Popularity Increase

Pictorial and written reports to Chevrolet sales officials during the past week reflect the unprecedented popularity of Chevrolet Motor Company's products in foreign fields.

Participating in the Concurso de Elegancia, a fashion show and exhibit held recently at Sitges, an exclusive seaside resort in Spain, a Chevrolet Cabriolet had no difficulty securing the silver cup award in an exhibit made up of many famous competing cars, according to one dispatch.

Japan reports that a Chevrolet caravan consisting of 20 units, ranging from the deluxe sedan in the passenger car group to the 157-inch wheelbase six-wheel truck, toured northeastern and central sections of that country, leaving Osaka April 29 and staying in the field until July 2. More than two million people attended showings of the caravan units and were entertained at these showings by a "talkie" film, part of the caravan's equipment, in which professional actors posed as Japanese workmen assembling Chevrolet cars. Another feature of the caravan was the magnificently equipped Chevrolet "parlor coach," a home on wheels, which greatly interested His Imperial Highness, Prince Chichibu of Japan.

The city of Khartoum, Egypt, recently augmented its transportation facilities with a fleet of modern Chevrolet taxicabs driven by native personnel.

New Zealand motorists, reports Manthel Motors, Ltd., of Wellington, call the new knee-action Chevrolet "the wonder car of 1934." Sales this year, Manthel states, greatly exceed last year.

Carrizozo, New Mexico

August 9, 1934.—Livestock going to pasture and feed will be subject to the present reduction in freight rates for thirty more days, according to a telegram received from Dr. E. W. Sheets of Washington, D. C., head of the Drought Relief Service. Blanks enabling producers to take advantage of these rates can be secured at the local office of the Drought Relief Service.

FCA New Plan For Drouth Stock Relief

According to announcement made Monday in Wichita by D. L. Mullendore, president of the Production Credit Corporation, and vice-president and manager of the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation, the Farm Credit Administration is doing everything possible to see that the emergency caused by the drouth does not hamper the livestock industry.

A message from Washington revealed that, due to the continued drouth conditions in the west central and western states, the Farm Credit Administration has arranged to make loans to farmers and stockmen in the emergency drouth areas to pay the cost of moving livestock to new pastures and range lands.

The loans will be advanced from the recently appropriated drouth relief fund, a part of which is already being used for feed and forage loans.

"Not only will the Farm Credit Administration make loans for transporting the livestock, but they will also make loans to pay the cash costs of pasture or range rent," Mr. Mullendore says. "The maximum allowance for this purpose being 50 cents per head per month."

The money loaned to pay transportation costs will be limited not exceeding $3.00 per head for farm cattle, $1.50 for range cattle, $4.00 for farm workstock, $2.00 for saddle and pack horses, 50 cents for sheep, and 35 cents for goats.

Where the livestock moved from drouth areas to new pastures or ranges are to be returned to the home ranch or farm, the allowance for transportation must cover the costs both ways.

"True leadership calls for the setting forth of the objectives and the rallying of public opinion in support of these objectives."
—President Roosevelt.

Virginia Charles was honored at a surprise dinner party last Monday evening at the Carrizozo Eating House, given by her mother, Mrs. Elna Charles. It was Virginia's thirteenth birthday. The little girls present were Misses Evelyn Claunch, Margie Bell, Imogene Miller, Margaret and Betty Shafer.

Another man working near Maloney was slightly injured by the blast.—El Paso Herald.

Mrs. Carmelita Guebara

Mrs. Carmelita Guebara, age 65, died Tuesday at her home here after an illness of eleven months. Mrs. Guebara was a well known and well liked lady. She was the widow of the late Felix Guebara who was a ranchman at White Oaks. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Father Salvador at the Catholic church Wednesday afternoon, followed by interment in the White Oaks Cemetery.

Ancho Items

The Ancho Woman's Club met Wednesday, August 8th, at the home of Mrs. J. M. Frame. The sun parlor and living room were attractively decorated with garden flowers.

This was the most successful and delightful meeting of the year due to the presence of Mrs. Atwood, President of the N. M. Federation of Women's Clubs and the graciousness and congeniality of the hostess and her able assistants, Mesdames Ted Hefren and John Straley. Other special guests were Mesdames C. A. McCammon, E. A. Price, W. Lowe, George Straley and Miss Louise Hall.

Mrs. Atwood was introduced by Mrs. Belknap, the president, she was given a hearty welcome and then Oleta Drake, thru the courtesy of the club, presented her with a beautiful bouquet of flowers.

Roll call: "Has NRA benefited our country?" brought forth many interesting comments.

After brief business session, Mrs. Atwood, in an eloquent manner, made a splendid talk touching on various topics of interest to club women. Remainder of program was rendered consisting of a 4 year resume of club activities by Mrs. Hightower, a song by Misses Lucile and Lila Lee Drake and a reading by Rosemary Hanley.

A feature of entertainment was a picture contest which created much merriment. Prize was awarded to Lucile Drake.

As August 8th was the birthday anniversary of Mrs. T. J. Straley, the club's oldest member, a birthday surprise was arranged in her honor. Mrs. Drake handed her a prettily decorated box containing a large array of gifts. In addition to the many gifts, she received a gorgeous bouquet of flowers.

At tea time a delicious salad course together with iced tea was served.

Next meeting will be at home of Mrs. A. W. Drake, August 23rd.

Mr. Porfirio Chavez, former sheriff of this county, was a Carrizozo visitor Tuesday. Mr. Chavez now resides at Eagle, N. M.

Mrs. Henlah Hartley and Champ Ferguson passed through here last Wednesday enroute to Ocala to visit the brother, Mack Braxel. They returned home the same day.

Almost everybody has gone to the big O—O barbecue and races today and things around town are quiet.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest B. Lindamood of Denver are guests of Mrs. A. H. Lequet. Mrs. Lequet will give a dinner party for them next Sunday.

Seeking Embargo on Feed

D. L. Mullendore, president of the Production Credit Corporation of Wichita, sent a telegram to the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, Monday, asking that an embargo be immediately placed on out-of-state shipments of every kind of feed and forage in the four states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado and New Mexico, comprising the Ninth FCA district, served by the Wichita office.

Mr. Mullendore declares that drouth conditions in these four states make it necessary that every effort be made to conserve every pound of feed and forage in order that livestock will not starve during the coming winter. "We feel our own feed and forage should be saved for our own livestock," says Mullendore.

All reports indicate that there is going to be a scarcity of feed during the coming months, and that local livestock will suffer if unrestricted sales of feed and forage are permitted.

The Production Credit Corporation has huge sums loaned to livestock men in the four states, and it is to protect their interests, as well as of the entire community, that the embargo is sought.

Monday afternoon, as Pete Skinner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Skinner, ran across the street from Braun's Grocery store, he ran from behind a truck into the path of an approaching car, the driver swerved and applied the brakes, but Pete was hit a glancing blow by the fender. He was taken to the Johnson hospital where it was ascertained that he had a fractured bone just above the ankle and numerous skinned places. After his injuries were dressed he was taken home, where he is recovering rapidly.

"For the trust reposed in me I will return the courage and the devotion that befit the time. I can do no less."
—President Roosevelt.

