CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY MAR 29, 1935

NUMBER 43

Regulations

Grazing Act

The tentative draft of the specific regulations for the administration of the Taylor grazing law drawn up by the state advisory committee at Albuquerque this week were released by C. M. Botts, chairman of the committee and president of the Southwestern Conservation League.

The regulations provide for the setting up of a state committee on public cooperation. The membership of which will consist of the land commissioner; a representative from the secretary of interior, Cattle Growers and Wool Growers Associations; State Game Department; State Game Protective Association; The University of New Mexico; State College; Southwestern Conservation League, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs. The committee will hold regular meetings on the first Tuesday in January, April, July, and October. The annual meeting will be in April.

Officers will be a chairman, vice-chairman and secretary-treasurer, each chosen for one term.

District Committee

Each district grazing committee will be made up of six members with six of them qualifying as experienced livestock growers for the preceding seven years to their election, and holders of preferential permits in the district.

The seventh member must be a resident of the district and will be a representative of wild life and recreational resources. Each member of this committee will serve one year.

The proportion of cattle and sheep growers serving on the committee will be established by setting up zones. The proportion of cattle zones to sheep zones in the district will represent the approximate proportion of cattle units to sheep units in the district.

Sheep and Cattle

A cattle unit is defined in the regulations as one head with a sheep unit as composed of seven head.

The state committee will have the power to remove from office any member of a district committee who is unqualified or who fails to discharge the duties of his office. Vacancies will be filled by the state committee.

When Appointed

The first district committees will be appointed as soon as possible after the organization of the state committee.

Specifically the district committee will have the following powers, subject to the approval of the Department of the Interior and right of appeal:

District Powers

(A) To determine the eligibility of an applicant to a permit and the extent of use to which he is entitled.

(B) To determine the carrying capacity and seasonal use of all or any part of public domain within the district.

(C) To recommend to the secretary the issuance of a permit to construct on the public lands within the district improvements mentioned in section 4 of the act and to appraise the reasonable value of improvements to be taken over by an applicant from prior applicant as provided in section 4 of the act.

(D) To settle differences relating to use of the public domain between users within the district.

(E) To determine questions relating to fair range practices, consistent with good range management.

(F) To establish protective, exemption, and maximum livestock limits.

District Boundaries

(G) To consider and recommend to the state committee proposals for change in district boundaries, and for withdrawal of isolated tracts from the district.

(H) To recommend the establishment of suitable and necessary driveways within the district.

(I) To report to the department any known willful violations of the act or of rules or regulations thereunder.

(J) To determine all questions not covered by rule or regulations in accordance with local custom.

For Approval Here

Following the approval of the regulations as drawn by the committee, at the meetings of the New Mexico Cattle Growers and New Mexico Wool Growers at Roswell this week, they will be taken to Washington about April first by C. M. Botts for presentation to Secretary of the Interior Harold E. Ickes for his consideration and approval.

Reid Dudley, S. S. Supt.

The Sunday School is preparing a special Missionary program to be given next Sunday morning at the Sunday School hour.

The pastor will preach at eleven-thirty.

We are beginning a ten days or two weeks series of special services next Sunday. The pastor will teach the book: "From Bethlehem to Olivet," a study of the life of Christ from His Birth to His Ascension. These lessons will have a definite evangelistic appeal, and everybody in the community is urged to attend.

We have tried a great many different schemes, remedies and nostrums in the effort to get ourselves out of the "Depression," and now it might prove a good thing to try the only real remedy for our troubles: A return to the God of our fathers. A study of the history of the world reveals the fact that just so long as a nation or a people were faithful to Jehovah, that was a prosperous people or nation, but when the people wandered away from the Lord of Hosts, and felt themselves too big to submit to Him, they found themselves in serious troubles sooner or later, and their only hope for relief from these difficulties lay in their return to Him.

N. Mex. Air Base Boosted

New Mexico is being boosted as site of an army air base by Rep. J. J. Dempsey, who last week presented to the house subcommittee on military affairs the advantages of New Mexico as the location of the proposed base.

Trained Men For Graziers

The fight of congressman John J. Dempsey to amend the Taylor Act to insure selection of trained men for the position of graziers is apparently headed for success.

As a result of Dempsey's objections to the qualification provisions in the original bill, which allowed men with certain "college credits" to be appointed, an amendment has been drafted providing:

"... the basis of merit for the selection of such graziers shall be livestock range experience and no person shall be selected who has not had at least seven years actual experience in the livestock business in the public range states, and providing that any educational requirements that may be prescribed shall be by test and not by any fixed rule."

LET US HAVE PEACE!

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

YORKTOWN was a great event, Saratoga was a great event, and there have been great events in our history since the War of the Revolution; but the greatest was that which occurred on April 9, 1865, at the little village of Appomattox, when General Lee met General Grant and the question of the indissoluble union of these States passed into history, never to be revived.

Those were the words of a man who was not only an eye witness to but an active participant in that "greatest event." He was Col. Charles Marshall, aide-de-camp, military secretary and assistant general on the staff of the Confederate commander from 1862 to 1865, and the quotation is from his collected papers which were edited by a distinguished British soldier, Major Sir Frederick Maurice, and published by Little, Brown and company under the title of "An Aide-de-Camp of Lee." The quotation continues:

"Perhaps the most impressive feature of that occasion was the fact that three American soldiers met together, who dealt with each other as American soldiers. If the officers of General Grant's army had been instructed how to act; if they had learned their parts; if they had been taught by the greatest actors how to play them, how to act at a time when one of the loftiest souls that God ever sent upon earth was humbled, how to act so as to show their respect and remembrance they could not have done better than they did. They could not have done better, because they were and behaved as American soldiers; they loved their enemies and they did good to those who hated them."

Such is the tribute of one who wore the gray to those who wore the blue on that historic April day 70 years ago and it is a striking bit of evidence of the essential spirit which will be forever associated with the name of Appomattox. Although three years were yet to elapse before one of the principal actors in its drama should use the exact phrasing of "Let us have peace!" yet that thought runs like a golden thread through the dark fabric of the days of useless bloodshed and blighted hopes immediately preceding the climax, through the letters which passed between Lee and Grant as the inevitable end drew near.

Since the story of Appomattox properly begins with that correspondence, it is appropriate to take into account those foreshadowing events in telling the story of Appomattox. By the end of March, 1865, it was apparent that the Confederacy was a "lost cause" indeed. Slowly but surely the sledge-hammer blows of Grant's overwhelming forces had beaten down the resistance of Lee's fast-dwindling ranks of ragged men in gray. The opening week of April found both Grant and Lee weary of war—Grant tortured with headaches and heart-sick over the slaughter he had been forced to bring about; Lee, all hope of victory gone, weighed down with the responsibility that was his for finding some way to save his starving army.

Richmond had been lost. The Confederate government was in flight. Lee's only hope was to escape from the trap that Grant and Sheridan and Meade were closing around him and try to join forces with Gen. Joseph Johnston. On April 6 Dr. Ewell's corps was surrounded at Sailor's Creek and surrendered, and after this disaster Lee's Army of Northern Virginia was reduced to two corps under the command of Generals Longstreet and Gordon. They retreated through Farmville closely pursued by Grant's men in blue.

