Governor makes brief Statement

Santa Fe, N. M.

The governor of New Mexico makes the following brief statement regarding the work of the special session of the legislature:

"I have been requested to make some comment concerning the work of the Special Session of the Eleventh Legislature. A complete survey, of course, cannot be made at this time as the session has not terminated, but an agreement has been reached by both Houses for adjournment not later than noon Thursday, April 26th. Adjournment at that time will result in a fifteen day session. It seems worthy of comment that no other legislature has passed as many bills, necessary bills, in a like period of time, nor has any other had such momentous problems to cope with.

"The major problem, of course, has been to provide revenue to keep open and properly maintain our schools. We of New Mexico are too proud of our schools and value too highly the future welfare of our boys and girls, value them, in fact, beyond price to permit a backward educational step, even though we may be sorely pressed financially.

"The legislature has tackled this problem of proper school maintenance with all seriousness and, despite a strong lobby and organized opposition, a good law, which will, without question, redound to the credit of the legislature and state, has been enacted. This law undoubtedly will be criticized severely, but I take this occasion to warn the people of the State of New Mexico that back of such criticism will be only personal motives, political or otherwise. Such criticism can be considered as nothing more nor less than an indirect attack on our schools, something that none of us, I know, will countenance.

"The history of this revenue producing bill is, indeed, interesting. Some three months ago those representing the various taxpayers, organizations of the state, realizing that some such measure was necessary, came to the Governor's office and volunteered in the shaping of a proper measure to keep our schools open, if such services would be acceptable. They were informed that any conscientious, intelligent service so rendered to the people of the state would be greatly appreciated.

"The work was begun with those

Senate Bill Number 32, passed by the Special Session of the Legislature, cancels interest on 1933 taxes if paid, in full, on or before June 15th., 1934. Under certain conditions it cancels the interest on 1932 and prior taxes if paid, in full, on or before October 1st., 1934.

representing the schools, the taxpayers and the State Tax Commission, the recognized taxing authority of the state, entering into the task with all seriousness and a full sense of cooperation. The laws of all the states were assembled and studied, and a proposed measure incorporating the best parts of those laws was drafted. This was studied carefully and then redrafted. From still further study legal questions arose, and Judge J. O. Seth and W. A. Kelcher, able attorneys, were called to redraft the measure to meet possible legal objections. To all of those men who labored so faithfully upon this measure without any remuneration other than a consciousness of a public service rendered, the sincere thanks and gratitude of the citizenship of the state is extended through this office.

"I shall not attempt to discuss in detail this bill, only to say that it embodies what were believed to be the best features of similar laws in many other states. It is not in the strictest sense purely a sales tax, but includes some of the best features of the sales tax and the gross income tax. One outstanding beneficial feature of the measure is that all taxes collected under it go directly to the schools. Its the first time in the history of New Mexico when every individual in the state will have what can be properly termed a direct part in the maintenance of our schools.

This law has two excellent features combined, when considered from the standpoint of equalization of the tax burden; the person who makes the most, and who naturally is the person who spends the most, will pay the greater part of this tax, while the man who makes the least and spends the least will pay the proportionately smaller amount. On incomes of sufficient size so that this rule does not apply strictly, there is levied a net income tax which accomplishes the further requirement of equalization of the tax burden. I cannot see how any fair-minded person, unless he be prompted by selfish motives, can object to this principle.

I am glad to report that the House has just passed this revenue measure and that it will be signed by me without delay. This one bill alone enacted into law assures the people of New Mexico that they will have good schools, properly maintained, during the next school year in every county in the state.

This is strictly an emergency matter to operate for one school year and is the best law possible at this time. If defects show up, the same can be corrected at the regular session next January. (Signed) A. W. Hockenbuhl, Governor.

THE YELLOW SHADOW

The Corona Audience was entertained Saturday Night, April 21st with the senior Class Play, "The Yellow Shadow." This was a mystery play, well produced showing some real amateur talent. Miss Alise Long sponsor of the Senior Class coached the play.

Mildred had come to the lonely Estate to take possession of the house that had been bequeathed her. There she met her adventurous brother and also finds a strong couple in possession of the house, a mysterious Chinaman sneaking around the premises and hick sheriff who came to represent the law, by cracky! having taken a correspondence school course in being a "detectative." But she found some people who wanted to help her, too, and with their aid the mystery was at last solved. Not however, until the audience had a wild and wonderful evening in which big laughs chased the sprial thrills.

The play was followed by a dance which was also, very successful.

On Tuesday evening, April 24, the Junior class of Corona High School, gave a banquet with the Senior class and school officials as guests.

A delightful Indian theme was very successfully carried out. The Home Economics dining room was decorated with Navajo pottery, Indian blankets, and various other Indian motifs. The menu was also unique with its Indian names and foods. The programs were tepees, the nut cups canoes, and the napkins were white with Indian heads in the corners. A very pretty scene was cleverly arranged in the widow. An everlasting fountain flowed into a lake on which a small canoe floated. A tiny yellow moon shone down on the trees and rocks which completed the scene.

Beautiful bouquets of white sweet peas and red carnations in pottery were used for centerpieces. The flowers were later made into corsages and worn at the dance that followed the banquet.

Homer Lewis was toast master. Nice talks were given by members of the faculty and school board. Toasts were given by each member of the Senior and Junior classes. A welcome address was given by Lovie Anderson, the Junior class president.

The response to the welcome address was given by Clive Jolly, Senior class president. The Key to Success was presented by Melvin Brown, and accepted by Lovie Anderson. Ruthie Jenkins read the Senior class will. A prophecy for the Senior class was given by Gene Messer.

Large Attendance At White Sands

Those who attended the White Sands party from Carrizozo report one of the most pleasant days they have ever spent. Speakers were prominent men and old-timers: Judge A. B. Fall, Judge Medier, Ex-Gov Geo. Curry, Ex-Gov R. C. Dillon and many others. The Argie band from Las Cruces furnished the music, and their brilliant uniforms made a striking picture against the snow white sand. A panoramic view of the picnic was taken, with the Sands as a background. All the old-timers, with Judge Fall in the center, were given prominent places in the picture.

Those who went from here were: Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Blaney, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Kelley, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Huppertz, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Snow and children, Mrs. Brazel, Mr. G. T. McQuillen, Mrs. Chas. Mr. P. M. Johnson who visited the White Sands for the first time in 1885—forty-nine years ago, had the pleasure of attending the big party last Sunday. Mr. Johnson was accompanied by Mr. Ed Harris, who is also an "old timer" here. Mr. Harris has been here since 1893.

From Oscura, Mr. and Mrs. Keut, Mrs. Smith, Jack Brazel and sister, Mrs. Mack Brazel. The Alamogordo Chamber of Commerce furnished free coffee and lemonade for the crowd. A moonlight concert was given by the Alamogordo High School band.

Mrs. W. W. Ashley of Pueblo, Colo., is visiting at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Mendenhall.

Vehicle Department Expenses Decreased

Santa Fe, April 28th Cost of operating the motor vehicle department of the state comptroller's office has decreased from $94,831 for 1929-30 to an estimated $54,645 for 1933-34, despite an increase in the amount of business done.

During the last year of the Republican administration, Rupert Asplund, director of the state taxpayers association, served also as state comptroller. He effected some economies, but expenses of the department still remained comparatively high. During his term a total of 69,848 license plates were sold.

In 1932-33, the first year that Juan Vigil, present comptroller served, cost of operating the dept. dropped to $62,853, although a total of 79,048 plates were sold. While cost of the department for the present license year is an estimate, it is not believed the total expenses will exceed the figure given.

The reduction in operating costs has been brought about by practice of rigid economy.

Though this economy program the department has succeeded in establishing itself on a strictly cash basis for the first time in its history.

