Carabajal-Romero

Lincoln, N. M., Feb. 13.—On Monday, Feb. 11, a pretty wedding was solemnized in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends at St. John's Catholic Church. Miss Regina Carabajal and Mr. Jose Antonio Romero were united in marriage by Rev. Fr. Salvator.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Carabajal, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tranquillo Romero. The bride wore a white silk dress and a veil. Miss Mary Romero was bridesmaid and Mr. Religio Romero, Jr., was best man. After the Mass a dinner, attended by several relatives and friends, was served at the home of the bride's parents. A large number of friends honored the happy couple with a dance Monday night. The entire community wishes for the young couple a happy married life.

The Lincoln Catholic church has recently been repainted. All inside woodwork is now white, and the walls have been also painted in a pretty design of blue, pink and buff. The work was supervised by Mr. and Mrs. Paulino Aida.

El Torreon, which was reconstructed by the FERA, will be dedicated on Feb. 24. A program has been arranged for this occasion, and everybody is welcome to attend.

Mrs. Julia Tompkins left Tuesday evening for New York, after spending a week here with her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Penfield. She will visit her son in New York.

BLASTING CAPS

The Institute of Makers of Explosives (103 Park Avenue, New York) appeals for help in making known the danger of blasting caps to children who pick them up near mines or quarries, near highway construction work and in fields where blasting is used in agriculture. Hundreds of children, they tell us, are injured every year through playing with these little copper cylinders packed with high explosive. Some of them are blinded, some are maimed and still others die as the result of their wounds. The schools, the P. T. A., Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and other organizations can help in making known the danger and how it may be avoided.

Children must know how to recognize a blasting cap. It is a copper cylinder about one-quarter inch in diameter, an inch or two long and closed at one end. Any child who finds such a cap should leave it where it is and report it to some responsible adult.

Workmen should be warned not to leave blasting caps lying round where they may be found by children.

Educational literature may be obtained from the Institute of Makers of Explosives who also offer to lend to any community in New Mexico, free of charge, a one reel motion picture entitled "How Jimmy won the game." The film has been made especially for children and is available on safety stock in either 16 mm or 35 mm width. Your motion picture theatre will probably be glad to help in this campaign by including a showing of this film in its regular program.

Grand Jury Asked by Ickes to Investigate PWA Graft Charges—Future of NRA Hangs Upon Outcome of Suit Against Little Sawmill Operator.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union

"HONEST HAROLD" Ickes has been subjected to lots of abuse by congressmen and others, but he does not intend to let anything be put over on the Public Works administration, of which he is the administrator. At his request a special grand jury has been summoned to meet in Washington on February 6 to inquire into charges of graft in the PWA. Assistant United States Attorney John W. Ebbelly

Sec'y Ickes has the matter in hand for the government and will present first testimony concerning the $4,000,000 canal project in Texas. It was asserted that the contract for this project was withdrawn after Mr. Ickes' investigators had uncovered evidence that there was a huge conspiracy to defraud the United States. Eight or ten persons, including federal officials, are said to be involved. Mr. Ickes himself said: "The Public Works administration investigation division has made a long and careful study of the Texas project upon the direction of the administrator (Ickes) and presented to the proper prosecuting officials of the government a full report for such action as they deem proper to take."

This Texas case may consume several weeks, and afterward the grand jury is expected to investigate some other projects and also charges of fraud in the War department.

ALMOST unnoticed among the spectacular issues of the day, yet of momentous importance, the case of the United States against Becher will be set for hearing by the Supreme court within a few days. This case opens up discussion on the constitutionality of the heart of the entire NRA experiment—the power of the federal government to regulate wages and working hours through codes.

Upon this refusal of a small Alabama sawmill operator to comply with the code hangs the entire fate of the NRA, for if the government loses there will be nothing left of NRA except an empty statement of desirable business ethics. If the government cannot control wages and hours in the production of goods intended for interstate commerce, there is a strong likelihood that the course of legislation to extend the NRA beyond June 16 will be strongly affected. Other cases now pending before the court touch upon certain portions of the vital question, but this case goes straight to the basic power of the recovery act. It affords a clear-cut determination of the fundamental issues, because there is no dispute as to facts, no technicalities of law upon which the issue can be avoided. The case comes almost as an original case, since the attorney general took advantage of legal machinery permitting an appeal directly to the Supreme court from the decision of a federal District court without recourse to a Court of Appeals.

The defendant openly violated the lumber code. Instead of adhering to code provision requiring payment of 24 cents per hour for a 40-hour maximum week, he admitted paying his men 10 to 15 cents per hour and that he worked them as many hours as he saw fit.

What the government's line of defense will be is not known. The case involves all the constitutional objections which might be raised against the recovery act. Decisions of the court in the recent oil cases did not touch upon the constitutionality of the main body of the act, but involved only a special section.

WHEN the senate passes the $4,000,000,000 work relief measure, as it certainly will after all the orators get through, there need be no fussing as to who is to administer the huge fund. President Roosevelt himself, according to an authority high in administration circles, will undertake that job and will allocate the money to the various agencies as he sees fit. There will be no new set-up for this purpose, unless it may be a small group of advisors selected by Mr. Roosevelt. These may be members of the cabinet or technical experts—more likely the latter. This information was given the senate finance committee as it began consideration of the bill, and was designed to quiet some of the opposition and also to curb the ambition of certain gentlemen who had hoped to handle the $4,000,000,000. It did not, however, silence those senators of both parties who still contend that too much power is given the President when he is handed such a vast sum to dispose of as he pleases.

A strong possibility is seen that the bill may be split into two separate parts, so that the $50 million dollars needed for relief purposes may be passed without delay, and the senate can then take its time in considering the extraordinary measure which gives the President such unprecedented powers in spending the four billion dollars.

Part of the money may be used to put the government into the billing station business, Senator Elmer Thomas (Dem., Okla.) revealed. Gasoline stations may be erected along "self-liquidating" highways, he said. The government may also purchase land adjoining these highways and improve it with houses for rent or sale.