On April 7 Grant sent Lee his first letter, asking the surrender of his army. Still confident of the fighting ability of his men and believing it possible to save the remnant of his army, Lee wanted to continue the struggle, but his officers prevailed upon him to open negotiations. The result was a letter to Grant asking the terms he would offer on condition of the surrender of Lee's army.

To this Grant replied: General—Your note of last evening, in reply to mine of same date, asking the condition on which I will accept the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, is just received. In reply, I would say, that peace being my great desire, there is but one condition I would insist upon; namely, that the men and officers surrendered shall be disqualified for taking up arms against the government of the United States, until properly exchanged. I will meet you, or will designate officers to meet any officers you may name for the same purpose, at any point agreeable to you, for the purpose of arranging definitely the terms upon which the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia will be received.

The next letter from Lee read as follows: General—I received at a late hour your note of today. In mine yesterday I did not intend to propose the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, but to ask the terms of your proposition. To be frank, I do not think the emergency has arisen to call for the surrender of this army; but, as the restoration of peace should be the sole object of all, I desire to know whether your proposals would lead to that end. I can not therefore meet you with a view to surrender the Army of Northern Virginia; but, as far as your proposal may affect the Confederate States forces under my command, and tend to the restoration of peace, I should be pleased to meet you at ten a. m. tomorrow, on the old stage road to Richmond, between the picket lines of the two armies.

In the meantime Lee was pushing on toward Appomattox Court House where Gordon, attempting to open the way for retreat, had broken through the cavalry forces barring his road only to find himself confronted by a force of infantry so far superior to his wearied and starving command that an attack would have been suicide. So he sent word to Lee that it was impossible to advance farther and upon receiving this news the commander-in-chief, accompanied by Colonel Marshall, his aide-de-camp, started down the Lynchburg road the next morning, confident that Grant would meet him even though he had not yet received a reply from the Union commander. Halted by a skirmish of Union troops, Marshall went forward under a white flag and was met by Lieutenant Colonel Whittier, who gave him Grant's reply to Lee's letter of the previous day. It read:

General—Your note of yesterday received. I have no authority to treat on the subject of peace. The meeting for ten a. m. today would lead to no good. I will state, however, general, that I am equally anxious for peace with yourself; and the whole North entertains the same feeling. The terms upon which peace can be had are well understood. By the South laying down their arms, they will hasten that most desirable event, save thousands of human lives, and hundreds of millions of property not yet destroyed. Seriously hoping that all our difficulties may be settled without the loss of another life, I subscribe myself, etc.

Lee then directed Marshall to write to the Union commander, asking for an interview, and to deliver it to Whittier, which was done. Sitting on his horse and hastily tearing a leaf from his notebook, Grant dashed off a note telling the Southern commander that he would "push forward to the front for the purpose of meeting you."

When Colonel Babcock of Grant's staff arrived to deliver this note, Lee, fatigued from being in the saddle all night long, was lying on some blankets that had been spread by members of his staff for him under an apple tree at the foot of a hill, on the other side of which stood Appomattox Court House.

Then occurred the incident which thrust fame upon an obscure citizen of Virginia named Wilmer McLean and made his house one of the most famous in American history. It is an incident which also illustrates the strange workings of Fate, as shown by this passage from Marshall's book: "We started off—General Lee, Colonel Babcock, Colonel Babcock's orderly, one of our orderlies and myself. We struck up the hill towards Appomattox. There was a man named McLean who used to live on the first battle field of Manassas (Hull Run), at a house about a mile from Manassas Junction. He didn't like the war, and having seen the first battle of Manassas, he thought he would get away where there wouldn't be any more fighting, so he moved down to Appomattox Court House. General Lee told me to go forward and find a house where he could meet General Grant, and of all people, whom should I meet but McLean. I rode up to him and said, 'Can you show me a house where General Lee and General Grant can meet together?' He took me into a house that was all dilapidated and that had no furniture in it. I told him it wouldn't do. Then he said, 'Maybe my house will do.' He lived in a very comfortable house, and I told him I thought that would suit. I had taken the orderly along with me, and I sent him back to bring General Lee and Babcock, who were coming on behind. I went into the house and sat down, and after a while General Lee and Babcock came in."

So Wilmer McLean, the man who "didn't like the war," was an unexpected witness to two of its high spots, virtually its beginning and its ending. To this Virginian was given the unsought privilege of seeing the cause of the Confederacy gain its first height in the victory at Bull Run and recede to its lowest ebb at Appomattox, from which no tide ever rose again.

Half an hour later the men in McLean's parlor heard footsteps at the front door and in walked Grant. With him came his aide-de-camp, Dinky Col. A. C. Barker, the Ironclad Indian, "Fighting Phil" Sheridan, the stocky little Irish cavalry leader; and Generals Horace Porter and E. B. C. Ord.

After a brief talk over the terms of the surrender Colonel Parker, Grant's aide-de-camp, brought a little table from the corner of the room and on it the Union commander wrote out the terms of surrender. The Confederate officers were to give their individual paroles not to take up arms against the United States and to sign a like parole for their commands. All arms, artillery and public property were to be handed over to the Union forces, but the officers were to retain their side-arms, horses and personal baggage. The soldiers also were allowed to keep their horses, because, as Grant said, they would "need them for their spring plowing."

After Grant had written this note, he handed it to Lee, who read it over, then directed his aide, Colonel Marshall, to draft a reply in which he accepted the terms of surrender.

In the meantime, Parker had made a copy of Grant's letter. Says Marshall: "Then General Grant signed his letter, and I turned my letter over to General Lee and he signed it. Parker handed me General Grant's letter, and I handed him General Lee's reply, and the surrender was accomplished. There was no theatrical display about it. It was in itself perhaps the greatest tragedy that ever occurred in the history of the world, but it was the simplest, plainest, and most thoroughly devoid of any attempt at effect, that you can imagine."

Thus the Civil war came to an end and Appomattox became an historic name.

WHEN YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE

... use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage.

Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear-up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

"I was wondering if what I heard—"

"What did you hear?"

The three questions were perfectly synchronized as the men closed in. Jean's lips quivered nervously.

"I really didn't go to the gun room to listen, Uncle Rod, and I kept my fingers in my ears a long time, honest. I went there to—"

"Never mind what you went there for. What did you hear?"

With anxious eyes hovering from one face to the other, Jean told of the conversation between Walter Gerard and Len Calloway.

"I heard my father say, 'It's a payment on delivery proposition, Len? Sure!'"

"Tell me again, what time were they to meet?"

"At eight, Uncle Rod."

Gerard glanced at the clock. "We can make the smithy before that time easy in my roadster, Jim."

"Better pass the cattle barn first. We will leave Dave there to make his friendly call, then we'll go on and catch the conspirators red-handed."

Jean caught her uncle's arm. Her eyes were frightened.

"You won't hurt Father, will you? Perhaps I shouldn't have told—but I was afraid he might be making trouble for you and—Mr. David, a big tear rolled down her cheek, her breath caught in a sob—but Miss Prue said—"

"Prue! Did you tell her this same story?"