DAVY CROCKETT Still "GOES AHEAD"

The Alamo

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

FULL century has passed since he, a typical "rough-and-ready" frontiersman, was being lionized in half a dozen eastern cities as the most-talked-of American of his day; it has been 98 years since he died magnificently, in a manner that was a fitting climax to his turbulent career; close upon his moccasined heels as he flashes across the page of history come pressing a whole line of "Wild West" heroes whose renown might easily have eclipsed his; yet, in this year 1934 the name and fame of Davy Crockett still "goes ahead."

Down in Texas they are getting ready to celebrate, two years hence, the centennial of Texas independence from Mexico and during that celebration the dominant figure in memory will be, of course, Sam Houston, the George Washington of the Revolution of 1830 and the first president of the Lone Star republic. But there will also be occasion to "Remember the Alamo!" and to recall again the names of its heroic defenders—Bowles and Bonham and Travis and, most of all, Davy Crockett.

For in the minds of most Americans Davy Crockett is the apotheosis of the Alamo and he is second only to Sam Houston as the most memorable figure in the fight by Texas for freedom from Mexico. Why?

Perhaps the best explanation can be found in the book "Davy Crockett" by Constance Rourke, published recently by Harcourt, Brace and company. In the foreword to this volume, the author says:

"When a country is young it discovers its heroes, and these are not always leaders in battle. They may only be men who have had the adventures others long for. They may show admired traits, or strange ones. They may talk or laugh in a fashion which others enjoy. Always stories are told about them.

"Davy Crockett knew wild life as few have known it, and he became the most noted hunter of his time. Even when he was an obscure backwoodsman—emphatic tales and high talk could be heard about him, and his own humor had fame among the people of his region. When he emerged from the wilderness and appeared in the East as congressman, he suddenly seemed to the popular imagination all that had been known or guessed about life in the western woods or on the western waters. There was truth in this; even in the most soaring of the many tall tales about Crockett there was truth.

"About no single American figure have so many legends clustered. After Crockett's death whole cycles of legendary tales were told about him that form a rich outflowing of the American imagination.

In those words is a definite clue to the reason why the figure of Davy Crockett is still green in the memory of his fellow-Americans though a hundred years have passed since he stopped living and laughing his way into the hearts of a people. The fact that he "had adventures others long for" is not enough to guarantee his immortality. Daniel Boone had those adventures. He also could "show admired traits." And these, taken together, were enough to make him the outstanding symbol of pioneer life, of the American frontier. But Davy Crockett had something else which Boone had not—that gift of humor which gave him "fame among the people of his region"—a fame that soon spread to other regions as well. He was both a teller of "tall tales" and an actor in them. So the legends began to cluster about his name, for frontier America loved its "whoppers." And, for that matter, because this so-called "modern" America is still so near to the frontier phase of its national life, it still loves them.

Perhaps another reason why this fact-and-fiction hero, Davy Crockett, is still such a vivid figure in our national consciousness is because of two words which we associate with him: "Go ahead!" We Americans love mottoes, slogans, catchwords and all such things. Almost all of our popular heroes have tagged to them some phrase that has become historic. Repeat the words of that phrase and instantly the figure of the man who uttered them rises in the mind of the hearer.

So Davy Crockett, unconsciously perhaps, was guaranteeing his immortality when he adopted as his motto "Be always sure you're right, then go ahead." It was a particularly apt motto for his time. In Crockett's day America, and particularly the American frontiersman, was "going ahead." He had but recently surged over the barrier of the Alleghenies. He was engaged in the conquest of the great interior basin of North America, the Mississippi valley. He was already gazing longingly across the Father of Waters toward the western plains and another huge barrier, the Rockies. Lewis and Clark had proved that that barrier could be scaled, so nothing less than the Pacific ocean was his ultimate goal.

And he was sure of his rightness in doing all this. The mere fact that the original inhabitants of all this country, the Indian, opposed him wasn't enough to change that belief. From that period of our history dates our "Indian policy" of taking the red man's land by any means, fair or foul. For this was the beginning of an era of treaties made only to be broken and of "Indian wars" which seem always to have "broken out" just after the white man had discovered another bit of particularly desirable country.

If Davy's motto was an apt one for his times, it seems to be equally so for the America of today, even though we may have lost sight of its true meaning. For a belief, amounting almost to a certainty, in the rightness of our country in all things seems to be an essential part of the American credo. We like to think that we are the greatest nation on earth, that we have "gone ahead" of every other nation. We have translated Davy's "go ahead" into "get ahead" and that we have done—sometimes as ruthlessly as did the frontiersmen of his time. But whether we have interpreted his motto wrongly or rightly, the fact that he gave it to us and that we associate the admonition in it with his name is perhaps another reason why he is so well remembered.

When did Crockett first use this motto? Miss Rourke in her book dates it from shortly after the close of the War of 1812. Crockett, home from service under Jackson against the Creeks, had settled on new land near Shoal creek in western Tennessee. It was wild-country with dangerous characters, both red and white, roaming through it. A regiment of militia was organized by the settlers and Crockett was elected colonel. A little later they decided to set up a form of local government and urged Davy to accept the position of magistrate. Says Miss Rourke:

"Finding that he would be obliged not only to write his name but to make out warrants and keep a record of his proceedings, Crockett began to read whatever he could find and to practice the art of handwriting. This was slow work, but he made progress. It was at this time that he began to inscribe a motto at the end of documents. 'Be always sure you're right, then go ahead!'"

Having proved his ability as a local magistrate, Crockett was next prevailed upon to become a candidate for the Tennessee state legislature. He was elected. Next they sent him to congress. And it is in regard to his career there that this new biography brings out a part of the significance of Davy Crockett in American history that other biographers seem to have missed. Commenting on his role as the champion of the settlers as against the speculators, in what was then the West, Miss Rourke says:

"Crockett achieved a homely statesmanship. His bill dealing with this question was carefully thought out and well phrased, and he supported it with a wealth of ready argument. . . . His bill was defeated, as was an important amendment of his to another measure bearing on the same question. . . . None the less Crockett stands head and shoulders above the average thinker of his time, even above many in high places, because of his grasp of a fundamental principle and his willingness to fight for it. The cause was lost, but it was a great cause."

Thus it may be seen that Davy Crockett was something more than a "coonskin congressman," something more than a picturesque bear-hunter from the wilds of the West who, by some political accident, had a chance to participate in shaping the beginnings of our democracy. But if later Americans have failed to appreciate his significance in that period, his own people apparently were also blind to his true worth. Because he dared oppose Jackson, who was then rising on his high tide of popularity, on both the land-question and the Indian-question, they denied him re-election in 1831.

But two years later he was again elected and more than before he became an outstanding figure in congress. He was now an out-and-out anti-Jackson man and an increasingly dangerous obstacle to Jackson's plan of handing the Presidency to Martin Van Buren when "Old Hickory" should retire from the White House. In the spring of 1834 Crockett started on his tour of the eastern cities which became a veritable triumphal progress—to Baltimore, to Philadelphia, to New York, up into New England, then through Pennsylvania, Ohio and Kentucky. He made such an impression wherever he went that there was even talk of running him for President.

Then came the anti-climax. At the end of the summer he was a candidate for re-election. But his enemies were busy. The full strength of the Jacksonian partisans in Tennessee was unleashed. Playing upon sectional prejudice, they used his journey to New England against him. In a bitter campaign in which personalities outweighed the real issue at stake Crockett was defeated by a narrow margin.

"Crockett had reached a turning point. In the six or seven years just past his entire course had been changed; he could hardly return to hunting and farming. . . . All his life he had been on the move and he had repeatedly gone from one frontier to another. He made a quick decision. 'I'm going to Texas,' he said."

