History in the MAKING

That is what is covered in our Weekly News Review feature each week. It is an interpretation of the events of each week that are making the history of the nation and the world. It is prepared by Edward W. Pickard, one of the highly trained newspaper observers of the nation, and syndicated to a limited number of newspapers in the different states. It is the best feature of this character that goes to American readers from any source. You can make it the foundation of your discussion of world events with friends.

BE CLEAN

It is hard to wash a fly. Dr. Rosenow, of the Mayo Foundation, discovered this recently when he was trying to wash some streptococci off a fly. "The coat of flies is hydrophobic," he writes. This means literally that the coat of flies is afraid of water, though perhaps that is not exactly what Dr. Rosenow meant.

Sometimes we see a child whom we suspect of being hydrophobic in the literal sense. But children can be washed, adults too. Trite as the advice may be, and you will remember how Naaman, the haughty Syrian, resented it, the human skin is greatly benefited by the use of water.

If germs are placed on clean skin they rapidly disappear; clean skin disinfects itself. But if germs are placed on unwashed hands they live among the dirt and oily secretions for a long time. This was proved by experiment some four years ago.

The regulations of the New Mexico State Board of Public Welfare require that every building, basement, cellar or room used as a food handling establishment shall be provided with suitable washing facilities for employees, including an adequate supply of clean water, soap and individual towels. Citizens who cannot afford to employ a sanitary inspector can do the sanitary inspection themselves. Good inspectors first reason with the owner and urge him to comply with the law. Only if this fails do they complain to the district attorney.

And now, boys and girls, let me tell you how Dr. Rosenow got his streptococci. He cut off the flies' heads one by one and soaked each separated head in a separate test tube. Is it not fortunate that our skins are not hydrophobic like the coat of the fly.

Awarded to Mrs. Garrett

Mrs. Pauline Garrett, La's Cruces, N. M., was the winner yesterday of her third separate court battle for the possession of the pistol with which her husband the late Sheriff Pat Garrett, killed "Billy the Kid." According to the Associated Press, the state supreme court awarded the gun to Mrs. Garrett.

Dr. J. B. Brady, an administrator of the estate of the late Tom Powers, who operated the famous Coney Island saloon in El Paso, is holding the pistol listed among the assets, until its ownership is finally decided by courts.

Mrs. Garrett brought her suit in the county court at law. Judge John M. Worrell decided in her favor. The eighth court of civil appeals upheld Judge Worrell. The case was then taken to the state supreme court. J. E. Quaid, Dr. Brady's attorney, said he will file a motion for a rehearing in the higher court. El Paso Times.

Stanton Gets Death Sentence

On March 7th the Court of criminal appeals at Austin, Tex. affirmed a death sentence against Ed (Perchmouth) Stanton, convicted of slaying Sheriff John Mosely of Swisher county, Texas. Glen Hunsucker and Bernice Inman were jointly indicted with Stanton but Glen Hunsucker was killed at Ramon in this county last July, when officers tried to arrest him, and Stanton, Deputy Sheriff Tom Jones was also shot and killed at the same time. Stanton was captured alive by a posse and brought here where Texas officers came to claim him. Carrizozo and Roswell officers assisted in the escort of the desperado back to Texas.

Mrs. Roy E. Reeder of Tucuman arrived in Carrizozo Wednesday and is the guest of Mrs. Beula Gokey.

Meet Federal Aid Engineers

Quite a delegation of representative business men of Carrizozo were in Santa Fe on Tuesday, March 6th to meet members of the highway commission, state engineers and Mr. Elliott, the federal engineer, to discuss the overpass and underpass question which has exoriated the minds of our citizens for the past month.

We are not prepared to say definitely whether it will be the overpass or underpass. Funds appropriated are not sufficient by about $40,000 for an underpass. The right-of-way for the overpass has been surveyed and appraisers appointed to set a valuation on the property in question.

Those who went to Santa Fe were Messrs. T. E. Kelley, G. T. McQuillen, A. J. Rolland, T. A. Spencer, Will Ed Harris, Clint Brannum, B. Pryor, Otho Lowe, J. V. Taylor, Frank English and Dr. Johnson.

PETER AND NIMBLEHEELS COMPARE TAILS

PETER RABBIT always has been interested in tails. He just can't help it. You see, he hasn't much of a tail himself, so when he meets anyone whose tail is short he always has a friendly feeling. And when he meets one with a long tail he always is a wee bit envious. Peter is like a great many people in that he always wants what he hasn't got.

For the life of him Peter couldn't keep his eyes away from the tail of

It Was the Longest Tail for the Size of Its Owner Peter Had Ever Seen.

Nimbleheels the Jumping Mouse. It was the longest tail for the size of its owner that Peter ever had seen. It was more than twice as long as the body of Nimbleheels, and it was slim and tapering. As he looked at it Peter couldn't help wondering how it was possible for Nimbleheels to make such very big jumps when he had to take such a long fall as that with him. It was this which led him at last to ask Nimbleheels if that tail didn't bother him when he jumped.

"Certainly not," declared Nimbleheels very emphatically. "If I didn't have such a long tail I wouldn't be able to make such long jumps." Peter looked as surprised as he felt. "For goodness sake!" he exclaimed. "What has your tail got to do with your jumping? I'm a pretty good jumper myself, or thought I was until I met you, but my tail doesn't have anything to do with my jumping."

Nimbleheels laughed. "It was a funny, thin, high, squeaky, little laugh. 'No,' said he, 'I shouldn't think it could have much to do with your jumping.'"

Peter grinned and looked over his shoulder at the funny little bunch of cotton he calls a tail. "No," he agreed, "it isn't much as tails go, and it isn't of any use in jumping. All the same it is very useful and I don't know how I would get along without it."

Nimbleheels pricked up his ears and looked interested. "Is that really so?" he asked. "I never for a minute imagined that such a tail could be useful. Of what use is it, pray?"

"As a guide when I am showing my youngsters the way about outside the dear Old Briar Patch," replied Peter promptly. "They can see that white tail of mine when they can't see anything else, and so they keep from getting lost. It really is very useful in this respect. I don't know what I would do without it. But you haven't told me yet how you use that long tail of yours in jumping."

Nimbleheels chuckled. "Oh," said he, "I just carry it along behind me." Peter looked at Nimbleheels sharply. He suspected that he was being made fun of. "Where else would you carry it, I'd like to know?" said he.

"And that," continued Nimbleheels snapping his bright little eye, "is why I can jump straight. It is my tail that gives me my balance in the air. If anything should happen to it I would never know where I was going to land or how. I once saw one of my family who lost his tail. It really was dreadful to see the poor fellow try to jump. He would turn over and over in the air, sometimes land right on his back. I wouldn't have anything happen to my tail for the world."

"It is rather important, isn't it?" said Peter, staring at that long tail with great respect. "I should think you would take the very greatest care of it."

"I do," replied Nimbleheels. C. T. W. Burgess—WNU Service.

SOME CANAPES

THIS canape has been popular for many years as an appetizer for the beginning of a meal. Usually the foundation is a bit of toast cut in some form and covered with zippy mixtures that not only please the eye but sharpen the appetite.

Caviar Canapes. Season caviar with a dash of lemon juice and a few drops of onion juice or rub the toasted circle with a cut garlic for flavor. Spread the caviar over toasted rounds of bread and sprinkle with chopped hard-cooked eggs. Garnish with a little fresh cress.

Mushroom Canapes. Saute mushrooms in butter until nicely cooked, season with salt and a dash of cayenne and place on thin rounds of toasted and buttered bread. Cover with chopped hard-cooked eggs. Garnish with curls of lettuce or sprigs of water cress.

Anchovy Canapes. Toast rounds of white bread a golden brown. Spread with butter and lay on each round two boneless anchovies. Sprinkle with chopped hard-cooked eggs and dust with pepper. Garnish with crescents of lemon sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Tomato and Cucumber Canapes. Saute rounds of white bread in butter on one side. Fry slices of tomato in butter until well cooked, place on the round of bread, season with salt and pepper, spread with a thin coating of mayonnaise and top with a thin slice of cucumber. Sprinkle the top with chopped cooked egg.

