School Notes

(By Ola C. Jones, Co. Sec'l Supt.)

The teachers of the county have put forth great effort in raising money with which to buy books for indigent children and I think it would be well to mention what some of these programs are: Organizing Parent-Teachers' Associations, organizing women's clubs, giving benefit dances, box suppers, candy sales, carnivals, etc. One school district took chickens and turkeys, turned them into sandwiches, and sold them at the program and parties given. The FERA is also assisting us by buying books for these children whose parents are on direct or work relief, and we hope we may soon be able to say every child of the county has all his text books.

In glancing over the monthly reports sent in by teachers, I note that Angus and Baca County boast one hundred per cent attendance, and Fort Stanton but one absence in Miss Hubbert's room. Children are given red dots and honor awards for perfect attendance, and it is hoped that we may have more schools added to our honor roll.

PARK COMMITTEE REPORT

The committee reports that it has raised the sum of $151.50 for the purpose of purchasing certain lots from Lincoln County for park purposes.

A deed to the 16-lots in the block opposite from the Carrizozo Auto Company has been issued by the County Treasurer and the same has been recorded. The title to the lots is held by the Village of Carrizozo for park purposes. The price paid for the lots was the sum of $150.00 and for recording the sum of $1.50 (receipts attached.)

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of this money from the persons and in the amounts shown on the attached exhibit.

Your committee recommends that the Club maintain an active interest in said property to the end, that funds may be raised for the development and landscaping of the park and in making it in the future a worthwhile asset to the Village.

Christmas letter or package.

The proceeds from the sale of Christmas Seals is used by the Tuberculosis Association in the effort to combat Tuberculosis, both in prevention and in cure. The Association is dependent solely on the sale of these seals for funds with which to wage this fight against this dread disease. We feel that the small contributions from the many mean a great deal more in the work than a few large contributions, since in the widespread advertising to effect the sale of the seals many more people are interested in the question of Public health, and hence are more easily educated to the benefits of preventive measures, as well as to the necessity for a cure, once more the disease has been contracted.

Capt. D. L. Payne, "Cimarron Scout" and "Father of Oklahoma"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HE WAS the "Father of Oklahoma," yet, except for giving his name to one of its original counties, that state has done very little to honor Capt. David L. Payne. True, in 1929 there was a proposal to remove his body from Wellington, Kan., where he died just 60 years ago this month, and rebury him in Oklahoma City as a part of the program celebrating the fortieth anniversary of the opening of Oklahoma territory to white settlement.

But this was not done because the citizens of Wellington declined to permit the removal. They pointed out that, insofar as Payne had made Wellington his home for several years and had died there, it was perfectly fitting that Wellington should be his last resting place. Moreover, they suggested that his grave is in a beautiful section of Prairie Lawn cemetery where there is plenty of room for a suitable memorial if Oklahoma wanted to erect one.

Evidently that suggestion was not acceptable, since the only marker at Payne's grave is a seven-foot monument, giving a brief account of his life, which was paid for by popular subscription and erected a few years ago by the Wellington G. A. R. post to take the place of the original stone marker which recorded the fact that he was a captain of Company F of the Tenth Kansas Infantry. So Payne continues to sleep in Kansas soil and it is not wholly inappropriate that he should. For, as a citizen of Kansas, he won his first fame as the "Cimarron Scout" long before he became the "Father of Oklahoma."

The state of Indiana also has a claim upon this frontier notable, for he was born in the Hoosier state. As for other details of his early life, there is a dearth of reliable information. J. W. Buel included a sketch of Payne in his "Heroes of the Plains" and later writers, evidently depending upon Buel for their facts but adding embroidery of their own, served to confuse the record badly.

For instance, one of them calls him Daniel L. Payne and says that his mother was a cousin of Daniel Boone. Fred E. Sutton of Kansas City (author of "Dodge's UP", published by Hobbs-Merrill in 1927), who was a follower of Payne, says his mother was a first cousin of Davy Crockett and that he was born in Fairmont, Ind., on December 20, 1826. Since this was only a few months after Crockett had died gloriously at the Alamo in Texas it seems reasonable to suppose that his kinship would name her new born son "David."

Payne's boyhood was spent much like that of any other youngster of the pioneer days in Indiana and by the time he had reached young manhood he, like thousands of others, felt the urge to "go West." So in 1857 he moved to Kansas territory and settled on a farm north of Atchison, Kansas. He was then in the thrice of a civil war of his own between the pro-slavery men of Missouri and the Kansas Jayhawkers and it is probable that Payne, like his future friend, who was destined for fame as "Buffalo Bill," had his first fighting experience then.

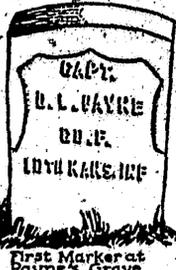

At any rate when the Civil war opened, he enlisted in a Kansas regiment in the Union army and served in it until 1863 when he was discharged. Shortly afterwards he was elected to the Kansas legislature, where he served with some distinction, and at the close of his term he was made postmaster at Fort Leavenworth.

In 1867 Indian raids in Kansas became so menacing that the War department called upon Governor Crawford of Kansas to raise a force of volunteer cavalry to co-operate with the regular army in subduing the hostiles. Payne was commissioned captain of one of these troops which served with Gen. George A. Custer and the Seventh cavalry in Kansas and Oklahoma during the next two years. Sutton says that Payne was in the battle of the Washita on November 27, 1868, when Custer destroyed the camp of Chief Black Kettle of the Cheyennes and, if he was, he may have had an escape there from death which overtook him 14 years later, almost to a day.

It was evidently during this period in Payne's career that he acquired the sobriquet of the "Cimarron Scout," although his services in that role did not seem to have been as outstanding as Buel and those who followed him would have us believe. At least, Custer in his "My Life on the Plains" (first published in the old Galaxy Magazine in 1872-73) does not mention Payne by name, nor is he listed among the scouts prominently mentioned in any of Mrs. Custer's books dealing with her husband's Indian campaigns. "California Joe," "Wild Bill," Hekok, Sharp Grover and several others are referred to frequently by both the general and Mrs. Custer, but not Payne, which tends to the suspicion that the reputation of the "Cimarron Scout" was industriously built up by writers with dime novel tendencies.

For instance, Buel, in recording the rescue of two white women captives, Mrs. Morgan and Miss White, from the Cheyennes, tells a dramatic story of the subsequent events. In it he has Custer fearful for the safety of his command if the hostiles should concentrate against him. So the general holds "a consultation with Captain Payne, in whose judgment the entire command placed the greatest reliance" and says, "Captain, we have got to send word to Ft. Hays at once, some one must act as courier to notify our friends of our positions and to carry the good news that the two ladies are in safety with us."

Whereupon Payne agrees to make the trip, declines the escort of 50 men which Custer offers him and says: "I'll take Jack Cowan and Charley Picard and my purpose is to get out from here in about fifteen minutes." Then the three men ride away, mounted on mules and leading pack mules which "carried 1,800 rounds of ammunition" and after a series of thrilling experiences, including an attack by hostile Kiowas, "reached Fort Hays in one hundred hours, the distance being 365 miles. Before reaching Hays Payne had to rub tobacco in his eyes to keep from falling asleep."

