Mrs. William Barnett

The death of Mrs. William Barnett last Monday night, Feb. 5th at 10:00 p. m., marked the end of a long and active life. Mrs. Barnett had conducted a feed store and dairy here for many years and was a reliable and trusted business woman. She was a person of firm convictions, very outspoken and had a capacity for continuous and untiring work which could not have been out-ripped. While waiting on a customer at her feed store on Monday afternoon, January 19th, she was stricken with paralysis. She was taken to the home of her sister, Mrs. Calvin Carl, where in her last days of illness and helplessness, all the tenderness and love which she so richly deserved, and which she so independently had scorned in health, were showered upon her.

Daisy A. Merrill was born in Maringo, Illinois, April 19, 1867. She was married twice, the first time to Mr. Julius Stevens. To this union one daughter, now Mrs. A. D. Palmer of Davenport, Iowa, was born. In 1902 she was married to Mr. William Barnett in Calby, Kansas. They came in that year to New Mexico.

Besides her husband and daughter Mrs. Barnett is survived by one sister, Mrs. Calvin Carl of Carrizozo.

After funeral services conducted in the Methodist Church by the Rev. John L. Lawson, Tuesday afternoon, the remains were laid to rest in the Carrizozo Cemetery. The funeral was largely attended and many lovely flowers decorated the casket.

The Methodist Church

Rev. John L. Lawson, Pastor.

By the grace of God, through the prayers and deeds of many friends, the knowledge and skill of Doctor F. H. Johnson and P. M. Shaver, and the tender ministrations of the nurses in the hospital, the pastor is now rapidly recovering. God is good, and men and women are His agents. Regular services in the Methodist Church next Sunday morning and evening.

Life Sketch of Sarah Ann Jagers Clouse

She was the daughter of Geo. W. Jagers and Mary E. Clark Jagers, born June 10, 1860 at Bexar, Alabama where she grew to womanhood and was married to Mathew A. Clouse on Nov. 7, 1877.

To this union were born nine children, six girls and three boys. One girl and two boys passed away in their youth, and the surviving children are Oscar Clouse of Carrizozo, N. M., Mrs. Benlah Fox of Los Angeles, Calif., Mrs. Ella Gale of Franklin, Ariz., Mrs. Ethel Jay of El Paso, Tex., Mrs. Jane Mayers, of Franklin, Ariz., and Mrs. Hazel Cash of Santa Fe, N. Mex.

Mrs. Clouse with her husband joined the church in Alabama on May 12, 1886. The following November they moved to Colorado where they lived for ten years, then to Richmond, New Mexico (now Virden) in July 1896, remained three years and finally moving to Franklin, where they lived until her death, on February 4, 1934.

Mrs. Clouse, with Elizabeth Gale and Roxie Williams served the church at Franklin for 13 years in the capacity of president of the Relief Society with Susie Merrill as secretary. Her familiar horse and buggy were a day or night, fair weather or foul, going on her mission of service to her friends and neighbors who were ill or in distress.

She was active as a housewife and mother until about 2 years ago when her health failed.

Mrs. Clouse was a beautiful, refined and lovely woman, beloved by both old and young. Her flower garden was a source of delight to everyone in the community, and her artistic hand work is that of an expert seamstress. She together with her good husband often cheered the sick and weary and ministered unto their needs. She has stored up treasures in heaven by her good deeds on this earth.

She was laid to rest at Franklin Ariz Feb. 5 1934. Besides her husband, one son, five daughters, several grandchildren and great grandchildren, a host of friends are left to mourn her passing. She was loved by all who knew her and her friends were numbered by her acquaintances.

Ancho Notes

Mrs. C. G. Belknap is relief agent for the Southern Pacific at Corona this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest had as guests this week Mrs. Ernest's father, B. Jones of Hot Springs, N. M. and her sister Mrs. Julia Anderson of Mojave, California. Mrs. Ernest returned to Hot Springs with her father where she will remain sometime undergoing treatments.

Mrs. Jack Prnett spent Saturday and Sunday visiting her mother, who lives in El Paso.

Mrs. Allen Kille is spending this week in Carrizozo.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Peutz of Corona visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frame Sunday.

Mrs. Alec Fambrough and Mrs. Harvey Fambrough have returned from Lovington, New Mexico where they were called on account of the illness of their mother and grandmother.

Mr. Bright and Miss Crawford attended the ball game at Carrizozo Saturday night.

Mrs. Mattie Cooper has returned to the Warden Ranch after spending a couple of weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Hightower. Mr. Craig one of the local teachers, spent the week-end at his home at Ramon.

Sunday morning just as the folks had assembled for Sunday School the young life of Kenneth Mays was snatched from us. His tragic death was a terrific shock to the whole community.

He and a little pal were shooting birds near the railroad reservoir. Kenneth made an attempt to reach into the water for a bird. He became over-balanced falling into the water. An alarm was given and soon an immense crowd gathered at the scene of the accident. It was perhaps thirty minutes before his body was recovered. Every effort possible was made to revive him but all proved futile. Dr. Barry was summoned immediately only to get to the boy too late.

Kenneth was born February 26 1923 and came to Ancho from Corona with his parents about four months ago. Besides his parents he leaves two younger brothers.

Funeral services were held in Corona Monday afternoon with the Rev. Lawson of Carrizozo conducting the same. The funeral was attended by many friends of the family both here and from Corona. The school at Ancho was closed for the day. School at Corona closed for funeral services.

Mr. and Mrs. Mays have a large circle of both old and new friends in this section of the country who deeply sympathize with them in these hours of deep grief.

Basket Ball Games

Dear Basket Ball Fan:

The people of Carrizozo have not been turning out to the basket ball games at Community Hall and supporting the team as they have in past years. We have two remaining games at home—Saturday February 10, with Duran, and Saturday, February 17, with Corona. The expenditures of the team this year have been more than has been taken in at the gate. Unless there are large crowds at these two games the team will be unable to make the trip to the District Tournament which will be in Roswell, March 2 and 3.

We are taking this means of reaching the basketball public and asking you to buy tickets to the games.

You are not giving us something for nothing.

Will you help us out?
Sincerely Yours,
Hubert Detloff—Coach, and Basketball Squad.

Miss Jo May Foster entertained fourteen young people at the home of Mrs. Jim Howard in honor of Beula Leslie's birthday, Tuesday evening.

The P. T. A. was well attended and a good program was rendered. Much good is being accomplished by the organization.

There are several new cases of measles, but all are getting along nicely.

Thank You, And God Bless You

"He that hath friends must show himself friendly, and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." Also, "A friend in need is a friend indeed." It is impossible to express our appreciation and gratitude in an adequate manner to our friends. But we do humbly thank each and every one of you for your every kind thoughts, prayers, words, and acts. We have found our friends to be many and true. We can only say, "Thank you," and pray God's blessings upon you.

Gratefully,
The Lawsons.

Los Angeles, Feb. 7, 1934—The American National Livestock Associat on recognized the weakness of our price structure brought about by extensive feeding of cattle by packing institutions when they adopted at the last convention at Albuquerque a resolution against the practice because of its bad effect upon the market, asking the packers to refrain from so doing.

Kenneth William Mays

"Too thick in every graveyard
The little hillocks lie,
But every hillock represents
An angel in the sky."

Kenneth William Mays, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mays of Ancho, was born February 26, 1923. In 1930 he moved with his parents to Corona, and there made his home until the family moved to Ancho in December of 1933.

On Sunday February 4, with some small friends he was playing near the Ancho reservoir—and in an effort to retrieve a bird from the water, he lost his footing. The alarm was immediately given, and the host of friends who hastened to the scene from both Ancho and Corona did every thing possible to save him.

Sunday evening the body was taken to Corona, and on Monday funeral services were held at the Corona church—conducted by Reverend Lawson of Carrizozo.