Crab Meat Canapes. Toast slices of bread and cut into circles, then into crescents. Cover with crab meat seasoned with lemon juice, salt, cayenne and molasses with a little thick white sauce. Cover the crescents rounding over the top. Spread with two tablespoonsful of butter and one teaspoonful of egg white. Sprinkle with cheese and brown in a quick oven. Lobster meat may be used in the same way. C. T. W. Burgess—WNU Service.

MARITAL BRAKES

A CHICAGO judge who has had 40,000 cases of marital disputes before him and reconciled 2,000 of the couples, feels that he knows something about why people go to the divorce courts and—more important—how they can be kept out of them.

At the bottom of most marital unhappiness, this Judge Sabbath of Chicago finds, are trivialities. "Such a simple thing as a wife waving good-bye to her husband when he goes to work in the morning would avert a good many divorces," he says.

And most important among all his conclusions, is the conviction that "most people want to do the right thing." Therefore the usual, trivial cause of trouble can be defeated by just observing a few simple rules: Here they are:

1. Have patience with each other.
2. Work together, play together, grow up together.
3. In all disputes avoid excited talk.
4. Do not conceal little differences until they accumulate to the breaking point; discuss them calmly.
5. Be frank with each other.
6. Sympathy and mutual understanding are the pillars of the home.
7. Share responsibilities.
8. Establish a home of your own.
9. Make your bedtime prayers a review of the day and never go to sleep without a clean slate.

Certainly these are all very simple things, and none of the rules is startlingly new. If they are the answer to marital peace and happiness, and most of us will readily agree, why are they individually not more frequently observed?

Doubtless because they are simple enough and seem easy enough while everything is going smoothly. It is when they are most needed, however, when there is resentment and dissection and hot-headedness, that these simple remedies are not so easy to observe. It is like telling a vehicle that is rolling rapidly down hill to be reasonable in turning the corner.

That, you may say, is what we have brakes for. And that is exactly how married people should use such a set of rules—as brakes, when they feel things going down hill. Once they stop you, the rest is simple enough. What they tell you to do is really what you want to do. It's the stopping to think about it that is the big thing. G. S. Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

Southwestern Briefs

Arizona, youngest state in the Union, quietly passed its twenty-second birthday. All state, county and city offices were closed for the day—Feb. 14.

Of some $23,000,000 a year spent in New Mexico for governmental functions, only $12,209,363 is budgeted, according to Byron O. Beall, chief state tax commissioner, and of this sum only $8,858,672 is levied for direct taxes.

Florence M. Warner, state administrator for the civil works administration in Arizona, has announced that passage of the congressional appropriation measure saved 17,000 Arizonians from returning to the unemployed ranks.

Application for authority to establish at least five new branches in various Arizona communities has been made to the National Banking Department in Washington, D. C., by the Valley Bank and Trust Company, it was learned recently.

One hundred men working at the municipal airport at Las Vegas were thrown out of work when civil works officials received a telegram from Santa Fe ordering the work to be discontinued. Officials here were at a loss to explain the action.

The State Highway Department has called bids for construction of two concrete bridges on the Yuma-Gila Bend highway in the vicinity of Yuma, to be opened March 6. The bridges will be sixteen and eighteen miles east of Yuma, respectively.

Four southern New Mexico counties have indicated they too might take a hand in a small investigation being made in Washington to demand an inquiry into why the original air route from El Paso to the Pacific coast was not routed by way of Deming and Lordsburg as posted.

J. K. Richardson of Carlsbad has recently been appointed by the federal government as safety engineer for the New Mexico civil works administration. The CWA is appointing a safety engineer for each state; men who have had special training in accident prevention.

A meeting of the Sons of New Mexico was held recently in Albuquerque to complete organization details. The organization will be state-wide in scope. At its first meeting approximately fifty persons attended, among them several prominent citizens, lifelong residents of Albuquerque.

Headed by Major General Alexander M. Tuthill, commander of the Forty-fifth division, more than a score of Phoenix military officers came to Tucson to witness a demonstration recently by the Old Pueblo unit of the Arizona National Guard, in honor of Col. J. Prugh Herndon, commanding officer and other officials of the 158th Infantry.

Arizona will observe the first anniversary of the state and national bank moratorium with banks in excellent condition. Superintendent of Banks Y. C. White declared that the moratorium proclaimed March 2 by Governor B. H. McCreary was the creation of more confidence by Arizonians in the banking institutions.

Gwian Henry, former University of Missouri football mentor, will lead the University of New Mexico Lobos in their 1934 gridiron season. Henry was selected by the university board of regents to succeed Charles Riley, whose contract was not renewed after three years coaching here. Henry, chosen from among 100 candidates, will also be director of athletics.

While in Kingman, Ariz., for a couple of days recently on legal matters, Attorney P. W. O'Sullivan met and had a long talk with his friend, Senator "Keen" St. Charles. The senator related many stirring incidents of early days in the Black Hills, New Mexico, and Arizona, wherein the senator had participated. "Keen" crossed the Pecos river with a caravan of bull teams nearly sixty years ago, and was nearly caught and scalped by Indians on several occasions.

New Mexico will seek to obtain an increase in the present crude oil allowable, through the state's congressional delegation, State Land Commissioner Frank Vesely and State Geologist Dr. E. H. Wells have announced. Police Chief C. A. Wollard of Tucson is on a par with Mae West now. Because he directed the capture of the John Dillinger gang of bank robbers, now awaiting trial in the middle west, Chief Wollard has been made a Kentucky colonel.

John Morrow, Sr., of Raton, former United States congressman and active in state and local affairs, has been named by Gov. A. W. Hockenbush to succeed Clinton P. Anderson of Albuquerque as state treasurer, who resigned some weeks ago. Mr. Morrow accepted the appointment on the condition that he be given several weeks in which to attend to pressing personal business in this locality before taking up his new duties at the head of the state's financial affairs.

Howard S. Reed, engineer for the public works administration board of Arizona and New Mexico, has been instructed by Washington officials not to accept additional applications for loans on non-federal projects.

Heavy grading and base course surfacing of 8.066 miles of highway leading to the Carlsbad caverns, in New Mexico, will be advertised next month by the U. S. bureau of public roads. The road will extend from the main highway, through Walnut Canyon, to the mouth of the caverns. About $10,000 has been set aside for the job.

SYNOPSIS

At a dance, a visitor in the community, Neal Conrad, young lawyer, is impressed by Anne Chamberlain, pretty daughter of a wealthy farmer, practicing her character. A few days later she accompanies him and his best friend, Mrs. Griffin, on a picnic. At the end of the day Neal declares his love. At Washington, on their honeymoon, the Conrad meet Clarence Hathaway, friend of Neal's, young diplomat. The young couple start housekeeping. Anne's health begins to fail. Neal, engaged in politics, does not notice. She remains as she is to her mother. While Neal is away, Anne has a visit from an old friend, Mr. Goldenberg. In Neal's absence he takes charge of the situation. Neal is an agency of romance for his mother. Their life together in the ensuing eight years Neal's law practice and his position in politics both mount. A daughter has been born to Anne, but her beauty is fading. Clarence Hathaway, now in a diplomatic post in Paris, visits the Conrads. He reproaches Neal for allowing Anne to "straggle," and suggests Neal and Anne take a holiday, with him, in France. In Paris Anne is "rejuvenated," physically and spiritually. Hathaway, long secretly enamored, endeavors to win her from Neal, without success.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

Somehow Anne wrenched herself free. Her lips were shaking, as well as her body; nevertheless there was an inner force about her which compelled him to listen to her.