It is possible that Payne may have had some of the adventures with Indians which Buel and the other writers attribute to him at this time. But one is inclined to doubt some of the details of this yarn, in view of Custer's simple statement that after the rescue of the two white women, the Kansas volunteer troops "marched back to Fort Hays where they were mustered out of service."

But whatever Payne's record as an Indian fighter was, politics next occupied his attention and in 1870 he was elected to the Kansas legislature, at the same time holding down a Sedgewick county claim. In 1872 he was nominated to the state senate but was defeated. However, he was consoling for this setback by being appointed doorkeeper of the house of representatives in Washington, a job which he held until 1870.

While there he made the discovery, as he believed, that the lands in the western part of Indian Territory, which had been ceded by the Creek Indians to the government for occupation by the other Civilized Tribes and by freedmen, in reality belonged to the public lands of the United States and were therefore open to settlement. He had seen the richness of these lands during his Indian campaigning with Custer and he resolved that the land-hungry white men should possess them. So he formed the "Oklahoma Colony" and for the next five years devoted most of his time to that project.

"He was a born orator," says Sutton, "and he became the evangelist of that promised land, going up and down the border, preaching that it was a sinful waste for that rich soil to be held for a few Indians who would not till it, while so many farmers were eager to go in and possess it and improve it. Many thought him a dreamer and a crank but he knew that every colony that went and was expelled stirred up the agitation and hastened the day when the land would be opened."

The principal opposition to Payne's project came from the cattle barons, who were using the land for free grazing, and they had sufficient influence with the federal authorities so that, every time Payne led his "boomers" into Oklahoma, federal troops were sent to arrest and evict them. Despite studious efforts to keep the matter out of the civil courts where the issue could be tried on the merits of the case, Payne succeeded several times in getting it into court, where he won out and started back once more to try again.

To aid in his project Payne established a newspaper which had one of the most unusual careers in the history of American journalism. Grace E. Ray of the school of journalism at the University of Oklahoma in her history of "Early Oklahoma Newspapers" has this to say about it:

"The Oklahoma War Chief, established by David L. Payne as the official organ of his Oklahoma Colony, was, like the colony, illegal in its operation, and consequently had a turbulent and uncertain existence. It was established and maintained solely for the purpose of furthering Payne's policy of advocating the opening of the Territory to settlement. The first issue was published at Caldwell, Kansas, on January 12, 1885, but it seldom published two issues in succession in the same place, for it was moved from town to town along the Oklahoma-Kansas line, as Payne was forced to move his colony, which was almost constantly pursued by federal officers."

"The War Chief was issued weekly, more or less regularly, but its size and style, and sometimes even its name, changed perceptibly as it was moved about. . . . Sometimes it was entitled the Oklahoma Chief and sometimes the Oklahoma War Chief. . . ."

OKLAHOMA WAR-CHIEF.

War Chief in Mourning for Capt. Payne

"In one of its issues the publishers stated that they had been having trouble in getting paper and supplies with which to print the paper. This issue was printed on brown wrapping paper, and was smeared with grease. Whether it had been printed on some paper in which the bacon and other supplies had been wrapped, or whether it was stained with grease after being printed is a matter for speculation. But the result was a newspaper that was scarcely legible. The two inside pages were blank, indicating either that there were other shop difficulties besides the shortage of paper or that the camp was forced to move before the entire edition had been printed."

Payne had made many visits to Washington to argue his case before the federal authorities but without success. After his last visit in 1884 he returned to Wellington, Kan., strengthened his colony and again entered the territory. He was arrested again by the soldiers and taken to Fort Smith, Ark., but there the court, presided over by Judge Isaac Parker (the famous "Hanging Judge" of those days) said it would have nothing to do with the case. A week later Payne was in camp in Indian Territory opposite Fort Smith, badly crippled with rheumatism and suffering other illnesses caused by bad treatment at the hands of his captors (or so he alleges in some of his letters which are preserved by the Oklahoma Historical Society).

On September 7 he wrote from Fort Gibson, "This makes three days here—do not think they will undertake to hold us longer than five. . . . They may yet take us to Fort Scott. . . . One thing seems evident now and that is to keep us up in the Territory until the Court at Wichita adjourns—they do not want us to get before that Court now." From which it will be seen that Payne was just being "pushed around" by the authorities who were loath to bring the issue to a court test.

Two months later he was in Wellington again and there on the morning of November 28 he died quietly while sitting at breakfast in the Hotel De Barnard. Of his death Sutton says:

"His friends believed then, and I believe yet, that he was poisoned by those who opposed the opening of Oklahoma. His death filled the Oklahoma boomers with resentment, focused public attention upon the opening of the territory and hastened it. The first opening came soon thereafter. Moses led the Israelites to the edge of Canaan, but died just before they went in to possess it. So Payne led his Oklahoma boomers through a wilderness of struggle and was permitted only to view the promised land. He will live in history as the Father of Oklahoma."

Payne's work was carried on by some of his followers, notably Capt. W. L. Couch, Col. Samuel Crocker, Captain Cooper, Sidney Clark and Maj. Gordon W. Lillis ("Fawcett Bill"), who came to be known as the "Big Five." They lived to see Oklahoma thrown open to settlement by proclamation of the President and to take part in the "big run" of April 22, 1889. But of all these only one survives today—"Fawcett Bill," Chief Little Bear, the white chief of the Pawnees, who is spending his declining years in peace and comfort at his buffalo ranch, "Blue Hawk Feck" near Pawnee, Okla.

ASK THE MOTHER who has made this change

The average mother gives any laxative the family may be using, while family doctors give children a liquid laxative of suitable ingredients, suitable strength, and in suitable amount.

If you want to know just what a tremendous difference this means to any youngster, just inquire of any mother who has tried it!

She knows that a bilious boy or girl needs a gentle liquid laxative when constipated, and a little less if dose is repeated until bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help.

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Get a bottle of the real California Syrup of Figs at any druggist's. All children like its agreeable taste, and it agrees with them. No need to give a child anything stronger. This fruity syrup is laxative enough; indeed, many adults use it in preference to pills and tablets.

"THE 'LIQUID TEST.'" First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, until the bowels are moving without any help.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

If you tire easily-

why not reason out the cause of this unnatural condition?

Your first thought may be, "I must eat more." That's not all. You should enjoy what you do eat. Frequently, the blood cells are low... and this, perhaps, is what makes you feel weak. If this is your trouble the stomach may not be calling for sufficient food. Zest to eat may be lacking. But what a difference S.S.S. makes when taken just before meals. Just try it and notice how your appetite and digestion improve. S.S.S. stimulates the flow of gastric juices and also supplies the precious mineral elements so necessary in blood-cell and hemoglobin building. Do try it. It may be the rainbow you need to brush away present discouragement over your health condition.

Do not be misled by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on the basis of the four years of preference in your greatest of satisfaction.

