Improvement in Business

Corroborating the many indications of widespread improvement in business conditions, M. D. Douglas, general parts and service manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company reports that from the low point in March up to the present, Chevrolet dealers have experienced an increase of over 26 per cent in their service and parts business.

This is the first appreciable and sustained rise since the decline began in 1929 and completely reverses the trend that set in at that time. True, the year 1933 started out with a slight spurt, but this was quickly stopped in March when the bank holiday halted business of all kinds.

The rise in sales up to the time the NRA provisions went into effect was accomplished by an increase in employment quite generally reported from the 9,500 dealers representing the company.

"Our dealers," said Mr. Douglas, "are fully prepared to meet this situation. They are putting forth a special effort in September and October to supply the demands of Chevrolet owners who are flocking into our dealer establishments for service and parts."

"Several factors are prominent in the improved demand for service. There is, of course, the changed psychology of the American people. Then too hundreds of banks have been reopened releasing millions of dollars. Also thousands of men have gone back to work. And last, but not least, is the realization of car owners that it is unsafe and costly to drive cars that are not in good condition. Every service station in the country has been geared up to a higher speed with more man power and adequate parts and service stocks."

Mr. E. M. Brickley and daughter, Ruth, returned home Sunday from a two week's trip to the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago.

High School Notes

We seem to be starting the new school year right, for our enrollment has reached a total of 121, with more enrolling almost daily.

The Post Graduates were the first class to entertain the assembly this year. Last week they presented a varied musical program enjoyed by one and all. The Seniors are next on the list and from all appearances we may expect something equally as good from them.

Because so little interest has been shown in football Mr. Groce decided that this was due to a lack of knowledge of the game. So the other day he brought Mr. Detloff into the assembly to tell us how to be good spectators. It was an interesting and worthwhile talk and all of us should know more about the game now.

Have you seen some of the Freshmen limping about town? If you have you have probably noticed the grips of the upper classmen, too. And little wonder, for the Frosh were initiated in the art of carrying rocks to build our school letter. In a short time we will be able to see a huge "C" shining from Willow Hill.

Don't forget the dance to be given Friday night by the football boys. It bids fair to give everyone in attendance a splendid time.

At the close of August, the land bank had 4,951 loans in New Mexico totaling $9,228,254 55, according to the Wichita, Kansas, bank's officers. They state that the problems of the bank would be much simpler today if they had done as most other lenders on the security of farm mortgages have done—quit making loans and concentrated all efforts on keeping in good order the loans which it has.

Instead of doing that, The Federal Land Bank of Wichita has continued to make all farm loans which meet the requirements of the Federal Farm Loan Act, the rules and regulations of the Farm Credit Administration, and the requirements as to value of the security and ability of the applicants which the bank's 16 years lending experience has shown to be essential to the making of sound farm loans which are the security for federal Land Bank bonds sold to obtain money to lend financial assistance to more farmers.

Vaughn Bank Robbed

Two masked men held up the Citizens State Bank at Vaughn last Tuesday morning and escaped with about $2,000. They put the cashier and his assistant in the vault, took the money and escaped in a Chevrolet roadster. They fled toward Duran and when last seen were headed for Ramon, it was stated.

Mrs. Oscar Snow, daughter, Vena Louise and son Jack, will leave tomorrow for Lubbock, Texas to visit relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben S. Burns went to El Paso today, they expect to return tomorrow.

Miss Riden, County nurse went to Roswell Saturday to attend a regional nurses convention.

The many friends of Mr. Austin Patty who formerly conducted a grocery store in Carrizozo will regret to learn of his death which occurred recently at his home in Oklahoma.

Fair Notes

1. Corona, Capitan and Carrizozo will have on hand boys' and girls' basket ball teams and track teams, Hondo will bring their track team, but will be unable to furnish basket ball team. Tularosa has been invited to participate with their basket ball teams.

2. There will be a horse shoe pitching contest.

3. The usual prize for the best decorated car or truck will be awarded.

4. Prof. C. V. Koogler of Corona will be in charge of the School Field Events.

5. This year the plan of school events will be changed. The Superintendents have agreed that school will not participate against school. Teams will be chosen from all students present and will contest as before, ribbons will be given the winning teams, these teams may consist of students from any or all the schools of the county. The winners in the various events will have their names inscribed on a plaque that will be hung in the Community Hall and will be a permanent record for all time.

6. Iggy Mulcahy of Albuquerque a registered referee will referee the ball games and assist Mr. Koogler in the field.

7. All schools of the county will be officially invited to participate in the athletic and school exhibits.

8. It is the plan of those who are directing affairs in the United States that all people buy the things they can afford and proceed in the usual way in order to assist to break up what we call the "Depression". Chicago has demonstrated what can be done along this line and we believe that Lincoln County will see one of the best if not the best events of its kind we have yet had. All are invited to assist that this may be accomplished.