Jackie Claunch and Bill Pruitt were playing in the Spencer canyon Friday afternoon, when they decided to dig some more in a tunnel which some of the boys have been building from time to time. The roof was unsupported and the dry earth caved in, burying Jackie completely under 2 or 4 feet of dirt and sand. Bill found he couldn't dig him out with his bare hands so ran to the Spencer home; got Mrs. Spencer, T. A. Jr. and Roy Herman. Roy dug him out and Mrs. Spencer and T. A. Jr. revived him. He was apparently lifeless when rescued, but respiration was restored in about 40 minutes.

Married

A quiet wedding took place yesterday afternoon at the Methodist parsonage when Miss Frances Skinner became the bride of Mr. Jack Payne of Oklahoma City. Mrs. Payne is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Skinner and is indeed a lovely and accomplished young lady. She graduated from the Carrizozo high school, class of '29, and since her graduation has been employed at the Mountain States Telephone office and has also helped her father as cashier in his restaurant. While Mr. Payne has only lived here a short time he has made many friends. He is a successful mining engineer, and is member of a large engineering firm.

At present they will make their home at El Cibola hotel. We join their many friends in wishing them a happy prosperous life.

Mr. and Mrs. Skinner will entertain tonight at a wedding supper for relatives and a few close friends.

Many People See Exhibit

Santa Fe Aug. 6. More than 300,000 persons from all parts of the United States and many foreign lands, visited the New Mexico State Exhibit at A Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, during the first three weeks the exhibit was open. That information was brought back by Mrs. Maynor D. McGee of Las Cruces, one of the hostesses at the exhibit, on her return to New Mexico Aug. 6. "We have been averaging well over 100,000 visitors a week," said Mrs. McGee. "Requests for literature concerning the state have been heavy and we have recorded several thousand names of those who are interested in future travel in New Mexico."

After a year of operation, the Civilian Conservation Camps have an enviable record and fully justify the faith of President Roosevelt and his advisers who conceived and sponsored the undertaking. The increase in efficiency of the camps during the second six months is apparent. Cincinnati Inquirer.

Guillermo Bartlett

Another violent death is to be chronicled in this week's paper "Willie" Bartlett, truck driver for the overpass contractors was returning from the crusher with a load of gravel last Saturday about 5:30 when he turned out of the road to let a car pass. The sun was in his eyes which blinded him and he ran off the road, evidently losing control of the truck which ran about 40 feet and then turned over on him. His back was broken, also both his legs, and he had other injuries. He was brought to the Johnson hospital where he died several hours later.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Juan Bartlett of Roswell, but had made his home here for a long time and had been employed on various public works projects. He is survived by his widow, six children and his parents.

Ancient Civilization Uncovered in Tennessee

IN TENNESSEE near the Clinch river, where the Norris dam is being built, archeologists have uncovered a prehistoric civilization. First an Indian burial mound dating from long before the arrival of Columbus was excavated. Below this was found a much earlier building containing 17 well preserved skeletons, and still further down were discovered remains of an ancient temple, shown in the photograph.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER SAVES A FRIEND

PETER RABBIT sat in a thicket of young trees on the edge of the Green Forest. So far as he knew he was all alone. It was very quiet there and it wasn't long before he was dozing. Now, Peter is a light sleeper, as all little people who never know when they may have to run for their lives must be. By and by he awoke with a start, and he was very wide awake, indeed. Something had awakened him, but just what it was he couldn't say.

It was Chewink, the Towhee, sometimes called the Ground Robin.

or edge of the thicket, he heard a great rustling of dry leaves. For just an instant Peter was startled, but only for an instant. His long ears told him at once that that noise was made by some one scratching among the leaves, and he knew that no one who did not wear feathers could scratch like that. "Now, who can that be?" thought Peter, and stole forward very softly. Presently he saw the brown leaves which carpeted the ground fly this way and that, and in the midst of them was an exceedingly busy person, just a little smaller than Welcome Robin, scratching away for dear life. Every now and then he picked up something. He heard, throat, back, and breast were black. Beneath he was white. His sides were reddish brown. His tail was black and white and the longer feathers of his wings were edged with white. It was Chewink, the Towhee, sometimes called the Ground Robin.

Peter kept perfectly still, for it was fun to watch some one who hadn't the least idea he was being watched. Chewink's feet were made for scratching and he certainly knew how to use them. For some time Peter sat there watching. Just as he had about made up his mind to make his presence known and have a bit of morning gossip, he happened to look out beyond the edge of the little thicket. There he saw something red. It was something alive, for it was moving very slowly and cautiously toward the place where Chewink was scratching, forgetful of everything but his breakfast. It was Reddy Fox, and quite plainly Reddy was hoping to catch Chewink. Suddenly Peter thumped the ground with his feet. It was his danger signal which all his friends know. Then he turned and scampered, lipperty-lipperty-lip, to a bramble-tangle not far behind him. At that thump Chewink instantly flew up in a little tree. Then he saw Reddy Fox and began to scold. As for Reddy, he looked over toward the bramble-tangle and snarled. "I'll get you one of these days, Peter Rabbit," said he. "I'll get you one of these days and pay 'you up for cheating me out of a breakfast." Without so much as a glance at Chewink, Reddy turned and trotted off, trying to look as if he had never entertained such a thought as trying to catch Chewink.

QUESTION BOX By ED WYNN The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a baker and keep a bakery shop. I notice I am losing a lot of money on the doughnuts I make to sell. I can't charge any more than I do now for them. The reason I lose money is, I use too much dough to make them with. What can I do so as to not use as much dough as I use now to make the doughnuts? Yours truly, MIA KOED.

Answer—Make the holes in the doughnuts larger and you won't use as much dough.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a girl going to high school and I met a boy whom I like real well. He takes me home every day. He seems to be very nice, but his hands and neck always look unclean to me. I am fifteen years of age, and my hands are very clean, while he is seventeen years of age, and his hands are so much dirtier. How do you account for that? Sincerely, IMA KOED.

Answer—That is easily accounted for. He is two years older than you.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a boy sixteen years of age. One day last week I took a can of black paint and a brush and was painting the front door of our house, which was white, with the black paint. My father saw me, made me stop, and then ordered me away from his home. What is wrong with him? Sincerely, I. M. BROCK.

Answer—You say you were painting a white door with black paint and your father caught you at it and disowned you. Very simple. He doesn't want you to darken his doors again.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am blind in one eye. I went to a theater where the price of admission was $4. I told the ticket seller that I should pay only $2 for a ticket, as I was blind in one eye, and therefore was only able to see half the show. Wasn't I right? Truly yours, I. C. FAIL.

Answer: You were absolutely wrong. The price of the ticket was $4. You wanted to pay only $2 because you say you would have seen just half of the show, as you have but one eye. Because of that fact, I mean that you have only one eye, the ticket seller should have charged you $3 (double the price), as it would have taken you twice as long to see the whole show. © the Associated Newspapers WNU Service

Cost of Engraving Stamps The Post Office department says: "The cost of engraving a new postage stamp is from $300 to $500, depending on the size of the stamp and the amount of detail work. However, the department is reimbursed many times for this expense through the sale of the new stamp to collectors. Therefore, every new stamp issued is a source of profitable revenue to the government."