Little hope is seen in reporting the measure out before February 10 when the relief funds on hand will expire. The only hope of meeting this emergency, it is pointed out, is in the possible segregation of the $50 million dollar cash relief provision from the main bill.

One development which was of interest to many was that the measure was prepared under the supervision of Mr. Bell, the budget director, thus making him a candidate for the "physical hanging" advocated by Senator James Couzens of Michigan.

FEARING the anger of their aroused constituents more than the administration's whip, the senate kicked over the traces to defeat ratification of the world court protocol. The final count was seven votes short of the necessary two-thirds.

Frantic efforts to force the measure through were made by the administration. Several revolting senators were called to the White House, and the President even agreed to amendments to the resolution, but was unable to overcome the effects of thousands of protesting telegrams which had been pouring into Washington from citizens all over the country.

In private, many Democratic senators who face re-election in 1936 heaved sighs of relief as the measure was defeated. Administration forces accepted the verdict, apparently without rancor, although the long memory of the man in the White House is well known. Scarcely the issue is dead, for the present at least.

Senator William Borah, who with Senator Hiram Johnson, led the attack on ratification, was jubilant over the outcome, declaring that it was a great victory for the American people and for this country's traditional policy of keeping aloof from foreign entanglements. Observers at the capital refused to view the world court vote as any indication of a spreading revolt against Roosevelt's policies, since the court controversy cut deeper than party lines. Several senators who opposed the tribunal will undoubtedly support the administration on other measures, although victory of the small band of irreconcilables who led the fight has undoubtedly added to their prestige.

THAT serio-comic "civil war" in Huey Long's domain is becoming more serious than comical and almost any day may develop into real warfare. It was centered for the present at the state capital.

Two hundred armed men, directed by leaders of the Square Deal association, seized the parish court house in East Baton Rouge and held it until assured that one of their friends who had been arrested was released. They then dispersed with a warning from one John Appel to "be sure you have enough ammunition and be ready for the call at any time."

The Kingfish was in New Orleans at the time, but he hastened to Baton Rouge while Governor Allen called out some troops and proclaimed partial martial law in the capital. Huey immediately ordered the recently appointed Judge J. D. Womack to start an investigation of what he described as a plot to murder him, in which "four sheriffs and a district attorney" were involved. The senator declared:

"We picked up two men, one of them was going to drive the murder car. It was all fixed up. He was going to block my car on the highway between here and New Orleans, make it stop and force me in the ditch, and then 14 or 16 were going to come along in another car and kill me.

"We found all the stuff in the fellow's car. There was sheriff's equipment, and everything."

Maybe Huey was right, for one Sidney Songy testified at the inquiry that he had been given a gun, ammunition and gas bombs to kill the senator.

Long blamed the Standard Oil company for the armed assembly of his enemies in Baton Rouge and said that unless the company stopped the "violence" his compromise with it over the 5-cent oil refinery tax would be called off.

Despite this warning another armed group of Square Dealers gathered at the Baton Rouge air field; but some of them betrayed them and a detachment of the National Guard advanced on them in battle array. The sight of machine guns was enough for the citizenry; they surrendered and were disbanded.

THOSE who view Russia's growing military strength with alarm were not comforted by a statement made by the vice commissar for defense before the seventh All-Union congress of Soviets in Moscow that the Red army has grown from 600,000 to 940,000 men in four years.

Fortifications along the eastern and western frontiers have been strengthened, and all branches of the military service, particularly aviation, have been increased, the vice commissar stated, and more will be spent for defense in 1935 than was spent last year. The delegates, who were meeting to review Bolshevik progress since 1928, greeted the vice commissar's speech with roars of applause.

IN AN effort to build up an alibi for Bruno Richard Hauptmann his attorneys have called a strange collection of witnesses—a spring league boot-licker, a speakeasy operator of various names, a young Swede whose stories have been somewhat vague and conflicting, and a man who has admitted that he served several jail sentences—a not particularly impressive lot upon which to depend when you are fighting to escape a death in the electric chair.

One of the peculiarities of the trial is the number of persons who only saw Hauptmann for a few minutes or seconds, but who are able to identify him more than two years later. The man accused of killing the first Lindbergh child is not outstanding in appearance or one who would be likely to indelibly impress himself on a person's mind, but both the state and the defense have been able to produce persons who swear they saw the man they saw the day the crime was committed. The battle of handwriting experts has also begun, with the state producing experts to swear that the handwriting on the ransom notes does not resemble that on the admitted writing of Hauptmann. Their statements are just as positive as were those made by the defense witnesses, and it all proves just a little confusing to the jury.

Considerable comment was caused when one of the jurors, a woman, smiled broadly at Hauptmann as he left the stand following his examination, and some wagers have been made that a hung jury will be the outcome of the trial. Such predictions are hardly in order, since a single bit of testimony may yet change the entire course of the case.

DURING the debate in the house on an administration bill to increase by $3,000,000,000 the amount of long-term securities the treasury can issue, Representative Reed of New York quoted Secretary Morgenthau as saying that the treasury could not finance the work relief program unless congress broadened its bond-issuing authority. So the house passed the measure at once.

The bill, prepared by the Treasury department, places the administration squarely against inflation. It provides authority to raise money necessary for the public works, social security and similar measures, meet federal deficits, and might even be used to provide funds for payment of the soldiers' bonus.

Under provisions of the measure there would be ten-year bonds in amounts as small as $25, and as explained by the Treasury department, would be sold below par. There would be no interest, but each six months the bonds would appreciate in value at the rate of 2 1/2 per cent, plus compounded earnings.

Huge sums are involved; first, the creation of a revolving bond authorization fund of $2,500,000,000; and second, the consolidation of the two present revolving funds of $10,000,000,000 each into a joint $20,000,000,000 fund for bills, certificates and notes.

