Car Accident

Last Saturday afternoon as Mrs. Elmer Baker, baby, mother, Mrs. Anna Roberts, were driving into town, their car ran off the bridge this side of the B. & B. Service Station. The baby was catapulted through the open window into the ditch but was not badly hurt. The two ladies did not fare so well. They each received cuts on the scalp that necessitated many stitches. Both were cut on the arms, hands and lower limbs. Mrs. Roberts was hurt the most seriously, having her forehead cut above the eye, her arm wrenched and cut and two of her fingers almost severed. Dr. Johnson treated their injuries and they are resting as well as could be expected. Mrs. Roberts, son and two daughters came. Her daughter, Mrs. Rohde will remain several days with her mother.

Nogal Notes

Miss Lois McDaniels returned from Las Vegas Wednesday.

Miss Charlotte Emerson returned home Monday from Albuquerque where she has been attending the University.

The Nogal Sunday school had a contest recently and the losing side entertained the winners with a tacky party. A prize was offered for the most unique costume, which was won by Amos Emerson.

The young people are glad to welcome Gladney Zumwalt back into our circle.

Nogal hopes to secure a school bus this fall.

Angus Cemetery Working

All interested parties are invited to meet at the Angus cemetery the second Saturday in August to assist in the annual cleaning and beautifying of the grounds. Committee.

(Crowded out last week)

According to Rev. Rowland of Artesia the annual Baptist Assembly at Ruidoso was a wonderful success. Speakers from out of the State were Dr. L. R. Scarborough, president of the Baptist Seminary at Fort Worth; Mrs. David, Missionary from Spain; W. P. Phillips of Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. Chatman, from Japan; Dr. J. L. Yearby, of El Paso and several others. More young people were in attendance this time than ever attended any previous meeting.

Can You Afford to Be Without One?

Editorial Comment

To most business enterprises the depression is over, but think of the bootlegger having to sit helplessly by and see state after state vote to repeal the 18th amendment.

The slogan "Buy American" is all right, but one reader injects a note of doubt into the situation, by desiring to know what he is to do the buying with.

Depression note: The attendance at the Chicago Century of Progress exposition has reached the four million mark.

They say President Roosevelt has a "brain trust" at work in Washington to solve the economic problems.—That's a good idea, as this country has tried about everything except brains in the management of its business for the past twelve years.

Earl Carl, who has been spending the summer at Farmington, N. Mex., is here to visit his parents for a week before returning home to Los Angeles.

The Livestock Situation

J. A. McNaughton

Los Angeles, Aug. 3, 1933—With betting on horse races again legalized in California, as well as a number of other states, it seems to me that the most important consideration rests in the opportunity presented for the western states to again enter into the breeding of thoroughbred horses. This will offer a profitable sideline for some cattlemen and will open up opportunity for development of fine horse ranches.

In days gone by, California was one of the greatest horse breeding states in the world. Famous winners of the Kentucky Derby and other world-known tracks were bred and developed in California. Old-timers followers of racing, owners and trainers, always had the idea that the ideal climatic and feed conditions in California were conducive to the best kind of fine horse breeding, as there seems to be something about the temperament of California bred horses that cause them to be just as good at one season of the year as another.

Revival of horse breeding will offer an additional outlet for California pastures and feeds. Sections of this state have been noted for production of a certain quality of red oat hay that was better than could be produced elsewhere. Owners of fine horses had oat hay shipped to their stables wherever the horses might be.

The California racing measure provides that part of the money realized by the State from race track is to be used toward the development of our fairs and stock shows, thus assisting in breeding up of our flocks and herds.

It is essential that the horse racing be conducted as a clean sport and that trickery and crookedness never be permitted to enter into our California race meet.

Added benefits to California, as well as the states that depend upon the California markets as an outlet for their products, will come as a result of the tourists who will come to this state to attend the racing meetings. Most of these people are good spenders and will add tremendously to the cash left in the west by tourists.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Reeder of Tucuman came down Saturday and returned Sunday.

We'll Meet You There

(By Rev. Ralph Radar)

In the night of your manhood, you left us,
When your life was just at its prime,
In the midst of a life full of service,
You were cut down by the scythe of old time.
You left us with life full of promise,
Without even a chance for goodbye.
But as to why you should be stricken so sudden,
We will find that out in the sky.

As those who have cared for and loved you,
And labored with you in life's day,
We have truly mourned at your going,
At your lightning-like taking away.
But we believe that God in His wisdom,
Knows exactly just what is best,
And in this time of deepest affliction,
He has called our friend to his rest.

So brother you have gone before us.
In a short time, we'll join you again
In that land without any goodbyes,
And there'll be no accidents then.
In that land of flowers and children,
We will look for your face over there.
Together we'll meet God in His beauty,
In that land without sorrow and care.

(This poem was inspired by the heroic and self sacrificing death of our friend and brother, Thomas W. Jones, and is a token of the love and esteem of his friends and relatives.)—Rev. R. R.

Summary of The N. R. A. Agreement

An employe of factory or mechanical worker or artisans will not pay them less than 40 cents an hour or work them more than 35 hours a week, unless he was paying less than 40 cents for the same work on July 15, 1929, in which case the rate at that time, but not less than 30 cents an hour, may be paid.

All employes paid on a weekly basis receive not less than $15 in a city of not more than half million; $14.50 in cities of quarter of a million up; $14 from quarter of a million down to 2,500; and no less than $12 below that. These may not be worked more than forty hours a week, except for specified cases.

Higher paid employes should not have wages reduced because hours are cut, and a normal ratio should be maintained between minimum and higher paid levels. Children under 16 may not be worked after August 31, except that those over 14 may work three hours in day light so long as it doesn't interfere with day school hours.

Prices must not be raised any more than actual cost increases require.

Rodeo at Bernalillo, N. Mex.

Bernalillo, New Mexico Aug. 3—Broncos that have been cheerfully dumping all over the landscape by day and nodding drowsily in the pasture corners as the moon arose, will get their first touch night life at the Middle Rio Grande Rodeo, at Bernalillo, September 2, 3, 4.