William Green Gloomy About Unemployment—Henry Ford Cheerful—Serious Charges Concerning Government of the Virgin Islands.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

WITH another winter at hand and millions of Americans still unemployed, organized labor, through President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, has asked the administration to appeal to all industries to increase production 30 per cent. Mr. Green in a public statement asserted that for the first time since President Roosevelt's re-employment program got under way in July, 1933, unemployment has exceeded last year's level. The number of persons without any employment he puts at 8,848,000. Those without jobs in industry in September numbered 10,931,000. Jobs for 2,220,000 were provided by conservation camps and emergency relief projects, "but these emergency jobs," he said, "are not creating incomes to pay the costs."

Mr. Green continued: "Could not the administration invite all industries to co-operate in a general program to increase production and put men to work?"

"If the nation-wide level of all production were lifted 30 per cent in a balanced program, adjusting production to consumption needs, each industry would then be assured that all other industries would increase their production, and the wealth produced by putting labor to work would create income to buy the product of all."

"The total number at work in the United States was 39,704,000 in September, 1933; by September, 1934, it had declined to 39,307,000. During these 12 months the normal increase in population has added close to 450,000 to the army of job seekers for whom industry provides no work. Thus the number without work in industry has risen from 10,109,000 in September, 1933, to 10,931,000 in September, 1934."

Quite as gloomy as Mr. Green's report was a statement of the National Industrial Conference board. This agency noted that the general improvement in manufacturing activity usually occurring in September failed to materialize. Instead, declines of 5.7 per cent in the number of wage earners employed, of 6.1 per cent in total man hours worked and of 5.8 per cent in payrolls disbursed, were reported. In addition, it was stated, the rise in the cost of living from August to September depressed real weekly earnings of wage earners 2.1 per cent.

On the other hand, the United States Chamber of Commerce in its summary of conditions throughout the nation reports continued improvement of business sentiment although it has not as yet been reflected definitely in the volume of transactions.

MANY thoughtful persons comment on the apparent discrepancy between the pleas of William Green for more employment and the policy pursued by organized labor in fostering great strikes seemingly for the sole purpose of enforcing unionization and the closed shop. Many thousands of persons are thrown out of employment by these strikes, industries are hampered or shut down and often serious disorders result. To the bystander it does not seem fair that, in a time of distress, such methods should be followed in order that the strength of the unions might be increased. The latest example of this policy is the strikes which brought about the closing of all the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company's shops and warehouses in Cleveland and which went into effect in Milwaukee against the A. and P. and two other chain store companies. There was a prospect that these walkouts would spread throughout Ohio and Wisconsin.

HENRY FORD, who says that what is done in Washington doesn't matter much so far as recovery is concerned, came out with a statement that should be encouraging to the American business man. He told the Ford managers gathered in Detroit that his company was out of the depression, and they in turn told him of generally improved business conditions in all parts of the country.

"The depression," Ford set forth in a statement, "would be over for the whole country very soon if American industrialists would just forget the alphabet schemes and take hold of their industries and run them with good, sound American business sense."

"They should take hold of their country, too, in the same way, and run it with good sound American common sense."

ruled them unconstitutional and dismissed an indictment against an operator of several sawmills. The action was taken by agreement of both sides so as to expedite an appeal to the Supreme court.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT announced that, beginning July 1, 1935, he will eliminate the 5 per cent pay cut that is now taken out of the salaries of all federal employees. The pay restoration, he explained, is being planned on the assumption that increases in the cost of living will necessitate it.

The Treasury department thereupon admitted frankly that this means the taxpayers will be called on to pay an additional fifty million dollars a year for the benefit of the 700,000 federal employees who will benefit by the restoration in salaries.

Mr. Roosevelt predicted flatly that the cost of living will advance substantially within the next eight months. When he made this statement at his regular press conference he also cautioned reporters to remember that an increase in the cost of living meant an increase in commodity and property values, thereby lessening the difficulty in paying debts. This is one of the avowed aims of the Roosevelt program.

He said he expected the rise of food, clothing, fuel, housing, and other living costs to be large enough by next July 1 to justify the 5 per cent restoration.

D. ERNEST GRUENING, chief of the bureau of territories and insular affairs, has gone rather hurriedly to the Virgin Islands to make a personal investigation into a state of affairs that has led to the filing of serious charges before committees of both houses of congress.

His charges that Mr. Ickes has been "outrageously deceived" by Governor Pearson and subordinate officials of the interior department, has ignored "complaints, petitions, and specific charges" presented by the citizens of the islands, and has dealt with officials "in a peculiarly harsh, cruel, and dictatorial manner."

The petition further charges that minor officials in the interior department aided and abetted Governor Pearson to "whitewash a major public works scandal and deceived the secretary of the interior regarding public works and the general situation, and were criminally negligent in the performance of their duty."

Secretary Ickes is accused of making prejudicial and injurious remarks about T. Webber Wilson, judge of the Federal District court in the islands, remarks which "reflect unjustly upon the federal judiciary and which are unbecoming the dignity of a cabinet officer." Ickes also is accused of "unjustly and at the instance of Governor Pearson," having removed from office Charles H. Gibson and Eli Baer, government attorneys, and Capt. Michael J. Nolan, director of police of St. Thomas and St. John, with a record of 14 years' "loyal and efficient service."

CONVERSATIONS in London preparatory to the scheduled naval conference have been quite unsatisfactory so far, for neither the United States nor Great Britain shows any disposition to accord to Japan the equality that nation demands, even though it be merely in principle with the Japanese agreeing not to build up to parity with them. Well-posted observers do not believe the conference will accomplish anything valuable, and Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson says that, regardless of its outcome, his department plans to bring the American fleet up to full treaty strength and will ask congress for the necessary appropriations.

Additional maritime strength was urged before the federal aviation commission. Lieut. Com. C. B. Rosendahl, former commander of the airships Los Angeles and Akron, advised the construction of two military dirigibles to protect aerial trade routes. Secretary Swanson said this proposal is under consideration in the Navy department. The United States is now 126,975 tons of war craft behind treaty strength. This represents one aircraft carrier, two class B cruisers, 51 destroyers, and 24 submarines, the department disclosed.

CHICAGO'S magnificent World's fair is no more. It closed formally and forever at midnight, October 31, amid a riot of gaiety and with a final burst of fireworks, and the vast throng of last-day visitors left the grounds with a feeling of sadness. Mayor Kelly had proclaimed a half-holiday and thousands upon thousands of Chicagoans joined with the crowds that had come from elsewhere to celebrate the windup of this most notable exposition. After artillery salutes and parades, the final ceremonies were staged in the Court of States with Governor Horner, Mayor Kelly and President Rufus Dawes of the exposition as speakers. Exactly at midnight Mr. Dawes threw a switch that shut off all lights on the grounds and set off a gigantic fireworks display. This was not quite the end, however, for the lights were turned on again and, though no one was admitted after midnight, the Halloween carnival continued until three o'clock in the morning. Then the lights went out forever.

KING PRAJADHOPK of Siam is not satisfied with his present status as a limited monarch and has threatened to abdicate unless the government withdraws a measure proposed in the national assembly which deprives him of his traditional right to decide whether persons sentenced to death for crimes shall live or die. This, of course, is but one of the distasteful limitations prescribed by the national assembly since the revolution of 1932 which forced the king to give the country a new constitution. There is no revolution in this case, for the people of Siam generally know nothing about the dispute between the king and the government.

