CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1933

NUMBER 50

Mrs. Freeman Entertains

Mrs. Carl E. Freeman entertained with a dance in honor of the Rainbow Girls, Friday evening, June 30.

The Grand March was hilarious fun from the first step till the partners became lost from each other in its maze. The special numbers, a violin solo by Ardeene McCammon; songs by Ernest Prehm and Murel Burnett; tap dancing by Helen Huppertz were enthusiastically received.

The rooms were decorated in red, white and blue and flags. Mrs. Huppertz presented a cake decorated with an American flag.

Assisting Mrs. Freeman were Misses C. P. Huppertz, E. O. Prehm, C. A. McCammon, S. H. Nickels and C. Snyder.

Dance music was furnished by Otto Prehm, Rhoda Freeman, Helen Huppertz, Ardeene McCammon and Ruth Brickley.—Contributed.

N. M. Home and Training School

We have a State Institution here in New Mexico which is not so well known as it should be. It is the New Mexico Home and Training school situated at Los Lunas on the Rio Grande on Highway No. 66. Dr. George W. Stephens is Superintendent of this home which contains 20 boys and 53 girls; their ages range from 10 to 28 years of age. Mr. Earl H. Irish is supervisor of the boys; the girls are in charge of a matron. The buildings are commodious and well kept. They have a large day room for play, a school room, dormitory, locker room, tile bath and showers and as many of the comforts of home as can be provided. This training school is for children that are too slow in their class work to keep up with the normal child. The girls are taught sewing, cooking, net-work, crocheting and other useful arts. The boys are taught farming, gardening, painting, carpentry and leather work. All are taught as many accomplishments as they are able to acquire.

Mrs. Byrl Lindsay came down Friday from Las Vegas, where she is attending school; she was accompanied by her aunt, Mrs. Chloe White, who visited Mrs. Pinkie Skinner. After a pleasant 4th at home they returned to Las Vegas.

Mrs. Alice Duggar, Fulton Duggar and Mrs. Hattie Wells of Nogal spent last Saturday in town shopping for the 4th. While in town they were guests of Mrs. Duggar's daughter, Mrs. Ella Terrell.

Mrs. A. B. Zumwalt and Mr. Murray Zumwalt spent a short time in town this week with relatives.

Miss Martha Sue Lawson was a guest at the Freeman ranch for several days last week.

Carrizozo Wins From Alamogordo

Good pitching and timely hitting accounted for the victory over the Alamogordo Black Socks last Sunday on the local grounds. (Red) Huffmeyer had the Alamogordo boys puzzled all thru the game. The final score was 4 to 1. A large crowd attended the game.

Carrizozo Beats Fort Stanton

Weakness at bat contributed largely to the Fort Stanton defeat in the Fourth of July game with Carrizozo. In the meanwhile Carrizozo's amazing pitching enabled the Carrizozo team to extend their victories over the surrounding country.

Next Sunday Carrizozo will play with Vaughn at the local grounds—a large crowd is expected to attend.

Mrs. Annie E. Lesnet with other members of her family went to Ft. Stanton on the Fourth.

Air-Cooled Cars to Combat Hot Weather

With the return of warm summer weather, Southern Pacific Company today announced the operation of air-conditioned dining cars on its Overland, Golden State and Sunset limited trains, and the pre-cooling of sleeping cars prior to their departure from terminal points in the warmer areas.

The scientific method of producing "man-made weather" for its passenger equipment was first introduced on the Pacific Coast by the railroad last season and proved most successful in adding to the comfort and pleasure of train travelers, traffic officials stated.

Through automatic thermostats, the dining cars are flooded with fresh, clean air at regulated temperature and humidity, producing a mild interior regardless of outside weather conditions, it was explained.

Sleeping cars are pre-cooled at certain of the company's terminals, it was stated, by means of a portable device which is attached to a window of the car. Warm air drawn from the interior of the car is washed and freshened in passing through an ice water spray and is returned to the cars after having passed over cooling coils.

The women's executive committee for the state is actively campaigning for repeal of both national and state dry laws on the grounds that temperance will be increased, and that taxes from liquor will help defray governmental expenses.

Capitan-Lincoln Highway

The county commissioners and other citizens of Lincoln county are greatly interested in the Forest Project, which calls for a road from Capitan to Lincoln. Two surveys have been made and the above named it seems will be of more benefit to the county in general. This highway will not cost the state anything and the only cost to the county will be the right-of-way, which it is thought will be donated, in some instances in order to secure the road. If proper arrangements had been made to secure the right-of-way this project could have been started July 1st.

Legion Meeting

The Benjamin I Berry Post of the American Legion will meet at the court house, July 15th, at 7:30 p. m. for the purpose of selecting delegates to the State Convention which will be held at Tucumcari Aug. 3-4-5.