We are expecting frost every night in the mountains now.

Secondary Road Program

Santa Fe, Sept. 21.—Action to rush approval of New Mexico's secondary road program in order to get work started before cold weather sets in has been taken by Governor Seligman.

The highway department the latter part of August submitted the proposed program to the U. S. bureau of public roads for approval. No word had been received by the middle of September, which led the governor to start action to obtain immediate approval.

"Under the federal regulations," the governor said, "which governs expenditure of the federal funds allotted New Mexico, approximately $1,500,000, or 25 per cent, is allotted for secondary roads."

"Since nearly 60 per cent of the population of the state lives on dirt roads, it is highly important that these secondary highway roads be improved at the earliest possible time. Farmers are dependent on them for outlets to their markets, and dirt roads may mean delay in marketing crops."

The governor stated that every effort would be made to improve as much of the farm to market highways as possible with the funds available. There are over 7,000 miles of such highways in the state and it will be impossible to improve all of his vast system with the $1,500,000 available, but it will be stretched to the utmost and spread through all the counties, the governor stated. Under the program submitted to Washington for approval, some 1,200 miles would be improved.

The governor has been fighting for the last three years to better the secondary road system, and he particularly stressed the need for improving these highways at the last legislative session. It was his desire to improve these farm to market highways which led him to secure authorization for the $2,000,000 debt issue from the last legislature.

Had this law not been subjected to referendum, the bulk of this money would also have gone towards developing the secondary road system, under the tentative plan proposed by the governor.

The Livestock Situation

Los Angeles, Sept. 20, 1933.—Livestock producers are concerned over failure of market prices to show any appreciation in the face of advances which have taken place in many of the commodities they must buy. They feel that increased costs in processing and distributing meats have caused some advances in retail meat prices, but any gains made by the processors have not as yet been reflected back to the grower, although the Processors' Committee emphasizes desire and intention to share with the grower the benefit to be derived under the new order of things. Maybe it is a little early to expect results from that source but the livestock growers are certainly getting restless over the heavy load they are carrying and are eagerly looking in every direction for very much needed and highly necessary relief.

The general average of cattle, lamb and hog prices today is little different than two or three months ago. Both hog and cattle prices are lower than a year ago.

There is a growing impression among stockmen that the only answer to better livestock prices will come when packers discontinue their practice of using direct purchases of livestock in the country as a means of holding down values on central markets. Several producer organizations have urged that the Packers' Code, now being considered by the Secretary of Agriculture, either prohibit country buying or else place country buying on the same basis as stock yards buying. They insist that packers be forced to report their daily purchases of livestock at country points, making this detailed information public just as is done in the case of purchases of livestock on central markets.

It is difficult to see how such reports could be very accurate. Weighing and sorting conditions are vastly different, favoring the buyer in the country. All stock is weighed on exactly the same basis at public markets, under strict Government supervision. It is manifestly impossible for the Government to hire an army of men to similarly supervise trading at a thousand and one country points.

The same producer organizations argue that the actual cost to the packers of sending buyers in the country is a huge cost that must finally be borne by the producers. For example, it is an actual fact that the cost to the packer of buying cattle in the country is approximately ten times as great as buying in central markets. There could be only one reason why packers would prefer to buy in the country when the excessive difference in buying costs is admitted—the being a double measure to buy bargains in the country, and to be enabled to use country purchases to depress open market values.

Whatever is finally worked out in the Processor codes, it is a remove to work out economics in the packing industry and to bring about more satisfactory and profitable conditions for the producer. The country must have faith in the integrity and ability of the Secretary of Agriculture to give his final approval to a code that will be for the best interests of all.

Juan Martinez of the S. P. R. R. freight department went to Roswell Sunday to serve on the Federal Grand Jury.

Southwestern Briefs

Felipe Castillo has been named the Bernalillo, N. M., postmaster. Supt. C. R. McDowell of the Arizona highway patrol has started a drive to correct faulty automobile lights. Arizona has been granted a federal advance of $400,000 for unemployment needs during September and October. The New Mexico State Agricultural College opened its forty-first annual session recently with the registration of new students. The Arizona State Corporation Commission granted Mark Dixon and James Maffeo of Bisbee permission to operate as contract carriers in that city. Under protection of the national guard, about eighty men returned to work in the Gallup-American coal mine which had been closed by a strike.

Lola Bowlin, 18, of Wellington, Kansas, died in a hospital at Socorro, N. M., from injuries suffered in an auto accident on the Socorro-Madalenia highway eight miles west of Socorro. Arthur Strawson of the National Tuberculosis Association recently began a drive to raise funds to finance a statewide health survey to determine the extent of tuberculosis in New Mexico.

Struck by an automobile when she stepped from her husband's car after it ran out of gasoline on the Apache Trail, eight miles east of Mesa, Ariz., Mrs. Lily Merron, 61, of Beaumont, Texas, was injured fatally.