It was his last journey. The end of it is one of the classics in American heroism. In the epic drama of the Alamo, as elsewhere back along the trail of his life, Davy Crockett held the center of the stage. "In the wild confusion Crockett seems to have been everywhere at once," writes Miss Rourke. "A story was told afterward that as he leveled and fired his famous 'Beesey' he sang invitingly to the Mexicans: 'Won't you come into my bowery! This would have been like him; perhaps he was heard singing this song in the earlier days of the siege. But when the final attack began there would have been no time for song, nor could any tune have been heard in the terrific din."

The Mexicans could kill Davy Crockett, the man, but they couldn't kill Davy Crockett, the hero, half man and half myth. "Stories about Crockett are still told in Kentucky and Tennessee and in the Ozark mountains," says Miss Rourke. "Even now people in the Ozarks talk about him as though he were still living just over the next ridge."

The other day a newspaper book reviewer began an article thus: "Twice in two weeks Davy Crockett crashes through, once in his own story, once in this brilliant biography by Constance Rourke." The reference to "his own story" is to the fact that Charles Scribner's Sons had issued "The Adventures of Davy Crockett: Told Mostly by Himself," which includes Davy's Autobiography, first published in 1834, and his "Texas Exploits and Adventures," first published in 1836. In it Davy Crockett speaks from his unmarked grave in the "Thermopylae of America." Out from between the covers of these two books steps the typical American frontiersman. Davy Crockett still "goes ahead."

"Because, when the time came that we really needed to spend I wanted to be able to do it. And I think the time has come."

"I see," said Neal a little ironically. "Am I permitted to ask just how these vast sums are to be squandered, since I am to earn them?"

"Neal, darling, don't talk about it in that tone! You know how hard it was to find even this crowded little house that we could rent, and you know how uncomfortable we've been in it all winter! I want you to let me begin hunting now for a house that we can live in suitably—next winter—and buy it."

"In other words," he said dryly, "I suppose you have got your eye on one already!" And as Anne colored and gave a little laugh he laughed too and sat down beside her. "All right. Tell me about it."

"It is in Georgetown," Anne breathed excitedly, "an old house, rather badly out of repair—"

"Georgetown!" Interrupted Neal contemptuously. "Why that's full of shacks and riff-raff! What on earth do you want to go there for?"

"Because the best values in real estate are there," said Anne proudly, "it used to be 'the court end of town' and was a metropolis before Washington even existed! Now the lovely Colonial houses are being snapped up again and soon there won't be any left, people are moving out there so fast. This house I like is a big square brick one, on a corner lot, and it's a great bargain. Of course it needs a lot done to it, but—"

"But you could supervise the improvements this spring while I am leading a celibate life slaving away in Hinesboro—well—how much would it cost all told?"

"The house is only five thousand dollars, if we pay cash for it. I should have to spend at least that much more on repairs. And then of course I should have to furnish it."

"I see. You want at least fifteen thousand dollars then."

"I want more than that. I might as well tell you so, all at once."

"How much?"

"The clothes I bought in Paris are just about gone. I'll have to get new ones; I've made a list of what I need, and a thousand dollars is a conservative estimate of the cost. Then we've got to have a new motor. And I want to put the children in private schools next fall—both of them—and meantime—Anne drew her breath and went on—"I want to take them to Europe during their vacation. We can cross on a cabin boat, quite comfortably, and then we could go straight to Fontainebleau and stay there nearly all summer. The children can study French and I can go on with mine. And I want to take up my music again. It means a lot to me—music—and I have neglected it."

"I know you have, dear," said Neal. "And I thought we might have some horses and ride in the forest. Of course if you could only come too it would be perfect. But I suppose you couldn't."

"No," said Neal steadily, "of course not. I'll have to work all summer. But I do want you and the children to go."

"I'll book our passage right off, if you're willing," said Anne, "and now about the house? Could you go with me this afternoon and look it over? It isn't occupied and I have the key."

They went, immediately after dinner. The fine old house was in a sad state of dilapidation. But Neal had discernment enough to see that it was fine. The house which he and Anne had built in Hinesboro was a comfortable, nondescript, middle-class home; this, properly repaired and furnished would become a residence of individual charm and distinction—a suitable setting for a rising statesman, the dignified background for his wife.

"Suppose we drive back and get the kids and Dora and Horace?" he suggested. "If they all like it as much as we do, I guess we may just as well consider the question settled."

The day after the adjournment of congress Neal left alone for Hinesboro, facing the fact that as Anne had once stayed there without him, saving money that he might spend it, so he must now stay there without her, saving money that she might spend it. He accomplished what he set out to do, and more, in fact, his reputation as a lawyer of national and international note dated from that summer. True, he already had wide experience and a large practice upon which to build; the foundations for his fame were laid; but it was only now that he began the brilliant super-structure which was to bring him fame and fortune.

In June he permitted himself the brief luxury of going to Washington to see how the improvements on the house were advancing and to accompany his family from there to New York when they sailed on the De Grasse. He did not leave Hinesboro again until he returned to New York three months later, to welcome them back again. In the fall he returned unaccompanied to Mrs. Simmons' cottage, the two servants accompanying Anne and Nancy and the new French maids to Georgetown.

Just before congress opened again Neal rejoined his family. Anne had done her work well; and the place in Georgetown, in its completely repaired and renovated condition, surpassed his every expectation.

As they sat before the library fire the evening of their reunion, after a delicious and beautifully served dinner, Anne commenced outlining her plans for the winter.

"I am going to start my days at home right away," she said, "that will give me time to get in three before Christmas, and I think this year we had better have an occasional Sunday tea as well. Now as to dinners. With Dora and Horace reinforced by Alphonse and Madeleine, I see no reason why we should hesitate to ask anyone here. There is just one hitch—I had a letter from Harriet saying now that we have a guest room, she feels sure we would like to have a long visit from her."

"The 'I-we-would!' said Neal with vehemence.

"And that she thinks she ought to do her best towards influencing congress prohibiting the sale of tobacco in any form and limiting the sale of tea and coffee. She wants to lobby against them with this as a center."

"Good G—d!" ejaculated Neal with still greater vehemence.

"Well, what can I do? I can't decide to allow your own—and your only—alter to come to our house, can I?"

"No-o-o; I suppose not. Better have her—come—at—once—and—get—her—visit—over with."

Anne sighed. "But my problems don't end with Harriet—my mother has written, too. She says now that we have a spare room, she is sure that we would be glad to have Sol and Sam come and stay with us and go to George Washington university."

"But if they start in a college course they will have to be here four years," said Neal, aghast.

"Of course. But as far as that goes, we do not know that the legislation Harriet is interested in will be disposed of this session."

"That's true, too—well, we will just have to live in hopes. It's too bad, honey, just when you thought you had everything so nicely organized, but I guess it can't be helped."

Anne wrote to her mother saying she would have a room ready for Sol and Sam by the first of January; and she wrote to Harriet to come at once, hoping that this aggressive lady would, by some miracle, prove sufficiently adaptable to her surroundings to be at least partially assimilated by them.

Her hopes were groundless. Harriet arrived in the middle of Anne's first "At Home." The day was stormy, and she wore a "serviceable hat," large black rubbers and a dingy brown mackintosh. Relieved of these, and of her dripping umbrella, she was disclosed clad in a high-necked, white cotton "shirtwaist," and a gray wide-shoulder skirt, which was cut in multitudinous "gores" and finished around the bottom with braid.

Anne had left her guests for a moment to see Harriet comfortably installed in the precious guest room. She was conscientiously cordial but she faltered a little.

"I thought you might like to pour tea for me a little while," she said hesitatingly; "you could relieve Mrs. Estavi at five. That will give you plenty of time to change your dress."

"I shall not take time to change," Harriet assured her briskly. "I shall come down at once. I see there are a number of people here and I certainly shall not lose this opportunity to talk about the evils of smoking, tea and coffee."