JAPANESE forces continued to advance in their drive. Two towns were captured by troops operating in weather 34 degrees below zero, and the forces appear to be converging on an area of disputed territory which lies south of Manchull and Hailar, where northwest Manchukou overlaps Outer Mongolia. The indefiniteness of the border is blamed for the contention.

Intimations that the Japanese garrison in Manchukou might be increased were made in the Japanese diet, based upon assertions that the Soviet government had continued to enlarge its army in the Far East, and that Soviet penetration into Outer Mongolia has resulted in virtual communization of that territory.

There has been no decided change in the attitude of Chinese leaders toward Japan. Recent interviews with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were said to have brought about no accord between the two nations. Meanwhile the Far East continues to be one of the interesting news spots on the map today.

RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD, former ambassador to Italy, attorney, and author, died of pneumonia at his home in New York. He left a post as editor of Collier's Weekly in 1921 to take that of Ambassador to Italy, where he gained prominence as the chief representative of the United States at the Genoa and Lausanne conferences in 1922. He was the author of several works and collaborated with Premier Benito Mussolini on the Italian leader's autobiography in 1927.

Haircut

By ELSIE F. WILSON

CLARABEL BRUNKE'S chauffeur ceased to curb in front of the most famous of Fifth Avenue's beauty temples. Claribel's gracious entrance into the salon was greeted by a careful bow from the wax-mustached manager himself.

"Ah, Mademoiselle Brunke—good afternoon. We shall be pleased—" "I'd like to have you personally do my hair, Selxas," she smiled. "It's rather important today." "But yes, Mademoiselle." "I'm going to put myself in your hands, Selxas," she said. "I want a haircut entirely different from anything I've ever had. Something suited to my type and personality. You know what I mean?" "But yes, mademoiselle," Selxas draped a snowy sheet around Claribel's shoulders.

"For you, mademoiselle, the smooth, close cut is the best. Then to bring out the natural pliancy of your face, a fluffy bang across the forehead—yes?" "I'll leave it to you, Selxas," she smiled. "Only make me as beautiful as you can."

Claribel hoped that tonight Rick Hollimore would ask her to marry him. She had known Rick for a year. Lately she had fancied that there had been something new in his eyes; something more personal when he looked at her.

"Perfect, Selxas," she sighed. "You couldn't have done better." "Now a shampoo and wave, mademoiselle?" "Please."

Selxas proudly combed out the finished coiffure. It was a masterpiece. But then Selxas was patronized because he produced masterpieces.

"It is lovely, Selxas. And it is important that I be particularly nice tonight." Claribel sat opposite Rick Hollimore in the dim dining room of the Cafe Brun.

"You're quiet tonight, Rick," she said. "Tired?" "A little," admitted Hollimore. "This business of casting for a new play gets me every time. I think I have my finger on a type I want and then—puff! She drops her atches or bites her finger-nails!"

"Poor boy." But Hollimore did not react to her sympathy. Claribel felt chilled. At the moment she knew that she meant no more to Rick than the centerpiece of crystal tulips. If he didn't soon see her as an individual, Claribel knew that she would always be just as much atmosphere in his life. He was becoming, too accustomed to her beauty.

Suddenly his eyes lit up. She followed his glance. "Do you see her?" he exclaimed tensely. "The girl with the hair, red and crisp looking. I want her for the beggar girl in Scarlet Slippers. Can't you just picture her?" Hollimore's voice was eager.

"She probably stutters," said Claribel. "But her hair! It's a masterpiece of art and imagination. I wonder who her hairdresser is? He certainly knows his stuff. Funny, the difference a haircut makes to a woman, isn't it?"

"Yes, isn't it?" echoed Claribel bleakly. As Hollimore excused himself and strode off in the direction of the red headed girl, Claribel retouched her lips and ran a slim finger through her fluffed bangs. Her hands were cold.

Elle's reflection in the mirror above the kitchen sink gave back her vivid smile. Her crisp red-gold curls were almost completely obscured by the inverted pester bowl.

"Don't cut off too much, Mom," she warned. "Just enough to smarten the edges." "Haven't I cut your hair enough times to know how to do it?" returned Mom Bailey brandishing her shears above the bowl. "Keep still and don't fidget."

Housewife's Idea Box

To Scent Your Linens
Do you like your linens scented? If you do, here is a very economical way to do it: Buy a quantity of your favorite scented toilet soap. Place a cake between each pile of linens. The linen will take on the scent of the soap and yet you will always have soap on hand when needed. Continue to replace the bars.

HUMAN NEED FOR SOCIETY NOT TO BE DISREGARDED

"What do you think of that woman who for twenty-five years has lived alone in a lighthouse?" "For company this woman has only her two dogs. And according to her interview with the newspapers she is never lonely. That's what I call a wonderful person—loved no one. Think of all the time she saves in not having to listen to foolish talk. Think of the wealth she can store in her mind with all the uninterrupted time she has—reading she can do! She can learn more about the world and foreign parts in that lighthouse than the people who rush around taking quick tours to places and never having time to think."

The eminent woman writer to whom the above was addressed disagreed to some extent with her questioner as to the value of solitude, replied to extremes. She says: "I have always been an exponent of the fascinating 'travelling' that can be done in books and in the mind; also of the benefits of occasional solitude. But I am afraid, my dear reader, that I cannot recommend staying alone twenty-five years in a lighthouse."

"It is true that too many of us are too dependent on other people. It is true that real fulfillment in the lives of normal humans must involve other humans. To really live, we need people in our lives. We need to be with them, to learn from them, to do for them, to love them."

"It is the old story of the Happy Medium. Too much company can waste previous forces. No company at all can prevent those forces from ever being realized."

Home
He is the happiest, he who kind or peasant, who finds peace in his home.—Goethe.

HANDICAP TO BE LIFTED

It is good to give, the unfortunate a living; it is still better to raise them to a life-worth living. It is not so much the infirmity that causes unhappiness as the grief of useless dependent existence.—Helen Keller.

WHEN YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE

... use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage.

Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear-up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

Radio Acts as Fire Alarm

Santa Fe, Feb. 14.—A radio set, installed in the home of Dr. J. R. Earp, Director of public health, was given credit today for having prevented a blaze. Every time anyone walked across the sitting room floor the radio emitted a loud squawk. An electrician was called who announced that the radio was giving warning of defective wiring under the floor boards. Each squawk on the radio meant a tiny spark. But for the radio the sparks would have continued in silence until the house caught fire.

"The radio saved our home from fire," said Dr. Earp, "just as the X-ray saves people from tuberculosis. In the early stages when the disease can surely be cured the disease is silent. Only an X-ray picture of the chest shows that treatment is needed."

Ben Dow, of San Diego, California, arrived last Thursday to spend ten days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Dow. Ben belongs to the Navy and is on shore leave.

Short Term Lending System

"Many farmers of the Middle West, who had been paying as high as 3 per cent a month for funds to carry on their operations, benefited in 1934 from the low interest rates made available by the production credit associations of the Farm Credit Administration," according to a report by S. M. Garwood, production credit commissioner.

Production credit associations were formed as a part of the permanent financing program of the Farm Credit Administration to provide for farmers a stable, short-term lending system that is maintained by their own cooperative efforts.

In announcing that farmers have been quick to grasp this opportunity that enables them, with fair crops and prices, invariably to come out on the credit side of the ledger, Mr. Garwood said:

"Of 4,543 chattel loans amounting to $1,484,202 filed in 1930 in three Ohio counties, 1,172, or 25.8 per cent were advanced by finance companies permitted by the Ohio law to charge up to 3 per cent a month. In 1921 one family in 50 in six counties, or 292 farms, borrowed from agencies charging 3 to 3 1/2 per cent a month, according to a similar study made in Illinois. During the first six months of 1932 in the same counties, 182 farm families borrowed a total of $30,070. This was an average of $165 per family, as against $156 per family the preceding year, thus indicating a more extensive use of these agencies in 1932 than in 1931. And conditions typical of counties in Ohio and Illinois may be taken as representative of the Middle West as a whole."

"Those farmers were forced by lack of adequate credit facilities to pay excessive interest rates on loans for their legitimate farming operations. That condition can no longer exist. A sound production credit system, operated with the cooperation of business-minded farmers, will make excessive rates a thing of the past."

School Notes

(By Ola C. Jones, Co. School Supt)

Each month of the school year the rural schools of the county bring in exhibits which are placed on bulletin boards set up for that purpose just outside of the office of the county school superintendent. Several interesting and instructive exhibits are on display at the present time as for example, the geological one submitted by the Ramon school, the corn one submitted by the Lincoln school, and the meat one submitted by the Baesa Canyon school. The public is cordially invited to see these and other displays submitted throughout the school year.

On February 7th and February 8th, KOB, broadcasting station at Albuquerque, read an interesting paper pertaining to Lincoln county. Such items as climate, historical background, and rural schools were included in this set-up.

The Chaves County Archaeological and Historical Society at Roswell has extended a cordial invitation to all schools of the county to participate in the flag salute to be given at the dedication service of El Torreon which will be given at Lincoln on Sunday, February 24th at 11 A. M. They would appreciate a large attendance at this meeting.

The Heison P. T. A. installed a modern drinking-fountain system with the aid of the FERA. It is hoped the children will appreciate this new sanitary installation given for their benefit and pleasure.

You can see the low prices . . . the lowest ever placed on cars of such high quality. You can prove the greater operating economy. For tests show that the new Chevrolets give even higher gasoline and oil mileage than did last year's models. And as for performance . . . well, there's only one thing we ask you to do . . . decide with a ride! ### SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, his health broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, a neighbor. There is at once a mutual attraction, but Prudence suspects man since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife, Leni Calloway, tries to buy Prue's timber, but she contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. David comes to the farm. A clown appears, advertising a circus in a nearby town. Prue accompanies Rod and Jean to the show. Chicot, an old clown, is accidentally killed. He was the grandfather of Milly Gooch, one of the circus riders. Rod became friendly with Milly when she lived on Prosperity Farm. Calloway intimidates available laborers so that they cannot be hired to cut the timber for Rodney Gerard. Milly Gooch broke her engagement to Calloway; he believes Rod was the cause and has since been his enemy. After the accident to Chicot, Rod calls on Milly to see if he can be of any help. Prue hardens herself still more against Rod when she sees in the newspaper a flashlight picture of him with Milly.

CHAPTER VII

With sighs of relaxation Gerard and Armstrong, in the tweeds in which they had come from a long day in the woods, settled into deep chairs before the fire in the library at High Ledges and lighted their pipes.

"I'll say I started something when I set out to thin my woods!" Gerard said. "I thought that all that was necessary was to chop down a few trees and there we were. Now it seems that I have embarked on a life work. Puffer was to report on the labor question this afternoon. There he is now! That's Si's voice when he is excited. If doesn't sound good to me. Come in, Si."

Puffer stood in the doorway. He chuckled.

"Howdy, Jim! Don't have to ask how you two are, Rod. Kinder beat out, ain't ye?"

Gerard pulled himself stiffly to his feet and drew an inviting chair nearer the fire. "All right, old-timer, shoot."

"No use beatin' bout the bush. I've been to every village within a hundred miles an' I can't get a man to work for ye, Rod. They're afraid of Calloway. I guess we're up against it, all right."

"We can't be up against it, Si. That timber must be cut. I'll find some hunkies somewhere who haven't sold out body and soul to Len Calloway. Do we need skilled lumbermen, Jim?"

"No. Skilled labor would save time and money, but with you and Puffer, and me to boss a crew we could get the wood out."

Patch, the butler, appeared at the door.

"Miss and Mr. Schuyler."

Gerard doubted his ears. Prue here! He heard Jean's exclamation, "Oh goody!" as he crossed the room to welcome the girl and her brother. His lips tightened at the hostility in her eyes as they met his. It was abundantly evident that he was still in disgrace for his passionate outburst of yesterday. With difficulty he kept his voice steady.

