CHEVROLET

leads the field by the widest margin in its history

CHEVROLET, AMERICA'S NUMBER 1 CAR—47.99% of all low-priced cars sold

NUMBER 2 CAR—26.74%

NUMBER 3 CAR—19.21%

ALL OTHERS 4.06%

*Based on the latest retail registration figures from R. L. Polk & Company (all states for five full months). Since January first Chevrolet has sold in excess of 370,000 passenger cars and trucks.

People have come to expect Chevrolet to lead the world in automobile sales. But this year Chevrolet has done even more than that. According to the latest available figures, Chevrolet alone has sold almost as many cars this year as all the rest of the low-price field combined.

When a car looms above its field like that, there can't be any argument about it. It must be an all-round better buy. And that's exactly what Chevrolet offers you. Fisher bodies, with the new ventilation system and the strongest and quietest body construction of the day—solid steel over a sturdy hardwood frame. A valve-in-head six engine, unapproached for economy . . . Cushion-Balanced to blot out vibration . . . full of snap and vigor—altogether the most efficient engine in the low-price field.

Then there's Syncro-Mesh with Silent Second, the Starterator, Simplified-Free-Wheeling, the Octane Selector, long, parallel-mounted springs—more advancements than we have space to describe. And Chevrolet prices are as low as $445. Don't guess—buy from the leader. Get a car that has been proved sound and dependable by more owners than any other automobile you can buy.

CHEVROLET MOTOR CO., DETROIT, MICH.

Notice To Contractors

Notice is hereby given that sealed proposals will be received until 10:00 A. M., August 22, 1933, at the office of the State Highway Engineer, Capitol Building, Santa Fe, New Mexico, at which time a public place proposals will be publicly opened and read.

The proposed work is briefly described as follows:

N. R. H. 20-A-B and 104-B

This proposal is for the construction of combined National Recovery Highway Projects 20-A-B and 104-B in Lincoln and Chaves Counties, located on U. S. Highway No. 70 between Hondo and Roswell. Project 20-A begins approximately 10 miles from Hondo and Project 104-B ends approximately 14 miles from Roswell. The combined length is approximately 15,920 miles; 20-A-B is 5,394 miles in Lincoln County; 104-B is 10,526 miles - 3,582 miles in Lincoln and 6,944 miles in Chaves County.

The proposed work consists of crushed base course surfacing and woven wire guard fence.

The contractor will be required to start work within 10 days from date of notification of award of contract and to maintain on the job at all times a maximum efficient working force to the satisfaction of the engineer. The engineer may at any time order the contractor to place additional men and equipment on the job.

This contract must be completed in ninety (90) weather working days. Liquidated damages in the amount of one hundred dollars ($100.00) per day will be collected for each weather working day necessary to complete this project after the expiration of the allotted time.

The engineer's estimate of cost will not be published.

Each bid must be on proposal form of the Highway Department and must be accompanied by a certified check in the amount of Two Thousand Eight Hundred Dollars ($2800.00). No cashier's checks or personal checks will be accepted. Plans and specifications may be examined at the office of the State Highway Engineer, Santa Fe, or at the office of the District Engineer W. R. Eccles, Roswell.

Contractors should be familiar with New Mexico laws relating to labor.

Contractors will be required to secure both skilled and unskilled laborers from official lists of local employment managers. The designated local agency for Chaves County is located at Roswell, Lake Frasier in charge. The designated local agency for Lincoln County is located at Carrizozo, G. L. Strauss in charge.

The minimum wage paid to all skilled labor employed on this contract shall be Sixty-five Cents (65c) per hour.

The minimum wage paid to all unskilled labor employed on this contract shall be Fifty Cents (50c) per hour.

Where camps are operated by the contractor, or by persons affiliated with the contractor, no charge of more than Seventy-five Cents (75c) per day for board and lodging, or more than Twenty-five Cents (25c) for each meal consumed, will be allowed. Laborers will not be required to board and lodge at such camps unless they so elect.

