State Magazine for March

Four writers who have won a national audience entice the pages of New Mexico Magazine for March, just published.

Kyle Critchton, formerly of Albuquerque and now on the staff of Collier's, The National Weekly, contributes "Lament of La Bajada," a sparkling story in humorous vein.

Earl W. Scott, master writer of mystery material, presents "The Lost Road," a short-short story new in type to New Mexico Magazine.

Under the title "The Kid Still Rides," Eugene Cunningham offers an arresting article on New Mexico's most famous bad boy Billy The Kid.

S. Omar Barker long a favorite of New Mexico Magazine readers returns to its pages with a feature that leaves a laugh with every line, "Practically A Pal To The Squirrels."

How cowboy songs originated is told by Jules Verne Allen under the title, "Sugin' Along"; in "Ghosts Walk In Georgetown" Alford Ross reveals the evolution of ghost mining towns; Car Livingston unfolds the story of M. Kittrick Canyon; while "New Mexico Santos" by Gilberto Espinosa and "Lump of Gold" by Hugh Bryan round out as varied offering as the magazine has made in many a day.

With the seven established departmental features and a wealth of pictorial material, make the March issue one that explains why the state magazine of national interest has added more than 1,900 new subscribers since December 1.

Woman's Club Report

The entertainment given by the Carrizozo Woman's Club was an excellent example of what the women of that organization can do. Each character was especially suited to the part she played and entered into the very life of that character. Miss Leslie Cooper at the piano furnished several numbers of popular music which put the audience into a receptive mood for the remainder of the program. The High School Glee Club directed by Miss Gayle Sharp in their attractive ensembles gave two excellent numbers of which any city twice our size could be justly proud. Miss Rhea Boughner accompanied by Mr. B. S. Birds played two beautiful numbers on the xylophone. The lights were off for a brief period but through the prompt action of Supt. Hall the large audience remained quiet. The total receipts were $41.13 disbursements $10.98 leaving the sum of 30.15 for the Club. The committee in charge greatly appreciates the splendid cooperation of the community.
—Mrs. Maude L. Blaney.

Baseball Team Organized

At a meeting called by Mr. Sabino Vidaurri last Sunday at Navarro's Hall, the Estabside ball team was reorganized.

Mr. Vidaurri was selected manager for the coming season, and S. Ortiz as Captain. M. C. St. John, sub-cap and bookkeeper.

Funds to support the team will be raised by giving dances and other entertainments.

Messrs. Alfredo Lopez, Andy Lueras and M. C. St. John were selected on the entertainment committee. They are giving their first dance at the Community Hall tomorrow night March 2 the Rancheros will furnish the music.

"Carrizozo Cobras" was the name chosen and it is predicted they will be plenty poisonous for the surrounding teams.

Possible line-up is as follows:
M Chavez; Andy Lueras, A Lopez, S Ortiz, p; Lell St. John 1 b; Tino Lopez 2 b; S. Ortiz 3 b; Tony Perea or Chas. Mackey ss; M Ortiz, Chicho Mireles and Jerry Beltran, fielders.

After short talks by Messrs. Vidaurri, Juan Martinez, Alfredo Lopez, Andy Lueras, S Ortiz and M C St. John the meeting was adjourned.

Practicing will start as soon as weather permits.

In the last six months the Administration has thought recovery more and more through the stimulation of private industry. Efforts have been directed toward placing men on private payrolls instead of government payrolls. As a result, the last six months have seen a steady upturn in the business indices and decreased unemployment. Some of this has been due, of course, to the President frowning upon unjustified strikes by organized labor.

Short Time

"I wish I knew if my job is a permanent one. You see, when I was taken on the boss said, 'All right, I'll give you a trial.'"

"Hm! And he hasn't mentioned whether you are satisfactory or not?"

"No, that's what's worrying me. I don't like to ask him in case he finds fault with me."

"Yes, it's awkward. How long have you been working for him?"

"Nigh on forty years."—Tit Bits.

"The Mall"

"Mall" was originally the name of the market used in playing pall-mall, a game played in France, Scotland, and other countries hundreds of years ago in which a ball was driven with a mallet. The word "mall" was applied to the game itself, as well as to the place where it was played. Thus Pall-Mall, a famous street in London, received its name from the fact that it was formerly a pall-mall alley. In the course of time "mall" came to mean a public walk, especially a shaded one. "The Mall" is applied to a strip of land in Washington, D. C., lying between the Capitol and the Washington monument, bounded on the east by the Capitol grounds, on the south by Maryland avenue and B street N. W., on the west by Seventeenth street, and on the north by Pennsylvania avenue and B street N. W. The name is also applied to a Cleveland strip of land.

Longest Life Span

The longest recorded life span of any backboneed animal is 152 years and is credited to a giant land tortoise known to have lived on the island of Mauritius from 1768 to 1920. As it was not young when the record started, its true age may have been more than 200 years. The larger land turtles and crocodiles probably live beyond 100 years, states an authority at the Field Museum, Chicago, but records are few. The greatest recorded age for any crocodile is that of a Chinese alligator which has lived since 1898 in the Frankfort zoological gardens.

Origin of Word "Bank"

The origin of the word bank as the place of business of money dealers is obscure, says Literary Digest. In that case the first appearance of the word in English was in the last quarter of the fifteenth century. Etymologists believe it to have been derived from the earlier banca (banck, bank, banche, banke, as alternate spellings), meaning bench or shelf, a sense that traces back in English to the eleventh century.

Largest Roman Forum

The largest Roman forum is at Salamis, on the island of Cyprus. Five miles away, at Famagusta, in one of the town's fortifications, stands Othello's Tower, where Desdemona met her tragic end. To the southeast stands Limassol, where Richard the Lion Hearted married Berengaria, and there she was crowned Queen of England.

Lightning

The bureau of standards says that it is not scientifically correct to say that lightning strikes in the sense that a projectile strikes. A stroke of lightning may be likened to a crack resulting from strain in a sheet of glass. It may start at any point in the path which it ultimately takes and travel up, down or in both directions at once if its beginning is at some point between its ends. The direction of current flow may be in either direction, depending on whether the cloud is positively or negatively charged.

Governor Tingle is opposed to gambling in any form and has vetoed the bill passed by the legislature to tax, and thus virtually legalize slot machines.

"I could not consistently sign this bill and therefore have vetoed it," he announced.

"The provisions of the bill are in conflict with my own personal views on matters of this kind. In my opinion to permit it to become law would be the opening wedge for all types of gambling machines and devices.

Women Warned To Urge Taxation Cuts

From one woman to another, Mary Roberts Rinehart, the author, warns housewives in a recent article in the Ladies Home Journal that they must unite to curb taxation.

"Her dollar is not a dollar at all," Mrs. Rinehart says, speaking of the housewife. "The actual necessities of living have consumed most of it, and taxes take the rest. That is, out of twenty-nine billions spent each year, taxes take nine billions, food only seven and rent only three and a half."

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes to Prosperity Farm to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, his health broken by tragedy. The second day on the farm Prue falls from the barn into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, a neighbor. There is at once a mutual attraction, but Prudence suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway tries to buy Prue's timber, but she contracts with Rodney Gerard, who would want to see David daily; equally, of course, distrusting Rodney Gerard as she did, she couldn't go to High Ledges.

Rodney! She had wondered if Calloway had forged that letter about the check. After Jenn's revelation about the photograph she had found in her uncle's desk, how could she doubt any more? Walter Gerard had been right, the unfinished word was love, of course. "Fitting from flower to flower" — Miss Walt had been right, too, her brother-in-law was unreliable. He was the type of man Julio had murdered.

