CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY MAY, 12, 1935

NUMBER 49

P. T. A. Meeting

In spite of the inclement weather Friday, a real good crowd gathered at the P. T. A. and held the annual election of officers.

Mr. Thomas Karr was elected president.

Mrs. Nellie Branum, 1st vice president.

Mrs. Clara T. Snyder, 2nd vice president.

Phil Bright, secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. R. E. Blaney, parliamentarian.

Mrs. Ira Johnson, historian.

All of the business for this year was settled and plans for next year discussed.

As it was too stormy for the little people of Mrs. Nickels' room to be on hand for their program, Mrs. Brock Sloan sponsored a miscellaneous program. At the close of the meeting Mrs. Nickels' room was voted the cash prize, and Mrs. Snyder's room the banner.

Rev. Edgar H. Johnson and family will leave for Weed tomorrow morning and return Sunday afternoon in time for church services.

High School Calendar

Aguayo-Richardson

On Saturday evening April 27 at the home of the bride's parents at Nogal. Rev. Edgar Johnson, with the impressive ring ceremony united in marriage, Elmo Carl Aguayo of Carrizozo and Pauline E. Richardson of Nogal.

The bride, who is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Richardson wore a lovely blue dress with white accessories.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Aguayo has lived in Nogal and Carrizozo all his life, was a graduate of Carrizozo High School, class 1933.

On Monday evening following their marriage, 69 of their friends gathered to wish them many happy returns of the day. After the usual pranks and jokes were played on the bride and groom Mr. and Mrs. Richardson invited all to an impromptu supper of everything good to eat - A friend.

ANCHO NEWS

The snow last Friday put much needed moisture in the ground. Everyone was glad to see the snow.

Miss Crawford and Mrs. Wilson were guests of Mrs. Allen Kile and Mrs. Cap Straley at a 12 o'clock luncheon Tuesday. Mrs. T. J. Straley arrived just in time and made the party a grand success.

"A delightful 'Bridal Shower' was given at the home of Mrs. Ed Miller in honor of Mrs. Fred Dale. Even the everything was snow covered a nice crowd of friends gathered at the appointed time.

Mrs. Kile is spending a few days with Mrs. Silvers at Duran.

Mrs. Jones was at Ancho Wednesday giving 8th grade examinations.

The 8th grade exercises will be Wednesday night the 15th.

Senator Cutting

News reached Carrizozo about noon Monday of the death of Senator Bronson M. Cutting which occurred about 4:30 o'clock that morning from an airplane crash near Atlanta, Mo., in which the pilot, co-pilot and a girl from Kansas City lost their lives. On account of a dense fog, the plane had been unable to land in Kansas City, and had sought the emergency field at Kirksville, when the gas ran low and the plane was forced to land in a farmer's field. Death has come to two others since, a woman and a man, making the total number of victims five.

Senator Cutting had been in Santa Fe and was enroute to Washington. He is survived by his mother.

Funeral services were conducted today at the St. James Protestant Episcopal church in New York, followed by burial in the family plot at Greenwood cemetery in Brooklyn.

To Combat Communism

Santa Fe, May 9. The State League of Young Democrats met here this week to map out a program to combat the growth of communism and allied movements in New Mexico.

At a banquet given by the League Saturday night, Dave Chavez, Attorney General Frank Patton, and R. C. Charlton, Adjutant General, spoke on the menace of the growth of communism.

The Young Democrats plan to sponsor a series of meetings over the State to explain to the people what is behind the communistic movement, and to explain further what the national administration is doing and planning to do for the people of New Mexico and the country at large.

George Melton Shot Last Night

Word reached here this morning that George Melton had been shot through the forehead and instantly killed last night, as he and his brother were lying asleep at the Ed Carey place, which is part of the Sloan ranch. It is alleged that a Mexican, a native of Old Mexico, did the shooting which was the result of a previous quarrel. No other particulars are available.

This morning about 9 o'clock as Mr. Hall of Roswell who recently purchased the Fambrough place at Ancho was driving across the overpass, his car turned over on the curve twice. Five occupants of the car including Mr. Hall were cut and bruised.

Ancient Sumerian Statues Shown in Chicago

THESE Sumerian statues, 5,000 years old, exhibiting considerable artistic competence, have been placed in the museum of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. They are part of a hoard of sacred images without parallel among known Babylonian works of art, and were discovered by the Iraq expedition of the Oriental Institute, under the field directorship of dad, Iraq. Renovation of the shrine of the god of Abu, Lord of Fertility, at Tell Asmar, sometime between 3000 and 2800 B. C., saved a large number of the statues. Because they had been consecrated they could not be thrown away or sold, and so they were buried under the floor of the shrine, to remain until the institute expedition uncovered them.