The attention of bidders is directed to the special Provisions covering subletting or assigning the contract and to the use of Domestic Materials.

Complete specifications including schedules, proposal forms and contract forms, accompanied by general layout and typical cross-sections may be obtained by listed qualified bidders at the office of the State Highway Engineer upon payment of Two Dollars ($2.00) or same will be mailed (C. O. D.). It is understood that all blueprints become the property of the prospective bidder and there will be no refund for returned prints or proposal forms.

All bidders are required to properly and completely fill out the Contractor's Questionnaire found in the Proposal and to affix signatures as indicated. In addition to the above, all bidders are required to have on file with and approved by the State Highway Engineer, prior to receiving a Proposal Form, a complete Experience Questionnaire and Financial Statement on standard forms which will be furnished upon request. Failure to comply with the above conditions will disqualify a proposal. Any alteration, omission, or condition attached to a proposal will be considered sufficient cause for its rejection. The Highway Commission reserves the right to reject any and all proposals and to waive technicalities.

G. D. MAOY,
State Highway Engineer.

What Home Brew Does

Somebody sent the editor of the Picketown Gazette a few bottles of home brew. The same day he received for publication, a wedding announcement and a notice of an auction sale. Here were the results as printed in the paper: William Smith and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of a public auction at my farm a mile east of a beautiful cluster of rose on her breast and two white calves, before a background of farm implements too numerous to mention in the presence of about 70 guests including two milch cows, six mules and one bob sled, Reverend Jackson tied the nuptial knot with 200 feet of hay-rope and the bride couple left on an extended trip with terms to suit the purchasers. They will be at the home to their friends with one good buggy and a few kitchen utensils after ten months from date of sale to responsible parties and some fifty chickens.—Scandia (Kan.) Journal.

UNTIL WE LEARNED BETTER

Until we learned better, we used to mix wood and steel in our our bodies and wheels.

It was the best way to make bodies—then. But the state of the art has advanced.

Of course, it is more expensive to make an all-steel body than to make a wooden frame and nail steel panels on to it. The better way involves an initial expenditure of several millions of dollars for new dies, which renders a change very costly. Cars, especially large expensive cars which are produced in small volume, cannot afford this, because the dies cost as much for one car as for a million. That alone explains why all-steel bodies are not used in all cars.

But our basic policy from the beginning is to make a good car better, regardless of cost.

For example, when we discarded wood-steel body construction, it was not because we lacked wood. We still have some thousands of acres of the best hard wood in America. Economy would urge us to use up the wood first, and then adopt the better all-steel body. But we decided that quality was more important than expense.

We weighed the reasons, for and against, before we made the change. We could see only one reason for retaining a mixed wood-and-steel body—nailing the metal on, instead of welding an all-steel body into a strong one-piece whole. That reason was, it would be cheaper—for us.

Our reasons for adopting an all-steel body were these: A wood-steel body is not much stronger structurally than its wooden frame. In all American climates, wood construction weakens with age. Every used car lot gives evidence of this. Rain seeps in between joints and the wood decays. A car may have a metal surface, and yet not be of steel construction. Under extreme shock or stress the steel body remains intact—dented perhaps, but not crushed.

Steel does not need wood for strength or protection. Wood is fine for furniture, but not for the high speed vehicles of 1933.

In the Ford body there are no joints to squeak, no seams to crack or leak.

The all-steel body is more expensive—to us, but not to you.

By all odds, then, steel bodies seem preferable.

Wheels also have become all-steel. No one argues that an electrically welded one-piece steel wheel, such as the Ford wheel, needs to be "strengthened" by adding wood to it.

The one-piece all-steel body is the strongest, safest, quietest, most durable body made. That is our only reason for making them.

They Thought Taxes Were High 25 Years Ago

A tax story in two chapters. Chapter 1.—San Francisco Chronicle in its "25 Years Ago Today" column: "The Board of Supervisors today recommended a tax rate of $1.48, which, with the estimated state rate of 47 cents, will make the total rate for the year $1.95."

