Lincoln, the Legislator

Lincoln in 1848

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON FEBRUARY 12, 1833, the Illinois legislature, in session in the little town of Vandalia, in the last-minute rush of finishing up its work before adjourning. That day one of its members was twenty-six years old, but it is doubtful if he paid much attention to the anniversary. Nor is it likely that his fellow-legislators, if indeed they knew about it, took the trouble to congratulate him and wish him "many happy returns of the day." For he was just an obscure member of the lower house from Sangamon county.

He had been an honest but unsuccessful storekeeper in the little hamlet of New Salem and a captain of volunteers in the Black Hawk war. But he had won no particular distinction in that unimportant conflict, nor had his brief military career helped him much politically. An unsuccessful candidate for the legislature in the autumn of 1832, he had split rails and done various other odd jobs to make a living while studying law by himself. Chosen postmaster of New Salem, he had been successful in his second attempt to win a seat in the general assembly, but during the session now coming to a close he had done nothing to single him out among his fellow men as a "comer."

They knew him as a droll fellow who could set a group off into a gale of laughter with one of his funny stories, told in his high-pitched, singsong, nasal voice. Yes, Abe Lincoln was "good company" but there was no reason to believe that he would ever become famous. So the fact that February 12 was his birthday didn't mean a thing to the men who sat beside him in a room in the little two-story brick building in Vandalia—the capital of the sovereign state of Illinois. If they could have looked into the future and seen how that date was observed in every part of the United States, how their eyes would have bulged with surprise! Can't you hear them exclaiming: "In honor of Abe Lincoln? Why, 'tain't possible, no how!"

So the "celebration" of Lincoln's birthday a hundred years ago was no celebration at all, for the very good reason that no one, not even the man himself, considered it of any importance. But it is worthy of remembrance for the reason that his biographer, Albert J. Beveridge, has pointed out in this paragraph from his "Abraham Lincoln, 1809-1858" (Houghton Mifflin company): "Finally, by the dim light of candles, the general assembly finished its work and, sometime before midnight, February 13, 1833, adjourned sine die. His first legislative experience thus ended. Lincoln went back to New Salem and again took up his surveying and handling of the scanty mail. The sum of his sojourn in Vandalia had been the making of friends, lessons in legislative procedure and manipulation, and the acquiring of basic procedure and constitutional principles. He had heard great questions discussed by able and informed men. He had met cultivated women, too, and, in short, had visited a new world. Small wonder that, when he reached New Salem, he plunged into study with such abandon that his health suffered and his friends thought him mentally affected. Henceforth the log-cabin hamlet on the Sangamon held little or nothing that was attractive to the aspiring young Lincoln."

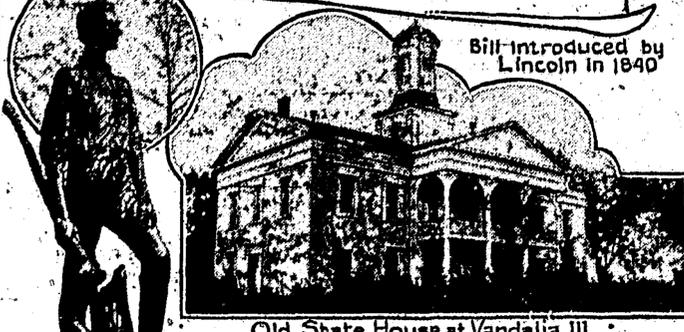

No perhaps it is not too much to say that the greatness that was to be Abraham Lincoln's dates from that February day, a hundred years ago, when he turned his back on the scene of his first appearance on the stage of public affairs. Neither the scene nor his appearance upon it were especially impressive. Beveridge has given us an excellent description of both. He writes:

"Upon the west bluff of the Knakaakia river, sixty feet above high water, stood in 1834, perhaps a hundred buildings. All but two were of wood, some of them frame structures, but most of them log cabins. A little frame Presbyterian church house, without a steeple, nestled on a side street, while a still smaller building served for all other religious denominations as well as for school purposes and public gatherings. . . . Five or six of the bigger houses were taverns or boarding places, two of them would accommodate thirty or forty persons, though they were not entirely finished."

"About eight hundred people, including children, lived in the town, and the adjacent country was scantily settled; but marriages were frequent. For the most part the surrounding land was heavily timbered, but to the north and west rolling prairies stretched into the horizon. The river bottoms were covered thickly with great trees, vines and all manner of rank vegetation; and from this valley came at the seasonable time clouds of mosquitoes."

"The streets of the village were eighty feet in width, deep with mud or dust, according to the weather. There were no sidewalks. Two main roads ran through the place, one the National road, scarcely opened as yet in this section, from Washington seven hundred and eighty-one miles distant to St. Louis eighty-two miles to the southwest. Mails from Philadelphia and other eastern cities were between two and three weeks on the way."

Resolved, that the Committee on Education be instructed to enquire into the expediency of providing by law for the education of the blind and deaf, and that resolutions be recommended for the purpose.

Bill introduced by Lincoln in 1840

Old State House at Vandalia, Ill.

The Rail-Splitter by Charles Mulligan

Gov. Joseph Duncan

"Such was Vandalia when on a winter day late in November, 1834, the regular stage coach was driven into the capital of Illinois. Among the passengers was Abraham Lincoln, one of the newly elected representatives from Sangamon county."

"He wore a new suit which, made by a tailor in Springfield, had cost him sixty dollars. Lincoln had borrowed from Coleman Smoot two hundred dollars in order properly to equip himself and pay his expenses while away from New Salem on his first legislative adventure. The loan was, whimsically declared Lincoln when asking Smoot for the money, a kind of penalty upon Smoot for having voted for him. He was better attired and had more clothes than ever before in his life."

During this session Lincoln played a very small part and such measures as he voted upon had comparatively little historical significance. He was appointed to one minor standing committee and later to two special committees. The first bill he introduced, providing for a private toll-bridge across Salt creek in Sangamon county, was passed promptly. But when he branched out into larger fields of legislation he was not so successful.

The disposal of public lands belonging to the United States was an important question at that time. On January 10, 1835, Lincoln offered a resolution "that our senators be instructed and our representatives requested to use their whole influence in the congress of the United States to procure the passage of a law relative to the public lands, by the operation of which the state of Illinois would be entitled to receive annually a sum of money not less in amount than 20 per cent upon the amount annually paid into the treasury of the United States, for public lands lying within the limits of the said state of Illinois." This resolution was laid on the table, without roll-call, while it peacefully expired.

Even more important than the public land question was the problem of the National bank, the main issue in the presidential campaign of 1832 in which Andrew Jackson was re-elected. A resolution, supporting Jackson's stand on this question, was introduced in the Illinois legislature in January, 1835, and precipitated a vigorous dispute. Says Beveridge: ". . . For nearly three weeks Lincoln heard what was said on all phases of the National bank and the currency; but it does not appear that he took part in the controversy."