Kenneth was a bright and active child—who held the respect of his teachers and love of his playmates. Both the Corona and the Ancho schools were dismissed and the number who gathered to the last services of this small boy was an indication of the love and respect in which the entire family is held by both communities.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis and sons of Hobbs, N. M., Miss Mays of Amarillo, Texas, and Mr. and Mrs. Turner and daughters of Amarillo, Texas, were the out of town relatives present.—A Friend.

★ Images of Abraham Lincoln ★

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WITH the coming of February 12 and the celebration of Lincoln's birthday in more than half of the states of the Union and with the observance of the anniversary in various forms throughout the country, America will have ample reason for remembering the name and fame of one of her greatest sons. But there is another form of remembrance of Abraham Lincoln which serves to recall him to his fellow-Americans in every part of the country, not on just one day of the year, but on every day.

We, as a people, have elevated Lincoln to a pedestal, in the spiritual sense, a pedestal of love and honor and reverence. So from many a pedestal, in the physical sense, does the bronze or stone image of Lincoln gaze down at the people who delight thus to honor him. While it would be idle to argue as to who was the greatest American, if the number of statues of him that have been erected, is any criterion, then it seems certain that Lincoln is that man.

For these images of Lincoln, portraying him in all the varied phases of his career, are to be found in 18 states of the Union, from Massachusetts to Oregon and from Minnesota to Kentucky, as well as in the District of Columbia. Proof that he has become a world-figure lies in the fact that England has two statues of him and Scotland one. Of those in this country, Illinois, the state which gave him to the nation, has the largest number—twelve. Curiously enough, Kentucky, the state of his birth, has only three—fewer than New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, none of which have any such special connection with his life. Indiana, where Lincoln lived as a boy, from his seventh to his twenty-first year, has only two and both of these were erected very recently.

One of the two Indiana statues is especially significant. Among the many images of Lincoln are representatives of him as the rail-splitter, the militia captain, the lawyer, the congressman, the circuit rider, the debater, the candidate for President, the President-elect, the President, the Emancipator and the orator. All of them show him in his early manhood and his maturity, and connected with the erection of virtually all of them was some element of public co-operation. But it remained for private enterprise to furnish a new sculpture portrait of Lincoln and in 1932 the Lincoln National Life Insurance company unveiled in the plaza between the two wings of its building in Fort Wayne, Ind., a heroic bronze statue of "Lincoln, the Hoosier Youth," the work of a leading American sculptor, Paul Manahip. But this private enterprise has done more—in the establishment of the Lincoln

Planned Farming Is Within Reach

Farmers Can Easily Figure Out Cost of Production on Own Land.

By R. H. WILCOX, Agricultural Economist, Department, University of Illinois—WNU Service.

"Planned agriculture," which has been set up as the goal in the new order of things, is within reach of every farmer. There is just as much possibility, for instance, for the live stock farmer to come within his estimates of crop production and live stock needs as there is for the construction engineer to come within his estimates of time and cost in connection with building projects.

It is true that production may be below normal in some years and above normal in others. In the long run, however, careful estimates of the feed needs of the farm and planned production to meet these feed needs results in low live stock costs and a wider margin of net returns below these costs and selling price.

Take the situation that exists on a central Illinois farm where under average weather and other growing conditions, land planted to corn has yielded an average of 42 bushels an acre during the past eight or ten years. The operator of this farm, consulting tables of corn requirement for hogs grown under farm conditions, finds that eight bushels of corn is required to produce 100 pounds of hog on the hoof. This man then plans his hog program on the basis that each acre of his land planted to corn should make 625 pounds of live pork. He also knows the acres of corn land needed to feed his horses, a milk cow or two and his chickens. He fits the number of sows bred to the normal expectancy of growing 1,575 pounds of pork a year from each sow and her pig. He knows then that three acres of his corn will carry a sow and her pig, but to be on the safe side he does what the building contractor does—gives himself a safe margin and operates upon a plan of 8 1/2 acres of corn for every sow.

Such planning before the cropping season starts not only may mean the saving of considerable cash outlay but also many times may result in the difference between profit and loss. These planned production figures enable the farmer to determine the kind and number of stock his farm will safely carry. Conclusions with respect to the amount of live stock can be based upon a large quantity of information available in the way of tables on feed, labor and capital requirements of live stock production. The farmer can adjust the information, where necessary, from his knowledge and experience in handling live stock.

Demand for Wool Makes Good Year for Herdsmen

A 45 per cent increase in consumption of clothing and combing wools, together with a decline in numbers of sheep on farms, brighten the prospects of the sheep industry for 1934. The annual outlook report for agriculture states that world wool production is smaller. Australia, South Africa and New Zealand report smaller clips—14, 11, and 8 per cent, respectively, less than those of last year. Sheep population is now trending downward, but this tendency is not expected to continue for long.

$2,000,000 Ohio Beet Crop

Five thousand Ohio farmers will receive more than $2,000,000 for their sugar beet crops this year. It is estimated by the Farmers and Manufacturers Beet Sugar association. More than 8,000,000 man-hours of labor will be required in the growing, harvesting, processing and distribution of the 1933 Ohio crop, which is expected to exceed the 1932 acreage by 12,000 acres.

Feed for Dairy Cow

The average-sized cow can consume only enough grass to maintain her body and to produce about two gallons of milk a day. Additional production demands a supplement in the form of a grain mixture containing from 12 to 16 per cent digestible protein and this should be fed at the rate of one pound of mixture to each five to seven pounds of total milk production each day.

Along the Furrows

Chinese make a "milk" and "cheese" from the soybean. Eighteen companies in ten states operate soybean oil mills. The total supply of feed grains in the United States is the smallest since 1901. Inhabitants of Vienna, Austria, consumed 270,000,000 gallons of milk in 1932. The Irish Free State has extended its bounties on agricultural produce until spring. Problems met in replanning farms include land clearing, field arrangement, drainage, soil erosion, power and machinery and buildings. Cattle are not native to the western hemisphere. The first shipment from Europe was landed at Vera Cruz, Mexico, in 1519. Others were landed at Jamestown in 1611, and at Plymouth in 1620.

DOGS AND EVOLUTION

Charles Darwin would have been interested in the recent assertion of Dr. Charles H. Stockard of Cornell University, that dogs are losing their toes. It was from just such observation of past and present vertebrates that Darwin formed his original hypothesis of evolution. The gradual retraction of the two side toes possessed by the tiny hypohippus to the vestigial bony structure near the knee of the present horse is well known.

The dog at present has five toes, says Doctor Stockard, of which the inner toe is disappearing. Next to go will be the outer toe, leaving him three, such as the ancestor of the horse once had. Will a continuance of the process mean the development of hoofs on dogs?—Exchange.

FIRST LINCOLN STATUE
Made by Lott Flannery, it was unveiled in 1900 and stands in front of the District of Columbia court house in Washington.

National Life foundation, under the direction of Dr. Louis A. Warren, a Lincoln scholar, and along with the unveiling of the new Lincoln statue this foundation issued an important piece of Lincolniana, a book bearing the title of "Heroic Statues in Bronze of Abraham Lincoln," by Franklin R. Mead.

This compilation, illustrated with photographs, shows that there have been erected no less than 54 such statues and gives interesting data concerning the location, dates of dedication, names of the sculptors, facts about their careers, etc. From this source the following tabulation of Lincoln statues in bronze, listing them in the alphabetical order of states and countries in which they are located, is condensed:

CALIFORNIA: Lincoln, the President, by Haig Falgouta. Located in front of the city hall in San Francisco's civic center. Dedicated February 12, 1913.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA: Lincoln, the Emancipator, by Thomas Ball. Located in Lincoln park, Washington, D. C. Dedicated in 1870.

ENGLAND: Lincoln, the President, replica of the St. Gaudens statue in Lincoln park, Chicago. Located in front of Westminster Abbey. Dedicated in 1920.

Lincoln, the Candidate, by George Gray Barnard. Replica of the Barnard statue in Cincinnati. Located in Platt Field park in Manchester. Dedicated in 1918.