She must put the Gerards out of her mind. They were becoming an obsession. Her own affairs needed all her attention. Who had stolen the jewels? The escaped convict? She did not believe it any more than she believed that Walter Gerard was the thief.

"Here comes Mr. Calloway in that snappy red car of his."

Jenn's excited whisper set Prue's pulses quickstepping. Calloway on his way to the village! How soon was the train due? She pushed back her gloves. Maddingly, she had forgotten her wrist watch. Jim Armstrong had said: "I wish Calloway might be providentially called out of town an hour or so before that train arrives."

Evidently Providence was busy elsewhere. Could she stop him? "Success" was in line with the pasture barn from which a path—now a mere shadow under the show—led uphill to the southerly boundary of her property, The Hundreds. That gave her an idea. She would ask him to show her the trees he wanted to cut. It would be adventure with a capital A to lead him off the stem, and she loved adventure. She gripped Jenn's arm.

"Stop a minute! Drive the car home, K. K. Don't go to the village. At the crossroads take the turn to the right; that will bring you to the back of the red brick house."

"What's the big idea?"

"I'll ask Len Calloway to show me where he wants to cut. If he consents, I will keep him away from the village until the new gang is at High Ledges."

"Good afternoon, Mr. Calloway," Prudence acknowledged the sweep of the dark-eyed man's tongue with gay friendliness. "This is a clear case of thought transference. I suppose feeling that path to The Hundreds brought you to my mind. I hate quarrelling with my neighbors; it's so — so tenebrous. Can't we arbitrate? Perhaps when you have time you'll tramp over the land with me and show me what to cut—but I'm detaining you. Drive on, Jean."

"Just a minute," Calloway's nearest eyes were triumphant. "What's the matter with you, Miss Schuyler? My business at the village can wait. What say if we take that tramp now? This snow won't smother to much."

Prudence smiled the most radiant smile in her not limited repertoire.

"I'm all for it, if you are, Mr. Calloway. I'm the original 'Do-it-now' girl."

She looked intently at Jean. "Wait here, won't you, K. K. I—"

"Don't have the kid wait. I'll take you home, Miss Schuyler."

"That would help. Drive very carefully, Jean, and straight home, remember. Tell Miss Mack that Mr. Calloway is personally conducting me over The Hundreds. Go out to the barn and tell Mr. St. He and I were planning to set an incubator this afternoon, but that can wait." Having posted which two sentinels on the ramparts of protection, she stepped over the bars that Calloway lowered.

Why didn't the man speak? He was leading the way along the snowy path. Woods stretched endlessly ahead, dense, dark, dismal. She didn't for an instant doubt Calloway's respectability, but she had a shivery sense of repressed fury smoldering under his urbanity.

"Here we are!" Calloway stopped to brush the snow from the top of a granite boulder. "See that B cut in the stone? It marks the southeastern corner of the tract your uncle purchased from my father. Here's a trail. We'll go in a little way so that you can see the quality of the timber."

"All sweetness and light again, aren't you?" Prudence mentally addressed his straight back as she followed him. He paused and turned.

"Sorry to have made trouble for you about your timber, Miss Schuyler, but when I say I'll put a thing through, I do it, no matter what the consequences may be to anyone else."

Prudence looked up at him. Wistfulness was entirely out of her line, but she did her best with voice and eyes.

"Suppose—suppose—is it too late to change my mind and let you—"

The shrill whistle of a locomotive shattered the silence. The train had arrived! In a moment or two the

They were too early for the train. In the village they indulged lavishly in ice-cream cones, and still the minutes lagged.

"Let's drive out the pond road a little way, Jean."

Prue's thoughts wandered. Why had Dave decided to stay at High Ledges? It would make it awkward for her. Of course, she would want to see David daily; equally, of course, distrusting Rodney Gerard as she did, she couldn't go to High Ledges.

"Rodney! She had wondered if Calloway had forged that letter about the check. After Jenn's revelation about the photograph she had found in her uncle's desk, how could she doubt any more? "Suppose—suppose—is it too late to change my mind and let you—"

The shrill whistle of a locomotive shattered the silence. The train had arrived! In a moment or two the gang would be on its way to High Ledges, and Calloway was here! Prudence lowered her lids. She felt as if her eyes were twinkling stars of triumph.

"Suppose I agreed to let you cut my timber, would you still try to stop Rodney Gerard?"

Calloway, who had started on again, turned. Prudence stopped so as better to preserve the distance between them. His massive figure blocked the trail where it divided and ran east and west.

"Do you mean that you'll chuck Rod Gerard and give me the contract to cut? Do you mean that?"

His eyes burned red as he hurled the question. Perhaps it was the shadow of his theatrical hat that gave the effect. Whatever the cause, she didn't like it, Prudence told herself. She would back track as soon as she was sure the men were well away from the village.

"Can't a girl change her mind?"

Calloway's eyes flamed. He caught her shoulder. She shook off his hand. "Don't!"

"Sorry. I didn't mean any harm, Miss Schuyler. Say listen, I'm a just man, but I don't stop at anything; get me, anything when I've been double-crossed. I'll pay Rodney Gerard for interfering in my affairs—it goes back long before he thought of cutting timber—if I never do anything else in my life, but I don't want a fight with you. I'm crazy about you. Marry me, and I'll cut your logs, sell them, and turn the money over to you. You can have your own bank account."

"Oh, can I? You don't really mean it? Your romantic attack of the subject thrills me."

She must not chuckle like that, and she had better cut out sarcasm, and a little way down stream, looked familiar. She would wade to that.

Zowie, the water was icy. She slipped on slimy, concealed rocks, splashed through pebbly shallows, plunged into a good pool.

"I'll bet I gave the trout the thrill of their lives," she said aloud, as she pulled herself up by shrubs to the bank. A fresh blazer! She had seen Jim Armstrong slash it. She was on the home trail now! Better rest for a moment.

"Hullo—o—o!"

The call set her nerves vibrating. It didn't frighten her, but she didn't like it. It was too near. The woods seemed to be closing in on her. She hated the feeling. She couldn't be mistaken about this trail. She was sure that she had been on it before. She must get into the open. She was freezing.

She ran as swiftly as clutching bushes and treacherous tree roots permitted. Her cold, wet skirts lashed her knees; her teeth chattered. How long could she keep this pace? Darn! What fiend had looped that root across the trail? She picked herself up. Ouch! What a lump! Lucky she had struck in the middle of her forehead, not under her eyes.

"What was that? Was she just seeing things, or was it—a log cabin?" She had been following the freshly blazed trail to her cabin instead of one to the clearing! What difference did it make? There was a chimney. She could get warm.

She stumbled toward it. Threw herself against the door. It opened! The breaks were with her! She plunged in. Lost her balance. Some one caught her.

She stared unbelievably. Closed her eyes. Opened them. She was awake. Every hard-drawn breath had been wasted; every step she had run, every fall had been futile. Calloway's furious, triumphant eyes blazed down at her.

"Light the lamp, Jean," said Prudence.

Jane Mack clutched her shoulder. "No! No! The convict might see and—shoot. I know folks."

"Pull yourself together. Walk till I've drawn the hangings, Jean."

"Don't go near those windows, Miss Prue."

"Nonsense, Macky. All right, Jean, light the lamp."

Spooky shadows cast by the wavering flashlight stalked into corners as a soft glow suffused the room.

"That's better. The light will send your bad dream hunting, Macky. Sit down and tell us what happened."

Jane Mack twisted her bony hands. Jenn, in her candy-striped pajamas, put her arm about Prue's waist. The woman sniffed.