Beg Buddha to End Wave of Suicides

Motomura, Japan.—The chanting of Buddhist priests mingled with the rumblings of Mihara volcano in the first service for the souls of suicides on this island of Death. The memorial service was arranged by priests of the Zozoji temple, Tokyo, to comfort the spirits of hundreds who have leaped into the fiery pit of Mihara-San. Alarmed at the increase of suicides on Ohama island, the priests appealed to Buddha to discourage men and women from taking their lives. The priests are confident that their efforts will lessen if not end the wave of suicides which during the past year have made Ohama notorious throughout the Orient.

Unearth Remains of an Ancient Aqueduct

Tunnel Built by Sennacherib About 705 B. C.

Chicago.—News of recent discoveries of a great aqueduct, temple, and ancient records were brought home to Chicago by Dr. James Henry Breasted, who has just returned after spending several months in the Near East visiting the twelve expeditions of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. The trip was the first that Doctor Breasted, director of the Oriental Institute, had made to the Near ried water from the Kurdish mountains to Nineveh, and among other uses watched that city's famous gardens. Each pier contains a building inscription of Sennacherib, and when translated, it was found that he called the aqueduct 'Sennacherib's channel.' The annals of Sennacherib give an account of this channel, which hitherto had not been identified, and also give the names of a whole series of villages past which it went. In one of the villages near the route of the aqueduct, Doctor Frankfort found a purely oral tradition that these ruins had brought water for the gardens of Nineveh. The tradition has the names of the villages as Sennacherib listed them, although the names have long since changed. That tradition had been passed down by word of mouth for 2,000 years.

Another discovery to which Doctor Breasted referred as representative of the more important recent finds was that of Gordon Loud who has charge of the architectural survey of Khorabad under Doctor Frankfort. Mr. Loud found in the palace a temple previously unknown, sacred to Nabu, who is referred to in the Old Testament as Nebo. "One of Nabu's functions was that of god of writing," Doctor Breasted observed, "and we have hopes of finding in the temple various important records. Mr. Loud also found at Khorabad a large clay tablet which lists 33 Assyrian kings, reaching far behind our earliest known chronology of the Assyrian line. The earliest we knew was a king Uahpla, who hung in the air, so to speak. This tablet has eight kings preceding Uahpla, and all the succession after him. It covers a period of thirteen or fourteen hundred years, from about 2200 B. C. to 730 B. C.

Important Tablets. "The reliefs at Persepolis were tremendously impressive, exceeding my expectations. They nearly double in bulk the art of the old Persian period. Shortly after I had left Persepolis I received word from Dr. E. Herzfeld, field director of the Persepolis expedition, that in shifting his field railroad he had cut through a ridge and discovered hundreds of Ellamite cuneiform tablets. "Ellamite was the pre-Persian language, and the records are very important. They apparently relate to the building of the palaces at Khorabad, but because Doctor Herzfeld is the only member of the expedition who did not come down with malaria and had to leave, they have not been carefully examined as yet. "At the present time we have only the Greek accounts of the great battles of Marathon and Salamis, but it is not improbable that we shall find the Persian accounts of these battles in the records at Persepolis." Doctor Breasted flew 5,000 miles by plane in the Near East in visiting the expeditions, covering in five minutes distances that on earlier trips had required a day by camel. On this recent visit he saw for the first time the expeditions and work being carried on at Persepolis, and by the Syrian and Iraq field forces. "Since his last trip, new headquarters buildings have been erected by the Institute at Luxor, Persepolis, and Tel Asmar.

Log Rolling That's Not Political

Few of the visitors to A Century of Progress exposition in Chicago have ever seen the loggers of the North and Northwest at work, so they are interested and excited by the exhibitions of log-rolling given there. Peter Hooper and Sam Harris are the experts in the photograph.

French Actress to Quit After 62 Years on Stage

Paris.—Mme. Marie Laure has decided to retire after 62 years of acting on the stage. She is France's oldest actress.

It was only a chance incident that directed her career toward the stage, she said. "I had spent most of my youth in England and came home with my mother on a visit when the city was harried by the Germans," she explained. "Having no money, we were in a desperate situation when I obtained the permission of the old Alexander d'Alver to recite stories and poetry. When peace came I continued on the stage. My greatest success, I believe, was 'Amira,' a patriotic play, which found great favor during the period of Marshal MacMahon's popularity. I have played at the Porte-Saint Martin, the Chateau d'Eau, and the Odéon.

"After my last two years at the Odéon, I went to Russia, where I played at the Imperial theater with Guitry, the father, of course, of the present Guitry."

Mme. Laure also has been in the movies, assisting at the birth of the motion picture industry. Her roles were in the silent films in a studio in Neuilly, where Poncet and Calmette directed.

Acting continuously since the Franco-Prussian war, France's oldest actress believes she deserves a rest now. She is seventy-one.