But if Lincoln played an insignificant role during his first legislative experience, he was to play an active and conspicuous part in the special session of the legislature which Gov. Joseph Duncan called the following December. (This was the same Joseph Duncan who, as one of Maj. George Croghan's "boy lieutenants," had won a vote of thanks from congress for their heroism at the defense of Fort Stephenson during the War of 1812.) During this session the state was reappointed, the necessary legislation for starting work on the Illinois and Michigan canal was passed, as were the first of the flood bills providing for other internal improvements which rose to such a high tide in the next legislature and played no small part in the panic of 1837.

But more important, as regards Lincoln's career, was the fact that during this time he was helping pave the way for removing the capital to Springfield, an incident which brought him his first real prominence. Re-elected to the legislature in 1836, at its opening session in December he became the Whig floor leader and was recognized on all hands as a clever parliamentary tactician and likely to become the manager in the house. . . . His supreme purpose now was to achieve the removal of the capital to Springfield and upon the achievement of that design he concentrated every faculty during the next three months."

In 1833 the legislature had authorized a referendum vote by the people on the question of selecting a permanent site for the capital but no majority was given for any one location. The leaders in the voting were Allen, Vandalia, Springfield, Jacksonville and Peoria, in the state named. The citizens of Vandalia didn't want to lose the capital so they raised $10,000 and hopefully began to build a new state house to replace the one in which Lincoln had first served as a legislator and which was now becoming sadly dilapidated. They little realized how the manipulations of some very clever politicians, including lanky Abe Lincoln, were to doom them to disappointment.

By the reapportionment act of 1835 Sangamon county had seven representatives and two senators, the largest delegation in the legislature. Because of the height of all these men (the average was well over six feet) they were called the "Long Nine." The senators were Job Fletcher and Archer Herndon and the representatives were Abraham Lincoln, John Dawson, Dan Ryan, Ninian W. Edwards (son of a former governor), William F. Elkin, R. L. Wilson, and Andrew McCormick. They voted solidly together on all questions and held out the bait of such an important block of votes to backers of the internal improvements schemes in return for support of the new field as the new capital.

"Although Lincoln and the Springfield partisans, of whom he was in command, strove to delay final action on the location of the capital until the passage of the Internal Improvements bill, they could not prevent frequent consideration of that irritating and dangerous subject," says Beveridge. "Sometimes they were on the very edge of defeat, twice they were actually beaten. His colleagues were despondent, hopeless; but Lincoln never despaired. In the darkest hours he called the Long Nine to his room in the tavern, heartened them and devised plans for victory."

That victory came on February 23, 1837, a few days before adjournment, after three months of management, bargaining and intrigue, after the passage of the Internal Improvements bill, its clusters of imprudent building, imprudent appropriations of cash to impudently corrupt the general assembly in joint session at Springfield as the permanent site of the new capital. . . . The husbandry of the Long Nine had yielded its harvest."

After waging their successful fight to win the capital for their home county, Lincoln and the other members of the Long Nine went to Springfield in triumph. He was resolved to hang out his shingle as a lawyer there, the very day after his victory for Springfield was obtained from the Supreme court in Vandalia. Certificate of admission to the bar of Illinois was formally enrolled as an attorney.

On April 15, 1837, the Sangamon Journal tried a new professional card in its advertising columns—"J. T. Stuart & A. Lincoln, Attorneys and Counsellors at Law, will practice, etc., in the Courts of this Judicial Circuit." On the 4th Hoffman's Row, upstairs, Springfield, twenty-eight years later, to a day, the columns of this newspaper would appear with heavy borders in mourning for one of these "Attorneys and Counsellors at Law," now the Marquis de Lafayette.

"Here, then, was Lincoln, but twenty years old, leader of his party in the legislature, winner of the fight for the field as the state capital, most talked of, liked of all the Whigs of Sangamon county, now partner of one of the ablest lawyers in the state and the foremost Whig in the state. Albert Beveridge—"Astounding progress yesterday pottering about New Salem in only with little things and crude surroundings, heavily in debt and with dim prospects of advancement; today starting on the high road of ambition and achievement!"

This course is offered to seniors in the two departments in recognition of the need for specially trained men with a working knowledge of the problems of soil erosion.

The pressure system of producing wells of limited production, as they are found successful in many of the oil-producing districts, after successful experiments in Oklahoma, will be tried out in the San Juan Basin oil field according to an announcement made by Harry Phillips and Frank G. Gandy, who own a small shallow oil well near Aztec, N. M.

Joe Lucero has begun his eighth year as chief outlaw lawyer of Dona Ana county, despite the fact that he has never succeeded himself only once. He was appointed to the office by the voters in 1927, and has since been re-elected. The name Lucero is symbolical of "the law" in the county.

W. G. Carhart, who for the last several years has been pathologist at the state veterans' facility near Prescott, has received tentative orders which will mean his transfer to Phoenix, Minn., where he will take charge of the same department. Dr. Carhart is one of the most widely known pathologists in the southwest. During his time of service at this facility he has filled various types of positions other than his regular duties. During the last few months he has been in charge of the X-ray laboratory.

Individual Gold Mining

Offers Poor Prospects
The rush to the abandoned gold mines and placer workings of the West has been one of the tragedies of the present unemployment situation and thousands of inexperienced individuals, lured on by rumored and exaggerated reports of wealth attained in gold mining, have gone into the hills seeking gold and finding only disappointment.

Experienced miners, thrown out of work in the non-precious metal mines, have in some instances gone to work on their own, but these individuals have sought abandoned mines or have gone into the hills with pick and shovel to prospect. These men know what they are about and have some chance of success. They work in abandoned mines with the consent of the owners on a royalty or share and share basis.

The bureau of mines, wishing to remove as much of the false hope of the prospective miner as possible, has issued bulletins giving information on the subject of placer mining and pointing out the difficulties to be encountered. Ways of making a living by a combination of skill and hard work are outlined but the hopes of an Eldorado are painted in their true colors.

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, his health broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, a neighbor. There is at once a mutual attraction, but Prudence decides to maintain a cool attitude toward him. She suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway tries to buy Prue's timber, but she dislikes him and contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. David comes to the farm. A clown appears, advertising a circus in a nearby town. Prue accompanies Rod and team to the show. While they are watching the parade, Clint, an old clown, is accidentally killed. He was the grandfather of Milly Gooch, one of the circus riders. Rod became friendly with Milly when she lived on Prosperity Farm. Calloway intimidates available laborers so that they cannot be hired to cut the timber for Rodney Gerard. Milly Gooch breaks her engagement to Calloway; he believes Rod was the cause and has since been his enemy. After the accident to Clint, Rod calls on Milly to see if he can be of any help.

"It's so fine, I'll tuck it in here." She thrust it under her low-cut bodice.

"What will you do this winter, Milly?"

"Hollywood. Two big shots from a traveling talkie studio saw me ride a month ago. And what do you think? Mother Puffer and old 'whatta' mean it? Si came to see me this afternoon! She wants I should spend Christmas with them. What say, Roddy?"

"If you visit the Puffers you may run into Len Calloway."

"What if I do? I'll give him a little whipl for old times' sake. You don't think I'm afraid of that big noise, do you? I've traveled some since I sent you that S O B."

"And traveled straight, Milly?"