Prajadhok is at present in England with his queen, and the negotiations are carried on by cable. His majesty's secretary there said the king's fight was really a fight for the principles of democratic government and that he would not give in. The secretary explained that half the members of the Siamese legislative assembly are elected directly by the people, and the other half nominated by the government, with his majesty placing "great importance upon the attitude of the elected members," who Prajadhok claims opposed the measure relating to life and death prerogatives.

MEXICAN governments, both federal and state, are carrying on a determined campaign against the Roman Catholic church, charging that the latter has been fostering a revolutionary movement. On the other hand, a vigorous denial that the Catholic church had advocated armed resistance to the Mexican government or intervention by the United States in the religious conflict in Mexico was issued by Archbishop Ruiz, the Apostolic delegate to Mexico, in San Antonio, Texas.

Bishops and priests are being expelled from various states, and the state of Mexico issued an order limiting the number of churches in the region in which services may be held to 34, the same as the number of priests permitted to officiate in the state. All churches above this number, the decree provided, will be used as schools and public libraries. The action was believed to have been taken to prevent priests ousted from other states from coming to the state of Mexico to officiate.

The Supreme court ruled that all buildings used for Catholic ceremonies shall become the property of the nation.

Acting President Rodriguez in a letter to Attorney General Fortes Gil said the clergy, on pretext of opposing the initiation of compulsory socialistic education in Mexico's schools, has "initiated" a frank campaign of sedition which reveals clearly its intention to bring about a revolution.

CHANCELLOR HITLER has realized the danger to his regime in the revolt of the Evangelical Protestant pastors against the tyrannical rule of Reichsbishop Mueller, and has decided to separate church and state. The government of the reich, he said, would not interfere in the quarrel. Some observers in Berlin expressed the fear that this policy would lead to unrestrained growth of German paganism and also to further acts against the Jews, under the leadership of Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, philosopher, and Julius Streicher, publisher of the Stormer, heads respectively of the pagan faith and the anti-Semitic movements.

Acceptance of Chancellor Hitler's new constitution for the German Labor Front, which gives the Labor Front money and property which once belonged to trade unions and employers' associations, was celebrated in 16,000 demonstrations throughout Germany. The biggest was in Lustgarten, Berlin, where over 350,000 were assembled. The Labor Front includes all laborers and office workers.

BOTH France and Germany are worried over prospects of trouble in the Saar, where a plebiscite is to be held January 13, 1935, to determine whether the region shall revert to Germany, be attached to France or remain under the control of the League of Nations. The Nazi campaign in the Saar has been active and large numbers of Storm Troopers are said to have entered the region in disguise. Geoffrey K. Knox, president of the governing commission for the league, has warned that in case of difficulties during the plebiscite he will call for the help of French troops. Foreign Minister Pierre Laval says the French will be ready to respond. The German Nazis are correspondingly irate. There is reason for anxiety.

"You didn't hear, Mary?" Nell was asking.

"No."

"Well, come back with me, anyway. You know there'll be—"

But Mary interrupted him in a way that ended argument. "I'm through with Paradise Valley, Nell. But I'm glad for you. Give it my love!"

"It?" asked Nell, moved eyes searching her.

"It," Mary answered emphatically. And added, quickly, "We're going to miss you—so terribly!"

"I hope so." He was shaking hands with Edna Dale, as he spoke. Edna quickly withdrew her hand from his, saying good-by quite brusquely. But Mary impetuously threw her arms about Nell's neck and kissed him good-by. Then she went a little on his coat pocket, while he patted her shoulder with a great deal of understanding.

"Where is this Paradise Valley you and Nell are always raving about?" Edna asked.

"I used to think it was in Paradise. Now I know it's just a very earthly place—down the coast a ways in the mountains. Ever hear of it?"

"Only from you two," thoughtfully. Life settled into rather a dull and empty routine. And then one evening Edna burst into the apartment quite stirred from her usual slightly sardonic calm, her face tense and incredulous.

"Mary! Mary Brown!"

Mary sprang to her feet. "It's your old roommate? She's—"

"No. I had a letter from her today. She's coming back from the country. She's going to get well. She may be wanting her job, Mary. It's not Emma. It's—well, read this!" She pulled a letter from her pocket and thrust it into Edna's hand.

"Dear daughter Edna," Mary read, and looked up in shocked surprise.

Edna laughed. "You didn't know I had a father? I haven't had—for eight years. Read on. You don't know the half of it yet!"

"I've been an old fool long enough. Come home and bring my grandson. How do I know that I have one, and where you are? When I asked young Goodenough about Mary Brown, he said she was living with a houndlinger of a girl named Edna Dale who had a little boy who was a ringer. But how do I know that that boy's instincts are getting proper nourishment?"

"I'm building a gymnasium after a plan Mary Brown gave me. Bring the boy down here where he can get enough play. Goodenough says he is made of the right kind of stuff and ought to have every opportunity. Well, why shouldn't he have? Answer me that!"

"You should have seen Goodenough when I told him your right name was Edna Johnson."

"Your father, 'HENRY JOHNSON.'"

Consternation had been overwhelming Mary. She looked up, half laughing, half crying, into Edna's brilliant little beads of eyes. Those hauntingly familiar eyes—Hank Johnson's eyes, of course!

When she thought of the things she had said to Hank Johnson! A sudden wave of red overspread her face as she heard again his defensive, "I don't like kids!" the angry retort he had flung at her, "How dare you say it's their parents' fault?" the clashing of his gears; the forever-after thunderous silence upon the subject of gymnasiums! How she had flayed him, unknowingly! But now—

"If we both hadn't been so tight-mouthed about our past, we might have discovered who we both were before," Edna was saying. "But your Paradise Valley, while it sounded like country I knew—"

"It's the old James ranch," Mary said.

"Home. I ran away, Mary. With Jack Dale, a traveling salesman. He was no good. Left me before Dickie was born. But I was glad enough, even by that time, to divorce him. But—imagine! You telling father why girl's leave home. For that's what you must have done when you talked gymnasium to him. That is why I left. Because life was so drab in that rotting little town. Not a thing to do. The only diversions, vice. And father always so afraid I'd get into mischief that he—well, he sort of hoarded me, the way folks think he does his money. And—I kicked over the traces. And then he disowned me."

"Will your father ever forgive me?" Mary asked.

"Heavens, girl, isn't a gymnasium forgiveness enough? But you couldn't have read the postscript!"

about how I should spend my money, because I won't do it."

"He really isn't miserly, Mary," Edna said, wistfully.

"He's a darling, Edna. I've had a weakness for him from the moment I put my foot in Foggy Gulch, and—her eyes misted—"I know another man whose charity is surreptitious."

"Come home with me, Mary?"

But Mary shook her head. "Later," she promised.

The following evening she saw mother and son off at the ferry.

"And I'll see Nell again!" Dickie cried exuberantly. "Nell—and a grandpa, all at once! Boy! I hope there'll be a pony, too!"

CHAPTER XIV

Young Man in An Art Shop.

The office of the small art shop just off Market street was only a tiny cubicle of blue and silver, and so the stormy conversation inevitably drifted outside—to the obvious distress of a young man who had advanced warily among tapestries, prints, and objects of art, to ask for chintzes for a mountain lodge.