"I don't love you," she reiterated, brokenly but persistently. "I've been grateful to you and I always shall be, in spite of what's happened. I believe some day you'll be as sorry that it happened as I am. And you're right. I have been—been attracted by you. Perhaps that's what made me—for the moment—kiss back—something reckless and reckless and primitive. Women are primitive sometimes as well as men. I wish more people would recognize that. But I don't love you. It's Neal I love. I'd rather go back to Ellsboro, to all that drudgery and isolation as you call it—to being neglected and forgotten by him as you've hinted, as long as I can be with him, than to stay here in Paris—and all that it means—with you, because I love him. Because I know he belongs to me, no matter what he does or doesn't do. Because I belong to him. If he fails, I'm willing to fall with him. And if he succeeds, in the end, I'm going to be there to see it, even if I can't share it."

For one vibrant moment of silence they faced each other—then he bent his head, stricken by the consciousness that he had been very close to violating a shrine.

"From the bottom of my heart," he said, "I ask your forgiveness."

Groping her way down the dark, winding little corridor that led to her room, Anne was suddenly confronted with a large lozenge of light. Neal had heard her approaching footsteps—he must have been listening for them—and had flung the door of their little salon, with its welcoming radiance, wide open. And dashing out to meet her, he almost smothered her in a bear hug.

"Oh, Anne, where have you been so long? I thought you'd never come! Do hurry! You can't imagine what's happened. Anne—Anne—read that cablegram—"

She snatched at the flimsy bit of blue paper which he was waving in her face. It was signed by Low, the governor of their state. And it read:

"SHELDON, JUNIOR SENATOR, DIED THIS MORNING. HOPE YOU WILL ACCEPT APPOINTMENT FROM ME HIS SEAT UNITED STATES SENATE."

CHAPTER IX

To the day of her death Anne Conrad will remember her first winter in Washington as a senator's wife, with driving insistence.

She and Neal discussed the question of a temporary home—all the way over on the boat coming back from Paris, and finally decided, on account of the children, that a small house would be preferable to an apartment. She went on at once to Washington with Neal to begin her search for a dwelling place.

It should not, she thought, be very hard to find exactly what they wanted, and she urged Neal to follow his impatient desire to begin "getting settled" in his quarters at the senate office building. These certainly left nothing to be desired. Neal felt himself swelling with national importance from the first moment that he sat down in front of the blank polished surface of his enormous desk and pushed the little bell which summoned Miss Letts to come and take dictation from him. A cable had informed Miss Letts of the impending change in her sphere of usefulness, and she had preceded the Conrads to Washington. Anne recognized the competence of Miss Letts and was grateful for it, because it made everything so much easier for Neal.

She agreed with him perfectly when he told her that everything was in terrible confusion, and that he did not see how he was ever going to get straightened out and adjusted. So she went out to look for houses by herself. The real estate agent to whom she had applied led her to several unattended marble palaces, hung with many tapestries and furnished in rickety gilt, and to a long succession of tall, narrow windows made of bright red brick, with a tin bath, and gloomy "back-parlors." She regarded these docilely at first; then she began to object mildly.

"Will you please show me what I asked you for in the beginning: small houses, with about eight rooms, conveniently arranged, and at a reasonable rental? Unless it is clear to you now what I want, I think I had better go to another agent."

The agent was grieved. It had not occurred to him that such a young, pretty, and gentle lady would be so unamenable to his blandishments. Allowing her to see that his feelings were hurt, he led her from one small dingy dwelling to another. They were all dirty beyond description, and in most of them both plumbing and heating plants were antiquated and inadequate. Anne went back to the Willard, dizzy with discouragement, and Neal expressed surprise at her lack of success.

"Aren't you a little too fussy? We ought to be getting settled, you know, and having Dora and the children come down. Surely you must be able to get something. I'd take a day off and help you hunt, but things are so terribly piled up at the office—"

"I know Neal, I'll try again. But honestly, it's awfully hard."

The next morning she dismissed the agent and started out by herself on foot, stopping before every house that displayed in its window a sign of "For sale or to let." At last she discovered tucked away between two handsome brownstone "residences" a small house of yellow-painted brick. It was only two stories high; its location was excellent; and a notice so large that it completely filled the modest bay window in which it was placed, proclaimed that it was seeking a tenant. Tremblingly, Anne sought out the agent. The house proved to contain a small but sunny drawing room opening into a dark little dining room, whose one window overlooked a diminutive back yard, and a kitchen in the ell; on the second story two large bedrooms and one small one, and a bathroom; in the basement, under the drawing room, a storeroom which might conceivably be used as a playroom. The furniture was shabby, and Anne was amazed that any woman could leave her house so far from clean. But she felt, at last, that she had found something which offered possibilities, at least. She asked the amount of rent.

"Two hundred and fifty dollars a month, without heat or light, linen and silver, of course. Very reasonable."

Anne was aghast. But she was also desperate.

"I'll let you know tomorrow. I think probably I'll take it."

"I'm sure you couldn't do better, Mrs. Conrad."

It was because Anne was so miserably sure of this herself that she painted the little house in brighter colors than it deserved to Neal that evening. And, even with this effort at coquettish-de-rose he was not enthusiastic.

"That's a terrible price. Why, we wouldn't have any more room than we did in the cottage—not as much, really—and you know what that cost! And there's no garage."

It was on the tip of her tongue to urge him to go out and hunt himself if he felt he could do better. But she managed to restrain herself, remarking only, "I wish you'd come and look at it in the morning."

"I really ought to get to the office in good season. You see—"

"Yes, I know; but it will take only a few minutes."

Somewhat grudgingly, Neal consented to accompany her; and equally grudgingly he signed the lease a few days later, conveying the impression, though he did not actually say so, that he could have done much better himself if the affairs of the nation had not weighed so heavily upon him. Then Anne bought herself some cheap gingham dresses, a supply of scrubbing brushes, cleaning powders and soft cloths, and began the process of cleaning house from top to bottom.

It was backbreaking work; and her muscles were soft after her summer of physical inactivity. But she did not know where to seek for a scrubwoman; and she already saw, very plainly, that she would have to begin to save pennies again. By evening she was so tired that once she actually went to sleep while Neal was telling her about the exciting events of his day, and he was offended.

She did not even have the satisfaction of doing her housecleaning in uninterrupted peace. The telephone rang constantly. At first she answered it conscientiously, believing that its peals might portend tidings of importance to Neal. It usually proved, however, to be a photographer, who wished her to have her picture taken. When the same firm called her three times in twenty-four hours she hung up the receiver with a bang, and answered the telephone no more. Then, of course, a magnate from Belford who had only a day in the city called and received the report that "they didn't answer." It did not seem to occur to him that he could call up the senate office building. He went home to Belford and wrote Neal an indignant letter, and spread the news among his neighbors that "Conrad was getting a swelled head already." Neal was very angry about it, and Anne felt that he had a right to be.

King Albert of Belgium, Killed by Fall While Mountain Climbing, Succeeded by Leopold—Three Great Powers Protect Austria.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

ONE of the best and most beloved of the few remaining kings, Albert I of Belgium, met a tragic death while practicing for his favorite sport, mountain climbing. He was attempting, alone, to scale a 90-foot pinnacle near Namur and fell, being probably instantly killed. Hours later his body was found and carried to Brussels. Queen Elizabeth was ill and was not told of the king's death for some hours. The Belgian nation was plunged in genuine mourning, and all the world sympathized for Albert had won high esteem by his heroism during the World war and his just government of his people.

King Leopold, Albert is succeeded by Crown Prince Leopold, duke of Brabant, his eldest son. Leopold is thirty-two years old and was married in 1923 to Princess Astrid of Sweden. They have a daughter and a son. The new ruler was probably one of the youngest soldiers in the World war, enlisting as a private when he was thirteen years old. He was treated as an ordinary soldier, seeing active service in the trenches, and was a sergeant when the armistice was signed.

The dead king's funeral was of course a stately affair. The procession from the Brussels palace to the cathedral of St. Gudule was led by mounted gendarmes who were followed by British, Italian and French troops. Then came the Belgian troops with crepe-draped flags. Albert's personal colors were carried just ahead of the gun carriage that bore the casket, and his favorite charger followed, the saddle empty and field boots reversed in the stirrups. Next walked Crown Prince Leopold, his brother, Charles, and their brother-in-law, Crown Prince Umberto of Italy, the latter carefully guarded by police because of the attempt to assassinate him in Brussels in 1929.