She met his eyes squarely. "Sure thing. Didn't I promise? I'm off men, they're just a game, 'wayway."

"Time for your act, Milly."

As the maid spoke behind them, a groan in rose-color velvet with silver trimming led a milk-white horse bridled with rhinestones to the tent.

Milly caught Rodney's hands and looked up at him. "I'll be good. I promised you, didn't I? There's only one person who could tempt me not to be, and he—doesn't know I'm on earth. He—"

"A hiss. A flash cut off the word."

"What was that?"

"Don't be so jumpy, Roddy. If you traveled with this show you'd get used to that sound. Flashlight. Publicity, of course. Some reporter writing up the show wants a picture." A whistle blew. "That's for me. I'd better get going." Bye-bye, Roddy. Don't—don't send me any more money—ever—I won't need it—now that I've gone Hollywood. Perhaps you'll be at High Ledges at Christmas—If Miss Schuyler stays."

What had she meant by that, Gerard wondered; as his eyes followed her in her rose-color tulle and glistening satin across the yard. Was his feeling for Prue so evident?

One foot on the step of his car, Gerard stopped and stared. Had a red roadster shot out of the parking place just ahead, or was Len Calloway so much on his mind that he had imagined it?

Prudence pulled at the wire netting at one side of the poultry yard.

"Damn!" she gritted between her teeth, as the elusive thing wriggled away from her. "Mr. Si, I'm not so good as I thought. Give me a hand, will you?"

Puffer seized the netting, and pulled. "Grand! Hold it a minute till I get this trap in; two more and it's done. These peaky hens got out yesterday and scratched in my garden border. There! I'd like to see them get through that!"

"The peaky hens ain't the only things that escaped yesterday. Hear 'bout the convict who dug himself out of prison?"

"Jane Mack heard the announcement on the radio and told me. She's all excited about it. He isn't likely to come to this small town, is he?"

"Gorry-me, he'd be running his head into a noose if he did." Puffer shook the wire netting. "That's a good job you've done. And you've done another good job. Your brother is so much better."

Prudence sprang to her feet. Her eyes shone; her face was radiant.

"Then you've noticed it, too, Mr. Si? It isn't just my imagination?"

"Sure, I've noticed it. So? Mother, 'whatta' mean is, his color is better, his voice is stronger, an' he moves quicker. Comin' to live in the country is jest settin' David on his feet. Rod's noticed it, too."

"Oh, he has! I haven't seen Mr. Gerard lately so I didn't know. Prudence avoided Puffer's eyes as she remembered the many times of late that she had led to the barn loft so that she would not see Rodney Gerard when he called.

"Sure-me, you haven't seen him? Sure Jim Armstrong?"

"No, Dave has, but—but I was out when he called."

"Well, of course, Rod was away by the city most three weeks trying to get some firms to sign up for the timber you and him are goin' to cut. Since he come back he's been terrible busy cruising the woods. Rod isn't used to havin' difficulty gettin' what he wants; things have always come easy for him. This lumber business 'pears to be gettin' on his nerves. Jim was tellin' me this mornin' that Rod 'snapped at every one who come near him yesterday. Perhaps it's that newspaper picture of him and Milly Gooch holdin' hands in front of her tent at the circus that come out in the local paper the day after the show was here that got him mad. Well, if here he isn't now! What you gum-shoosin' round like that for, Roddy?"

Prudence was furious at her own start of surprise. Had Rodney Gerard seen it? He did look troubled. There were lines between his nose and mouth she never had seen before; he had lost some of his bronze. His eyes seemed deeper and darker and bluer in contrast.

"Well, will I pass? Perhaps you weren't sizing me up, perhaps you were just wondering how it happened that I had caught you, Prue of Prosperity farm."

"Don't bite, Rod." Si Puffer flung himself into the breach. "Now that you've got company, Miss Prue, I'll go an' chop some wood."

He moved away with surprising quickness.

"Mr. Si!" Prudence started after him, but Gerard caught her arm and held it.

"You're not going until you tell me why you have been dodging me."

"I dodgin'! How absurd!"

"Is it? Drop that hammer. It makes you look bloodthirsty." As she still clutched the tool, he loosened her fingers until it dropped to the ground.

"That's better. I want to talk to you before Armstrong and Jean get here. Have you seen that infernal picture?"

"Picture?" Prue echoed the word with breezy indifference.

"Don't bluff. You know perfectly well that I'm referring to that fool snapshot of Milly Gooch and me at the circus."

"Oh, that! Really, I'm not interested."

"Look here, you've got to be interested. I'm willing to bet my roadster that Calloway had a hand in that. It would be like his methods—"

"Don't abuse Len Calloway. It would be disloyal for me to listen because—"

Prudence hoped that her eyes and voice were as maddeningly provocative as she intended them to be—"because, you see, I've decided to have him cut my timber."

"WHAT?"

Never had she seen eyes blaze as Rodney Gerard's blazed in his white face. She remembered what Si had said about his mood the last week. She shouldn't have tried to torment him—but hadn't that hateful picture hurt her, too? He caught her by the shoulders.

"You didn't mean that, Prue, about letting Calloway cut for you."

"Of course I meant it. The more I think of it the more I go bullsh on the idea. I'm beginning to like Len very much. He's so forceful, so—"

"Forceful!" For a pulsing instant Rodney Gerard hesitated, then he caught her in his arms. "Forceful!" He crushed his mouth, hard, ardent, upon hers. "If that's what you like—Gorgeous—" He kissed her again!

Prudence wrenched herself free. Every pulse in her body was throbbing unbearably. How had he dared! Was that the way he kissed the circus rider? She dragged her voice back.

"Don't ever speak to me again! Ever! Do you think I'll let you cut my timber now? Suppose Len Calloway does cheat me in money, at least I shall be safe with him."

"Prue! You can't do it! You know what you were doing when you looked at me like that. You're no child. Be a sport. You deliberately smashed my control, and now you make me pay for letting myself go. Well, I'll take my medicine, I will keep away until you want me, I'll never kiss you again until you ask me to, to—"

"I ask you? That's the funniest thing I ever heard."

"All right, it's the funniest thing you ever heard. But the promise stands, I—"

"Hi! Rod!"

The hall came from the garden. Prudence dashed toward the gate and collided with a big, spectacled man, with heart warming eyes. He smiled.

"Miss Schuyler, isn't it? I would recognize you anywhere from Jean's description. I'm Jim Armstrong, and I am happy to report that you have a nice little bunch of money in your wood lot."

Prudence extended an eager hand. "Have I really? I'm so glad you've come. Now I can learn a lot about trees. Will you take me on as a pupil?"

From the corner of her eye Prue noted with satisfaction the fact of Rodney Gerard's jaw. She would show him that he couldn't kiss her after he had been holding Milly Gooch's hands.

Jim Armstrong laughed. "Sure I'll take you along if Rod says the word. He's my boss. I'm a whale of a teacher. Rod said you had a plan of your wood lot, The Hundreds, Miss Schuyler. May I see it?"

"Of course. It's in my shop. I'll bring it to the living room."