"Wouldn't it be better to wait and do that at some meeting?" suggested Anne. "At strictly social affairs like this, we don't bring up debatable questions."

"That shows you are not really interested in great causes," said Harriet, brushing her hair back flatly from her high forehead. "I shall have no such scruples. I am conscious of the frivolity into which you have led Neal, but I shall try to counteract such an influence. As to meetings, I shall attend those, too, of course. In fact, I shall hold some here. I can see there is plenty of room for them in this large house which you have so extravagantly purchased, regardless of the fact that you already had a beautiful home in Hinesboro."

The first person whom Harriet approached on the subject near to her heart chanced to be Senator Lassiter. Immensely amused, he shepherded Harriet skillfully to the sun parlor and encouraged her to talk, conveying the impression that he agreed perfectly with everything she had to say. When, late in the afternoon, he was relieved by Neal, he left her with the happy idea that she had made a convert. The misleading philanthropist, however, wandered off in search of Anne, laughing softly and claiming a reward.

"What thanks do I get for helping you out?" he asked.

"No end of thanks," she said with a smile, as she leaned back in her chair.

"Ah—but I would like something concrete. Would you ride with me to-morrow morning or let me take you to a concert in the afternoon?"

"Neither. You know we went all over that thoroughly last spring. Elythe, after Neal went away. I won't play with fire."

The "Empire" State

A New York State Glove Factory.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

A RECENT census report reveals that New York state has 69 cities with a normal population of more than 10,000 each, of which seven stand in the 100,000 class and six in the 50,000 class. New York city has more than half the population of the whole state.

Buffalo, the metropolis of Erie county, with its splendid system of parks connected by drives, boulevards and parkways, ranks ninth among the industrial centers of the United States and is one of the ten leading ports of the world, although it lies at the foot of an inland lake.

No one could visit Rochester, with its falls, its beautiful parks, and its busy industries, without agreeing that here is one of America's most livable cities. Rochester makes enough "movie" film every year to belt the earth eight times. Kodak park has to "cook" four tons of silver every week, transforming it into nitrate of silver to make the emulsion for the films and photographic paper Eastman produces. Nearly 7,000,000 pounds of cotton linters go into the making of film, and there is a saying that on the smooth side film is first cousin to cotton and on the emulsion side cousin-german to sterling silverware.

Cleanliness must be next to godliness when motion-picture film is made. A speck on Greta Garbo's nose or a smudge on Mary Pickford's cheek would ruin a picture. So the smokestacks of Kodak Park are among the highest in America, and 20,000,000 gallons of water a day are pumped out of Lake Ontario. The gelatine on your film is as chemically pure as that in the desert on your dinner table.

It is an impressive sight to see Bausch and Lomb' melting tons of sand, mixed with chemicals according to the most accurate of formulae, and then pouring the great pots of white-hot liquid upon a table and rolling it into the giant pancakes from which come most of the spectacles of America. For forty years the two founders of this concern toiled away before their business began to grow. But now Bausch and Lomb are known the world around and have one of the largest optical works on earth.

Syracuse is a radiant city in a beautiful land. Salt gave Syracuse its start, but today the community takes rank as one of the most versatile in America. Famed for its typewriters, air-cooled automobiles, office furniture, and other nationally used products, Syracuse is also distinctive as the capital of the Six Nations. Here the sachems of the several tribes meet in "The Long House," as they met centuries ago, to consider the problems that have changed so vastly since these powwows began.

A pitiful remnant of a once mighty nation they constitute. Their reservations are islands in the jurisdiction of the State of New York.

Yonkers Comes Fifth. It is doubtful whether one person in ten would guess the fifth city of New York. It is Yonkers. Adrian van der Donck, who once owned its site, was a young Dutch nobleman, or Jonkheer, and it was an easy transition to Yonkers from Jonkheer's land. The city has some of the largest carpet factories, sugar refineries, and elevator plants in America.

Few states have capitals so fortunately located or capitals with as rich a history. Four of New York's six Presidents have been governors of the state—Van Buren, Cleveland and the two Roosevelts—and have lived in Albany. Another son of New York who won the presidency by vote of the people, but lost it at the hands of the electoral commission, was Governor Samuel J. Tilden.

Utica, a fair city of the Mohawk valley, is a center of the knitgoods industry in America.

Schenectady made a bold bid for position among the cities of the state in the 100,000 or more population class, under the 1930 census, and came only a few thousand short. As the home of the General Electric company, where Steinmetz, Coolidge, and Longmuir have delved so deeply into the mysteries of matter and have made many an apparently unattainable secret arise to serve the needs of everyday life, Schenectady has become a household word in America.

Binghamton, which is strikingly located astride east branch of the Susquehanna, is making a bid for a place beside Rochester in the manufacture of photographic supplies. The shoe factories of the neighboring town of Endicott turn out footwear known far and wide.

Troy is a mild-mannered city; but, for all that, it makes America, and much of the world wear its collars. In one factory there one finds a museum of autographed collars with the signatures of such notables as Theodore Roosevelt, Ramsay MacDonald, the Prince of Wales, Woodrow Wilson, Georges Clemenceau and Admiral C. G. F. B. Bagge, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois—WNU Service.

"Believe it or not," soy beans which are often spoken of as an acid tolerant crop will produce from two to five times as much hay to the acre, when given the benefit of limestone on some of the light-colored soils.

Evidence showing the value of an application of the "soil sweetener" is revealed in the results of four years of tests at two soil experiment fields of rather low productive levels maintained by the state university.

At one field, where the soil is a light gray silt loam, the use of manure gave a yield of 340 pounds of soy bean hay to the acre, but when limestone was applied in addition to manure, the yield of bean hay was 1,700 pounds an acre. The field that received no treatment returned about the same as where manure had been spread.

The increase resulting from limestone, when it was applied in addition to manure, amounted to 1,300 pounds, or more than a half a ton to the acre.

Another experiment field consisting of a yellow-gray silt loam gave somewhat better yields. Soil with no treatment returned 1,040 pounds of soy bean hay to the acre; the manure treatment improved the yield to an average of 1,420 pounds, and applications of both manure and limestone jumped the harvest to 2,900 pounds, or practically a ton and a half of hay to the acre.

The response to manure over no treatment amounted to 890 pounds, while the response to manure and limestone over manure alone was 1,500 pounds an acre. However, manure and limestone gave returns of 1,040, or nearly a ton to the acre, over the plot which did not receive any treatment.

As the home of the American-La France fire engine factory, Elmira has given protection to almost every city in the land and has quickened the pulses of small boys who have watched fire apparatus answering an alarm.

Jamesstown is a famous center of metal furniture manufacture. A large colony of Scandinavian metal workers has settled there, and the annual output of the furniture factories of the city and surrounding country was valued at $27,000,000 by a recent census.

Chautauque county, of which Jamesstown is the principal city, is at once New York state's major grape-producing area and its most historic meeting place of summer religious and educational assemblies. On the shores of the beautiful lake of the same name, the Chautauque idea was born.

It swept to the ends of the nation before its growth was arrested by the modern competition of motion pictures and automobiles.

Poughkeepsie, with her boast as the Queen City of the Hudson and her intercollegiate boat races, and Amsterdam, the second city in the world in the production of rugs and carpets, are important communities.

Home Town of Five-and-Ten. Watertown, where the five-and-ten-cent-store idea was born, when Frank Woolworth persuaded a local merchant to let him set up a five-cent table in the former's department store, is the largest city in northern New York.

All Americans hold Newburgh in reverence as the place where Washington repelled the idea of a crown, and for its Hasbrouck house, now a state shrine, where he bade his army farewell.

It is pleasant to wander up to Rome, where old Fort Stanwix stood, for here the American flag received its baptism of fire under circumstances that will be forever heroic in the hearts of the American people.

