WOMEN'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE MOTOR CAR

There is some doubt that people care to hear very much about what goes on under the hoods of their cars. The driver knows that "driving qualities" are not accidental; they are put there. How the manufacturer creates or evolves those results may not interest him. He judges entirely by the results he gets in driving.

Well, it is not essential to talk "shop"; let us talk Results. Smoothness. Drive the Ford V-8 and you will find that the engine runs with surpassing smoothness, due to its design and the extra precise methods of its manufacture.

Power. There it is, 75 horsepower (we could say 80) at the drive-shaft for the driver's use. With less weight to pull around, the mettle of this car—its life-like response—is rather remarkable.

Economy. Our V-8 develops more power on a gallon of gasoline than any car we have made. Mileage is partly a matter of individual driving, but under average conditions the Ford V-8 does 17 to 20 miles a gallon. Of course, car economy is not only a matter of fuel. Ford V-8 has that too, but it is also economical in the complete sense—initial cost, operation, maintenance.

Appearance. This is woman's contribution. The motor car must not only be useful, but also good-looking. View the Ford V-8 and you will not need our comment on its fine appearance.

Comfort. This also is woman's concern. In 30 years she changed the motor car from a wagon to a coach. Comfort is a quality made up of numerous ingredients. There is no comfort without a quiet, smooth-running engine. We have all the other ingredients too—color, good taste, quality, ease, safety, roominess and convenience.

Attention

Harlow Hyland, State Service Officer of the New Mexico Disabled Soldiers Relief Commission, will address a meeting of veterans, their families, local clubs, business men and taxpayers in Carrizozo on June 10th, 1933, at 7:30 p. m. at the Community Hall. It will be for the purpose of explaining to the Public the effect of the new regulations governing benefits to disabled veterans. This is one of 32 meetings which are being held in every county in the state.

Hyland has been working on the new laws and regulations as they have been issued and he is in a position to show how they will affect the taxpayers in Lincoln county, probably better than anyone else.

In discussing the laws he will merely tell and explain how the laws work and what they are, and how they will effect this county. Benjamin I. Berry Post No. 11, American Legion, has made arrangements for the meeting and they are expecting a large turnout. Everyone is cordially invited to attend this meeting and we, the veterans of Lincoln county, feel sure that every one who attends will go away from the meeting enlightened on the laws and their effect on the community at large.

The Origins of the Stars and Stripes

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

JUNE 14 is Flag day and it recalls the fact that on that date in 1777 the Continental congress "Resolved, That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation." Thus it was that the new emblem of the nation came into official existence; thus it was that the Stars and Stripes were born.

But, contrary to the belief of many Americans, this does not mean that our national banner sprang full-grown into being from the brain of one man or one group of men on that June day 154 years ago. The truth is that our flag, like so many other American institutions and symbols, developed by a gradual evolution and derived its inspiration from sources as varied as the strains of blood which have been fused into making "the typical American."

The real origin of our national flag goes back to the banner which was flown by the expedition that discovered the North American continent. This was the simple banner of St. George's cross, in red on a white field, the old flag of England. It was carried by the expedition of Giovanni Cabot, or as he is more familiarly known, John Cabot, the Italian navigator, exploring for England, who discovered the North American continent in 1497. Sailing along the east coast for 1,000 miles, he laid the foundation of English claims to North America. The flag was borne later by Capt. John Smith's ships to the settlement at Jamestown, Va. in 1607 and again by the Mayflower to the Plymouth (Mass.) settlement in 1620.

Next in the line of descent comes the King's Colors or the Union Jack, designed in 1606; symbolizing the union of England and Scotland after King James took the throne of the united kingdoms in 1603. This union was represented in the English flag by imposing the English red cross of St. George on the Scottish white diagonal cross of St. Andrew, on a field of blue. There are records of the use of this flag on forts in this country in 1670 and 1693, and this ensign was required in all British dominions by a parliamentary act of 1707.