Jack Smith, alias Joseph Kelly, 54-year-old Negro, who, police records show, had served eight terms in three penitentiaries since 1908, was shot and killed by an unidentified assailant during a quarrel in Phoenix.

Thomas Alexander Hamilton, 69, a rough rider with Bucky O'Neill, died in a hospital at Tucson. He was at one time sergeant at arms in the territorial legislature. His name is on the Bucky O'Neill monument in Prescott.

The Arizona State Tax Commission announced receipts from the luxury tax up to and including August 20, amounted to $83,441.52. The sales tax for July, records of the commission showed, amounted to approximately $70,000.

Twenty six Las Vegas, N. M., motorists were stopped on the streets of the city recently, handed tickets and ordered into police court to answer state charges. Two motor patrolmen handed out the tickets to owners of cars with improper lights and without necessary reflectors.

An enrollment of about 400 was made at the New Mexico Military Institute when it opened Sept. 12. The J. Ross Thomas memorial, which is the new post exchange building, has been completed and is ready for the opening of school. It will be formally dedicated October 4.

Saturday afternoons in the future will be devoted by Governor Moeur of Arizona to giving medical examinations to veterans of the World War seeking compensation. The chief executive announced he planned to examine from six to ten veterans each Saturday afternoon without charge.

W. T. Haldeman, farmer living two miles east of Artesia, N. M., brought in the season's first bale of cotton a few days ago. It is believed, also, to be the first in the state. He secured 460 pounds of lint cotton from 3170 pounds of seed cotton. He was offered 12 cents a pound, or a premium of two cents.

A decrease of 11.16 per cent in revenue accruing to the New Mexico state highway department from automobile license plates is shown in a report of the department to Aug. 31. Last year the department received $319,860 as against the sum of $284,162.05 this year, a decrease of $35,697.95.

Dr. H. J. Stroud, Republican state central committee chairman, said he will not "be rushed into naming" the proposed committee of five to select a successor to Frank H. Hitchcock of Tucson as Republican national committee man for Arizona. Hitchcock resigned at the last meeting of the state central committee.

Governor Moeur will confer with Frank A. Thacker of the federal department of agriculture, in connection with a plan to increase agricultural acreage in Arizona in the growing of crops not now raised in this state. The chief executive has suggested that limes, tobacco and coffee might be grown successfully in Arizona's climate.

C. R. McDowell, superintendent of the Arizona state highway patrol, announced patrolmen will carry on a campaign during the next few weeks to remove all livestock from the fenced highways of the state. Several accidents caused recently by livestock turned out on the fenced highways to graze brought the action of the patrol head.

E. B. Barrow of Albuquerque has been named president of the newly organized New Mexico Ice Cream Manufacturers Association.

Plans to seek a loan of $300,000 from the federal farm loan corporation for the protection of lands under the Lyman dam project in Apache county, Arizona, to prevent complete destruction from erosion, were formulated at a meeting of the state loan board. The chief executive said an attempt will be made to obtain the funds to protect approximately 6,000 acres under the project.

Learn Life's Stern Realities

Their Diplomas Tucked Away, College Graduates, More or Less Cheerfully, Turn to Occupations That Few of Them Had Anticipated.

The gilded college graduate of other years has become a misty legend, for blistered and calloused is the way of the "first year out" under our present economic conditions, says the Boston Globe. In just a few short weeks have the tweeds and plus fours faded from the scene as the humble blue denim replaces the former sartorial elegance. Ingenuity and hard work, latent parts of a student's makeup and trotted out only at examination times, are now important features in the every-day routine of life.

Perhaps the most amusing vocation entered into by a recent member of the classroom and study hall is that of a young former football player. He travels all over the country with a touring circus, and every time the professional strong man of the troupe comes forth on the platform and offers "to rattle anybody in the crowd for $20," our young ex-gripper leads the pack on by stepping out in front of the crowd, expanding his youthful but brawny chest and staging an aggressive set-to with the grappler, to the great edification of the circus patrons.

Then there is the young AB degree holder who has all set to make a name for himself in the teaching profession. Teaching positions are extremely scarce these days, so he returned to his home in a small Vermont town. There he noticed that the local undertaker had allowed his hearse driver to go on an extended vacation, so he applied for the job. He got it.

A prominent member of a great national college fraternity tells the following story: "I was coming in from Central America two weeks ago on a liner. One evening as I paced the deck I noticed a greasy, oil-soaked individual, dressed only in an old pair of overalls, who was peering out at the horizon. A feeling of pity came over me as I thought of his hard life in the depths of the ship and so I resolved to speak to him.

"For some time I could not get him to act like a human being, as he answered all my questions with unintelligible grunts. Just as I was turning away in disgust he noticed my old fraternity pin, and, much to my dismay, he gave me the secret grip of the fraternity.