Hither came Colonel Peter Gansevoort to defend the Mohawk valley from the invasion of the British, Tories, and Indians, who were marching to the Hudson for a junction with Burgoyne under St. Leger. Out of a commandeered white shirt, a drafted red petticoat, and an impressed blue blouse, they were able to fashion a flag of accepted design.

Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, and White Plains, triple towns of Westchester; Auburn, Ithaca, and Geneva, a triad of gems that bedeck the Finger Lakes; Corning, with its plants specializing in high grade glass; Gloversville, with its hundred glove factories; Oswego, with its dreams of becoming the Great Lakes gateway to the Hudson; Oneida, with its striking organization that has made Community silver famous throughout America; Cortland that overlooks most cities in the state in point of elevation—all of these municipalities bear witness to the versatility of the Empire state and prove that the aesthetic and the industrial can march hand in hand.

Nor can one forget Seneca Falls, where bloomers first bloomed, where woman's rights exponents held their first convention, and where enough pumps are made every year to win for it the jocular nickname of Pump-town.

There are literally scores of other live communities like Auburn and Batavia, Canandaigua and Dunkirk, East Aurora and Fulton, Geneva and Hornell, Ithaca and Johnstown, Kingston and Lockport, Malone and Norwich, Olean and Penn Yan, Ely and Salamanca, Tonawanda, Valley Stream, and Whitehall, that are pleasing stars in New York's galaxy of municipalities.

Soy Bean Responds to Soil Sweetener

Limestone, When Added to Manure, Found to Greatly Boost the Yield.

By C. J. Bagge, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois—WNU Service.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Making Hair Grow

A COUPLE of years ago Dr. B. N. Bengston in the Journal of the American Medical Association gave a list of a number of people on whose head he had been able to induce a new growth of hair.

Doctor Bengston was careful to say that these were not cases in which the hair had gradually disappeared, but cases due to illness or shock.

Despite this statement, he was besieged by thousands of bald-headed people, and by hundreds of others anxious to secure his method and sell it to the world.

As a matter of fact Doctor Bengston made no secret of his method. He simply stated that he used the extract from the tiny pituitary gland, no larger than a pea, which is situated in the floor of the skull.

Since the announcement other investigators have been using this pituitary extract on ordinary cases of loss of hair without any real success.

In cases where the loss of hair came in patches and finally all the hair was lost, the use of the pituitary extract has been successful in some cases and a failure in others.

That other glands may have something to do with the growth or loss of hair is quite possible, even probable, but until this has been definitely proven we'll have to use the methods now recommended by skin and hair specialists to preserve the hair and keep it healthy.

The comb and brush should be kept clean and the comb should be such as not to tear the hair or wound the scalp. A good comb has its teeth smooth and wide apart and its teeth are blunt.

Hair brushes should have their bristles set wide apart. The brush should be stiff enough to allow one to brush the hair and scalp vigorously without injury.

Prof. William A. Pusey, University of Illinois, says that brushing the hair is of first importance in the toilet of the scalp and hair. It cleans both; it makes the hair smooth and glossy and it stimulates the scalp. The hair should be brushed twice daily; this brushing should be continued for a few minutes, at least—until the hair is smooth and glossy and until there is a pleasant feeling of "life" in the scalp.

The Sinuses

ALMOST every day the average physician is asked about the sinuses in the face, because sinus trouble is now quite widespread.

As a matter of fact, the average cold in the head is sinus trouble, but fortunately the cold clears up before any pus is formed, and the openings of the sinuses into the nose are therefore not blocked.

What are the sinuses? The sinuses are simply little cavities or caverns in the bones of the face which so adjoin the nose that they form the "sounding box" for the voice.

As you know the air comes up the wind pipe from the lungs, strikes against the vocal cords and noise or voice occurs. The voice however needs "resonance" or sounding box to give it the proper tone or expression, and this is the purpose of the sinuses.

You get an idea of what value the sinuses are to the voice when the sinuses are blocked by the common cold, or if you close your nostrils with your fingers and speak. There is simply a flat sound without any ring or resonance to it.

There are three sets of sinuses on each side of the face adjoining the nose, opposite the cheek, the eye, and the forehead just above the eye.

The main point to remember about these sinuses is that they are all connected with the nose by small openings, and have the same lining or mucous membrane as the nose.

In fact the easiest way to get the idea is to think of the lining of the nose extending into these sinuses, just as the floor of a hall in a home might extend into the rooms adjoining the hall. Now just as water spilled on the floor of this hall will flow along the floors into the rooms, so a cold starting along the lining of the nose extends along this lining into the sinuses, and causes sinusitis.

A change of temperature, change from the outdoors to the indoors, the eating of certain foods, the pollen of plants, and various other instances, inflame the mucous membrane or lining of the nose, and the individual develops a "cold."

Fortunately, in most cases, the cold simply irritates the lining and increases a flow of water. If this water is dammed back, thickens, and organisms increase within it, pus is formed. This is really sinusitis.

Weight of Ice Cream

The weight of a unit volume of ice cream depends upon the character of the ingredients and the proportion of air incorporated in the product. Fruit and nut ice creams, also chocolate ice cream, will run heavier than vanilla ice cream. Different ice creams may range from 4 1/2 pounds to 6 1/2 pounds per gallon. Ice cream is regularly sold both at wholesale and at retail on the basis of liquid measure. The quart of ice cream sold by the retailer represents 32 fluid ounces.

H. H. Hotchkiss, secretary of Governor Moer, has been named state procurement officer for six of the Civilian Conservation Corps camps in the state, it was announced in Phoenix by Conrad L. Wirth, assistant director, Washington, D. C.

A pageant depicting the state's back-to-prosperity strides during the first year of the "new deal" will be staged in Phoenix May 7 to 13, when the second annual Arizona food and industrial show and fair is held. A cross-section of Arizona's industrial life will be displayed.

Only three quarters of a million dollars, roughly, remains unexpended or not obligated in the $6,189,138 allotment to New Mexico under the several recovery programs of highway work. A set of figures compiled by the highway department reveals 103 projects obligated or completed, with 4,151 men employed.

Valencia county cattle wintered in good condition and prospects are for a good calf crop, according to Claude Neafus, formerly inspector for the New Mexico state sanitary board. Neafus said feed conditions on Mount Taylor continued good, but water is short and rains are needed to start now grass.

Possibilities of the federal government refinancing several of the state's largest irrigation projects was seen in Phoenix recently when Emil Schram, chief of the irrigation, drainage and levee division of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in Washington, stopped for an investigation of the projects.

Twenty-four girl members of the home economics club of the Hurke Navajo Vocational School at Fort Wingate were thrilled at meeting Governor Hockenbury recently in the governor's private office. The Navajo students on the first trip to the state capital, spent most of the day in sight-seeing through the statehouse and capitol.

A low bid of $9,719.44 has been submitted to the Arizona state highway department by the William Pepper Construction Company and Leo Frost, Phoenix, for one mile of work on the Holbrook-St. Johns sector of U. S. Highway 260. The work calls for grading, draining and surfacing of the route, starting 16.5 miles south of Holbrook.

Vacations with pay were restored to Arizona state highway department employees at a special meeting of the state-highway-commission in Phoenix. Under the new order employees who have been with the department more than one year will be entitled to twenty-four days' vacation and sick leave. Highway department employees who took vacations last year did so without pay.

The finest program ever staged will be the grand get-together of the CCC's in the beautiful Verde Valley, at Camp F39A, Cottonwood, Ariz., the latter part of April, when Capt. Edward Williams, camp commander, will be host to all CCC enrollees in the five-CCC camps of the Prescott and Coconino National Forests. It is expected that no less than 1,000 men will participate in this event.