In the throng of notable persons in the processions were representatives of all nations. Ambassador Morris was there for the United States; President Lebrun and Premier Doumergue headed the large French delegation; from England were the prince of Wales, Field Marshal Lord Allenby and Admiral Sir Roger Keyes; Germany was represented by Dr. Friedrich von Keller, and Poland by Ignatz Paderewski.

Next day Leopold was crowned, with Astrid on the throne beside him. The parliamentary reply to the new ruler's speech from the throne thanked the new queen for having given birth to two children, insuring the permanence of the dynasty.

King Albert was the third of his line. He was born in 1875 and ascended the throne in 1909. Throughout the war he was one of the most active members of the Belgian army, continually at the front to help his troops and often in imminent danger of death. After the armistice he got the task of reconstruction well under way and then, with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leopold, took journeys to the United States, England, France, Spain, Brazil and other countries to study trade conditions and find new outlets for Belgian products.

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN is moving from capital to capital in Europe on the rather hopeless mission of reviving the disarmament negotiations. In Paris he was told by the seven big men of the French cabinet that France was unwilling to reduce her military power while the Nazi menace continues, and the French government had already coldly refused to discuss the matter with Hitler "while Germany is rearming." Concessions recently offered to the German chancellor had been met with inconclusive arguments, and with demands for a German army of 300,000 effectives, which France rejected. The most the French statesmen would say was that they "looked forward in a most general manner toward the possibility of an international accord, equally hoped for by both parties on the question of disarmament."

Discouraged but persistent, Captain Eden went on to Berlin and Rome for further conversations based on the British plan for reduction of armaments.

FOR the time being the danger of a European war arising from the Austrian Socialist rebellion is over. Great Britain, France and Italy have united to safeguard Austria's independence, and while that holds no other nation dare attack. Long conversations were held in Paris by British Ambassador Lord Tyrrell, Premier Doumergue, Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, and representatives of Italy, and the outcome was this statement to the world:

"The Austrian government has inquired of the governments of France, Great Britain and Italy as to their attitude with regard to a dossier which it prepared with a view of establishing German interference in the internal affairs of Austria and communicated to them. The conversations which have taken place between the three governments on this subject have shown they take a common view as to the necessity of maintaining Austria's independence and integrity in accordance with the relevant treaties."

This pronouncement was proposed by Premier Mussolini, who seeks to keep Austria intact as a buffer state between Nazism and Fascism. It is, of course, directed to Hitler, who hopes that the government of Chancellor Dollfus may be overthrown, if not by force, then in elections.

TREASURY reports reveal that all sources of internal revenue showed large increases during the first seven months of the present fiscal year as compared with the same period of 1933, with the exception of corporate income taxes.

Total receipts for the seven months' period ended January 31 amounted to $1,397,950,474, a gain of $500,708,001 as compared with the year before.

For the seven months the government's collection of taxes on distilled spirits, wine, and beers amounted to $120,647,390, as compared with $4,370,693 in the same 1932 period.

SENTIMENT in favor of the immediate payment of the veterans' bonus is so strong among the Democrats in the house that the promise of a veto by the President did not deter 145 representatives from signing a petition to take the Patman bill from the committee and bring it up for a vote on March 12.

Speaker Rainey had been to the White House and returned with this message: "I am authorized by the President to say that this is not the time to pay the bonus and that he cannot approve any legislation to that effect."

But the members went right on signing. Mr. Rainey was visibly disturbed, but said, in reply to inquiries, "We're going to let the house do just as it pleases."

Wright Patman of Texas, Democrat, author of the bill, told the house the measure would provide the administration with the mechanism for carrying out the inflationary program it already has embraced, and that it would save the government billions of dollars in interest. It seemed most likely that the bill would be passed by the house, and it may also get through the senate, for the sentiment for it has been steadily growing in that body.

ONLY seven members of the house voted in the negative when the $258,000,000 tax revision bill came up for passage. It is expected the senate will make many alterations in the measure for the purpose of further fortifying the statutes against evasion.

Of principal interest to the average taxpayer is the bill's readjustment of the income tax rate structure to provide a new normal rate of 4 per cent and surtaxes starting at 4 per cent on net income above $4,000 and ranging in graduated brackets to 50 per cent on incomes of $1,000,000 or more. The new tax rates, however, will not be effective on 1933 incomes.

Generally the bill is designed to prevent such tax evasion methods as were disclosed during the recent investigations of the senate banking and currency committee into stock market practices.

JUSTICE finally has caught up with Roger Touhy of Chicago and two members of his notorious gang. Their second trial for the kidnaping of John Factor ended in a verdict of guilty, the jury fixing the penalty at 99 years in the penitentiary.

One Charles W. Mayo of Alabama, with an accomplice, devised a fantastic plot for the kidnaping of E. E. Adler, banker and publisher of Davenport, Iowa, from a Chicago hotel. Both were caught and confessed, and then Mayo hanged himself in his cell. The "snatching" game appears to be about played out.

FRANCE was stirred by a mysterious murder that is connected with the $300,000 Stavisky scandal. Albert Prince, counselor of the Court of Appeals and the key witness in the Stavisky case, was lured from Paris and slain and his body was tied to a railroad track near Dijon and mangled by a train.

In the same connection, the Paris police announced they had discovered evidence that Stavisky was an international spy as well as a swindler; that he was aided by a number of women, and probably had sold valuable information to the German government.

Jap Department Store Provides Cheap Burials

As a method by which the individual may bid a last farewell to the depression in an appropriate manner and his family be strengthened for its continuance, the Mitsukoshi department store in Osaka has organized funeral services which will only cost ten yen each (less than $2.40 at current exchange). It has opened a funeral parlor which will provide burials at from 10 to 2,000 yen.

For the lowest price a plain white wood hearse in Shinto style will be provided. Its driver and his assistant will wear cutaway coats, and the company guarantees that they will be men of dignified expression. Formal clothes will be lent to the mourners. A carriage with red lining will convey the priests to the ceremony and the mourners will be taken in automobiles.

For funerals costing 50 yen and upward a woman attendant will be added, also printed letters of thanks, flowers and a number of uniformed funeral attendants.

Attention, Statisticians! P. D. S. quotes from the Manchester Guardian the test sentence used by the B. B. C. for testing microphones: "The word 'possesses' possesses more s's than any other word has the possessive." The article continues, "and gives the word 'assassinatress' as going 'possesses' one better. My contrib is now hunting for an even more sibilant word; can anybody help him?" ## "I keep fit"

"...In these days of recovery...if I don't, someone else will have my job." How? "Well, I learned years ago that work...wear and tear...takes something out of men and women—particularly those who work indoors."

"I tore down those precious red-blood-cells faster than my good body could rebuild. A friend told me the story of that grand medicine S.S.S. Now at 4 P. M. I am fit to still 'carry on'."

If you feel weak...lack a keen appetite...or if your skin is pale...try S.S.S. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick up in your appetite...your color and skin should improve with increased strength and energy.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-globin of the blood to enable you to "carry on" without exhaustion as you should naturally. The Family Quilt When a family preserves records of its history, it is generally done in the family Bible or album, says the Boston Post. But a woman in Sussex, Wis., is upon a strange family record.

Whose Fault?

A quarrelsome child is a sick child, mothers! A bad bowel condition means bad behavior. And it doesn't help matters to give bilious boys and girls some powerful cathartic that upsets them for days. When you see a coated tongue, dull or yellowed eyes, or other signs of sluggishness, there's always a way to cleanse and sweeten that little system without violence; next day you have a happy, contented child. This common-sense treatment is explained on the right:

Good health and good behavior go hand in hand. With inner health, come smiling faces and sunny dispositions. And it's really so simple a matter to keep children's bowels regular: The only "medicine" most youngsters ever need to promote thorough bowel action is pure California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fine, fruity laxative never weakens them, or takes away their appetite. But get real California Syrup of Figs; you can get it anywhere; it isn't expensive.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. S. H. Nickels received a letter this week from Rev. T. V. Ludlow, who was formerly pastor of the Methodist church here. Mr. Ludlow is pastor now at Pritchett, Colorado. His younger son, Paul, is a jeweler and watch repairer. Miss Mary Elma is teaching school, the younger daughter, Ellen, is married.