Find Fossil Bones of Camel in Nevada Lake

Las Vegas, Nev.—When camels were introduced into Nevada and the western states 70 years ago as pack animals, they were coming back to the home of their ancestors, evidence unearthed here has revealed.

In the old lake bed of Buffalo camp, ten miles north of here, Albert C. Silberting, fossil expert formerly associated with the Carnegie museum in New York city, and Fernley Hunter, amateur paleontologist, have found a mammoth burial place of mammals of the Pliocene age.

From the lake bed they unearthed and shipped a thousand pounds of fossilized bones to the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Bones of camels—or humpless camels—were found in great number. These fossils are between 20,000 and 30,000 years old, Silberting said. The camel, like its companion beast of burden—the horse—originated in north Africa during the tertiary period, or the modern era of geology when the mountains were made and huge reptiles of the cretaceous period had perished, and the dominant land life was mammalian.

Paris Tower Will Dwarf Empire State Building

Paris.—Plans were announced for construction of a concrete tower 2,200 feet high. It would be the world's tallest structure.

The tower would be completed for the Paris exposition of 1937. It would have a ramp which would enable automobiles to climb to a height of 1,450 feet.

The Empire State building in New York, the world's tallest building, is 1,250 feet high. The Eiffel Tower in Paris is 1,000 feet.

Sound Sea for "Lost Continent"

ell, director of the zoological survey of India.

Altogether the expedition will be nine months at sea between Africa and India in the Mahahis. The 105-ton steamer is being fitted with the latest inventions for under-sea exploration at Alexandria, and will be ready to leave England in August.

The gadgets include a new echo-sounding machine, which not only records the depths by the length of time an echo takes to turn from the sea bottom but also provides a running representation of the ocean bed on an apparatus like a stock ticker.

Steel bottles, which close automatically at a certain depth, will be let down to secure specimens of the sea life and record temperatures. Lead lines will be dropped four miles down to take samples of the ocean bottom.

Speaking of the expedition, J. C. Murray, whose father's will provided the money for the search, said:

"The main object will be to discover whether there are any traces of the continental land areas which it is supposed stretched westward from India and formed the continent of Lemuria." "A further object will be to ascertain whether there are ridges and peaks in this semi-enclosed ocean, such as the meteor expedition found in the Atlantic."

1845 Bill of Sale Found

Tyler, Tex.—A bill of sale authorizing delivery of five negro slaves for $2,000, dated May 10, 1845, has been found by Judge W. B. Castle here. The document was written in the old English form. It had lain unnoticed in Judge Castle's office desk for years.

Flycatch Kill Coyotes

Norton, Kan.—The coyote hasn't a chance in this locality. John Hickman and Russel Finckoff, aviators, go coyote-hunting by airplane. They spot the animal at a low altitude, then give chase. The plane is banked so one of the men can shoot.

Cigarettes Undoing of Alien Visitor

Kitchener, Ont.—Two Kitchener business men visited Buffalo. One bought a quantity of United States cigarettes. They started home. "Anything to declare?" asked the customs officer. "Nothing," said the owner of the smokes. "Any cigarettes?" "None." "Oh, Johnnie," batted the second man, "give the man a cigarette when he asks for one. You got lots in Buffalo." The car was searched. The cigarettes were found. The two men are not on speaking terms.

BLIND BOY TILLS HIS GARDEN PATCH

Negro Lad Uses Pair of Unshod Feet to "See" With.

Charleston, S. C.—In a little one-room cabin on a roadside near Adams Run, not far from Charleston, the Blind-Boy lives, tills his tiny patch of ground, and uses a pair of unshod feet to "see" with. The Blind Boy, who is seldom known by any other name in his neighborhood, is a negro in his early twenties. Stone blind, presumably from birth, he has no family to care for him, but manages through his own cheerful efforts and the good-will of his neighbors to maintain himself in a fairly decent fashion, patching his own clothes.

The boy was brought to attention through his application to the Red Cross chapter here for garments. Mrs. Azile Brown Tyler, chapter executive secretary, visited him in her rounds of inspection in the county.

"His little shack probably is no larger than this room," Mrs. Tyler said in her office, "but he keeps it decently. He was losing his mind when I called on him."

Mrs. Tyler said that the boy's clothes represented an amazing array of patches, not daintily sewn, but incredibly well-done considering his infirmity. She arranged immediately with a complete outfit, but was surprised at his refusal of the offer of shoes.

"I uses my feet to see with," he told the resident of the area, who made the clothing application for him. Apparently he has so familiarized himself with the feel of the ground in his general neighborhood that he is able to find his way about with comparative ease and this he believes would be interfered with by the wearing of shoes. He goes unshod the year round. The boy is on the chapter's free flour list, and must travel some two miles to the distribution point for the Adams Run section, a trip which he has been accomplishing without difficulty. To plant his little plot of ground, he worked the stipulated time on the road to earn the seed from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Officer in World War Meets Man He "Buried"

Salt Lake City, Utah.—"Life, for a fact, is stranger than fiction," said Harold S. Jennings, when he met a man he helped to "bury" in France 15 years ago, on an uptown street here. Jennings, a wartime lieutenant, was summoned to Bordeaux, France, October 3, 1918, to attend the funeral of his friend, Grant H. Wirick. He saw the flag-draped coffin, and listened to "Taps."