Chapter 2.—In the same edition of the Chronicle: "The Board of Supervisors is enforcing the strictest economy in its budget this year (1933). Nevertheless the tax rate will be $3.75."

San Francisco isn't in a class by itself. Virtually every community has had the same experience—some a great deal worse. If government keeps loading up with new proposition which continually require more tax funds, how will industry and the private citizen pay the bill ten years hence? Think this over when you vote for schemes that require the raising of public funds through taxation or otherwise.

The Perahera In Kandy

Highly Adorned Indian Royal Elephant.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

KANDY, Ceylon, is donning festive attire for its Perahera processions which have been held annually in the city for centuries.

There is a tradition that the Perahera processions have been held annually since the time when Buddha's Tooth was brought to Ceylon, hidden within the coils of the hair of a Kallango princess, some eight hundred years after the death of the Hindu sage, about 483 B. C.

Despite the later wanderings and at times violent history of the Tooth—it was carried off to Goa, on the Indian mainland, in 1500 by the Portuguese, who maintain that the present relic is only a reproduction—the sacred festival has changed but little in barbaric splendor through the centuries.

Today the Perahera also commemorates the birth of the god Vishnu, who first saw light on the day of the new moon in Esala (July-August).

Another version of the origin of the processions concerns the activities of a certain King Gajabahu, who is credited with having liberated 12,000 of his own people from foreign rule in India; then returned with them to his own domain, bringing in addition 12,000 captives and a number of sacred objects of which his kingdom had been despoiled 300 years previously.

The celebration of this victory took the form of a great parade, which has been observed annually up to the present time.

Ten Days of Fervor.
The processions take place nightly over a period of ten days, beginning with the first evening of the waxing moon in Esala. Each one has a special religious significance, but for the first five days the general public takes no active part.

From the sixth evening on, everybody in town participates, even if only to carry a lamp or urge the dancers to further effort.

The wild and eerie effect depends largely upon the glowing torches and silvery light of a brilliant moon, for upon the "day" Perahera (only one procession takes place in daylight hours) the sunshine gives a garish touch to the glistening costumes. Perhaps the actors themselves feel the lack of spotlights and footlights which the stage of an eastern evening so amply provides.

companions come into view. Then the first of the frantic dancers weaves in and out, with rhythmic step, to the beat of drums and clash of the brazen cymbals.

It requires three-quarters of an hour for the richly caparisoned elephants, the glittering groups of dancers and dignified chiefs in gorgeous robes to pass in front of a rowling stand.

Scenes of Wild Excitement.
Every now and then the procession stops. At such times the music becomes faster and faster. Drummers, beating madly, leap into the air and prouet in a frenzy of excitement. Trumpeters blow shrilly, adding to the ear-splitting din. Tirelessly whirl the dancers, stamping their feet, waving their arms, advancing and retiring, as they spin to the ever-quickening rhythm. Rarely, even in the East, does one see such utter emotional abandon to the accompaniment of such clamor.

The participants in the ceremony cover many miles in their gyrations during the course of the Perahera, and at the end are in a state of complete exhaustion. There are no women dancers.

Feast for Artist's Eye.
To convey some conception of the brilliant colors of this kaleidoscope of swaying elephants and wild dancers requires the services of an artist rather than a writer. A particularly large and specially bedecked elephant, with gold and silver howdah, not disdaining the use of science in its decorations, has a bright electric eye in the center of his forehead! Another in cloth of royal blue, heavily embroidered with silver, carries on his back a king's ransom in jewelry.

There was a time when the king of Kandy took part in the annual processions. Surrounded by his chiefs in resplendent costumes, it is easy to imagine his progress through excited throngs of loyal subjects. Today the king is gone, but the chiefs remain to carry on the tradition. Perhaps some of the chiefs would gladly discontinue the practice of appearing in the processions, but the simple countryman expects to see his lord in all the glory of jewels and cloth of gold. He makes the journey to Kandy only once a year, and on that day wants to see the parades as his father saw them.