A uniform traffic code for nine western states was to be worked out in Phoenix at a meeting of the highway patrol officials on April 20 and 21, according to announcement of C. R. McDowell, superintendent of the Arizona highway patrol. First business of the meeting was to be the organization of a highway patrol association among the chiefs of this branch of service from the states to be represented.

Arizona beavers are to be drafted by the United States forest service for an NFA project—improving fishing streams in the Chiricahua mountains. Plans were revealed by Fred Wain, Coronado National Forest supervisor, as bids were called for furnishing twelve live beavers to be placed in permanent streams in the Chiricahua, in southern Arizona. The animals are to be taken from the upper Gila river country. The idea is that the beavers will build dams which will back up the waters and form deep and cool pools for trout.

DISAPPEARING TRICK

At a party a necklace a woman was wearing was much admired. She took it off to show it better and it was passed from hand to hand. Later, it was not forthcoming. "The joke has gone far enough," said the host. "I'll put this silver dish on the table, turn out the electric light, count one hundred, and expect to find the necklace on the dish when I turn up the light again." When he turned up the light the dish also had vanished!

Ideal Neighbor

Smith entered a big London store and made his way to the gardening department. "I want three lawn mowers," he said.

The assistant stared hard at him. "Three, sir?" he echoed. "You must have a very great estate." "Nothing of the kind," snapped Smith grimly. "I have two neighbors."—Pearson's Magazine.

A Useful Drawback

Congressional Reflections

By Congressman Dennis Chavez

It seems now that after many months of controversy during which innumerable attacks and counter-attacks were made on the Administration in general and the Postmaster General in particular for the cancellation of all air mail contracts, we are going to have a temporary happy solution. On yesterday the Honorable James M. Mead, Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, introduced a bill, H. R. 9241, sponsored by the Administration, providing for the awarding of air mail contracts for a period of one year without restrictions. This means that the old line companies can submit bids and the contracts can be awarded to them. A Commission is to be appointed for the purpose of studying the entire aviation industry and is to be composed of nine members, three of which are to be chosen by the President; three by the House of Representatives and three by the Senate.

When this Commission has finished its study, a report is to be made and upon this report a permanent policy is to be decided upon and future legislation based. No other subject has been so widely discussed and argued during this Administration not only because of the effect these cancellations had upon the individual aviation companies but also because of the introduction of the Army and the resulting disclosures. The effects were far reaching, but it is hoped that this industry which has become such an integral part of our transportation system and the air mail may again be restored to its former status and service again resumed within the near future.

Because of the many obstacles that have arisen in the construction and operation, as well as the distribution of power revenues, of power plants on reclamation projects, I introduced a bill, H. R. 9124, in the House this week, providing for the distribution of power revenues on Federal reclamation projects, and other purposes. Under this bill any power system built on Federal reclamation projects shall be operated by the United States as a separate and distinct system, independent of the irrigation system in which it is built. The construction cost of such power systems, including such portion as the Secretary of the Interior may find to be proper equitable of cost of structures and other facilities provided and used primarily for irrigation purposes, but incidentally used in connection with and as a part of said power system, shall be returnable from power revenues and shall not be charged to or repaid, in whole or in part, by the water users of the projects.

This bill is now before the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation and a Departmental report has been requested. Immediately upon receipt of said report the Committee will take up the consideration of this bill and make a report to the House of Representatives.

Washington is in a festive and holiday mood this week for the Cherry Blossoms are in full bloom and the Cherry Blossom Festival is being celebrated. The gorgeous vista of the blossoms around the Tidal Basin is a sight that is rarely seen and this annual spectacle, which has attracted over 250,000 visitors to the Capital City, is distinctive and inspiring. In the midst of this gaiety and happiness there is a touch of sadness for the beautiful white blossoms, with the passing of the winds, can be seen fluttering to the ground where these fragile flowers are making a soft pink carpet beneath the trees and in just a few days now the trees will be denuded and only the memory of a beautiful sight remain.

week have been Mayor and Mrs. Clyde Tingley of Albuquerque; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Dexter of Artesia; Mr. Waite Keeney, of Belen; and Mr. W. B. Robinson and his son W. B. Jr., of Carlsbad.

During a conference with officials in the Post office Department today, it was decided that no action would be taken with reference to the proposed mail schedule between Roswell and Carrizozo at the present time. The many protests from citizens of that community were turned over to the Inspection Division for consideration and another investigation ordered. The plan at the present time is to leave the schedule as it is and to await the report of the Inspection. This should be submitted within the near future, when another conference will be held and a policy decided upon.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration is now conducting a survey of milk consumption among school children in fifty representative cities throughout the country. Albuquerque has been selected in New Mexico, and Mrs. Fred Gilman, selected as chairman of the Committee. Questionnaires have been prepared to cover the school districts. It is recognized the plight of the dairy farmers in our country is caused, at least to a large degree, by inadequate consumption of milk among the great masses so in addition to stressing the proper nutrition children, it is hoped the survey will develop facts regarding family income and milk consumption which may suggest avenues of aid to the dairy farmers. It is desired that the survey will be given the serious attention which it merits and full co-operation will be given those who are supervising the survey so that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration may obtain correct data with which to proceed in trying to alleviate present conditions somewhat in this important industry.

The visitors to my office this week have been Mr. Herman Crile, Roswell; Dr. Anthony McCorrey, Albuquerque; Mr. R. R. Demeter, Silver City; Mr. Otis O. Martin, Clovis; Mr. Oscar Moor, Raton; and Miss Dorothy Brewer of Albuquerque.

Production Loan to Farmers

Applications for production loans to farmers in Lincoln, Chaves, Eddy, and Lea counties are now being received by G. H. Sellmeyer, secretary-treasurer of the Roswell production Credit Association at Roswell, New Mexico. According to Mr. Sellmeyer all loans will be made on a business basis in line with the security furnished by the applicant.

"The loans that will be made in this county and the other three counties served by the Roswell association must be good loans and loans that are collectible if the association is to continue a permanent service to farmers in this and other communities, as intended," Mr. Sellmeyer states.

"Fortunately, not all farmers in this county need credit," he continues, "but for those who do the association stands as a business organization—not a charity institution. Loans may be obtained for periods of 3 to 12 months by any eligible deserving farmer who needs credit and has security; but if a farmer is eligible for credit it must be extended on a business basis."

Each applicant has to state in his application what property he

Security for these loans will consist of first liens on crops, livestock or other personal property on which a lien, or cattle mortgage may be taken to secure the loan adequately. The lien may be taken on property already in the possession of the borrower, or to be purchased with the money borrowed. It is not intended that production loans shall be secured principally by mortgages on real estate. Where this type of security is taken it will be regarded only as additional collateral.

Bit of Old Japan Transplanted to Western Shores

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A FELLOW FULL OF FUNNY ANTICS

PROBABLY Peter Rabbit would have spent the whole morning listening to Glory the Cardinal had he not caught sight of an old friend of whom he is very fond, Kitty the Catbird.

"Did You Pass a Pleasant Winter Down South?" Asked Peter.

and right at the base of his tail was a patch of chestnut color. Peter forgot all about Glory and hurried over to welcome Kitty, who had disappeared among the bushes along the old stone wall.

When Peter found him he was sitting with all his feathers fluffed out until he looked almost like a ball with a head and tail. He looked positively sleepy. When he caught sight of Peter he drew those feathers down tight, cocked his tail up after the manner of Jenny Wren, and was as slim and trim looking as any bird of Peter's acquaintance.

"Did you pass a pleasant winter down south?" asked Peter. "Fairly so. Fairly so," replied Kitty. "By the way, I picked up some new songs down there. Would you like to hear them?"

"Of course," replied Peter. "But I don't think you need any new songs. I never heard such a fellow, excepting Mocky and Mockybird, for picking up other people's songs."