IN MEMORY OF A BABY

By ANNE CAMPBELL

I DO not know why angel wings Should flutter near me in the night; They swingling, as a starling swings, Desert me for eternal flight.

I do not know why baby hands Should cling one moment to my own. Then reach for the celestial lands, And leave me weeping all alone.

Perhaps by heaven's outer gate There is a tiny sentinel, Who waits, as I have learned to wait, To hear the tolling of a bell.

I longed to keep a little soul From this world's sadness undefiled, And weep that by the starry goal, Stainless, there waits a little child. Copyright.—WNU Service.

Practical and Smart

No single item in the young lady's summer wardrobe is more practical, comfortable and smart than a brief crocheted sweater, like the one here shown. If it is of mercerized crocheted cotton in an openwork stitch it will be light and airy enough for the hottest day. This little blouse has a high square neck with four round brown buttons, very short sleeves, and fits tightly about the girlish waist.

SYNOPSIS

Mary, daughter of a millionaire, has the idea that her personality is obscured by the fact that she is the child of the "rich David Brown," and determines to make her way in life unaided. She has a million dollars, which she insists her father invest in the "wildcat dream" imaginable, and about which she must know nothing. She is a graduate engineer. As "M. Brown" Mary secures a position as engineer with the Paradise Valley Project, a development concern. She is engaged by letter. On the train, on her way to her job, she meets Denis Craig, chief engineer, of reputation in consulting her sex, and again meets Craig, who is the promoter of the project. Mary is given a position. She cannot make up her mind as to whether Craig is an honest visionary, or a "talker."

So the morning wore on, hundred feet by hundred feet, uphill and down. If by noon Mary's unhardened legs began to ache, she showed no sign. But she smothered a grateful sigh as they stopped under a live oak by a clear spring for lunch. She was thankful for the fragrant coffee quickly boiled over a small fire; for the thick buns with their gobs of butter and thin fat slices of ham for filling; for the tough white cake and apple pie with its soaked crust. But most of all she was thankful that the men of the party, discovering they had fifteen minutes of their lunch hour still left, stretched out in the shade for a siesta. What a man could do, she could. She followed precedent.

Mary ate her dinner in the mess tent that evening. She was too tired to talk to Hank Johnson on the ride into town. They arrived at the surveyors' framework that had been added to the end of the house.

"What's going on?" Mary asked curiously.

"Another room," said Hank Johnson, brusquely. "It's my house. I can add on to it, can't I?" And he alighted to scatter a group of children the ring of carpenters' hammers had brought.

"Why did you do that?" Mary had the temerity to ask.

"Don't like children," grumpily. He looked over the job, as if to see that he had received his money's worth during the day, and departed.

Mary turned to Lucretia. "How- ever—"

"You know how he is. Well, this morning as he passed I asked him to fix my gate. He said, 'No! I won't. Let your old man fix it! He busted it!'"

"In ten minutes he was back with a carpenter. So I screwed up my courage and asked him if he didn't want to build on an addition for you—since the carpenter was already here and all. And when he strode off down the street fairly apoplectic with rage, I guessed correctly that the lumber would be here in half an hour. It was. You see, he wouldn't take a chance either on the depreciation of his gate, or on losing an extra five dollars a month rental."

The crude little room went up space. Mary Brown's work went on space. A week or so, and her legs and back were hardened to fifteen miles a day of climbing up and down hills, so that she was not too tired on coming home to relax into joyous contentment within her own four walls.

Mary had sent up to San Francisco for her furnishings, and, with Lucretia, had dressed up the room with naive delight.

"This," Mary wrote her father, "is realization! Beyond my wildest dreams!"

In anticipation she had thought only of her work: the chance to start at the bottom and work up. But this life was full, not only of work that held opportunity, but of play. "Primitive, wholesome play," she put it.

Foggy Gulch, taken over as it were by engineers, was started out of its lethargy by luncheons, dinners, teas, bridge parties. The "halfalutin newcomers" even danced on rough pine living room floors—until they learned that Mary Brown knew all the latest dance steps. They hired a hall when she promised to teach them.

But when they came to the business detail of terms Mary blushed from her fair slim throat to the tips of her fragile ears.

"I?" with an upspringing of her head.

"Take money as a dancing teacher?" But her audience read into her confusion only denial of her own ability, not the affront the rich David Brown's daughter instinctively had felt.

"Not money from my friends! I'm getting more out of this than any of you. See, this is the way the hesitation 'waits goes!'"

She danced away from them alone, light as a blown leaf, totally unconscious. She was a vivid bit, vibrantly alive, the aure of her simple dancing frock bringing out the blue of her eyes, the silver-gold of her hair. She pivoted to a stop, to catch her breath inwardly.

In the doorway, unnoticed by her before, stood John Stark and Denis Craig. How long had they been there? With his charming, gleaming smile, Denis was coming toward her now.

"Don't you know," he was laughing, "that in the smartest schools pros have their partners for demonstration?" He swung her off to the rhythm she had been demonstrating, leading her with ease and heavenly rhythm. Initiating his own steps. The comradely crowd had given up their attempts and stood watching with open admiration.

It was enough to send any girl's stock soaring. Mary's rose to the peak—and then slumped to the bottom as Denis said in his most teasing tone, "Still snapping your fingers at money, I see, M. Brown."

A small unreasonable fury swept Mary. He could mention money at a time like this. Money! Money! It provoked her to the stinging retort: "I'm no dancing teacher. Not every one can take money upon misrepresentation, you know."

She felt a little start of surprise. He held her back to look down at her. "Et tu?"

"Why should you think I was getting personal?" Mary asked innocently. And added, "Incidentally, I suppose the reason Mr. Stark glowers at me so is because I'm refusing to hasten my financial status to the point where he conscientiously can dispense with my services."

"And pondering the way a girl can corrupt his organization. We had no such frivolities as dancing classes before your advent."

Incongruously Mary's spirits rose again.

And then she and Hank Johnson came driving into town one evening to gaze upon the amazing spectacle, as they rounded a corner, of Claribel Moore and Lucretia Dorsey racing down the street as fast as they could run. Before Mary could question Hank, he stopped his car, and with amazing behavior of his own, commanded, "Get out!"

Mary got out. One did not temporize with such a tone. Hank scowled about and drove rapidly toward his own home.

The racing pair dashed past Mary, past a small white-washed wooden structure which was the town jail, to a framework beside it which bore at its summit an enormous bell from which a rope dangled.

The bell pealed out its terrible summons. From a house far down the street a great black cloud of smoke now poured. From all the other houses men and women came running with pails of water.

Mary drew in her breath and looked about. The other houses would catch! The whole town might go, she realized as she saw the tragedy of human and material risk in a community which has no water system. The three girls hurried up the street with the rest of the crowd toward the house which already had lost its identity. They arrived just in time to meet four men bearing upon a charred cot a glowing red burden that had the shape of human bodies.

Mary dug her nails into her palms.

"Who was it?" she asked a townsman.