Cowpersons predict that the bright lights will only make the buckers that much wilder, and that the kick they will display will be a whole lot more resemble dynamite than 3.2.

The night shows Saturday and Sunday, will be the first staged in New Mexico. There will be afternoon shows on all three days with the concluding performance on Labor Day.

Because of the week-end, and the holiday, and the fact that the tourist season will be at its height, immense crowds are expected. A big cowboy dance will be given each night in the picturesque little town, the Spanish, Indian and Anglo civilization blended into one.

Inquiries show that cowboys are coming from almost everywhere, to compete for the $3000 in prizes.

Cathy Bigelow

Last Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Reaves, Miss Anita Bigelow became the bride of Forest Cathey, Rev. John L. Lawson performing the ceremony.

The following invited guests were at the wedding: Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Weaver, Mr. Woodrow Gollity and Miss Maxine Cavanaugh. Mr. and Mrs. Reaves acted as best man and matron of honor. Mrs. Cathey is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Bigelow. She has made her home in Carrizozo since childhood and is well known and popular.

Mr. Cathey has only lived here a year, but in that time has made many friends. He is employed at the Carrizozo bakery and is a promising young business man.

They went to housekeeping at once in the Mayer apartments. Their many friends join in congratulations and the very best of wishes for a happy, prosperous life.

The Main Tenet of Safety

Safety on the highways is principally an attitude of mind.

Better cars and roads won't attain it. Indeed, they tend toward the opposite result. It has long been the experience that when a stretch of poor road is converted into a broad, straight, smooth highway the number of accidents increase—because motorists overestimate the safety factor. They lose the sense of caution that a poor road naturally creates—and the death and injury rate booms.

The same thing is true of automobiles. The manufacturers give us cars with better brakes, surer steering, more perfectly balanced bodies—and we abuse them to the point where the automobile accident rate breaks all records.

The "safety attitude" isn't a particularly difficult one to develop. It is simply to drive as we'd like the car approaching us to drive. Don't cut corners, nor pass on curves or hills, nor drive on the wrong side of the road, nor fight for the right-of-way, nor drive so fast you cannot stop in the assured clear distance ahead. Almost every accident, minor or severe, occurs because someone violates these simple rules.

Possibly a better phrase for safe driving would be "courteous driving." Discourtesy on the highway is always the friend of accidents. If you'll make up your mind to drive the way you think the other fellow should drive, the accident rate will be due for a severe beating in the future.—Industrial News.

Carrizozo Wins

The local ball club added one more game to their string of victories by defeating Tularosa by a score of 15 to 9. In the early part of the game, Tularosa was leading and it looked as if Carrizozo was going to have strong opposition, but it didn't take the local boys long to start connecting with the best "darky" pitcher had to offer, so from there on it was easy for the home team. Ramon Flores base-umpire for Tularosa did his bit for his team by stopping a hot one back of the pitcher box. Manager Harry Miller will take his team Sunday to play Alamogordo.

Seligman to Help Veterans

Santa Fe, August 3—Governor or Arthur Seligman this week announced that General Frank Hines, administrator of veterans affairs, had finally consented to make available to him the names of all disabled veterans, widows and dependents of veterans on the pension rolls prior to July 1, as he had repeatedly demanded. The governor stated these names were now being prepared for him. As soon as he obtains them, he plans to send out a questionnaire to ascertain their financial status, whether they will receive pensions, and how much.

Many will be cut off altogether. A survey is vitally necessary to obtain data concerning relief needs of veterans and dependents who have been dropped from the rolls.

Governor Seligman stated he would use his influence to see justice done the disabled veteran and to aid in restoring his compensation, if that is possible. The governor has received many letters from veterans disabled in the war who have been dropped from the rolls and are physically unable to earn a living.

"We are not so much concerned at this time about the veteran who has recovered from his disability and is now earning a living. We are centering our energies on obtaining a living compensation for the veteran who is still disabled and unable to work, and especially those with one or more dependents. There are many such in the state."

The Rev. and Mrs. L. E. Patee and little daughter are leaving in the morning for a month's motor trip to be spent in Fort Worth, Texas, and Ansonia, Conn. They will visit the Rev. Patee's mother in Ansonia. Mrs. T. J. Dillon, Jr., will accompany them as far as Fort Worth to visit a month with her brother, Tucuman News.

Mrs. R. E. Blaney returned home Wednesday from the East, after visiting a sister at Hillsdale, Mich. for five weeks, she returned to Chicago and visited many old friends and the Century of Progress. She has been gone since May 15.

The fourteen month's old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas Ventura died last Monday of whooping cough. Father Brady conducted funeral services. Tuesday afternoon followed by interment in the local cemetery.

Mr. R. W. Doxier who is in the S. P. hospital in San Francisco is not any better according to letters received by friends here. His daughters have gone out there to be near him.

Mrs. Mattie Cooper of Ancho is visiting Mrs. Les Harmon.

Mr. Geo. Murray of Coronado flat was in town from Saturday until Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Seay and daughter of Albuquerque who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Jordan for several days have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Farley of Alamogordo will leave Monday for the World's fair in Chicago. They will then go on to Pennsylvania to visit Mr. Farley's relatives. Mrs. Farley came up last night and visited Mrs. Charles between trains.

Mrs. Elsa Charles is suffering from a very painful forefinger on her left hand, the result of a spider bite.

Edinburgh Sights

One of Edinburgh's Many Monuments.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

EDINBURGH, focal point of many tours through Scotland, is singularly, if austere, beautiful. The city is a honeycomb of massive stone buildings rising to heights that made it the Manhattan of the Middle Ages, some of the walls so thick that long afterward elevators could be installed without protruding into the rooms.

By all precedents and guide-books, the Edinburgh visitor should head straight for Castle Hill. But to some, the first thriller they ever read, "Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," still is the most vivid tale of Edinburgh. So they hunt out Brodie's Close, dark and dank to this day, though not so evil-smelling as when its dual denizen, Deacon Brodie, was a Doctor Jekyll by day and a Mr. Hyde by night.