At a window across the shop a girl with her back to salesman and customer registered something more acute than distress. Rebellion, her clenched fists beat out in a hot little tattoo upon the window, as a sob came audibly from the office.

"But—that wasn't the understanding!" a woman's voice protested. "I was to have a leave of absence long enough for my operation—and I come back to find my place filled! You can't do that! I have hospital bills! I was turned out of my room for unpaid rent! I have to have my job back—"

The girl at the window opened the clenched fists, threw out her hands in a final gesture of resignation, and strode doggedly to the office.

"Mr. Ward!" She spoke calmly enough. "I couldn't help overhearing. Please give Miss Treat her position, again. I retire in her favor."

"I happen to be the person hiring and retiring, Miss Brown. I must think of the good of the shop."

"Mr. Ward," protestingly, "Miss Treat knows her stock more intimately than I do my a, b, c's. I have resigned."

"Not so fast, little one. Not long ago you came in here with a long time to your name. I advanced you a week's salary."

"Oh, I'm sorry!" said Miss Treat. "I didn't know—"

"Don't be disturbed," wearily. "I really do not need money. I'm working here under—false pretenses. Let me have my hat, please. I'll be going."

"Then Miss Treat will be going right along with you."

"But—I can't! I've no place to go! Not even a room!"

"Go here," Miss Brown scribbled an address upon a scratch pad. "I won't be needing the room any longer. The rent is paid for a week. And, Miss Treat, casually, "would you consider being manager of this shop?"

"Why do you ask such an impossible question as that?"

"Come back here tomorrow noon to take that position. I assure you of it."

"But what—how?"

"Data in the belfry," explained Mr. Ward. "There has been something funny about her—but she attracts trade."

"Your services will be dispensed with at the same time, Mr. Ward. For—the good of the shop."

"Quit your kidding, girlie, and get out and sell vases!"

"I'm buying the shop, Mr. Ward. Please be out of here by noon tomorrow."

POULTRY

CLEANING POULTRY HOUSE IS ADVISED

Building Should Be Freed of 'Annoying Insects.'

By M. D. Farrer, Entomologist, Illinois State Natural History Survey.—WNU Service.

Before farmers begin housing their chickens for fall and winter production it will be decidedly profitable to thoroughly clean and treat the poultry buildings for lice, mites and other parasitic insects.

Unless effective control measures are taken at this time, flocks often become so heavily infested with these insect pests that they become unthrifty, egg production declines and thousands of dollars in poultry profits are lost by producers.

Practically all poultry insects can be killed by applications of any kind of oil. This applies particularly to mites, bed bugs and fleas which feed on the birds by sucking their blood at night. In the daytime these insects usually leave the birds and hide in cracks and crevices in the poultry house.

Some of the more economical and effective oils for this purpose are creosote, kerosene and waste crank case oil, applied with a brush or emulsified with soap and water and sprayed on the inside of the building.

Dormant tree spray emulsions mixed at the rate of four or five gallons in 100 gallons of water are also efficient poultry insect destroyers. All corners, cracks and rough places in the wood should be saturated with the oils to insure satisfactory control.

Poultry lice spend their entire lives on the birds and thus must be controlled by treating the fowls with dips, powders or gases toxic to the insects. For this a good grade of sodium fluoride is economical. Each bird is dusted individually by applying a pinch of sodium fluoride under each wing and around the vent, roughing the feathers to allow the powder to sift into the plumage, or the birds may be dipped in a solution of one ounce of sodium fluoride in one gallon of water.

Where it is impractical to handle each bird, painting the roosts with 40 per cent nicotine sulphate is recommended. A line of the disinfectant about one fourth inch wide is applied along the roosts just before the birds retire. The nicotine fumes filter through the birds' feathers, killing the lice. This treatment should be repeated in 10 to 14 days as it does not kill the eggs. All lime or whitewash should be removed from the roosts before nicotine sulphate is applied.

Scaly leg, caused by mites feeding under the leg scales, can be controlled by dipping the feet and legs in a solution containing two parts of raw linseed oil and one part of kerosene.

Confined Hens Lay Well, Experiments Have Shown

That hens kept in confinement, if properly fed, will lay quite as well as those of the same age on the usual limited range and even tend to lay eggs larger in size, has been shown in experiments at the United States Animal Husbandry Experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., covering a five-year period.

These experiments further showed that neither the fertility nor the hatchability of the eggs was affected by the confinement of the birds laying them. Important considerations in poultry flock economy. There was also no appreciable difference in mortality in the flocks maintained experimentally under the two systems of management.

Both lots of birds were fed the same rations except that those confined to their laying house had cod-liver oil added to the basic ration and the non-confined birds were allowed to range in grass yards about 70 by 100 feet in size. Every effort was made to furnish the confined birds all the sunshine possible through open windows in the laying house, the sunshine and cod-liver oil precautions preventing possible ill effects from vitamin deficiency. Both lots were furnished electric lights from 5 a. m. until daylight each day from September 15 to April 15 each year.

Cellophane Protects Chicks

It is well known among poultry raisers that young chicks have a tendency to pick at everything bright. Often they will pick to death another chick which becomes slightly scratched or injured, because they are attracted by the sight of blood. Experiments indicate that blue cellophane can be successfully used to control this trouble.

The cellophane is simply placed in wooden frames similar to those used for wire screens and then fitted into the windows of the chicken houses.

Hens and Their Diet

The practice of throwing grain on the floor in soiled litter is coming to be looked upon with disfavor. Experiment stations and commercial poultry farms have found that the normal laying flock can be fed both grain and mash in hoppers, and that they will consume about the correct proportion of the two. The same type of hopper that holds the dry mash can be used for scratch feed. But where grain is hopper fed, additional hopper space must be provided.

Indirect Taxes

Indirect taxes are excise and customs taxes where the tax is levied and included in the price asked, but the purchaser does not realize generally that he is paying any tax nor the amount of the tax.

Farm Credit Administration

The primary aim of the Farm Credit Administration is to provide a better credit service at a lower cost.
The refinancing program of the Farm Credit Administration has not meant an increased debt burden to farmers. Ninety per cent of the loans closed has been used to refinance existing debts.
Hundreds of banks have been aided by refinancing their frozen assets and giving farmers an opportunity of paying out over a series of years by the new farm credit program.

The annual interest saving to farmers refinanced by farm credit has been about 1/3 of the interest previously paid.

The permanent units of the Farm Credit Administration are not lending Government money, but are loaning funds obtained from investors.

The new farm credit system, in order to continue, must retain the confidence of farmers as well as that of investors.

The new production credit system carries out the cooperative principle. Each borrower shares in the risk and control of the business, and participates in any savings.

The purpose of the production credit program is to get farmers out of debt, and to help them to help themselves.

The local production credit associations are organizations through which individual farmers may reach the investment market.
One of the most effective ways of reducing farm costs is for the farmers to pay cash for their feed, machinery, and supplies, borrowing this cash from the credit institutions where necessary; to pay their credit like they buy other commodities and service. That is where the production credit program is of service.

Putting production credit on a business basis is good for farmers, good for merchants, and also good for other institutions that sell credit on a business basis.

In agriculture we need to have a term of credit suited to the needs of agriculture and not suited to the needs of commerce. That is why we have production credit associations established all over the country.