DANNY CROSSES THE LAUGHING BROOK

Look long enough and hard enough. You'll always find a way To reach the place or get the thing You're hoping that you may.

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE peeped out from under the tangle of matted grass back toward the Smiling Pool. Plunger the Oprey was rising higher and higher in the air and there was nothing in his great claws. It was clear that he had failed to catch the Big Pickarel. "I'm glad of it," muttered Danny, which, when you think of it, was rather funny, for the Big Pickarel had been watching for Danny himself and would have liked nothing better than to have snapped his big jaws on him. But Danny knew so well what it felt like to be hunted that though he was rather glad that the Big Pickarel had been given a fright, he was also glad that he had escaped. Of Billy Mink, Snapper the Turtle and the Big Pickarel he could see nothing at all and rightly guessed that all were in hiding. Reddy Fox was sitting on the opposite bank, looking up at Plunger and grinning in the most provoking way. "They've forgotten about poor little me," thought Danny and his heart stopped pita-patting quite so fast. "The thing for me to do is to keep going while the going is good. I've got to get across to the other side but I don't dare swim across the Smiling Pool. The Laughing Brook comes in right here and if I keep on following along the bank perhaps I will find a place where I can cross it without having to swim. It isn't the water but the things in the water I fear." Danny shuddered as he thought of the Big Pickarel. As soon as he had quite recovered his breath he started on, darting from one hiding place to another, here a branch of grass, there a big mullein leaf, yonder a piece of bark, and again a pile of sticks. He never stopped out in the open. No indeed. That would have been the very worst kind of Meadow Mouse folly!

Now the water in the Laughing Brook ran swiftly in places, leaped in merry little falls, or seemingly rested to quiet pools, but for a long, long way it offered no crossing place for a tired little Meadow Mouse who was afraid to swim because of hungry fish who might be watching. Though he roared often, Danny grew more and more tired.

All afternoon he traveled and he was getting just a little discouraged and almost a little hopeless when just as the Black Shadows came creeping silently through the Green Forest he came to a bridge. It was only an old log which had fallen across the Laughing Brook, but for Danny it was a real bridge. He looked this way, that way and the other way. He listened with both ears. Then he scampered across and gave a tiny sigh of thankfulness. He was on the home side at last.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I visited a night club, in New York, and the thing that puzzled me was how can they all the guests from the waiters, as they both wear evening clothes?

Truly yours, HERR TONNICK.

Answer: That is very simple. The waiters stay sober.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I've been invited to go swimming in a body of water where I heard there were a lot of sharks. Rather than be called a coward I have decided to accept the invitation. Can you tell me what to do if a shark grabs me by the leg?

Yours truly, IKE N. FLOAT.

Answer: By all means let him have it. Never argue with a shark.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Please explain what is meant by "The Minimum Wage"?

Truly yours, CAL. S. THIENICHS.

Answer: The minimum wage is the money you get for "going" to work. If you want more money, why then

A SALAD may be made from so many different food combinations that one need never be at a loss for one. An apple, a few dates, a slice of mild onion, will make a most tasty combination. A slice of tomato, topped with chopped onion and celery, or chopped cucumber and onion, a bit of chopped green pepper and any dressing at hand will make another. Arrange alternate slices of orange and tomato on lettuce. Sprinkle with finely chopped celery and serve with french dressing.

Coffee Souffle. Scald one cupful of milk with one tablespoonful of coffee and strain. Add four and one-half tablespoonfuls of tapioca, a dash of salt, and cook until the tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Now add one-third of a cupful of sugar, cool, add three beaten egg yolks and fold in the stiffly beaten whites.

Easter Sunday, observed throughout the Christian world, is the day when the awakening of spring is celebrated by dance and feast by New Mexico Pueblo Indians. It has been only in the last four centuries that the two—Easter and spring awakening—have been observed together. Theretofore, the Indians did not observe Easter.

Since 1908 John P. Taylor has carried on a relentless search for a gold nugget. At first he looked in all the orthodox places but failed to find one. Then recently, while trudging down one of the main business streets in Phoenix he saw something glistening embedded in the asphalt of the pavement. He dug it out. An assayer gave him 86 cents for it.