The term "Union Jack" was probably derived from King James signing documents in the French "Jaques," the pronunciation of which is not unlike "Jack." The "union" came to be applied to that part of our national flag carrying the stars. In fact, when this part of the flag is flown alone on bows of ships, it is called the "union jack" or simply "Jack."

Three flags that had an early influence on the design of the Stars and Stripes were the striped flag of the Dutch republic. The Dutch, it will be remembered, first colonized New Netherlands, before it became New York. This territory included New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Settlements in these states were made by Dutch colonists under their flags; that of the Dutch West India Co., with three stripes of orange, white and blue; the United States of Netherlands, with six stripes of red, white and blue, and the Rotterdam flag of green and white stripes.

The English East India company finally crowded the Dutch out of sea trade and this company brought a new flag to America, a nine or ten-striped banner of alternating red and white stripes, with a small St. George's cross of red in the upper corner next to the staff. One of the variations in this flag was a pine tree or globe, representing the New World, in the upper left quarter of the union, formed by the arms of the St. George cross. In some flags of this period, the pine tree replaced the St. George cross entirely.

With the Revolution, the struggling colonists wanted something different from a British flag, and the pine tree and rattlesnake emblems appeared; also the legend "Liberty and Union" on a plain field of red. Then came the Stars and Stripes. When Washington left Philadelphia in 1775, to take command of the army at Cambridge, he was escorted out of the city by the Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse as far as Newark, N. J. The guidon of this troop was of yellow silk and carried in its upper corner, next to the staff, a small union of 13 stripes of silver and light blue.

Stars first figured in the union of a flag carried in 1775 on the schooner Lee by Captain Manley, a Massachusetts skipper, whose ship operated as one of Commodore Hopkins' squadron and captured the Nancy with supplies for the British army November 19, 1775. Thirteen stars on a blue canton formed the union of his flag. They were arranged in five horizontal, parallel rows and were five-pointed. In the blue fly of the flag was a white anchor with the word "Hope" above it. This design was carried by Rhode Island troops at Brandywine, Trenton and Yorktown, but the stars were of gilt on a light blue canton.

Following the early use of the English ensign which carried the St. George's cross in the canton there came into use in the colonies in the eight-

In the eighteenth century the red British ensign carrying the Union Jack in the canton. The British flag was altered after the Revolution had begun by placing 13 stripes in the fly of the flag under the British Union Jack.

It was called the "grand union flag," and was hoisted by Lieut. John Paul Jones on December 3, 1775, in the newly formed American fleet off Philadelphia. On January 1 or 2, 1776, it was raised over the newly organized American army at Washington's headquarters in Cambridge. In the correspondence of that day it was referred to as the "American colors." It is interesting to note that although these American colors were used six months before the Declaration of Independence, they still carried the British Union Jack in the corner. The thirteen united colonies were depicted by the thirteen stripes of the field.

No flag was authorized by act of congress until nearly a year after the Declaration of Independence. That the "grand union" flag was little used in the army is seen from the many flags of other designs carried by the Revolutionary troops. In the navy, on account of the necessity of telling a friend from a foe by his colors, the same flag was generally used by all congress ships.

In 1775, it was usually the pine tree flag; in 1776, and until June 14, 1777, the grand union, and after June 14, 1777, the Stars and Stripes. Privateers carried striped and rattlesnake flags of various designs but it soon became necessary to carry a uniform design, and this forced the adoption of a national flag. This is why the resolution for the adoption of the stars and stripes appeared in the minutes of the marine committee meeting of June 14, 1777.

Because green was such a prominent color in early Revolutionary war flags, it would not have been at all surprising if that color had found its way into the national emblem. One of the most striking flags of the Revolution was a flag with green fly and a union of 13 links in an endless chain. Outside the circle of links was a circle of 13 hands or mailed fists emerging from clouds and grasping the links. In the center of the chain was a pine tree of green on a blue field. This was the flag of the Newburyport (Mass.) company. Green was also the color of the pine tree and liberty tree flags of Revolutionary days.