You can't grow a two year old steer in much less than 24 months and you can't finance that kind of production on 90 or even 120 day paper. Production credit associations are geared to production needs.

The Farm Credit Administration is set up to consider farm credit problems from the standpoint of farmers, to provide credit facilities on a sympathetic but a sound basis.

The job of the Farm Credit Administration is to help farmers to help themselves get out of debt.

Mobilgas Electric Sign

Dallas, Texas, Nov. 15. The most spectacular electric sign in the entire Southwest blazed forth a welcome to American Petroleum Institute delegates when they convened here for their convention November 12. The sign, made in the form of Pegasus, winged horse of mythology, now made familiar as the symbol of Mobilgas, is mounted atop the Magnolia Building Tower.

The sign measures 38 feet from the tip of Pegasus' nose to his flowing tail, and is 31 feet high. Mounted on a steel tower on top of the Magnolia Building, the sign is 406 feet above the pavement, about the height of a three-story office building. The two sides of the sign are fourteen feet apart. The sign will revolve twice every minute.

At night the huge sign will be outlined with Neon light. It is said the shape of the horse may be seen from a distance of three to five miles, depending on weather conditions.

When Perseus, in Greek mythology, beheaded Medusa, the blood sinking into the ground produced a winged horse—Minerva, Goddess of Wisdom, caught and tamed him, giving him the name of Pegasus, and Pegasus he has remained throughout the ages. He has no mate. Nor has he ever had.

"Pegasus, red-winged horse trade mark of Mobilgas," said Fred M. Lege, Jr., Vice President and Director of sales promotion of the Magnolia Petroleum Company, "has always symbolized speed and power. That is why he was selected as a fitting symbol for Mobilgas."

This great sign, at the pinnacle of Dallas, will remain as a permanent fixture on top of the Magnolia Building after the American Petroleum Institute convention, flashing its welcome for many miles in every direction from Dallas.

Spelling of Name Aids

Man in Locating Family
Mineral Wells, Texas.—Because it's an old family custom of the Wallises always to spell their surname the same, Ass Wallis of this city and his brother Zeke are reunited after forty years.

Ass, a cafe owner, has his name emblazoned across the front of his establishment.

Zeke, attracted by the sign, walked in and told the cafe owner he had heard that all who spelled their name as written on the window were related. Boyhood recollections coincided, so they telephoned a sister, Mrs. W. R. Fowler, also of this city, to join a reunion celebration.

More Risks in Bathtub

Than on Railroad Train
Utica, N. Y.—Taking a bath is far more dangerous than taking a train, according to Dr. G. C. Capron, surgeon in charge, Commercial Travelers' Accident Insurance company of America.

"When a man steps into a bath tub he is running a risk a thousand times greater than when he boards a train," the surgeon said, reading statistics from the company's reports, which show that accidents in the homes exceeded those in industry.

"Bath tubs should be built with flat bottoms and handrails with a rubber mat fastened securely to the tub."

JENNY WREN TELLS WHO THE STRANGER IS

THE longer Peter Rabbit stared at the stranger in the Old Orchard, the more he realized how mistaken he had been in thinking that he was dressed all in black.

Peter hurried back to Jenny Wren, and, it must be confessed, he looked sheepish. "You were right, Jenny Wren. He isn't black at all," confessed Peter.

"Of course I was right. I usually am," retorted Jenny. "He isn't black, he isn't even related to the blackbird family, and he hasn't any business in this country, anyway. He's a foreigner."

"He is Sprackles the Starling and He isn't Really an American at All!"

"But you haven't told me who he is," protested Peter.

"He is Sprackles the Starling and he isn't really an American at all," replied Jenny.

"He comes from across the ocean the same as Hully the English Sparrow. Thank goodness he hasn't such a quarrelsome disposition as Hully. Just the same, the rest of us would be better satisfied if he were not here."

"He has taken possession of one of the old houses of Yellow Wing the Flicker, and that means one less house for birds who really belong here. If his family increases at the rate Hully's family does, I'm afraid some of us will be crowded out of the Old Orchard. Did you notice that yellow bill of his?"

"Peter nodded. "I certainly didn't see it. I couldn't very well help noticing it."

"Well, there's a funny thing about that bill," replied Jenny. "In winter it turns almost black. Most of us wear a different colored suit in winter, but our bills remain the same."

"It seems to be pretty well fixed here, and I don't see but what the thing for the rest of you birds to do is to make the best of the matter," said

Peter. "What I want to know is, whether or not he is of any use?"

"I guess he must be of some good," admitted Jenny Wren rather grudgingly.

"I've seen him picking up worms and grubs, but he likes grain, and I have a suspicion that if his family becomes very numerous, and I suspect it will, they will eat more of Farmer Brown's grain than they will pay for by the worms and bugs they destroy. Hello! There's Dandy the Waxwing and his friends."

Mother's Cook Book

SAUCES FOR FISH AND MEATS

AN APPROPRIATE sauce to accompany any dish of whatever nature makes often a most ordinary one unusual. The common practice of using tomato in everything, good as it is, should not be overdone.

Perhaps it is a form of laziness, this too common tomato sauce, for one may open a can of tomato soup, heat it, add a dash of this and that, and have a good sauce. As one travels over the country, meals become more and more afflicted with tomato in the salad, in the soup, in the sandwich, as sauce on fish and meat, all good, but why overdo a good thing until we dislike the sound of the name?

When preparing a brown sauce which with its flavor and color adds much to most meat dishes, the flour is browned; it will be necessary to add more of it for thickening, as browning destroys a part of the thickening property, by dextrinizing the starch—that is, changing it to a form of sugar. Add liquid desired—a cupful to the usual two tablespoonfuls of flour and the same of butter, makes a fairly thick sauce; when browned flour is used add an extra tablespoonful. Broths of all kinds, especially chicken, make most delightful sauces.

Sauce Piquant.

To one cupful of brown sauce prepared with any good beef stock add one-half tablespoonful of chopped onion, one tablespoonful each of chopped caper and pickle with a dash of cayenne and a tablespoonful of vinegar.

The varieties of sauces depend entirely upon the resources of the cook, they may be three or four, or legions. Western Newspaper Union.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: Why do so many people buy their milk from a milkman? Why don't they get it directly from the cow? The milkman puts water in it, while a cow gives pure milk.

Youra truly, CARRIE PALE. Answer: It is true that a cow gives pure milk, but the difference between a cow and a milkman is that a cow doesn't give credit.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I have been keeping company with a young man for over two years. I've done everything to get him to propose to me. Last night he called at my home and during the conversation I came right out and asked him if he ever thought of getting married. He said: "The girl I marry must be able to raise a family, take care of a house, cook and so on." I am willing to take care of his house, raise a family, and I'll cook, too, but what does he mean by saying so on?

Truly yours, I. WANTHIM. Answer: When he says you must be able to take care of the house, cook and so on, he simply means you must be able to sew on buttons.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am twenty-seven years of age and a traveling salesman. I am madly in love with a girl who lives in Harrisburg, and feel the same about a girl who lives in Albany. Can a man love two girls?