Prudence was conscious of Gerard watching her as a few moments later she cleared a place on her brother's desk and spread out the blueprint. Jean danced in from the kitchen, her hands full of cookies.

She crossed the room to speak to David Schuyler seated in the wing chair. As Armstrong joined them, Rodney Gerard detained Prudence at the desk.

"Wait a minute! Look here, Prue, you didn't mean what you said about letting Calloway cut that timber. You mustn't do it."

The sternness of his voice sent tingles through her veins, but she kept her lids provokingly lowered.

"I can transact my own business, thank you. When I need help I shall appeal to Mr. Armstrong. He impresses me as being such a reliable, self-controlled person."

"And I'm not. I get you. All right, let me cut your timber and you will have no fault to find with me again—ever—I'll be the original ice man."

He turned on his heel.

As the outer door closed on Armstrong and Gerard, Prudence crossed to the fireplace and head on her hands resting on the mantel looked unseeingly down at the red coals.

"Is Armstrong an old friend, Prue?" her brother asked.

His tone brought the color to her face. "No, I've never seen him before today. Why?"

"You seemed to twinkle, twinkle with excitement when you spoke to him."

She dropped to the floor cushion beside his chair. "Humorous, aren't you? Perhaps I did rather overdo the welcome-to-our-city act, Dave, but—"

"What do you want?"

"Same old request. I want the contract to cut your timber."

"Same old answer?" Prudence mimicked his diction to an infection. "I have made arrangements with Gerard to cut it."

"Gerard again. Do you still think he is serious about this woodsman stuff? He—well, you saw that circus rider who calls herself Mademoiselle Millee, the day the old clown passed out. Her right name is Milly Gooch. She was engaged to me. Threw me over for Gerard—and he—"

"That's a lie like some of the other statements you have made, Calloway." Her tone lashed his color to dark red, hardened his eyes.

"Oh, it is! See this?"

He held out an envelope. Involuntarily she read the address. Mr. Rodney Gerard.

"Get that? Now listen." He pulled out a card. "And get this:

"Dear Roddy—

"Thanks for the check. Don't mail it again. Bring it as usual. I've kept my promise. Nobody knows."

Milly."

"I found that on the floor near Gerard's desk. Now will you let me handle your timber?"

Furious with herself that she had stood like a lump of putty and listened to the note, an unbearable realization that it confirmed her suspicions of Rodney Gerard's philandering roughened the voice in which Prudence scoffed:

"You must be the original it-at-first-you-don't-succeed-try-try-again lad. But this time you have thrown sand in the machinery. It won't work. Rodney Gerard and I will get that timber out."

Calloway's eyes burned red.

"You and Rodney Gerard! That's a joke. Try to get men to cut. Just try, that's all. I suppose you are trusting to your partner for that?"

Prudence swallowed a nervous chuckle. "You have guessed it. I am trusting to my partner to engage the men to cut. Good morning."

He looked like a man who was still dazed from a body blow as he departed. Once his lips moved, but Prue banged the door behind him before he could speak.

She leaned against it. Had Calloway found that note of Milly Gooch's in Rodney Gerard's room? "Don't mail it again." Apparently there had been other checks. Why hadn't she asked the man who he had been snooping at High Ledges? Not that she cared who wrote to Rodney Gerard or what he did with his money. Mrs. Walt had been right. Her butterfly brother did sit from flower to flower. He had thought that she—Prudence Schuyler—would allow—

A sob of fury shook her. She brushed her hand savagely across her lips.

"It's So Fine, I'll Tuck It In Here."

"But it was done for Gerard's benefit, wasn't it? Like him a lot, don't you?"

"Like him! No. He leaves me cold."

"What have you against him?"

"You said yourself that he—he knew that circus clown, Dave."

"If I had any suspicion of him then, I haven't now. I think him one of the finest, cleanest, straightest, most likable men I ever met, and you will admit that I have had some experience."

"That's what we thought about Julie's husband before they were married."

"I never thought that. He was irresistible and charming but—he had a bad eye. I tried to make Julie understand, but she wouldn't listen. I never have bared my heart to you before, Prue; never will again. I am doing it now to beg you to listen to your

Brazilian Catfish Amuse Visitors to Aquarium; Suspend Selves by Suction

The Brazilian catfishes are the ed-media of the aquarium and provide more fun for the money than any other fish, says the Detroit News. They are becoming increasingly popular for a more utilitarian purpose, namely, that of scavengers. The corydoras are very hardy, and they work incessantly at their scavenging job.

Some varieties attach themselves by suction of their mouths to the sides of the tank and hang vertically for hours. Though they like to prowl along the plants, they do not uproot them.

Many persons, recalling native catfish, are surprised to learn of the coloration of some of the South American species. Some of them are marked with metallic blue, spots of black, or dark brown or lateral stripes.

One interesting species is Octocipus vittatus, which comes from Brazil. It is about an inch and a half long and has a habit of suspending itself for long periods at a time.

The catfish imported from South America are not to be confused with native catfish, which grow to a huge size. The catfish from South America average about two inches, although some species attain a somewhat larger size.

A King Was Cold

The judge's ermine and the mayor's fur collar are relics of the times when the temperatures of law courts and banqueting halls in England made them not an ornament but a necessity. Even at coronations it was hopeless to try to warm the Abbey, so the king and his august subjects were warmed, instead, and modern sovereigns have ceased to remember how chilly their ancestors felt when they in turn stood under the same heavy fur robes. So cold were the homes of England, that those who could afford it even slept in furs, and an old account book mentions the purchase of 17 skins to make a nightgown for Queen Elizabeth.

POULTRY

POULTRY LEUCOSIS "CURES" UNCERTAIN

Money Spent on Remedies Is Not Good Judgment.

By Dr. Frank Thorn, Jr., Associate in Animal Pathology, University of Illinois.—WNP Service.

Buying so-called remedies to rid their flocks of leucosis disease, which includes such ailments as range paralysis, big liver disease, white eye, neuritis and leucemia, is likely to prove a waste of money for poultrymen. As yet there is no known cure for the malady.

Although comparatively new in this state, leucosis is apparently spreading throughout many flocks and threatens to become a serious poultry problem. All breeds of chickens appear to be susceptible to the disease. It affects both sexes alike and usually occurs between the ages of three and twelve months.

In spite of the fact that birds contracting leucosis cannot be cured, research investigations indicate that the disease can be controlled. If poultrymen will carry out five more or less preventive measures, it is said. These include rigid culling to detect leucosis in the early stages of the disease, disposing of all diseased birds by killing and burning, buying hatching eggs, new breeding stock or baby chicks only from disease-free flocks and by following strict hygiene and sanitary practices. Should a poultryman believe that his flock may be infected with leucosis, immediate diagnosis can be made by a local veterinarian.

"Symptoms of the disease are variable and depend largely upon the tissues affected. When the blood-forming organs are involved, general weakness and varying degrees of anemia and diarrhea are common symptoms. The birds are likely to become poor in flesh.

Where the nerve type of disease is present, the chickens may become lame in one or both legs and the wings become droopy. These symptoms, too, will vary according to the location and degree of the tissue infection. When the brain is affected, odd head movements may be noted.