"He disappeared below deck for a few moments, but soon reappeared with a clean shirt and the greasy disguise removed from his face. And then I remembered. . . I saw a powerful youngster clad in mole-skins, a football was under his arm, and he was fighting his way for a winning touchdown through an on-the-opposing eleven. I congratulated him heartily for that run, which had brought a glorious victory for my own alma mater."

One civil engineer cooks the food at a well-known chain restaurant. A fastidious and intellectual member of Tau Beta Pi, honorary scholar of the fraternity, is taking his postgraduate work in engineering by learning the profession from the ground up, so to speak, as he swings a pick and shovel in a road construction gang. The third member of this group, all roommates in college, is using his knowledge of stresses and strains gained in scientific study of bridge building by operating a beauty parlor in one of our suburbs.

Prospective gasoline station robbers should be more than careful in selecting places which look like "good hauls." There are no less than two dozen former "galloping ghosts" of nearby grillions selling gas and oil in the local stations. Almost any one of them could put Ned Brant or Shotgun Sheldon to shame when it comes to tackling, charging, and capturing bandits, should the occasion arise. One of these attendants of the gasoline pump is still remembered at certain small college near Boston as the greatest lineaman developed there in the past decade.

The college boys seem to have changed over rather easily from the old bond-selling business to the new vacuum-cleaner dispensing work. Many a housewife is startled by the vocabulary and sales talk placed before her by these English majors, who are sure to sell a cleaner when they employ a knowledge of psychology and personality motives to work on a poor, innocent housewife who never even heard of Freud.

Playing nursemaid to an insane man is the position one young MA degree holder uses to gain him his bread and butter. Doctors claim that his college training gives him adaptability which makes him extremely proficient in the line of work.

Everywhere the public is subject to contact with this latest element in our economic system. The former chemistry major now mixes the sodas at the local drug store, the Latin major carries the golf sticks for the business man, and the bachelor of music plays the organ in the home-town church.

It is strange to overhear the porters in the railroad station, the check boys in the dance halls and the window washers in the skyscrapers, discussing the Einstein theory, or inflation according to Marxian economy, while they eat their meager lunches out of the old tin lunch pails, but it is not an uncommon occurrence.

Golf course attendants, tennis court keepers, old gold peddlers, dockhands, beer salesmen, and waiters, all have sung for the last time the old ditty "no more teachers, no more books." But how many of them look back with fond memories to the days when they were carefree with only books and pencils, or perhaps a grouchy prof, who really wasn't so bad after all, to worry them!

Brave Women Furnish Inspiration to World

Extraordinary devotion and hardihood was shown by two women on opposite sides of the earth.

At Mountainair, N. M., the gray-haired mother of a son sought for murder rode with the posse in pursuing him. Long hours she rode a horseback with the posse. But the horse which carried her carried not the same armed vengeance which rode beside her. She pleaded that there be no gunplay. She said: "I can make him surrender. I want him to surrender peacefully. I will make every effort to locate him." And so she rode.

In Tripolitania, Italian North Africa, a camel caravan, sent in rescue by an aviator, brought a young widow to Benghazi who had fallen exhausted in the scorching sands of the Libyan desert after carrying her viper-bitten husband on her shoulders forty miles. For two days she remained without food or water by the body and was in a state of exhaustion when the rescuers reached her.

Out of the infinite grist of human happenings for the day the heroic stamina and devotion of these two women lifted them for the moment into the notice of fellow mortals across the world. Inarticulate in their obscure lives, they suddenly spoke to the world. Possibly to one comes back to them. They may live on knowing nothing at all of the inspiration which the brief chronicles of their grim courage may have brought to more people than they have seen in the whole expanse of their lives.—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Finish" Not for Finest of Woods

Oil or Varnish Treatment Needed Only to Bring Out Beauty

The name "Unfinished Furniture" is given to articles requiring stain, paint, and varnish, or oil to complete their finish. White wood, or some other inexpensive variety, is used for the wood itself. Furniture of fine wood has its own style of finishing. It does not come under this cataloging of unfinished furniture. The reason for this is that the fine wood is sufficiently attractive as it is, for it to be used, if so desired, without any finish at all, although this is unwise. This is assuming that the articles are well made. They are good looking even in this state, without the addition of extraneous agents named.

The furniture called "Unfinished" is easily recognized as unfinished by the very appearance of the wood which, at a glance, can be seen to require something more done to it, to make it suitable to go with household furnishings in homes. Pieces can serve utility purposes, but not decorative ones until they are finished.

Furniture of handsome woods is treated with oil or varnish as finishing coats to bring out the beauty of the graining, and to preserve the wood itself. The oil and varnish penetrate the wood fibers and infinitesimal crevices, darkening the latter and thus accenting the beauty of the curves and lines characteristic of whatever wood is thus treated.