In April, 1776, the Massachusetts council prescribed green and white as the uniform of officers in their sea service, and in the same year the marine committee of the Continental congress in Philadelphia resolved that the uniform of marine officers be a green coat, white waistcoat and breeches edged with green. Green was the color of the early Revolutionary cavalry's uniform, Marion's riders wearing the Romanesque helmet of the French dragons and cuirassiers, and a green, skirted tunic with white reverses similar to that of the French guides cavalry, whose uniform the first Napoleon was somewhat partial to, wearing it quite frequently. The Culpepper Minute Men wore green hunting shirts and the standard of the Georgia Rangers in the latter part of the war carried green and white stripes.

When it came to adopting the Stars and Stripes, however, the color scheme of green was dropped and various flags of red, white and blue that had been familiar to American colonists for more than 100 years exercised the prevailing influence in the design for the Stars and Stripes.

The resolution adopting the flag appears in the Journal of Congress among a whole page of resolutions presented by the marine committee on the subject of the navy. On the same page with the flag and other marine committee resolutions is one appointing John Paul Jones to the command of the ship Ranger. Jones was presented a flag by some women of Philadelphia and soon afterward he had the Stars and Stripes flying at sea.

Contemporary illustrations of Jones' ships and the description of the new flag when it appeared in Europe, show that the early navy flags were arranged with the stars in horizontal parallel rows. Due to their number, the stars were staggered, that is, the stars in one row were placed opposite the spaces between the stars in the next, so that they looked like a constellation in the heavens, as the resolution had described them. On one ship they were in five rows; on another, in three.

Ingenuity began to be displayed in the arrangement of stars in unofficial flags. In some they were arranged in a square; in others, in a circle. Some had them in the shape of a single star, a diamond or forming the letters "U. S."

At first, the Stars and Stripes were looked upon merely as a navy flag, but in 1818, under the third flag law, the present general design of the flag was established. This held the number of stripes to 13 and added a star for each state. The second flag law, passed by congress in May, 1793, provided 15 stripes for 15 states as well as 15 stars; but as the number of states was increasing by 1818, it was found necessary to curtail the amount of stripes.

Capt. Samuel Chester Reid, of the navy, hero of a two-day engagement between his small brig and a British squadron of three large ships, was called by the congressional committee to design a flag, and it was his idea to hold the number of red and white stripes to 13 for the original 13 states and to add a star to the union for each new state admitted.

On May 18, 1818, the navy commissioners issued an order, placing the stars in accordance with the navy custom, in parallel horizontal rows and with the stars on the second and fourth rows moved to the right, one-half of a star's space. The order was signed by Commodore John Rogers, president of the navy commissioners. Six months later, he issued a change in the arrangement of the stars, approved by the President. This order required that the stars be arranged in vertical and horizontal parallel rows.

The act of 1818 gave the fixed rate of adding a new star on the Fourth of July next succeeding the admission of the state, but made no statement as to the exact arrangement of the stars and this has been a matter with which the Navy department has been chiefly concerned.

This is because the navy flies the Union alone without the stripes in the bow of ships. The navy has attended to details as to proportions and design of the flag and still issues to all departments, blueprints of changes, after approval by the President. In recent years army and navy have agreed on changes. In 1834, the army prescribed the Stars and Stripes to replace its garrison flag then in use.

Until 1912 there was some confusion as to the proper distribution of the 48 stars in the blue field. On October 20, 1912, this matter was definitely settled by the executive order of President Taft that the stars were to be arranged in six rows of eight each, symbolizing the 48 states in the order of their ratification. (Thus if you wish to know which star represents your state in the flag, remember what was its number in the order of admission to the Union, then begin counting from the upper corner next to the staff and the star which comes on the number corresponding to the number in the order of admission to the Union will be the star of your state.)

THREE DOGS LIVE HIGH THESE DAYS

Two Save Owners' Lives; Third, Master's Roll.