Night Ceremony is Weird.
But it is at night that the Perahera takes on all the glamour and weirdness of oriental pageantry.

A beautiful, clear night, with a full moon and myriads of stars overhead, makes a perfect setting for the flowing stream of lights and gyrating human beings. Smoking censers swing from hand to hand and braziers, in which glow husks of burning coconuts, are held aloft by hundreds of torch-bearers to augment the street lamps in casting a fairylike spell over the scintillating costumes and shining brown bodies of the thousands of enthusiastic marchers.

The coconut husks burn with a fitful yellow-red light and emit acrid fumes, too pungent for occidental tastes, but they have illuminated Perahera parades for centuries and still serve that purpose well. It is an incongruous sight, amid such pomp and circumstance, to observe quantities of coconut husks being rushed along in modern jinrikshas to keep the braziers constantly supplied with fuel.

"Water-Cutting" Ceremony.
At the end of the procession come the water-carriers bearing palanquins of sacred water taken the year before from the Mahaweli Ganga, one of Ceylon's largest rivers, which flows through Kandy. This ceremony of the "water-cutting," when temple priests slash the surface with their swords and attendants scoop up the water in golden pitchers, is the closing event of the Perahera.

Behind the palanquins press masses of humanity, which stretch as far as the eye can see, completely filling the streets. Orderly, patient and cheerful is this vast multitude, as it beholds the final ritual.

The SILVER FLUTE

SYNOPSIS
On her eighteenth birthday, Barbara, motherless daughter of Christopher Thorne, artist, receives a birthday ring from Bruce MacLain, young artist friend of the family, but more than friend to Barbara. Bruce tells her a story of a gypsy boy, a little gypsy girl whom he loves, and the song of a silver flute. She knows it is her own love tale. Her father is killed in an accident. Relatives arrive and take charge of things. To her dismay Barbara learns that she and her two brothers and small sister are to be separated. Desperate, the four children plot to run away to Barbara's godfather, "Uncle Stephen" Drake. Stephen Drake, bachelor, forty years old, still handsome, vivid recollections of Barbara's mother, whom he had loved eighteen years before. He had made up his mind to propose that night to Emily Trent, so that his well-ordered household might have a permanent head. But the children arrive and the proposal is interrupted. Stephen feels his heart torn to the small daughter of his early love, but he tells her he must send them all back. Kit is taken ill. Stephen finds himself unable to restrain his lover-like feeling for Emily. The children's relatives appear, highly annoyed and vociferously disapproving. Stephen pacifies them.

"I miss Father so much. And I miss you, too. I'm dreadfully homesick at night. I do get homesick, thinking of you, because 'home' doesn't mean Provincetown or any special place, but just wherever you are. I put myself to sleep every night by telling myself a story. Do you know what the story is, Bruce? It's the one about the silver flute. If I keep very still—I imagine—I can hear it. Is that silly and sentimental? I suppose it is, but I'm that way. If ever the flute stopped playing, I should simply want to die. Don't let it stop playing its one lovely song. . . . I love you, pretty gypsy girl with the roses in your hair. . . . Do you see this blot on the paper? That's a tear. . . . I couldn't help it. I want to see you so much. Wouldn't it be wonderful if Uncle Stephen would keep the children and I could come to New York? I know they'd be safe and happy here. He's so lovely and kind. . . . But I don't suppose he will. His Aunt Edith doesn't like us. She wishes we hadn't come. But it's Uncle Stephen's house, so she doesn't say anything, but I know she'd like to, just the same. I haven't a nice disposition, have I, Bruce? But what can you expect of a 'gypsy girl'? I don't suppose they ever have any manners. . . . There's another blot! I do love you so much. But I haven't told Uncle Stephen. He might think it was ridiculous because I am only eighteen. It's a beautiful secret and no one knows it but you and me, and the ring with the little gold heart. Here's all my love, except what belongs to the children, tied up in paper covered with stars with a huge silver bow. It makes a very large package. Keep it, Bruce, from . . .