The Arizona State Game Department recently issued a scientific permit to A. A. Nichol of the University of Arizona to kill one of the ibex reported to be roaming in Mohave county. Nichol is assistant range ecologist at the university. If he should kill one of the animals, the game department requests it be used for scientific purposes, mounted and placed in the University of Arizona museum.

New Mexico's great new potash industry is unquestionably one of the latest issues in the industrial Southwest at this time. The experiences of this country during the world war when the foreign supply of potash was suddenly shut off and the price soared to $600 per ton have not been forgotten. Right here in our own New Mexico there has been discovered and is now being commercially developed perhaps the greatest and most easily accessible supply of potash and allied chemicals existing in any other part of the world.

The little peplum always gives a youthful air—but it's what's above the peplum that is the real novelty of this frock. The irregular yoke, the softening bits of shirring and the perky little collar make it one of the most to-be-admired afternoon dresses of the season. Because of its softness of line—the little details which Paris terms "dressmaker"—it is a dress becoming to most anybody. It really would be stunning in a sheer, finely woven cotton—as a printed batiste or handkerchief linen. In silk, any soft printed or solid pastel crepe. It's a dress that is really easy to make—the peplum may be omitted, of course.

Pattern 9248 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

That until the invention of matches, fire-making in the American colonies was quite a laborious task. The Indian produced fire by twirling a stick held firmly against a piece of wood. To give the stick a rapid motion he wrapped a bow-string about it and then drew the bow swiftly to and fro. The white settlers' method was the striking together of flint and steel.

President Reveals Plans for Work Relief Program—Frank Walker His Chief Aid—Auto Workers Strike in Toledo.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union

PLANS for spending the $4,880,000,000 work relief fund are being made rapidly, parts of the general scheme being revealed to the public almost every day. The President will be the final arbiter but practically all the federal agencies will participate and three new ones have been announced by Mr. Roosevelt. These will handle rural rehabilitation, rural electrification and grade crossing elimination.

Standing at the President's right hand is Frank C. Walker, former treasurer of the Democratic party. He has replaced Donald Richberg as chairman of the National Emergency council and is the head of a new division in that body known as the division of application and information. Under his direction all proposals will be sorted out and data on them from various government units will be co-ordinated. Then they will be handed on, with Mr. Walker's recommendations, to a new works allotment board which is headed by Secretary Harold Ickes. These two additions to the alphabet groups in Washington are known as DAI and WAB.

In a press conference the President named these eight types of work which will be undertaken, with the amount of money to be spent on each:

1. Highways, roads, streets, grade crossing elimination, and express highways, $800,000,000.
2. Rural rehabilitation, relief in stricken agricultural areas, water conservation, water diversion, irrigation, reclamation, rural industrial communities, and subsistence homesteads, $500,000,000.
3. Rural electrification, $100,000,000.
4. Housing, low cost housing in rural and urban areas, reconstruction, and remodeling, $450,000,000.
5. Assistance for educational, professional, and clerical persons and other "white collar" unemployed, $300,000,000.
6. Citizen Conservation corps, $400,000,000.
7. Sanitation, soil erosion, stream pollution, reforestation, flood control, rivers and harbors, $350,000,000.
8. Loans, grants, or both, to cities, counties, states, and other political subdivisions for public works, $300,000,000.

The rural rehabilitation work will be directed by Rexford G. Tugwell, under-secretary of agriculture, and he will not be responsible to Secretary Wallace but will have a free hand to carry out his schemes for moving families from marginal lands, shifting stranded industrial workers to new, planned rural communities and building cities outside of large urban centers to relieve slum congestion.

Asked as to how much was ready to be spent the President recalled that $300,000,000 already had been put forward for the CCC and that Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes had applications totaling more than $1,000,000,000.

In conclusion, the Chief Executive said that there was a tendency to make loans instead of grants wherever possible, the loans to be long-term ones at low interest rates.

Appointment of Mr. Walker leaves Mr. Richberg free, as the President said, to devote his time to the NRA during the period of pending legislation in congress and litigation in the Supreme court.

ORGANIZED labor opened its attempt to obtain recognition in the automobile industry with a strike of workers in the Toledo plant of the Chevrolet Motor company. The factory was closed down immediately, though only a part of the force joined in the strike. Union pickets were placed about it, but city police and deputy sheriffs were on hand to see that there was no disorder.

President Hoover's General Motors corporation issued this statement in New York:

"The vital question involved is whether General Motors corporation is willing to sign an agreement for a closed shop recognizing the local union as the exclusive representative of all the employees of the Toledo plant. This General Motors will not do."