Surprise dried Jean's tears. "Of course, Uncle Rod. I tell her everything. What makes you so white?"

"What did she say, K. K. Quick, tell us everything."

"First she guessed Mr. Calloway had hired Father to boss a lumber crew—then she said perhaps they were planning a party for Milly Gooch—"

"Cut that. What else did Prue say?"

"She didn't say much more, except to ask me where the blacksmith shop was."

Gerard crossed the room to the telephone, and waited.

"Can't you get the house, Rodney?" David asked.

Gerard replaced the telephone. "No answer." He cleared his voice of huskiness. "This is movie night—she may have gone—that's a thought."

He picked up the phone again and gave the Puffers' number. Impulsive as she was, Prue couldn't have done such a mad thing as to go to the old blacksmith shop, he told himself. But suppose she had?

"Keep on ringing, operator, important."

"I'm making a break for the cattle barn, Rod."

Gerard nodded response to Armstrong's husky voice. Boy! How white he was! White. If he was so anxious about the girl to whom he was engaged, why waste a minute on that infernal crew? Why not make a break for the smithy?

"Pull yourself together!" he gritted his teeth. "It's just your crazy idea that Prue has gone to the shop. Probably Jim knows her too well to think she'd do such a fool thing."

He laid down the phone. "No answer, Dave."

Color stole back into Schuyler's face. "She has gone to the movies with the Puffers and Jane Mack of course. Let's get going, Rodney. If you mean to make the blacksmith shop before eight, we will have to hustle."

"Well, hustle, all right. Good-night, K. K. Go to bed and to sleep."

"You—you won't be too hard on Father, Uncle Rod?"

Gerard managed a smile. "Of course not. Why should I be? Miss Prue is right; probably Calloway has given him a job to boss a lumber crew. Be a good child. Don't worry. Let's get going, Dave!"

Neither man spoke as the black roadster raced along trailing a cloud of snow like the wake of a vessel. The tumult in Gerard's mind quieted. He certainly had had a brainstorm back in the living room. Of course Prue wouldn't go to the smithy. What did she really care about the firm of Schuyler and Gerard? Not a hang. Jim Armstrong was her—

"I feel, as if I ought to apologize to Prue," he cut in on his own conclusions—"for even thinking she would do such a dumb thing as to try to get to that shop."

"Do you? I don't. She would do that if she thought she could help. What's all the shouting for? Hear it? Must be the crew at the cattle barn."

"Hear it! It would rouse the Seven Sleepers! They are yelling now. Sound to me like an able-bodied riot with a night of two thrown in for good measure. Step on the gas, Rodney. I haven't helped much in the woods, but I can stop that."

The roadster sped on. The uproar increased. Gerard peered through the windshield. Something might be in the road—might be!

He ground on the emergency brake with a suddenness which flung them both against the windshield.

"What—"

Rodney Gerard was out of the roadster before David Schuyler could finish the sentence jerked out of him by the shock. He stared at the bulk sprawled across the road. A truck. Not one of his. Where had it come from to be on the pond road at this time of night?

"What the dickens is it, Rodney?" David Schuyler peered over his shoulder.

"A truck. Gone blooey. Not one of ours. That smash didn't just happen in this spot. I'll bet it's a plant. Calloway and Walt conspiring! What's the big idea? If it were our truck, the answer would be easy—holding up our shipment; but a strange—" He sniffed. "Oh, my gosh! Smell it!"

David Schuyler, who had been bending over the wreck, straightened.

"Smell it! I'll say I smell it. What master-mind conceived the scheme of wrecking that load of liquor in front of the bunk-house? We must keep my boys from finding this."

"Judging from the sounds of whoopees ahead, I'd say we were several hours too late. What a dirty trick! What a damnably dirty trick! Who's coming? Whoever it is won't get any more."

He picked up a bottle which had escaped breakage. "Clever guys. They didn't have the stuff cased. Just handed it to our crew all ready to drink." He swung his arm experimentally. "I haven't done much at hand-cracking lately, but I'll do my darndest with this."

David Schuyler seized the bottle. "Wait till you see the whites of his eyes, Rodney."

The light touch eased the tension. Gerard had been so angry that he wouldn't have cared where or how he hit; now his mouth was stretched in a grin. His muscles tightened. Who was coming?

"Rod! Rod!"

The sharp call was barely audible above the din in the bunk-house. Jim Armstrong! Of course! Gerard dropped the bottle. It cracked like a pistol shot.

"Rod! Rod! It's Jim! Put up your gun!"

Gerard laughed as Armstrong's face shone weirdly white in the glare of the roadster's lights.

"Haven't a gun. No such luck. That crack was a bottle passing out. Come on, Dave. Let's get round this mess so we can talk to Jim without yelling our heads off."

When they reached Armstrong, he shouted to make his voice carry above the din in the bunk-house.

"I bet it crosses lots on the short-cut trail. The men were raising the roof when I reached the bunk-house. I snugged in on their wild party. Had just time to see that they'd pulled blankets off the bunks, had scattered balsam boughs which served for mattresses all over the place, when a shower of tin cups deluged me—hadn't supposed there were that many in the world. The crowd roared as I backed out. I know when I'm in a hopeless minority. They've been fairly good-natured. Perhaps they will get sleepy and quiet down."

Gerard glanced at his wrist watch. "I'll give them two minutes; then I am going in. Think I will stand out-

"Who says so?"

Gerard recognized the burly brute who lurched forward as one of the two men who had deserted to Calloway. Had he driven and dumped the truck?

"Always merry and bright, aren't you, Kusko? Keep back! You're not in this! I'll talk with my own men."

"Sex he! He's givin' you the razzberry. You guys back there goin' to be told what you can do when you're not on the job?"

The men surged forward. Their muttering was an angry undertone to the bedlam in the bunk-house. Gerard counted. Eleven of them against three. Armstrong and Schuyler had closed in behind him. Why didn't they stay out of it? This was his fight. His and Calloway's. That last name steeled his muscles. Somewhere Len was gloating over the situation, might even now be looking on. He stepped forward. The shouting and singing inside the bunk-house ceased suddenly. The world was weirdly quiet; he could hear the hiss of a meteor overhead.

"Quit this fool business and go back, men. If you don't you'll lose your jobs tomorrow."

"Yeah! Listen, you guys!" Kusko swung forward and leered into Gerard's face. "Who'll this fella you call the Big Boss get to finish the job if he gives you your time? Let's teach this white-collar gent to keep-out-of-other guys' business when the day's work's done. What's he here for—"

Gerard caught the braggart by the collar of his plaid shirt, dragged him from his feet, and with stupendous effort flung him among the men.

"That's what I'm here for!" The words glistened between clamped teeth. "Anyone else want to know?"

For an instant the crowd hesitated, then with a concerted growl it lunged forward. Gerard's blood chilled. Ugly faces. Cruel faces. What would it feel like to be torn to pieces. A man died but once. He wasn't a man if he let a lot of dirty drunks tell him where to get off. His eyes narrowed. Which head would be punch first? He doubled his fist. He'd begin on that chinless mug and make it nose-less.