He just looked at her and moved away, but a woman who had heard, whispered: "It was Jake Oleson and that daughter of his. She was a wild one. Every one in town knew only too well what was about to happen to her. And so—" she waved an eloquent hand at the blazing ruins. "It looks as if the old man had faced the disgrace in the easiest way. She's made life hell—"

"Oh!" Mary cried. "Oh—" And then she heard something about a pauper's field. She shut her lips tightly.

But the next morning when Hank Johnson inferred that it was just as well that that fire had been, she opened them decisively.

"Mr. Johnson, if Foggy Gulch had had just one public-spirited city father, that tragedy probably never would have happened!"

"What do you mean, public-spirited city father?"

"One who would spend his money for the public good."

"How could money prevent such things? Answer me that!"

Plants Become Feverish
Plants as well as humans and animals, become feverish when they are ill. It has been discovered by doctors that leaves of sick plants take on about three added degrees of temperature, Fahrenheit. Again as in humans and animals, the fever is merely the symptoms of infection, the real plant disease being something else.

Man Might Learn Much From Birds and Beasts

"Wild animals have a code of manners often comically like ours. They are frequently courteous, tender-hearted, and considerate to the point of being romantic. They possess that unembarrassed demeanor which is indicative of soul poise, and show on many occasions a behavior that indicates good taste.

"Being a good sport is, in a deep sense, showing good manners. And birds and animals have a gallantry of bearing that seems a part of their code of behavior. They bear disappointment, pain, death with a courage that is extraordinary. A certain grace of heart is theirs.

"One display of their good manners is the tolerance with which wild creatures regard one another. Of course there are fights, but these originate almost always in love rivalry. There are no social climbers, no business antagonists. There are no jealousies over place and power. But there does appear to be a consciousness of the rights of others. A huge dead pine with a series of hollows, one above the other, will be tenanted, during a single mating season, by pairs of bluebirds, black woodpeckers, flickers, fox-squirrels, screeching owls, and sparrow-hawks! These are six families of entirely different nationalities, yet all live happily, one above the other, in the same tenement. And make no mistake, the serenity is the result of genuine tact and etiquette!

"And the vagaries of falling in love! Any observer of the human scene knows the impulse then to 'show off.' But while we like to impress the whole world with our superiority, a wild creature tries to appear exceptional only to the one by whom he wants to be loved. And all about us in the woods and fields and sky and grass one may observe an etiquette of loving. In much of the affection of wild mates for each other there is a tenderness of consideration that is clear evidence that they care for each other beyond the physical attraction. And take the cardinals, for instance, who mate for life; even in the dead of winter they remember love and carol to each other!"

Savoring somewhat of sarcasm, this paragraph sums up the reflections of a distinguished writer and thinker:

"It appears that those who want to be really civilized might take a tip from the birds and the beasts! And it seemed to me that passing on this information about them from the comments of that well-known naturalist, Archibald Nisbet, would certainly be of no less value to my readers than anything I could say to them."

Question Appeared to—Verge on the Personal

A harassed-looking man entered a gramophone shop and inquired for some modern light music, preferably dance records.

"Very well, sir," said the assistant. "I understand perfectly. By the way, didn't you buy some records of operatic music here last week?"

"That's right," said the customer, miserably; "but my wife doesn't care for them. She wants something really snappy."

The assistant took down a number from the shelves.

"Have you had 'Seven Years With the Wrong Woman'?" he asked, naming a popular piece of music.

"No, twelve!" snapped the customer. "But, anyway, what the blazes has that got to do with you?"

NEED OF CENSUS TO SHOW VITAL NATIONAL FACTS

A good deal of the governmental, business and social activities of any community depends upon accurate knowledge of the number of inhabitants which compose it.

Such vital information is seriously lacking these days. A leading life insurance company discusses the subject in a statistical bulletin under the heading, "How Many Are We?" Apparently there is no reliable information regarding the population of the country as a whole or of any of the states or large cities. The depression is to blame. Formerly it was comparatively easy to make population estimates in the years between the decennial census, but today it is difficult to make even an approximate guess. The simple and usually reliable methods then employed no longer are suitable to the sudden and fundamental changes which have taken place in our population during the last few years.

Economic conditions have pushed down the birthrate, the tides of immigration have reversed, and millions of people are coming and going in search of work, never settling down in one place long enough to be counted. Washington has given up and is no longer preparing the annual estimates of population.

Meanwhile business men and governmental officials are clamoring to know the population facts about the various states and cities. It is information necessary for the apportionment of representatives, taxes, water supply, schools, roads, transportation, police services and for the conduct of industrial and commercial enterprise. Only another federal census can solve the problem, and the suggestion has arisen to take one in 1935, or five years early.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Fly in Clenched Hand—Guarantee of Honesty

On the way from Vienna to Budapest, let's stop at the first opportunity, say at the Hungarian provincial town of Győr, for a taste of gypsy entertainment. A good Hungarian gypsy orchestra can, and does, turn the thoughts of the coldest of ladies towards romance better than any amount of champagne could do.

The cover charge evil has not penetrated this far inland, and we are treated to the spectacle of one of the gypsies going from customer to customer for tips after every third dance, holding what seems to be a collection plate in one hand, and with the other tightly clenched. Of this phenomenon, investigation proved more fruitful. The explanation of the one clenched hand is quite simple. It is a guarantee of honesty. It contains a live fly which the collector must bring back alive to his fellow musicians, to show that his hand has not accidentally abstracted a handful of coins from the collection plate for his own pocket, while he was in a far corner of the cafe.

The collector might, of course, catch him a new fly after a lapse from grace, and I suggested that the flies be braided. This novel idea was given due consideration by the orchestra, but then rejected, on the grounds that any motion so conspicuous as catching a new fly could not be concealed from the watchful eyes of the hardily-to-be-called-trusting colleagues.—Charles Layne in Esquire.

Odd Form of "Kindling"

Stone "kindling" is used to start fires. It is in the form of a synthetic stone which, when soaked in kerosene, burns for ten minutes. It can be used repeatedly, as it does not break down in the heat and absorbs the fuel, thus permitting it to burn gradually when soaked in lard for the same purpose and when coal oil was first employed as fuel, deposit of a peculiar granitic was found which was used in the same manner.

Livestock Situation

(By J. A. McNaughton)

Los Angeles, August 9, 1934.—There are many serious angles to the present drought situation which is leading to the destruction of hundreds of thousands of cattle. To my mind the tragic part of the situation isn't the present, bad as it is, but rather the future when the far-reaching effect of doing away with breeding herds will actually be felt. Large numbers of foundation herds are located in drought-stricken areas, and doubtless there will be no choice in some instances but to slaughter them, but this should only be resorted to where it is utterly impossible to salvage the better herds. Even though it is necessary to move them great distances, or bring feed to them, it would be well worth the expense if the government would provide funds for this purpose. It would be expensive, but not so expensive as facing a long period of rehabilitating our flocks and herds. Should these foundation herds be destroyed it would mean the wiping out of generations of painstaking work which has been done in the past. Doubtless in the lifetime of anyone reading this release we would not see the replacement of these herds. We will all be doing something for the industry by doing everything in our power to assist the government in any program designed to avoid, as far as possible, the destruction of these breeding herds. Another important consideration is that when a herd is done away with, it puts a cattleman out of business and throws him into the over populated ranks of those who have no way of earning a livelihood.