The eye type of infection is characterized by a loss of pigment in the iris, followed by a constriction of the pupil, and eventually impaired vision and blindness. Both eyes are involved as a rule, or become so during the early stages of the disease. Leucosis, however, should not be confused with tuberculosis, fowl typhoid, paratuberculosis or bacterial poisoning.

"Dear Roddy—

"Thanks for the check. Don't mail it again. Bring it as usual. I've kept my promise. Nobody knows."

Breeder Toms Should Be Selected With Much Care

Breeders of turkeys should buy toms for next spring's breeding pens early; for by so doing one has the benefit of first choice. To wait until breeding time means that a less desirable male will be the father of next year's turkey stock with a consequent increase in No. 2 birds, lower prices, and less profit from next year's operations.

If there is a flaw in the turkey breeder's make-up, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer, it is his fancy to fine feathers—rathbaw tails and spots are common words in his vocabulary. And while it is true one might as well feed beautiful plumage as well as gray and chocolate colored tails, good color is much less important in breeding stock than vigor; for without vigor in the breeding stock the breeder is headed for the "rocks." One thing to bear in mind, however, is the fact that good color in a turkey is evidence that her ancestors have had the attention of a good breeder and that vigor is more likely to be present than in a bird of poor coloring.

Makeup of a Good Hen

A good hen should have a well developed heart girth, and the ribs should be well sprung and wide apart. She should be deep from the top to the back to the under side of the breast. The breast bone should be long, extending well to the front of the body and well to the rear. The back should be wide and long, and the hips wide apart. The head should be short and square, with prominent eyes. There should be good distance from the breast bones to the pelvic bones. The shanks of a good hen are well bleached out.

Winter Sunshine Needed

We cannot ignore the need of poultry for winter sunshine. It is well known that ultra-violet rays are a powerful factor in increasing egg production, hatchability, and fertility, as well as in maintaining healthful conditions. Ultra-violet rays promote bone and body growth, and build vitamin D. During the winter months, when poultry is confined, reliable glass substitutes bring these rays indoors, whereas ordinary glass and soiled cloth curtains bar them.—Successful Farming.

Should Flock Be Housed?

Good housing is better for poultry than poor range (small lots, ground infected with disease and parasites); housed birds must have cod-liver oil or equivalent; range birds outlay confined birds; losses from epidemic diseases are about the same in both groups, although the range group is generally healthier; a colder sun yard or wire sun porch is a good substitute for free range in the case of large flocks. Those are results of Ohio experiment station tests.

DO NOT COOK CHEESE

"Cheese should not be cooked," Doris W. McCray says, in Hygeia Magazine, in discussing the acceptance of cheese by the American Medical Association's committee on foods. "It may be melted in a sauce or may be added grated, after the food is removed from the fire. Too high temperature or too long cooking causes the fat to melt and drop out of cheese, leaving the toughened mass of protein, which is stringy and rubbery."

Doctors Know!

and they use Liquid laxatives

You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel. A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of safe and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help—and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without aid.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit. It relieves a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset.

To relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. The druggist has it.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HORNS THAT ARE REALLY NOT HORNS

"IF YOU are so fond of the cold, I don't see what you leave the far North at all for," said Peter Rabbit to Snowflake the Snow Bunting.

"Because, Peter," replied Snowflake, twittering merrily, "like everybody else I have to eat in order to live. When you see me down here you may know that the snow up North is so deep that it has covered all the seeds. I hope I will not have to go any farther south than this, but if some morning you wake up and find the snow so deep that all the seeds are buried, don't expect to find me."

"That's what I'd call good, sound common sense," said another voice, and a bird very near Snowflake's size, and who at first glance seemed to be dressed almost wholly in soft chocolate brown, alighted on the snow and began to run around in search of seeds. It was Wanderer the Horned Lark. Peter had known him ever since his first winter, yet did not feel really acquainted, for Wanderer seldom stayed long enough for a real acquaintance.

Now, as Wanderer reached up to pick seeds from a weed top, Peter had a good look at him. The first thing he noticed was what looked like two little horns above and behind the eyes. It is from these that Wanderer gets the name of Horned Lark. Of course, they are not really horns at all, but little tufts of black feathers. His forehead, a line over each eye, and his throat were yellow. There was a black mark from each corner of his bill curving downward and almost joining a black crescent shaped band across the breast. Beneath this he was solid white with dusty spots showing here and there. His back was brown in places, having almost a pinkish tinge.

His tail was black, showing a little white along the edges when he flew. Altogether he was a handsome little fellow.

"Do all your family have those funny little horns?" asked Peter.

"No," replied Wanderer promptly, "Mrs. Lark does not have them."

"I think they are very becoming," said Peter, politely.

"Thank you," replied Wanderer, "I am inclined to agree with you."

Just then Peter discovered something that he hadn't noticed before. "My goodness," he exclaimed, "what a long claw you have on each hind foot!"

It was true. Each hind claw was about twice as long as any other claw. Peter couldn't see any special use for these, and was just about to ask more about them when Wanderer suddenly spied a flock of his relatives some distance away and flew over to join them. Probably this saved him some embarrassment, for it was doubtful if he himself knew why Old Mother Nature had given him those long hind claws. © T. W. Burgess—WNU Service.

The House Awakes!

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE house awakes with Dickie, whose bare feet. Come pattering across the sunny hall, And then the other children's voices - fall Across the quiet rooms; and 'on our street A dozen houses, filled with children, rise And dust the sleep out of their drowsy eyes.

When off to school the happy children go, The house sinks in a sleep as deep as Death, And does not wake till the returning breath Of children make its staring windows glow. And down our street a dozen houses shout, And wake to happiness when school is out!

Jersey and Lace

a man or woman who had lost reputation, honor, dignity, would be ostracized, regardless of how much of the world's goods remained with them.

The western slogan that "money is power," and the penchant for winking an eye where an offender has that power, is important not only in such matters as discredited officials and the absconding rich. It is significant all the way down the line to the daily actions of average people. There is that emphasis on getting what one wants, without too much thought on how one gets it. In social as well as business matters, women are guilty of little tricks to attain their ends, so they undoubtedly "lose face," but they seem indifferent to this as long as their end is attained.

I am not promoting the idea of suicide for lost dignity. But I believe our standards of life would be very much improved by placing more value on what in the East is called "face" and less on getting the things we want.

Steamships Since 1784 Steamships practically date from 1784, although Fulton is credited with the first recognized navigation in 1807, or 23 years later. The actual inventor of the steamboat was John Fitch, who put a boat on the Delaware river.

Through A WOMAN'S EYES

by JEAN NEWTON

MORE EMPHASIS ON FACE

BECAUSE he shared responsibility for the emperor's party taking a week's rest in their trip through a city which received a royal visit, a police inspector in Japan attempted to commit suicide.

Death was preferable to the disgrace that would descend upon the unfortunate blunderer and his family and all his relatives. For by his mistake this man had "lost face." And in Japan to lose face is a far worse thing than to lose material possessions.