Boy! What a crack! He got this man. Northwest Mounted stuff. Why didn't Jim keep out of this?

"Look out!"

Someone yanked him aside, someone struck something that glittered out of Kusko's hand. It lay, long and keen and cruel, on the trampled snow.

"Keep out of this, Rodney." David Schuyler pulled him back. "Quit pounding that man, Jim. This is my job now."

He walked toward the silent men who, jaws dropped, stared at him with bleared eyes.

"Your little joke has gone far enough, boys." He clamped his foot down on the glittering knife. His voice was steel in a velvet sheath. "Nothing doing, Kusko!"

The man, who had crawled forward, glared at him from his knees and snatched back his dirty hand.

"Spiritual force against brute force. I seem to remember that as a noble experiment in a far-off country," panted Jim Armstrong at Gerard's shoulder.

Rodney nodded without moving his eyes from the group ahead. Every muscle was tense, he was ready to spring if a hand were laid on David Schuyler. The cool voice went on.

"McGowen, roll Kusko in the snow. Cool him off. Better all of you play Polar Bear. You—"

"Hi there!" yelled a man on the steps of the bunk-house. "Bring along that—"

Shouts behind him drowned his words. The sounds of scuffling followed, then a crash. Ominous silence for a second. Then yells of fright. One voice pierced the tumult:

"Look out! The stove! Fire! Fire!"

"I'll take care of the snooper hiding in here!"

At Calloway's harsh threat Prudence flung herself flat on the dirty floor behind the wood pile.

A light on the wall! How soon would Calloway grab her? It was coming her way! Had she better crawl out and appear nonchalant? Nearer! Nearer—a door banging!

The lean-to went pitch-black.

"Tried to walk out on me, have you, Walt? You—Milly! What are you doing here?" It was Calloway's voice, shaken, ugly.

"You tell me."

"You'll tell me. Where's Walt Gerard?"

In his surprise the snooper in the lean-to had been forgotten. Prudence tiptoed to the door. It was like looking at a scene in a play. Calloway held the lantern high; the motion of his unsteady hand sent a little whirl of drab smoke against the glass chimney. His black eyes glittered in the waning light as he scowled at Milly Gooch perched on the forge.

"Gosh, I'm tired from that tramp here. Don't walk much. My feet ache like a tooth gone perry."

"Why did you come? Has Walt

Gerard double-crossed me? You'll tell me, and you'll tell me quick."

Milly Gooch glanced at him from between half-closed lids. She flicked ashes from her cigarette.

Calloway set the lantern on the forge beside her. "Now look here, Milly,—his tone was propitiatory—" "I'm a just man—"

"Nothing else but—"

She slipped to her feet. With incredible swiftness she reached the door and bolted it. Backed against it she thrust her hands into the pockets of her coat. Her eyes looked enormous as she defied him.

"You're so just, Len, that of course you won't mind staying right here till you've told me what dirty deal you and Walt Gerard are pulling across."

Calloway's glance flashed to the double doors. Prudence's blood tingled. He was planning escape that way, was he? To her surprise, instead of turning purple with anger and blustering, he shrugged and put one foot up on the stool. Elbow on his knee, he swung the lantern in his free hand as he faced Milly Gooch.

"I'm not kicking—with you to look at."

"Quick on the uptake, aren't you? What's the racket? Have you two been making trouble for Roddy?"

Her voice caught in the middle of the name. Prue's nails cut into her hands. It didn't take much perceptor to realize that Milly Gooch loved Rodney Gerard.

"Trouble for Roddy! Trouble for— Just a little, just a little!"

Calloway's repetition was ugly. He kicked away the stool and approached Milly Gooch. He was angry and she was cornered. A menace to the person who crossed him. Prudence squeezed herself between the forge and the wall. She couldn't let that other girl fight alone. Had she been heard? Had she been seen? She held her breath. No. They were too absorbed in each other.

"I told you when you threw me over for him that I would make him pay. didn't I? First he stole my girl—"

"Meaning me? I never was your girl!"

"Engaged to me, weren't you? What do you call that?"

"Guess you mesmerized me. I jumped through the wrong hoop, that's all. Gosh, I don't know why. Suppose Roddy—suppose I did like Roddy better, are you going round making trouble for every man a girl likes better than you? You'd better move to the desert."

"That isn't all Rodney Gerard has done! He has come between me and business. He is cutting timber that it's my right to cut. I would have winked at that if he hadn't already taken you away from me."

"Don't cry, Len." Milly Gooch whimpered.

He caught her shoulder. "Now he's set Prudence Schuyler against me!"

New York Buildings
The Empire State Building is 1,248 feet high; building began in February, 1930, and it was opened on May 1, 1931. Elevators run to the observatory on the eighty-sixth floor; from there two elevators run to a special gallery, 1,210 feet above the street level, and there is a 12-foot stairway above this to another observation platform. Radio City covers three large city blocks, between Fifth and Sixth avenues and Forty-eighth to Fifty-first streets; the surface area is 603,876 square feet, or almost 12 acres. There are 12 building units, ranging from six to 70 stories in height in the entire project.

side while my property is being destroyed? Suppose they kick over a stove? Drop a match? These balsam boughs would flame like tinder."

"Right! I'm with you, Rod."

"I'm with you and Jim, Rodney."

"Keep out of this, Dave. I—" The door of the bunk-house banged open. Men crowded and pushed their way through the opening. "Here they come! After more booze! Back into the shadow. Quick."

The crew swaggered and staggered toward the truck which sprawled like a wounded monster across the road. They stopped and blinked in the glare of the roadster headlight.

Gerard with his hands in his pockets faced them in the light.

"Party's all over, boys. There isn't any more."

BRAIDED "STAR" RUG PRACTICAL

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

A star rug with points on the outer edge is not practical, because the points are easily turned up when the rug is in use. This has been overcome in the braided rug shown here, and a round rug can be used in many places.

This model is made in six shades of blue but many other color schemes can be used to suit the pattern. Size is 33 inches and requires about three pounds of material. Three strips are used in braiding. The six diamonds to form it are 4 inches wide, 7 inches long. Fill in space between points of star to make round. Sew about 20 rows around in colors desired.

This is one of the 20 braided and crocheted rugs shown in rug book No. 25. Directions are given with each rug; also, how to braid and prepare the material for working.

If you want to make a good-looking rug, send 15c to the Home Craft Co., Dept. C, 1000 St. Louis Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., and receive this rug book by mail postpaid.

Vagaries of Trade Rat Plague Camping Parties

Throughout the mountainous country of the West lives one of the most interesting members of the rat family. Fortunately this little creature is not despised as are other members of its family, for its peculiar antics and strange behavior around camps make it a source of amusement, but frequently annoyance, to the campers.

Its proper name is the bushy-tailed wood rat, and it resembles a squirrel more than a rat. It is also called the pack or trade rat, deriving these names from its behavior when it invades camp sites.