Recovery Program Helpful

Steady and substantial progress on the President's Recovery Program was shown at the end of the fiscal year, June 30. Seasonal recessions have been far below normal, when not missing entirely. Purchasing power in four lines of retail trade was shown by sales records to have gained more than 400 million dollars over the first six months of last year, with June gains over May.

Even the vast postal service converted deficits of 152 million dollars in 1932 and 50 millions in 1933 to a surplus of five millions over expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1934. It is the first time the world's largest business operation has been self-sustaining since 1919, the seventh time in 50 years, and is a notable example of what can be accomplished by efficient, painstaking public service.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation showed a profit for the fiscal year of $21,784,000. Since it began to function on February 3, 1932, its total emergency expenditures amount to 7,452 millions, of which 4,558 millions represent loans secured by assets or collateral and 1,400 millions were repaid since March 4, 1933. During the fiscal year 1934, loans of all types amounted to 1,177 millions, with repayments of 931 millions.

The remarkable rate of recovery of financial institutions since the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration is shown by these repayments.

During the past year banks and trust companies repaid to the R. F. C. $34 million and borrowed 447 million; railroads repaid 48 millions and borrowed $1 million; insurance companies repaid nearly 48 millions and borrowed five and a half millions; building and loan associations repaid 47 millions and borrowed only five millions.

But government borrowers capable of liquidating their debts are not confined to financial institutions. Since last November, the Commodity Credit Corporation has advanced 121 million dollars on 270 million bushels of sealed corn in ten states. Up to July 16, six millions had been repaid and subsequent payments average a million dollars a day.

Cash income of farmers during the first six months of 1934 increased 19 per cent over 1933 from sale of farm products alone and 27 per cent including rental and benefit payments financed by processing taxes.

Industrial wages continued at 58.6 cents per hour in June, the same as in May. Increases in June, 1933, were 29.9 per cent in hourly earnings; 31.9 per cent in employment and 46.7 per cent in payrolls. Freight loadings were higher in June and continued increasing through July. They totaled 614,864 cars for the third week of July, 112,952 over the corresponding week in 1932. A sharp rise in exports in June left a trade balance of $4 million dollars, against five millions in May and an increase of 44 per cent over June, 1933.

Success of the system by which the accounts of 50 million depositors in 14,000 banks are insured up to $5,000 each evoked the astonishment of old world financial authorities. More than 97 per cent of all depositors in 93 per cent of all licensed banks are protected from loss, in the manner advocated by the Democratic party since 1908.

During its first year, the Home Owners Loan Corporation loaned more than a billion dollars to 341,000 distressed home owners; the Federal Housing Administration is organizing for immediate action; the number directly employed on Federal Public Works July 16 was 600,000, with twice that number working on manufacture, processing and transportation of materials.

On every front and with full steam ahead, the President's Recovery Program is moving toward restoration of normal conditions.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Monday morning about 11:00 o'clock as Mrs. Alice Roberts came out of Dr. Paden's Drug Store, she missed a step and fell to the pavement fracturing her right arm. This was quite a misfortune and everybody is deeply sympathetic. Dr. Johnson X-rayed the arm and treated it, and she is resting as comfortably as could be expected.

Mrs. J. E. Farley came up Tuesday on No. 12 and staid until Wednesday with her daughter, Mrs. Charles and children.

It is necessary to be registered before you can vote, so don't neglect this important duty. See to it personally that voters in your family are on the registration list.

The state corporation commission made a distribution of the state fire protection fund on August 4th. The amount received by Carrizozo was $593.93.

Murder of Dollfuss by Nazis Creates Serious Situation in Europe—Bandit Dillinger Slain by Federal Agents in Chicago.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

ENGELBERT DOLLFUSS, intrepid little chancellor of Austria, has fallen a victim of his political enemies. A group of 141 Nazis, disguised in uniforms, broke into the chancellery in Vienna and made prisoners of Dollfuss and a number of his ministers. The chancellor was beaten and shot and left to bleed to death, his captors refusing to permit a physician, or a priest to be called. Without revealing the fact that they had murdered the dictator, the Nazis then surrendered on promise of safe conduct across the German border, being aided in the negotiations by K. Riehl, the German minister to Austria. When it was learned that Dollfuss had been killed the promise was revoked and the Nazis were locked up.

Meanwhile another small bunch of Nazis had seized the radio broadcasting office and had given out a statement that Dollfuss had resigned and would be succeeded as chancellor by Dr. Anton Rintelen, the minister to Italy. Rintelen was called to Vienna immediately, put in a cell and there shot seriously. Officials said he tried to commit suicide.

President Miklas called on Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg, minister of education under Dollfuss, to head the government, and he, together with former Vice Chancellor Eull Fey and Prince Ernst von Starheimberg, the vice chancellor, took charge of the situation with the help of the police. Soon afterwards it was announced that Von Starheimberg had been made chancellor. In the province of Styria and some other regions civil war broke out almost at once and the Nazis, strong in numbers especially in Graz, were desperately fighting with the regular army and the help of the Heimwehr.

Italy, France and Great Britain were conferring as to the best measure to take to carry out their pledges of last February that the integrity of Austria should be maintained. Italy, especially, was determined that the Austrian Nazis should not gain control of the country and was ready for armed intervention. Mussolini had 70,000 troops encamped near the Austrian frontier and personally assured Prince Von Starheimberg that he would defend Austrian independence. The French professed to look on the Nazi revolt as an internal event not warranting intervention at present, but the question of maintaining Austrian independence is one of the few in which they agree entirely with the Italians.

Naturally, everyone blamed Germany for the tragedy in Vienna, for the German Nazis have carried on a long and persistent campaign against Dollfuss, making use of the radio without restraint. Hitler's government, however, tried to avoid implication in the Vienna uprising. Minister Riehl was recalled to Berlin because of his unauthorized action in helping the Nazi group, and Hitler appointed Franz von Papen to succeed him. The border was closed to all political fugitives from Austria. The German press, always under control, was careful not to express joy over the killing of Dollfuss.

On the side lines, waiting to see what course would prove most advantageous to themselves, were Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Hungary. The situation in central Europe thus was packed with dynamite almost as it was twenty years ago, and to all the world capitals the danger of serious international repercussions was recognized. Another general European war may be avoided for the present, but bloody conflict in Austria seemed certain.

FOR the first time in history a President of the United States set foot on Hawaiian soil when Mr. Roosevelt landed at Hilo. He went ashore there especially to visit the great Kilauea volcano, and being driven to the edge of the huge freight of Halemauuma; he made a sacrifice to Pele, the fire goddess, by tossing a bunch of red ohelo berries into the crater. The city of Hilo gave the President a warm welcome and staged a pageant. Then he proceeded to Honolulu for the main events of his visit. His activities there included a review of 15,000 troops and an inspection of the Pearl Harbor naval base. He was entertained at luncheon by Maj. Gen. B. H. Wells, commandant of the army department, attended a picnic given by the Harvard club, ate dinner with Gov. Joseph Poindexter and, after a reception at the governor's mansion retired to the Royal Hawaiian Hotel at Waikiki beach.