Woods of lesser beauty of graining, those which have flat surface tones, lack the handsome character of finely grained woods, and therefore, by this absence, call for decoration. Such woods are generally painted. The coating of two or three applications of paint helps to make them impervious to dents to which the softer woods are liable, and which mar the looks. The hard paint surface, therefore, supplies needed protection as well as ornament to woods which fall to have inherent beauty of color and graining.

To makers of fine furniture, and to those who know woods, there is something akin to irritation caused by the idea of painting handsome woods. There is displayed an ignorance of material which is exasperating. This does not mean that painted furniture is not good. But it is a type distinct in itself, in which the paint lends beauty to a lesser framework.

It is a mistake, however, when home decorators think to add smartness to fine old wood by coating it with paint. The fine wood should be scraped of its old finish and restored to beauty by a new treatment of the wood to bring back the original graining and color. The wood is given its own type of preservation with oil treatment, and a dull or bright finish with varnish of the correct sort. Dull finish is preferable for handsome wood.

Just a Word for Dad He may wear last year's straw hat, his fingernails may need manicuring, his vest may hang a little loose and his pants may sag at the knees; his face may show signs of a second day's growth, but don't you call him "The Old Man." He's your father.

For years he has been rushing around to get things together. Never once has he failed to do the right thing by you. He thinks you are the greatest boy on earth, bar none, even though you plaster your hair back, wear smart clothes, smoke cigarettes and fall to bring home a cent. He is the man who won the love and life partnership of the greatest woman on earth, your mother. He is "some man," and not the "old man." If you win as good a wife as he did, you will have to go some.—The Art of Living Successfully.

HE'D LOST MILLIONS

The girl was very rich, and he was just a poor young man. She liked him, but that was all, and he was well aware of the fact. One evening he grew somewhat tender and, at last he said: "You are rich, aren't you, Ethel?" "Yes, Dick, Dad says I'm worth two million dollars, if things turn out as it now looks." "Will you marry me, Ethel?" he asked. "Oh, no, Dick, I couldn't do that," she replied. "I knew you wouldn't." "Then why did you ask me?" "I just wanted to be able to say that I had lost two million dollars."

But Just Where?

The class had been instructed to write an essay on winter. Before they began, the teacher gave them a few hints, and among other things he suggested that they might introduce a short paragraph on migration. One child's attempt read as follows. "In winter it is very cold. Many old people die in winter and many birds also go to a warmer climate."

Saving Time

Father—Why were you chasing that Jones boy? Son—To lick him! He got me mad. Father—Why didn't you count 20 as I told you? Son—I did, while I was chasing him!—Brooklyn Eagle.

Right, Anyway

Some gulls were following a steamer, and an Irishman said to his neighbor: "Sure, an' they're a nice flock of pigeons." "They're not pigeons," said his neighbor; "they're gulls." "Well," said the Irishman, "gulls or boys, they're a nice flock of pigeons."—London Tit-Bits.

IN THE SAME CLASS

Prospect—An auto is much like a wife. Salesman—Why? Prospect—Because when either starts giving you trouble there's no end to it.

Reform Effort

"She married him to reform him," said Miss Cayenne. "Did she succeed?" "Not precisely. But she added considerably to his material for repentance."

WORTH TRYING

The drama was a thrilling one, but a talkative young man had seen it before. In an audible voice he announced what was coming next and described how funny it would be when it did come. He had a pretty girl with him, and he was trying to amuse her.

At length he said: "Did you ever try listening to a play with your eyes shut? You've no idea how queer it seems."

A middle-aged man sat just in front. He twisted himself in his seat and glared.

"Young man," he said, "did you ever try listening to a play with your mouth shut?"

In Luck's Way

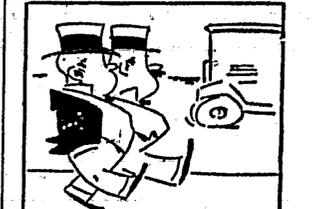

"Look here," stormed Brown to the estate agent, "about that riverside bungalow you sold me."

"Anything wrong, sir?" asked the agent.

"Wrong! Wrong!" exclaimed Brown. "The other morning we woke up and found that the beastly place had floated two miles down the river."

"H'm," said the agent blandly enough, "that's a good stroke of luck. The taxes are much lower down there."

NOT HOPING FOR MUCH

"Ever expect to get on easy street?" "Maybe as a sweeper or something."

No Cure

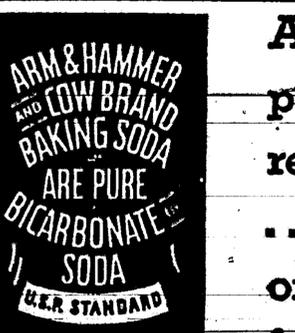

"So you are just back from a tour round the Azores," said Hayes. "I understand the voyage has cured you of insomnia?" "Completely," said the cruiser. "Wonderful!" exclaimed Hayes. "It must be a great relief." The cruiser nodded agreement. "Relief! I should just say it was," he replied. "Why, nowadays I lie awake half the night thinking how I used to suffer from it."