Then, 15 years later, he met Wirick face to face.

Wirick explained the mystery. "He was desperately ill with influenza. The man in the hospital bed next to him died. Confusion resulted because both of the influenza patients had been students at the same artillery school.

Later the mistake was discovered and corrected. But Jennings continued with his duties and never heard of the correction.

Wants to Stay in Jail; Sheriff Locks Him Out

Woodbury, N. J.—Holgar Hansen, forty-two, of Almonesson, who weighs 315 pounds and is five feet two inches in height, was locked out of the Gloucester county jail one night recently after refusing to pay more than two weeks to leave.

Hansen was jailed on April 28 when he objected to furnishing a $300 bond to keep the peace after it was charged that he made "derogatory remarks" at a meeting of the Deptford Township Taxpayers' association. When friends offered to furnish the bond Hansen would not let them. When the warden offered him his liberty conditionally he refused it.

Sheriff William Downer ushered Hansen out and presented him with $25, which members of the Taxpayers' association had raised to provide himself and his family with food.

Citizen Corrects Error, Pays Ten Times Tax Bill

Shawnee, Okla.—An incident that happened here ought to bolster up any one's faith in human nature.

"You've got my property valuation wrong," a taxpayer told the collector, producing a levy notice. "It's recorded $40, but it should be $400."

And with that he paid ten times as much as he was due for, pocketed the receipt, and walked whistling out of the office.

"CHICAGO ANNE" LOSES HER FAITH IN FELLOW CROOKS

Latest Experience Proves to Her They Are Not to Be Trusted.

Chicago.—Mrs. Annie Gleason (Chicago Anne), now past sixty years old, has been a crook and an associate of crooks since she was fourteen years old.

She had, in her career, many moments of glory. She associated with such internationally known police characters as Eddie Guerin, who escaped from Devil's Island, and Chicago May Churchill. She helped blow a safe in Baltimore, she stole a $10,000 necklace in London and she aided a pickpocket with his work in Germany.

Those are all bright memories to her. She has darker ones, too. They include the death of her husband in prison, the eighteen years she herself spent in English penitentiaries, and a term in the Auburn prison in New York. But the bitterest memory of all is of her last partner in crime. He did her wrong.

Tells Story of Life.

Recently the police arrested Chicago Anne as an associate of John J. Reedy, well-known crook who committed suicide in Chicago, but later released her. Anne was living with a man and woman who were known as petty crooks. Calm, neat, matronly looking, she sat in the Chicago detective bureau and told Chief of Detectives Schoemaker the long story of her life.

"Mike Gleason was my husband," she said. "We were married on the South side when I was only fourteen. I let my hair down and claimed I was nineteen so we could have the wedding. Mike was a fine man. A pickpocket, but a good one. He only worked in banks where people had their pockets full of bills. We made enough money in that game during the World's Fair of 1893 to go to Europe.

"Mike did well abroad, and so did I. But in 1909 they caught him in Germany and he did a stretch of seven years in Berlin. When he got out he went to England, was caught there and died in prison. I beat him to jail, though. They got me on a larceny charge in London in 1903 and at Old Bailey I was sentenced to three years.

Back in Chicago.

"They caught me again in 1911 and I stayed in nearly fifteen years. Cruel places, those English prisons. They made me work in the laundries and the hot water and the harsh soap ruined my hands. When I got out of England I came to America, where I went again to prison, this time in Auburn. In 1927, free again, I came to Chicago.

Chicago Anne declared that she had lived an honest life for six years and would have stayed a retired member of crookdom if Reedy hadn't appeared a few weeks ago with a tempting offer.

"He told me he needed my help," she asserted. "Just for one good job. We'd make a single big jewelry haul and have enough to live out our days with plenty. I agreed to help him. So he called himself Doctor Clayton and I called myself Mrs. Clayton and we went into the Benjamin Allen & Company jewelry shop on Wabash avenue. "I was to keep the clerk's attention and 'Doctor Clayton' was to take the jewelry when they weren't looking. But the poor old fellow had lost his grip. He confessed to me when we got out that he hadn't taken a thing, that he didn't have the nerve. Poor old guy! Now he's dead and buried, all for disappointment because he couldn't be a good crook any longer."

"But," said Chief Schoemaker, "he did get something in that job. He had $2,500 worth of jewelry in his room. We found it after he committed suicide. And it came from Allen's."

Parson Dispatches Hawk, Snake in Death Battle

Mashville, Miss.—A hawk and a snake locked in a battle to the death, attracted the attention of the Rev. John A. Glenn, as he walked along a road near here.