Toledo, Ohio.—Three faithful dogs in Toledo, Ohio; Hugo, Colo., and Petersburg, Va., are getting extra large bones to chew on these days. They have saved lives and money.

Attracted by the barking of the family's pet police dog, Mrs. Edith Davis, of Toledo, ran toward a nearby creek. Nearing the stream, she was met by the dog, which caught her sleeve in his teeth and led her to the water.

Marks on the bank showed the dog had pulled Howard Davis, three, Mrs. Davis' son, from the creek into which he had fallen.

Thrown from his wagon when his team ran away during a snowstorm, Ed Briezel, of Hugo, suffered a broken leg. Unable to crawl and in danger of freezing to death, he lighted a match and with the burnt end scribbled a note on a cigarette paper. Then he fastened the note to his dog's collar and told him to go straight home. The dog did, and Briezel was saved.

A bag containing $50 was lost by J. S. Moore, in Petersburg. A few days later he saw a puppy playing with a bag in the rear of his place of business. He went to investigate, but before he could get to the puppy a large pointer appeared and took the bag from the small dog.

A retrieving setter, Mr. Moore's dog, was with him at the time. A word of command sent the setter after the pointer. The setter took the bag from the other dog and lugged it back. Examination proved it to be the missing bag, with the $50 intact.

Telltale Bells Thwart Those Lying to Wives

London.—There are 22 men in England who can never be untruthfully "detained at the office."

They are the 22 rash members of parliament who have "business" bells installed in their homes. These bells announce to the second when the house has risen, so that wives can calculate to the second when their lord and master's key should be heard at the front door.

Mrs. Geoffrey Mander, wife of the M. P. for Wolverhampton, says: "The bell was installed to please me; it was not my husband's suggestion. It rings regularly at 9:45 a. m. for testing, at 2:45 p. m., and at the minute the house rises, as well as when there is a vote."

"You must find it useful," suggested a friend.

"It is. I set the clocks by it," she replied, with a twinkle in her eye.

He Takes Sidewalk and House When He Moves

Gary, Ind.—Only the concrete-lined basement of the home of George Filgutt remained after he had moved from Gary to Chicago.

Board of works members were puzzled, since Filgutt was believed to have owed for special assessments on the sidewalk and a mortgage foreclosure was pending.

Three weeks were required for Filgutt to complete the moving operations. First went the family and the household furnishings. Later the house was hoisted upon rollers and rolled down the street. Then Filgutt returned with a truck and loaded the cement slabs of the sidewalk onto the vehicle and drove away.

California Poodle Dog Adopts Orphaned Rabbit

Bakersfield, Calif.—A female poodle and her adopted son, a baby jackrabbit, romp at the home of Mrs. W. G. Towner of Bakersfield. She said the rabbit, apparently orphaned, was caught on Lerdo mesa during a family automobile trip, and was at once "adopted" by the poodle.

Policeman Arrests His Brother, Then Father

Somerville, N. J.—Patrolman Fred Sixt, Jr., who had to arrest his own brother on a charge of manslaughter after the brother's car killed a woman, was faced with the duty of arresting his father for careless driving.

The father, Harold Sixt, complained in court that the summons was served without just cause, but Recorder Durham ruled that he must answer to the charge.

Merits of Dried and Sweet Milk

Research Work Has Shown Food Values to Be Much Alike.

"I have noticed that you have sometimes used evaporated milk when giving inexpensive menus. Is evaporated milk as good as sweet milk and can it be used instead of it in any recipe? I always thought that some of the food value was taken out of it?"

This paragraph is quoted from a letter to a dietetic expert, who comments as follows:

We have changed our attitude in regard to evaporated milk in the last ten years, since much research work has been done in the nutrition laboratories and in the baby hospitals. It has been found that both evaporated and dried milk change very little in food value, and also that the process of preparing them makes the "curd" which develops as soon as milk reaches the stomach, so much smaller, that the processed milks are more easily digested than fresh milk. Pediatricians are ordering these milks, or boiled fresh milk—some of them even use freshly soured milk for infant feeding.