Persons unacquainted with this animal go through strange and bewildering experiences when camping in its territory. They may retire at night, snugly between their blankets, with their watches, coins, glasses and other precious possessions placed within easy reach, and on awakening in the morning find them missing. Or they may set their camp in shape before the day's hike, and on their return at night find that spoons, knives, forks, tins of food and other small articles have gone the way of their watches and glasses. It is then they become acquainted with the trade rat, for usually this little fellow leaves something to mark his trail or identification. It may be a bone, a stick or other mountain refuse left in place of the stolen article. Careful, quiet watching for a short time brings results, for the marauder will return searching for other articles it can carry away. As soon as it finds what it wants, out to its cache it goes. This may be under a stone or brush pile and investigations usually reveal all of the stolen articles. It apparently has no choice in the woods it takes and will move anything it can carry, but seldom far away.—Detroit News.

"Everybody," answered Senator Sorghum.

YOU don't need chains, for these Ground Grip Tires will pull you through where chains would leave you stranded in mud or sand. Firestone Ground Grip Tires for motor cars, trucks and tractors give the farmer greatest economy ever offered, and relief from being stranded on mud roads and in soft ground.

Why can Firestone give you these wonderful new tires with the wide tread that withstands this terrific pull and strain, and still does not destroy the cord body? Firestone can do this because the body of this tire is built with Gum-Dipped cords. This tire cleans itself on any kind of clay or soft ground, and the tread projections have been so placed, that they are always in contact with the road, doing away with any bumping.

You cannot afford to be without these tires on your trucks and passenger cars. Chevrolet Production Working at Top Speed

Detroit, March 27. Pushing steadily upward, production of Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks is now exceeding 5000 per day. On March 19 a total of 5,162 units rolled off the production lines of the company's 9 assembly plants, according to an official statement just released by W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager.

"Within a week or ten days," said Mr. Holler, "the new Chevrolet assembly plant at Baltimore, with an estimated yearly capacity of 80,000 units, should begin to add its daily quota to our present facilities. Once we begin to get the benefit of this added production, present schedules will show another substantial increase.

"Deliveries of Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks from January 1 to March 10, the latest figures available, are 30.3 per cent above the same period in 1934. Every department of our business is now working at top speed to meet the demands of the public and our dealers for more cars and trucks."

Mr. Holler stated further that orders for delivery to buyers, through more than 10,000 dealer retail outlets, have increased steadily every week since the formal announcement of the company's new models on January 5. At present, unfilled orders on hand are said to be nearing the 100,000 mark.

Hideout for Game Refuge

The notorious Cookson Hills of Eastern Oklahoma, bandit rendezvous since the days of Belle Starr, trainrobbing outlaw of the seventies, are to be promptly depopulated by the Federal Government and transformed into a game refuge, according to announcement by the Rural Rehabilitation Service. Since the Civil War this trackless fastness has harbored the famous outlaws of the Southwest and many who have found refuge from other regions. These include Jesse James, the Daltons, Cherokee Bill, "AT" Jennings, and in the last few years, Wilbur Underhill and "Pretty Boy" Floyd, both killed recently.

Frequent raids into the hills were consistently without result. Officers complained that residents resented official invasion and sheltered the criminal element through abject fear.

Newly Designed Doughnut Million-Volt Generator

Dr. WILLARD H. BENNETT of Ohio State university's physics department, with his newly designed doughnut million-volt generator, for use in the study of nuclear disintegration. Because it is much smaller and less costly than the models previously used for the same voltage, the new generator is expected to greatly increase the possibilities for study of the atom and its nucleus. The generator will be used in operating a high vacuum tube at extremely high voltages, to produce high-speed particles which disintegrate nuclei of atoms and change the chemical elements. The new generator is of the electrostatic type and has a high voltage shield in the shape of a sphere with two holes on opposite sides. The shield is charged by means of a silk belt which passes through these holes.

THE GIFT OF FRIENDSHIP

By ANNE CAMPBELL

MY FRIEND came home from far away,
And brought a gift to me,
But in my hand no bauble lay,
And there was nothing I could see.

She gave to me a cheering word,
A happy smile, a loving glance,
And in my heart new courage stirred
To conquer changing circumstance.

There is no gift that can be bought,
Or any work of art,
As precious as the one she brought;
The beauty of a friendly heart.

TRUE GHOST STORIES

By ED WYNN
Comedian.

"IN MY play, 'The Perfect Fool,' a few years ago, I performed what the public calls a mind-reading stunt. 'Before I began my act, I always made sure to tell the audience that I did not believe in mind reading, that my act was the result of four years' study and mental training. I had to memorize, to develop a code with my assistant, of 2,100 words, and to know the names of all famous generals, the capitals of all countries, the names of steamships, etc.

"One evening after I, hunched, had been reading the numbers on bills for people, I heard, in the creaky tones of an old gentleman's voice, some one challenging me defiantly.

"You can't tell me what I have in my pocket."

"An elderly gentleman in the audience says I cannot tell what he has in his pocket," I repeated.

"How do you know I am elderly?" he retorted.

"You, sir," I began in a portentous voice, "have in your pocket a passport to Europe. . . . Your name is W. L. Cowen; you are sailing late tonight on the steamship—"

"In the meantime, I was receiving by code, from my assistant in the aisle, the word Scythia. I knew that there had been some error, that there was no steamship by that name. As I groped for the right word, there flashed through my mind the headlines of the morning papers: 'Steamship Scythia makes maiden voyage today.'

"I finished the sentence, 'You are sailing on the steamship Scythia.' 'Because I was annoyed at the man's antagonism to my work, I added: 'Moreover, you are going to have a bad voyage and you will never make another trip to Europe.'

"Four weeks later I received a letter from England. It read: 'We, the undersigned, take the privilege of writing to you. We believe this to be a matter of world importance.

"We were in the audience the night you told a man that his name was W. L. Cowen and that he was sailing for Europe on the steamship Scythia. We, too, were sailing on the Scythia; we were being sent to England to do psychic research for the University of Pennsylvania.

"After your performance, we went to see if there was a Mr. Cowen on the boat's passenger list. We found there was not, but the next morning we saw his name on the additional list. That evening, we wanted to speak with him to discuss your reading; but he was sitting at the captain's table, and we decided to wait for a more opportune time. The following morning he was found dead in his cabin.

"We want to know if you had a psychic message that he would never take another trip to Europe.

"I put the letter down. To this day, any time I hear of anyone sailing to Europe, the thought of that coincidence comes to me and makes me shudder."

Use Dogs in Ghost Hunt in "Haunted" Farm House
Every night half a dozen armed men, accompanied by dogs, watch at a 400-year-old farmhouse, South Reston Hall, near Louth, Lincolnshire, England, because mysterious things had been reported happening there. The dogs are present because it is believed that canine senses are more sensitive to supernatural manifestations than are the senses of human beings.

Here are some of the strange, and at present unexplained, incidents which have occurred: Room thrown into confusion; food taken from the pantry; soot thrown down the chimneys; large holes made through a ceiling, and a bed slept in.

A young woman asserts that twice she has seen an "animal having a pointed nose and bushy tail." She fainted when she saw it. One theory is that an escaped monkey, hiding in a false roof of the house, is responsible, but a search failed to locate either a monkey or any other intruder.