"You two girls think I've had a dream, don't you? Well, I haven't. I was just getting into bed—I thought I heard a door creak down here. I stole down quietly. I didn't want to scare you. I slipped to this door. A man was flashing a light over that!" She pointed a blanched finger toward the safe. "You'd left it unlocked."

"I knew in a minute 'twas the escaped prisoner I'd been expecting. I guess I gurgled. He pulled his hat lower over his eyes. Pointed his light straight at my face, so I couldn't see anything."

"But you covered. Make a sound, woman, an' I'll a-shoot!" he hissed.

Prudence's eyes widened with incredulity. "I could this vibrant, dramatic woman be the taciturn, dour spinster who coughed and scrubbed for her every day?"

Jane Mack swallowed hard. "All I could think of was the money you had tied up in those jewels, Miss Prue, an' what 'twould mean if you lost them. What was this old body of mine good for, anyway? So I yelled."

"I'll say you yelled. Then what did the man do?" Jean demanded. "Did he shoot?"

"If he did, I didn't know it."

"Perhaps he sneaked in to look around because he was born here or his father died here; we haven't had one of those old timers drop in on us for a week."

Jane Mack sniffed. "Better look and see if the 'old timer' got any of your jewels."

"Never mind the jewels, Macky. I deserve to lose them for forgetting to close the safe. Sure you are not hurt?"

"Sure, Miss Prue."

Jean was on her knees before the safe frantically examining the white packets when Prudence reached it. She looked up with frightened eyes.

"Gone!" she whispered.

"What's gone?"

"The emerald and diamonds!"

"You ought to set the sheriff after that convict," Jane Mack insisted for the third time the next afternoon.

At the kitchen table Prudence was snipping the stems of the roses before placing them in vases of fresh water. Impulsively she put an arm about Jean's shoulder and hugged her as the child drew a long, hard breath. She knew what she was thinking, knew that she was remembering the look in her father's eyes as he had asked if the jewels were kept in the house. Of course, Walter Gerard had not stolen the gems, he wouldn't fall so low as that, but—

"I'll wait until Mr. David comes, Macky. He will be here so soon that we had better consult him before we enter complaint."

"Well, of course, if you can afford to lose that emerald and the diamonds, Miss Prue, it's up to you. If you'd seen what I saw in my trapcup this morning— With a snift Jane Mack disappeared into the pantry.

Back in far coats, red beret and green beret making brilliant spots of color in the gray day, Prudence, with Jane, backed the cart out of the shed.

CHAPTER IX

Sudden, uncontrollable panic shook Prudence. In the tense silence she stared up into Calloway's inscrutable face.

"Thought you'd double-cross me, didn't you? There are several trails to the cabin."

At his harsh voice her mind and courage sprang to arms.

"My cabin, isn't it? I had no idea it was so—so luxurious."

She forced her eyes to move slowly, as if appraisingly from the rafters over the fireplace to the water bucket on the bench by the door, on to the wood pile near the hearth with an ax leaning against it. That ax—she looked away quickly. "Calloway must not suspect that it had seemed like meeting an unexpected friend."

"Rather nice. I came here the other day with Jim Armstrong, but we didn't come in."

She was talking against time. Surely Jean must have reached the red brick house by this time. Must have told someone where she was.

"Better sit down," Calloway suggested with sickening suavely. He pushed forward a wooden chair.

"Thank you. I prefer to stand here," Prudence caught hold of the great shelf of rock, which served as a mantel, with a grip which turned her palms white.

"Sitt yourself. When you beat it, I figured that any path you'd take would lead here. I took a short cut and started the fire. There were red coals; someone's been using the place. Sorry I can't provide a lamp. It's getting dark outside."

If Prudence had distrusted the man back on the trail, she hated him now, hated his mocking smile to which the flickering light gave a Satanic twist. She took a step forward.

"Then we had better start home at once. I'm wet and cold."

In one move he was between her and the door.

Prudence Dashed Along the Trail Which Turned Sharply East.

warned herself. How long since the whistle had blown? She hated the eyes looking down at her. He was coming nearer. Perhaps he was a little mad. Violent-tempered people sometimes ended that way. Should she make a break into the woods. Of course, Calloway would follow, and somehow she would elude him. She couldn't get lost.

"Well!"

"Really, Mr.—Len—you've surprised me so that I'm all jittery."

Her laugh made no dent in his glowering regard.

"I'm not in the habit of snapping up an offer of a heart and hand. You must allow me time to think." She pushed back the sleeves of her cardigan. "My wrist! How I dropped my wrist watch? I must go back. David gave it to me and I wouldn't lose it for all the timber in the world. Please help me hunt for it."

Her suggestion roused opposition, as she had hoped it would.

"We're going on. Looking the layout over was your idea. Don't be a quitter. I've got you here; you'll stay. I'll go back for the watch. I can find it quicker alone. Wait here."

Taking compliance for granted, he stalked back. As he disappeared around a bend, Prudence darted along the trail which turned sharply east.

She went on cautiously looking for the blaze on trees. No sign of human occupation. She stopped to listen. Was Calloway following? Did he think her a quitter? She wasn't. She was, to use a favorite legal term of David's, merely "in the exercise of due care," while she diverted his attention from the village.

The trees thinned. What was that sound? A brook! She couldn't be far from home if it was the stream which crossed her lower meadow. She climbed a high bank, drew a long, ragged breath of relief. No danger of being lost now. She had her bearings.

"Hullo! Hullo—o—o!"

Calloway shouting. A thin gray fog of doubt dimmed her satisfaction in the success of her ruse of Providence. Perhaps her idea hadn't been such a knockout after all. She had better get home. The trail on the other side,

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE SHOULD BE LIQUID

(Ask any doctor)

For your own comfort, and for your children's safety and future welfare, you should read this:

The bowels cannot be helped to regularly by any laxative that can't be regulated as to dose. That is why doctors use liquid laxatives.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

The right liquid laxative dose gives the right amount of help. When repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, natural laxatives that form no habit, even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will clear up a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. Every druggist has it.

Breach Widens Between Administration and Labor—Hauptmann Sentenced to Death—Inquiries Into Causes of Macon Disaster Get Under Way.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT extended his olive branches toward the American Federation of Labor when he signed the cigarette industry code, which labor leaders had declared was "unsatisfactory." The breach between the administration and labor is daily growing wider.

The executive council of the federation, composed of William Green and presidents of the federation of seven international unions, states that some present administration labor policies are bringing increased unrest among workers which may reach the danger point of widespread strikes unless corrected.

INQUIRIES into the causes of the "gas cellars" which ripped away the two gas cells and caused the giant dirigible "Macon" to plunge into the Pacific has been started. Even the surviving 81 officers and men of the "Sky Queen" are not certain just what caused the catastrophe, although Lieut. Com. H. V. Wiley, survivor of the Akron disaster and master of the Macon, was said to have "some ideas" about it.

Some hints were made about structural weakness of the $2,450,000 craft, but naval officers refused to discuss the subject. In Washington President Roosevelt said there would be no immediate move to replace the ship. Survivors of the crash told a dramatic story of heroism. Cruising along at a speed of 63 knots, the ship twice lowered its elevation to avoid rain squalls. A short jar was felt, the ship began to take a bow-up position, and Commander Wiley received a report that one of the 12 helium gas cells was gone.

As it hit the ocean the crew slid down ropes or dived into the heavy swells. Men swam through flames where flames had ignited oil and gasoline, others rescued companions whose lifebelts were lost or broken in long leaps into the sea. The sailors watched the ship crumble under the waves and at last disappear. Only two men were lost. Cruisers rushed to the scene and picked up the survivors.