"This is a clear case of thought transference. How did you know that we need your advice and your brother's at this very moment, Prue? Come over by the fire, Dave."

Schuyler laughed. "How you all conspire to spoil me! We are not so neighborly as we seem. We were driven here for shelter."

Prudence smiled radiantly at Armstrong, and explained:

"Dave and I have been to the village to barter eggs and poultry for groceries. Just as we reached this drive, Success belted her name and passed out. I didn't dare let Dave sit in the cold car—it is beginning to snow—while I probed for internal disturbances; he flatly refused to leave me in the dark road—he had the escaped convict on his mind—so here we are. Now that he is warm and comfy, perhaps you will come out with me, Jim, and help diagnose the engine trouble."

Gerard spoke to the man who had been laying wood on the fire.

"Patch, tell Judkins to look over Miss Schuyler's car. When he has it in shape, let me know."

He turned to Prudence. "Your arrival is uncannily opportune, partner. Jim, Si, and I have struck a snag."

"All is not serene on the logging front!" Prudence asked anxiously.

"Calloway again? I hope you haven't permanently incurred that man's enmity because you are helping us."

"That's only a little gas spilled on the fire, Dave. Len is drunk with the idea of his importance in this community."

Hands clasped on her knees, Prudence leaned forward. "It makes me see fiery plowheels in frenzied revolution when I think of Calloway's power. He will find that I won't stand being dictated to."

Gerard's relief left his lips for an instant. Yesterday she had been saving for Len. Had she been put, say up a bluff to defy the man who had burned her, or had Calloway chopped off his own head by a stupid move? Whatever the explanation, the fact remained that she was still relying upon the original plan for getting out her timber.

"Jim, suppose no one here will work for us? What shall we do?"

Gerard's recent satisfaction burned up in anger. She was deliberately ignoring him. He cut in:

"We'll have to hire men from outside the state. I'm going to New York tomorrow to try my luck there."

"New York!" David Schuyler repeated thoughtfully. "What sort of men do you need for the work in the woods, Rodney?"

"Husky lads, Jim will do the head work and Si and I will drive the crew," Gerard answered.

"We need men who can swing an ax and cut as we direct," Armstrong elaborated.

"You said you were going to New York to look for them. I have been thinking—"

"If you have a suggestion, for Pete's sake, don't hold out on us, Dave!"

"It may not be worth the breath to state it, Rodney. I was wondering if some of the men at the Rescue mission might not fit in. They're a rough lot, but there are about twenty of them who are devoted to me. If they came, I could keep them straight while they worked, I think, but where would they live? The villagers wouldn't take them in; I wouldn't ask it."

Gerard did a sum in lightning calculation. "They could live in the big cattle barn down by the pond. I'll have bunks built, wood stoves would heat it, and get a cook from New York to feed them. Whoops! I believe you've solved the problem! I'll pay any wages you say—providing, of course, my partner approves the plan."

Prudence shook her head. "The plan is all right, but you must make allowance for the fact that Dave believes that his boys like 'all God's chillen got wings' when they are exposed to the right spiritual conditions."

Her brother's fine eyes were alight with enthusiasm.

"You're wrong, Prue, they have more sporting spirit than you think. Most of them never have had a chance. Suppose we set three or four permanently on their feet and incidentally get the timber out. Wouldn't that be worth while? What say, Gerard?"

"I think it's keen. Give me a letter to the head of the Rescue mission and I will go to New York tomorrow."

"I'll go with you."

"David!"

"Don't spike our plan, Prue, with fear for me. I must be sure that the boys understand the proposition. Don't make an invalid of me. I'm through with that. I'm going."

"Of course, if that's the way you feel about it, Dave, who am I to stand in your way?"

"Glad you realize your unimportance, Prue." Her brother smiled at her.

"Shall we go tomorrow, Rodney?" His voice had the eagerness of a boy's about to fare forth on an adventure.

"Yes. Perhaps you'll come and see us off." Gerard's eyes were on Prudence. Jean caught his arm.

"You couldn't take me, could you, Uncle Rod? This house will seem awful big without you." She swallowed hard.

"Let Jean come and stay with me." "Oh, Uncle Rod, may I stay with Miss Prue while you're away? I'll be as good as gold."

"Do you really want her?" For the first time since she had entered the room Gerard felt that Prudence looked at him. "Just a moment, K. K. Do you really want her, Prue?"

"Of course I want her."

"Okay then. Come over and see off your brother, Prue, then Jim will drive you and Jean back to the red brick house."

"The car is in running order, sir," announced Patch.

"Then we must go at once, Dave. Jane Mack will think we have been held up by that prisoner who escaped day before yesterday. I wish you success, Mr. Gerard, but just wait till you see Terry McGowan and Shance O'Shea. I tremble to think what the villagers will say when they see that colorful and hear that profane aggregation which you are planning to hurl into their unsuspecting midst."

"I guess if you and Rod can stand them, Dave, the rest of us can," encouraged Si Puffer. "Most of us are all-fired sick of Calloway and his tootin'." His father was a big man in the community, but the son—well, whatta mean is, I don't wonder that Milly Gooch—"

"His eyes met Gerard's. "Gorry-me, I guess I better get a move on and measure that cattle barn right off so's we can get those bunks in."

As he left the room, Gerard turned to look at Prudence, who was talking gaily with Jim Armstrong. Something in the bend of his friend's head tightened a band around Rodney's heart.

As Armstrong crossed the room to speak to David Schuyler, Prue's hands tightened on Prudence's shoulders.

"Just a minute, girl. I know why you are flirting so outrageously with Jim, but has it occurred to you that what may be fun to you may prove a knockout for him?"

Prudence twisted free and asked with suspicious sweetness:

"Suppose I am not flirting?"

"Dark, isn't it? Pitch-black roads must be a state of Maine specialty," Prudence commented, as she bent forward to look through the windshield against which an occasional big snowflake splashed and melted. "Tomorrow you will be winging to New York. Jean and I will tie us to the post office daily for letters."

