. The buyer knows from long experience that advertised products must be dependable, or they could not continue to be advertised.

Handsome Memorial to Marquette

This Marquette memorial, by Henry Hering, sculptor, was recently erected in Marquette park, Gary, Ind., in honor of Jacques Marquette, French Jesuit priest and friend of the American Indians and a companion of the French explorer, Louis Joliet.

Lights of New York By WALTER TRUMBULL

It was a good many years ago that John Barrymore made one of his first stage successes in "The Fortune Hunter." The play went so well that Louis Joseph Vance was induced to write a book from it. The book was illustrated by Arthur William Brown, and Winchell Smith induced Barrymore to pose for some of the illustrations. The other day a young man came to Mr. Brown's studio. He brought him a battered copy of "The Fortune Hunter," which he said he had picked up in a Chinese book shop in Shanghai; said he thought the illustrator might like to have it. His reason for bringing the book to Mr. Brown was that he had always liked his illustrations.

But there was more to it than that. In the back of the book was pasted a label which read: "American Library Association, Overseas Service." As further proof that this particular book had been through the war was a list of those who apparently had taken it from the library. They ranged all the way from corporals to colonels. And the names had many names and comments scribbled on the margin. On one page had been pencilled a quotation from "Alice in Wonderland." The name written below it was that of an Englishman. It was Rupert Brooke.

Norman Dodd was at Yale with Sam Pryor, Jr. When he came out, he went into a bank and did very well there. But one day he decided that he did not wish to spend his life in the banking business. So he left, gathered five other Yale men and, merely dropping a letter from banking, went into the baking business. He makes some sort of cranberry health bread and is doing well again.

Many do not appear to know that Franklin D. Roosevelt had a half brother. The President-elect's mother was Sara Delano, but his father's first wife was Helen Astor. Their son was James Roosevelt Roosevelt, once secretary to the embassy in London, who died only a few years ago. He was known to his intimates as "Hoey" Roosevelt. His widow is still living.

DIET WILL WARD OFF COSTIVENESS

"Great American Disease" Is Easily Corrected.

By EDITH M. BARBER
Several questions in regard to the question of constipation, which has been called the great American disease, have come to me recently.

The first point to be made is that unless there is some organic defect, constipation can be avoided or cured by proper diet. Proper diet, however, is not always the same for one person as for another. The majority of persons find that a diet containing "roughage," "bulk," "cellulose" in plentiful amount stimulates the passing of the food along the alimentary tract in a period of time long enough to allow the nutriment to be absorbed, but not long enough to allow the residue to ferment or to putrify. The combination of the natural acids which usually occur in vegetables and fruits which are high in this roughage aids in this result.

We also find persons who have another kind of digestive tract upon which fibrous foods have a contrary effect. They tend to pack and to prevent the passage of the food through the alimentary canal. Persons of this type while avoiding food of this sort may keep in excellent condition. Mothers should watch the results of diet in the case of children very carefully because it is in early years that habits of digestion are formed. Regularity in meal times and in the time set for evacuating the colon are both exceedingly important. Cathartics should be given very seldom and always under the direction of a physician. Correction of condition by diet

How It Started By Jean Newton

"To Be One's Own Ancestor"

Qui sert bien son pays n'a pas besoin d'aidez.
Translated, this Gallic gem reads: "He who serves his country well does not need any ancestors."
So wrote Voltaire in 1743; and in so doing he crystallized in speech an idea which finds expression in the idiom of a dozen languages.