Pause before entering the close—you would call it an alley—and the mind's eye converges into a swift news reel of events along the history-encrusted Royal Mile, into which it opens. Grand Dame Eleanor, countess of Stair, leaps from yonder window (still in full view) to escape a truncheon of her violent, if blue-blooded, husband. Down a "wynd" whispers one hag to another gossip from opposite seventh stories, the ancient walls leaning like two Piana. Dainty Miss Eglington, later Lady Wallace, skips across the way to fill a kettle from the communal well. Holydenish duchess of Gordon rides a sow she had captured under a neighbor's "forestairs," while her more dignified sister belabors the animal with a stick.

Only the backbone street was wide enough for carriages in those days; ladies and gallants were borne in sedan chairs by stout Highlanders into the side arteries for tea and calls. Hurler's wives, in silks or Scotland's fine wool, shopped for jewels in basement cubbyholes, or bought velvet and lace at tiny booths under roofs of the balconies reached by the peculiar forestairs of nearly every tenement. They were jostled by countrywomen in green and crimson homespun, and by sailors from ships that brought over cattle and tallow from the Low Countries.

The Lawnmarket Sector. Brodie's Close opens now, as then, into the Lawnmarket sector of the Mile, where Scotland's parliament once ordained "all cotton cloth, white and grey; all linnen cloth is to be sold there and in no other place." Open stalls and canvas-topped booths, displaying bolts of cotton and webs of linen, were besieged as bargain counters today.

About you remain the "lands" or tenements of the days when a city wall pressed to an altitude and compactness like the lower East side in New York. Of course, your memory can disregard time and bring events of centuries into instant focus. "Toddling aristocrats play with racing ragamuffins. They scurry at the approach of a party of Knights of France in glittering armor, their pennants flying, on their way to a tournament to compete for the coveted king's prize, a golden lance.

One day Mary, queen of Scots, spirited in spite of her ill-omened reputation at Leith, rides by on a white palfrey, a tiny pearl crown nestling on her high-dressed hair. Twelve courtiers, in black and crimson, carry a canopy for her. At Netherbow she halts to receive the keys of the city; she extends her little hand for the provost to kiss. The sun suddenly emerges and glitters in her white satin gown.

Quick-witted, she utters an impulsive greeting, "The sun comes out with me, Master Provost." The city is here; from mouth to mouth passes the cry, "God bless her bonnie face." No Place for Night Strolls.

Ten o'clock; the tavern and clubs discharge their crowds. Everybody rushes for home. Up and down the street rings out the world's most effective curfew—the cry, "Gardy-loo, gardy-loo" (garden leau). Down pour swill and garbage from hundreds of tenement windows. It is a luckless citizen who has not reached shelter.

Little wonder the fussy Jewell, trying to put his town's best foot forward for captious Johnson, complained, "I could not prevent his being assailed by the evening effluvia of Edinburgh." The residents of fashionable St. James Court were thought very aloof and squeamish when they engaged a private scavenger to remove their refuse. Today all Edinburgh is equipped with a modern sewage-disposal system, and even its narrowest streets are kept immaculate.

From Brodie's Close steals a stealthy, sinister figure, all wrapped round in a black coat. Beneath his folds he clutches a pistol and a ring of keys. Furtively he enters this shop and that. Earlier in the evening—any evening for several years—a most respectable town councillor, who also was a deacon of the Guild of Wrights and Masons, attired in immaculate tall coat and breeches, might have been seen leaning against a door post where some merchant had trustfully hung his keys while he was at his tavern. Concentrated in the palm of his hand was a clay mold. From an impression it was easy to make a key. Holcherie became so frequent that the town council called a meeting. Deacon Brodie gravely counseled about ways of stopping the depredations. He thoughtfully advised tradesmen about the kinds of bolts to put on their doors. So zealous was he that he even went about while merchants were at dinner to make sure their doors were locked.

One night a particularly heinous robbery took place and two scoundrels were caught. A third escaped. Strangely, the highly respectable Deacon Brodie also disappeared. Stories went around. Certain cronies whispered how the good deacon gambled with them for high stakes. Two of his mistresses complained that the kind gentleman had gone away and made no provision for them.

Deacon Brodie was apprehended in Amsterdam, lodged in the grim Tolbooth, and executed October 1, 1783. His skeleton keys now hang in the Museum of Antiquities. His "strange case" was immortalized by Stevenson. The fact that he could operate on such a cramped stage, scarcely a twenty-minute walk in any direction from his happy family fireside, emphasizes the tremendous crowding of the Old Town.

Architecture of Old Times. The Royal Mile, from Castle Hill, through Lawnmarket, High street, and Canongate, is clean today, but its tenements are just as crowded, and they justify the modern implication of the term, for wealth and fashion have migrated to the broad streets and stately squares of the New Town.

There remain the wretched doorways, arched doorways, crests and turrets, the peak gables, the intricately carved finials, the mammoth locks and door handles, and the exterior forestairs, leading up one flight to the interior "turnpike" stairs to the floors above.

One architectural feature is puzzling. In some houses there appears a slit much narrower than other windows. Inspection discloses that these apertures light tiny closets opening off the dining rooms. They were retreats for the head of the house, where he might perform his devotions.

From Lawnmarket it is only a short walk to Castle Rock, whence Edinburgh was born, which anchored the Old Town, which uplifts the castle whose history spans half the world.

Standing guard over the opposite end of Princes street from Castle Rock in Calton Hill, affording a view that reaches out to Fife and the Ochils, Calton is dotted with an amazing collection of monumental and architectural curiosities which, somehow, seem to achieve harmony.

Beside the incomplete Parthenon of Craigleith columns, there is a Nelson monument that shelters a museum; a homely Hobbie Burns is awarded a copy of the choragic temple of Lycrates; a high school reproduces the Temple of Theseus at Athens; there also are an observatory, a burying ground, the tombs of Home and of Stevenson's parents, and a jail!