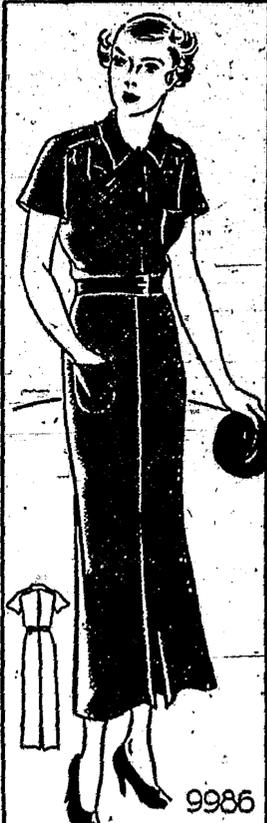

The master of the East Lincolnshire Otter Hounds took his dogs and a terrier into the roof. Apparently scenting something, the terrier barked furiously at one spot, but nothing was found.

The strength of the intruder is an extraordinary feature. In a bedroom a sack filled with heavy material which had blocked the chimney for 50 years was thrown down to gain admission to the room.

Coolest Political Confab
The coolest political conference in history took place on "The Field of the Cloth of Gold," near Andrea, France, in 1520 between Francis I and Henry VIII. Francis erected a magnificent palace, chapel and other buildings, all gold decorated, for the entertainment of Henry and the nobility of England and France. Nothing, however, was accomplished in the 17 days. No one wanted to get very far away from a large fountain which, from morning until midnight, poured forth two kinds of wine.—Collier's Weekly.

Extreme Chic in This Frock

PATTERN 9986

If you've been following the latest trend in style news, you know that the classic shirtwaist frock is still one of fashion's pets. And here's a delightful version of it. The sleeves and shoulders are cut in one to give a nice smooth line, and make them easy as a, b, c to fit. The bodice with a trim slot-pleat at the back to match the chic of its buttoned front closing is smartly gathered to the yoke—the long skirt seams end in jaunty inverted pleats—and the patch pockets follow the latest mode by being rounded instead of square. Make it of a rough crepe and put an impudent little contrasting bow at the throat for added chic!

Pattern 9986 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30. Size 18 requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am not one of those persons who believe everything told them. For that reason I am writing to you to find out if what I heard last night is true. I heard that the richest people in New York neglect their children. Tell me, is this true?

Yours truly,
ANN ARKIST.

Answer: What you heard is silly. Rich people do not neglect their children. They engage nurses to do that.

Dear Mr. Wynn: What is meant by "A Gentleman Farmer"?

Yours truly,
Q. KUMBER.

Answer: A gentleman farmer is a man who raises nothing but his hat.

Dear Mr. Wynn: During our natural history lesson, in school yesterday, our teacher said that about 8,000 elephants go every year to make white keys for pianos. If this is true, what do you think of it?

Sincerely,
E. KLIPSE.

Answer: I think it shows how far we have advanced in training animals.

Dear Mr. Wynn: What is meant when they say a man has "horse sense"?

Truly yours,
JOCK KOY.

Answer: "Horse sense" is the thing which keeps a man from mortgaging his home to buy an automobile.

Dear Mr. Wynn: My mother and father had an argument. Ma said that Pa doesn't act the same as he used to before they were married, especially if they were on a train and passed through a tunnel. Why should men act differently, in a tunnel after marriage?

Sincerely,
I. M. A. MAX DIN.

Answer: Before marriage a fellow always kisses his girl in a tunnel. After marriage, when he gets in a tunnel, he takes a drink.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I saw a policeman stop an automobile and arrest the driver. The man wanted to know why he was arrested and the policeman said because he had only one eye. What charge can they place against a man driving a car because the man has only one eye?

Yours truly,
D. SEMBER.

Answer: He was probably arrested for driving because he had one lamp out.

Dear Mr. Wynn: In an article I read in one of the morning papers I saw the following headlines: "Hobbed by Comic-Opera Bandits." What in the world is meant by "Comic-Opera Bandits"?

Truly yours,
C. MARIO.

Answer: That means robbers who, after tying their victims so they can't move, use "Old Gags" to keep them quiet.

Bedtime Story for Children

REDWING THE BLACKBIRD GIVES WARNING

CREeping toward sleeping Danny Meadow Mouse Reddy Fox managed to keep quite out of sight of anyone in the Smiling Pool. But there was one person to whom Reddy gave no heed. In fact, Reddy did not see him at all. It was Redwing the Blackbird, sitting on top of an alder tree on the bank of the Smiling Pool. Redwing had not seen Reddy until the latter had almost reached the Smiling Pool. Then, happening to look in that direction, he had caught a glimpse of something red moving in the tall grass. You see, he was looking down and therefore could see what those on the ground or in the water could not see.

Now Redwing does not fear Reddy Fox. There is no reason why he should. But Redwing has no love for Reddy Fox. He knows that Reddy would gladly catch him if he could. So the instant he was sure that it was Reddy creeping through the tall grass, Redwing flew out directly above Reddy and began to scream. "Danger! Danger!" he screamed. "Here is Reddy Fox! Danger! Danger!"

At the first warning note from Redwing, Grandfather Frog dived into the Smiling Pool with a great splash. There wasn't any real need for him to do so because out on that big green lily pad of his, he was quite safe from Reddy. But Grandfather Frog always feels more comfortable in the water when any kind of danger is around. All along the shore of the Smiling Pool, half grown young frogs dived into the water in a panic. They knew what had brought Reddy over to the Smiling Pool.

Of course at the first note of Redwing's voice the eyes of Danny Meadow Mouse flew open. The instant he saw where Redwing was hovering in the air as he screamed he knew that Reddy Fox was just beneath him and that meant that Reddy was right back of Danny himself. What should he do?

He Had Caught a Glimpse of Something Red Moving in the Tall Grass.

Where should he run? To turn back would be to run right into Reddy's mouth. There wasn't a hiding place near. It was useless for him to try to outrun Reddy, for Reddy could catch him in two jumps. Was ever a meadow mouse in a more dreadful position? There was Reddy Fox behind him and the Smiling Pool in front of him. To Grandfather Frog, whose big goggle eyes showed just above the surface of the water, it looked as if Danny Meadow Mouse would soon be no more. He couldn't see one little chance for Danny to escape.

LABOR-SAVING IDEAS

WHEN making pastry prepare more than is needed and place in a cold place or ice chest, tightly covered with waxed paper. The thoroughly chilled mixture makes more flaky crust than that baked at once. From this pastry a few tarts may be made in a hurry, or cheese straws, a meat pie, using left-over meat.

Ice box rolls are another special that can be mixed and left in the ice chest for a week. Take off just the amount needed for rolls and put them to rise; when light, bake. A tin of delicious rolls are quickly served. An hour or two before baking make them into small rolls and keep very warm, tightly covered. It is better to grease them well with lard—that keeps the flour from drying out on top while rising. They should be more than double their bulk when put into the oven.