"We'll keep you informed as to progress, I'm glad you asked Jean to stay with you. That girl is growing a soul."

"Curious that she has so little love for either of her parents. Usually a child adores one of them."

"Have you heard anything about her father which sounds lovable? As for her mother—she is the type of know-it-all females who fires me with a desire to hurl something at her, preferably something that will squash. Know the urge?"

"To a quiver, it's wonderful to hear you laugh again."

"It is a sound to which you will get accustomed from now on. When I opened my eyes this morning, it seemed as if I emerged from a smothering fog into light and life—full, vigorous, courageous life—with a renewed assurance of the indestructibility of the human soul. Through the corridors of my mind echoed the fragment of a verse I haven't thought of for years:

"Lengthening roads that wind through dust and heat to hilltops clear. Hilltops clear! I awoke on one this morning. Here we are. Those lighted windows in the red brick look like brilliant eyes watching for us. Nice old house."

"I love it. Always feel like patting it as I pass."

David Schuyler turned as he stepped from the car.

"It helps to hear you say that, Prue. You don't know how troubled I have been that for me you gave up your friends and work in the city to come into the country. If you had been disappointed—"

Prudence laughed. "I discontented! Somebody once said, 'Tragedy is chic but discontent is dowdy.' Now, I ask you, can you think of me as being 'dowdy'?"

"I can think of you only as being the best little sport on earth," her brother commended gaily.

David wouldn't think her the best little sport on earth if he knew how tight and choky her throat was at the thought of his making the trip to the city. Suppose it were to undo all the good that life in the country had accomplished, Prudence asked herself the next morning, as, before breakfast, she ran down the stairs. She stopped in amazement as Rodney Gerard, David, and Jane Mack stepped from her shop.

"What in the world—have you changed your plans?" she demanded, and drew a quick sigh of relief. "What has happened? You three look—"

"Can't Rodney come to tell me of something extra to pack, Prue, without turning your eyes into huge interrogation points?" David Schuyler demanded with assumed indignation.

"Of course, but—"

"I'll be seeing you, Dave. Prue, be sure that he wears his warm coat. Keep me posted, Miss Mack." (With the last request Rodney Gerard closed the front door behind him.)

Prudence looked from her brother's amused eyes to Jane Mack's flushed face.

"What are you to keep him posted about, Macky?"

"Mr. Gerard knows that I'm kind of anxious about that prisoner who's on the loose, and with no man in the house—"

"Forget it!" David Schuyler interrupted. "Look over my bag and see if I have everything I need, will you, Prue?"

Excitement over the trip was certainly doing David good, not harm. His eyes were brighter, his face less careworn, Prudence decided an hour later, as standing between Jim Armstrong and Jean she watched Rodney Gerard's plane take off from the landing field which had a double runway, east-west, north-south.

Jean slipped an arm in Prue's and one in Armstrong's as they crossed the field which bordered a pond. Prudence commented upon the lure of ponds in general and this one in particular.

"What a place to skate!" she exclaimed in conclusion.

"It's a bear!" Jean agreed. "Perhaps Uncle Rod will have a skating party for us. Ask him, will you, Miss Prue?"

"We'll wait until the timber is cut before we ask for parties. You understand, K. K., don't you, that the object of your uncle's trip to New York is to be kept a deep, dark secret?"

Jean scowled. "Do you think I'd tell? I'm not dumb if I'm not pretty. Well, for crying out loud!"

They had approached the front door of High Ledges. Prue's eyes followed Jean's as the girl stopped short to stare at the man at the top of the steps.

He was of medium height and slimly built. He might be forty-five, though he looked thirty-five. His sleek black hair was gray at the temples; his eyebrows were not much heavier than his clipped dark mustache; high cheek bones added to the impression of enormous eyes. His lips were full and red. Jean sniffed.

"Wouldn't you know it! Wouldn't you know he'd appear just as I was getting ready to have some fun!" She looked at Prudence through tear-filled eyes. "In case you don't know, that's my father."

Walter Gerard urbanely introduced himself. Prue noted the puffiness under his eyes, the unsteadiness of his hands. She recognized his type. She had had one like him in the family.

Sandow, the Strong Man, Was Weakening, When Boy

The world's most famous strong man was Eugen Sandow, who, while he lived, was the strongest man on earth, says a writer in the Kansas City Times. He died in 1925. Sandow did not always have an extraordinary physique. Born in Konigsberg, Prussia, in 1867, he was in his youth a weakling, and his family many times despaired of his reaching manhood. His father, a jeweler, believed travel would improve the boy's health, and the two visited a number of foreign countries, among them Italy, where Eugen, then sixteen, became interested in the statues of Greek and Roman demigods. If they had had such wonderful bodies, Sandow reasoned, why couldn't persons of the present age? He believed physical training was the answer, and he immediately began a course of such development, using dumbbells and weights. He studied anatomy, and within a few years he was rewarded by the growth of his muscles. No longer a weakling, he gave private exhibitions to his friends, who marveled at the change.

Sandow was 5 feet 8 1/2 inches tall and weighed never less than 190, nor more than 200 pounds. His chest, normal, was 52 inches; expanded it was 61 inches; his biceps measured, flexed, 19 1/2 inches; calf, 18 1/2; ankles and wrists were relatively small; fingers well shaped and well cared for.

Bakeries Rank Ninth Among Canada's Trades; Are Paid $15,000,000 in Wages

The days when every thrifty housewife baked her own bread have gone into history. In the early settlement of Canada home bread making was almost universal, but now there are comparatively few localities which are not served by the commercial bakery.

A return issued by the Canadian government bureau of statistics indicates the commercial importance of the bread making and allied industries. Statistics were gathered from more than 2,900 firms, not including hotels, restaurants and public institutions which bake their own bread. The industry is found to rank ninth in value of products made and fifth in the amount of salaries and wages paid; the capital invested amounts to nearly $50,000,000, and over $15,000,000 is paid in wages and salaries.