ILLINOIS: Lincoln, the President, by Augustus St. Gaudens. Located in Lincoln park, Chicago. Dedicated in 1867.

Lincoln, the Rail-splitter, by Charles J. Mumford. Located in Garfield park, Chicago. Dedicated in 1911.

Lincoln, the Emancipator, by Larkin Goldsmith Mead. Located on the Lincoln tomb,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN
Statue by Vinnie Ream in the Rotunda of the Capitol at Washington.

the magnificent figure, created by Daniel Chester French, which helps so much to make the Lincoln Memorial in Washington the splendid and awe-inspiring edifice that it is.

Then there is also in Washington the first statue of Lincoln ever made. Lott Flannery was the sculptor and it was unveiled April 18, 1900, just a little less than three years after Lincoln's assassination.

Washington also has another famous Lincoln statue which stands in the rotunda of the Capitol. It was made by Vinnie Ream, a twenty-two-year-old girl from Wisconsin who went to Washington to study art and took a position as a copyist in the Post Office department at $600 a year to support herself and her father. Clark Mills, the sculptor who made the famous "reeling horse statue" of Andrew Jackson which stands near the White House, discovered her talent and became her instructor in modeling.

Eastman Foresees Government Ownership and Operation of Railways—Progress of President's Money Bill—American Recognition for Mendieta.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WHEN the railroad problem of the United States is solved, it will be found that the solution is government ownership and operation, in the opinion of Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation. The conclusion is set forth in his first report, made to the Interstate Commerce commission and transmitted to President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner and Speaker Rainey. Mr. Eastman says the solution he foresees would not be inconsistent with our theory of government.

Explaining that when governments acquire private property they normally pay more than it is worth, Mr. Eastman reaches the conclusion that the remedy should not be applied to railroads now because the country is not financially in a condition to stand the strain of an acquisition of these great properties.

The co-ordinator, having set up what he wishes to be the objective of future national railroad policy, then proceeds to make recommendations within the limits of existing laws. He is decidedly skeptical of the Prince plan for consolidation of the roads, for his assistant, William B. Poland, has made studies that show the economies under this scheme would be less than one-third of the original estimates.

Most significant of the recommendations on consolidations is that proposals for compulsory consolidations should be given a trial, provided that the commission and the co-ordinator find the proposed mergers to be in the public interest. Mr. Eastman throws the weight of his approval behind a method of compulsory consolidation through exchange of securities without the use of cash. Execution of such a method, which the co-ordinator's legal assistant, Leslie Craven, believes can be accomplished, would accelerate the merging of eastern railroads into the four systems previously agreed upon.

Mr. Eastman says that reorganization of railroads now bankrupt "should be effected as speedily as practicable, and in a manner which will result in a very material reduction in fixed charges." He calls attention to the fact that some of the most successful reorganizations in railroad history took place in the midst of financial depression. Wall Street theory has been that reorganizations should be postponed as long as possible.

Many of the railroads' vital problems can be dealt with adequately by the carriers themselves, but "there is as yet insufficient organization and leadership in the industry for effective co-operation in such undertakings." It is quite possible, Mr. Eastman believes, that a study of these problems "will pave the way to a much larger use of motor vehicles as an adjunct to railroad service, and to a re-vamping and simplification of the freight-rate structure."

CARLOS MENDIETA is quite satisfactory to the United States as president of Cuba in view of the fact that he has the backing of a majority of the Cuban people and apparently is capable of restoring order in the island. So President Roosevelt informed the diplomatic envoys of the other Latin-American countries whom he had summoned to the White House. The President virtually invited the other nations to take the same course but made it clear that his mind was made up anyway. Next day Jefferson Caffery, acting for the United States government, went to the state department in Havana and handed to Secretary of State Clegg a document notifying the Cubans that the United States was ready to resume diplomatic relations.

Carlos Mendieta

The Cubans went wild with joy and the 21-gun salute from the American warship Wyoming in the harbor was answered by salutes from the forts. Mr. Caffery will be our ambassador to Cuba, and Manuel Marquez Sterling will be the Cuban ambassador to Washington. Recognition of the Mendieta regime came from practically all other nations.

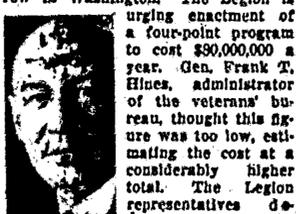

President Roosevelt plans to do several favors to Cuba that should make Mendieta solid with his people. The warships in Cuban waters will be withdrawn. The Platt amendment to the Cuban constitution, permitting the United States to intervene in Cuban affairs to maintain law and order will be junked. And congress will be asked to give Cuba a big preferential reduction in the American sugar tariff. Sugar raising is the island's chief industry and for five years it has been in a severe slump, and the festering depression has caused much of the political disturbance.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S money bill went through the house with a rush, the vote being 300 to 40. Sixty-eight Republicans joined the obedient Democrats in supporting the measure. James R. Clalborne of Missouri and George B. Terrell of Texas were the only Democrats recorded in the negative.

The senate received the bill and referred it to the banking and currency committee, which held a hearing that was lively while it lasted. Prof. George Warren, author of the dollar depreciation, and gold purchase program, explained to the committee the theory of commodity price regulation by manipulation of the currency. Then, taking up consideration of the measure, the committee heard the vigorous objections of Senators Glass, Gore and McAdoo to several features of the bill, notably the proposed seizure of the federal reserve bank gold, and the granting of unlimited financial power to the secretary of the treasury. It was confidently predicted by the administration leaders that the bill would be put through the senate unchanged, but stubborn fights over various proposed amendments were certain. The vote on a plan to limit the use of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund was expected to be close. Advocates of the re-remonetization of silver, who are fairly numerous in the senate, prepared a compromise silver plan to be offered as an amendment to the devaluation measure.

PLANS of the American Legion to ask congress for more liberal treatment of veterans have stirred up a row in Washington. The Legion is urging enactment of a four-point program to cost $80,000,000 a year. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of the veterans' bureau, thought this figure was too low, estimating the cost at a considerably higher total. The Legion representatives declared the government estimates were erroneous and by inference accused General Hines of ulterior motives and lack of integrity. In a letter to Edward A. Hayes, commander of the Legion, Hines denounced the criticism of his estimates as wholly uncalled for and said the Legion's own rehabilitation committee had admitted they were more nearly correct than its own estimates.

Meanwhile the President had announced new modifications of his executive regulations concerning payments to disabled war veterans, the changes adding more than $21,000,000 annually. There were intimations at the White House that Mr. Roosevelt would seek to persuade the Democrats in congress not to go beyond this liberalization.

Gen. F. T. Hines

GRAFT and favoritism have been rife in the use of GWA funds, according to the numerous complaints that have been received by President Roosevelt and Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, and audit of the books has been ordered in many localities. The unfortunate state of affairs was admitted by the President, who thus forestalled the revelation of the facts by congressional committees or Republican organizations. At the same time he made it plain that he was standing firmly behind Mr. Hopkins, the ousting of whom was tentatively planned by a group of house Democrats.

More than 4,000,000 persons were given jobs by the GWA and Mr. Roosevelt is asking for an appropriation of $350,000,000 to carry on the work to May 1; but he insists that the GWA organization be abandoned on that date according to his previous plan. Protests against this course, in congress and all over the country, have been numerous and loud. It is now considered likely that after May 1, continued employment for more than 2,000,000 of the GWA workers will be found in seasonal employment, public works and a revival of industry.

Senators Nye and Borah, who have been attacking the NRA on the ground that its codes fostered monopolies and tended to ruin small business concerns, won a concession from Administrator Johnson. The general agreed to the establishment of a board of outstanding citizens to which small manufacturers and other business men can bring their complaints of ruinous operation of the codes.

All the code authorities have been summoned to meet in Washington February 15 to consider code revisions.