Mrs. Meda C. Haley of the Cloudercroft hotel has gone to Carrizozo where she will be indefinitely employed. During the absence of Mrs. Haley, Mrs. Cora Boren has taken over the management of the hotel and has as her assistant, Mrs. Abel Zicfoose.—Cloudcroft Notes, in Alamogordo News.

At a meeting of the Ruidoso Cattle and Horsegrowers' Association held March 3rd at Stetson schoolhouse the following officers were re-elected; President, J. V. Tully; Vice-president, B. J. Bonnell; Secretary-Treasurer, S. W. Land; Advisory Board: Geo. W. Coe, W. F. Coe, J. F. Allison, P. G. Hale and F. A. Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hunt of White Oaks were in town Monday on business. While here they were pleasant callers at the News office. Mr. Hunt has been spending some time at Jicarilla surveying some mining claims.

Mrs. Beulah Hartley of Capitan visited her mother, Mrs. Braxel and her sister Mrs. Snow here Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kingston of Capitan are the parents of a son born Feb. 3.

CWA workers are pebble dashing the Community Hall this week.

Court convened here last Monday, Judge Numa C. Frenger is presiding. Prominent lawyers in attendance are Messrs. H. B. Hamilton, E. Paso; Chas. Gilbert, Roswell; C. V. Clayton, Tularosa and Judge Mell of Santa Fe; C. J. Neis, Roswell.

Mr. and Mrs. Major of Duran were here on business Tuesday.

Mrs. J. S. Cook and daughter, Mrs. Tommy Cook were visitors from White Oaks last Monday.

Mrs. Tom Yarbrow has returned from Artesia where she spent the past two weeks visiting her daughter.

The Childhood Orchestra

Twenty-nine children, ranging from five to eleven years, under the able direction of Miss Ruth Brickley, will make their first public appearance as a Rhythm Orchestra, at the Methodist Church Sunday School, Sunday March 11, at ten o'clock.

The boys' uniforms consist of white trousers, white shirts, and red sashes which fit the waist, lap over and extend to ankle. The girls' uniforms are of white, also, with the red sashes ankle length.

Junior Jones, Mosser Dudley and Martha Sue Lawson play the violins; Pick Warden, Leslie Bonghuer, and Roy Johnson the guitars; Joyce Sloan and A. N. Spencer the ukuleles; Billy

Frame and Betsy Sloan the Boy Blue horns; Bill Allen, the clarinet; Jane Gallacher, Dorothy Mae Jones, Betty Beck, Zelma Mae Jarvis and Margaret Brown, the saxophones; Allen Beck, Bobby Shafer, William Hollin, Jack Waldrip, and Herman Kelt the trombones; Wanda Groce the zyllaphone; Gerald Cooper, Ted Johnson, and Paul Jones, the drums; Helen Sloan plays the harp; Amarillys Frame, the bass violin, Muriel Jordan and Lois Agne Jarvis play the piano.

The children have been in rehearsal for six weeks and their first public appearance is heralded with joy.

Everyone is invited to see and hear these remarkable performers.

P. O. Dept. asks for Bids

The postoffice department is asking for bids on a new schedule which calls for the Roswell mail to leave Carrizozo at 7 o'clock each morning and arrive at 7:30 each evening. This would cause great inconvenience here as the mail would arrive from 12 to 24 hours late each way. Chairman Sears and Postmaster Kelt have wired their protest to Senator Hatch and Congressman Chavez, who have replied that an investigation is being made and that no change will be made until a report has been received by the postoffice department and the matter carefully considered.

The Methodist Church

Rev. John L. Lawson, Pastor.

The Women's Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. R. E. Lemon, next Wednesday, the 14th, in a business session.

The Childhood Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Ruth Brickley, will make its first public appearance at the Methodist Sunday School, next Sunday, March the 11th, at ten o'clock.

Mrs. D. U. Groce will address the Sunday School next Sunday morning using the 1934 motto, "Reverence" for her subject.

The regular morning church service at eleven and evening services at eight will be held next Sunday.

The Sunday School attendance last Sunday was 92, with Mrs. T. A. Spencer's and Mrs. Brack Sloan's classes leading.

Notice

The National Reemployment office now has a long list of men who would much rather do ranch work than work on the various projects now under way in the County. The list contains fence builders, windmillers, teamsters and men skilled in dirt tank work.

The Reemployment office is anxious to extend this service to Ranchers and will assist in locating and securing ranch help, lambing crews, herders, truck drivers and any other help needed.

TRANSVAAL TREASURES

Native "Digging" South African Gold.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

AFTER 20 years' search, the Transvaal, South Africa, has given up what is believed to be the "other half" of the famous Cullinan diamond, the largest diamond ever found. The "other half" was picked up in two parts; one a 500 carat diamond of good quality, and the other a 725-carat stone which is flawless.

The Transvaal rightly has been called the treasure-house province of South Africa. It has earned the right, as well, to be called a famous treasure region of the world, for out of its hills and plains have come billions of dollars worth of gold and diamonds, not to mention other valuable minerals.

The Transvaal is young in history. Its oldest town, Potchefstroom, now an important South African educational center, will not round out its first century until 1939.

One has but to glance at Johannesburg, the province's capital, to get the spirit of the Transvaal. Strangely impressive, as one approaches the city, are miles of mine dumps surrounding the Witwatersrand, the mountainous backbone of the province. Across the vast plain they stretch like avenues of mammoth monuments, as if promising a climax of prehistoric grandeur.

Yes, grandeur—but of what kind? For sometimes they align themselves in a great wall, recalling China's. Or, again, you catch in their outlying vista a resemblance to Egypt's pyramids or to Mesopotamia's zigurats. Or, yet again, their sloping, sand-hued masses suggest military fortifications on a scale the world has never known.

The colossal picture tempts one's fancy. If the Rand's gold mines crumbled to nothingness, leaving only the dumps, some writer a millennium hence might conceivably describe them as "those mighty works, reared perhaps as defenses or patriotic monuments by the ancients of the Twentieth century."

If you ask a local statistician to give you some approximate idea of the dumps' tonnage, he may ask in turn: "Would you prefer it in ocean greyhounds or in Egyptian pyramids? Twenty thousand Mauretanas would about equal and 12,000 Levantines would somewhat exceed the dumps' tonnage. Or, shifting the comparison, that tonnage would be approximated by aligning across the Rand 102 replicas of the great pyramid."

Stumbled on Ten Billions.
Stubbing one's toe against a ten-billion-dollar gold reef is an experience reserved to the few. It was in 1896 that George Walker, out for a stroll, accidentally kicked into a gold-bearing outcrop of what proved to be the main reef of the Witwatersrand. Here, shaped like a vast bowl imbedded face-upward, was a 70-mile stretch of gold-impregnated rock that, if you believe in Kismet, had awaited George Walker's intrusive toe ever since early geologic times.

And now upon that treeless, uninhabited no man's land there appeared a tawdry mining village of tents and covered wagons. Telegraph wires hummed and the village became a raw, tin-shack town of 3,000 people. The prevailing crude process (not half the gold worked. Yet who cared, since the reef seemed inexhaustible) supplies were teamed from 300 miles away. Yet who minded fancy prices? And, as to the water shortage, "All right; let's bring in champagne!"

Thus began the babyhood of Johannesburg, which today, though a mere youth in years, is a giant in achievement. The largest African town south of Cairo and chief commercial plexus of the Union's hinterland, "Joburg" has a municipal area of nearly 32 square miles and some 300,000 people.

In the Deep Mines.
The Witwatersrand mines, whether at work or play, present a unique sight. Here one is in work hours descending by "skip" (lift) into the interior of the earth at the speed of an express elevator.