BRUNO HAUPTMANN will die in the electric chair at Trenton, N. J. during the week of March 18, unless attorneys secure a stay of execution by filing an appeal. The prisoner showed no trace of emotion as the jurors announced their verdict and did not break under the strain until after Justice Trenchard had pronounced sentence, and he was returned to the cell. There, his iron will gave way and he sobbed as he sat on his hard iron cot. The jurors required more than 12 hours to reach their verdict. Two of the women were said to have held out for a recommendation of mercy which would have resulted in a life sentence for the man accused of the murder of the Lindbergh baby, but there was no mention of mercy when the verdict was read.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT eked out a close victory in the senate appropriations committee, when the amendment to cut $2,000,000,000 off the administration's $4,880,000,000 work relief bill was defeated by the close vote of 112 to 111. Administration forces scored another victory by the adoption of a compromise amendment to the proposal of Senator Pat McCarran for the payment of prevailing wages on all federal projects. Witnesses testified that McCarran's amendment would have increased the cost of putting 3,500,000 men to work by more than $2,000,000,000 and would have defeated the purpose of the bill. McCarran did not press his amendment in committee when a substitute was offered, but insists that he will do so on the senate floor. The fight the American Federation of Labor is making on this point is expected to have considerable influence with a number of senators, who fear the wrath of their labor constituents. The substitute, proposed by Senator Richard B. Russell, and adopted by a vote of 14 to 9, provides that the President shall establish the prevailing rates of pay whenever an investigation discloses that the federal wages of $50 a month are affecting adversely the rates on work of a similar nature. The matter is entirely up to the President, however, and he can take any action or withhold any investigation, just as he sees fit, which may mean much or nothing.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI found Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia a man not easily frightened. He Duce's demands for indemnities for Italian colonialists killed on the borders of Italian Somaliland were politely, but firmly, refused. The Ethiopians, undismayed by the vast preparations Italy has been making, declared they would fight to their last drop of blood to preserve their independence, that they would not apologize or make reparations for what they maintain is merely defense of their own country. This puts Mussolini in an embarrassing position. He must either send an expeditionary force against the Ethiopians, or back down after mobilizing troops, and that would be a bitter pill for the Italian dictator to swallow.

CHANCELLOR HITLER emerged from his hermit-like seclusion with a number of counter-proposals which he offered in reply to the Franco-British proposals. Der Fuehrer, a government spokesman stated, would definitely refuse to join any pact guaranteeing Austria's independence unless "the will of the Austrian people is first consulted" by means of a plebiscite to determine whether that nation desires an "anschluss" (union) with the German Reich. Hitler will also follow Poland's lead, and will have nothing to do with the French sponsored eastern securities agreement "if it is to be based on mutual assistance," although he is willing to join an air pact provided it allows Germany an air force equal to Soviet Russia's. Hitler seems particularly anxious to avoid any agreement which would bind Germany to Russia and perhaps result in aiding Russia in event of war between that country and Japan.

From the tone of Hitler's demands, he evidently did not entirely believe that France and Great Britain were not preparing some trap for him. The Hitler reply demands that Germany must be given absolute equality of armaments before anything else can be discussed, and that Germany will negotiate an air pact if her relations with Soviet Russia are considered, and if England, France, Belgium and Italy agree to consult each other before any action is taken. He also insists that the general question of disarmament is allied with the air pact and must be settled at the same time. When notified that Der Reichsfuehrer would make reservations, official British sources indicated that Germany must either accept or reject the agreement in its entirety, and stated partial acceptance would not be agreeable to Great Britain. All of which may be true, or it may be just the old horse-trading spirit which seems to break out in the best diplomatic circles.

DISPATCHES from Bolivia, which must be taken with several grains of salt, indicate that the Bolivians are meeting with success in defending Villa Montes, their last important stronghold in the disputed Gran Chaco, and that the scissor-like offensive of General Estigarribia, Paraguayan commander in chief, is seriously menaced. It was reported the Bolivians, struggling desperately to relieve the pressure on Villa Montes, had defeated the Paraguayans in the Nancorainza sector "after three days of bitter fighting." This offensive, it was thought, might force Estigarribia's northern wing to retreat.

FRANCIS BIDDLE and his national labor relations board took a hand in the controversy between the administration and the American Federation of Labor by offering a suggestion that section 7-A of the recovery act "should be clarified." William Green and his fellow leaders of the federation have long contended that the clause, guaranteeing employees rights to bargain collectively, should be enlarged to specify that the majority of employees should have the right to choose the spokesmen for all employees, and that company unions should be barred. The national labor board, which submitted a report of its first six months' work, defended the majority rule at length. As is well known, the administration desires section 7-A continued unchanged in the new NRA law which is in the process of making.

WITH the full approval of the administration, the army and navy are to receive $40,000,000 to carry out a program of national defense which will consist mainly of improved strongholds on the west coast and in the Pacific. The money, which will be shared equally by the two departments, comes from a $300,000,000 public works fund. Some of the navy's part will be spent along the Atlantic, but the greater part will go for shipyards, dry docks and bases on the Pacific coast, at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, which is a submarine base.

Nearly $11,000,000 of the army's share is to be used in beginning the construction of a great air base in Hawaii. The total cost of this base is estimated at $18,000,000. The decision to use most of the money in the Pacific was said to have been influenced by the fact that the fleet has been concentrated in Pacific waters during much of the past two years. Navy officials stressed before the naval committee, that facilities on the coast are inadequate.

Japan is supposed not to be alarmed by this program, congressional leaders having given public and careful assurance that no "offense" is intended and that such propositions as the Hawaii air base would have been put forward even if Japan had not denounced the Washington naval treaty.

At a meeting of the army high command with the military committee of the house these plans for defense were thrashed out thoroughly. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, recommended to the committee the purchase of 800 new, armored and equipped airplanes at a cost of $90,000,000 to give the army the aerial armada of 2,320 modern aircraft recommended by the Baker aviation committee. These additional aircraft are necessary, MacArthur said in a memorandum, to expand the new general headquarters air force to give it 900 fighting units, for its Pacific, Atlantic and central divisions.

Soon after this meeting the commanders of these three divisions were announced by Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, head of the GHQ air force. Lieut. Col. H. H. Arnold, March Field, Calif., was named commander of the first (Pacific) wing with the rank of brigadier general. Lieut. Col. H. C. Pratt, former assistant chief of air corps, was named commander of the second (Atlantic) wing at Langley field, Va., with the rank of brigadier general. Lieut. Col. Gerald C. Brant will command the third (central) wing, Fort Crockett, Texas, with the rank of colonel.

WHETHER he desires it, President Roosevelt will have to face an early test of his strength against that of bonus payment advocates. If present signs are read correctly, although some leaders have been able to agree on themselves, the plan to bring up for consideration. Some administration leaders have expressed belief such a move is necessary to avert a revolt on major administration legislation. The controversy over possible methods of payment is becoming increasingly bitter. Representative Patman, Texas Democrat, author of a bill to pay the bonus certificates with an issue of new currency, gave out a statement asserting that Commander Frank T. Bergano of the American Legion, wanted to finance payment with a bond issue because the bank of which he is vice president receives $1,250,000 interest annually on $45,000,000 worth of government bonds.

The American Liberty League also issued a statement applauding the president's stand against paying the bonus. The league said the Legion of Veterans bill to finance the bonus, though the sale of bonds was "the best" but asked congress to defeat both it and the Patman measure. The President's opposition to immediate payment of the entire face value of the bonus certificates is based on sound principles and deserves to be upheld, the organization added.