The chicken hawk swooped down upon the road, near where the snake, a three-foot-black racer lay coiled. The snake sprang and coiled itself around the bird's neck and wings. The hawk had its talons into the reptile, clenched in a death grip.

The minister ended the fight by dispatching both.

Parking of Biting Dog in Car Is Ruled Legal

New York.—Magistrate Peter M. Daly ruled in Flushing police court, Queens, that an unmuzzled dog in a motor car was not a violation of the law. He dismissed a complaint Julius Aptowitz of 100 Lincoln street, Flushing, had brought against Mrs. Ruth Adams of 82 North drive, Plandome. Aptowitz said that while he was walking along Main street, Flushing, Mrs. Adams' dog reached out the window of her parked car and bit his shoulder.

Pet Deer Has Odd Habits

Three Lakes, Wis.—A pet deer owned by a Three Lakes resident has developed an appetite for ice cream cones and displays a fondness for automobile-riding.

Much of Benefit in Relaxed Mind

Homemaker Will Find It Profitable to Escape From Tension.

The unreckoned element in plans is one which often causes a day of routine duties or especially arranged work to turn out differently from what was expected. Sometimes the change is fortunate, sometimes not. If the homemaker could only look into the day and realize what was coming, she could suit her tasks to the otherwise unexpected element. There are times when such an insight into events can be attained, whereby the mind is attuned to events. The psychology is simple. It is worth trying out.

Before or after making plans for a day, sit down quietly and relax as absolutely as you can. When the mind is released from tension it responds to sub-conscious suggestions, to put it scientifically, or to the spirit, if one prefers. During these few moments of relaxation, with a mind freed from planning, it frequently happens that something important to do will present itself. It may be something totally unexpected, or it may be something which at a previous time had impressed itself upon your thoughts. If it appears of immediate importance, it is wise to attend to it without delay. To plan the day without including this thing may be upsetting to tasks. Why this should be the case, it would be hard to say, but a more fruitful day results from heeding the suggestion.

Another method is to follow your intuition. There still remain persons who refuse to believe in intuition, but as these same persons "follow their hunches," they are merely shifting terms and making distinctions without differences. A hunch should be followed, so should an intuition.

An interesting case comes to mind which was told to me recently. A young woman was very busy. She had made her plans carefully for the day and then for some reason or another she gave a relaxed consideration of her day's work. Suddenly it appeared to her that a family she knew of was in sore need of funds, and that she could do something about it. She wrote a few letters acquainting others of the need, without revealing so much that it would prove embarrassing to the needy woman. The time taken for the writing was not long. The responses were generous, and enough money came in to relieve the distress of the family to whom it was sent. The young woman told me, her work was the direct result of her trying to receive suggestions during a short period of relaxation as described.

Typoid on Way Out

Figures published by the Journal of the American Medical Association show that 1932 was the best typhoid year in the history of America. In 78 cities with a population of 35,001,818, there were 442 deaths from typhoid fever, a rate of only 1.24 per 100,000. The average for the three preceding years had been 1.60, and it had looked as if the rate had been stabilized at that point. Last year's drop gave an encouraging sign that progress can still be made.

Says Her Husband Lost 16 Pounds in 4 Weeks

"I have never found a medicine that gives you the Kruschen salts and better side, leaves you topped up. I take it two or three times a week to reduce and merely to feel good and clean. My husband took it to reduce his weight. He lost 16 pounds in 4 weeks." Mrs. E. A. Ferris, Washington, D. C. (December 29, 1932).

To lose fat and at the same time gain in physical attractiveness and feel spirited and youthful take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drugstore in the world but be sure and get Kruschen Salts the SAFE way to reduce wide hips, prominent front and double chin and again feel the joy of living—money back if dissatisfied after the first jar.

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1933

Mrs. Eva B. Smith, Editor and Publisher

'The emergency relief act is an expression of the Federal Government's determination to cooperate. It means just that. . . It is essential that the states and local units of government do their full share.' President Roosevelt.

The flying start of the Administration last March has been advanced into steady full speed as Congress has stoked the boilers and developed high pressure power. The Department of Labor has just announced an increase of 4.8 in manufacturing employment and 11.5 percent in payrolls for the month of May.

General Hugh Johnson, director of the new public-works industrial control program, says that 4,000,000 idle men can be put back to work in the next four months.

The New Deal has been shuffled, out and dealt; President Roosevelt says that now we're off! And the public is enthusiastic in anticipation of a grand slam for the good old U. S. A. Of course "we are going to come out of 'it.'"

HIGHEST BRIDGE IS SPANNING COLORADO

New Structure Will Open Up Vast Territory.