THAT recovery outlays can be ended by June 30, 1935, is the belief of the President, and he gave expression to this when he announced his approval of the bill extending the life of the Reconstruction Finance corporation for another year. He enjoined Jesse Jones, chairman of the R. F. C., not to withdraw more than $500,000,000 from the treasury in the next fiscal year, except with prior Presidential approval.

DEVELOPMENTS in Japan indicate that the military clique is losing out and that Foreign Minister Koki Hirota will be able to carry out his plans to establish more friendly relations with the United States. Gen. Sadao Araki, who had been minister of war since December, 1931, and who conducted the campaign against China, has resigned ostensibly because of ill health, and has been succeeded by Gen. Senjuro Hayaashi. Last October Araki declared in an interview that "if people believe the foreign policy toward the United States will change, they are absolutely wrong." It was then predicted that there would be a split in the cabinet, and this appears to have come, with the less warlike ministers, led by Hirota, having the upper hand.

Hirota told the diet at its opening that Japan "ferently desires American friendship" and added that no question exists between Japan and the United States that is intrinsically difficult of solution.

SENATOR HUEY P. LONG of Louisiana sustained another severe blow in the New Orleans Democratic mayoral primary, which is equivalent to an election. The "Kingfish" candidate, John Klorer, was soundly beaten by T. Sommes Walmesley, the present incumbent and now one of Long's bitterest foes. There was a third candidate and Walmesley did not obtain a clear majority, but Klorer, however, would not force a runoff primary. His chief issue in the race was a drastic reduction in electric rates in New Orleans, and as the present city administration has promised to bring this about, Klorer said he would take it at its word.

The campaign for the nomination was exceedingly stormy with prospects of violence that did not develop when the day came. Walmesley and Long in their speeches denounced each other without reserve, and the mayor promised to follow the senator to Washington, if necessary, and give him a good thrashing. Having won the fight at the polls, he probably will abandon this project, though he and his organization have pledged themselves to "exterminate" Huey from public life.

JOHN H. MCCOBEY, for almost a quarter of a century the big Tammany boss of Brooklyn, died of heart disease, and his demise probably means the end of Tammany's domination of the Democratic party in New York, at least for a time. It was expected that a leader satisfactory to the supporters of President Roosevelt would be selected to succeed McCobey.

Another once notable political leader passed away when Edward J. Brundage of Chicago committed suicide, presumably because of financial troubles. Highly respected as a lawyer and a man, he formerly was prominent in the Republican party in Illinois and had been attorney general of the state.

OSCAR DE PRIEST of Chicago, the only negro in congress, injected the race question into the house of representatives, to the great distress of Speaker Rainey and the other Democratic leaders. Louis Morris, secretary to Mr. De Priest, and his son were refused service in the grill of the house restaurant, the manager informing them that this was in accordance with his orders from Representative Lindsey C. Warren of North Carolina, Democrat, chairman of the committee on accounts, which directs the affairs of the restaurant. Mr. De Priest, hearing of this, was exceedingly wroth and insisted on demanding a special investigation to determine by what authority the committee "controls and manages the conduct of the house restaurant, and by what authority said committee or any member thereof issued and enforced rules or instructions whereby any citizen of the United States is discriminated against on account of race, color, or creed."

Oscar De Priest

CARL VINSON, chairman of the house naval affairs committee, announced that his committee was about to introduce a bill authorizing a $390,000,000 five-year ship construction program; and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt gave out word that the President would throw the full support of the administration behind legislation designed to bring the navy up to treaty strength. The house appropriations committee recommended a fund of $370,000 for restoring the Great Lakes Naval station to its former status as the navy's major interior training post.

FURTHER information about the earthquake in India leads to the belief that it was the greatest disaster that country ever suffered. That the loss of life was appalling is shown by the statement of the rajah of Monghyr that the dead there alone numbered 25,000. An engineer was quoted as having declared after a survey that the names of both Monghyr and Muzaffarpur might as well be erased from the map.

HIGH VALUE SET ON MANUSCRIPT

Record Price Paid by British Museum.

Curious Londoners, peering through a glass case in the British museum, can now see a collection of rough parchment sheets on which Greek characters were laboriously inscribed, 1,600 years ago. Though perfectly legible, the writing is without spacing and totally devoid of punctuation. But this manuscript is valued at well over a thousand times its weight in gold.

One reads with a sort of fascination of the purchase from non-religious Russia of the "Codex Sinaiticus," one of the two Fourth century Bible texts, for £100,000, which is about $514,000 at current exchange and the highest price ever paid for a single manuscript. But, as if this sum were not enough to excite interest, book collectors assure us that the British government made a bargain. For this unique manuscript has been valued as high as $1,250,000.

Ninety years ago a Biblical scholar of the University of Leipzig, Constantine Tischendorf by name, came upon a few stray leaves of parchment in a monastery on Mount Sinai. He never found the body of the text, but in 1859 he returned to decipher the manuscript that came to be known as the "Codex Sinaiticus." The monks, oblivious to the real worth of their document, yielded it to Czar Nicholas, who had jurisdiction of Greek church property. In 1917 this unique relic passed to the Soviet and now, by purchase, to the British museum.

Although some may believe that there is something fictitious in the value given by time, it is from these early texts and scattered portions of other manuscripts that the present Bible is established. The only other Fourth century manuscript is held by the pope, as its name, Codex Vaticanus, implies. Still another early Greek text, dating from the Fifth century, is the Codex Alexandrinus—also held by the British museum.

The acquisition of the Codex Sinaiticus recalls the purchase several years ago of the Vollbehr collection of incunabula, by which congress added the Gutenberg Bible and several hundred other antiquities to its library at a cost of about $2,000,000. This transaction was negotiated largely by Representative Ross Collins, a somewhat paradoxically, heads the military subcommittee of the house appropriations committee. If we estimate Mr. Collins correctly he may sometimes reflect that of all the appropriations which have passed under his attentive scrutiny, that for the Vollbehr collection was perhaps the best investment.—Washington Post.

Make this lip test

LOOK at them... and your cheeks, too, without a make-up. Do they possess the natural glow of health, which comes from a sufficiency of rich, red blood? If they do, make-up is simple... if they don't read on... you may find one of the reasons why your skin is not clear and rosy.

You cannot have red lips, rosy cheeks, energy and cheerfulness if your blood is in a run-down condition. Lack of hemo-globin, the red coloring of the blood, may also indicate a weakened condition of the body... loss of strength... poor appetite.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very necessary in restoring a low hemo-globin content. If your condition suggests a blood tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite... your color and skin should improve with increased strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes... the larger is more economical.

Congressional Reflections

By Congressman Dennis Chavez

There have been a number of bills introduced this week that are of considerable interest to the citizens of New Mexico. I introduced on yesterday a bill to further extend the operation of the Act entitled "An act for the temporary relief of water users on irrigation projects constructed and operated under the reclamation law", approved April 1, 1932. This bill has been referred by the Speaker to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of which I am Chairman. A Departmental report has been requested for the consideration of the membership of this Committee. If this report is favorable, I expect very little opposition either in the Committee or on the floor of the House. A similar bill was introduced in the Senate simultaneously by Senator Adams of Colorado. I also introduced a Resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, appropriating $60,000 for the purpose of defraying expenses of the American Section, International Boundary Commission, United States and Mexico, in the conduct of an engineering investigation, study and report to the Secretary of State to determine the feasibility and best means of effecting the canalization of the Rio Grande from Cerralvo Reservoir site in New Mexico to the international diversion dam near El Paso, Texas. This Resolution was introduced in the Senate by our Senators, Cutting and Hatch. Of particular interest was the bill introduced by Senator Wheeler on yesterday and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs in the Senate. The purpose of this bill was to have the exterior boundaries of the Navajo Indian Reservation in New Mexico defined. Section 3 of this bill amends the provision in the Act of March 3, 1921, authorizing the acceptance of relinquishments by the Secretary of the Interior, including allotment selections, for the purpose of effecting exchanges and consolidations of privately owned lands within San Juan, McKinley and Valencia Counties, so as to apply to lands within Socorro, Bernalillo and Sandoval counties.