The Silver Flute

By Lida Larrimore

C. Macrae-Smith Company WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

On her eighteenth birthday, Barbara, motherless daughter of Christopher Thorne, artist, receives a birthday ring from Bruce MacLain, young artist friend of the family, but more than friend to Barbara. Barbara and Bruce go picnicking. He tells her a story of a gypsy boy, a little gypsy girl whom he loves, and the song of a silver flute. She knows it is her own love tale. Her father is killed in an accident. Relatives arrive and take charge of things. Barbara fears the children's separation and its effects. Desperate, she plans to take her two brothers and sister and run away to her godfather, "Uncle Stephen" Drake. He, a bachelor, forty years old, still has vivid recollections of Barbara's mother, whom he had loved eighteen years before. He had made up his mind to propose that night to Emily Trent, but that his well-ordered household might have a permanent head. But the arrival of the children interrupts the proposal. Barbara tells him why they ran away, and he tells his heart warm to the brave daughter of his early love. But he tells her he must, and then all back. Kit is taken ill. Stephen finds himself strangely unable to resume his lover-like feeling for Emily.

CHAPTER VIII

Uncle Herbert was very angry, indeed. Stephen realized that when Uncle Herbert exploded in the office. He was glad he had sent him the office address. The children would be spared the worst of the explosion.

Aunt Lola, who had come with Uncle Herbert to represent the relatives, wasn't angry. She was merely very much hurt. It was Barbara's fault, she repeated, whenever Uncle Herbert paused to catch a breath. "Dear little Guy would never have thought of such a thing. Barbara, she feared, was like her mother, willful and headstrong, with no proper regard for other people's feelings."

"Barbara is an unusual child," Stephen said, nettled by Aunt Lola's remarks. "Impulsive, perhaps. But not headstrong. She wanted to keep the children together."

"A notion! All a notion!" Uncle Herbert stormed.

"We can't blame her too much, I suppose," Aunt Lola said with a flinching sigh. "It's the way she has been brought up. Christopher Thorne was— Respect for the dead caused Aunt Lola to pause. But her expression implied many things. "Poor Barbara!" She sighed again. "I'm afraid she hadn't a happy life."

Stephen had thought her the happiest person he had ever known—the Barbara he had loved. Through Uncle Herbert's voice, he heard her voice, gay and amused; through Aunt-Lola's perfume, which was making his head ache a little, he smelled the roses of southern France. It seemed an act of treachery to Barbara to deliver her children into the hands of the enemy. But what in the world could he do?

"Kit is a bit ill," he said when Uncle Herbert's rage had subsided a little and Aunt Lola had ceased to sigh. "We'll have to keep him a week or two."

Uncle Herbert's expression indicated that this was the final indignity. "I must get back to the office," he said, louder than was necessary. "I have wasted a great deal of time."

"There's no reason for you to stay," Stephen felt that his patience was fraying at the edges. "We'll send Kit to you as soon as he is well enough to travel."

"What about Jamie?" Aunt Lola asked. "Aunt Josephine is very much annoyed." She thought of the irate old lady in the red brick Providence house.

Stephen thought of her, too—as Barbara had described her. He felt a disturbing desire to guard and protect the children. He knew it was an unreasonable desire. But it seemed a shame that Barbara should be forced to live where she had once been so unhappy. He was reluctant to send her to Providence. Stephen, of course, knew nothing at all about Bruce.

"I can take Guy at once, I suppose?" Aunt Lola asked. "There are such delightful children at the hotel, I'm sure she will have a lovely time."

Hotel children! Stephen thought with a silent groan. He had seen them in many places, pert, over-dressed girls, little boys who bullied the porters and maids and smoked cigarettes on the sly. Guy hadn't Barbara's character. Looking at Aunt Lola, it was easy to see what pretty Guy would probably become. Still, there was no reason why he should make himself responsible. He was sorry for the four-Thornes. But what in the world could he do?

"I suppose so," he said with no great enthusiasm; Guy, he thought, would be entirely willing to go with Aunt Lola.

But Guy surprised him, when they reached Stephen's home that afternoon. She sat on the side of the huge bed helping Kit sit together one of the picture puzzles. Barbara had been reading aloud to Jamie when Stephen brought Aunt Lola and Uncle Herbert into the room. The reading had stopped abruptly and the color had pale from her cheeks. A little of it returned when Guy said, sweetly but firmly:

"Are we imposing?" Guy asked, glancing up at Stephen from under her long-curling lashes.

They all looked at Stephen; Barbara, Kit, Guy and Jamie. He felt that he couldn't fall them.

"It's pleasant having you here," he said and realized, with a start of surprise, that what he said was true.

Aunt Lola was plaintive but Guy was firm. She couldn't leave Kit when he was sick. If Uncle Stephen didn't mind, she would very much rather stay. "Uncle Stephen" didn't mind. It was decided that Guy should go to Florida later.

Uncle Herbert behaved very well. An excellent luncheon had mellowed his temper. He scolded the children for running away, in a somewhat jocular fashion. He asked Kit riddles and teased Guy's curls and admired Jamie's electric trains. He was agreeable to Barbara. He produced a check-book and pen.

"That's quite all right," Stephen said. "Let me take care of them, please."

"Couldn't think of it, Mr. Drake," Uncle Herbert was pompous and dignified. The family pride was at stake.

"I'd rather. They are my guests. I have some claim on them, you know!" he added with a smile. "Barbara is my little flutist!"

"My little flutist!" . . . Barbara felt a singing inside of herself. Uncle Stephen, she thought, was the kindest man in the world.

"If you insist—" Uncle Herbert said doubtfully.

"Certainly do."

"Well, well—" The check-book was restored to Uncle Herbert's pocket. He looked kindly at the children. "We can't expect old heads on young shoulders, I suppose," he said to Stephen and accepted another cigar.

They left some time later, declining an invitation to dinner. The children greeted him jubilantly when Stephen returned to the room where Kit lay, propped against pillows, after Aunt Lola and Uncle Herbert had gone. Jamie and Guy fell upon him with rapturous cries. Stephen felt himself smothered in this young arms and lusty bear-like embraces. It did something strange to his heart. He looked over their heads at Barbara standing beside Kit's bed. Her eyes thanked him. She smiled her gayest smile. Bless them, he thought, with a lump in his throat. What jolly youngsters they were!