The union, in a lengthy statement, said its committee "has done everything in its power to meet with the management and to secure an amicable and fair adjustment of the matter of wages, hours and union recognition and various other grievances."

"The management refused to sign a contract of any kind and flatly refused every section of the proposed contract with the exception of two minor points."

The company offered to make wage readjustments and give a 5 per cent general wage increase, show no discrimination against union men, and agreed to respect seniority rights as provided by the automobile labor board.

Secretary Perkins met Thomas J. Williams, Labor department conciliator, to Toledo to see what might be done. President Hoover at the A. F. of L. said there was grave danger that the Toledo strike might spread to other automotive plants.

Leo C. Wollman, chairman of the National Automobile Labor board, reported that that body had completed a canvass of 163,150 workers in American automotive plants and found that 68.6 per cent of them showed no affiliation with any labor organization. The various employees' associations grouped together ranked second with 21,774 members, equal to 13.3 per cent of the total. The American Federation of Labor was third with 14,057, or 8.6 per cent, while the Associated Automobile Workers of America were fourth with 6,083, or 3.7 per cent. The remainder of the vote was split between the Mechanics Educational society and ten other unions.

WITHOUT benefit of gag rule but with perfect party discipline, the administration's social security bill was jammed through the house substantially as President Roosevelt wants it.

The final vote was 372 to 88. It may be some weeks before it is passed by the senate, for the senate finance committee, to which it was referred, is busy just now with NRA extension and veterans' bonus payment.

Leading features of the measure as passed by the house are:

Grants to states for old age assistance (pensions) on a 50-50 basis, but for no individual will the federal government's share exceed $15 per month.

Compulsory old age benefits for persons over sixty-five on basis of salary earned during working lifetime, payments ranging from $15 to $35 a month.

Income tax on pay rolls of employees starting with 1 per cent in 1937 and graduated upward to 3 per cent in 1943; excise tax on employers in same amounts. This will mean a total payroll tax of 6 per cent by 1943.

Unemployment insurance. Tax on employer of 1 per cent on pay rolls in 1936, 2 per cent for 1937, and 3 per cent thereafter.

Social security board as new bureau of government in the executive branch with three members appointed by the President.

Federal grants to states for maternal and child health service, an appropriation of $3,900,000.

Federal grants to states for public health service, an appropriation of $3,000,000.

Speaker Byrns and other majority leaders were elated by the immense majority by which the bill carried because, as they asserted, it was put through without any pressure from the White House. Mr. Byrns said: "We got no orders from the President, so help me Almighty God."

GEN. W. W. ATTERBURY, veteran official of the Pennsylvania railroad, has retired as president of the company eight months before that would have been necessary under its regulations, because of ill health. The directors unanimously elected Martin W. Clement to succeed him. The new president of the great system was born 63 years ago in Sunbury, Pa., and entered the service of the road in 1901 as a rodman. His promotion was steady and since years ago he became the vice president.

General Atterbury had this to say of his successor:

"Since he became vice president, Clement has been intimately associated with me in conducting the company's affairs and in our relations with the other railroads and with the government."

"The remarkable results achieved by the company last year, one of the most difficult periods the railroad has ever experienced, were largely due to Clement's leadership. His manifest capabilities have commended him not only to his associate directors and officers, but also to the executives of other railroads with whom he has been working in recent years in the interest of the railroad industry as a whole."

"Moreover, he enjoys the confidence, respect and co-operation of the entire Pennsylvania railroad organization."

MORE than three thousand persons lost their lives in a series of earthquake shocks that occurred in the most thickly populated section of Formosa, the island off the Chinese coast which Japan acquired in 1895. It was the worst disaster of the kind in the Orient since the Tokyo-Yokohama quake of 1923. The number of injured was estimated at fully 12,000, and a quarter of a million were rendered homeless. Property damage was placed at $28,000,000. Half a dozen sizable towns and many villages were completely destroyed, and fires and heavy rain added to the dangers and distress of the afflicted people.

FATHER COUGHLIN, the "radio priest" of Detroit, staged the first state-meeting of his National Union for Social Justice in Olympia stadium in his home town, and more than 150,000 enthusiastic supporters crowded into the edifice to hear him tell how he proposed to right the wrongs of the people. On the platform with the crusading cleric were Senators Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma and Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, and Representatives William Connery of Massachusetts, Martin L. Sweeney of Ohio, Thomas O'Malley of Wisconsin and William Lemke of North Dakota.

The priest put forward the National union as a definite political weapon aimed at the money power and at standpat partyism.