Phoenix, Ariz.—Replacing the ancient ferry that has served northern Arizona and southern Utah dwellers since white men first began to travel the uncharted area of the Painted Desert, the Lee's Ferry bridge, highest structure of its kind in the world, is to be formally put into use with elaborate dedication ceremonies next June. The bridge will open up a great expanse of country and eventually result in a direct Mountain states' automobile route from Canada to Mexico. Located at the upper reaches of the Grand canyon in the wild, unsettled portion of northern Arizona, the bridge will provide for the first time a handy route of transportation between Arizona and Utah.

Is Only Bridge. It will be the only bridge crossing the Colorado river in Arizona north of Topoe, near Needles, Calif., and will provide an easy way for tourists from Arizona to reach Bryce canyon, Zion National park and Rainbow Natural bridge in southern Utah; the north rim of the Grand canyon and the great virgin forests in northern Arizona, and for travelers through southern Utah to visit the Painted Desert, south rim of the Grand canyon, petrified forests and other natural wonders in Arizona.

It is expected to open up trade and traffic between Utah and Arizona, neighboring states that have been separated by the great cliff known as one of the wonders of the world. It will be a means toward developing commerce and opening a vast land that is known to hardly anybody except the Hopi Indians, who roam the desert.

467 Feet High. The three-laned, steel arch bridge, considered by engineers to be more rigid than the suspension type, is 467 feet above the stream bed, and its ends rest in precipitous cliffs which border the Colorado river. The span itself is 615 feet long, with the bridge over all being 1,244 feet. So far as can be determined, it is the highest automobile bridge in the world.

Because of the height, engineers encountered difficulty in devising a way to construct the bridge, as there was no way of building false supports from the bottom of the canyon. The cantilever plan was employed and the supports were constructed in the granite walls. As the bridge was built out from the wall, first on one side, then on the other side of the river, toggle joints were used to extend the huge steel beams until the two sections met in the center and were joined.

Material had to be trucked 135 miles over a ribbon traveled dirt road to the site. Some of the steel sections used in the construction were 50 feet long and weighed 14 tons. These had to be hauled by truck and trailer.

The SILVER FLUTE

SYNOPSIS

On her eighteenth birthday, Barbara, motherless daughter of Christopher Thorne, artist, awakes with anticipation of the joys of the day. She receives a birthday ring from Bruce MacLain, young artist friend of the family, but more than friend to Barbara. Barbara and Bruce go picknicking on the sands at Provincetown. He tells her a story of a gypsy boy, a little gypsy girl whom he loves, and the song of a silver flute. She knows it is her own love tale. Her happiness turns to sorrow when she returns home to learn her father has been drowned. Relatives arrive and take charge of things. Having been almost a mother to the others, Barbara cannot think of their separation. Kit's sensitive nature brightens in Uncle Herbert's household by his rough-and-ready cousins, and by Gay spoiled by her association with silly Aunt Lola. Bruce urges immediate marriage, but that would mean separation. Desperate, the four children plot to run away to Barbara's godfather, "Uncle Stephen" Drake, whom they have never seen. Stephen Drake, bachelor, forty years old, still has vivid recollections of the beautiful young matron, Barbara's mother, whom he had loved eighteen years before. He had made up his mind to propose that night to Emily Trent, so that his well-ordered household might have a permanent head.

Natalie played the piano softly at the other end of the room. Robert King, her husband, big and blond and handsome, lounged against the piano, humming the tune she played, looking over her sleek dark head at Emily and Stephen.

"Nat," he asked, "is Stephen going to marry her?"

"Aunt Edith thinks so."

"Don't you think we should interfere?" Bob continued, his blue eyes twinkling at the corner. "He's slipping fast. Any minute may be too late. Let's yell 'Fire!'"

"Goose!" Her eyes loved him, his shoulders, his eyes, his crisp blond hair. She and Bob were so happy. Bob! She felt his love pouring over her, blotting out every thought not centered in themselves.

"Darling!" she whispered, through light rippling chords.

"Darling!" he answered, bending to touch her hair.

Henry arrived with the cocktails. Emily slipped hers slowly, taking a very long time. Stephen fumed with impatience and then, when she had finished, he was uneasy and urged her to have another.

She shook her head. He saw that her hands were trembling. Dear Emily, tenderness stirred in his heart. Aunt Edith was showing Professor Trent the curlos in the crystal and rosewood cabinet. Natalie and Bob were looking through a pile of music, entirely absorbed in themselves. It was an opportune moment to slip away. Stephen turned to Emily.

"Aunt Edith's orange trees actually bloomed," he said, trying to make his voice sound casual. "Would you like to see them?"

"Very much," Emily said faintly.

He was talking her to the conservatory! Did that mean anything? It meant so much to her. She wanted to be married, to be cared for and secure. She wanted to marry Stephen.

The orange trees stood in painted tubs, small dwarfed trees with glossy green leaves and clusters of wax-like blossoms.

"Lovely!" Emily breathed, hiding her face among the moist leaves, smelling the fragrance of the blossoms. Orange blossoms! Surely that was significant.