"Your Babble, who loves you very much. . . . 'P. S. I asked Uncle Stephen to call me Babble instead of Barbara. He does. He's very accommodating. . . . 'P. S. No. 2. He isn't a 'crusty old bachelor.' He's nice looking. But old. I guess he must be forty. . . . 'P. S. No. 3. Here's a kiss for good-night. Know something? I love you.'"

CHAPTER IX

Kit gradually improved. The school room became the center of the house. There was always a fire in the open grate and cheerful red curtains shut out the dreariness of the late November days. Jamie's electric trains were set up on the floor. Gay played games with Kit or Barbara, curled on a shabby red sofa with comfortable curves and hollows, read aloud to the children. Aunt Edith paid an occasional visit to the room. But the children, with the exception of Gay, were somewhat constrained with her. They knew Aunt Edith wished that they hadn't come.

Stephen went to the schoolroom, first, when he returned home in the evening. He was always greeted with rapturous cries and lusty embraces. He looked forward, each day, to the hour before dinner which he spent with the four Thornes. They told him things which had happened during the day. Kit would have a sketch to show him, perhaps. Jamie would have found a family of kittens in the old sleigh in the stable. Gay would want to dress up for him in a hoop-skirt and flowered bonnet she had discovered in the attic. Barbara would ask his advice about Jamie's cut finger or Kit's appetite which wasn't what it should be. And didn't he think that Gay should learn to spell ten new words every day?

There were arguments for him to settle. "How can the sun come up like thunder?" Gay asked one evening, and Stephen knew they had been reading Kipling. "I suppose it means suddenly," Stephen said when he had thought a little. The children's questions sometimes embarrassed him. They expected him to know everything, "because he was a lawyer."

"Does it make a noise?" Jamie asked. "A loud noise like thunder?" "Not actually, I suppose." "But China isn't right across a bay from Mandalay," Kit said with the air of an experienced traveler who had first hand information about flying fishes and palm trees and temple bells. "But it must be, Kit," Barbara joined the discussion. "It isn't." "It must be or Kipling—"

"Is it, Uncle Stephen?" Stephen sent Jamie down to the library for an atlas, and the argument became a geography lesson conducted by Kit. The four Thornes argued about anything; modern painting, pirates, what made seeds grow when they were planted, why the kangaroo had two short legs in front. They had been encouraged, Stephen thought, whatever the limitations of their training, to exercise their minds.

"Aunt Josephine calls arguing 'talking back,'" Barbara said one evening. "But it isn't, is it, Uncle Stephen?" "Of course it isn't," Stephen said. "Every one has a right to his own opinions." "Even children," Kit said thoughtfully. "Father always liked us to have our own opinions."

Stephen liked it, too. He found the Thornes, as they became rested and more accustomed to their surroundings, increasingly entertaining. He was pleased, and a little flattered as well, because they accepted him on intimate terms. They were never reserved and polite with him as they were with Aunt Edith. "It gave him the feeling of having shed a number of dreary years."

Barbara delighted him especially. She was such a bewildering combination of rather precocious wisdom and childish simplicity. She had no airs or poses, it was impossible to judge her by ordinary standards. Sometimes when she romped with the children, cheeks flushed, brown curls tumbling, she seemed the youngest of them all—and, sometimes, her manner was quaintly grown up and her eyes were too big for her face. But the unhappy times never lasted long. Barbara's spirits were elastic. She was odd and exquisite and unaccountable. She had the gift of laughter.

It was pleasant to do things for her, to see her eyes brighten with pleasure, to hear the ringing notes in her gay young voice. "You'll spoil her, Stephen," Aunt Edith said when he continued to bring her odd little gifts. "She can stand it, I think," Stephen replied. "I want her to be happy while she is here."

And then he forgot Aunt Edith. Barbara was coming downstairs to meet him, looking small and demure and very pretty in a bodiced frock the color of a primrose. "Did you have a hard day at the office?" she asked, smiling up at him with the disturbing dimple at the corner of her mouth. "Come up and put on your slippers and let me light your pipe."