Father Coughlin has been endorsed by the bishop of Detroit, Rt. Rev. Michael Gallagher.

"I pronounce Father Coughlin sound in doctrine, able in his application and interpretation," the bishop said. "Freely I give him my imprimatur on his written word and freely I give my approval on the spoken word. May both be circulated without objection throughout the land. Under my jurisdiction he preaches the just codes of the old law and its commandments. Until a lawful superior rules otherwise, I stand steadfastly behind this priest, Father Coughlin, encouraging him to do the will of God as he sees it and I see it."

GOVERNOR TALMADGE of Georgia, one of the most vociferous Democratic denouncers of President Roosevelt and the New Deal, has a strong supporter in Tom Linder, the Georgia commissioner of agriculture. In the department's official farm bulletin, that gentleman sent to the farmers of the state a message that "we still have the right to secede" from the Union.

The statement was carried in a footnote to a long article written by Linder in which he drew a comparison between the Democratic administration in Washington and the Russian government.

The secession reference was in the nature of resentment against a recent ruling by the United States Supreme court reversing Alabama courts in the Scottboro case on the ground colored citizens were excluded from juries.

SENATOR HUEY LONG delivered his much advertised attack on the President and the administration before a crowd that jammed the senate chamber. He was limited to 40 minutes, but in that time he used a lot of language. After describing Ickes, Farley, Wallace and General Johnson in terms not very funny, the "Kluge" assailed Mr. Roosevelt as personally responsible for what he called a plan to force the state of Louisiana to yield to corruption and debauchery. He threatened a tax rebellion in his realm if there were further federal encroachments in the matter of controlling the expenditure of federal loans for state projects.

He charged that the administration was concerned solely with controlling the expenditures in Louisiana in such manner as to insure winning the election in 1936.

"They could go down there and spend the whole five billion and they could not win that election," he said. Senator Long now indicates that he has no desire to head a third party next year unless that should be necessary to bring about the defeat of President Roosevelt. He says he would gladly join with the Republicans if they would nominate Senator Borah.

UNDER a new law the German Nazis are suppressing the entire church press of the country, Catholic and Protestant, and also all Jewish organs, either religious or racial. The edict, signed by Max Amann, president of the reich press chamber and manager of the Nazi party's publishing organization, is designed to monopolize the reich's publications for Nazi ideas and make them legally subject to Nazi dictatorship.

The law provides that "church or professional newspapers as well as papers intended for groups of subscribers with certain interests, henceforth are forbidden." The Nazi party and its organizations are not subject to the new law.

KING GEORGE of England, it appears, had no desire for an elaborate and costly celebration of his silver jubilee, such as was planned by the cabinet committee, and now he and Prime Minister MacDonald have ordered that the affair shall be very "quiet." His majesty was not consulted at first, and when he heard there were strong protests from the northern shires especially against such a wasteful expenditure of money in hard times, he was exceedingly irate and wanted to call off the whole affair. This could not be done, but the celebration will be nothing like what the cabinet committee had intended.

The king has forbidden garter king at arms, the duke of Norfolk, and other high officers of state of the ceremonial department to have anything to do with the jubilee. He has refused to have the peers of the realm in their robes for the presentation of addresses from the houses of parliament. He has refused to robe himself for the occasion.

HOW WARS ARE WON AND LOST

History Reveals Pestilence as Big Factor.

War is merely a gang fight between remnants of armies which have survived camp epidemics. Homer's "Iliad" opens with a pestilence and so does the "Oedipus Rex" of Sophocles. The plague at Athens which slew Pericles may have collapsed the Athenian empire quite as directly as the Sicilian disaster. It was an epidemic which turned back Xerxes' invasion of Greece; the diseases which thwarted the Carthaginians in Sicily in 414 and 396 B. C. contributed, by depriving them of that base against Italy, to the victory of Rome in the Punic wars and thus to the result that European civilization is predominantly Hellenic instead of Semitic. The fall of Rome itself may be explained by the epidemics which ravaged Italy from the first century to the Sixth century, for "it would be impossible to maintain permanently a political and social organization of the type and magnitude of Rome in the face of complete lack of modern sanitary knowledge." The Crusaders were balked by epidemics more decisively than by the Saracens; in 1098 a "Christian" army of 300,000 melted in a year to 20,000, and if one would read the details of their sickness and still keep an appetite for luncheon he needs to be a doctor. The Thirty Years war was blown this way and that like the damned souls in Dante, by deadly epidemics; dysentery, in a decisive campaign, threw victory to the French revolution, thus to annihilate Napoleon's army on its retreat from Moscow.