In China, too, it is a not uncommon occurrence for people to take their own lives for reasons of far less importance than causing the car of the emperor to take a wrong turn. However, they are mistakes which cause the person to lose face—that is the important thing. To lose face is to lose dignity and the respect of others. And what then, say these sons of an ancient culture, is there left?

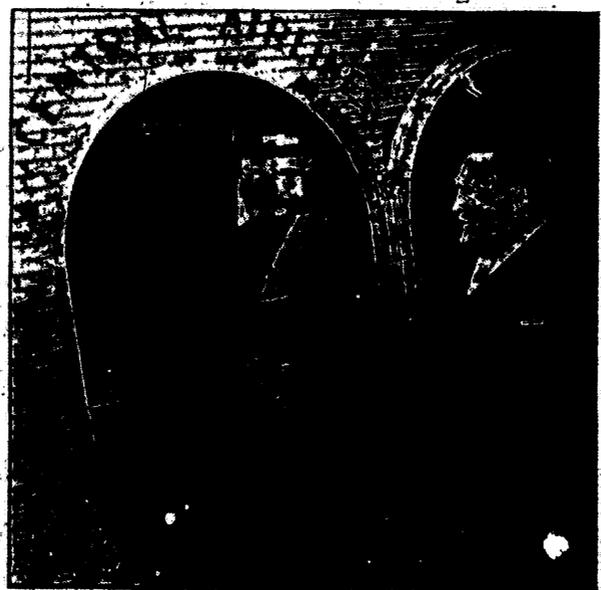

"A good bank account," would be the rejoinder of some American politicians—and everything that will buy, which includes about all one wants."

It seems to me that the onus there is not alone on the man or woman who exemplifies that philosophy—as for instance a well known New York mayor who with honor and reputation bestricken still has a very good time on the surviving bank account—that the onus is on the viewpoint of the vast numbers of people who make possible that good time. For no one can enjoy life who is ostracized by his fellows. And in China and Japan would like very much to help you, so after years of research work I find the best place to keep a fly, if you do not want it disturbed at all, is in a Scotchman's pocketbook.

TRUE GHOST STORIES

By Famous People

Copyright by Public Ledger, Inc. WNU Service.

By WILL IRWIN Author.

"THE 'Ghost of Washington Square' gave me many a night filled with clammy chills at No. 59 Washington Square," related Will Irwin, who is known to be such a shrewd and canny and skeptical reporter that he was asked to investigate and expose the seances of Signora Eusapia Paladino, the notorious psychic. "I might have attributed my nights of horror at No. 59 to a disordered digestion," continued Mr. Irwin, "had it not been that everyone who occupied my apartment had a similar ghostly experience.

"One morning at three o'clock I was awakened out of a sound sleep by a consciousness of some one bending over me. Three mornings in succession—always at the same hour and always without sound or sight of anyone, I was thus awakened. My nerves became unstrung. I moved to a hotel. Then, ashamed at my submission, I moved back to my flat. But I slept with every gas jet burning. The phenomenon recurred, but each time with less intensity.

"During an absence from New York I turned over my apartment to James Hopper. Mr. Hopper was wrathful, rather than grateful, for the shelter of my apartment. He had been made uncomfortable by the same visitation that I had experienced there. Moreover, he had bravely, in the dark, dared the ghost to an open encounter. The challenge had not been accepted.

"Samuel Hopkins Adams heard the story of my weird experience and he wanted to investigate matters under my troubled roof. Despite the fact that he was forewarned and that he is such an alert observer, he could only bear incoherent witness to the visitation.

"Later, while I was on a holiday, two elderly ladies who were former neighbors of mine in New England, asked to use my apartment during their two weeks' visit to New York. A friend of mine was to call for them early the second day of their visit to show them about town. He found them standing on the doorstep, with valises in hand. They wouldn't stay another minute in Mr. Irwin's noisy, fearful apartment!

"I could see only one thing to do. I would give up No. 59 Washington Square. It only estranged me from myself and my friends.

"I freed myself of the apartment and heard no further reports of it until one day a friend of mine who keeps a shop on the south side of the square told me that an old gentleman who wandered into her place had become reminiscent about the early days when Washington Square had been the Potter's field and when the gallows had stood upon the place of the present arch.

"Then dolefully pointing to my former abode, No. 59, he remarked, 'and that used to be the morgue.'"

By IGNACE PADEREWSKI Pianist.

"I VERY seldom play any gambling games. I have not the time, neither have I the inclination to gamble," said the great pianist with a graceful and sweeping flourish of his hand.

"But one day in Monte Carlo I awoke with an irresistible impulse to play roulette and a premonition that luck was running my way. Always, my work has been based on exactitude and study. For once I wanted to play with a premonition.

"I went to the roulette table and won seventeen times in succession. The next morning I awoke with the same impelling hunch. I returned to the tables, and won thirty-eight times. Confirmed gamblers tore their hair because I would not place more than the small 5-franc note.

"The third day my hunch was still strong. Again I went to the tables and won thirty-four times. The Casino was in an uproar. The gamblers decided that Paderewski had a system. The musician with his knowledge of intricate mathematics had evolved a system! Of course, I had no such system. They crowded to my side, and they wanted to place their money on my numbers, but I always waited until the last moment to place my note, so no one would know what number I was going to play.

"The fourth day I awoke with a distinct presentiment that my luck had run out. I wanted to test the validity of this presentiment, so I strolled to the Casino and placed a few francs. I lost. I played a few rounds and then stopped."

Becoming Garden Spot

Cranberra, Australia made-to-order capital, is rapidly becoming one of the garden cities of the world. Three million trees and shrubs, 40 miles of hedges and 20,000 roses have been planted. Every tree and flower have been placed like a piece of mosaic according to a pre-conceived plan.

Growth of Mushrooms

Mushrooms develop from spores, which are equivalent to the seeds of higher plants. The spore produces mycelium, or the vegetative part of the plant, which works in the soil or other medium. The mushrooms is the fruiting body.

For an after-the-game dance, or an after-the-working-day dinner engagement, this lovely afternoon dress would be perfect. It's a shining hour frock, designed with an eye to the vogue for elegance in this winter's mode. A spirited double-jacket top, the bolero lines of its youthful bodice. Smart slashes at each side give a final touch of chic to its pencil-slim skirt. For a costume of unusual glamor, try chiffon-velvet with shimmering metal cloth for the bolero bolero. Satin with velvet would be a lovely choice, too. Make the sleeves with nicely pointed cuffs or in a smart three-quarter length like the small back sketch.

Pattern 9198 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 requires 2 1/2 yards 30-inch fabric, and 1 1/4 yards contrasting.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a girl nineteen years of age. There is a young man who seems to be madly in love with me, but I am not sure I love him; he had proposed to me. He swears that if I marry him he will treat me like an "angel." What shall I do?