They sang lustily to tell Uncle Stephen how very happy they were. Aunt Edith opened the door, her face beneath wavy white hair very stern and disapproving.

"The doctor advised rest and quiet," she said when she could be heard.

"A little pleasant excitement won't hurt him," Stephen smiled at Kit, propped against the pillows. "We're celebrating," he said. "The enemy has been routed."

"Whoops!" Jamie shouted, his freckled face shining with happy excitement.

They swung into the chorus again. "Chips" barked, Jamie, to Aunt Edith's horror, beat time with a pair of drumsticks that used to be Stephen's against the foot of the bed. Kit tinkled the spoon against the glass and croaked like a happy bullfrog.

"Gracious!" Aunt Edith thought and buttoned her lips together.

That evening Barbara wrote to Bruce—

"Kit is sick, but not very. Just a cold and a temperature. I was worried but Kit says it's an act of Providence—you know the old-fashioned way I talk. Anyway, Uncle Stephen will let us stay here until Kit is better, although he was provoked about us running away. I think he's getting to like us a little. He brought us presents last night—a lovely necklace for me—and he has been so kind about Kit."

"Aunt Lola and Uncle Herbert came today but they were very polite. I think they were impressed by Uncle Stephen's home. It's very elegant, Bruce. It's built out of stone with ivy all over it and stables (only they don't have horses now)—and greenhouses and lawns and gardens and lovely trees. And a butler!!! What do you think of that? It's a very educating experience to live in a house that has a name and a butler and cords with tassels to ring for the servants."

"There is a library just full of books and a drawing room all full of rose-wood furniture and chandeliers with glass icicles dripping from them and cabinets full of the loveliest things; little jade trees and ivory elephants and flowers made out of glass. And a conservatory!!! I didn't know people had conservatories and drawing rooms except in books, did you, Bruce darling? But, of course, this is a very old house."

"We have a great deal to live up to because, although Mother's relatives are well to do, they don't live in places like this. Guy is simply entranced! You know how she loves elegance! But I wish we were back in Provincetown with Martha scolding us and Manuel playing his accordions and Father coming in from the studio with paint on his trousers and his hair all mussed up, making jokes and telling us stories the way he used to do. (To be continued.)"

OBEDIENT

The doctor smilingly entered the room where his female patient was reclining in a chair. "Ah," he murmured, "I see you are looking very much better today." "Yes, doctor," the patient said, "I have very carefully followed the instructions on that bottle of medicine you gave me."

"Let me see, now," said the doctor thoughtfully. "What were they?" "Keep the bottle well corked," came the reply.—Somerset (Eng.) Standard.

ENTHUSIASTIC

It was a wretched play. Long before the interval the audience began to boo and hiss. But there was one man who clapped his hands vigorously.

"I say," said the man next to him, "you've got a nerve to applaud this shocking play. What can you see in it?" The man smiled.

"It's not the play I'm applauding," he replied heartily. "It's the hissing."—London Answers.

The request by President Roosevelt to industry to submit codes that the wrongs of competition may be adjusted is a new note in industry and the thinking of many. The theory of many has been the thing to do, was to produce an article for the lowest price possible and sell it for the lowest price. It comes as a surprise to many that any other plan should be considered—that this system that has been followed generally for years is not the wisest plan when considered from the standpoint of the manufacturer, the employee and the consumer. It's just another evidence, if any is needed, that the old fundamental truths of the ages regarding human conduct and man's relation to man cannot be violated without some one suffering and having to pay for it. Industry has been wandering in the wilderness of competition. The new code is an effort to establish a new law for the relationship of industry, employee and consumer.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

The Missionary Society of the Methodist church will meet at the home of Mrs. John E. Hall Wednesday August 9th.

Mr. J. V. Taylor of I-X ranch was in town Saturday afternoon.

Miss Hazel Melan returned from Albuquerque last Saturday and will remain in Carrizozo until time for school to open. Miss Melan has been one of our efficient teachers for seven consecutive years.

Tom Jones, who was killed in an effort to apprehend Glenn Munnicker and his gang, was a neighbor of the editor of the Herald, in Lincoln county for many years. Mr. Jones and his wife, Ola Casey Jones, were popular young people of the neighborhood and had hosts of friends and no enemies at all. While we knew a Tom Jones had been killed it never occurred to us that it was our one time friend. The killing of this young man will cause many heartaches over a large section of the southwest. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved family.--Hot Springs Herald.

The Gaines Filling station at Ruidoso was robbed Tuesday of last week. $9.50 was the amount of money secured, while the robbers overlooked $30 in their haste.

Highway Improvements

State Engineer Macy has ordered maintenance crews to begin work on State Road No. 37 to connect with U. S. Highway No. 380 between Hondo and Carrizozo. Mr. Nelson who has charge of road work in that section will have crew work from Ruidoso Junction and Wingfield's store; Mr. Ferguson will have his crew begin on Highway No. 380 and meet the Nelson crew. This work will consist of grading and widening.

The Forest Civilian Conservation Corps will be put to work on the graveling and installation of culverts later on. The Bureau of Public Roads through the Lincoln National Forest has planned to spend several thousand dollars on road improvement this fall.

NOTICE

New Mexico History and Civics examination will be held in my office August 26th., at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Ola C. Jones County School Supt. Aug. 4-11-18.

Mrs. Asa Evans and A. E. Rhode left last Saturday evening for Carrizozo. Their mother and brother's wife had been in a serious automobile accident. No further particulars have been heard here but their many friends wish it is not as serious as reported.--Tucumcari News.

The College Problem

College is no "snap." It is a real task. It has its definite problems which challenge the best in every youth. Can you solve them? Here they are:

Problem One--GOING. Can I Go? Yes, if you have the money. Thousands of young men and women do not have the money nor can they find a job, thus they will be denied the advantage of higher education.