This disease "has decided more campaigns than Caesar, Hannibal and Napoleon." General Jinglebreaves omits to reflect that he they brave as Luifers, your soldiers cannot fight when they are dead of disease. "The epidemics get the blame for defeat, the generals get the credit for victory. . . . This is still applicable to modern times. Experience in the cantonments of 1917 and in the sanitation of active troops showed that war is today 75 per cent an engineering and sanitary problem and a little less than 25 per cent a military one. Other things being approximately equal, that army will win which has the best engineering and sanitary services. The only reason this is not apparent in wars is because the military minds on both sides are too superb to notice that both armies are simultaneously immobilized by the same diseases." Typhus, concludes Dr. Hans Zinsser, in his biography of that disease, entitled "Rats, Lice and History," "has at least as just a reason to claim that it 'won the war' as any of the contending nations. Many a French barroom fight might have been avoided if this had been clearly understood."—Boston Globe.

Roman "Refrigeration"

When Nero was emperor of Rome he used hundreds of his slaves in a refrigeration scheme which was more ambitious than the earliest evaporation systems. These slaves brought bales of snow from the Apennine mountains down to the emperor's courtyard, where the snow was stored in deep trenches insulated with sod and straw. This snow could be kept for weeks in this fashion. It was used for cooling wines, fruits and fish that formed part of the Roman feasts.

Curious Entry

The London Telegraph reports: "In the churchwardens' accounts of St. Giles-in-the-Fields is the curious entry: 'To the painter, for washing the Twelve Apostles off the organ loft, 4s.0d.' It was at the time when the Puritans were busy, doing worse damage than this to many churches."—Literary Digest.

In Accord On Silver Policy

The United States and Mexican Governments have concluded "mutually satisfactory" conversations on the American price-boosting silver policy, but details were closely guarded.

Secretary Morgenthau, in telling reporters of the discussions he has had with Roberto Lopez, Assistant Secretary of the Mexican Treasury, announced there would be no change in 77.57 cents an ounce, price the American Treasury is paying for newly mined domestic silver.

With the world price for the metal slumping below this figure, a close watch was kept on the Treasury all day for some indication that the American price would be jumped up again. The world price last week reached a high of 31 cents.

Señor Lopez flew here for conferences with Mr. Morgenthau when the advancing American prices precipitated a monetary crisis in Mexico and banks called in silver coin.

The Mexican official said the conversations with Mr. Morgenthau had been "mutually satisfactory."—Monitor.

Business Outlook

Retail sales have maintained their volume surprisingly through the first months of the year. Steel production, after reaching the highest point in years, tapered off some but a new peak is expected during the present quarter.

There again wages are being paid and above 1929 wages are equal to and with peak employment. Residential construction over the country is steadily advancing.

All of these items and more indicate the possibility of the nation emerging from the depression during the present year if no obstacles are thrown in the path.—Industrial News.

The Captain Hates The Sea

A shipload of intrigue, romance, uproarious comedy and staggering surprises-buffed by gales of laughter and hurricanes of hilarity!

That's what one of the critics had to say-and will likewise be your opinion, after you too have had an opportunity of enjoying "The Captain Hates The Sea" which will be presented at the Lyric Theatre in Carrizozo on May 9, 10 and 11.

Here are some of the well known personalities in the cast:

Victor McLaglen-John Gilbert-Alison Skipworth-Wynne Gibson-Heler Vinson-Walter Connolly-Fred Keasing-Leon Errol-Walter Catlett and Tala Birell.

Democratic Women Meet

Women of six southwestern states—Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Colorado, will meet in Kansas City, Missouri, May 17 and 18 to attend the Regional Conference sponsored by the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee. This is the seventh of the series of conferences and Institutes of Government which the Women's Division has held this spring.

At the Kansas City meeting there will be an opportunity for women to confer with leaders of the party, who are coming out from Washington to assist the local leaders in interpreting the President's Recovery program as well as to make important organization plans for the future. Women's part in the Recovery Program, Social Security and important discussions of questions relating to Rural Rehabilitation with special reference to the recent Dust storm damage, will be featured on the two-day program. All sessions will be held at the Hotel Baltimore in Kansas City and are open to the public.