This idea, freely interpreted, is that one way to average up for the lack of illustrious ancestors is to be your own ancestor—by performing services of such outstanding value to the country or community that one's status will require no pedigree.

should be the first attempt. Sometimes in the second type of constipation mineral oil is found to be a remedy which may also eventually be a cure after good habits have been started. In later life sometimes a change of living conditions, sometimes merely a change of water, or worry or excitement may produce a temporary condition of constipation. An excellent remedy which is not actually a cathartic and yet which gives the same results in two level teaspoonsful of salt dissolved in a quart of water, taken half an hour before breakfast. Some persons find lukewarm water better, but just as many get the same results with cold or even ice water, which is pleasant to take in combination with salt. Another remedy for persons who can take roughage is the use of agaragar, a vegetable gelatin which passes through the digestive tract without being affected by the digestive juice, and for this reason pushes the other foods with it. There are a great many incorrect ideas about certain foods being constipating. Milk is often blamed unjustly. There are a few things, such as apple skins and blackberries, which seem to have an astringent effect upon the lining of the digestive tract, which causes it to tighten.

The best prevention of constipation is a diet containing plenty of fruit and vegetables—cooked or raw. Most persons find the inclusion of whole grains an advantage, while some find the reverse. A diet regulated to the individual is the best prevention of constipation.

Apple Prune Betty
2 cups sliced apples
1 cup stewed prunes
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1½ cups bread crumbs
½ cup liquid from stewed prunes
1-3 cup lemon juice
Arrange the apples, prunes and crumbs in layers in a buttered baking dish, sprinkling each layer with the sugar and cinnamon which have been mixed. Just before adding the top layer of crumbs, pour the prune liquid and lemon juice over all. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until apples are tender.

Whole Wheat Date Bread
2 cups whole wheat flour
2 cups white flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 package dates
1 cup nuts
2 cups sour milk or 1½ cups milk and ½ cup sour cream
Mix dry ingredients together, add dates that have been washed, stoned and cut in small pieces, and chopped nuts. Stir sour milk quickly into the dry ingredients. Put in bread tin well greased and bake in a slow oven, 275 degrees Fahrenheit. Increase heat at end of baking. Bake about one hour.

My Neighbor Says:
TO "SOFT COOK" eggs properly, immerse in boiling water. Cover and let stand on the hot burner or on the back of the range two minutes. The egg white will be jelly-like and the yolk soft, making a digestible and palatable food.
Soda should never be used for washing enameled pans. A little salt applied with a soft cloth will remove all the stains and the pan should be thoroughly rinsed afterwards with plenty of warm water.
Apple pudding is a quick and easy pudding to make when you haven't a hot oven, as it can be made on top of the stove by stewing apples (or any other fruit) in a pudding dish; add a little water and sugar and outmug, then cover with a soft dough made same as for dumplings, and cover airtight with a close cover and steam for 15 minutes.

The minister looked his colossal adviser over carefully from head to foot and replied: "Man, it's exercise you need, not food."

Here's What as to the New Blouses

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A BLOUSE with this suit and a blouse with that suit, a blouse for this occasion and a blouse for that, plus an extra blouse or two for good measure—your spring and summer clothes budget will have to be planned just like that if you aspire to dress up to the minute. When one realizes the tremendous importance which fashion attaches to the suit (either jacket or cape type) it is easy to discover the why for and the wherefor of the generous allowance which must be made this season for a whole wardrobe of blouses.

This challenge, which the impending rogue of the tailored suit flings to those who must create the perfect complement in the way of the blouse, is being played up to with such dramatic gesture it would seem that there is nothing left to wish for in color, fabric, style or novelty of the myriads of models which go to make up current collections.

There is everything in the realm of the blouse to intrigue the fancy, ranging from daintiest lingerie or ultra formal de luxe types of "sportiest" knitted sorts, not to forget to mention the dash-dashy scarf blouse which makes even the humblest tailored suit take on awank. Its riot of high color and bold design offers a most excellent antidote for that malady, "depression," some of us have been hearing about. And the new checked, bayader-striped or plaided taffeta blouses—of course every fashion-wise woman will make a grand rush for one such at the very start of the season. What an air of smartness they add to the tailored spring suit! To multiply this degree of chic, top the blouse with a straw sailor, set of course at a perky angle, with banding and facing of the identical taffeta check or plaid, for fashion's latest move is to match the hat up to the blouse.