Johannesburgers dig holes as grandly as Americans rear skyscrapers—more grandly, in fact, for your slightest pick proves to be one and one-third miles below the earth's surface. Your impression of this subterranean electric town, with its avenues and cross-roads, where thousands of men are drilling or loading the auriferous conglomerate, is one of cleanliness, neatness, and—thanks to the giant ventilators—of a hot-but-uncomfortable warmth.

You stay long enough to watch a surface hoist start up with its 1½-ton load, which it will lift up that mile or more of shaft, to the crushing and reduction plant, in about two minutes. Then you regain the skip and ascend once more to what, measuring holes by skyscrapers, the cable operator might conceivably announce as "Two hundredth floor, last stop!"

That which you have glimpsed is but a tiny corner of what is, in effect, a vast subterranean city, whose axis measures 70 miles, whose workers number 100,000, and whose shafts, avenues, and streets total 4,000 miles, or approximately the length of the African continent. And the business of this super-mole city is to disgorge over one-half of the world's annual gold production.

How to handle that grand total of 212,000 men, 90 per cent of them Bantu, who, either above ground or under it, work on the Rand?

Recreation—whether golf, tennis, bowls, swimming, or native dances—is universal, with inter-mine sports as a corollary. As to health and safety, each man regularly undergoes medical examination, first aid is taught to many thousands, while that cheery organ, the reef, advises you on everything, from keeping fit to giving accident-prevention tips to American visitors in what is thought to be Americanese, as thus:

"Say, folks, we're right here at a real slap-up gold mine. Lady from Memphis, please don't eject your gum down the shaft. That pellet will accomplish a velocity of 5,000,000 miles per second and give some one a headache."

Huge Cost of Supplies.
Whoever presides over the mines' commissariat must at times develop a genuine housewife's headache. Let us imagine a symbolic Mr. and Mrs. Transvaal Goldmines making up their household books at the close of 1923:

"Hm! Six millions of dollars' worth of food for our native boys. Rather steep, my dear!"
"Let me look, papa. Oh, 23,000 tons of meat, beans, and fish—that accounts for it."

"Hm! I suppose 400 tons of soap for baths and 8,000 tons of candles are correct? . . . Here's $200,000 for the boys' clothing, slickers, and boots. Hm! Spring cleaning—that's the paint and tar—$180,000. But what's this extra $20,000 for?"
"Salt, papa. The boys love their pinch of salt, and—"
"Salt! Just salt! Why, mamma, do you realize that our little household is costing us in stores, $74,000,000 a year?"

As to recreation, the "boys' weekly war dance rivals a circus, a rodeo, and a football match combined. Here is a native compound disgorging its thousands of black Shanganas who are welcoming other thousands of black M'chopis, the former tribe's invited guests.

Intiguing, too, are such borrowings of white man's "medicine" as armlets of Red-Cross buttons, fountain pens thrust through ear lobes, and medical charts stuck on like mustard plasters.

But the Transvaal, like South Africa in general, is as varied in respect to treasure-houses as was ancient Delphi, with its "treasuries." In the Pretoria region, and also near Rustenburg and in the "Bushveld Complex," there are apparently unlimited iron resources, while the last-named region promises to yield one of the greatest platinum deposits in the world. The Transvaal's annual production values in gold, silver, platinum, and the base metals total something like $15,000,000.

Diamonds May Be Anywhere.
And then there are the ever-cropping-up diamonds—one might almost say, those irrepressible South African diamonds. Really, one never knows where they will turn up next.

Here is the Transvaal's famous Premier mine, an even larger crater than its defunct forerunner at Kimberley. In about a quarter of a century the Premier has produced some 6½ tons of diamonds, including the famous Cullinan. Its longest dimension was 4¼ inches, its shortest was 2 inches, and it was cut into nine large stones and scores of smaller ones.

Blasting hour at the Premier, as beheld from the crater's edge, is a striking sight. At the given moment a red flag flutters, a bell clangs, and antlike multitudes of workmen are seen scurrying for shelter. There ensues a veritable barrage of some 2,000 dynamite charges, hurling successive masses of blue earth in air; then the explosions die down, the workers reappear to load the debris on trucks that ascend to the crushing plant, and the day's big diamond "revels" is over.

BEAUTY TALKS

MARJORIE DUNCAN

THE THIN, SCRAWNY NECK

SINCE rounded (but not too round) contours are the fashion this season, one hears many complaints of thin, scrawny necks. These usually belong to underweight individuals and a general gain of avoirdupois is recommended.

Deep breathing exercises are especially beneficial in rounding out the contours of neck and shoulders. And any exercises that move the arms, shoulders and chest will help the neck muscles, too.

If you have any young children about the house, buy two soap sets for blowing bubbles and indulge in this delightful childish game. It is splendid for your spirits and for keeping the contour of the neck firm and young.

Whistling is also good and you can confine it to the privacy of your own room if you agree with the college professor who pronounced all whistlers morose. Even gum-chewing has its compensations: I exercising the throat muscles and the writer hereby sanctions the practice, providing it is done in private.

Here you have the simple exercises that will help you without making you too aware of the fact that you are exercising.

Now for the actual neck exercises. Slowly drop your head forward on your chest, as far as possible. Now just as slowly raise and drop as far back between the shoulder blades as you can. Repeat ten times. Turn the head as far to the left as possible, forward, to the right and front. Repeat six times.

Now for the massage with a rich cream. Use a ready-prepared skinfood for the purpose. Or, make one at home using equal parts of olive oil, lanolin and cocoa butter. Melt the lanolin and cocoa butter in order to measure quantities. Pour into a clean container. Stir until a creamy consistency is achieved. The molding and massage movements should be firm but gentle. Avoid stretching or pulling the skin. Beginning at shoulder blades, press and lift, using the palm and fingers of right hand on left side and vice versa. Then starting at the center, work around to the back with seven short, distinct movements, using right hand on left side and left on right. Allow the cream to remain as long as possible, preferably overnight if you are doing this at bedtime. Once a week apply compresses soaked in warm olive oil and allow to remain for about a half hour. Then mold as instructed above. Follow by patting with a mild astringent.

BODY BEAUTY BATH

FACE, hands and neck are, of course, the parts that suffer most from the trying and drying effects of winter's weather. The skin on the rest of the body does, too, even if to a slightly lesser degree.

Every night, before retiring use a little cream—oil for hands, arms, legs and thighs. If you use a skinfood on face and neck, take just a bit of it on fingertips and massage the hands, arms and legs with it. Then dust with talcum powder or dusting or bath powder. You may use cocoa butter, lanolin, warm olive oil, mineral or almond oil for this purpose.

In the morning, if you use a finishing cream on face and neck, try a wee bit of it for legs, too. Use it sparingly and massage carefully until it is thoroughly absorbed. Then dust with powder and smooth any excess powder away with palms of the hands. Sheer stockings offer precious little protection on cold, windy days and it is important to keep the legs soft, smooth and white as it is to present beautiful hands and face, you know.

Every night after your bath, massage a bit of oil or cream over arms, chest, back, thighs, etc. But once a week, reverse the order of things and try this beauty treatment for your body. Make sure, of course, that your bathroom is the right temperature, guard against all drafts. While you are drawing the water for your bath, massage the entire body with oil. Olive or mineral oil will do and if you want a special treat simply add your favorite perfume (a few drops) or a little rose water to give it a pleasant scent. When you have finished the oil massage, slip into your tub. Use your favorite bath salts, scented powder or toilet water.

Now for a generous lather with a soft bath brush or wash cloth and warm water (not hot). Be sure to use a bland soap—soothing and mild. Slowly let the warm water trickle from the tap and let the oily surface water keep draining out. Rinse thoroughly.

Out of the tub and a brisk rubbing with a Turkish towel until your skin glows. A dusting with powder. Then to bed with skin luxuriously soft and smooth, and the treatment conducive to complete rest.

Creams and oils should have a very definite place in your beauty treatment for the entire body and particularly for legs, arms, hands, and face and neck, during the winter months. Preventive measures are always best in dealing with freckles. I never recommend anything strong enough to "remove" freckles as in many cases it may prove quite dangerous.