Solution: Here is an easy and effective solution. GET A BUSINESS EDUCATION. Many who are attending our school at this moment are doing so as a means to a six-year professional education. Several of our graduates are now in college successfully earning their board, room, tuition, and in some instances, maintaining a cash reserve. Not a few of the most successful professional men and women of the Southwest have used our commercial training courses as a means to securing their education. A business education will double the average person's chances to go to college--it will make going easy.

Problem Two--STAYING. Can I Stay? Maybe you can, but the chances are against you. Only ten per cent of those who enter ever graduate. Ninety per cent fall by the wayside--pathetic, expensive! Though you can so, ask yourself a hundred times, Can I STAY? College values are assured only to the STRICKERS.

Solution: Train yourself ACCURATE. Some students stumble, blotch, blur, and blunder themselves out of college. They are literally knocked out with a red pencil. Many others cut their grades to the minimum passing grade. The Business School furnishes a preparatory disciplinary training in accuracy, which is not only necessary in life's later battles, but which makes the details and technicalities of future college work delightful and easy.

Many students quit college because they cannot keep up. They never leaves college. College leaves them. They lack the double quick step. They are short in speed. Business School's speciality is SPEED TRAINING. They prepare one for the college race, as well as for the split-second age. They emphasize speed with the pen, typewriter, figures, speedy decision and execution. They put wings on one's words by the latest shorthand methods, so that every phrase of the class room lecture may be preserved. Several of the most illustrious men have been experts in the use of shorthand and have recommended it to all prospective college students.

Thousands of students do not stay in college because they lack DIRECTION PURPOSE. Upon entering they have no idea of what they can do best, or even want to do. Thus, school becomes monotonous, boring, hard, and they quit. They need general orientation, specific direction, a breathing spell, contacts with the great pulsating business world and men of affairs. They must find themselves and have a purpose, or they will be numbered with the ninety per cent who DROP OUT.

Problem Three--GETTING. Can I Get the Most? Hundreds of young people will enter college this year. Of those who pursue their courses for a while, some will receive no benefit whatever, but only a few will receive the maximum blessing. The predominant and final question, therefore, of every college student should be: How can I get the most out of my course?

Solution: Train yourself in business first. Until recently slight emphasis has been placed upon business training as a means to a more adequate preparation for effective college work. Students have been advised to go to college and then take a business course. This is but another illustration of "PLACING THE CART BEFORE THE HORSE." College records will show that, other things being equal, the business trained college student makes a better grade. Such students are not only able to keep up but to keep ahead, and this is part of the glory of college life.

College is impossible for some, hard for many, easy for a few. Our specially arranged Business Training Course will make it easy for you. With it you can go to college, and get the most out of your work while there. A few months of intensive training with us will solve your four-year college problem. Write for our catalog. It tells you how.

VACATIONS and HEALTH

By Dr. ERNEST H. LINES
The Institute of Makers of Explosives

CHILDREN IN SUMMER MONTHS

FOR children, the summer months are playtime. Free from the tasks of the schoolroom, they look forward eagerly to the games and pleasures of the vacation period. But intelligent and careful planning for the holidays is as essential for children as for adults. Since the routine of school health education is suspended, full responsibility for health falls on the shoulders of parents.

The vacation period of the average city child is usually spent with adult relatives at summer resorts, at organized camps, or in the year-round city environment. It is the unfortunate children who spend the last type of vacation who require the closest supervision.

They should be particularly warned against over-exertion and heat prostration, against eating foods handled by street vendors, and against the dangers of accident from automobiles. The most tragic aspect of the child's vacation period is the increased number of avoidable accidents to children due to the failure of parents and children to carry on the safety campaign waged throughout the school year.

Although swimming is excellent exercise for children, particularly since it teaches them how to take care of themselves in the water, care should be taken to avoid the pollution of the old swimming hole. Children who go to summer camps should be examined in advance by the family physician and a record should be sent to the camp authorities so they may regulate the child's activities in accordance with his physical condition.

Explosives

Many accidents to children occur from the explosion of dynamite tags left lying around vacant houses, summer cottages and other places where children may pick them up. The Institute of Makers of Explosives reports that 500 children are killed or injured annually from playing with blasting caps. Most of these accidents occur during the summer months.

A still greater number of children are injured by the explosion of fireworks. Look-alike and burns are a serious danger. Don't let the Fourth of July be a reminder that your child has lost his life, or an eye, or some fingers from a fireworks explosion.

In short, plan the child's vacation so that it combines the greatest freedom from the narrow tension of the formal classroom with the highest regard for the rules of healthful living and the greatest care to avoid accidents. Continue the child's regular rest period. If possible, bring the child close to the lessons of the great outdoors. See to it that, with an abundance of sunlight, air, rest and directed recreation, the little citizen goes back to school with a sound mind and a sound body.

This is the second of a series of 12 articles on Vacations and Health. The third, on Camp Life, will answer the questions: 1. What first aid should be administered for snake bites? 2. How should a camp site be selected? 3. How should firearms be carried?

Part Played by Chance in Life

Not Possible to Deny Luck Is an Element.

"It is well known that as nothing succeeds like success, so nothing fails like failure," said Mr. Cato Ninetails...

"Napoleon himself was, of course, capable—and had good luck. That is, such conditions prevailed for about twenty years. Then they changed. It might have been from a loss of capability or a failure of good luck—or both.

"An such an irresistible combination is seldom, if ever, lifelong, the question arises as to whether such a capable man would be so successful if he were not lucky, or such a lucky man would be so successful if he were not capable; and, indeed, a further question as to whether a good deal of what passes for capability isn't mostly or wholly luck.

"There are those, of course, who say that there is no such thing as luck—that is, chance good fortune—but certainly there is some inexorable and uncontrollable force that has a powerful, even a decisive, effect on the affairs of men, and it would seem that luck is as good a name for it as any, whether it concerns the cast of fortune or of the dice; nor is there any doubt that it favors some people more than it does others—such as General Mack. It is our own feeling that when it favors us we are capable, and when it does not we are unlucky. This satisfies our self-esteem, and does no particular harm, but it can hardly be regarded as a disinterested analysis.