A conference between the Director of the Budget and a group of Western Representatives resulted in a much larger appropriation for control of predatory animals this week. The amount originally asked for was $500,000 but the Director of the Budget cut this to only $90,000. There was considerable opposition to this drastic cut on Capital, so after our conference the Director of the Budget recommended that $400,000 would be allowed. This amount, although not as much as we would like to have had, will enable that agency to continue their splendid work in an effective method.

Legislation in the House this week has been of more than usual interest for we have again considered the President's monetary legislation, agreed to the Senate Amendments and passed this important bill, which has since been signed by the President and has become a law; The Navy appropriation bill, the largest that has ever been passed during peacetime; the seating of a Representative from Louisiana. It was decided by a majority of the Members that the citizens of the Sixth Congress and district should elect one at another election.

A very unique affair was the informal New Mexican dinner given by Mrs. Chavez at her home on Saturday, January 27th. The guests included Congressman and Mrs. R. E. Thomson, of El Paso; Congressman and Mrs. Martin Dies of Orange, Texas; Mr. Charles Faby, the Assistant Solicitor of the Interior Department and Mrs. Faby; Mr. Adrian Pool, Collector of Custom of El Paso; Mrs. J. Warner Blair, National Committeewoman of the American Legion Auxiliary, Albuquerque; Mr. Rowland Har-

The Rev. John L. Lawson went to Corona Monday to conduct funeral services for Kenneth Mays, who was accidentally drowned Sunday, particulars of which will be found in the Ancho notes. This was indeed a sad tragedy.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Clymer spent Sunday and Monday here visiting their little grandson, Jerry Clymer and the Harmon family.

Mrs. Joe Devine was ill the first of the week, but is somewhat improved at present.

Stop Getting Up Nights

Lax the Bladder With Juniper Oil, Buchu, Etc.

Drive out impurities and excess acids that cause irritation, burning and frequent desire. Juniper oil is pleasant to take in the form of BUKETS, the bladder laxative, also containing Buchu leaves, etc. Works on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. Get a 25c box from any drug store. After four days if not relieved of "getting up nights" go back and get your money. If you are bothered with backache or leg pains caused from bladder disorders you are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BUSTER BEAR IS PIGGISH

NOW, wouldn't you suppose that when there is plenty for everybody, everybody would be contented and happy? But often, altogether too often, it isn't so at all. The more folks have, the more they want. And there are other folks who, no matter how much they have, seem to think that others may be having something better, and instead of making the most of what they have, go about trying to get what their neighbors have.

It seemed, it really did, that there were enough of those queer three-kid little brown nuts under the beech trees for everybody to have all he could eat, and that that beech-nut picnic that beautiful October morning should be the merriest, happiest kind of a picnic. But it wasn't. No, sir, it wasn't. The reason was the piggishness of Buster Bear.

"These Nuts Are Mine, All Mine," He Roared.

When Buster arrived under the beech trees and saw so many others gathered there for the very same purpose that had brought him there, he right away let selfishness get the best of him. He was greedy, was Buster Bear. He was so greedy that he couldn't bear to see anyone else get a single one of those little brown sweet nuts, although he knew well enough that he couldn't eat all of them to save his life. Right away he began to growl, and you know his growl is deep and grumbly-rumbly and not at all pleasant to hear.

Those who were nearest him moved off a little further, but went right on picking up those brown, sweet little nuts. Buster Bear growled more and his growl was deeper and more grumbly-rumbly. All the other little people looked at him anxiously, but kept right on hunting for those brown sweet little nuts. Then Buster Bear quite lost his temper.

"These nuts are mine, all mine," he roared. Then he ran at Lightfoot the Deer.

WITTY KITTY

By NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

The Girl-Friend says she used to tell her husband everything that happened, and now she tells him a lot of things that never happened.

Lightfoot bounded away, but not far. He knew that Buster Bear could not catch him, and he had no mind to leave those nuts. Then Buster rushed at the Gobbler family and all the Gobblers scurried away, each in a different direction, but they didn't go far. Then Buster rushed this way and rushed that way wherever he saw anyone picking up nuts.

Mrs. Grouse merely darted behind a fallen tree and the minute Buster's back was turned she was scratching over-leaves-in-search-of-nuts again. Sammy Jay and Redhead the Woodpecker merely flew up in a tree. Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Uncle Billy and Mrs. Possum climbed the nearest trees. But they were back on the ground again as soon as Buster had turned away.

Peter Rabbit, who was hiding near to see all that went on, had to laugh. He couldn't help it. There was great big Buster Bear so piggish that he wanted, all, yet getting hardly a taste because he was spending his time chasing his neighbors. It often is that way with piggish people. In trying to get more than their share they fall to get what they might have as well as not.

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

By JEAN NEWTON

ON "THE GOOD OLD DAYS"

IT IS the Thursday Lecture; in one sense, a day of public shame; the day on which transgressors who have made themselves liable to the minor severities of the Puritan law, receive their punishment. At this moment the constable has bound an idle fellow to the whipping-post and is giving him his deserts with a cat-o'-nine-tails.

"Ever since sunrise Daniel Fairfield has been standing on the steps of the meeting-house with a halter about his neck, which he is condemned to wear visibly throughout his lifetime; Dorothy Talby is chained to a post at the corner of Prison-lane, with the hot sun blazing on her matronly face, and for no other offense than lifting her hand against her husband. Such are the profitable sights that serve the good people of the New England village to while away the earlier part of lecture-day.

That is a "bit" from one of Nathaniel Hawthorne's sketches of life in old New England. He goes on to describe an aged couple, John Proctor and his wife, Elizabeth, passing, in a company of other condemned prisoners, on their way to the execution place on Gallows Hill. "If there are two old people in the whole country," he says, "who seem to have led a true Christian life, it is this very pair. Yet it was sworn before the worshipful Chief Justice that they afflicted children in the nighttime." So to the gallows the good old couple go.

If you know anyone who casts a longing eye on romantic pictures of former times, who thinks we are unfortunate to be living in this day and age—anyone who decries modern times as giving less opportunity for happiness than "the good old days" of some period in the past—tell him or her to read up on the life of that period, not in dry history books, but in such pictures of daily living as these sketches by Hawthorne.

The Puritans, of course, had a talent for making a special kind of hell on earth for themselves and each other. But take any age in the past and familiarize yourself with the details of daily living then and you are bound to offer up a fervent prayer of thankfulness for having been born when you were.

For women particularly the most glamorous times in the past would make a very poor exchange. In times and places where men were not engaged in making living difficult for each other they certainly made no effort to make it easy for women. Compare this day of emancipation for women of all classes and tell me—would you swap it for any other?

BEAUTY TALKS

By

MARJORIE DUNCAN

STOUT, THIN OR NORMAL?

THE beauty world is at war again—oh, not a very serious war—but just enough to make it very, very interesting. There are some that feel the whole world is reducing, others that say curves are in vogue. In fact, the latter group contends that reducing ended when the Empress Eugenie hat started. Whether or not the bread and butter loaf is to replace the lettuce leaf only time will tell. Time changes, women with it, and fashion is more fickle than the femme.

My personal opinion is that women are becoming quite, quite sane in the business of fashioning the figure. Yes, some have gone to the extreme in attempting to achieve sylph-like proportions. With the boyish, flapper form as the result. But, happily, they are comparatively few. And certain it is too that the South African type of beauty is pronounced "far too fat" by Americans.

Slender hips, and squatting to keep them trim, are still in vogue. Scrawny shoulders and chests are taking on some human flesh and better feminine form thereby. Women will soon be the normal healthy and beautiful specimens that Nature plus Art can make them. And how is this new beauty to be achieved? As far as the figure is concerned, there's one magic word: "exercise."