NINE old gentlemen of vast dignity, comprising the United States Supreme court, conferred together for five hours Saturday. Then through Clerk Charles C. Cropley, Chief Justice Hughes announced that there would be no decisions handed down on the following Monday. Nothing was said about the test of the week, but it was assumed the ruling on the two clause cases would not be handed down before February 18. It was thought by the well informed that the delay was due to the slowness with which the dissenters were preparing their views. Meanwhile anxiety over the matter, at least in government circles, was growing less daily. Attorney General Cummings spent two hours with President Roosevelt going over the plan which has been drawn up for immediate action in the event that the decision goes against the government.

ROME and Tokyo were the chief bidders for the 1940 Olympic games, and it now appears that the Japanese capital is likely to be the winner. Count Soyeshima, representative of the Japanese Olympic committee, had an interview with Premier Mussolini in Rome and talked him into a swap by which Japan will use its influence to obtain the 1944 games for Rome. The count said that at first, Duce was not inclined to agree to the shift but softened under the plea the Olympics would mean much to Japan's celebration of the three thousand six hundredth anniversary of the founding of the empire.

POULTRY

THINKS 1944 HENS WILL BE IMPROVED

Expert Predicts Bigger and Better Birds.

The average hen will live longer in 1944 than the hen of today, and she will probably lay more eggs and be better looking. Progress which has been made in the past ten years warrants predicting still more improvement during the coming decade. Since 1924, the average egg production has been increased, egg size has been improved and general appearance of the birds has been improved, as a result of careful breeding methods. But while these progressive steps have been made, the death rate of laying birds has increased, until that is the principal problem facing the poultryman today.

In order to develop birds which will "wear" longer, and stand the strain of heavy egg production, a program of breeding for longevity is being offered to Massachusetts poultrymen. This is the third in a series of poultry management projects presented to poultrymen by the state college poultry department. The first of these was centered around producing healthy pullets; the second was designed to keep the pullets healthy in the laying house. And now the third campaign is being launched; to focus the attention of poultry breeders on the importance of selecting birds for their vigor, stamina, and longevity.

Like the other two, this project is co-operative in nature, with the college offering all the available up-to-date information on the subject, with the poultrymen keeping certain records which will provide valuable data for further study of the problem.

Scalding Is Replaced by Wax in Poultry Dressing

How that attractive appearance is given roosters by the modern poultry dressing establishment is explained by Prof. E. L. Dikman, chairman of the poultry department of Ohio State university. Recently, he explains, a new system has been installed by many of the modern places. The chickens are no longer scalded to loosen their feathers. They are dipped in a specially prepared wax. The wax is suspended on a carrier and held. The carrier dips them into warm water to loosen their feathers without injuring the flesh. Then the water bath, the wing, tail and feet, larger feathers, are pulled and the birds are drawn along. They pass through a drying tunnel into the wax bath, leaving that to pass through cool air to speed hardening of the wax. Girls standing by the carrier dip wax, feathers and all, as the chickens pass before them.

The Rooster Problem

February is a good time to consider the rooster problem, says an authority in the Rural New Yorker. Too often the practice has been to keep the farm poultry in just one big flock, pullets, old hens and roosters all running together. All eggs were gathered together, and some were pullet eggs, some were hen eggs, and all were more or less fertile, since all the flock had been running together and male birds were with all the layers. Such practice is no longer advisable on the farm where a serious effort is being made to improve the quantity and quality of egg production, and make better profits from the poultry side of the farm.

Feather Pulling

Feather-pulling pullets should be separated from the rest of the flock for a few days until they forget the habit. Keep the pullers in separate pens and feed them wheat scrap to the extent of 10 per cent of their feed for a week; then reduce to 5 per cent. See that the meat scrap is absolutely free of salt of any kind. The habit is common where birds are housed too closely and have insufficient exercise to keep them busy. This is a vice belonging to idle birds.

Poultry Notes

During wet weather, hens should be kept in the laying house until the afternoon, as most eggs are laid by noon or shortly thereafter. Poultry netting should be put under the roost poles to prevent the hens from coming in contact with the droppings.

It is as necessary for laying hens as it is for growing chicks to use a large amount of vitamin D through weeks of intensive laying.

Quality eggs mean clean eggs, and to this end keep plenty of clean straw litter on the floor of the poultry house every day in the year, and likewise keep the nests clean.

When England recently boasted that its people ate an average of 152 eggs a year it was brought out that Canadians consumed just twice as many.

At least eight feet of space at the roost should be provided for every 100 chicks.

By ARCH SELWYN

ARNOLD ROTHSTEIN always fascinated me, although he was a menace to organized society. I had known him as a boy. He came from upright people, who felt disgraced when he ran away from home, to follow the career of a gambler. I always followed news of his career. I always followed Arch Selwyn, the theatrical producer. "Rothstein had a weird and definite premonition of fate that was going to overtake his later career, and he didn't run away from it."

In the fading twilight of a day, wherein Mr. Selwyn had watched the rehearsal of his new play, "The Devil Pusses," and wherein later he would watch its premiere, he had turned from talk of the theater to talk of colorful personalities in the arena of daily life who live dangerously, and of the dangers, seen and unseen, which pursue them.

"I once told Rothstein," he continued, "that I would like to see a certain gambling house where, it was reputed the leaders of gangdom gambled with one another, and where fabulous sums were exchanged, in cash."

Mr. Selwyn is a good theatrical producer and the sight of $50,000 in cash is a good show, even to a veteran theater man, he admitted.

"Rothstein promised to take me to a private house in New York city to watch the gambling. One night he called me for dinner. A Mr. B. joined us and Rothstein exacted from us the promise that neither of us would gamble. "This gang," he said, "has a code and a language all its own, and you fellows can't play with it."

"Rothstein started to throw the dice. The first bet was $25,000.

"Mr. B. an indefatigable gambler, who made large sums, but who was in the habit of letting them slip by, was soon gambling, despite Rothstein's warning. Rothstein scolded him, but he started to play again, and won $1,500. He wanted to get away from the place. There were too many 'bruisers,' too many desperate-looking characters staring at his winnings for him to feel easy. Rothstein commanded him to wait for him, but he refused. Rothstein told him to wait him at Dirty Moore's.

"In the meantime, Rothstein was losing. In the end he lost $300,000 to three men. Usually these men in gangdom pay their gambling debts at once, in cash. This time, Rothstein could not pay in cash. However, he promised to pay soon.

"In fifteen minutes, after B's departure, Rothstein called me from the scene which had fascinated me like a bizarre foreign spectacle. He rushed me to Dirty Moore's.

"There, in a panic, in the cold perspiration of fear was B. He collapsed before us.

"You can't imagine what happened to me," he whispered. "When I came down the steps, three fellows stuck their guns in me and ordered, 'Hand over the $1,500.' I never was so frightened."

"Didn't I tell you to wait for me?" said Rothstein.

"Yes, but," began B. "You'll learn not to gamble with guys like those," Rothstein admonished. Then, seeing that it was true, he said, "Give back the money," to the fellows in the corner whom he had planted on the stairway to give B. a scare.

"The frightening experience was not the end of a sequence of affairs revolving about that night's losses, as I was soon to learn. I had intended to go sight-seeing, but when one slightest in the event but the future ramifications that have significance for anyone who goes near.

"Two months later I was in the Warwick hotel, where it happened Rothstein had an apartment. He saw me in the lobby and said he wanted to talk to me. 'It's about those fellows I lost that money to. They sure have been giving me a ride. I can't pay now, I will later, but I must stall them off.'

"We went upstairs. The phone rang. Rothstein's premonition now haunted him. After answering it, Rothstein said, 'It's those very boys calling me. They want me to come over to the hotel.'

"Why do you go? I asked.