Kitty's throat swelled and he began to sing. It didn't seem as if so many notes could come from one throat. When the song ended Peter had a question all ready. "Are you going to build somewhere near here?" he asked.

"I certainly am," replied Kitty. "Mrs. Catbird and I expect to build at once."

FAVORITE SPRING VEGETABLE

WHILE the subject is before us, let us discuss a few ways of using the well liked but odorless onion.

When cooking a few carrots add a stalk or two of celery cut fine and an onion for flavor. Cook in as little water as possible and dress with plenty of butter. The three flavors are especially good.

Scalloped Onion With Cheese. Cook small even-sized onions, using as many as will be needed, drain and place a layer in a baking dish, cover with a rich white sauce and a spoonful or more of creamy cheese; repeat and cover with a thick layer of buttered bread crumbs. Bake until well heated through and serve hot. Nice for tea with a simple lettuce salad.

Onions With Early Apples. Slice one or two onions, add a bit of sweet fat or butter and cook for ten minutes, adding a little water; now add thinly sliced tart apples without peeling, cook until all are tender. Season well with salt and a little sugar and serve as a vegetable with any meat. Very good with roast pork or tenderloin.

Mild Onion Salad. Slice the southern onions very thin, add an equal measure of mild apple, a few dates cut fine and serve on lettuce with any desired dressing.

Sliced onions in french dressing served well drained as filling for sandwiches of buttered, rye bread make most tasty eating. Nice for Sunday night lunch after church.

NO PROOF THAT AMERICANS ARE "GOING INDIAN"

Harvard's division of anthropology in its recent researches seems to have disposed of the theory that used to be stoutly maintained, that is, that the American type of man is reverting to that of the Indian. We have always been skeptical of the hypothesis that the mingled white race of North America would approach nearer and nearer in resemblance to the Indian simply because it inhabits the same territory and is subject to the same influences of climate.

But the whites of America have bred and prospered in an environment entirely at variance with that of the Indian, with the exception of the climate. They are now largely sedentary, if we except the farmer, and are not hunters and walkers. They tend to grow shorter in stature in cities, though by no means stunted.

The Indians are red-brown in color because their primitives, ages ago in Asia, were of that complexion. There can be no doubt that the aboriginal races of this continent crossed to it from the cradle of humanity first inhabited of the great bodies of land, by means of the chain of islands spanning Bering sea and inclosing it on the south.

President Tells What He Wants Congress to Do—Mussolini Tries Another Restoration Method—France to Quit Armament Negotiations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a series of conferences with congressional leaders, made known his desires in the way of immediate legislation. First, he told them he would soon submit a new request for $1,500,000,000 for relief purposes, as was indicated in his January budget message. This bill will include several provisions—namely, a housing program and $500,000,000 for the public works program to aid employment. The relief will be made a part of the usual deficiency measure.

Next, Mr. Roosevelt wants a stock market regulation bill with "better teeth than those in the much modified Fletcher-Rayburn measure. He desires, too, passage of reciprocal tariff, general revenue, municipal bankruptcy, and federal insurance on bank deposits measures.

In order that congress may get through and adjourn by the middle of May, the President is willing to sidetrack some of the administration measures, including the permanent air mail legislation—and the Wagner bill to eliminate company-dominated unions. He was reported also to have expressed opposition to measures to create a central monetary authority.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI of Italy has his own ideas of the way to restore prosperity, and they are utterly at variance with those of President Roosevelt. By his direction the council of ministers issued a series of decrees designed to break the cost of living commensurate with the purchasing power of the lira.

The Italian lira now stands at 3 to 1 in purchasing power with reference to pre-war value, Il Duca declared. The cost of living on the other hand is 4 to 1 with reference to pre-war prices. The two will be equalized, Mussolini and his ministers declared, and here is what they did:

Slashed the pay of members of the government 20 per cent.
Cut the pay of state and public employees on a scale ranging from 6 to 12 per cent.

Slashed various supplements and indemnities granted state employees and others from 10 to 50 per cent.
Ordered every landlord in Italy to reduce rents by 12 per cent in cases of individuals and societies, and 15 per cent in case of businesses and shops.

Reduced prices in co-operative stores and military co-operatives by 10 per cent.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, British chancellor of the exchequer, introduced in parliament a prosperity budget showing how far the country had gone toward recovery in two years, reducing taxes and restoring the pay of government employees and the dole for the jobless. The chancellor reported a surplus in the treasury of almost $160,000,000 and held out bright hopes for the future. This prosperity of the British, however, isn't going to be of any direct benefit to the United States. Mr. Chamberlain said:

"Neither last year nor the year before did I make any provision for payment on the war debt to America nor for the receipt of war debts or reparations by ourselves, and in the absence of any further development I propose to follow precisely the same line this year."

DISARMAMENT negotiations under present conditions are futile, in the official opinion of the French government, and it will have nothing more to do with them, returning instead to its old plan for national security founded on armaments and allies. This is the gist of a note delivered to the British government which is held to be a death blow to any accord on armaments. The blame for failure of negotiations is laid by the French on Chancellor Hitler and his Nazi government of Germany.

The note described the increased German military budget as a "menace" and declared the German government, without awaiting the results of negotiations in progress, has shown its determination to continue all forms of rearmament in violation of the treaty of Versailles.

"The German government," the note charged, "intends to increase immediately on a formidable scale not only the strength of its army but also its naval and air forces."

"Whatever explanation may be advanced, facts of such exceptional gravity can lead to only one observation and conclusion. They prove the German government has made impossible further negotiations."

the final meeting of the disarmament conference to announce publicly that it is useless to continue its labors and to show the world where the blame lies.

CERTAIN tax increases written into the tax bill by the senate and passed by that body are regarded by house leaders as quite undesirable. Chairman Doughton of the ways and means committee declared they were entirely outside the original intent of the new revenue legislation, and a fight against them was planned in conference.

When the measure reached the senate it contained provisions estimated to produce $258,000,000 a year in new revenue, chiefly by stopping the loopholes through which legal tax avoidance had been possible.

The bill fell quickly into the hands of the senate "liberal" element, and provisions were inserted to add $220,000,000 to the yield provided by the house. Also, the senate inserted the provision for publicity of all income tax returns, which has been proposed many times but usually knocked out before final enactment.

SO FAR as the Democrats go, the Wirt affair is ended, the Democratic majority of the committee of investigation deciding to report to congress that the Gary educator's charges of a red plot to overthrow the government are unfounded. McGugin and Lehlbach, the Republican members of the committee, formulated a minority report expressing their opinion that the inquiry should be broadened in scope. McGugin asserts there is plenty of evidence from many sources to prove that certain members of the brain trust are seeking to overthrow the established social order of the United States. Representative Hamilton Fish of New York told a gathering of Republican women that Doctor Wirt failed to prove his case because his sources of information were too remote, but that he, Mr. Fish, was going to prove it so there would be no doubt about it. Regardless of patriotic motives, the Republicans in congress are not to abandon just yet the campaign material supplied by the Wirt case.

When the Bulwinkle committee called before it the six who were with Wirt at the dinner in Virginia, they all, with astonishing unanimity, denied practically everything that Wirt said occurred that evening. Each of them asserted that the doctor monopolized the conversation, talking mainly about gold devaluation, and that it was almost impossible to interrupt him. They verified only one statement which Wirt had ascribed to Miss Hildegarde Kneeland, a division head in the home economics of the Agriculture department. This was that she had objected to Wirt's proposal that the goal of the government should be a restoration of conditions in the country as they were in 1920.

Miss Kneeland, in acknowledging this statement as hers, elucidated at the committee members' request and said she would advocate, instead of 1920 conditions, better distribution of property, minimum wage laws, unemployment insurance, mother's pensions, government control of the stock market.