Lace blouses, too, scores of them, and how lovely they are, especially those of the very new and chic tinted cotton laces.

The blouses pictured are a representative group. The one to the left at the top is made of one of those dashing scarf silks which are the talk of town. For a spring outfit fancy can picture no more ideal a costume than this navy caped two-piece with its dashing gay blouse.

Below, the blouse on the seated figure proclaims the fair for shirring, in that the full sleeves are gathered into the armhole in this way. The shops are full of blouses on this order made either of crepe, satin or taffeta. No wardrobe is complete without at least one of this type.

The blouse on the standing figure is of a brilliant red print. It carries a very important message, in that it tells us of the latest style gesture which tops a tight skirt with a darker blouse. The white kid T-strap pumps with their rows of perforations and broad center strap add glamor to any cruise wardrobe. The little swirls of red kid on the vamp and the side match the red of the blouse and the red of the band on the white sailor hat. A swanky striped taffeta blouse, concludes the group.

CHIC SAILORS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For your "first" hat choose one of the shallow crowned sailors which must be worn at just the proper angle to be appreciated. The model shown at the top is certainly a convincing argument in favor of this mode. It demonstrates that the plaid vogue is even invading the realm of millinery. This nifty little sailor is of dark green, yellow and white plaided straw, with two china buttons holding the ends of the twisted tri-color band. The arrangement of white pasted feather pads at the side of the crown and on the band makes the other clever sailor a distinctive model for spring. That it is of the straw-cloth family is also a point of interest.
© 1932, Western Newspaper Union.

NEW PRINT DESIGNS ARE MORE SUBDUED

The new prints are gay but not as blarney as last year. The designs are more conservative and the color combinations more subdued. The patterns are generally smaller.

Checks, plaids and stripes are leaders. Polka-dots are still in the picture, but in many the dots are here and there instead of being in a set pattern. "Raindrop prints," one might call them.

Many of the new prints have designs executed in two shades of a color on a background of another shade of the same color—monotone prints. Sometimes there is white in the design. Many of the designs took as though they were sketched in and give rise to the name of "pencil prints." In floral designs, which are good, the patterns are either small or conservatively done.

Sashes With Large Bows

Touch Up Daytime Frocks
Sashes with big bows and long streamers, tied in front, form a new touch on daytime dresses. Like the Lanvin model from which the idea comes, the sash is always in contrast, flaunting very gayly a colored sash on a black dress, especially blue.

Melon shades and the soft orange tones called by sundry names are played up in resort clothes.

Button-on tops in plique or linen, for silk evening frocks or wool travel dresses, can be removed and laundered easily, making a practical cruise fashion.

Lingerie Models Feature Lace Matching the Silk

Lingerie models feature lace matching the silk. Panties and gowns feature this treatment particularly. The tendency during the past few seasons has been toward the dark laces, recently lightening gradually until now we are seeing quite a little white lace on white lingerie.

HOLLYWOOD STARS ARE VICTIMS OF JEWEL GANGSTERS

Operations of Criminal Band in Film Colony Bring Huge Returns.

Hollywood, Calif.—Operations of Hollywood's gem gangsters, led by a suave "finger man" who steals jewelry of film stars for gun-carrying henchmen, have been revealed by the bold $41,000 robbery at the home of Betty Compson.

The gang, according to Chief of Detectives Joe Taylor, of Los Angeles, has reaped a rich reward of nearly $250,000 in gems from the elite of screenland.

Listed in this round-up are the $30,000 gem theft at the home of Helene Costello, sister of Dolores; the $50,000 raid on the home of Zeppo Marx, one of the Marx brothers; the $18,000 robbery of Mae West, of "Diamond Lil" stage fame; the $7,500 holdup of Marion Nixon, and the theft of $4,500 in gems from Constance Talmadge's home.

Gang Under Control.
Police say that they have the gang under control and the leader, now under observation, will be arrested in a short time.