Yours truly,

L. M. KICKIDE.

Answer: Always beware of the man who calls you an "angel," or the man who says he will treat you like an "angel." Go to any art gallery and look at a painting of an "angel." You will immediately see all the clothes he intends buying you.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I live in an apartment house and there is a rumor about a married couple, in the same building. The rumor is that the husband beats his wife up every morning. Do you believe this? Yours truly,

L. WONDER.

Answer: I know the people you refer to and K is a fact that the husband beats his wife up every morning. He gets up at 6:00 a. m. and she doesn't get up till 7:00.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a scientist. At present I am experimenting with "flies." I am trying to solve the big problem of the century; that is: "Should Flies Marry?" This is my sixth year on the subject, and my greatest difficulty is to keep the flies over the winter months. Last winter I put a fly in a cuckoo clock to rest, but it woke the fly up every hour and the poor thing died from the lack of sleep.

Can you tell me the best place to keep a fly so it can rest peacefully? Yours truly,

WILL U. HELPFUL.

Answer: Nothing in the world, excepting the discovery of the North pole, will be of greater benefit to humanity than the solution of the problem, "Should Flies Marry?" I find that the importance of flies is a subject to think about. Some folks like flies, others don't. I know one man who owns a candy store and he likes flies so much that he has just engaged a blacksmith for his store. This blacksmith is supposed to "shoo the flies." On the other hand, I hear, every day, of a man named Babe Ruth who doesn't like flies. At least, it appears so, as he keeps hitting flies over the fence. Now I

President's Four Billion Dollar Relief Program Jammed Through House After Bitter Fight—Hauptmann Takes Stand in Own Defense.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union

ADMINISTRATION forces using steam roller tactics crushed all opposition to jam the President's $4,800,000,000 relief program through the house. Efforts to fight the grant of such unprecedented authority to the President were unavailing as the White House cracked the whip over revolting representatives. Final vote on the measure was 228 to 78.

The vote climaxed a furious eight-hour debate on the measure. Members attempted to attach amendments which would protect private industry from government projects which might be launched under the relief plan. When this failed they endeavored to allocate the money for specific purposes.

When the debate had reached its height, the President sent a message to the house declaring it would be impossible to segregate items for which the money would be expended, but that the huge outlay of sums would be devoted to public projects and that after the immediate crisis of unemployment had passed it was his hope that the country could set aside $500,000,000 a year for the "national plan."

The White House message was the signal for the Democratic majority to push the message across with little change from its original form. On the final vote 28 Republicans voted for the bill. Seven Progressives and three Farmer-Laborites also registered affirmative votes. Ten Democrats, five from Georgia, three from Virginia, and two from Indiana, voted with the opposition.

Because of the gag rule adopted by the house, only amendments offered by the appropriations committee could be considered in vital sections of the measure. Such minor amendments as were decided upon went through without serious opposition.

One of the amendments striking out a list of projects that might be included in spending the $4,000,000,000 and left the vast sum to be used for "federal or nonfederal projects" actually broadened the powers of the President. The $800,000,000 will be used at the President's discretion for relief purposes while the program is being put into effect.

Another amendment struck out a subsection which gave the President authority to postpone the end of any existing government agency. This was a move to satisfy certain Democrats who were opposed to Secretary Ickes, and his PWA program which expires in June. Another clause granting authority to the President to acquire personal property by the power of eminent domain was also removed, as was the section granting the Chief Executive the power to impose two years' imprisonment on any violator. The only other amendment which succeeded in passage was one which provided that an accounting be made for all moneys spent.

Minority Leader Snell attacked the bill declaring that the money involved amounted to one-eighth of the national income, and that the house was entitled to know what the money was for. Later in conceding the minority's defeat he said that if the opposition was free to speak its mind, the bill would be defeated two to one, but that under the executive task, there was no chance of defeating it.

NEW DEALERS signed with relief as the Supreme court recessed until February 4 without handing down its decision in the gold cases, thus giving the administration more time in which to prepare legislation designed to handle the situation in the event the court renders an adverse decision.

At the same time the court promised to decide a case presenting a clear-cut test of the constitutionality of the national recovery act, and which will probably have considerable effect upon the ultimate fate of the already bedraggled Blue Eagle.

LEGISLATION which would permit the small investor to buy government securities and which provides for radical changes in government financing has been introduced in the house by Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee.

The bill, prepared by the Treasury department, places the administration squarely against inflation. It provides authority to raise money necessary for the public works, social security and similar measures, meet federal deficits, and might even be used to provide funds for payment of the soldiers' bonus.

Under provisions of the measure there would be ten-year bonds in amounts as small as $25, and as explained by the Treasury department, would be sold below par. There would be no interest, but each six months the bonds would appreciate in value at the rate of 2 1/2 per cent, plus compounded earnings.

Huge sums are involved. The creation of a revolving bond authorization bill of $4,800,000,000; and second, the consolidation of the two present revolving funds of $10,000,000,000 each into a joint $20,000,000,000 fund for bills, certificates and notes.

A NEW lease of life for the Reconstruction Finance corporation was seen as a result of a favorable vote by the senate banking committee, after hearing Jesse Jones—RFC chairman, and Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie of the interstate commerce commission.

The proposed bill permits the RFC to buy railroad obligations in reorganization proceedings with the approval of the ICC; to buy stock in mortgage loan companies and similar financial institutions; to purchase the assets of closed banks under certain conditions; to increase authorized investments in preferred stock and capital notes of insurance companies, and to continue the Commodity Credit corporation and the Export-Import bank.

WHITE-FACED, under the glare of the courtroom lights, but apparently cool, Bruno Richard Hauptmann took the stand to begin his fight for life. The little Flemington (N. J.) courthouse was packed as the man accused of the murder of the first-born son of Charles A. Lindbergh began his testimony which he appears confident will save him from the electric chair.

Calmly, he told of his early life, of his war service, and admitted that he had once been convicted in Germany. His thick, guttural voice resounded through the room as he recounted how he had made three attempts to enter this country before he was successful.

Under the smooth questioning of Chief Defense Counsel Relyea he related the details of his life up until the time of the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, and then proposed the alibi upon which he is apparently relying for acquittal. Hauptmann declared that on the night of April 2, 1932, when $50,000 was paid to a man in St. Raymond's cemetery, New York, he, his wife and a man named Kloppeberg had been at home until about eleven o'clock and that he did not leave his home at that time. He also denied that he had been absent from work on the day the kidnaping took place.

Two witnesses introduced by the defense to establish Hauptmann's alibi were not entirely satisfactory. Christian Frederickson, Bronx baker, said Hauptmann's wife had been employed in his store as a waitress and counter girl and that the accused had called for her on the night of March 1. Upon cross-examination, however, he stated that he was not sure, but that it must have been so because it was Hauptmann's custom to call for his wife whenever she worked late.

Mrs. Frederickson also stated that Mrs. Hauptmann worked late on the night of March 1, but was unable to say whether Hauptmann had been at the bakery. She stated, however, that she had seen Isador Fisch, former friend of Hauptmann who died in Germany, on the eve of his sailing for Germany in November, 1932. She said Fisch displayed a large sum of money, but she was unable to say whether it was in greenbacks or gold certificates.

Throughout Hauptmann's testimony Colonel Lindbergh continued to stare at him. During the court session, Lindbergh reiterated his belief that Hauptmann's voice was the same as that of the mysterious "John" who had hoaxed him out of the ransom money nearly three years ago.