Chairman Bulwinkle and some other Democrats declared Doctor Wirt had laid himself open to charges of perjury, but naturally they would prefer to drop the entire affair rather than to prolong it by trying to prosecute the doctor.

CONSIDERATION of air mail legislation was begun by the senate after President Roosevelt's new plan had been made public. His proposal was that contracts to carry the air mail be let to commercial companies on competitive bids, and that meanwhile a commission should be named to study the question of air mail transport and the development of commercial and military aviation and report to the next congress.

Four air lines filed in the District of Columbia Supreme court complaints seeking to enjoin Postmaster General Farley from carrying out his order annulling the air mail contracts. The complaints, brought by the Boeing Air Transport, Inc.; Pacific Air Transport; Varney Airlines; and National Air Transport, Inc., all subsidiaries of United Aircraft and Transport, Inc., charge that Mr. Farley as an individual canceled their contracts without a hearing, illegally, and deprived them of property "without due process of law in violation of the Fifth amendment of the Constitution."

JAPAN has issued a manifesto asserting its responsibility to maintain peace in eastern Asia and objecting to the giving of help to Chinese air and military forces by other nations. Especially the Japanese dislike the sales of airplanes to China by American and Italian manufacturers.

MORE than 1,200 citizens of Lexington, Mass., while preparing to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the battle of Lexington, decided to fire another shot that, though it wouldn't be "heard around the world," might be counted on to make a slight noise in Washington. They signed and sent to their state delegation in congress a protest against certain policies of the government. Here in part is what they wrote:

"We protest against federal interference in business under the guise of promoting social reform and economic recovery.

"We protest against the passage of legislation without more careful consideration by congress.

"We protest against the indefinite extension of legislation originally designed solely for emergency purposes."

THE world wheat advisory commission, sitting in Rome, reached the first international agreement for price stabilization and urged the governments represented to adopt it before May 1, when a committee of experts will meet in London to put the price system into operation.

Four men with wide powers will be designated, under the agreement, to sit in London and control the world movement of wheat. Quotas will be granted and prices will be raised or lowered in the various countries as far as exports are concerned, according to quota shipments.

Sales below or above quotas will govern the increase or reduction in prices. The advisory commission considers this to be a good method of controlling quotas through prices. It was officially announced the minimum price plan supplements the London wheat agreement.

THE first measure in United States history to limit a crop was sent to the White House for approval after the house agreed to the senate alterations in the Bankhead compulsory cotton control bill. Final action by the senate was taken after the bill had been attacked earnestly by Senator Bailey of Texas and other southerners. Most radical so far of the New Deal measures, the bill restricts the South's output of cotton this year to 10,000,000 bales by placing a tax of 50 per cent upon all cotton ginned in excess of that figure. The secretary of agriculture is to apportion to each farmer, through his agents, the amount of cotton he may grow.

CONDEMNATION and seizure of private property in the interest of the administration's great housing program has been begun in Atlanta, Ga. Secretary Ickes, acting as Public Works administrator, asked Attorney General Cummings to file condemnation proceedings against 134 parcels of land there in the name of the Federal Emergency Housing corporation. In addition to these parcels the government is buying outright 70,000 square feet of land to complete what is needed for a $2,000,000 housing plan for negroes.

It was indicated that similar action in connection with housing plans will be taken in Chicago and other cities. Condemnation proceedings are to be resorted to only to expedite the program, says Mr. Ickes, and the government is willing to pay a fair price at all times.

"ALFALFA BILL" MURRAY, governor of Oklahoma, doesn't propose to permit resales of property for delinquent taxes in his state. These sales were scheduled in eleven counties, six others having already called them off. The governor called on his ever-ready National Guard, declaring that "protection for the homes of the people in stressful times like these is a vital policy transcending any temporary loss in taxes." He ordered the arrest of any county official who attempted to conduct a delinquent-tax sale.

The counties to which guardsmen were sent are scattered. In most counties the military department consisted of an officer and three men. Adjutant General Barrett said a greater number was not sent for economic reasons, but added that "more troops will be ready to go if necessary."

REDUCTION of passenger rates in the South and West proved to be a goose that laid many golden eggs for the railroads in those regions, but now the NRA, which has no control over the railroads, is trying to persuade the Interstate Commerce commission to kill the goose because the bus operators are complaining. A hearing has been called in Washington for April 23 and the bus operators, the railway officials and the public will be heard. The first named proposal that the railroads raise coach rates to 2 cents and pullman rates to 3 cents and that the motor bus code be changed to halt special excursion rates and chartering of buses. Most of the railroads are willing to do this.

JOHN J. BLAINE, for years one of the prominent political figures in Wisconsin, former governor of that state and also United States senator, died of pneumonia at his home in Bosobel. He was one of the La Follette group of independent Republicans and was defeated for re-nomination to the senate in 1902 by John B. Chapple, who was beaten in the election by F. Ryan Duffy. At the time of his death Mr. Blaine was a director of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT MOTOR OILS—

Conoco dares to give you the facts!

Here are no idle claims—But PROOF!

COMPARE this positive proof of superiority with all the exaggerated claims you hear about motor oils—now the facts can be told. We arranged with the Contest Board, American Automobile Association, to test five widely-known and advertised motor oils along with New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil in a daring "Destruction Test."

These six oils, a single fill of 5 quarts, with no more oil added, in six brand new strictly stock cars, were driven until the motor in each car was destroyed from lack of lubrication. The first oil failed with motor destroyed at 1,713.2 miles—others failed in rapid succession. The best of the competing oils ran a total of 3,318.8 miles... while New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil lubricated its motor for a total of 4,729 miles!... more than 3,000 miles farther than the first oil to fail... and more than 1,400 miles farther than the second best oil. Thanks to Conoco's Hidden Quart protection, this amazing victory stands unchallenged!

This is evidence... these are facts... that should open a new era of results and economy for your motor. Drive into a Conoco Station or dealer—fill with this New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. There's no longer any guess about what oil is best for your car!

Warning TO NEW CAR OWNERS

Some car manufacturers are using new types of bearings which will stand greater pressures and temperatures, resulting from increased power and speed. New and Improved Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil has been exhaustively tested on these new bearings. The results show that it gives them greater protection against damage than many weight mineral oils now on the market. Protect your new car by using the motor oil you can be sure of.

Chevrolet Assembly Plant at World's Fair

Installation of equipment for the assembly of Chevrolet automobiles in the General Motors Building at the 1934 "Century of Progress International Exposition," Chicago, has already been started by the Chevrolet Motor Company, M. E. Coyle, president and general manager, announced today.

Complete installation will be effected well in advance of the scheduled re-opening of the 1934 World's Fair on May 26, Mr. Coyle said, assuring early visitors that they will be able to see an automobile built up from the opening till the closing day of the exposition.

Machinery is identical with that used in Chevrolet's nine other assembly plants, with the exception of overhead conveyors. The latter have been replaced by floor type conveyors to bring parts to the proper stations along the line. This slight change in factory procedure provides visibility for the thousands who will watch the assembly each day.

Machines will again be finished in silver with black trim, and will be manned by approximately 200 workers in white uniforms.

A balcony seven feet above the assembly line and erected in circular form so that the maximum number of visitors may walk completely around the line and watch every operation in the building of a typically modern automobile, has been provided, Mr. Coyle said.

Production of 25 to 30 cars a day is planned. Two body types coaches and sedans will be built on the Master Chevrolet chassis. Regular inspection posts will check every operation along the line, and the cars will be driven out under their own power, tested and put through final inspection right on the spot.

Additional interest will be furnished this year in the Chevrolet assembly plant by the installation of a "knee action" assembly, an outstanding feature of the 1934 Chevrolet. Visitors will see just how this remarkable development, which contributes so materially to riding comfort, is constructed. Chevrolet is again the only company which will operate an automobile assembly line at the Fair, Mr. Coyle stated.