"Because if I don't they will think I am a coward, trying to run away. I know what it means, I must go."

"That night Rothstein was fatally shot. He had several chances to tell who shot him. He refused. "There is nothing more ghostly or macabre than thus coming face to face with a consummated premonition of violent death."

Foundation of Life Insurance The real foundation of modern life insurance and of scientific annuities was the publication in 1711 by Richard Price of his Northampton Table of Mortality. In recent years this system of insurance has been vastly extended because it enables even relatively poor men to provide an income for their dependents after death, or to accumulate in old age.

NATURE'S WISDOM Sentimental poets have sympathized with the trees exposed to the fury of the winter blasts. But the long rest they have from October to March is part of their lives. Botanists have taken our oaks and maples to the far south where winter is unknown. Yet trees adapted to this latitude do not thrive there any more than the olive and the palm thrive here. To sorrow for the trees because of winter is like sorrowing for the polar bear because he lives amid snow and ice. The polar bear enjoys it. That is his natural habitat, for which he is suited. Nature knows best, and all that she does is part of the wisdom of the ages.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Loans on Farm- Stored Corn

The Federal Government's policy of loaning money on farm-stored corn, which was inaugurated in the Fall of 1933 to supplement the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's program of production control, has proved valuable from several points of view. First, it provides financial aid to contract signers with which to carry on, and with no risk, because loans are made on a basis below conservative estimates of the price to prevail at the marketing season. Secondly, it has thoroughly justified its purpose of steadying prices and thereby increasing buying power in the great corn belt. Also it has demonstrated that it can stabilize the volume of fat livestock as it comes on the market.

In the past and to a considerable extent still, production of large feed, supplies, due to favorable weather, invariably is followed by a greater livestock production, without regard for the probable consumer demand. This shift usually has continued until the price relationship between livestock and feed grain reached a point at which the return from the hundredweight of livestock was no longer any greater than the cash price for the amount of grain required to produce the hundredweight of livestock.

That shifting about in production of livestock, until the price relationship with feed grains became neutral, attracted ample and anxious attention. For years suggestions in farmers' bulletins and even speakers have been sent out by the Department of Agriculture, to advise, with corn growers and hog growers. But, as Mark Twain is accredited with having remarked about the weather, while everybody discussed it, nobody seemed to be doing anything about it.

The AAA has just announced that the provision for Government loans on corn stored on the farm in surplus-producing areas definitely will be a part of the corn-hog adjustment program for 1935. As was the case last year, only farmers who sign the corn-hog contract soon to be offered will be eligible for such loans. The amount to be loaned per bushel this year has not been determined and cannot be until the essential facts as to probable production and feed requirements have developed.

In planning farm stored corn loans and by tying the loan program to production control, the Government is in effect inaugurating the "avernormal" granary policy. But whatever kind of adjustment program is in effect, according to the AAA, there always remains the weather factor which, in any given year, cannot be controlled. However, as the weather tends to even up over a period of a few years in the corn country, a sound farm-storage plan to hold over a part of bumper crops from favorable years is sure to assist greatly in maintaining a constant and dependable grain supply.

Hard on Hens

"Clucking as one hen to another, I don't mind telling you that the times are sadly out of joint," she grumbled, hopping rather dejectedly from a speck of chaff taken mistakenly for grain.

"Dear, dear me!" clucked back the other hen. "What in the world has happened now? It's most disturbing. The last time you acted that way was the day before the night when they first tricked hens into working overtime by pretending it was daytime and using electric lights."

"This is far worse, my dear. You know these human beings once got an idea that everything could be done by machine. Now they find it doesn't always work. Something alive has got to be back of the machine—deus ex machina, I think they call it."

"I don't understand, I'm afraid," fluttered her friend.

"Do be patient and stop interrupting me. A man in Connecticut makes his hens spend their nights this cold weather doing a caloric stunt to keep the engine of his motorcar from freezing."

"Goodness, that sounds dreadful. What does it mean, though?"

"This man from Connecticut found that the temperature of a setting hen is 102. Then he figured that two hens would be 204 Fahrenheit. Now every night he sticks two hens under the hood of his automobile and the engine turns over as sweetly as can be in the morning."

"It's a downright shame," clucked the other hen. "There should be a code or something to regulate it if there are any more letters left in the alphabet. The next thing you know, that man's wife will be using half a dozen hens for a fireless cooker when she goes to church on Sunday morning."

New Mexico Livestock Report

A decrease in the number and an increase in the value per head, of each species of livestock in New Mexico on farms January 1, 1935, compared with January 1, 1934, are shown by the annual inventory estimates of livestock on farms according to a report issued by Fred Daniels, Statistician, for the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The total value of all livestock in New Mexico on January 1, 1935, was $31,578,000, a decrease of 10 percent over the value of all livestock on January 1, 1934.

The total value of all mules and sheep was greater than a year ago in spite of a 5 percent decrease in mule numbers and a 11 percent decrease in sheep. The total value of all cattle was about 19 percent less than a year ago, due to a 27 percent reduction in numbers largely because of the government's purchases of drought cattle. The total numbers of swine showed a second sharp annual drop in numbers but the value per head showed a substantial increase in price.

Horses: A further decrease of 5 percent in horse numbers was again shown with 108,000 estimated on farms January 1, 1935 compared with 114,000 a year ago. The number of horses shipped out of the state during 1934 was possibly larger than the large number moved out in 1933. The value per head was $40 compared with $39 a year ago.

Mules: The number of mules on January 1, 1935, was 18,000, a decrease of 5 percent from the number a year ago. The demand for mules during the past year caused prices to increase to $66 per head on January 1, 1935, against $54 a year ago.

Cattle: The number of cattle on January 1, 1935, was 1,050,000, or 27 percent below the revised figures of January 1, 1934, or 1,445,000 head and 18 percent below the January 1, 1933, revised number of 1,280,000 head. The sharp decrease during the past year was due largely to heavy government purchases through cattle. The average price per head is $15.80 compared with $14.20 last year, and the total value $16,552,000 against $20,544,000 on January 1, 1934.

Sheep: The total number of sheep on January 1, 1935, was 2,460,000 head, a decrease of 57,000 head or about 11 percent from the number on hand January 1, 1934. Government purchases of about 300,000 old ewes assisted materially in reducing numbers and relieving many producers of aged sheep. This year the value per head was $3.80 per head and a total value of $9,356,000 compared with last year's value per head of $3.20 and value of $8,803,000.

Swine: The total number of all swine on January 1, 1935, was 34,000, a decrease of 42 percent from the January 1, 1934, number of 58,000. The total value of swine was $162,000 compared with $211,000 a year ago.

Descendants of Evangeline's Clan on Move

LIKE their ancestral Acadians, more than 150 years ago, most famed of whom was Evangeline, these trappers and their families are gathered, awaiting transportation away from the scenes of their livelihood. The circumstances, however, are quite different. Evangeline's clan was driven out of Canada by the British. The descendants of that band, pictured here were brought from their homes in southwest Louisiana to a 40,000-acre tract of marsh below New Orleans by a fur syndicate, as trappers. Only the intervention of a United States marshal and forty deputies averted a massacre when residents of the marsh, feeling themselves cheated of a livelihood, rose up in arms against the invaders and protested with weapons and fire. TO MY CHILD

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SOMETIME in years to come, when the strong sea of life is threatening, with you afraid, I hope that courage comes with thoughts of me. And you recall the hope that ever made. A green place in the desert of our lives. We have made much of little and been gay. When your own disillusionment arrives, Remember love that sweetened every day.