"Lovely!" she breathed to the carnations, to the small potted rose tree covered with pink-tipped buds. If she might stay here always! Her eyes filled with tears.

"You're crying."

"I'm a goose." She fumbled for her handkerchief, hating herself for crying, wondering what he thought.

"Let's use mine."

He wiped away her tears with a square of fine linen which had a pleasant smell. Everything about him was so exactly right. She wondered how it would feel to have him kiss her, and the color swept into her cheeks.

Stephen saw the bright pink flush. Perhaps, for Emily, he was a real romance. The thought surprised him. It had not occurred to him before. Dear Emily! She looked young and appealing in the dim light of the conservatory. She would make him a charming wife.

"Emily," he drew her to him, felt her trembling in his arms. It seemed absurd to him now that he had ever felt uneasy about asking her to marry him. "Emily, dear . . ."

There was a sound of footsteps, a discreet warning cough. Emily slipped away from his arms. Henry, spare and elderly and tactful, walked toward them.

"I beg your pardon, Mister Stephen," he said, coughing discreetly again. "But there's someone to see you, sir."

"Callers?" Stephen asked, annoyed at the interruption.

"Four children. They asked especially for you."

"I can't imagine—" Stephen's brow was creased in a puzzled frown. "All right, Henry, I'll come."

Henry took himself off.

"Wait for me here," Stephen said to Emily. "I'll return as soon as I can"—he lifted her hand to his lips and added gently—"dear."

He was gone so long! Emily broke off a cluster of orange blossoms. The petals spilled from her fingers, drifted down to the floor.

They stood huddled together in the hall, a weary, worn looking little group, surrounded by shabby luggage.

Who were they? Stephen wondered, as he came from the shadows into the light of the hall chandeliers. He was sure he had not seen them before. And yet the older girl looked familiar.

She detached herself from the group and walked to meet him, a weary but gallant figure, in a velvet jacket and a pleated skirt.

"Are you Uncle Stephen?" she asked, extending politely a small, very grubby hand.

Uncle Stephen! The name pronounced in a voice husky with weariness caused Stephen's heart to stir strangely. The puzzled frown left his brow.

"Yes," he said, taking the small hand which felt cold and very frightened.

"You couldn't be expected to recognize me." She lifted a pale face set with dark anxious eyes. "You haven't seen me since I was a baby being christened."

"Of course I recognize you," Stephen said gently. "I would have known you anywhere. You are my little fillette."

There was a sudden bewildering change in the small heart-shaped face. The weariness vanished, the lines of anxiety smoothed themselves out. The wide dark eyes shone like misty stars. The red lips smiled, a gay smile that woke a sleeping dimple.

"You called me that," she said. "That's why we ran away."

CHAPTER VI

Aunt Edith came into the library as the clock chimed eleven.

"Well, Stephen?" she said.

The "Well" demanded an explanation.

Stephen rose from a chair beside the fire.

"Did you enjoy the concert?" he asked, hoping to turn Aunt Edith's mind from the disturbing events of the evening. He was in no mood for explanations.

"I can't say that I did. I may be a conceited old woman, but I don't fatter myself to the extent of believing that I was an acceptable substitute for you."

"I'm sorry," Stephen said briefly. He seemed preoccupied.

"It was rude, Stephen," she said. "Emily felt it, I'm sure."

"I'm sorry," he said again. This time the words sounded more sincere. Emily! He had forgotten her entirely. She had no part in the thoughts which had occupied his mind since his unexpected guests had been fed and put to bed. "I think she will understand," he said.

"You're optimistic," Stephen, Aunt Edith thought, had much to learn about women. "Was are these children?" she asked.

"Their name is Thorne. Barbara is my godchild."

"Barbara? The older girl?"

"Yes."

"How old is she?"

"Eighteen."

"Indeed!" Aunt Edith seemed surprised. "You have never mentioned a godchild," she continued, after a pause.

"There has been no occasion."

"There is an occasion now. I try not to pry into your affairs. But, your children! Or rather three children and a young girl. Well, I am only human, Stephen."

"Of course," Stephen smiled. "You are entitled to an explanation."

Very briefly he told her the story of Barbara's christening.

"Odd sort of people," Aunt Edith observed—"asking a stranger to be godfather for their child."

"They were charming," Stephen said gently. "Both of them were artists."

"Oh!" Aunt Edith said, as though that explained the odd request. "One doesn't think of artists having children. Not in quantities," she added.

"They do, I suppose." Stephen spoke of the interval he had spent with them in a village in southern France. Of Barbara's mother he said little. It was no concern of Aunt Edith's if he had loved a slender dark-eyed girl whose name was Barbara Thorne. He could not speak of it lightly. It was a story he never had told.

POULTRY

VACCINATION WILL CHECK POX LOSSES

Plan Recommended to Owners of Diseased Flocks.