Prudence

"Sometimes it is wise to say nothing." "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "It may enable one to avoid betraying the fact that one has nothing to say."

Will I Get A Position?

The very best evidence we can offer a prospective student that positions are being filled by our Employment department is the list below, giving the names and home addresses, as well as the firms with whom they are working. We have placed these young people since the MRA has been getting in its effective work. Should conditions continue to improve there will be other positions open:

Woman's Club

The first meeting of the Woman's Club for the coming year, took place at the home of Mrs. Roy Shafer. A large crowd was present and all members appeared eager to get into harness after the summer months of idleness.

Our new president, Miss Ella Brickley, gave a short address, promising to fill the chair to the best of her ability and expressing the hope that all would continue to work together harmoniously.

After finishing the usual routine attention was called to the State Federation convention to be held in Albuquerque October 12-13, 14. Meses. Fred Boughner and Geo. Titworth were elected delegates; Mesdames T. A. Spencer and Paul Mayer, alternates.

Mrs. Paul Mayer, having in charge the program, presented it in a unique way. Mrs. R. E. Lemon entered, holding an old photograph album and while Mrs. T. E. Kelley played, sang "Memories"; then seating herself was joined by Mrs. Paul Mayer, while they chatted together and turned the leaves, they would discover pictures of club presidents in their youthful days. As each was recognized and the person discussed, the audience was given a glimpse of it by a substituting young lady standing within a frame.

Next, passing in review, came the presidents as we know them today. The club was interested in Mrs. McDonald's lovely gown. The same she wore at the inaugural ball when Mr. McDonald was elected governor of N. Mex.

When Mrs. Ulrich's name was called, (our only lost president) an empty frame was shown while Mrs. T. E. Kelley softly played the "Rosary."

Mrs. Stadtman was the absent president, and here again a vacant frame was seen, but this time, the tune from the piano by Mrs. Kelley, "We'll be Loving you Always," rang out joyously.

With Mrs. Snow at the piano, Mrs. Don English, in her usual charming manner, sang a characteristic darkey melody, "Water Boy."

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Roy Shafer, and her assistant hostesses, Mesdames, Yonnie Lovelace, Snyder, Glassmire, Misses Thelma White and Ella Brickley.

Chuck Wagon Dinner

The Missionary Society chuck wagon dinner held at the ball park last Saturday was a very informal and enjoyable occasion. Everybody seemed to enjoy the novelty of eating from a chuck wagon. People from Capitan, Oscura and White Oaks were present. The Society realized about $39.

THE OPEN ROAD

THE call of the open road lures many a vacationist. Well-marked, smooth highways throughout the nation carry millions of people every summer to historic spots or other places of interest, or perhaps to the seashore, mountains or elsewhere.

Although it would seem that sufficient advice and warning had already been given on how to avoid automobile accidents, yet the automobile is responsible for about 100,000 accidental deaths every year. A disastrous crash is one of the quickest ways to bring a happy holiday to a tragic conclusion.

Drive carefully always. Slow down at all crossings, and stop unless you can see a long way both right and left. Although you may think you have the right of way, the other fellow might not agree. So don't take chances. Stop at all railroad crossings and drive cautiously in congested areas, particularly where children may be playing in the street. You may lose a few seconds of time, but you may save a life.

Have your car checked over by a competent mechanic before starting a trip. Brakes, steering gear, headlights and tires should be in perfect condition.

If you drink alcoholic beverages, let someone who does not drink drive the car.

Don't drive if you enjoy taking chances. More than your own life and safety depends on who is at the wheel. Don't try to pass a line of cars unless the road is clear a long way ahead, ample warning has been given, and you can pass while driving cautiously. Don't try to pass any car if you have to rush to make it. The mentality and physical condition of the driver are equally as important as the condition of the car, if not more so. Intelligence and quick perception and reaction are essential. People with heart disease or other serious ailments make better passengers than drivers.

Don't drive if you are tired. Many accidents occur from drivers dropping asleep at the wheel and waking up in the hospital.

If you are driving across country, don't try to drive too far each day. The tendency is to increase speed and to take greater risks the longer a person has been driving. Don't wait until the gasoline tank is almost empty before stopping for rest and relaxation. If more than one person in the car can drive, change places often.

Make cross-country driving a vacation, not a contest to see how far you can drive each day or how quickly you can get from one place to the next.

This is the fourth of a series of 12 articles on Vacations and Health. The fifth, on Food, Milk and Water, will answer the questions:

1. What diet is best in hot weather? 2. How can you be sure of drinking only pure milk and water? 3. What are common causes of "acute indigestion"?

"A mutual discovery." He smiled and pressed her hand.