I wish I could build love into a wall So thick and high you never would be caught; In life's swift eddies. . . . If you hear a call From a far place, it will express this thought: There was no road too difficult to take; There was no task too hard for your dear sake.

WITTY KITTY

By NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

The girl chum says it is noticed that the guy who is so generous that he will give you the shirt off his back, never goes so far as to perform this act of self-sacrifice in public.

Fascinating Tunic Dress

The material and motif is this new tunic dress. The fabric is blue taffeta with white stripes. The suit is closely fitted and skirt, and cut with deep pleats, which are turned back to form a deep pocket. Really stunning is the wide collar which is made of self material on the bias and fringed at the ends. Three rows are used on the collar and the same ruffling is used on the navy blue straw hat. A velvet bow is caught in the neck and a velvet ribbon carelessly forms the belt. Navy blue was selected for bag and gloves, matching kid for the pumps.

JUST RIGHT FOR WEAR IN KITCHEN

PATTERN 9846

This "kitchen ensemble" would make a delightful present for some member of your family—that is, if you don't decide to keep it yourself, after it is finished. The apron, made especially to fit the frock, is cut amply full for protection, and boasts a convenient patch pocket and slenderizing half-belted waistline. The frock has a disarmingly demure ruffle to emphasize its nice square neckline, and cunning puffed sleeves to set off pretty arms. Vertical tucks at the waistline keep it trim, yet provide comfortable fullness in bodice and skirt. Both the apron and the frock are included in one pattern. Pattern 9846 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 4 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric and 3/4 yards contrasting. SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included. Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighth Street, New York.

REDDY FOX QUARRELS FOOLISHLY

AS REDDY FOX sat glaring up at Terror the Goshawk, whose arrival from the Far North had spoiled Reddy's hunting in the Green Forest, he grew angrier and angrier. He grew so angry that presently he walked over until he was almost under Terror the Goshawk. "What right have you down here in the Green Forest?" he snarled. "The same right you have, Reddy Fox," retorted Terror.

"Huhl!" Retorted Reddy Fox. "Talk is cheap."

have. You belong up in the Far North, while I live here all year round. Why don't you stay where you belong?" "Since when have you owned the Green Forest?" replied Terror. "I would have you to know, Reddy Fox, that I go where I please. I have found very good hunting here these last few days, and I think I shall stay the rest of the winter. What are you going to do about it?" That question was too much for Reddy Fox. If Terror had been a four-legged person like himself there might have been ways to make things most uncomfortable for him. As it was, there wasn't a single thing Reddy could do, and he knew it. "You're a great, big bully and coward," snarled Reddy. You know it is an easy matter to call people you hate bad names. Terror merely chuckled. It was a hateful chuckle and made Reddy an-

DAINTY DISHES

SOME time when entertaining one's friends at a dinner try this method of serving sweet potato:

Orange-Sweet Potato. Cook the sweet potatoes in their skins, peel, mash and season with butter, salt and white pepper. Prepare the halves of oranges that have been squeezed of their juice by removing all the white inner lining of the skins. Fill them with the seasoned potato and about twenty minutes before serving place them in the oven. When hot; a small piece of meringue is placed on top to be decorated with parsley used on the when serving.

Ozark Baked Potatoes. Cover a fresh potato with water and simmer until tender, adding salt toward the cooking. Strain the water and one quart of the broth. Cut the potato into small pieces and wash in a half cupful of water. Drain until tender, then add the meringue, bring to the boil, add a tablespoonful of butter, one cupful of sweet cream, add seasoning, pepper and serve. For each potato add one teaspoonful of chopped celery, a pinch of salt and a bit of meringue. Dash of cayenne pepper.

QUESTION BOX by ED WYNN, The Perfect

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a girl twenty-three years old and have lived all my life in the country, and I have just made up my mind to move to the city. I am a pretty good cook and that is why I am writing to you. What I want to know is: Do many city people "keep" cooks? Truly yours, MARMA LADE.

Answer: They do not. But most people engage another as soon as one leaves.

Dear Mr. Wynn: It isn't that I am opposed to a person playing cards for money, but I would like you to settle an argument between my wife and me. The question is, "Can an honest man play poker?" Sincerely, JACK O'DIAMONDS.

Answer: Of course he can, but he won't win.

Dear Mr. Wynn: My father says the silliest things. For instance, last night he said his bald head was just like heaven. Don't you think that is a silly thing for a man my father's age to say? Truly yours, VAZZLE EEN.

Answer: I would say instead of being silly your dad is rather bright. The reason your father compares a bald head to heaven is that he simply means: "There is no parting there."

Dear Mr. Wynn: I saw a man with both his hands bandaged and I asked him how it happened. He didn't answer me. I later found out the reason he didn't answer me was because he is deaf and dumb. I also heard his hands were bandaged because every joint in his fingers is broken. How do you account for an accident like that? Sincerely, DINAH MITT.

Answer: He is deaf and dumb, the of his fingers are simple; he most likely cracking jokes on his joints. Dear Mr. Wynn: I have never traveled and hear a lot about Pullman cars. What are they? Yours truly, OY TEX.

Answer: A Pullman port is a fellow who won't let the train, but insists on being off.

GEESE and DUCKS

Geese in the Shadow of the Pyramids.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

A N AMERICAN poet wrote: "Dark flying rime against the western glow it tells the sweep and loneliness of things"

The writer of those lines and other poets have drawn inspiration from the striking formations that especially characterize the movements of swans, geese and ducks.

That flying wedge or undulating line etched against the sunset sky or the orderly, swift-moving formation high overhead! Here is the symbol that inspires the imagination of even the casual observer, as it has the poets who have written of flying wild fowl through the ages.

Behind this aura of glamour and mystery lies the fascinating life story of the majestic wild swans, the wily geese, the hardy and adaptable ducks, and the fish-loving mergansers. They are a fairly compact and homogeneous group of birds, their only relatives of undoubted connection being the screamers of South America, large, goose-like, wading birds with unwebbed toes.

Geese and ducks are found all over the world wherever water exists, except on the oceans far from land.

Common to the order are a long neck, sometimes very long; short legs, webbed toes, and a bill covered with sensitive skin and provided inside with comblike structures known as lamellae, modified in the mergansers to sharp "teeth" for holding slippery fish.

The eggs are without markings, and the young, hatched covered with down, are able to find their own food very soon after they emerge from the egg.

The graceful, snow-white swans, sometimes five feet in length, make up the first of seven subfamilies into which are divided the North American members of the suborder. The other six are the geese, tree ducks, surface-feeding ducks, diving ducks, stiff-tailed ducks, and mergansers.

Swans Highly Esteemed.

Much that has been written about swans has been influenced by their aesthetic appeal. This is apt to distort the facts to their advantage, and it is just as well, because no other birds can provide the thrill that a flock of wild swans gives the nature lover. First in order and in size, they have a form too universally known to require description. The two North American species are so similar that they can be differentiated with certainty only by the character of their internal structure and by their very distinct voices.

The swans are perfect models of conjugal conduct. They mate for life and the sexes share the domestic responsibilities.

The downy young when first hatched are, at the "ugly ducklings" of popular belief, but lovely, little creatures, clothed in silky, golden down and without the exaggerated neck and huge paddlike feet of their parents. Very soon, however, these characteristics begin to appear and ugliness replaces their natal loveliness until the grace and beauty of maturity appear.

Fortunately, there is small if any possibility of the extermination of the whistling swan, and with careful conservation it may even be possible to perpetuate the trumpeter.

The goose family is well represented in North America, especially in the West, where in some localities six species may be seen on the same ground.