Speakers will include M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, who has been engaged in a survey of conditions in southwestern states; Mrs. James H. Wolfe, Director of the Women's Division of the Democratic party who is in charge of the women's activities for the National Committee; Miss Harriet Elliott, professor of political science at the Women's College of the University of North Carolina who is one of the most inspirational speakers of the country; Mrs. A. J. McGuire who will give an illustrated address and many other prominent men and women living within the southwest region. National, State, District and local party officials will be in attendance as well as club presidents and representatives of the Young Democrats' organization.

Sessions will begin Friday morning and last through Saturday afternoon. A banquet Friday evening, a luncheon Saturday noon and other social features will contribute to the enjoyment of the meeting. Plans for the conference are being made by Mrs. Harrison Parkman, Regional Advisor. Mrs. R. J. Curdy, 15 East 53th Street Terrace, Kansas City, Missouri, is local chairman and the Kansas City are joining in a welcome to visitors from the nearby states. Request and luncheon tickets coming to the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce indicate a large attendance.

Opens New Plant

The Chevrolet Motor Company's 80,000-car-a-year assembly plant at Baltimore, Md., was formally opened April 9, and is now producing both passenger cars and trucks.

The City of Baltimore virtually made a civic holiday of the date, to celebrate the addition to its varied industries of its first automobile plant, and to welcome formally the representatives of the General Motors Corporation and Chevrolet Motor Company who attended the opening ceremonies. Official proclamation by the Governor of Maryland and by the Mayor of Baltimore welcomed the automobile officials to the State and to the City. After the flag raising at the new plant, and the inspection of the new buildings and equipment, a formal banquet was given by the Association of Commerce in honor of General Motors and Chevrolet visitors.

In its structural design, its layout, mechanical equipment and processes, the Baltimore plant may be looked upon as an exposition of five years' progress in automotive manufacturing methods, since it is the industry's first major building development since 1929. Chevrolet engineers and production authorities deem the new plant the most efficient in the industry, but freely give the credit to the many new developments in machinery and equipment that were available for the first time for use in planning a complete assembly plant.

COMMENT

Americans are very enterprising. They are even making use of the alphabet for commercial purposes. A Las Cruces store is advertising an NPA ("No Profits Allowed") Sale.

The mayor of Roswell issued a proclamation, declaring Saturday, May 4th as official straw hat day. If it was as cold and snowy in Roswell on May 4th as it was in Carrizozo, we imagine the straw hats were few and far-between.

How legally organized farmers' cooperatives serve, not only their members, but an entire industry, along this line, is strikingly brought out in recently completed studies of the new regulated cotton ginning business. Some of the most thorough of these studies have been made in Oklahoma, from records kept in pursuance of a state law passed in 1915, but fought in the courts until early in 1930. The law made cotton gins "public utilities" and as such they became subject to regulation by the Oklahoma Corporation Commission. With the power to regulate ginning charges the Corporation Commission recognized that it also had been assigned a responsibility that of finding out the costs upon which these charges should be based.

Referring to this phase of Oklahoma cotton history, Vice President McPheeters of the Wichita Bank for Cooperatives points out that "in the studies to determine costs, the farmer's cooperative ginning associations gave invaluable help. Costs were exactly what they wanted to know about," Mr. McPheeters explained, "for they operate on the basis of returning to their members all charges in excess of costs and depreciation, sinking funds, etc."

"With the costs worked out the Corporation Commission has been able to show, that on the nine crops of 1925 to 1933 inclusive, savings to growers below the charges during the 1924-25 ginning season, ranged from $1,232,038.11 on the 1927 crop to $4,849,424.02 on the 1933 crop a total on the nine crops of $20,834,674.68.

"The first of the ten years covered by the study-1924-25- the ginning charges then in effect gave gins a 38.7 percent return on investment. The next year (under the first charge reduction ordered) the return was 28.16 percent. For the last four years of the period, returns ranged from 6.5 percent to 12.3 percent averaging around 9.5 percent.

"Adam and Fallen Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Societies and Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, May 12th. The Golden Text is: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." [John 3:14,15.]

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Wherefore he saith, Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light." [Eph. 5:14.]

The Lesson-Sermon also including passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures", by Mary Baker Eddy: "Whatever indicates the fall of man or the opposite of God or God's absence, is the Adam-dream which is neither Mind nor man, for it is not begotten of the Father. The rule of inversion infers from error its opposite, Truth; but Truth is the light which dispels error. As mortals begin to understand Spirit, they give up the belief that there is any true existence apart from God."