POULTRY

HAVE CONTROL OF THE TURKEY FLOCK

Need Free Range Before the Laying Season Starts.

It is important that the turkey breeding flock be well controlled during the season of egg production. Free range may be allowed until about a month before the birds start laying. As this time approaches, advise a correspondent in Successful Farming, they are best put under control so that their instinct of stealing away to nest does not cause a serious loss of valuable hatching eggs.

In the north well-managed turkeys start to lay early in the spring. Therefore, it is well to place the breeding flock under control early and feed a good laying mash. Manage it the same as a flock of laying chickens should be managed.

Provide as large a range as possible so long as it keeps the birds under control and does not allow them to steal away to nest. A good shelter is necessary for them while the weather is still cold and blustery, but as the season grows warmer they may be allowed to roost in an open shed protected from storms.

A successful method of encouraging early egg production from turkeys is to provide lights for the breeding flock the same as for chickens. So long as the weather is bad all feeding and watering equipment should be kept indoors and cleaned often. After that it is well to keep the feed and water supply away from the buildings.

Nests for turkeys may be made of barrels. Little individual huts roomy enough to be comfortable are also satisfactory.

Broody turkeys are much easier to break up than broody chickens. Confinement for one to three days usually cures them of the notion, after which they soon resume laying. A good turkey will lay between 35 and 40 eggs by May 15.

Hatchability of Eggs

Is Influenced by Feed

Because proper sorts of feed for the poultry flock influence the hatchability of eggs, some hatcheries in Ohio pay premiums to poultrymen whose eggs hatch the most chicks, according to R. E. Cray, extension specialist in poultry husbandry for the Ohio State university.

Hatchability of eggs depends in part upon three factors which are under the control of all poultrymen. More fertile eggs are obtained from flocks fed a green food, milk, and supplied vitamin D, says Cray.

Green food may be supplied either in the form of alfalfa or soy bean hay, or by adding alfalfa leaf meal to the dry laying mash.

Feeding both milk and green food sometimes increases the proportion of eggs that hatch as much as 10 or 12 per cent. Feeding one and not the other increases hatchability slightly.

Vitamin D may be supplied either in cod liver oil or by submitting the flock to direct rays from the sun on a winter range. Fed even to birds on the range, cod liver oil beneficially affects hatchability.

Choosing Breeders

Vigor and health are more important than all else in selecting a turkey breeding flock. Vigorous, fast growing, early maturing, blocky young toms are preferred for breeding. Young hens are preferred to old ones because they generally lay earlier and lay more eggs, except in the case of specially selected layers. Cod liver oil fed to the turkey breeding flock insures health, shell texture and higher hatchability and livability of the poult, according to the Nebraska Agricultural college. A good laying mash kept before the hens at all times will stimulate earlier laying as well as greater production. Boxes about 30 inches square or barrels laid on the side make suitable nests. Brush piled over these makes them more tempting to the hens. Seven or eight nests should be enough for 30 hens, adds the college.

Hatchable Pullet Eggs

If pullets have been in production from 60 to 90 days before the eggs are selected for hatching and have been mated with vigorous cocks the chicks should be satisfactory, according to North Carolina State college. The factors of good management for the pullets, however, will have considerable bearing on this question. A balanced ration should be fed, reinforced with a biologically tested cod liver oil where green feed is not available. The houses should be well ventilated.

Feed for Producing Hens

Hens will not lay many eggs on any rations unless they have all the oyster shell or other lime-bearing material they need for the formation of shell. They must also have a reasonable amount of green feed in the form of vegetables or clover, preferably alfalfa in ground or fine chopped form. Oats and barley have good qualities, but are not heartily relished with the hulls on. Wheat and cracked corn are both nourishing and fattening; so, should be fed only moderately to layers.

Colonists May Displace Famous Greek Monastery

Feminism may have conquered the greatest portion of the world, but there are still places in Europe where equality of sexes is not yet recognized, and where no woman is allowed to enter even under an escort of the male sex.

One of these spots is in Greece, and unless the Greek government succeeds in its plans of national unification, women of all over the world will try in vain to climb the mountains where for centuries monks have lived carrying out their anti-woman tradition.

Amongst these monasteries are those on Mount Athos, but there are many more, less famous although not less rigid in the enforcement of the "no woman" rule.

Built on top of almost inaccessible mountains where approach is so difficult that cable rails are used instead of ropes, these monasteries are said to be immensely wealthy. In many cases, nobody knows the amount of art treasures, gems, antiques, and so on they may hide, but it is generally admitted that some of them occupy the positions which, thousands of years ago, were the sites of famous temples, when Apollo and other divinities were presiding over the immense prosperity of Greece.

The fall of Troy, the advent of Byzantium, and the arrival in Greece of the first apostles, established new rulers in these deserted temples. Where Apollo's hymns were once sung Christian hymns were heard; where pagan priests congregated, Christian monks came to live and pray. The strict rule of chastity was imposed, a rule which has survived throughout centuries.

The monks live a simple and strict life; they devote many hours to prayer, to singing, and to religious celebration; they live almost entirely on the produce of the soil they cultivate, bartering olives, honey, fruits, oil and other produce against other necessities. Some of these monks were very wealthy persons; many of them Russians, Germans and even Turks who made a gift to the monastery of all their worldly goods.

Members of some of the most aristocratic families in Europe are said to have become members of these communities and to have brought fabulous riches to the monasteries.

Undisturbed throughout centuries, even by the many changes of foreign domination which included a long period of Turkish rule, these monasteries have prospered in their independent life.

But today their existence is threatened. The necessity for giving an outlet to their refugees from Asia Minor is forcing the Greek government to open one of the most sacred soils in the world to those families of colonists who are returning to their motherland. The monks of Mount Athos and of the other monasteries may have to go; their places being taken by the new pioneers who will bring with them their women and children, thus breaking the last of the anti-feminist tradition existing in Europe. For the first time a woman will be able to climb those mountains, which so far men alone have ruled and inhabited.

Dalmatia Still Holds Festival of St. Blaise

Few people have heard of St. Blaise, yet he was the most popular saint in England before the Reformation, and is specially regarded as the patron of the inn. The Benediction of St. Blaise, still given in Roman Catholic churches, is reputed to be effective in cases of throat trouble. Legend claims that St. Blaise was a bishop martyred in the Third century. His skull and a miraculous crown, one of the most beautiful jewels in the world, are preserved in Ragusa, Dalmatia, a city he saved from capture by a miracle.

Crowds of pilgrims go to Ragusa at the beginning of February to take part in the festival of St. Blaise, held in the ancient Dalmatian city just as it was in England in olden days. They still have the processions of relics, magnificent church services, lotteries, and dancing as of yore. The only break in the observance is the liberation of all prisoners in jail.

St. Blaise still has a shrine in London, at a church at Hatton Garden, where the blessing of St. Blaise is given.—London Answers.

WHY CLUTTER UP LIFE'S JOURNEY WITH QUARRELS?

In his weekly comments, in the Sunday magazine of the Los Angeles Times, on the "Synagogue," he has made famous, John Steven McGroarty makes this splendid contribution to the philosophy of life:

"Every man and woman in the far-flung synagogue throughout the world, and all other men and women who have lived long enough to tell a story, have the same story to tell. It is the story of comrades fallen in the battles of life.

"There is no need of wars to the end that men shall die. They die, anyway. Some die soon and others wait long to die. But, die they must, be it soon or late. If disease does not take them, age will. The summons of the Pale Rider cannot be evaded.

"You will think of this when you count the friends you have known and who have passed from beyond sight and ken. Day by day they fall from the ranks of those who still live and wait, each man for his turn. And life is never again just the same when a comrade falls stricken, no more to be comrade in this world again.

"It is all such a little while for anyone. And so, why is it that there are hate and strife among us? Why do we bicker and quarrel since there is such a short while in which to love and be happy? That's what you will be thinking of if you will go into the closet of your soul and contemplate, with God only for a witness of your thoughts.

"The Wanderer of Galilee taught all this. And it was all that he taught. Which, was, indeed, enough. Just love, and nothing else.