Those of us who have been brought up on fresh milk, do not usually care for the flavor of evaporated milk for drinking. Dr. Lydia Roberts of the University of Chicago, in an experiment with children, finds that after a short time they will take evaporated milk cheerfully, if urged in the proper way. The market orders of the relief association are, however, including an equal amount of fresh and canned milk, the latter for use in cooking.

In cooking, not so much difference is noticed, and in some dishes the flavor of evaporated milk is considered an improvement. I know a college girl who after years of making cocoa with evaporated milk, prefers it to sweet milk, and practically every one likes it as well. With caramel or chocolate flavor, it is always as good, or better. In a highly seasoned dish it seems to give little difference to the flavor. The fact that it can be whipped makes it an inexpensive substitute for cream in dessert. I have found that if a tiny bit of gelatine is added according to directions given, the time of whipping can be cut down to about three minutes.

The point in all diets of low cost or high cost that is important is to see that plenty of milk is used, because it is practically impossible to fulfill the requirements of nutrition without it. It makes no difference whether milk is drunk as a beverage, or whether it is eaten in soups, cream dishes, or desserts.

Once upon a time, before we knew so much about vitamins and minerals, milk was called the "perfect food." Now that term is modified to the "most nearly perfect" food. Children depend upon it for protein, calcium, phosphorus and a goodly share of the vitamin supply. Adults get their protein supply from other foods, but it is difficult for them to obtain the calcium they need from a milkless diet. It makes the question of vitamins less difficult.

While adults are not building new bone or teeth, they need the calcium to replace the breaking down of hard substances of the body, which is constantly going on. The other day a business man who has not believed that grownups need milk, asked a famous nutritionist his opinion—the answer was wry and to the point, "Milk is an essential during the whole learning period."

How Nervous Headaches?

Public, Colo.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for a run-down condition and for female complaints that I have ever used," said Mrs. Jennie Rhodes of 1004 Ash St. "At one time I was this way and very nervous. Everything irritated me, I didn't feel like eating and used to have awful nervous headaches. But the 'Favorite Prescription' soon had me feeling all right again. I gained weight, the nervous headaches disappeared and my appetite increased."

Right Living

As a matter of fact the rules of right living and happiness are very simple indeed and easy to follow. The reason they are not followed is that people do not desire to follow them. They spend their time trying to devise some other plan than that laid down by Christ. No other plan will be found. For many thousands of years the human race has striven to work out a new system—a human system, but it has not yet succeeded and it never will. There is no diplomacy, no pact, no disarmament, no League of Nations that can be devised that will be more effective than the simple injunction in regard to one's conduct towards one's neighbor. It may be made more ambiguous through court or diplomatic language, but the fact remains that all harmony between nations and men will finally be worked out on the plan given to mankind a long time ago. The human race will doubtless have to spend many more thousands of years "wandering in the wilderness" of its own devising before it recognizes that the plan has been in existence all these years, but waiting for human application.

It appears strange that it required a depression that nearly bankrupted the whole country to induce the government to enter upon a program of reforestation. The government obviously should have been working on this project for the past thirty years. If a little more common sense was used when forests were cut such as is used in Canada by England, the job of reforestation would not be so formidable. We have a faculty in this country of not being able to see a need until the ship is on the way down for the third time.

According to Cato, the Roman poet of the first century B. C., the custom of kissing first began between kinsmen and kinswomen that the men might know if their wives were tasting their wine. The practice we presume is being kept up in these later years that hubby may find out if wife is smoking his cigarettes—exchange.

We have just finished reading our daily and settle back with a calm sense of security. We are quite certain in the probe of the J. P. Morgan bank that no loans will be discovered there that were made to us.

In choosing a design for the new inflated currency how would a fully distended rubber balloon do?