Their extraordinary migrations and the mystery of their breeding grounds intensify the interest that both sportsmen and naturalists take in these fine birds. Even yet, there are a few whose migratory routes are unknown, while the systematic status of some races and their relation to each other have still to be worked out. Much study in the field, especially at their nesting grounds, is required to establish these facts.

Geese, like swans, pair for life, and the young birds remain in the company of their parents for nearly a year after they are hatched.

Geese Are Smart Birds.

Endowed with keen intelligence and extreme wariness, they can be depended on to maintain a fair degree of abundance as long as adequate wintering grounds are afforded them. But above all, they, like swans, require freedom from molestation when they are at rest, so that a large measure of solitude and wide spaces are the only requirements for their perpetuation.

Geese usually have a lower rate of reproduction than ducks, as they require several years to attain maturity and the number of eggs laid is much smaller than with most species of ducks.

Whether by day or night, geese do a lot of calling while in flight; when migrating high overhead the clamor of their voices falling from the sky draws attention to the flock in arrowhead-formation, clearing the upper air. Species can be identified by their different voices. When feeding they are silent, only gabbling a little to each other in low tones. The first appearance of danger will bring a warning challenge from the sentinel and every head is erected while the danger is scrutinized.

Both geese and swans are noted for their longevity, the latter being among the Methuselahs of the bird world. There is actual record of a mute swan that lived seventy years, while rather uncertain report has attributed even a greater age to the birds.

Somewhat intermediate between ducks and geese are the tree ducks. They have only two representatives north of the Mexico-United States boundary, and neither of these penetrates much to the north of this line. Their name is misleading in our own territory, as here we seldom see them perching in trees and their nests are on the ground.

The great group of ducks is divided into two main sections, the surface-feeding and diving ducks. While these names actually afford a general basis of distinction, it does not follow that surface-feeders never dive for their food, nor that diving ducks never feed on the surface.

To separate the groups, look at the foot. In the diving ducks, the hind toe has a lobe, so that it resembles a little paddle. In the surface-feeding group it is not particularly specialized.

How to Identify Ducks.

If sportsmen wish to identify the ducks they shoot in all plumages, it is essential that they recognize the distinction between the two groups.

By the "hind-toe" formula, stiff-tailed ducks fall under the category of diving ducks, but in many features of structure, plumage, and life characters they are further removed from true ducks than are the mergansers. The sometimes pugnacious and somewhat ludicrous-looking ruddy duck is the sole representative of the stiff-tailed ducks in the United States and Canada, although a South American species, the masked duck, has been twice recorded in the eastern states as a straggler.

Mergansers, the last of the duck group, are ducks with a narrow, specialized bill, edged with saw teeth, which enable them to catch and devour good-sized fish. Their feet, though proportionately smaller, resemble those of the diving ducks in having a paddle-shaped hind toe.

Ducks, for the most part, are very different from swans and geese in their family habits. While they pair much like other birds and are not as a rule polygamous or polyandrous, the male in most species is not a constant husband, and abandons the female and all family cares as soon as incubation of the eggs is well under way. Stiff-tailed ducks are notable exceptions to this rule, and in some true ducks, like the elders, the male is not altogether indifferent to his family obligations.

Labrador Duck Is Extinct.

Mention should be made of the extinct Labrador duck, Camporhynchus labradorinus, the last verified record of which was a bird taken in 1875.

The passing of this species is a mystery which cannot be accounted for; even from the earliest days for which we have any record of the bird, it was a scarce species in the limited area of its range on the North Atlantic coast.

Frequenting the shoal water of the shallow bays, it could not have been in much demand for food and few were brought in to the markets. There is no record of its nesting, nor even, with any certainty, of its summer home. Although it was a diving duck, the peculiar shape of its bill suggests that it sifted its food in shallow water.

Of all the questions relating to wild fowl, the problem of their perpetuation is the most important. Every one naturally takes an interest in their conservation and wishes to see an increase in their numbers. But unfortunately there are two divergent schools at work, one that wishes to protect wild fowl from the viewpoint that they provide sport, and the opposite group that insists they be protected vigorously and all shooting be abolished.

For the good of the wild fowl of North America, it is essential that these different views be reconciled, and a concerted course of action that has the support of all parties is unquestionably the goal for which we must strive.

Tulip Has Won Popular Favor

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The tulip adapts itself so well to applique and quilting designs that it is made use of quite frequently. This combination, showing the entire potted plant, gained popularity immediately after it was released. Tulips in bloom always form a beautiful color scheme, and this tulip pot is also brilliant in prints and green applique. These stamped blocks are 18 inches, and twelve are required for a quilt about 70 by 97 inches. If you use a nine inch border and four inch strips between blocks. Strips and border widths can be changed to make a quilt any size.

Send 15c to our quilt department for one of these stamped blocks, No. 96-F, and the stamped applique pieces ready to be cut out. Work this up and see what a beautiful quilt can be made of this design. A set of six blocks will be sent for 75c, postpaid. ADDRESS, HOME CRAFT CO., DEPT. PERIOD OF PLAY SHOULD BE HELD AS CHILD'S RIGHT

By MARY G. MCCORMICK

Supervisor of Health Teaching, New York State Department of Education. A frequent mistake on the part of parents is to be too ambitious for the child. After a youngster has attended school for five or six hours he has a right to an hour or two of uninterrupted play. The period from the time he arrives home from school until his supper is served should be his own.

Unfortunately, many parents seize upon this pitifully small playtime to load the child with music lessons, dramatic lessons, dancing lessons and other kinds of lessons which, added to the time already spent in school, means that he works a longer day than most adults.

The result is that a child tends to become nervous and fretful. He gets insufficient physical exercise. He is deprived of sunshine and fresh air and his health suffers.

Do not load your child down with outside duties. His school work is enough. If you are ambitious for his future wait until he old enough to take a personal interest in his career before you begin to force one upon him. His childhood will be gone soon enough. He should not be robbed of it.

For their health's sake, let your children do the things they want to do, providing their activities do not encroach on the rights of others. There are more educational opportunities concealed in commonplace games than parents realize.

Fertilizer Helps Fish

Larger and more fish may be produced by using farm fertilizer in lake water. It is reported in connection with tests conducted in Wisconsin. The fish do not eat the phosphorus and lime contained in the fertilizer. The gain in fish, in size and in number, comes by the indirect route of grass, giving the fertilizer to the marine plants and then letting the fish eat the plants.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Knee-Action had Proved Popular

Approximately ninety per cent of the orders from Chevrolet dealers for the new 1935 Master De Luxe line of cars specify knee-action, which is offered this year as optional equipment on this series at $20 additional cost, according to information released in Detroit by William E. Holler, general sales manager of Chevrolet Motor Company.

"Not only are the advance orders from dealers for delivery from the factory showing this high percentage of knee-action cars specified," said Mr. Holler, "but orders for retail delivery to customers are showing approximately the same ratio."

"These advance orders and projections from our dealers bear out the statement, made when we announced knee-action as optional equipment on the Master De Luxe series earlier in January, that knee-action had proved so popular on our cars during 1934, and was considered such an important feature by the public, that nearly all Master De Luxe sales in 1935 would be cars with knee-action."

"Public acceptance of both lines of Chevrolets is more enthusiastic than ever before, according to telegraphic reports from hundreds of our larger dealers."

"This fact was quite apparent to visitors in the Chevrolet exhibit at the New York and Detroit automobile shows. Three things registered themselves with auto show guests—first, the new beauty of exterior appearance, together with the wealth of comfort and convenience features of the new Master De Luxe; second, the spirit of the new Standard; third, that despite the new features and obvious high quality of both new Chevrolets, 1935 prices are at the same level as 1934 on the Master De Luxe and lower on the Standard.