Of course she was only a child, Aunt Edith told herself. But Stephen was certainly bewitched. She thought kindly of Emily as she watched Stephen and Barbara walk upstairs, her gay young laugh drifting back to Aunt Edith. Stephen shouldn't be allowed to make a fool of himself. Not if she could help it.

Stephen took the girls on a shopping expedition. It was Natalie who put the idea into his head. "They're pretty," she said, having tea with Stephen after a visit to the schoolroom. "It would be fun to dress them properly."

"Aren't they properly dressed?" Stephen asked, smiling with pleasure because Natalie thought his guests were attractive. Natalie thought more than that. She thought that the children were good for Stephen, in spite of the fuss Aunt Edith made. He seemed younger and more well human. She and Bob had agreed that Stephen needed to be jolted out of his comfortable rut.

But she did not put her thoughts into words. She stirred her tea with a thin silver spoon and smiled at Stephen through the firelight. "Men don't notice such things, I suppose. But little girls like pretty clothes. Will you let me take them shopping?"

Stephen agreed, in an absent-minded fashion, and presently changed the subject. But he did not forget what Natalie had said. "Barbara," he said that evening, finding her alone in the library after the children had gone to bed, "wouldn't you like to go shopping? I thought you or Gay might need something. Dresses, slippers—something like that." "I'm afraid we can't, Uncle Stephen."

"Why not?" She flushed. "I—we haven't any money." Stephen knew he had blundered. "I'd like to buy them for you," he said. Her lashes lifted. She looked at him gravely. "Oh, no," she said quickly. "Thank you very much. But we—I—I can't let you do that."

"Why not?" "How could we ever pay you back?" "Must you?" Stephen asked, liking her independence, wondering how he could buy her the clothes she needed without hurting her pride. "Of course," she said, as though there could be no question at all about that. "But we are shabby, aren't we?" Her fingers touched the worn frock. "I don't want you to be ashamed of us."

"I'm not," Stephen said quickly, watching the pucker, soft as a wrinkle in silk, between her curving brows.

Current Wit and Humor

INNOCENCE

The enthusiastic angler was relating a fishing story to some of his neighbors. "Yes," he said proudly. "I caught the biggest fish of my career last night. It was a bass, and what a whopper, too. Do you know, fellows, believe it or believe it not, that fish weighed about seven pounds. Some fish, what?" His son, who had remained interested throughout the story, now spoke up. "Yes, and do you know, daddy was so kind, he gave it to my little kitten," he said.

Additional Local

Jim Goodall, an old time resident of the Capitan region, came in from Wilcox, Ariz., to remain here for awhile.

From reliable sources we learn that a "good find" has been located at Jicarilla on the edge of the property owned by the late George Weisbar. There is some talk of putting up a mill on this property later on.

Mr. Ashby Roselle of Jicarilla was in town Wednesday buying supplies.

Mr. W. J. Langston was very much elated this week to learn that Vice-President John N. Garner was to be initiated into the Odd Fellows Lodge.

We have been blessed with some heavy rains the past week. Bridges were washed out and nearly all creeks were out of banks at various times.

Mr. Perry Sears of Capitan was a business visitor here Tuesday.

Miss Maxine Cavanaugh who modeled for Ziegler Bros. in the beauty contest held here July 8 has gone to Roswell to take part in the "Queen of the West" contest to be staged there tonight.

Mr. E. I. Griffin of Adobe (Griffin) postoffice was in Carrizozo Wednesday. He informed us that from now on the Adobe mail is to be routed from Carrizozo instead of by Carthage in Socorro county.

Mrs. L. E. Mendenhall, has been quite ill with a severe case of sore throat.

Mrs. Ola Jones, county superintendent; Miss Kathryn Kelt and Messrs. McQuillen and Duran went to Macho, District No. 45, yesterday in connection with school affairs.