More and more women are squatting and twisting and arm-swinging their figures into flattering proportions. For though chest and shoulders take on the needed padding, abdomens must remain flat and hips trim.

You can, if you wish, massage arms and shoulders with a fattening cream to encourage the rounded pads to form, or slap hip bulges into shape with camphor and alcohol solution. But in themselves these mediums cannot work magic. Only when accompanied by exercise are they resultful.

Which side are you on—stout, thin or just right happy and healthy norf?

I had a letter a few days ago from a woman who told me that her friend had reduced a great deal of weight by the thyroid gland treatments, and so she was going to have them too. The treatments may have been splendid for her friend, but that is no indication that she needs them. Only a reputable physician after a very careful physical examination should recommend and administer any glandular treatments.

EXPERT DISCUSSES ROUGE

ROUGE is such an important factor in the make-up ensemble. Used properly, in the right shade and blended cleverly it can soften hard lines, make contour defects less apparent and enhance one's natural color and sparkle and that look that says "I'm alive—and glad to be."

Properly applied rouge can make your make-up and make you more alluring, interesting. But—poorly applied, it had better be left off entirely. Before choosing your rouge decide whether you wish a liquid, cream or compact rouge. Also make sure that the color you choose is right.

There are three types of rouge—liquid, cream or paste, and dry or compact rouge. Each has its advantages. The liquid stays on longest. But it is most difficult to use.

Cream or paste rouge is not drying, blends more easily than liquid rouge, and gives a warmer, "under the skin" quality that comes closest to natural color. Take a wet bit on the middle finger and dab it on near the cheekbone where your natural color is. Now blend with another finger—upward and outward along the natural color area. Remember that a little is enough. It is better to start with too little and add a bit than to start with too much and attempt to tone down the color. That is too difficult. Remember, too, that too much rouge will make the face look harder and older, just as sharp edges will. Rouge placed too low on the cheek has the same effect. Keep it hanging high. Compact rouge, with which we are all familiar, is simplest to apply—and is used to "touch up" the make-up.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on choosing the right shade. With so many colors offered—with rouges ranging from a light coral to a deep vermilion, with make-up experts and beauty savants ready to help, there is no reason why every woman should not have her own shade of rouge. After exercising or after patting the skin with tonic you can tell where your color naturally appears, but also your own color tone.

I have found that cream rouge is easiest to blend, and gives the most natural, delicate and warm effect. Over it lightly blend powder, patting and blending. Do not rub. Then apply your lip paste or lipstick and remember that cream rouge for cheeks and make-up for lips should harmonize exactly. That is one of the important rules of make-up.

Learn the art of applying perfume. Become a devotee of the stonizer. Spray it lightly on your skin, your lingerie, the lining of your hat. Rub just a bit on the palm of your hands, touch a bit behind your ears, on your brows and lips. But always remember that just a little is enough. Also make use of the delightful perfume tricks that smart women know.

SNAKE VENOM OF USE IN MEDICINE, IS LATEST IDEA

Modern medical research is looking for cures in strange places.

Experiments have been carried out over a period of years in a Swiss clinical institute, and now the Pasteur Institute in Paris is testing the strangest cure of all—snake venom.

There are scientists who believe that the world's poisonous snakes, which have killed millions of people in the past, may save millions more in the future, once we understand how to use their venom properly in the treatment of disease.

Already some remarkable cures are on record. About the beginning of this century, when plague was raging in India, a police sergeant, in the last stage of collapse from the dread disease, was given an injection of cobra venom.

No one expected him to live, but in a month he was back at duty. The cobra had saved his life.

The treatment, however, was not tested on a large scale. Partly the attitude of the natives, many of whom believed that patients taken to the plague camps were put to death, may have been responsible for this. Partly it was due to the fact that the action of the venom was uncertain, and that, as a cure, it might easily be more deadly than the disease.

This is because, like other snake venoms, that of the cobra consists of a collection of powerful poisons, and an injection of it causes reactions much more complex than those set up by a dose of any of the simple poisons which are used in medicine.

Before it can be used in the treatment of disease, therefore, many authorities believe that the various elements of the venom should be separated and standardized, and their action carefully studied. The scientists of the Pasteur Institute, however, are no doubt alive to the dangers, and will proceed carefully.

Lay Plans to Salvage Sunken Persian Armada

A company has been formed in Italy to raise the 607 Persian battle-ships sunk in the battle of Salamis, 2,413 years ago. Italian salvagers, they admit, raised the galleys of Calligula in the Lake of Nemi, but they did it by draining the lake. An Italian company also fished up a Venetian galley sunk in the harbor of Rhodes 400 years ago. But there is a big difference, archeologists assert, between this work and the job of bringing the fleet of Xerxes to the surface. The Bay of Salamis is of great depth, they say, while Lake Nemi was comparably shallow. What with the salt water, the tides, the seaweed and the time that has elapsed since 450 B. C. it is probable, experts say, that all traces of the mighty Persian armada which the Athenians sank are gone. It would be much better, in the opinion of the Athenian archeologists, to fish up the money sunk with the Turkish and Egyptian warships at the battle of Navarino, 103 years ago.

PICTURESQUE FREIBURG

This Headress is Not Strange Around Freiburg.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

FREIBURG, Germany, lovely gateway to the Black Forest, is not only proud of its rank among the most picturesque cities of Europe, but also of its more than 800 years of life. The city is of special interest to Americans because Martin Waldseemüller, the geographer, who was the first to put the name "America" on a map, was a Freiburger.

Two centuries before the Christian era, the Celts roamed over the site of Freiburg. They were gradually pushed out of the Upper Rhine valley, however, by German tribes.

Then came the Romans. In B. C. 14 Tiberius crossed the Rhine, and shortly, what with the Roman legions on one side and the German on the other, the fertile plain known as Breisgau and the wild forest land called the Schwarzwald became what they still are, frontier country. In A. D. 74 a military road was built from what is now Strasbourg to the Danube.

Those were boom days, for under the protection of the Romans a trade flowed up and down the road that ran along the right bank of the Rhine from Basel to Mainz, and in favorable places forts and small settlements sprang up. It was then that Badenweiler, slightly to the south of the present Freiburg, and Baden, to the north, first achieved renown as fashionable bathing resorts.

In about two hundred years the Roman bubble burst. The German tribes pounced down, took the forts, and again became masters of the Rhine.

By a curious turn of fortune in the Seventh century, the Celts again appeared on the scene, this time in the form of Celtic Irish missionaries.

By the end of the Eighth century the Germans were mostly Christianized.

Founded by Duke Konrad.

By the beginning of the Twelfth century the Breisgau, of which Freiburg was the ancient capital, was a thriving district. Farmers tilled the heavy, fruitful soil of the floor plain, planted vineyards on the warm south slopes, and trafficked with wandering peddlers from Strasbourg and Basel and even from Italian cities and the Baltic.

Obviously the one thing needed to complete the picture was a center of trade, a city. And in 1120 Duke Konrad of Zähringen cast his eye about for a suitable site.

Just where the river Dreisam emerges from its valley and flows out into the Rhine plain, on a well-inclined flat of outwash gravel, stood a small hunting lodge. Here was the ideal city site.

Before it spread the fertile Rhine plain; behind it ranged a semi-circle of mountains split by the valley of the Dreisam. Here was ample water supply, sufficient slope to insure good drainage, and protection from inclement weather and foes. Most important of all, here was a junction of roads, the north-south road leading from Italy to the Baltic, and the east-west road leading from France to Swabia and the Danube country. The new town then, would be a crossroads affair, through which travelers coming from every direction would have to pass.

With the hunting lodge as a central point, the duke carefully planned the city of Freiburg. Four principal gates gave entrance to the town. Two principal streets crossed the hut at right angles and formed four large blocks, which were cut up into smaller blocks by narrow alleys running parallel to the main streets.

Giving play to his imagination, the duke devised a scheme entirely new to medieval city planning, which caused a flutter among travelers of the day, whereby a series of swift-flowing brooks, supplied with water from the Dreisam, were directed down all the streets and alleys.