Vaccinating young chickens against chicken pox is now a proven way for farmers to protect the cash income from poultry, according to the laboratory of animal pathology and hygiene, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. Poultry and eggs now bring in about 11 per cent of the cash income of Illinois farmers, but the total would be even higher were it not for the inroads of chicken pox and other barriers to the production of high quality products. It was pointed out. The disease also is known as canker sore mouth or avian diphtheria.

Routine vaccination is recommended to all owners of flocks on infected premises as a result of a two years' study by the laboratory. Either fowl pox or pigeon pox vaccine can be used. It was demonstrated that there is no danger of causing chicken pox by using pigeon pox vaccine. Occasionally, however, serious results follow the use of fowl pox vaccine. It also was found that unhealthy flocks are not good subjects for immunization with pigeon pox vaccine. Complete protection was not established in all flocks vaccinated with the pigeon pox product in 1932, but in general the results were satisfactory.

Vaccination should be restricted to flocks in which the disease occurred during the previous year. All fowls vaccinated with fowl pox vaccine should be placed in voluntary quarantine for two months. Chickens suffering from any other disease should not be vaccinated.

Polish Fowls Are Good for Show and Utility

Leading in number of varieties of Continental-European poultry are the Polish fowls—White Crested Black, Silver, White, Buff-Laced, Non-Bearded Golden, Silver and White and Bearded Golden. Except for the lack of a "beard" or "whiskers" represented by feathers on the throat, the non-bearded are the same as the bearded; in all other standard requirements.

All the Polish varieties have an unusual appeal to the chicken fancier and a backyard farmer may be attracted first to such fowls by their unusual plumage, although they really have utility value.

There is considerable doubt about the origin of the Polish fowl, although it probably originated in Poland. Dutch poultry fanciers in the Eighteenth century were instrumental in perfecting the crest. In type, the Polish is much like the Leghorn. It was formerly very common in the United States, but with the increase in the popularity of the Leghorn, interest in the Polish waned, although it still holds a place as an ornamental fowl.—Los Angeles Times.

Feed Wheat by Hand

Feeding of corn and oats and laying mash in hoppers and hand-feeding wheat at the rate of four to six pounds per hundred hens daily, is a new method of feeding that promises to be practical for corn-belt farms, states Paul G. Riley, Indiana poultryman. The wheat is higher in price than other grains, and when hopper-fed is likely to be used in too heavy proportions to other grains. An added advantage in hand-feeding is that the hens will keep the litter stirred up, whereas it is likely to be packed down in houses where hopper-feeding is practiced exclusively.—Prairie Farmer.

Connecticut for Turkeys

Turkey raising in Connecticut is increasing, the total on farms in 1932 being more than double 1929, and with a farm value of about $200,000. A better understanding of turkey sanitation has made increases in number possible, and a sound marketing program brought added profit. The state, through its agricultural department, has established grading, labeling and advertising of Connecticut turkeys, giving them a market standing not before possessed.—Rural New-Yorker.

Poultry Facts

One poultry farm in Kent county, Mich., sold an entire carload of hens for market.

The Banded Plymouth Rock, a distinctly American bird, first introduced 86 years ago, is today among the leaders of dual-purpose breeds.

Nonsitting breeds usually lay at eighteen weeks and heavy-sitting breeds at from five and one-half to six months.

Safety first practices in raising chicks are to use litter free from mold and change it at least twice a week; to use clean mash hoppers and water fountains placed on wire platforms; and to remove the cockerels as soon as possible.

Nothing can be done to cure diseases of the liver because the bird must be killed to discover the trouble. Enlarged livers are believed to result from over feeding and lack of exercise. Old or musty feed and impure water contribute to bad livers.

Tuberculosis Seen as Doom of the Eskimos

Winnipeg.—The Eskimos are doomed—they are a vanishing race, in the opinion of F. A. "Barney" Barnes, Victoria-Land (Arctic Canada) free trader, who has arrived in Winnipeg.

Barnes has just completed a "stretch" of six and a half years straight in the Arctic, most of this time in the employ of the Hudson's Bay company at Fort Hearne, at the mouth of the Coppermine river. Barnes has seen the Eskimos dwindle and decay through the ravages of tuberculosis—the scourge of both savage and civilized races. He is puzzled why the Eskimos should succumb so easily to the white plague, for the snowhouse is about as healthy a dwelling as you could find, he explains.

Medical authorities say that the Eskimo contracted tuberculosis from the white man, but Barnes believes that the Eskimos got it from the Indians, who also are ravaged by the disease.

Cat Goes 44 Miles to Reach Old Home

Mount Vernon, Iowa.—Earl Beach and his family moved from here to a farm near South Bethel, a distance of about 44 miles, taking with them six cats.

A few days later Beach returned to Mount Vernon on business. At his former residence he was greeted by a small, badly bedraggled cat, which evidently had just completed a 44-mile journey back to its old home.