Youra truly, ISELL KETCHUP. Answer: Sure, as they live in different cities you're perfectly safe.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a young man, just twenty years

A Hole in the Hedge

By ANNE CAMPBELL

OUR hedge was so lovely a few years ago, unbroken and straight, with its clipped edge just so. But now it is not so precise to the view. There's a hole in the hedge where our baby runs through!

There's a gap in the green made by small eager hands. Like a small open door with a welcome it stands. And I like our hedge better than when it was new.

Since it spreads a green path where our baby runs through! Copyright.—WNU Service.

old. I have a good position and earn good wages. I want to get married, but I am afraid of having trouble because I'd rather play golf than eat. Is it possible to find a wife who will stand for that?

Truly yours, N. THERIFF. Answer: A man who would rather play golf than eat should marry a girl who would rather play bridge than cook.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am giving a luncheon and the honored guest is to be the governor of our state. When at the table, being the hostess, should I sit on the governor's right hand?

Truly yours, MRS. DICK SHONARY. Answer: By no means do that. The governor probably eats with his right hand. Sit on a chair.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I have read a great deal about vaccination. Some folks say it will always save a person's life while others say just the opposite. I think it will save life, don't you?

Sincerely, C. RUM. Answer: I can't see how they can guarantee it will always save life. For instance, I know a boy eight years old who got vaccinated and, four days later he was run over by an automobile and killed.

Origin of Tapioca.

Tapioca is prepared from the starch made from the tuberous roots of the cassava or manioc plant. This plant is a native of South America, notes a writer in the Indiana Farmer's Guide. The cassava starch, separated from the fibrous and nitrogenous constituents of the roots, is spread, while in a moist condition, upon iron plates and with constant stirring exposed to such heat as causes a partial rupture of the starch granules in which they agglomerate into irregular pellets, becoming hard and translucent when cooled. In this condition, the starch forms the tapioca of commerce, a light, pleasant, digestible food.

HOW TO SHOOT

By Bob Nichols

SOME upland gunners become good shots in spite of the fact that their guns do not fit them. What happens in their case is that through years of practice they fit themselves to their badly fitting guns. This makes learning a slow process.

If you already have a shotgun, here is an interesting test you can make to see how near it comes to fitting you: Get about half a dozen sheets of dark colored paper. Black building paper such as is used in the walls of frame dwellings is excellent for the purpose. The sheets should be about three feet square.

Select a site for your testing ground that has an absolutely safe background. You are going to make your test at night. The darker the night the better for your purpose. But you must make sure that no living thing will be endangered by your test shooting.

Against this safe background you now set up a light framework for your target sheets. Two 2 by 4's about six feet long may be driven into the ground about 30 inches apart. Drive them in just so that they make a secure support.

Now take a tin can, and cut a hole in its side about 1 1/2 inches in diameter and near the bottom. Attach to the top edge of the tin can two pieces of wire, long enough to suspend the can from each 2 by 4 so that the hole in the can hangs directly behind the center of the black target sheet when it has been tacked lightly to the 2 by 4 posts.

Cut a small hole in the center of the target sheet, so that when you place a small bit of lighted candle in the bottom of the can the light will shine through. And this tiny spot of light is all that you should see when you stand back about 15 yards, gun in hand, ready to make your test.

The light must be so dim that the candle light must be so dim that you are quite unable to see your gun barrel. For your test shots must not be aimed consciously. They must be pointed instinctively.

In making the test, place only one shell in your gun. Bring your gun to shoulder deliberately and fire quickly. Keep your eyes intently on the small spot of light. Your eyes will guide your hands. Remember that the object is not to hit the center of the target consciously. What you are really after is to see whether your gun fits you well enough so that in your hands it points on the target unconsciously and instinctively.

After your first shot, go up and tack on another target. Shoot three targets before examining the results too closely. If you are conducting the test correctly, all three shots should strike in approximately the same sector on your targets.

If the shots show a tendency to be under the "bull's-eye" your gun has too much drop at the heel of the stock, or too much pitch downward at the barrel. Or both faults may be present. Unscrew the butt-plate and try a couple more shots with the gun this way. The usual butt-plate adds somewhat to the gun's pitch.

If your first three shots are over the "bull's-eye" then it is probable that your gun-stock is too straight and has too little drop at the heel. Or it may be that the comb is a trifle too high to suit you. Or again, it may mean that you are raising your head as you shoot—a bad habit that will always make one over-shoot. But if your gun shoots only a trifle two or three inches directly above the "bull's-eye"—let it alone. An upland gun should shoot this way to help catch up with the rise of the flushed bird.

If your gun shoots regularly to the left, your stock may be too long, or you may be holding out too far on the barrel. If to the right, your stock may be too short or you may be holding in too far on the barrel. Try it!

Wild Zoo Animals Would Make for Trees if Loose

What would happen if a zoo's entire collection of several thousand wild animals were suddenly set free in the midst of a metropolitan city? Except for the hysterical frenzy of the population when the news became current, nothing much would happen, according to Edmund Heller, director of the Milwaukee Washington park zoo.

The great man-eating tigers and lions would be the first to make for the bushes and trees. Unless they were cornered, they would probably not attack human beings. They would be the most dangerous of adversaries, but the instinct of caution, without which they would have long ago been exterminated, would prevent them from seeking out as prey a creature whose killing power they have long had reason to fear.

Bird That Dodges Bullets

One of the most common of local aquatic birds is the grebe, often called hell-diver. There is hardly an inland lake in the state that doesn't harbor at least one family of grebes during the summer season, writes a correspondent in the Detroit News. This is the bird that is able to dodge bullets if it happens to be watching the hunter, and for speed and quickness in diving it is in a class of its own.

Cookies for the Holidays

Their Proper Preparation Is in the Baking Rather Than the Mixing; Should Be Made Weeks in Advance and Allowed to Ripen.

For several weeks correspondents have been asking me not to forget to print recipes for Christmas cookies in plenty of time for the holidays. Most of these cookies are the better for ripening a few weeks, so that now is the time to devote a column to them. In Germany and Sweden there are many cakes, breads and cookies which are reserved for the Yuletide festivities and perhaps for this reason they are the more appreciated, and the housekeeper feels that the time she devotes to making the elaborately decorated and varied shaped cookies is merely one evidence of her Christmas spirit.

All of these cookies, however, are not as difficult to make or as elaborate as they look. I brought with me from a little village in the midst of the Black forest, high up in the mountains, an interesting small rolling pin by which cookies can be marked with amusing decorations with a mere twist and slight pressure. When I got back to this country I found that the same sort of rolling pin can be purchased in one or two of the kitchen-furnishing departments of house furnishing shops.

The Spritz cookie press or cookie gun is also a time-saving utensil at holidays as well as any other time. Spritz cookies must not be made from a very rich dough. On the contrary, some of the German cookies have no shortening whatsoever and depend for their texture upon keeping for a few weeks in a tightly covered box before serving. Meringues are an exception to the general rule that all cookies improve by keeping. If, however, nuts or dates are added to the mixture, it is a different matter. Almost every household has some cookie which is associated with Christmas time. In our household there always were jumbles made by great grandmother's recipe, which I find is practically the same as that for the well-known sand tarts. Nut wafers, which are really sort of a cross between wafers and macarons, must also always be made several weeks before Christmas. Their original recipe calls for hickory nuts. Occasionally we used butternuts, when a generous uncle had sent some from his fall crop on the farm. Nowadays I usually use pecans or black walnuts, when they are obtainable, for these nut wafers.