These brooks carried away the sewage and insured a supply of fresh water, giving to Freiburg a reputation, which it has never lost, for cleanliness and healthfulness. They took the place of washbasins and they acted as fire department. It is an ingenious arrangement.

Since a town is not a town without inhabitants, the versatile duke worked out a plan to boost population. He named his offspring Freiburg and promised freedom to any man who would live within its walls for a year and a day. Such intoxicating liberty naturally drew people from far and near, and within a hundred years of its founding Freiburg was one of the most important cities of the upper Rhine.

How It Was Peopled.

It is astonishing how many of the characteristics of that Freiburg of the Twelfth century survive today. The walls are gone, save for scattered remains here and there. Two of the gates have vanished, leaving only the highly decorated and impressive tower gates, Martinstor and Schwabentor; but the spot where the hunting lodge stood is still the center of the city, and the principal streets of 1120 which intersect this spot are still the principal streets in 1934.

Freiburg streets have lost little of their medieval savor. Within the limits of the original wall, the streets and alleys, some so narrow that only a German rarity, two thin people, can pass in them, twist and bulge and bend with startling abandon and a rakish disregard for right angles.

Many of them, too, still bear their quaint old names. Oberlinden square, where a linden tree has stood, according to definite official record, since the middle of the Twelfth century, has been known by the same name since the city was founded.

The brooks also remain. A few, especially in the main streets, have been covered with gratings, and only the broken purl of water tells of their existence. But in most of the lesser streets they hurtle along, open and clean and sparkling, exquisite expanses for small boys to sail boats, delicious places for youthful paddling when the hot days come.

Ancient Houses Still Stand.

Not a few of the houses that flank these narrow, twisting streets date back to the city's infancy. For Freiburg, unlike most of the towns of this frontier country, such as Heideberg, was never entirely razed by enemy fire, although it has belonged in turn to the Zähringens, to Austria, Sweden, France, Italy, and Germany. It has withstood almost countless sieges and has had its suburbs burned to its very walls many times.

It is not uncommon to see buildings with thirteenth or fourteenth century date plates. Some of them still bear the names which were in use long before street numbers had been thought of. The Black Letter, the Golden Tankard and the White Goose are among these.

The odd thing about many of the old places is that you must really know Freiburg before you discover them. Stand at the fountain on the reputed site of the hunting lodge, for instance, and cast your eye up and down the intersecting streets on a level with the pavement. You see windows full of furniture, or sausages, or hats, or flowers, or rows of those extraordinary wax figures whose marked family resemblance and abandoned poses are peculiar to Germany. But raise your eyes above the shop windows and you are back in the days of old when knights were bold. No two houses are the same height or width or color; no two roofs are the same shape or tilt. Step gables mount dizzily, high-peaked roofs lurch skyward, dormer windows stand out like staring, inquisitive eyes.

Freiburg's cathedral was the first Gothic church of any size to be fully completed in Germany during the Middle Ages. It stands a little askew, like everything else in the town, in the wide Münsterplatz, or Cathedral square. The enormous mass of native red sandstone surmounted by a single soaring spire of almost incredibly delicate filigree work, was started soon after the founding of the city and was more than 800 years in building.

Architects, painters, woodcarvers, sculptors, and masons came from every part of Europe to contribute to its beauty; and the long, low-roofed, heavily-beamed dwelling that housed the architects and master builders during its construction still remains. One of the altar pieces was painted by Hans Holbein the Younger.

The suit of the Fernandez Lund and Cattle Co., seeking to enjoin the New Mexico State Tax Commission from enforcing the valuations placed on grazing lands, is premature, since assessments have not yet been made on the land, a demurrer to the complaint, filed by the commission, states.

Bids on three road construction jobs have been opened by the State Highway Department. The projects involve oil surfacing of fourteen and one-half miles of U. S. 260 between Concho and St. Johns; construction of a small timber bridge on U. S. 89 near Wickenburg; and realignment of U. S. 30 through Tempe.

Coal production in New Mexico dropped off 124,499 tons and suffered a loss in value of $769,223 during the year which ended Oct. 31, according to figures contained in the annual report of Warren Bracewell, state mine inspector. His reports show that during last year the mines produced and sold 1,176,591 tons of coal, valued at $2,988,370.

Net gasoline tax collections of $250,376.45 for December in Arizona were reported by the motor vehicle division. Net collections in December, 1932, were $238,479.60. Refunds totaled $39,113.90. Of the net collections, $25,224.79 went to the state welfare relief fund; $75,165.39 was apportioned among the counties, and $150,886.37 was credited to the state highway fund.

D. C. George, state entomologist, has announced that the state's new quarantine inspection station at Globe, Ariz., has been opened. William Winder of Solomonville is in charge of the station and his staff includes Walter Trench of Phoenix and L. B. Curtis of Bisbee. The new station was established to check movements of cotton from the Stafford district in Pinal and Maricopa counties.

The only wild bison herd at large in its natural habitat in the United States ran for cover Saturday, Jan. 20, as Arizona's annual buffalo hunt started in House Rock valley. A woman and five men, rifles ready, rode through the tall clumps of range grass, advancing into the winter feeding grounds of the wily big beasts, which are thinned under state supervision each year to prevent them eating themselves out of sustenance.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the First Baptist church in Albuquerque recently, Gov. A. W. Hockenbush expressed regret at the lack of whiskey in the hotels and cafes of the state. The governor, an ardent dry, touched but lightly on the repeal question, confining his remarks to a statement that the people had been promised the open saloon would never return, but that now one is confronted on every side by the reek of whiskey.

The fourth annual conference of unit presidents and secretaries of the New Mexico department of the American Legion Auxiliary closed in Albuquerque recently, without the adoption of any resolution or statement regarding the charter dispute involving the New Mexico department of the Legion. The conference took no action in setting a date or place for this year's convention in order to avoid becoming mixed up in the controversy.

On the last day for holders of gold to turn it in to the government two Tucson banks accepted for shipment to El Paso approximately $6,000 in gold. A. J. McKelvey, vice president of the Southern Arizona bank, said the shipment effected virtually a "clean-up" of all gold in the Tucson area. He said he had no way of knowing, however, how much gold might still be out, but that he believed there is practically no gold hoarding now.

The proposed business tax, sponsored by the legislative committee of the State Federation of Taxpayers' Association, comes as the result of a study and suggestions made by a committee of professors at the University of New Mexico. The committee, declared by Dr. J. F. Zimmerman, president, not to be the state's "brain trust," was named some months ago by the Bernalillo County Taxpayers' Association to offer suggestions as to tax legislation.

William Zimmerman, assistant commissioner of Indian affairs, has announced that representatives of his division are in New Mexico to conduct a survey and preliminary selection of site and land to be used as an institute on Navajo reservation. The department has been allotted $950,000 by PWA representatives. The party includes architects and engineers. Final decision regarding the site has not yet been made. The institute is to be headquarters for the entire Navajo area, according to Zimmerman.

SYNOPSIS

Disappointed through her inability to put finishing touches to her costume for a dance, Anne Chamberlain is irritated by the stolidity of her escort, George Hildreth. At the dance a visitor in the community, Neal Conrad, young lawyer, is impressed by Anne, precisely by his fine character. A few days later she accompanies him and his hostess, Mrs. Griffin, on a picnic. At the end of the day Neal declares his love and they become engaged. The marriage is solemnized. At Washington, on their honeymoon, the Conrads meet Clarence Hathaway, friend of Neal's, young diplomat. The young couple start housekeeping. Anne's health begins to fail. Neal, engrossed in politics, does not notice. She realizes she is to be a mother. While Neal is away, Anne has a visit from an old friend, Mr. Goldenburg.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

Mr. Goldenburg, disengaging his hand, walked over to the telephone. "There is a doctor in Hinsboro, I suppose he'll?" he asked sarcastically. "Doctor Pratt? So—led me see vat is his number—seven-thirty-five—Yes, yes."