The consumption of material, most of which is produced in Canada, amounts to $23,431,275. The products are classified as: Bread, valued at $40,110,843; pies, cakes, cookies and pastry, $9,978,733; and buns, $2,463,042. To produce these quantities of food required more than 1,000,000 pounds of butter, nearly 5,000,000 dozen eggs, over 3,000,000 barrels of flour, over 3,000,000 pounds of fruit and about the same quantity of lard, and 36,000,000 pounds of sugar.

Mrs. Hardface was trailing her diminutive husband round the store much against his will. After purchasing several articles she paused and looked pensive. "Ah," she said at last, "I remember. We want a lamp-shade for the drawing room light."

Presently the article in question caught her eye. "There's the very lamp-shade I wanted!" she cried. "It's two guineas. Don't you think it will do John?"

He shook his head. "No, my dear," he replied miserably. "I think it's a shade-too-dear."

Betrayed—Bagshaw was pouring out his unhappy experience to his friend at the club.

"And what caused you to leave before the meeting was over?" asked the latter.

Bagshaw looked uncomfortable. "Well," he stammered, "the lecturer stated that one's shady character is denoted on the lower part of the face."

"Well, what of that?" asked the other.

The dejected one lowered his voice. "Why," he murmured, "I've got a double chin."

Good Bag—Jones came along the street looking wet and unhappy. "Hello," said his neighbor: "Where have you been?"

"Fishing," replied Jones mournfully.

"Catch much?" was the question.

"A lot," Jones replied. "First train there; first train back. Caught in a thunder storm; caught a cold."

"And—an after-thought—I shall catch it when I get home."

By GLENN HUNTER

Actor.

"IT WAS with a heavy heart that I had to go to the theater every day to play a part, while my young brother lay desperately ill," related Glenn Hunter, famous portrayer of juvenile roles.

"At one part of the play the whole cast, with the exception of myself, was on the stage. This wait always occurred during a matinee, a few minutes before 4. I dreaded this wait. I did not want to be alone.

"Mary Boland's dressing room was nearest the telephone. I went into this dressing room hoping the phone would ring with a good message for me.

"The theater, off-stage, in the dressing rooms, was strangely quiet, except for the ticking of my watch. I took my watch out of my pocket. It was exactly 4 o'clock. I put it away.

"Then clearly, distinctly, came four slow, long knocks at my door. A pause separated each one. Quickly, I jumped to my feet and opened the door. There was no one in sight. I searched the dim corridor and could find no one. Shivers ran up and down my back. I asked the electricians and the stage hands if they had seen anyone going to or from the dressing room. They had not.

"The cue came for my entrance on the stage. Again I entered into my part.

"When I returned home I found my brother dead. I asked mother what time he died.

"Four o'clock," she said.

Earliest Game Laws

The earliest game laws in America probably were the hunting privileges granted in 1629 by the West India Co. to persons starting colonies in New Netherlands (New York), and the provisions regarding the right of hunting in the Massachusetts Bay Colonial Ordinance of 1647 and the New Jersey Concessions Agreement of 1678. The first federal game law was passed in 1832 and is the oldest one on the statute books. It was in force until the admission of Oklahoma as a state in 1907. It prohibited the capture of game in the Indian territory by any persons other than Indians, except for subsistence.—New York World-Telegram.

Matter of Cake

"Thomas, what is the matter with your brother?" asked the mother of the boys.

"He's crying," replied Thomas, "because I'm eating my cake and won't give him any."

"Is his own cake finished?" asked the mother.

"Yes, and he cried while I was eating that, too."

"Yes. Don't know how I caught it, but it seems—"

"Now, look here. I know a sure cure—that is, if you take it right away."

MAN ONCE FREE FROM DISEASE?

All Bodily Ills Attributed to Contacts

It is believed that there was no such thing as disease in the earliest ages of man, that is about 10,000 B. C.

It was only when the contacts of village life, commercial routes, and the domestication of animals were established that circumstances became favorable for the spread of disease from one person to another and from animals to man.

Man's conception of danger was to meet the saber-toothed tiger with nothing but a club with which to defend himself.

Disease in those times was thought to be the influence of demons or spirits, and to cure disease the spirit must be induced to leave the body.

The disease could be got out

quicker-by-cutting-holes-or-beating

Sometimes nauseous medicines were administered to coax the spirit out of the body, while at other times charms and incantations were used in order to transfer the spirit to another person.

Protection from disease was effected by wearing charms and by making predictions founded upon a study of the stars.

In spite of the passage of 10,000 years we still take nauseating medicines, use charms, depend upon our luck to escape disease, and cut holes in the body in order to eradicate it.

The Egyptians knew more about the prevention of disease and were healthier than any other ancient people.

In the beginning of time religion dictated such medical practice as was carried out, and this led to cleanliness, which, of course, is the first principle of hygiene.

Excellent sewage systems have been found in ancient civilization, and water closets, flushing systems, sedimentation tanks, water systems were present 3000 B. C. Moses was educated along Egyptian lines and his ideas of public health were transmitted to the Jews.

Moses learned from the Egyptians that if the people were to be healthy an inhabited area must be kept free from the accumulations of refuse, the latter being disposed of by burying it in the soil.

The second principle was that of segregation of all those who had an infectious disease, and the third dwelt with personal hygiene, cleanliness of food, and avoidance of contact with those who had an obvious contagious disease.

The ancient Greeks gathered up the existing knowledge and gave it a scientific bent, so that by 600 B. C. a great deal was known about hygiene.

Their greatest contribution was the idea of personal fitness, that children should be trained from infancy to be healthy. On this basis, gymnasia, hot and cold baths, pure water, and fresh air were available to everyone.

By 300 B. C. cities were laid out with straight streets, with parks, open spaces, and plenty of room for sunlight. Hospitals were built by the Greeks, using hydrotherapy, dieting, and suggestion in the treatment of illnesses.