Socorro Girl Wins State Honors

Miss Brenda Allyne Jean, a Socorro high school girl, was announced today as champion of New Mexico in the tenth national meat story contest sponsored by the National Live Stock and Meat Board. The subject of her winning essay was "Economic Use of Meat in the Home."

Miss Reva M. Lincoln, of Athens, Pa., who won highest honors in the eastern district of 11 states, was chosen as national champion. In addition, other prizes are being awarded to the high girl in every state, it is said.

The National Live Stock and Meat Board which, in collaboration with the U. S. Department of Agriculture and leading colleges and universities, is conducting research and education on the subject of meat, states that essays submitted in this year's contest dealt with meat from every possible angle.

It is said that teachers have entered more than 100,000 high school girls in this educational contest since it was inaugurated and that the knowledge they gain is of practical and permanent value to these future homemakers.

Two-Minute Sermon

By Rev. Geo. Henry.

Only A Boy But—

Sunday morning a boy came down the aisle at the close of the sermon. He said, "Mr. Henry, I want to be a Christian." His faith was simple and complete. His sincerity can not be questioned. "My boy, you are taking a step that will lead to the greatest possible results. You have a whole life time before you to give in service to God and others. When a man, full grown, becomes a Christian, he has only what remains of the strength and purity and time with which God originally endowed him. When an old man begins the Christian life it means that he has spent nearly all of the wealth with which he began life and has very little to give. But when a boy becomes a Christian, God only knows what great good may come out of his life. You are taking a stand today that will bring you great happiness in days to come and will mean great happiness for others, too." He is only a boy, but would it not be well if all would follow his example?

The worst crank is the fellow who insists on having his way when you want yours.

Mad Dog
 An epidemic of rabies exists among the coyotes of the southern counties of New Mexico. For several weeks the U. S. Biological Survey has been fighting this menace to livestock and to human life. Whenever there has appeared to be danger of the infection spreading to dogs quarantine regulations have been issued by local health officers, with the approval of the State Department of Public Welfare. The state laboratory has been kept busy examining the brains of various animals suspected to have had rabies. They are able positively to identify the disease when (1) the animal has not been killed before the evidence has fully developed in the brain (never kill a suspected animal until the symptoms are far advanced) and (2) the head has been sent to the laboratory packed in ice. Unless the head is packed in ice the brain is likely to spoil on the journey.
 Not everyone bitten by a mad dog becomes ill. In a series of 69,707 cases of people bitten by animals known to be rabid the League of Nations found that 0.48 per cent developed the disease and died. All of these had received the antirabic treatment. Among those who are bitten and do not receive treatment it is estimated that 15 per cent get rabies and die.
 Bites are much more dangerous when they are about the face or head and when they go in deeply into the flesh. Bites are less dangerous the further they are from the head and when they only scratch the surface. Bites through clothing are less dangerous than bites on the bare skin. Although in many cases it is safe to delay treatment until some days after the bite, in other cases it is wise to begin some form of treatment immediately. A doctor should always be consulted at once—Dr. Earp.

Economic Highlights
 Unemployment—A Civilian Conservation Corps has been created to provide work for 250,000 men in the national forests. A draft for a national public works program on a gigantic scale has been prepared. Moves are on foot to create a new relationship between government and business, to lift anti-trust law provisions to permit industrial expansion and eliminate needless waste that comes from cut-throat competition.
 National Defense—Cuts in army and navy appropriations will total approximately $146,000,000. Final decision on military expenditures will depend on agreements made with other powers.
 Banking—Following the national bank holiday, the President took the United States off the gold standard by forbidding shipment of gold abroad, refusing to pay U. S. obligations in gold, and by making the hoarding of gold or gold certificates a major felony. Plans are now on foot for legislation to guarantee payment of deposits in solvent banks.
 Foreign Policy—The United States will stand firmly for international peace; will refuse to recognize territory taken by aggression; will pursue a policy of "the good neighbor" in international relations.
 Currency—The Democratic platform called for a sound currency, but the inflation rider to the farm bill permits the President to issue new money as he believes it is needed, lower the gold content of the dollar, etc. It is affirmed that Mr. Roosevelt will not use this unprecedented power unless, in his opinion, no other avenues are left.
 It is obvious that the success of any Administration depends on the support of Congress and the friendliness of the general

 So far Mr. Roosevelt has had both—indeed, Congress has been completely supine to his demands. Recently the first signs of organized opposition appeared. As yet this opposition has been powerless in combatting the White House influence, and the President is easily assured of desired support.