Doctor Pratt was in, he would be over, he said, right away. And in the scant half hour that elapsed before his appearance, Mr. Goldenburg proceeded to "tidy things up" with a dexterity and a swiftness remarkable in so plump and placid a person. Then with complete composure he admitted the surprised physician, still wearing one of Anne's aprons firmly tied about his waist.

Doctor Pratt was not long in rendering his verdict. There must be regular care and skilled treatment without delay. Anne's condition was not dangerous, but he could not venture to describe it as otherwise than serious. Would she rather be moved to a hospital, or have a nurse and maid installed? And of course her husband must be advised at once. It was useless for Anne to protest; Doctor Pratt spoke, brusquely, about the danger to the baby, when she tried to do so. Appealingly, she turned to Mr. Goldenburg.

"Do you suppose, if you telegraphed Mabel, she would come and stay with me? I wouldn't know where to get a maid, or what to do with her afterwards. But Mabel—Mabel is my best friend," she explained to the doctor, "except Mr. and Mrs. Goldenburg. We've often planned that she should come and visit me, but somehow—"

"Why not telephone? Then she could get here sooner."

Mr. Goldenburg was already in action again. Without much difficulty, he located Mabel, and Mabel said that she would be delighted to come, that she would be there in the morning. The doctor departed, promising to send around a nurse at once; and, within an hour, the nurse materialized. And leaving her to bathe the patient and make her bed, Mr. Goldenburg sought at first Mrs. Simmons, next Mrs. Conrad, and finally—catching the last train to Belford—Neal.

Anne never knew exactly what he said to any of them; she was, in fact, too ill to inquire, or to care, for several weeks. But, as those weeks dragged their slow course through, she became vaguely and comfortably conscious, sick as she was, that she was happier than she had been in a long, long time. Mabel arrived, Miss Keep, the nurse, waited on her by inches. Neal came home looking very much cowed, badly frightened—all the gay self-confidence, the driving energy, wiped from his face. He brought her flowers—the first he had given her since her honeymoon, and sat down beside her on the bed, his shoulders sagging, and tried to talk to her, but couldn't because his voice shook so. At first, that is—afterwards he collected himself and spoke better. But not until she had seen how shaken he was, how sorry and, forgiving him, forgotten there was anything to forgive.

By the first of April, Anne was sufficiently better so that Miss Keep could leave. Mabel caring for her—since now she did not need so much care—and doing the housework, too. By the first of May she was up for a little while each day. The session of the legislature was over, and Neal was home again for good, home, that is, until another election at least—he had decided to run for office again then, this time for the state senate. He was very kind to her, very thoughtful. The first of June, Mabel went home, leaving them alone again, and they were very happy. Anne did quantities of sewing, sitting on the little porch; she trimmed a basinet with pink silk and white dotted muslin and lace which the Goldenburgs sent her, she lined a little wicker chest of drawers with scented pads, she feather-stitched tiny flannel petticoats and hemstitched tiny muslin dresses. Mrs. Simmons did the washing and ironing and the cleaning, and Neal took care of the garden; but except for this help, she did her own work again.

Anne's baby was born in the Hinsboro hospital on a torrid night near the end of August. She was in labor for thirty-six hours. When the doctor began to give her whiffs of ether to take off the sharp edge of the pains; Neal, who had stayed with her up to that time, became deathly sick from the smell of it, and left her. When Doctor Pratt finally held the ether close to her face, telling her to breathe as much as she wanted of it, she snatched it from him, and pulled it down over her mouth and nose, tightly, tightly, oblivion the only mercy she sought—if it could last forever, if it only could, her last conscious prayer.

Her consciousness returned in waves. She babbled, telling secrets she did not mean to divulge, and yet unable to be silent. She felt bruised and beaten, she longed to be left to die in peace—and still they kept doing things to her, things that disturbed her, things that hurt her. If they would only go away! She cried, weakly, the tears dropping down from her cheeks to the pillow, and yet she could not move to wipe them off, and no one else seemed to notice them.

Then suddenly, Neal was there beside her, kissing the tears away; and between them on the bed, lay their little son.

CHAPTER VII

In the next eight years, Neal built up his law practice, which continued to grow, not indeed by leaps and bounds, but steadily and satisfactorily. He also served four terms in the state legislature, the third as speaker of the house, the fourth as chairman of the most important committee in the senate.

During the same eight years, Anne, smothering again and again her disappointment at taking no tangible part in her husband's campaign, and at being left behind when he went to Belford, washed, cooked, cleaned, sewed, and took care of Junior; presented that husky youngster, when he was three years old, with a little sister, Nancy; took care of them both; washed, cooked, cleaned and sewed some more.

When the second baby was imminent, it became apparent that the little flat, in which they had continued to live up to this time, would not suffice for the family needs any longer. So they moved to a six-room cottage, which they were able to rent cheaply, and which was safely in need of paint, paper, and plumbing. By degrees they persuaded a reluctant landlord to make it more comfortable and attractive. With two more rooms in their possession than they had since their marriage, they converted one into a nursery, and one into a den, while the large yard provided the children with a space in which to range, and Anne a space in which to plant and cultivate both a flower and a vegetable garden.

Mabel came and spent a month with them when Anne left the hospital after Nancy's birth, a complacent Mabel, engaged to George, who had become more and more prosperous and who had the largest farm and the finest barns in Hamstead. After she left, Anne was unable to go motoring with Neal, or entertain her little bridge club. Worse than this, her close confinement to the house, and the never-ending drudgery of her work began to tell on her heavily. She not only grew very thin herself, but the baby stopped gaining, became fretful, and turned blue under the eyes. Alarmed, Anne consulted Doctor Pratt, and he told her that unless she had regular help and equally regular recreation, she would have to wean Nancy.

"And that," he added, meaningly, "you should not, of course, consider in this warm weather."

Anne's dread of the "servant problem" rose from a deeper source than the horrible stories she had heard from her mother-in-law about the depravity of all domestic workers; it rose also from her very sincere sense of her own probable incompetence, in directing, rather than doing, work, and her unwillingness to entrust the care of the children to anyone else. But to her infinite surprise and relief, Dora King, the first applicant in response to the advertisement, came when she said she would, contentedly took possession of the attic, and seemed perfectly satisfied to remain. She was, like Anne herself, a farmer's daughter, who had drifted to a little city. She was willing to learn; and Anne, far from resenting her ignorance, marveled at the quickness with which she overcame it.

Scraps of Humor

HE PASSED

The irate father was talking to his son, who had been sadly neglecting his studies.

"You are supposed to be studying for your exam, and yet I find you were at a dance last night, and came home at 2 a. m. I said you were studying physics! Is dancing at a ball 'physics'?"

"Well," said the son, "it's 'light, heat' and 'sound!'"

S. P. Redeems 64 Year-old Rail Ticket

San Francisco, Feb. 6, 1934—Purchased nearly 64 years ago, but never used, a railroad ticket was presented recently for refund, and redeemed by the Southern Pacific Company for $1, the full amount of the original purchase price.

The case is believed to set a record, at least in the history of ticket redemptions by western rail lines, the nearest approach to it being one where 30 years had elapsed.

Frank Eder, 79, pioneer resident of Lincoln, Placer County, California, was the purchaser of the ticket. He kept it through the years and finally offered it for refund only as an oddity.

Of course, it was pointed out, there existed no obligation to redeem the ticket but its appearance at Southern Pacific's general office here aroused such interest, the refund was approved.

The ticket was for a trip from Rocklin to Lincoln, a distance of 14 miles, and was purchased July 10, 1870 from the Central Pacific, now part of the Southern Pacific. Eder said he did not use his rail transportation because he met a friend and rode home with him in a buggy. But he retained the ticket among his keepsakes until recently when he handed it to A. T. Johnson, Southern Pacific agent at Lincoln, with the application for refund.