When baking potatoes prepare enough so that the next day a few will be available for cream potatoes. They are fully as good as those freshly cooked.

By keeping jars of chow chow, capers, olives, pickles as well as cheese, celery, anchovies and numerous other condiments and relishes, one has access to delightful fillings for sandwiches which need to be made in a hurry. A jar of mayonnaise and a bottle of french dressing should be made in such quantities that they are always available. It takes very little extra effort to double the amount when preparing a salad dressing, and then there is always a supply.

Wash the heads of lettuce and place in a cloth or covered dish in the ice chest, then the lettuce will always be ready for use. Parsley well washed, leaving the moisture clinging to the leaves, if put in a fruit jar tightly covered, will keep two weeks, fresh and green. Add a bit of water if it seems to dry out.

Inferiority Complex Needed If you want to succeed in life, cultivate a good, healthy inferiority complex! It is something to be cherished and held, observes a writer in Pearson's Weekly. You ought to feel awed and silent when you stand before a great work of art, or in a beautiful building. You ought to feel moral inferiority when you contemplate the lives of some great men. You ought to feel awe, reverence and respect—they are the three qualities the world needs today.

President's Proposal to Eliminate Utility Holding Companies Brings Storm of Criticism—Treasury Seeks to Simplify Nation's Currency Structure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
C. Western Newspaper Union.

THE President's special message calling for abolition of utility holding companies stirred up a storm that probably surprised even such an astute politician as Mr. Roosevelt. The President urged legislation to abolish those holding companies which were unable to show they were operated in the public interest.

Senator Norris

Representative Bertrand H. Snell, Republican leader, immediately attacked the message, claiming the President had denounced propaganda against the proposed legislation, and was himself propagandizing for it. Utility companies also swung into the battle, and thousands of investors in utility stocks are reported to have sent in protests to congress. In the senate, Norris, Nebraska Republican, offered a resolution calling upon the federal trade commission to investigate propaganda regarding the legislation. The senate approved without debate. Charges were made by utility companies that because of the administration's campaign against public utilities "the value of utility securities has declined by three and one-half billion dollars since 1933." Enactment of legislation to halt holding companies will cause enormous loss to the American family, one power official testified before the house interstate commerce committee.

GREECE is mopping up the loose ends of the revolt. Some fighting is reported near the Bulgarian border where one regiment, part of the rebellious Fourth army corps, has declined to surrender, but the revolution is definitely over. Eleutherios Venizelos, ex-premier, and leader of the revolt, was reported a refugee at Rhodes, the tiny island where Julius Caesar was interned by pirates some 2,500 years ago. Venizelos was transferred there by the Italian government after he had been landed in Italy by one of the rebel warships. Gen. George Karmenos, rebel commander, is safe in Bulgaria, where officials have refused extradition. Rebel prisoners are being concentrated in camps, and courts martial are functioning in Saloniki, Kavala and Larissa, and military trials have begun in Athens. It is believed that only a few of the most flagrant rebels will suffer the death penalty. Venizelos is almost certain to be court-martialed in absentia, and banished forever. His elaborate home in Athens, and his valuable library have already been confiscated and will likely be converted to public use. Italy has refused to extradite him, although it is possible that new demands will be made by the Greek government, who will claim that he took funds from a bank in Crete. Unless he is surrendered, he will probably move to Paris where his two sons now reside.

THE senate smacked down Senator Huey Long for his filibustering tactics and his efforts to amend the administration's $4,850,000,000 work relief measure. The Kingfish had demanded alterations in the work relief bill which would take $100,000,000 away from the $600,000,000 earmarked for CCC work and allot it to students in colleges and universities. Long's amendment was defeated by a vote of 68 to 27. To prove that old adage of "politics makes strange bedfellows," Long was aided by Senator Hiram Johnson of California, who declared that the senate should have something to say about methods for spending the huge sum sought by the President. Johnson has heretofore been considered a supporter of the President. Long's amendment brought forth other proposed changes which should keep the senators busy arguing for several days. The bonus bill may be dragged in and an attempt made to make it a rider to the relief measure, and inflationists and leaders of other "ists" will insist on having their say.

ALL outstanding first Liberty loan bonds have been called for redemption by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. The $2,000,000,000 outstanding has been called for June 15, before which time the treasury will likely offer lower interest-bearing securities in exchange for the first Liberties, saving the government some $14,000,000 in annual interest charges.

NEW Deal policies took two more batterings as Federal courts held both the AAA and NRA unconstitutional as regards interstate business. The administration might find some consolation in another ruling which held the radical Frazier-Lenknecht mortgage bill was valid. Federal Judge Merritt H. Otis, at Kansas City, declared the Frazier-Lenknecht law was constitutional, "although unwise in many of its provisions and almost incomprehensible matter." Judge Otis said his ruling was not the first in which the act was upheld, and that an appeal was already before the United States supreme court and a decision might be expected shortly. The AAA was declared invalid as regards interstate business by Federal Judge Ira Lloyd Letts at Providence, R. I., who issued an injunction restraining Secretary of Agriculture, Wallace from enforcing the act against three Rhode Island retail milk dealers, on the grounds that their business was conducted entirely within the state, and the national government had no right to interfere. At Newark, N. J., Federal Judge Guy L. Fike ruled the national recovery act unconstitutional as applied to interstate commerce "because it attempts an unlawful delegation of legislative authority." The latter decision agrees with that handed down by Federal Judge Nields in the controversial Weirton steel dispute.

CHANCELLOR ADOLPH HITLER'S "diplomatic" cold is over, and he will welcome Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, to a conference beginning March 24. Accompanying Sir John will be Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, and disarmament authority. After the Berlin visit Eden will go to Moscow to talk with Soviet leaders. The Berlin conferences will discuss legalization of Germany's rearmament in exchange for an air Larnco pact with Great Britain, France, Italy, and Belgium, and an eastern security pact with Poland and Russia. Limitation of armament by all nations will also be taken up. The visit is complicated by a recent announcement that Germany possesses military aviation in violation of the Versailles treaty. Because of this, France may invoke the Home accord with Italy and Franco-British declaration at London in support of its move to keep the reich from giving the air force official sanction.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MORGENTHAU revealed plans to dip into profits from gold seizure to retire $674,625,630 of the national debt through the use of gold certificates. Potentially inflationary, it will deprive national banks of the power to issue currency, and save the government an annual interest charge of $12,500,000. Questions on inflationary implications were avoided by treasury officials, but they admitted the plan would "put gold back to work which can be expanded."

Secretary Morgenthau

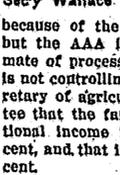

The maneuver will place in the hands of the federal reserve banks $674,625,630 of gold certificates, which must be used as backing for issue of the same sum in federal reserve notes to retire the bonds. Note issue against the bonds could be expanded if currency demands warranted, to about $1,687,500,000, since a federal reserve note need not be backed by more than 40 per cent gold or gold certificates in like percentage. What will happen will be the immediate simplification of our currency system. The treasury and federal reserve banks will have all the authority to issue money. The plan involves retirement on August 1 of $674,625,630 of 2 per cent federal securities and substitution of federal reserve notes for $337,337,090 of outstanding national bank currency. These bonds will be retired with surplus funds created by devaluing the Roosevelt dollar from 100 cents to 80.06 cents gold. The total profit was $2,312,000,000.