Mrs. Pete Frame and Mrs. Frank Abel spent the past weekend in Tucumcari.

Mrs. Marcial St. John returned Sunday from Las Cruces, after spending two weeks with her parents. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. J. B. Nevarrez and brother, Alfredo, and Miss Cuca Nevarrez.

The Methodist Church
 Rev. John L. Lawson, Pastor.

The Sunday School is holding up remarkably well. A greater number are forming the habit of regular attendance when in town. Only two teachers were absent last Sunday and the total attendance fifty.

The devotional next Sunday morning will be different and unusually interesting.

The League service is at seven-thirty o'clock during the month of August because of no Church service either in the morning or evening.

Last Sunday in the League thirty-nine young people enjoyed the special speaker, Mr. D. U. Groce.

New Rabenton School Building

A new school building is just being completed at Rabenton, which is an object of beauty and one of which the county and the present board of education may well be proud. It is built of adobe, is plastered, has nice hardwood floors, a drinking fountain inside, and fine lighting facilities. The building is entirely surrounded by walks and has cement steps. The setting is artistic—being on an elevation which gives a magnificent view of the surrounding mountains. Mr. Riley McPherson is the contractor and Mr. James Gatewood did the cement work.

Executive Board to Meet

A called meeting of the Executive Board of the Woman's Club will be held Wednesday, Aug. 16th, 3:00 o'clock p. m., at the home of Miss Brickley, for the purpose of planning the year book, and any other business that may come before the club at that time.

Any member of the Club welcome to attend.

Ella E. Brickley

Get Up Nights?

Make This 25c Test

Use this easy bladder physiatodrive out impurities and excessive acids which cause irritation that results in leg pains, backache, burning and getting up nights. BULKETS, the bladder physiat, containing buchu, juniper oil, etc. works on the bladder pleasantly and effectively, similar to castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box (5 grain size) from your druggist. After four days, if not relieved of getting up nights go back and get your money. You are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. Sold by Rolland's Drug Store.

Carrizozo Defeats Alamo

Mgr. Harry Miller took his ball team last Sunday to Alamo and won a hotly contested game by a score of 5 to 1. In the fourth inning Alamo had the leading score, Carrizozo had one man on base when Whittis made a home-run which reversed the score in favor of Carrizozo, in the remaining innings the local boys added three more runs. According to those present, Carrizozo played the best game of the season, not an error was made in the entire game.

White Oaks wins over the East Siders'

White Oaks won over the East Siders, on the local ground last Sunday by a score of 7 to 4. The East Side ball team was handicapped by a few bad decisions of the umpires and the rooting of home fans for the visiting team.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Clouse are here from El Paso spending a few days with Mrs. Nellie Braum.

Trunk Identified

The trunk which was found in Glenn Hunsucker's car after he and deputy sheriff, Tom Jones were killed in a gun fight near Ramon, four weeks ago tomorrow, was positively identified at Lake Arthur last night by W. J. Jones as the one which was stolen from the Santa Fe depot at Lake Arthur on the night of June 8th.

W. J. Jones' trunk had been shipped to him at Lake Arthur from Woodson, Texas and arrived at Lake Arthur on June 8. That night the depot was broken into and the trunk was stolen.

This was the third time that the depot had been robbed since the first of the year. The first time it was robbed was on February 16th and on this day the license plates were stolen from the car of Mr. Hamilton in Lake Arthur and these plates were found on Hunsucker's car. The second time the depot was robbed was April 4th and nothing was missed this time.

Thursday Sheriff Peck went to Carrizozo after the trunk which had been held there and yesterday he took it to Lake Arthur where Mr. Jones positively identified it.

Sheriff Peck says there is no question now but that all three robberies at the Lake Arthur depot were committed by Glenn Hunsucker and his partner, Ed (Perebmouth) Stanton who is now being held on murder charges at Tulla, Texas.—Roswell, Record.

If the enforcement of the volstead act had been prosecuted with one half the energy that is being evinced by the efforts for its repeal it would have been an air tight success.