The leader of the gang—the "finger man"—has been in Hollywood more than two years and has gained the friendship of stars by his suave appearance and his genial well-bred manner.

With this entree he was able to learn which star made a habit of wearing jewelry worth thousands and where such jewelry was hidden. This information he "upped" to his gunmen, who at a given signal committed the robbery or burglary.

By offering a return of the jewels at 20 per cent of their value the gang escapes the dangerous business of dealing with a "fence"—as the underworld calls the broker who buys stolen goods.

Most potent of the gang's weapons is the threat of death if police are called to assist the victims.

Terrorize Miss Compson.
"Miss Compson was completely terrorized," said Chief of Detectives Taylor. "She was convinced that she would be killed if she worked with us."

Mae West was held up and robbed last September by a bandit who met her as she returned to her Hollywood apartment. He took $16,000 in jewels and $3,400 in cash. She never reported the robbery to the police—probably because of the death threat.

Two bandits entered the home of Helene Costello last October, bound the house boy with piano wire, and put straps of adhesive tape across his mouth—as the bandit did to Miss Compson in robbing her recently. Then they went directly to where Miss Costello's jewels were hidden. In August burglars entered the home of Zeppo Marx and took $37,000 in jewels.

The Marx jewelry was recovered when an insurance company in Chicago "paid out" the gang—20 per cent of the value of the jewels. The Costello and Compson jewelry was recovered in the same way. Mae West's gems still are missing.

Steals Bible for Mother, Declares She Needed It

Chicago.—A son who stole a Bible because the only one his ninety-seven-year-old mother had was destroyed when fire consumed her Kansas City home, was sentenced recently to seven months in the house of correction and fined $100.

Charged with petty larceny after he had taken the Bible from a loop department store, Harry Walker, forty-six years old, appeared before Judge Frank M. Padden in South State Street court.

"Why would you steal a Bible?" the judge asked.

"My mother likes to read the Bible," Walker said. "She's ninety-seven, and since her house in Kansas City burned she hasn't had any. She asked me to get her another one and I had no money."

Judge Padden seemed about to make some pronouncement when an idea occurred to him to ask if Walker had ever been in trouble before.

"Yes, your-honor, I've been in six penitentiaries," the prisoner answered.

Old Man Routs Bandits, but Shies at Marriage

St. Louis, Mo.—Thomas McMunn, seventy-three-year-old bachelor, who routed two robbers in a fist fight, won't even consider two marriage proposals he received as a result of his clash with the robbers.

"I'm not afraid of robbers," he said, "but I know a wife would henpeck me." McMunn, who weighs but 150 pounds, knocked down both robbers with his fist.

Two women who wrote they saw his picture in the papers said they were looking for a brave husband. McMunn threw both letters in the stove answering neither.

Poplar Bluff, Mo.—The old farm chore of "hog killing" has been listed by W. B. Croalen farmer, as a dangerous occupation. He is in a hospital recovering from a shot through his foot. ## Our Government - How It Operates

By William Bruckart

TREATY NEGOTIATIONS

THE United States and Canada have just lately concluded a treaty that represents an agreement between our government and that of our neighbor on the north whereby a deep waterway will be constructed connecting the Great Lakes and the Atlantic ocean. It is a gigantic engineering project that is contemplated; it has vast potentialities for our people and their commerce, and it will stand through the years as a monument to the genius of two peoples who desire to see opportunities utilized for the good of all.

But behind the formal signing of that treaty which took place in the Department of State here in the Capital city lies many ramifications and maneuvers. They are called "negotiations" at the end, and they represent as well as any in history the processes through which nations must go in reaching agreement on the terms of a contract, for a treaty, after all, is only a contract. Treaty negotiations, however, are not unlike swapping of horses in the old days. It is a matter of give and take, and each fellow looks out for himself.