"Perhaps it is just as well, if we could not put ourselves on the back without dislocating an arm, life could be a sorry affair. We feel a fine glow of generosity when we pat other people on the back, even when we think that they may be worthy of it, but it is not nearly so satisfying as when we pat ourselves on the back, for then we have no doubt whatever that the commendation is deserved. After all, all of us have some capability and all of us have some luck, but most of us experience great difficulty in keeping them working together."

HER DOUBLE CHIN IS VANISHING Shape Growing Normal

"Why am I taking Kruschen salts? Because I was getting so broad across the hips I was ashamed of myself. I've been taking Kruschen about 3 months and they certainly are bringing my shape down to a normal condition and what is nice about them (to my way of thinking) is they haven't taken flesh from my cheeks but to my surprise my double chin is vanishing for which anyone should be glad."

MONEY PROBLEMS OF LONG AGO

Romans Had Their Troubles, as Did Other Nations, in the Adjustment of Currencies to the Demands of Trade and Public Welfare.

The Romans were slow to get a coinage system. Three hundred years after the founding of the city, far advanced in many respects, Romans were trading like a tribe of aborigines, Reuben Cahn writes, in the Chicago Tribune. They were quoting prices in sheep and oxen. The two were related in a decimal system—10 sheep equaled 1 ox.

In Etruria, which lay northwest of the Tiber river, were copper mines and at an early date copper was brought to Rome. It came to be used in shields, harness, wagons, ships, and for many other purposes. Thus it had a market value and it became the custom to use lumps of it in making payments. The government paid no attention to this innovation, however, for some years. At a time when pieces of copper were being used in trade a souse driving his chariot recklessly along the Apian boulevard might have to settle with the judge by driving up a flock of sheep.

Since copper was sold by weight, it became convenient to have pound lumps called an "as." There were also two and three pound pieces. Thus copper served as money before the state started issuing pieces of metal stamped with picture of the gods, mythical heroes, and contemporary politicians.

When after 888 B. C. the Romans became commercially ambitious and founded a maritime colony they took up coinage. The money was bronze, lead, and tin, being combined with raw copper. The unit of value weighed an as and was called by that name.

Silver, which the Roman generals found desirable to have on hand to buy army equipment as they went on conquests and which was already widely used elsewhere, thanks to Greek and Alexandrian influence, became official money in Rome after 289 B. C. Thereupon the double standard was adopted, silver and copper both being coined and a mint ratio of 120 to 1 was established. Although silver was used exclusively in the foreign trade, copper continued to constitute the principal money at home.

Now silver greatly increased in quantity. For one thing, Alexander discovered enormous treasures of both gold and silver in the Orient and set them in circulation. And there was the great silver mine in Spain, which at one time employed 40,000 miners. This had the effect of cheapening silver; boosting prices in terms of silver. At the time when wars had cut off the supplies of Rome's copper, the value of that metal in relation to silver rose more than did the general commodity index number. And furthermore, copper was a commodity useful to have around while warring.

Roman statesmen well understood Gresham's law 18 centuries before Gresham; with a double standard, an increase in the supply of silver, being coincident with a reduction in the supply of and an increase in the demand for copper, would have led to the hoarding of copper as money. If the double standard was to work, it was necessary to reduce the mint ratio from 120 to 1. And so the size of the coin "as" was changed from 12 ounces of bronze to 10, 8, 6, and eventually to 2 ounces. Thus, the relation of silver to copper fell as low as 20 to 1 while the normal sources of metal were unavailable. When the peace-time flow of new copper was re-established, and the war-time demand was cut off, the old ratio of 120 to 1 was restored. Copper and silver performed similarly in the World War. The market ratio was 30 to 1 in 1917—now is 70 to 1. Devaluation of copper was not undertaken by the Roman republic at any time for profit nor to relieve the burden of debtors, the ends sought by gold devaluators today. It was done to maintain the double standard. It was the earliest example of a successfully managed currency. On the Ides of March, 44 B. C., the great Caesar was slain,

After him came emperors who used the republican precedent to debase the currency as a racket, until its value was but one-fiftieth of what it was before. The history of money in the Roman republic was a succession of readjustments to make a double standard work. That the republic supplied its citizens with a sound and an honest medium of exchange is testimony both to their ability and their character.

Seldom Need to "Talk Too Much"

Mr. Cato Ninetails Gives a Little Dissertation on the Subject.

"There is too much talk about the people who talk too much," declared Mr. Cato Ninetails. "It does no good whatever, because the people who talk too much keep right on talking too much; in fact, it does harm, for it merely adds to the amount of talk, and so increases that kind of unnecessary noise.

"I have never been able to determine whether loquacity is a gift or a disease. I am rather inclined to think that it is a disease of the nervous system; but, on the other hand, it may be merely one of those involuntary physiological actions like respiration or the circulation of the blood. Mentally doesn't seem to have much to do with it; as it is noticed that the people who talk too much generally say less than the people who talk comparatively little. They have two distinctive characteristics. They talk principally about themselves, their families, their own affairs and their opinions of other people's affairs, about which they know little or nothing, and so have all the pleasure and stimulation of letting their imaginations range widely.

"For other people than those endowed with this gift, or afflicted with this disease, as the case may be, my observation and experience convinces me that talking is hard work; that it is not merely a mental effort, but that it is a physical effort that is wearing on the muscles as well as the nerves. The toll of 'making conversation'—which is undoubtedly the most unnecessary activity that humanity engages in—is more exhausting than the most arduous physical labor. I mean that it is for the people who don't talk too much. The people who do talk too much have to make conversation because what they think is conversation bubbles from their lips like the water from a never-falling spring.

"People, of course, cannot give previous thoughtful consideration to all the remarks that they make—as to their justifiability and effect, even though they experience repeated instances where after consideration is extremely disconcerting; talk, even discreet talk, must have some spontaneity; but it is certain that the less they say the less danger there will be of a subsequent feeling of regret.