"Man is a harsh man to himself.

Large American Bridge What is said to be the seventh largest bridge in the world spans Mount Hope bay, between Bristol and Providence, R. I. The bridge, which was completed two years ago at a cost of more than $1,000,000, replaces a ferry which had been in operation nearly 70 years. It is a suspension bridge, being of the same design as the famous Brooklyn bridge.

HOW PEGGY GOT TO THE PARTY ON MONDAY NIGHT

PANEL 1: BUT IT'S THE ONLY LADIES' NIGHT OF THE YEAR AT THE LODGE, HONEY! HARRY AND HELEN WALKER ARE COUNTING ON US TO GO WITH THEM!
YOU THREE WILL HAVE TO GO WITHOUT ME, DON'T I CAN'T PUT OFF THE WASH—I NEED IT, AND YOU KNOW HOW IT DOES ME UP!

PANEL 2: PEGGY! I JUST MET DON AND HE SAID YOU WEREN'T GOING TONIGHT, WELL, YOU ARE, YOUNG LADY! I'VE BROUGHT YOU SOME OXYDOL TO MAKE SURE!
BUT HELEN, I'VE GOT A BIG WASH AHEAD OF ME. I'LL BE A WRECK FROM SCRUBBING CLOTHES, WHAT-EVER SOAP I USE.

PANEL 3: NONSENSE! I'VE GOT A WASH JUST AS BIG AS YOURS AND I'LL BE THROUGH BY NOON. YOU DON'T SCRUB OR BOIL WITH OXYDOL...SEE YOU LATER!
WELL...THANKS, I'LL TRY IT. BUT I DON'T EXPECT IT'S ANY BETTER THAN THE SOAP I'VE BEEN USING THAT'S SUPPOSED TO BE THE BEST.

PANEL 4: HEAVENS ABOVE! LESS THAN A CUPFUL OF OXYDOL—AND LOOK AT THE SUDS! PERHAPS IT WILL SOAK THE CLOTHES CLEAN IN 15 MINUTES! I'LL TRY THIS BATCH ANYWAY!

PANEL 5: IT DOESN'T SEEM POSSIBLE, HELEN! I FINISHED AN HOUR AGO. THE WHITE THINGS ARE SIMPLY DAZZLING AND THE COLORED THINGS LOOK BRIGHTER THAN NEW—I FEEL ON TOP OF THE WORLD!
YOU'LL FIND THE CLOTHES LAST LONGER, TOO, WASHED IN OXYDOL!

PANEL 6: BUT PEGGY DARLING! WHY ALL THE PEP? WHAT ABOUT THAT CLOTHES—SCRUBBING I HEARD SO MUCH ABOUT?
SCRUBBING? NEVER AGAIN, DON! I'VE CHANGED TO OXYDOL, THAT WONDERFUL NEW GRANULATED SOAP THAT DOES AWAY WITH SCRUBBING, AND BOILING, TOO!

Discovers Oxydol; Ends Hard Rubbing Gets big wash and ironing done same day now!

HURRY UP, SLOW POKES! WE DON'T WANT TO MISS ANYTHING!
DARLING, YOU'RE YOUR OLD SELF AGAIN! I LOVE TO SEE YOU SO HAPPY AND FULL OF LIFE! THREE CHEERS FOR OXYDOL, I SAY!

READ MRS. WIRTHLIN'S LETTER

Mrs. C. Wirthlin Cincinnati, Ohio

"When I washed the old way, I was so tired I could not do my ironing for several days. A few weeks ago I discovered I could get my clothes spotless by soaking them in Oxydol suds! Now I get my washing and ironing done the same day, am not tired, and have a whiter, sweeter bunch of clothes!"

THE amazing new discovery of the world's most famous soap experts, the makers of Ivory—this new and improved Oxydol does these things no other soap can do or has ever done:

- (1) Soaks clothes clean in 15 minutes. Without boiling, without back-breaking rubbing. Hence—cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine, saving hours of labor.
- (2) Gets clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter, by scientific Tintometer test, than other soaps. Whiter in ONE washing than ANY other soap can get them in TWO TO FOUR washings!
- (3) Yet, due to the special mild protective elements it contains, it neither fades nor injures color or fabric. Even cotton prints and children's dainty frocks are safe. And—it's so kind to hands that you're amazed at its power to clean clothes!

Thick 3-inch Suds in Any Water

Oxydol is specially fitted to water conditions in each district where it's sold. The Oxydol you get here already contains just the right amount of water-softener to fit the water you use. You can see the results in the suds. Oxydol multiplies 500 times in suds! Makes rich 3-inch suds in any water, hard or soft! And Oxydol is economical. By actual test, a regular 25¢ package will do the work of 8 to 10 cakes of bar soap or 2 to 3 times as much flakes!

Basketball Tournament

Lincoln county basketball teams gave a good account of themselves in the District High School Tournament held at Caboon Armory, N. M. M. I. in Roswell last Friday and Saturday, according to attendants from here. Corona and Hobbs played an exciting game Friday morning. The final score was Corona 25 and Hobbs 22. Line up for Corona was: Jolly, f; Dubois, f; Snyder, c; Lewis, c; McKibben, g; Montgomery, g.

The Capitan team played against Artesia Friday morning putting up a good fight. Capitan's line up was Silva, f; Garbenteire, f; Hargett, f; Norton, c; Apodaca, g; Miller, g; Lynch, g; Robinson, g.

The Artesia team was said to be heavier and more experienced which accounted for the final score of 32 to 14 in favor of Artesia.

Carrizozo was defeated by Vaughn, the narrow margin of 3 points. Final count being 22 to 19. At the end of the first half Vaughn was leading 2 points, Carrizozo then tied the count, 14 to 14. Vaughn made two more baskets and scored 3 points.

The Carrizozo line up was Perca, f; Elliot, f; Crenshaw, c; Ortiz, g; Shaw, g; Proceso, g ?? Those who attended the tournament from here were, Mmes T. A. Spencer, Nellie Branum, Detloff and Messrs. J. V. Taylor, E. M. Brickley.

Chevrolets Arrive

Mr. Reil, of the City Garage, received a car load of the beautiful new Chevrolets last Monday. Fifteen are already sold. The first one was delivered to Mrs. Ola C. Jones, county superintendent of schools, and the Editor of the News got to take the first ride with Mrs. Jones in the luxurious little car. Everyone is enthusiastic about the knee-action wheels and other superior points both new and old. Besides Mrs. Jones, cars have been delivered to: Miss Emma Coury of Duran, Tommy Tucker of Fort Stanton and several others.

Mr. Montie Gardenhire is demonstrating the new Chevrolets to all interested parties and drive in the new knee action model is productive of much enthusiasm.

Our Senate hearing on air mail contracts goes merrily on. When we realize that White is on the committee over which Black is chairman and they are questioning Brown we are justified in calling it a "colorful" hearing.

The general commodity index for the week ending February 10 had come up to 73.3 per cent of the 1926, while the farm products had increased to 61.4 per cent; these are the highest in several years, and they show we are on the road to real prosperity.

ACCEPT NOTHING
LESS THAN A V-8
OUT PERFORMS ANY OTHER MOTOR

Old fashioned, high pressure tires were good in their day but balloon tires are better. Just so, the old "straight" type motors are giving way to the efficient V-type design.

In the high priced field the V-type engine has been the accepted design for many years. Nothing is as good. The Ford V-8 is the only car you can get under $2,000 with a V-type 8 cylinder engine. It is the most economical car to operate ever built by Ford.

Get the best for your money. Accept nothing less than a V-8.

Clear Vision

How to provide an effective system of ventilation in the enclosed models has been the problem of engineers. Ford has solved it in the new V-8 for 1934. No unsightly up or down bars or "wings" to obstruct the vision. The controlling device is hidden. The window ventilators are built in all front door and rear quarter windows. The window is raised in the regular way. Then, a simple turn of the handle slides the glass back to the ventilating position. A ride in the new Ford is convincing of this safety and comfort advantage.