MINNEAPOLIS became the labor riot center of the country, the striking truckers there and the police engaging in bloody fights; and, as in San Francisco, much of the violence was attributed to Communist agitators. The striking drivers sought the stoppage of all industry but only the cab drivers joined them.

Father Francis J. Haas and E. H. Dunningan, federal labor conciliators, offered a plan of settlement which was accepted by the strikers, but the employers turned it down, asserting that the Reds were behind the strike and that they would have no dealings with Communists. Gov. Floyd Olson immediately declared martial law in the city and Hennepin county and Adjutant General Walsh of the National Guard became dictator. The decree even demoted the press to a considerable degree. Four thousand guardsmen were mobilized and motor patrols toured the streets at intervals.

Following a conference of delegates, J. J. Noonan, president of the Licensed Tugmen's Protective association, announced in Detroit that a unanimous vote bound all unions and continued strike action in demand of an eight-hour day and a $2,400 yearly wage. Noonan said the next move was up to the shipowners, chiefly represented by John W. Cushing, Chicago, and G. A. Tomlinson, Cleveland.

About ninety tugs have been tied up at Great Lakes ports since the men left their jobs June 1, Noonan said.

JOHN DILLINGER, murderer, bank robber, outlaw and most notorious of America's modern desperadoes, is dead. Traced to Chicago, he ventured a visit to a moving picture theater to see a film of the life of a man who ended in the electric chair. As he came out of the theater federal agents and a police squad from East Chicago, Indiana, surrounded him. He drew his pistol and was instantly shot to death. Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the investigating forces of the Department of Justice in Chicago, led his men in this final and successful effort to get Dillinger, dead or alive. The outlaw had sought to disguise himself by having his face lifted and his hair dyed and by growing a short mustache. His finger tips, also, had been treated with acid. His identification, however, was immediate and certain.

It was credibly reported that a woman had given the tip that resulted in the killing of Dillinger, but naturally, her name was not made public, for five members of his gang are still at large and might be expected to avenge their leader. The informant is due to receive at least a considerable share of the rewards offered by the governments of the United States, Indiana and Minnesota for information leading to the capture or death of Dillinger. These rewards total $15,000.

Attorney General Cummings in Washington was elated by the news of Dillinger's death. He warmly praised the work of Mr. Purvis and his men, who had devoted most of their time for four and a half months to the elimination of the desperado.

Three of the Dillinger gang besides the leader have been killed in battle with the law. Eight others are in prison, two of them under sentence of death.

WITH the collapse of the general strike in the San Francisco area and the defeat of the radical element among the workers, the longshoremen at all ports of the Pacific coast voted to submit to arbitration their differences with the ship owners. The latter had agreed to arbitrate and at the same time had promised to bargain collectively with other maritime unions. In the San Francisco bay region there were 103 vessels in port and the work of loading and unloading these went on rapidly. In other respects normal conditions there were restored. The "vigilante" bands continued their raids on Communist hangouts and the police arrested a number of radicals. The hope that the alien agitators captured can be deported was rather dashed by the attitude assumed by Secretary of Labor Perkins in the matter of deportations. She is waiting for the next congress to pass the leniency measure that would give her dictatorial power in these cases.

OLE H. OLSON is in the saddle as the acting governor of North Dakota and matters political were quieter in Bismarck. The house of the state legislature called into session by William Langer, the ousted governor, went home after naming a committee to consider impeachments. The senate couldn't muster a quorum and so it quit.

Acting Governor Olson declared a moratorium on every form of debt where the debtor can show inability to pay. It is designed to protect the farmer, small business man and home owner from foreclosure.

ONE HUNDRED miles of the Texas Gulf coast was swept by a terrific tropical storm that cost possibly a score of lives and did vast damage to crops and other property. An eighty-mile gale drove a tidal wave six miles inland, flooding towns, trapping the residents, breaking communication lines and smashing boats and buildings.

ALL American possessions except the Philippines, Samoa and Guam are now under the direction of a single government agency. The division of territories and island possessions, created by President Roosevelt under authority of the government economy act, has taken over control of Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. Previously Puerto Rico was under the War department and the others under the Interior department. The navy will continue to govern Guam and Samoa, and the War department will have charge of the Philippines until they accept independence voted them by the last congress.

IN AN executive order given out in Washington, the President set in motion his great reforestation program designed to help the plains area of the Middle West. He allocated $15,000,000 from the $25,000,000 drought relief fund for the beginning of work on a 775,000-acre forest shelter belt a hundred miles wide and extending more than 1,000 miles through the heart of the drought area from the Canadian border to the Texas Panhandle.

Announcement of the President's action and of the gigantic undertaking was made by Secretary Wallace, who authorized the forest service to use up to $10,000,000 of the $15,000,000 allocated to begin work on the project immediately.

AS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT aboard the cruiser Houston was nearing Hawaii he took time to announce the membership of the national mediation board for the settlement of railroad disputes. The men he appointed are:

William M. Leiserson, Yellow Springs, Ohio, for the term ending February, 1933.

James W. Carmalt, Washington, D. C., for the term ending February, 1933.

John Carmody, now chief engineer of the federal emergency relief administration, for the term ending February, 1933.

The President also named Murray Lathier chairman of the railroad retirement board, created by a recent act of congress.

MOSCOW has finally realized that it cannot get trade credits in the United States until it in some way squares up the old czarist debts owed in this country. Therefore Ambassador Troianovsky and Secretary of State Hull have begun preliminary conversations on the subject, at the instance of the Soviet government.

Russia owes the United States government $337,000,000 which this country lent to the czarist and Kerensky governments during the war. The Reds repudiated these debts when they seized control of Russia. The Roosevelt administration has firmly refused trade credits to the Soviet government until some sort of an agreement is reached on these debts. Although the Reconstruction Finance corporation has had an export-import bank set up for months to finance Russian trade, not a single loan has been made. Under terms of the Johnson act, which prevents new American loans to foreign debt defaulters, the bank has held that it cannot extend credit to Russia.

HAVING given nearly three months to the study of the nation's air defense, the board headed by Newton D. Baker has submitted a report which calls for immediate strengthening of the army air corps to meet "the most serious war threat against our country that can be conceived." The report says the army air forces are decidedly inferior to American navy and civil units that lead the world in strength and efficiency. The budget bureau and rigidly appropriations by congress are held to blame.

Shortage of modern equipment, resulting from the reduced appropriations and stagnation in promotion of army air officers, the board warned, has affected the morale of the entire army.

The report scoffed at reports the United States was vulnerable to air invasion. It also opposed the unification of army and navy air forces under a separate national defense unit.

First giving assurance that its recommendations do not embrace a national policy of aggression, the board proposed:

1. A national aviation policy to be retained for a "reasonable" length of time.
2. Effectuation of the 1926 act which called for expansion of the army air corps to 2,320 planes with a larger ratio of combat units.
3. Steady program of procurement which would keep alive the nation's airplane building industry.
4. Drastic changes in the air corps regulations which would increase flying hours per pilot from 150 to 200 hours to 300 yearly; revisions in the promotion system for officers; increased training in flying under dangerous conditions and with instruments common on commercial planes.
5. Consolidation of the joint agencies of army and navy, such as the joint munitions board, the joint aeronautics board, etc., under the authority of the army and navy board functioning as a superior board for both departments.
6. Purchase of small inexpensive commercial planes for use in training pilots in group night flying.
7. Continuation of experiments with small non-rigid airships as partial substitutes for observation balloons.
8. Increase of the air corps personnel by 400 officers.