It seldom takes as much time to accomplish an understanding respecting treaty terms as has elapsed since the deep waterway proposal first was advanced more than fifty years ago. Commercial interests saw the need of it long before our government could be interested in the project. The same was true among the Canadians, except that they did not regard development of the waterway as important until recent years because their commerce began expanding later than ours.

Yet through all of those years, two peoples were slowly but surely moving to the point where their governments could agree as to what was necessary in a treaty under which the channel could be constructed. There had to be a treaty, of course, because the rights of each nation were involved and each nation had to give up some of those rights when the contract was made.

Active movements by our government, looking to the treaty and the waterway project to be built under its terms, were instituted almost ten years ago. At that time, however, some of the statesmen at the head of the Dominion government were not friendly to the idea. There was opposition as well among certain interests in this country. For example, many of the railroads serving the northern half of the United States and drawing traffic from the regions around and west of the Great Lakes are opposed to the waterway for the very obvious reason that they fear it will take away some of their traffic. And so it goes. Opposition and support for the plan may be found everywhere in areas affected by it.

From this it is easily deduced that a considerable amount of preliminary work had to be done to acquaint the peoples of the merit of the project.

It has now been formally signed because the ruling political group in Canada believe it is practicable and valuable, and the administration of our government has fostered the idea throughout.

But the treaty is not yet operative. It has another stage to pass here and another at Ottawa. While its acceptance by the Dominion government is little more than a formality, ratification of the agreement by the senate of the United States is another matter. The Constitution provides for negotiation of the treaty by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the senate. So it has to take a hurra of some consequence before it becomes a binding agreement and one that is fully operative.

When the President transmits the St. Lawrence waterway treaty to the senate for its consideration, he will send with it a letter from the secretary of state explaining the benefits hoped to be derived. But the senate will not be content with that. It will turn the treaty over to its committee on foreign relations, and that group will hold hearings to which it will invite spokesmen for the various groups interested in its ratification or rejection. It will listen to both sides.

In addition, it will invite the secretary of state and the American minister to Ottawa and experts who participated in the actual writing of the document to come before it and tell what the treaty does. These men probably will testify in private, however, for it must be remembered that all international negotiations are carried on largely in secrecy. That is necessary because it is frequently inadvisable to make public the basis of horse swapping. Some people will think their government gave too much and they will complain.

If a majority of the committee favor ratification, they will vote to submit it to the senate with that recommendation, and eventually action is had there, leaving then only the act of notifying the other government to be performed.

In outlining the course of the waterway treaty, I have attempted to picture the usual processes. They are much the same in all treaties, excepting those ending a war. With that kind of a treaty, it is unnecessary to deal, for the victor dictates the terms and the loser signs.

Los Angeles Cleans Up Quake Wreckage

Stricken Southern California is cleaning up its earthquake wreckage.

Continuing shocks of lesser frequency and intensity helped shake down loosened bits of brick and parts of town buildings, as the yet incomplete survey indicated 116 dead, more than a thousand moderately and seriously injured, some 4000 more having had first aid treatment and from $45,000,000 to $75,000,000 damage done by last Friday night's jolt.

With relief for the maimed, sick and hungry effectively and efficiently organized and the whole area under control, authorities turned to alleviate the fear among the civilian populace in the area and their relatives and friends throughout the world.

Col. Charles W. Decker, medical co-ordinator of the stricken area, issued the following statement:

"The ugly, unfounded rumors, spread by quavering radio announcers, starting after the first shock Friday night, in the broadcast of terrorizing messages of tidal waves, vast death lists, famine, pestilence and horrors that could be conjured only in a terror-stricken and uninformed mind, all were without foundation.

"There is no cause for alarm. Any alarmist reports should be discounted.

"Water, sanitation, hospitalization and all forms of relief are safely provided, and adequately administered under orderly control.

At Long Beach, where death and damage was greatest, as well as in other communities, engineering forces were completing the condemnation of unsafe buildings.

Plans were being completed that will virtually wipe out the unemployment situation in southern California, with restrictions against the employment of workers not resident in the communities affected.