The actual work in the preparation of cookies is, as all of us know who have made many of them, in the baking, rather than in the mixing. We may manage two cookie sheets at a time in the oven, but the clock must be watched even when we have a regulated oven. Remember that cookie sheets do not need to be greased when there is plenty of fat in the mixture, and they should not be washed between batches. If you are really going in for cookie making, you will save time if you have four cookie sheets so that you may have pans all ready to pop into the oven as soon as one batch comes out. In the absence of cookie sheets, inverted pans may be used, but they are not as space saving as the larger sheets. If you are buying new tins I recommend the light rather than the dark tin, as cookies are less likely to brown too much on the bottom.

I am giving you today recipes for some cookies which are improved if they are kept a few weeks before eating. You will note that some of these recipes call for flour and some for cake flour. You may substitute one for the other in any recipe by adding two additional tablespoons of flour to each cupful when you substitute cake flour and subtracting the same amount (two tablespoons to each cupful) when you use bread flour.

Great Grandmother's Jumbles.
 1/2 cup butter
 1 cup sugar
 1 egg
 1 1/2 cups flour
 2 teaspoons baking powder
 1 egg white
 Blanched almonds
 1 teaspoon cinnamon
 4 tablespoons sugar

Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually and the egg well beaten. Add the flour mixed and sifted with the baking powder. Chill, roll one-eighth-inch thick. Cut in rounds or stars and brush over with the white of an egg and sprinkle with sugar mixed with cinnamon. Split the almonds and arrange three halves on each tart at equal distances and bake ten to twelve minutes in a slow oven, 300 degrees F.

Spritz Cookies.
 1 cup shortening
 3/4 cup sugar
 2 egg yolks
 2 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
 1 teaspoon almond extract
 1/4 teaspoon salt

Sift flour, measure and sift again

Get Rid of Poisons That Make You Ill

IS a constant headache keeping you miserable? Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; attacks of dizziness, rheumatic pains, swollen feet and ankles? Do you feel tired, nervous all unstrung?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits poisons to stay in the blood and upset the whole system.

with salt. Cream shortening and add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Beat in egg yolks, one at a time. Add extract and work sifted flour into mixture. Pack in barrel of cookie gun, force dough out onto greased cookie sheet in various shapes. Bake in a fairly hot oven, 400 degrees F., ten minutes. Remove from cookie sheet at once and store when cool. Makes about four dozen cookies.

Nurnberger Cookies.
 1 cup honey
 1 egg
 1/2 cup brown sugar
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 3/4 pkg. sliced, candied lemon peel
 1/2 cup flour
 1/2 teaspoon soda
 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 1/2 teaspoon cloves
 1/2 teaspoon allspice
 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
 1/2 pkg. sliced citron
 1/2 cup chopped nut meats
 Whole almonds and citron for decorating

Bring the honey to a boil. Remove from fire and add brown sugar. Cool, and add beaten eggs and lemon juice. Mix and sift together the flour, soda, cinnamon, cloves, allspice and nutmeg. Stir them into honey mixture. Add citron and nuts. Let stand in ice box overnight. Roll out to about one-third-inch thickness. Cut into greased round cakes about three inches in diameter. Place two inches apart on a baking sheet. Decorate with blanched almonds, arranged as the petals of a daisy with a round piece of citron for the center. Bake fifteen minutes in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) Yield: Three dozen cookies.

Quick Meal.
 Baked Beans Brown Bread
 Scalloped Tomatoes
 Lettuce Salad
 Sliced Fruit

If you have the baked bean habit you just naturally have them every so often for the quick meal. If you are a business woman housekeeper, you will probably buy them ready-made. Some very good beans of the home-made type can now be purchased in cans, or you may prefer the beans with tomato sauce. Brown bread, which goes with them so well, may be bought at the baker's or at the grocer's in cans, all ready for steaming long enough to reheat. As long as you have the oven going for the beans, you might as well use it for scalloping the tomatoes to serve with them. A light salad with french dressing will be passed with a meal of this sort, and probably a light dessert as well. I am suggesting sliced fruit, perhaps bananas and oranges with a little coconut, which makes it worthy of the title of "Ambrosia," which is sometimes given it.

ROTARIAN BOND OF FELLOWSHIP, HELPFULNESS

Rotarians, said Sinclair Lewis in one of his novels, are "Boy Scouts in long pants." The description was meant as a gibe. At its twenty-fifth annual convention, held in Detroit, Rotary International turned the other cheek to the novelist. After he had thanked Mr. Lewis for the jeer, Fred W. Gray of Nottingham, England, one of the delegates, said: "If we can eliminate laws and rules for vocational service, we shall produce a type of Rotarian who never can be labeled a Babbit."

The organization, which was started in Chicago, in 1905, by Paul Percy Harris as a social club to promote fellowship and profit among business men, has grown to one of world-wide importance in which fellowship and service predominate and in which the greater stress is laid on service. It was, in fact, the herald of the New Deal. "Service" has long been its keynote. "Service Above Self—It's Profits Most Who Serves Best" is the slogan on the Rotary escutcheon.

These "Boy Scouts in long pants" are now to be found in nearly every corner of the globe. On July 1, 1933, Rotary International, established in 1922, consisted of 3,003 clubs, with more than 147,000 members. More than 7,000 who were gathered in Detroit, heard Raymond J. Knapp, pastor director of International Rotary, New York, declare that Rotary "enunciated the New Deal of human helpfulness more than twelve years ago and was laughed at for its philosophy."—Literary Digest.

Why Children Need a Liquid Laxative

The temporary relief children get from unwise dosing with harsh cathartics may cause bowel strain, and even set-up irritation in the kidneys. A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a more natural movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to give the child "a double dose" a day or two later.

Can constipation be safely relieved in children? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say many mothers who have followed this sensible medical advice: 1. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Give the dose you find suited to the system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving naturally without aid.

An approved liquid laxative (one that is widely used for children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The mild laxative action of this excellent preparation is the best form of help for children—and grown-ups, too. The dose can be regulated for any age or need.

Your druggist sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

The Annual Roll Call of The American Red Cross

Our people continue to look to the American Red Cross as the kindly and always helpful good neighbor to whom they turn for practical aid in emergency. They do so with the assurance that this national relief agency, with an organization in thirteen thousand American communities, has not and will not fail them.

In the difficult twelve months which have elapsed since last November, Red Cross volunteers throughout the land have worked in close cooperation with the Federal, state and local governments in their humanitarian labors. Their service has not been limited to aid in furnishing the actual necessities of life, but has extended to the equally important field of safeguarding public health and of training their neighbors in the proper methods of caring for the sick or the injured.

At the same time the organization has continued to fulfill its obligation as our agency of relief for every community visited by disaster.

The Red Cross is looked upon as the representative of all of our people in times of distress. In order that it may continue its service to humanity it is highly important that we lend our support through individual membership.

I hope every one who possibly can do so will respond generously to the Red Cross appeal.