They had no opportunity for further talk. The front door opened. There were sounds of footsteps in the hall and shouts for "Uncle Stephen." The children and Barbara burst into the room, laughing, eyes bright, their cheeks slipped pink by the cold. The quiet was broken by gay excited voices.

"The elephant had a baby, Uncle Stephen! Its name is Annabelle."

"Aren't the monkeys lovely? They look like weakened old men."

"Will a snake's back break, Uncle Stephen, if you make it walk in a straight line? Kit says—"

"What makes bears smell so dreadfully? Don't they ever take baths?"

"Aren't zebras silly looking? Like mules all painted with stripes?"

Stephen was lovely with the children, Natalie thought, watching them surround him like a swarm of chirping locusts. Did she imagine that his eyes turned more frequently to Barbara, sitting demurely amused in the big chair? Stephen was right. She was a child. A lovely child. Stephen was more than twice her age. She felt, all at once, close to Stephen, afraid for him. There was something in his eyes. She didn't want him to be hurt.

"Aunt Edith started something," she said to Bob as they drove home after dinner. "She told Stephen that he is in love with Barbara."

"Is he?"

"I'm not quite sure." Her voice was troubled. "Yes," she added, "I think he is."

"Don't blame him. So am I. She is a sweet kid, Nat."

"But Stephen is twice her age."

"Worried about it?"

"A little worried, Bob. Aunt Edith says Stephen failed to do his obvious duty."

"Well! Too much obvious duty has wrecked many a good man's life. . . . They're nice kids, Nat."

"Yes," she agreed. "I hope Stephen isn't in love with Barbara, though."

The postman, one morning, brought a note to Stephen from Emily—

"Dear Stephen,

"I have decided to take your advice. We are packing up and will leave for Virginia very soon. Will you come to see us before we go? Father will be inconsolable if he does not have an opportunity to bid you good-by."

"How are the children? I have heard that you are to keep them. They are lucky kiddies."

"Always your friend,

EMILY."

Stephen meant to call at the apartment on the outer fringe of Rittenhouse square. But there were many things to claim his attention besides the work at the office. He interviewed decorators. He carried in his pockets samples of chints and wall paper, which fell out at unexpected moments. He shopped with Gay and Barbara. It was amusing. It consumed a great deal of time.

And then there were the relatives. He dictated to Miss Finch soothing letters to Uncle Herbert and Aunt Lola and Cousin Julia in Maine. He felt that, on the whole, they were relieved.

Aunt Lola wrote plaintive letters to Gay. But Gay liked being at Uncle Stephen's. Aunt Lola's letters made no impression.

Then, too, there was Aunt Edith. She let him feel daily the weight of her disapproval. If it hadn't been for Barbara, Stephen thought, she would have accepted the situation. She was fond of the children, especially fond of Gay. But she resented Barbara. She told him that she planned to wait her friend Fanny Poole in California as soon as arrangements could be made.

Stephen felt guilty about Aunt Edith. He brought her gifts. He tried to interest her in his plans for the children. Aunt Edith did not relent.

So the busy days passed and Stephen did not visit the apartment on the outer fringe of Rittenhouse square. Then, one day, a branch of white lilacs in a florist's window reminded him of Emily. He watched the clerk pack it into a box with layers of paper. He walked out of the shop and hailed a cab.

But the apartment was vacant. A sign "To Let" card was tucked in the frame of one of the dusty windows.

That evening when Miss Finch reached her sister's home she carried under her arm a slim white florist's box.

CHAPTER XII

"Thornhedge,
"February 15th.

"Darling Bruce,

"It's so odd to think we are going to stay. I can't make it seem real at all. But we are. Isn't Uncle Stephen lovely? Gay and Jamie are going to school. Gay goes to Miss Carey's and Jamie to a boys' school, sort of in the country not far from here. Thomas takes them every morning and goes for them in the afternoon."

"Kit is going to art school in the city and he's so happy that it makes me want to cry. I hope Mother knows about us. And Father, too. We can't be grateful enough to Uncle Stephen if we all live for a hundred years and try as hard as we can."

"I loved your Valentine. Where did you ever find such a quaint one with lace paper and rosebuds and that cunning silver arrow? But I must make a confession. I slept with it under my pillow last night and now it's all crumpled. Will you forgive me? It was because I wanted so much to see you."

"Your Babbie,
"who loves you very much."

"Thornhedge,
"February 20th.

"Bruce, darling,

"No, I haven't told Uncle Stephen about us yet. It wouldn't be considerate. He's had so many things to bother him. His Aunt Edith has gone to California with three trunks and Bessie her maid and I'm sure it was because of us, though Uncle Stephen pretends it wasn't."

"I must say it's a relief to have her gone. She didn't like me very well. Or any of us, except Gay. But it's hard for Uncle Stephen, because she is his aunt and she has lived here ever since his father and mother died. Now I sit at the head of the table and pour Uncle Stephen's coffee and remind the children of their manners and ring the bell for Henry. I do my hair up now. I simply couldn't sit at the head of Uncle Stephen's table with it all tumbling around my shoulders."