In ancient Rome the houses were constructed of brick and stone, containing numerous windows and were heated by hot air furnaces, while the hospital system was greatly enlarged.—Detroit News.

Significance in Period of Child's First Steps

There are no signs of superiority in children who take their first steps before they reach fifteen months, according to a study made at the University of Pennsylvania.

But those children long retarded in walking, especially after reaching the fifteen-month period, which is considered the average to begin walking, are significantly inferior, as a rule, the results of the study suggest.

Conducted by Dr. Miles Murphy, assistant professor of psychology, the study is based on the records of 712 children brought to the psychological clinic during a period of five years. Of these, a total of 350 had been diagnosed as normal by psychological examiners, and the remainder as feeble-minded.

The records show that of the normal children, for whom the average age of walking was 14.59 months, approximately 20 per cent started to walk before they were one year of age; approximately 60 per cent between twelve and seventeen months, and the remaining 20 per cent at eighteen months or later.

Help Scientific Study
Miniature earthquakes, created by setting off small charges of dynamite, are helping scientists study deep-lying rock structures of the earth, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Sensitive instruments record the "earthquakes." By studying the effects of these explosions it is possible to locate accurately underlying strata of rock as deep as 40,000 feet below the surface. The apparatus also is used to locate earthquake faults, to study the velocity with which earth tremors are propagated, to locate oil shale and to measure the depth of alluvial deposits. Dynamite charges vary from one to forty pounds. The explosive and recording instruments are carried on a special truck outfitted by scientists of the California Institute of Technology.

DISEASE SPREAD BY GAME BIRDS

"When we draft a full list of the most deadly diseases that spread widely and operate virulently to destroy game birds in the United States, we are appalled by the variety, extent and thoroughness of these curses upon game—and sportsmen," says Dr. William T. Hornaday. "Really, it looks as if Fate had, in sheer vindictiveness, opened Pandora's box and handed out all these curses as punishments upon sportsmen for their unfair and often brutal treatment of our lovely game birds."

"Rabbits, squirrels and men have tularemia in California, Missouri, Maryland, and we know not how many other states. Among men there are about 600 cases annually, and 5 per cent of them are fatal!"

"Rats and mice spread bubonic and typhoid fever by fleas and ticks. "Ground squirrels spread spotted fever among men, in Idaho and elsewhere."

"Unidentified rodents spread a new relapsing fever among men, California and Texas are under investigation."

"Coyotes spread rabies, in some portions of the West."

"California valley quail are scourged by a new blood parasite (Hemeproteus) from Tule lake to San Diego."

"Other quail species are afflicted by round worms and eight other parasites."

"Twelve diseases and parasites afflict ruffed grouse, from Maine to Minnesota."

"Various poisons—and Leucocytozoon—afflict 36 species of our ducks in many localities, and destroy thousands."

"It is chiefly hunters, guides and cooks who are killed by contact with the dead bodies of disease-laden mammals and birds. Kind-hearted publicists in conservation urge all hunters to cook their disease-laden game very thoroughly. 'Always eat your chestnuts bled, my son,' said an old man. Get Rid of Poisons That Make You Ill

IS a constant headache keeping you miserable? Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; attacks of dizziness, rheumatic pains, swollen feet and ankles? Do you feel tired, nervous—all unstrung?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits poisons to stay in the blood and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They help the kidneys cleanse the blood of health-destroying poisonous waste. Doan's Pills are used and recommended the world over. Get them from any druggist.

Pimples on Face Never Could Shave

Healed by Cuticura

"Three years ago my face and arms broke out with a skin eruption that was followed by large, red pimples. They festered and went all over my face and arms. They itched and burned and I could never shave. I lost much rest at night with them."

"Nothing I tried helped very much. Then I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased them. I used about four cakes of Cuticura Soap and one and a-half boxes of Cuticura Ointment and now I feel like a new man. I am completely healed." (Signed) Harry R. Hall, 3953 14th Ave., Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 26, 1934.

Elks' Good-Will Tour

To carry a message of good will and an invitation to Elks throughout the country to attend the national convention at Columbus, Ohio, the week of July 15, eight Master De Luxe Chevrolets have been selected by the Elks as the official cars for the 1932 Good-Will Tour.

The purple and white fleet, carrying the good-will ambassadors, will visit Elks' Lodges throughout the United States, traversing the country via four transcontinental routes. Two cars will set out from Boston, two from Tallahassee, Fla., and four from Sacramento, Cal. The two cars from Boston will visit the Lodges of New England and the eastern Atlantic states. The cars from Florida's capital will renew acquaintances with members of the Elks of the southern and mid-western states. Two of the cars from Sacramento will journey northward along the Pacific coast as far as Seattle and then swing east to visit points in the northwest and midwest; the other two cars from California will journey south as far as San Diego and then head east through Texas and southwestern states. All eight cars will end their journeys prior to the opening of the Grand Lodge convention at Columbus, Ohio.

Each car will be accompanied by a professional entertainer of repute whose talent will be used to assist in entertainment programs which mark the welcoming ceremonies on the arrival of the cars in the hundreds of cities scheduled to be visited.

The Good-Will Tour has become a yearly event since its inception in 1929. Every state in the Union has been visited as well as almost every city where there is an Elks' Lodge. Governors of states, mayors of cities, and two presidents of the United States have participated in receiving and speeding the Good Will messengers on their long journeys. The 1935 itinerary, increased in magnitude and scheduled with railroad-like precision, includes many more localities than in previous years.

Elks' officials in charge of the tour stated that the importance of the event warranted the use of cars having the essential qualities needed to endure the wear and tear of a transcontinental journey. In addition to these requirements, they stated, the nature of the tour merited the use of cars which would reflect the latest in engineering and design. The accessibility of Chevrolet dealerships throughout the country, facilitating daily inspection and grooming of the tour cars, was a factor in the selection of Chevrolets as the official cars for 1935. Elks' officials also pointed out.