WAR Gamed again in Manchukuo as Japanese troops struck suddenly at three points in Chahar province in northern China. Three fortified cities were shelled, and there were indications that the drive had only begun.

The Japanese attack came as a surprise since it was reported that negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the dispute over Chahar province had been bearing a successful conclusion. Japan had asserted that Chinese troops in Chahar had invaded Jehol.

Military authorities declined to announce the real objective of the drive. The district which the Japanese troops occupied is about 150 miles long by 60 miles wide, and is said to contain valuable gold mines.

Japan's action is seen by Chinese leaders as a determined gesture to intimidate Mongolian princes of Inner Mongolia and to cut the overland route connecting Peking with Urga, capital of Soviet controlled Outer Mongolia.

The situation is viewed with considerable apprehension by Soviet Russia. The drive will bring Japanese military operations into direct contact with the borders of Outer Mongolia, and practically all high officials of the territory who have been attending the Soviet anniversary celebrations in Moscow have hurried back to their provinces.

JAPAN'S foreign minister, Koki Hirota, warned Soviet Russia that she should stop fortifying the Siberian frontier north of Manchukuo. If friendly relations are to be continued between the two countries, Hirota remarks, made in an address before the Imperial diet, had special significance in view of reports that Japanese troops are invading Chahar province to prevent Sovietization of that region.

Russian fortifications in the Far East, particularly of the strategic crossings of the Amur river, are becoming increasingly irksome to the Japanese army in Manchukuo. Other projects to which Japan is objecting are double-tracking of the Trans-Siberian railway to Vladivostok and remodeling of the strong fortifications of that Pacific port.

Government officials in Washington were said to be favorably impressed with part of Hirota's address which referred to Japan's desire to avoid further expansion of armament. It is hoped that negotiations will be resumed soon for another agreement to replace the renounced Washington treaty which established the 5-5-3 ratio for the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

RECOMMENDATIONS that America's air defense facilities be greatly increased will be made by President Roosevelt in a special message soon to be sent to congress. It has been indicated by those close to the administration. Construction of a series of air bases for the United States, the addition of 4,000 planes to the service, and building a huge dirigible will be among the projects which the President approves.

The proposed construction is in accord with a report just made by the special aviation commission. It is the purpose of the commission to lease the dirigible to a commercial firm as a sister ship to the Graf Zeppelin which will start regular transatlantic service within a few weeks.

The series of bases along the Pacific and Atlantic coasts will make America impregnable to air attack, the commission believes, while the addition of 4,000 planes to the army and navy service will bring it up to far more than the existing fighting strength.

The commission has also recommended creation of a special five-man aviation commission to regulate civil aeronautics.

THE death toll continued to mount as reports seeped in from northwest Mississippi and southwest Tennessee where the turbulent Coldwater river was a raging torrent, threatening the lives and property of thousands in its march to the Tallahatchie basin. Freezing weather added to the suffering of thousands driven from their homes. Workers toiled to rescue as many as possible of those who had been marooned on roof tops and in trees. A number of communities have been evacuated because it is feared the waters will continue to spread. Appeals for additional help in caring for the homeless have been made by public officials, and Red Cross aid has been rushed to the stricken areas.

POSSIBILITY of a move by the Italian government to make a protectorate out of Ethiopia was seen by European statesmen. Exploitation of the announcement of the slaying of a French Somaliland administrator and 60 French Somaliland employees and Somalis was said to indicate that a movement was on for Italy to take over the mountainous African kingdom to restore order. The consent of France and Great Britain to the plan has been obtained, it was reported.

A number of recent developments point toward some action by the Italian government. Premier Mussolini recently took over the office of minister of colonies; Gen. Emilio de Bono, former minister of colonies, was named high commissioner of Italian East Africa; military roads have been constructed through Italian Somaliland to the Ethiopian frontier; and the Italians have recently taken over a bigger share in the operation of the Djibouti and Addis Ababa railway.

Recent history affords a number of precedents for the Italian government to follow. Japanese intervention in Manchuria was "to restore order and reduce Chinese banditry," and Italy might use the excuse of reducing Ethiopian banditry as a reason for invasion. The British action in Egypt and the Sudan, and the French subjugation of Tunisia also offer parallel cases.

EUROPEAN statesmen anxiously watched developments in the case of Japan and Malacra on the Belgian frontier as gendarmerie reinforcements were rushed to arrest Nazi agitators who have been advocating annexation of that territory with the German reich. Loyalists report a case pair of terrorists has been carried off against those who have refused to join an organization directed by the Brown Shirts. The Belgian government is expected to lodge a complaint with the League of Nations.

The cantons which were taken from Germany under the Versailles treaty have considerable commercial importance. Formerly a part of Rhenish Prussia, they have an area of about 400 square miles and a population in excess of 600,000 people. Open blast furnaces, spinning mills and other establishments connected with the textile industry, iron foundries, machine shops and tanneries.

Give Thought to Abnormal Child

Neglecting and Spoiling Are Both Extremes to Be Avoided.

Depending on what kind of parents they have, handicapped children are classified into three groups by Dr. John Rulrah, author of "The Parent and the Handicapped Child," in Hygeia Magazine. The crippled child may be neglected, or he may be spoiled, or he may be treated sensibly and correctly.

The parents of the neglected child will feel outraged that such a thing as a handicapped child has been wished on them. They are liable to worry a bit and then they shut the child out of their lives and emotions as far as possible and feel no responsibility for his preparation for life.

The second set of parents make pity, of themselves and of the child, the biggest stumbling block in the way of educating the child. If the parent pities the child, the child will pity himself instead of making the best of his condition. The child is allowed to become spoiled, irritable, exacting, wanting everything his own way and doing nothing for himself.

There is the third set of parents who are quick to realize that they have a problem on their hands, and they set about learning how best to solve it. The child must be taught first that he is to behave as other children do as far as he is able, taking into consideration his handicap. The child can be taught independence if the parent finds out what the child can do for himself and what he cannot do, and then does only what is necessary. Children like to do things for themselves and it is one way they learn not only to do things, but to be independent. This also applies to teaching the child to make decisions for himself. Children who are never allowed to decide things for themselves grow up into men and women who have a hard time, and no one needs self-confidence and independence more than the handicapped person.

Idleness is bad and makes children unhappy. The handicapped child should be kept occupied with games and hobbies in which he is interested, but there should be a careful steering between overexertion and underexertion. All physically handicapped children need extra rest, which should be a part of the daily routine. Too much exercise is worse than none.

SCENTED "GAS"

Fastidious motorists can now fill the tanks of their cars with scented petrol. A process has been developed whereby it is possible to perfume petrol, and it may soon be a delight to trail a motorist as the exhaust pipe of his car emits violet, lilac, or possibly attar of roses. A patent has been granted for a process which eliminates the unpleasant smells from the exhaust gases of internal-combustion engines. These gases can be given an agreeable odor by adding to each gallon of petrol four grammes of an artificial musk compound, which it is claimed has the property of resisting combustion.