"And something else has happened to bother Uncle Stephen. Miss Trent and her father have gone to Virginia to live. Uncle Stephen isn't going to marry her, after all, I guess, and that's because of us, too. If you don't care for children (and I'm sure Miss Trent doesn't) and they come anyway, you 'fold your tents like the Arabs and silently steal away.' That's what Miss Emily and her father did. I think it bothered Uncle Stephen. He never acted very 'lowerish' to Miss Emily but I guess older people don't and he's probably 'grieving in silence,' so that we won't feel bad."

"So you see, darling, I can't tell him about us just yet. He depends on me for everything about the children. It wouldn't be fair to run away and leave him, especially since it's my fault that we're here and his Aunt Edith has gone to California and he has lost his love."

"When having a family isn't so new and strange and his Aunt Edith comes home or he finds somebody else to marry who likes children, I'll tell him. You do understand, don't you, darling? You do know that I love you."

"BABBIIE."

"Thornhedge,
"March 1st.

"Dear Bruce,

"Please don't consider writing to me a duty. I know that you are busy and can't be expected to answer three letters in a row."

"Gay is to be 'Celia,' own cousin to Rosalind in 'As You Like It' which the girls at Miss Carey's are going to present in May. She's so excited about it that she can't sleep at night. Uncle Stephen took Gay and me to the theater last night to see 'Hamlet.' He was a very gloomy person, wasn't he? No wonder Ophelia went crazy. He's going to take us to see 'As You Like It' Saturday afternoon so Gay can get some pointers."

"I hope you are well. Don't work too hard."

"Your friend,
"BARBARA THORNE."

"Atlantic City,
"March 3rd.

"Darling Bruce,

"Can you ever forgive me for writing such a snippy letter? But I hadn't heard from you for more than a week and I was worried and hurt and dreadfully unhappy. You imagine all sorts of things when you wait for letters which never come and, besides, I haven't a nice disposition."

"You should have had measles long ago. They aren't one of the pleasures to be reserved for old age. And to think of them putting you in the children's ward at the hospital!"

"I felt so mean when your letter came. I wanted to fly to New York and sit by your bed and feed you things with a spoon. But we were just leaving for Atlantic City and so I couldn't very well. Uncle Stephen had to come on business and he brought Gay and me because Gay was so disappointed about missing 'As You Like It' and Uncle Stephen thought I looked sort of pale. That was because I'd been worrying about you. But I didn't tell him that. I said it was 'growing pains' because, you know, Bruce, I am growing up. I can feel it.

GIVE UP CAREER FOR FARM LIFE

"If I only had a place somewhere in the country just big enough for a cow, a couple of chickens and a row of potatoes, I wouldn't stay in New York five minutes." How many girls who came career-hunting to New York have you heard say that since the depression started?

Some of them are still hankering. A lot of them have gone right back to the farm. And it looks as though they're going to stay there.

Phil Stong, literary reporter of the lives and ways of country folk, has watched the phenomenon, and observes that not one of these feminine travelers away from sky-cramped city streets has come back, in his experience, or evinced the slightest desire to return.

Practically all the Greenwich Villagers he used to know, Mr. Stong says, have moved to Connecticut, and they're all getting an awful kick out of their cows and chickens. In western cities citified college girls who a few years ago couldn't bear the sight of a haystack are going back to live with the old folks and liking it. Not many have come back to his own home town in Iowa. But that, he says, is because not many girls leave it.

"The point is," Mr. Stong said as he sat in his book-lined apartment overlooking a city street, "when people are in trouble they want to get back to the earth as children cry for their mothers in the dark. And I believe both women and men are happier living in the country."

"As a matter of fact," continued the author, "I think the woman working on a farm stands a better chance for happiness than her city slater."

"For one thing, farmers marry early—long before thirty, when definite personalities are set. And early marriages are more likely to be successful."

"Then, too, the wife is a very important personage. The farm couldn't run without her. She has a pleasant sense of power. And she has a definite, regular series of daily functions. Preparing meals (cooking, if there's no hired girl), candling eggs, making butter, preserving, are all her job. Besides, she has to budget the family expenses and tell Johnny which day he has to help father pitch-hay—and when to water the pigs."—New York World-Telegram.

Last Sunday's Game

(By M. C. St.)

Carrizozo chalked up an additional victory on the home grounds, defeating Alamogordo by a score of 20 to 3. Alamogordo sported an imported battery, and while their pitching staff was the best to be had, our boys however, had no difficulty in connecting with the sphere, batted the pill all over the lot and the longer the game lasted the wider the margin grew.

Socorro turned the tables on our boys by defeating them by a score of 8 to 7. Carrizozo kept well in the lead, but a last minute hitting spree on the part of Socorro proved disastrous to the home team.