National bank notes issued by national banks against federal securities represent more than one-tenth of the nation's circulating currency. The administration's program likely means the permanent abandonment of the national bank note which has been used since the Civil war. The circulation privileges expire on all bonds deposited by banks and held in trust by the treasury on July 22, 1935, except on two issues. By calling for redemption, the treasury will retire all securities bearing "circulation privilege" and national banks will no longer have suitable security for issuance of their own notes.

COMPLETE collapse of the administration's long battle to regulate prices in the steel industry is seen in an NRA offer to give up, and in charges by the federal trade commission of a fiasco of collusion. The trade commission insists that price-fixing be scrapped, and no prosecution of steel companies under the anti-trust laws. The trade commission charges that under the code the steel companies have fixed and raised prices on government contracts, in defiance of competitive bidding requirements. Bids were identical, and then steel executives slapped fines of $10 a ton on members who let the government have steel cheaper, the commission says.

DEMONSTRATORS numbering approximately 2,000 marched into the Minnesota state capitol at St. Paul and harangued legislators with demands in behalf of the idle ranks. Threats were made to picket the capitol unless demands were met.

THE house appropriations committee favorably reported on the Department of Agriculture appropriations bill for the 1936 fiscal year. A cut of $518,875,768 was due largely to a $411,022,428 slash in the AAA item. The total bill calls for $853,273,768, of which $570,000,000 would go to the Agriculture Adjustment administration activities. At committee hearings it was explained that it is impossible to estimate how much would have to be obligated because of the crop control program, but the AAA item was a rough estimate of processing tax collections and is not controlling. Henry Wallace, secretary of agriculture, told the committee that the farmers' share of the national income is now about 10.2 per cent, and that it should be 13 to 16 per cent.

Sec'y Wallace

Wallace said "true prosperity" cannot come "until there has been a very material increase in the output of physical goods, industrial goods." "If in some way it were possible to turn out 50 per cent more industrial goods at a price, definitely lower than the present price," the secretary testified, "the result would be to make it possible for agriculture to buy more with the agricultural dollar and there would be more factory workers to be fed in the cities."

EVEN though the senate will not act immediately on the "pink slip" bill to repeal income tax publicity, income tax figures will not be available to the public for six months, according to internal revenue officials. While it is likely the publicity act will be repealed, the house having so voted, it is not anticipated that the senate will act on the measure for some time. Even though the latter might not act favorably, there remains considerable work to be done before the figures can be made public, and income tax payers may be confident that prying neighbors cannot have immediate access to such information. In the senate a drive has been started for higher federal income and corporation taxes.

FRENCH courts have formally indicted 10 persons, including Mrs. Slavsky, for the Slavsky scandal that rocked the government after the financial debacle, which caused losses of millions of francs to investors, had broken. Slavsky, known as "Handsome Alex," died from a gunshot wound as police tried to arrest him in January, 1934.

AFTER twenty months of bargaining, the documents conveying full title of the Chinese Eastern railway to Manchukuo were initiated in Tokyo, thus eliminating Russia as a factor in Manchukuo. The written approval of the agreements was signed by Koki Hirota, Japanese foreign minister; Dr. Constantine Youreneff, Soviet ambassador to Japan; and by Gen. Ting Shih-Yuan, Manchukuoan minister of finance. The consideration was 140,000,000 yen, or about $30,000,000. The documents require that all three governments approve them before their formal signing about March 23. Thus is ended forty years of Russo-Japanese contention for domination.

A NEW gold suit is menacing administration financing and money policies. The suit reopening the question of investors' claims for payment of 1,600 million dollars of government bonds in gold or an equivalent, is brought by Robert A. Taft, son of the late chief justice, over the sum of $1.07. Taft demands either payment of bonds in gold or suspension of all refunding of the gold clause certificates. Before going to court, Taft presented to the treasury a $50 gold clause Liberty bond and four $1.07 interest coupons attached, and demanded gold for both, but was refused. The suit may force the administration to close the loopholes left by the Supreme court decisions, if that is possible.

THE Mendicta administration in Cuba has established a military dictatorship over the island, constitutional law has been suspended, the death penalty for rebels imposed, and military governors designated for Havana and provinces. Washington is watching the situation with keen interest. Bombings and rioting are increasing, according to reports, with ten dead and fifteen injured. The objectives of the opponents of the government is the removal from office of President Mendicta and Colonel Fulgencio Batista, chief of the army. The strike has become almost general, nearly paralyzing all activities in the island. Repressive measures taken by the government to quell the strikers strongly resemble the strong-arm methods prevalent in the Machado regime, according to observers.

THE senate passed the army appropriation bill, and it now goes to the house. The measure adds $20,000,000 to the original bill, making the total appropriation of $400,000,000 almost a record high, and will add 46,250 to our army strength, making the total of enlisted men 165,000. Warm talk flowed freely as the senate debated the measure. Senator Lewis said that conflict might come between Russia and Japan and he asked: "With the army of Russia and the navy of Japan, where do we stand?" Senator McAdoo also speaking in favor of the bill said:

"Unless we want to continue to be a boob nation, we will not hesitate to make this increase in the army. It is justified by the wisdom and the necessities of national defense."

MAN NOT ALWAYS HELD ENEMY BY WILD CREATURES

There was once a time of universal friendship, or at least mutual tolerance, between man and the animals, declares Dr. Walter Hough, curator of anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution. This situation is contrary to the theory that in the early days there was mutual antagonism between man and the lower creatures, causing a "tooth and claw" relationship. "There are still remnants of this original 'Eden' in isolated parts of the world," states Doctor Hough, who has been tracing the method by which man domesticated animals. The trail of most of the domesticated animals leads back to central-Asia. There, Doctor Hough believes, early man had a temperament especially adapted to inspire friendship and confidence among his fellow creatures.

"Observers in new countries," Doctor Hough says, "have recorded with surprise the lack of fear by animals. There still remain in remote parts zones of peace, where animals are unaccustomed to fear. One such zone was found in Tibet by naturalists of the British Mount Everest expedition. Another instance was called to my attention by a member of our own staff, who observed the lack of fear among the animals during his exploration of St. Lawrence Island, Alaska."

"The above leads to the generalization that domestication is not the province of cruel and fear-engendering men. Domestication came about in zones of peace and was accomplished by peaceful men through kindly methods. The coming together of such fortuitous circumstances as animals suited for domestication and men of the peaceful, patient type undoubtedly was found in Asia, where our domestic animals originated."

When automobiles were first introduced to Cape Cod, some thirty years ago, an old sea captain was given a ride in one of the first cars, a high-sided contraption steered by the tiller that preceded the steering wheel. "Well, captain, what do you think of her?" asked the proud owner and driver. "Well," answered the captain, his face showing a puzzled look, "she's the first craft I ever seen that has a head wind no matter which way you p'inted her."—Boston Daily Globe.