"I don't think that the people who talk too much are really any more untautful than the people who don't, and when they say things that are better left unsaid the effect is diluted by their general gush of words till it is hardly noticed. It is the people who don't talk much that must watch their step—or their tongues. The infrequency of their remarks tends to make their hearers note, and perhaps remember, what they say. So it really wouldn't appear to be safe to say anything which would make life somewhat duller, and a good deal less laborious."

TIRE PRICES Going Higher BUY TODAY AND SAVE

Blowouts are caused by frictional heat generated in the fibers of the cotton cords in a tire. Firestone is the only tire built with every cotton fiber saturated and coated with pure rubber—to prevent destructive heat. This is one of the reasons why Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the 500 mile Indianapolis Race for 14 consecutive years—the world's most severe blowout test.

EVERY FIBER EVERY CORD EVERY PLY IS BLOWOUT PROTECTED BY Gum-Dipping. Rubber has gone up 242%, cotton 115%—substantial tire price increases must follow. The Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store in your community will give you an attractive allowance for your old tires on new Firestone High Speed Tires.

Mrs. Zoe Glassmire and her sister, Miss Kathleen Doering have returned from a pleasant trip to Ruidoso.

Last Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Clymer and daughter Miss Gwynn of Fairbanks, Arizona were driving near their home when Miss Gwynn, who was at the wheel lost control and the car plunged off a 15 foot embankment. All were more or less bruised and cut, but Mr. Clymer's injuries were the worst. His arm and two of his ribs were broken.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Braem of El Paso visited Mrs. Braem's niece, Mrs. Claud Branum Sunday. Their two daughters, Misses Helen and Hazel Braem who had been here two weeks returned home with them.

Dance tonight at Lutz hall with Al Stovall and his Orchestra. A variety of instruments will be played and all who go are assured a few hours of pleasure and gaiety.

Miss Maxine Cavanaugh is the new clerk at Mr. Ziegler's store. Mr. Ziegler added another clerk to his force in his patriotic desire to help along the National recovery movement for better wages and shorter hours.

The Carrizozo Bakery is now located in the Reil building next door to the Waffle house.

Seldom do you find such wonderful stocking values, as Kayser Hosiery; all silk from the tips of their toes, to their picot tops and so beautifully sheer that they give an appearance of much higher priced hose. They measure up to every requirement for durable fashion-right stockings. Ziegler Brothers Sole Agent for Kayser silk hosiery and silk underwear for Lincoln county. Big new stock just in.

Economic Highlights

For a good many months we've been talking about recovery. At first, that talk principally represented optimism. Then some actual signs of recovery began to appear. The indexes took on a more cheerful tone. Now there's no longer any question about it. Recovery is here. There's hardly an industry that isn't feeling new blood in its veins these days.

A recent New York Times' survey is a good example. It is based on six of the most trustworthy barometers—automobile production, steel mill activity, lumber production, electric power output, freight car loadings and cotton forwardings. On March 18 the combined index stood at 60.0. On July 1 it had reached 97.3—a gain of better than 50 per cent.

Here are some reports, mostly based of Department of Commerce findings:

Commodity Prices.—There has been a continued upward movement.

Employment.—Improvement marked and widespread. During June more than 500,000 persons found work in manufacturing and 16 non-manufacturing industries, irrespective of agriculture, railroads and other fields.

Finance.—Until very recently stock prices moved constantly up. The recession that followed is of no particular importance; it is principally the result of profit-taking in a speculators' market.

Construction.—In the first half of June contracts represented the highest activity since fall. Most pronounced gain was in non-residential construction.

Transportation.—Railroad loadings are much better than last year at this time, and improvement has been sustained.

Automobiles.—It is customary for a seasonal decline to appear in June. This year there was an increase instead. In May passenger car output was 56 per cent above the monthly average for the year.

Chemical Industries.—Customarily experience a seasonal drop in June; this year the drop has not occurred, and prices have risen.

Foodstuff.—Activity greater. Payrolls in all groups, with the exception of flour millers, higher. Wholesale food prices advancing.

Lumber.—Continued improvement of the last few months during May and early June, western pine output recently touched the comparatively high level of 35.7 per cent of capacity.

Steel.—There has been continued contraseasonal improvement. In the latter part of June activity reached 50 per cent of capacity, the highest in two years, and has advanced since. A year ago rate was about 16 per cent of capacity.

Textiles.—Production increased sharply in May and continued into June, with consequent gains in both employment totals and payrolls. Prices rising.

Paper.—Sharing in the general industrial gain. In June, for the first time since February, 1930, shipments of newsprint exceeded those of the corresponding month of the preceding year.

Wool.—Rising prices accompany increased output. Prospective wool clip is affected by bad weather in Australia and Western United States.

Silk.—Deliveries increasing since first of the year, now close to normal.

One of the most important factors in the present trend, is the way seasonal influences are being overridden. A hundred industries are showing improvement at a time when a summer decline almost invariably occurs. Another excellent sign is the continued decline in the number of business failures, a field in which some of the blackest marks of depression have been registered the past few years.

The Methodist Church

Rev. John L. Lawson, Pastor.

We have joined the President's National Recovery Act. And our working hours, so far as preaching is concerned, are cut down to nothing per week in Carrizozo. That is we will have no preaching services in Carrizozo during August. Preaching services at Capitan next Sunday morning, and at Angus in the afternoon. Mrs. Waldrip will be in charge of the devotional service at Carrizozo next Sunday morning. Miss Martha Sue Lawson will lead the Epworth League Service at seven thirty in the evening.

Automotive Ads

New York.—Further evidence that automotive industries are thoroughly sold upon the value of newspaper advertising and allocates most of their advertising appropriation to this medium is seen in the latest report of the American Newspaper Publishers Association's Bureau of Advertising.

It states that in 1932 automobile and truck advertisers spent 82.4 of their appropriations for newspaper advertising. Companies marketing gasolines and motor oils spent 74.2 per cent for newspaper display space.