Ill Humor Result of Tired Nerves

Temporary Upsets Should Be Looked Upon as Unimportant.

Even in the best regulated families it frequently happens that a party, outing or other good time which calls forth nervous energy is followed by a quarrel, or, at least, a feeling of irritability which makes the tension high in the home circle. The important matter is to regard these temperamental upsets as wholly unimportant. They are purely the result of fatigue, and no personal grudge should be held for the occurrence, regrettable, though it is, and unpleasant at the time.

Just as thunder showers follow a hot sunshiny day, so these temperamental outbursts are purely the effect of too much exuberance, coupled with the necessity of being with close companions, when the real need is for a little period of rest and solitude. If possible to give yourself the "break" which a little rest and quiet affords after a strenuous time, do so, for the sake of yourself and others. But if this is not possible, and a deluge of words begins to be hurled from friends or members of the family, yourself included, let the event pass as quickly as does a momentary shower, and as soon as the "air has cleared," let it be forgotten.

It is not just the children of the household which should be granted this indulgence. Mothers are usually on the watch for such temperamental disturbances after a good time. Many adults have not outgrown this perfectly natural reaction of tired nerves and bodies. The difference is that mothers, knowing the cause, do not take the circumstances seriously.

Adults are not always as fair or generous in their judgments. However, it may seem at the time, nothing said in such a mood should be taken as significant. Let the sun shine as soon as the moment allows, and realize that all that were good friends before, still are the same, and that a nervous system which sometimes becomes tyrannical has been playing a few rather showy tricks which have nothing to do with the basis for love and friendship.

Animals "Made Up" for Motion Picture Work

There are beauty hints for animals as well as human beings, and a score of make-up devices as well. To the motion-picture camera all the members of the animal kingdom are alike; the only difference is in the personnel of the respective make-up departments and the dressing rooms, observes a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The dressing rooms for the jungle beasts on the film lot of one company are a hundred closely guarded cages. The make-up man is as different from the manicured attendants to the human players as are his charges.

A thick beard hides his bronzed skin. His beauty equipment consists of huge flies, fantastic shears, combs with yard-long handles—the sort of tools a beautician might see in a nightmare. He moves from cage to cage, his hands deftly wielding the instruments. For heaven forbid that a cinema cat or a "movie" monkey should hear the call to "camera!" without first being primed

Guadalajara

Public Letter Writers in Guadalajara.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

AT DAWN comes the clang and peal of countless bells. The din is startling in its unexpectedness. It sounds like a battle call—or an alarm that Guadalajara is burning.

Hurriedly you get up and go out on the night balcony.

"All these churches," says a voice at your elbow, "and every bell with a different tone." It is the man from the room next to yours, a Spanish friend from the sugar plantations, in pajamas and straw sandals.

"I first came here more than 40 years ago, from Spain," he adds. "We made the last stretch in a four-mile stagecoach on leather springs, after a night battle with handita. We got in just at dawn, with these same bells ringing—nothing here has changed much—the same people, habits, churches, and bells. Even the bats are still here. Read at night, and your light draws the moths; turn out the light, and the bats fly in to eat the moths. But they don't eat their wings—next morning moth wings are all over your floor!"

In the street below now black-garbed women, their heads covered, are walking quietly to market—women of all classes, peon and aristocrat—but hardly any men. Rattling heavily, a water cart turns the corner, sprinkling the streets and raising that ammonia smell of old adobe towns where humans and beast have long crowded the absorbent soil too closely. You meet that same smell, mixed with the scent of roasting coffee, when at early morning men wet the dusty streets of Aden or Baghdad.

"Ice!" "Bread!" "Morning paper!" All voices of the awakening city as truly as cackles, crows, grunts, and squeals are the alarm clocks of the farmer. Before the doorway halts an old man on a mule, carrying two big cans. A sleepy girl, with a clay jar, comes out and buys some milk. And the man rides on, calling his singsong "Leche, leche," milk, milk, in a despairing wail, more like a cry of pain than an invitation to buy.

Turkeys for Sale.

Now a country boy in a ragged straw hat comes driving a flock of turkeys. He carries a long stick, with a whip-like piece of string on one end, for flicking any errant turkey on the neck. He urges them on by hissing sounds, his tongue against his upper teeth, in the familiar Indian warning. They market thousands of turkeys on foot here, as in parts of Texas, the inquisitive, shapely birds marching with quick, graceful strides, necks jerking sharply with each step. One strutting gobble, with pendant red wattles long as a prophet's beard, ruffled his bronze plumage and dragged his wings.

By the time you dress, clap your hands for coffee, and read a Mexican paper still damp and smelling of fresh ink, all Guadalajara is swarming. Trams are crowded; so are buses.

Bobbed-haired señoritas, in bright organdie, silk hose, and high heels, chatter and giggle their cheerful way to work in stores, beauty and curl shops, at switchboards or typewriters. Many are pure Andalusian types with blue eyes and blond hair, small, shapely hands and feet. The ease and joy with which man may look upon woman in Guadalajara are proverbial. "In all Mexico, no others are so fair."

"Surely St. Peter must have opened the gates of heaven to let down such a beautiful damsel," Mexicans say when a maid of pulchritude is passing.

Along with the crowd, ogling the girls, come sleek young bank clerks, bookkeepers in the brewery, the factories, motorcar and other agencies, spick and span in fannels of Hollywood cut, carrying sticks, smoking pungent native cigarettes.

The sidewalks of Guadalajara! Walk them at this hour and you see the city eye-high and close up.

Workmen idly dig up the pavements, as always; traffic police in white gloves blow whistles and wave cars to stop. And they do stop; for one dispute with an alert Guadalajara traffic cop and the big jail yawns for you. On an open space soldiers are drilling and women wait before the colossal prison to get in at visiting hours. "They built the jail big enough to hold everybody in town, as a warning," is a local saying.

Workers in Clay.

Through the suburbs you meet more groups coming to work. In a flower garden a sandal-footed man is setting out young plants to make a fancy pattern of birds and flags. From the tail of his big black dog, asleep beside him, an old Indian artist plucks a few hairs, twists them deftly into his tiny, frayed brush, and resumes painting eyebrows on a clay head of Pancho Villa, master outlaw.

Other heads, new and shiny, stand on a board; Oregon, Carranza George Washington, Henry Ford—and an American Shriner in a fed fox.

Pose for your own bust, if you like, and watch your nose and ears form swiftly from the mud. In half an hour old Pandura (Hard Bread), famed Indian sculptor, makes a fair likeness.

"This Guadalajara clay art is fragile and hard to ship," says a buyer from the States. "But it sells well. Not the busts so much, but these urns, vases, and water bottles, in old Aztec patterns. These dancing girls are good, too, in their wide skirts and big sombreros."