Mrs. Roosevelt Helps Manage the Nation

Mrs. Roosevelt is to edit a department for women in the Woman's Home Companion. Her department is to be known as "Mrs. Roosevelt's Page" and is to consist mainly of answers to letters which come to her in a constantly increasing stream. She will begin her new work with the August issue of the magazine.

This of course is news. It is the kind of precedent-breaking that has come to be expected from the present administration. It is an indication of the part which Mrs. Roosevelt is taking, very gracefully and effectively, in managing a nation and guiding it on the road to recovery.

Every woman in the country will be interested in what Mrs. Roosevelt has to say, not only because she is the President's wife, but also because she is a woman of broad vision and fine intelligence. It matters not what she discusses, be it thrift menus or poor mothers, she has some worthwhile thought to give out on any subject.

As a leader among women, and a woman whose opinions are widely respected, she with her pen will be influential in molding public thought toward the goal of better things. This is clearly the opinion of official and unofficial Washington, which is getting quite used to the breaking of ancient precedents, and is even beginning to like it.

In the announcement of her new venture into the editorial field, it is stated: "Mrs. Roosevelt desires to conduct a forum where all ages can meet, a department for the discussion of all sorts of problems which come up in the daily life of men, women and children. For years she has been getting letters from all over the United States, and she has often thought that the situation and needs thus brought to her attention could be usefully discussed before a larger audience. Through the pages of this department, Mrs. Roosevelt will become the personal advisor of American women everywhere."

Boys Find Body of Dead Man

Last Saturday afternoon while Jobie McPherson, Bradley Smith and Brack Carnett were riding horseback about seven miles out near the foot of Little Mountain, they ran on to the body of a man who had apparently been dead for some time. A brown suit was on the body and a bundle of clothes was lying beside it. The boys rode to town and told the sheriff who took his chief deputy and a coroner's jury out there. The man's pockets contained a knife and fifty cents. The sheriff and party brought the body to town where it was finally identified as Ricardo Ciseneros, a sheep herder about 70 years of age who left here about January 11 to walk to his home in Three Rivers. It is supposed he froze to death. After identification he was buried in the Potter's field, as he had no known relatives.

over the same five months last year; despite the interrupted schedules during the March bank holiday. Production for every month this year for the domestic market exceeded the corresponding months of 1932 he said, with the widest margin of gain over last year occurring in May.

Plant operations have continued at an accelerated pace into June, Mr. Knudsen said, with prospects that the month will compare much more favorably with May than did June last year, when federal excise taxes sharply curtailed sales during the latter part of the month, an adverse effect continuing through the summer and early fall.

With no artificial barrier to sales in immediate prospect, the industry as a whole should show a comparatively small seasonal decline during the coming months and should compare more favorably with last year during the last half than it has so far into 1933, Mr. Knudsen observed.

With a total output of 68,538 new cars and trucks in May, the Chevrolet Motor Company in the first five months of this year already has built more than 70 per cent as many units as in the full year of 1932, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager announced today.

May production was higher than at any time since June, 1931, and was the second month this year to exceed in volume any single month of 1932, Mr. Knudsen said.

The May figure of 68,500 units compares with 50,672 in the corresponding month last year, an increase of 35 per cent, and with 59,593 in April this year according to the Chevrolet executive.

He said that from the first of this year through May 31 his company had built 279,827 new cars and trucks, or in excess of 37,000