Around Tonala village and the suburb of San Pedro Tlaquepaque, Indians have worked in clay from time immemorial. The Spaniards found them at it, making dishes for domestic uses, making idols, images, and figurines of men and beasts.

Untaught, and working far from the patter of studios and talks on art, these Indians produce excellent sculpture. They pack mules, street hawkers, market women with chickens and baskets of fruit, vaqueros on rearing horses—all are formed and painted with fidelity to life. Sophisticated and erotic pieces also appear, with miniatures, ornaments, and vessels carrying a raised fretwork of deer, rabbits, ferns or palms. A fat clay pig, hollow, with a slit in his back through which coins can pass, is much sold as a child's savings bank. Happily for the child, these figures break easily; all you have to do is drop them.

San Pedro Tlaquepaque, once the retreat of Spanish wealth and fashion, is linked with the city proper by tram, through an old customs gateway. Country people taking things into town to sell had to pay a tax in the old days to pass this gate.

A tiny, bright-eyed nurse girl, certainly not more than ten, comes by, carrying a big fat baby. You feel the baby should get down, for a change, and carry the tired little girl!

Gambling is Prevalent.

On the curb's edge, three soldiers are playing cards with a greasy deck. One man deals, calling "Ocho de espadas," eight of spades, and other faces as they turn up.

Gambling is not thought a vice. Men accost you, holding up yard-long strips of colored lottery tickets. You can buy a whole or part ticket. Such peddlers work on a commission for the official lottery, which holds regular drawings, is run in a strictly business manner, and devotes net profits to charities.

Police appear dragging two disorderly men, one badly cut in a street fight. Certain knives here are made to fight with. Any battle-scarred mingling or cow-ranch veteran will tell you he'd rather face a gun fighter than a Mexican trained with the knife. This business of knife fighting is full of fancy tricks. One is to throw the knife; another is suddenly to hit your opponent in the face with your hat, and then stick him while he's off guard. Defense work is equally skillful. The trained fighter wraps his serape around his left arm, or even grasps his big hat by the inside of the crown, using serape or hat as a shield, while thrusting with the knife. In "Old Mother Mexico," Harry Carr tells of a Mexican knife battle, fought to a draw, in which the heavy wool serapes were cut to shreds, but neither man hurt!

After the knifemen comes a boy leading a very skinny horse. "Play us a tune on your harp," shouts a clerk, a Mexican sarcasm implying that the horse is so bony his ribs look like harp strings!

Up the street past your hotel, late in the night, comes a squealing orchestra, preceded by three young men. One of this trio is celebrating his birthday. Hiring musicians to play in one's honor is good form, in keeping with established social practice. If you write a poem, win a horse race, or vanquish a rival, it is customary to hire a band and stroll from one cantina, or saloon, to another, or past the homes of your friends, with/ahis music-playing.

Here music seldom ceases, and indeed it is good. This makes you wonder how the many organ-grinders earn a living, till one explains: "They are subsidized by a fund willed to the city to insure free hand-organ music in perpetuity."

Chat on Variety of Food Matters

Readers' Perplexities May Be Relieved by This Expert Advice.

The following suggestions and advice are from a recognized American authority on the subjects dealt with:

The column today is devoted to answering questions which have been asked by readers. Perhaps some of these questions have been in your mind, but not enough to urge you to take your pen in hand. Here is the first:

"Which are better—broad noodles or thin noodles, and what is the best way to cook them?" The answer is neither is better—some like one kind and some like another. Probably the thinnest cut noodles are most popular for soup. For noodles boiled or fried, a medium size is usually chosen, although one of the best dishes made from the foundation, which I had the other day, used the very thinnest. The boiled noodles were dressed with almonds browned in butter and sprinkled with poppy seeds. This is a dish of German origin, and is really food for a gourmet.

Now, as to cooking noodles. They should be placed in boiling water and cooked only until tender—five to eight minutes is the average time. Noodles need plenty of butter or sauce, with them, as they are rather bland in flavor. One good combination is noodles, fried apples and buttered fine breadcrumbs; grated cheese-tomato sauce, stewed kidneys, sautéed chicken livers are other suggestions for sauces. I am sure I have mentioned before the attractiveness of a noodle ring as a setting for creamed meats, fish or vegetables; or for buttered vegetables. The boiled noodles are pressed into a ring mold, which is set in hot water to heat, and are then turned out on a hot platter ready for the filling.

Another question: "Will you send me a recipe for chicken soufflé? What is the trick in keeping it from falling?" The recipe is given today. The "trick" is using a white sauce, or soft breadcrumb formation for the beaten eggs and minced chicken, and setting the pan into hot water while baking, for a rather long time (45 minutes in a modern oven). This recipe can be varied by using other kinds of meat, fish or vegetables. Be sure plenty of seasoning is used for a soufflé, which otherwise may be too bland to be interesting.

Another letter writer asks what is the difference between brown betty and scalloped apples. There are a dozen different ways of making this dessert. I am going to give you my favorite method today. You may prefer brown, instead of white sugar, and you may like to use soft crumbs instead of the fried breadcrumbs. Of course any other fruit may be used in a recipe of this sort. I personally like a mixture of sliced bananas and apples in this recipe. I also like a combination of rhubarb and raisins. Hard sauce is usually served with this dessert, but a thinner sauce, or plain cream, is very good. As a reader has asked for a recipe for ice cream sauce I will include it today in connection with brown betty, which, by the way, may be served hot or cold. I prefer it hot myself, especially if hard sauce is used. This sauce belongs with hot foods, although one of its forms, "butter frosting," is good on cakes, which are always at least cool when they are served.

Chicken Soufflé.

3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup hot milk
2 eggs separated
1 cup minced chicken
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons onion juice

Melt butter, stir in flour, add milk gradually, stirring constantly until smooth. Pour gradually onto well-beaten yolks. Add minced chicken, salt and onion juice. Season to taste. Cool. Fold in stiffly beaten whites, place in a well-buttered mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) about forty-five minutes, or until firm.

Scalloped Apples.

3 cups bread
3 tablespoons butter

Cut up apples, mix with butter, and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) about forty-five minutes, or until firm.

Cuticura Talcum Powder

Protect your skin with a powder that is mildly antiseptic and at the same time fine, soft and smooth as silk. Fragrant, oriental balsamic essential oils comprise the medication of Cuticura Talcum. Instantly upon touching the skin these oils start their soothing, healing work and you are protected against irritation.

Price 5c.
Prepared by Procter Drug & Chemical Corporation, Malden, Mass.

4 apples
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

Cut bread into dice and sauté with butter until brown. Peel apples and cut very thin. Dredge with sugar mixed with cinnamon. Cover bottom of baking dish with the bread, then add apples and remaining bread in alternate layers, saving a few of the crumbs to put on top. Bake one-half hour, covered, and the last fifteen minutes uncovered, in a moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit.

Ice Cream Sauce.

3 tablespoons butter
1 cup powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup milk
1/4 cup cream, whipped

Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually, then the vanilla and beaten egg yolks. Add the milk and cook over hot water, stirring constantly until it thickens. Remove from the fire and fold in the whipped cream.