SYNOPSIS

The luck that had brought the Boston Lawrences to California at the beginning of the gold rush has deserted the present generation. From a 4,000-acre ranch, their holdings have shrunk to a small farm, and the old family home in Clipperville. The death of their poetic father forced the three eldest children to work so that Bam and little Ariel might continue their education. Phil, now twenty-five, had gone into the iron work, Gail to the public library and Edith to the book department of Clipperville's largest store. Seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming a problem, and Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. Young Van Murchison, son of a wealthy family, returns from Yale. He and Gail had been close friends before he went to college and Gail has visions of the turning-of-the-Lawrence-tide. Dick Stebbins, Phil's best friend, has the run of the house.

CHAPTER II—Continued

He had brought a large box with him; a sort of a box.

"Dick, don't tell me you remembered my birthday?" Gail exclaimed as he gave it to her.

"Whose birthday?"

"Mine."

Dick's dissatisfied look traversed the circle.

"I didn't know today was your birthday," he said resentfully. "No—I just met the boy bringing this in."

Gail was paying no attention to him. Her fingers had been experiencing the unfamiliar delight of tearing away green strings and cardboard and matted layers of silky green paper. Roses—wet, sweet roses, two dozen of them!

"A dozen and a half," Edith breathed, awed.

"Two dozen, Edie."

Gail had wrenched the card from its wire and torn open the wet envelope; the ink on this card was blurred, but the words unmistakable.

"Twenty-three times twenty-three more. Love from Van."

She seemed amused and pleased; they were all pleased. But Gail's moderately gratified manner gave no hint of the bubbling joy of ecstasy that arose within her. This was almost unbelievable. Roses—and the intimate, offhand card from Van Murchison! Gail was only confusedly aware of what went on about her, of what the others were saying.

"School tonight, Phil?" Dick asked.

"Oh, sure!"

They went off together and, in a happy haze, Gail began automatically the business of clearing up. Her thoughts swam in a sea of golden light.

The kitchen grew hot; the gas soared and whistled. Gail worked on oblivious. Roses, roses, roses—the world was nothing but pink roses.

Gail had come into Ariel's room, as was her habit the last thing at night, to see that her little sister was comfortably in bed. She kissed Ariel, and smoothed the discarded folds of blanket at the foot of the bed.

When she left the room Ariel seemed to be almost asleep.

Edith, meanwhile, had come into Gail's room. "When all's said and done—" she began, and paused.

"Which God forbid should ever be!" Gail interposed.

"Well, I know. But when all's said and done, Gail, who are the Murchisons? They're nothing but money," Edith said.

"Bill . . . money. . . ." Gail was laughing at her sister, but Edith did not resent it.

"Of course." She answered the uncompleted suggestion with a smile.

"But I mean that money isn't— isn't like birth," she pursued.

Gail went about the room quickly, long adept in the business of making it ready for the night. She said her prayers in a brisk, businesslike way, with her eyes on Edith's face, and got into bed. Her sister came to sit at her feet.

"It would be wonderful if one of us married well," Edith offered dreamily.

"On the strength of two dozen roses," Gail countered. "At a time of the year when roses are two dollars a dozen!"

"They have scads," Edith mused, uninterested.

"Murchison's Milia. I suppose they save millions," Gail agreed soberly. "But he's not really a Murchison, Edie."

"He was adopted. Nobody ever calls him Kinney."

"Was he legally adopted?"

"Oh, yes. He was only five when his mother got a divorce, and when Van's father died Mr. Murchison practically adopted him."

"How'd you happen to know that, Edie?"

"Reading a book about old Clipperville—you know that crazy book that hardly mentions Grandfather? Well, it had all about some lawsuit, and the Kinneys and the Kinneys were in it."

"They awfully nice," Gail said, impulsively, out of a silence.

"He must be . . . is he handsome, Edie?"

"Oh—collegiate-looking."

Edith was silent for a full minute. Then she said, with conviction, "You ought to come to Muller's and get one of those striped linens."

"I was thinking I'd get one of the best ones at Muller's at the sale."

"You ought to get both," Edith said firmly.

"I wish I had a white hat!"

There was another silence in the big, dim, old-fashioned bedroom, whose heavy brocade wall papers had not been changed or cleaned for twenty years, and whose windows were still curtained in fringed rep.

"Isn't it fun, the way unexpected things happen!" Edith said.

"I was thinking we could ask him to Sunday supper."

They were silent, staring into space.

"Do you know we're very romantic?" Edith demanded then.

"I suppose we are!"

"You know we are. I mean—Phil's so handsome and so smart, and everyone likes him, and everyone regards Ariel as a sort of genius, who's going to inherit Papa's gift, and you—you certainly can write."

"Oh, Edie! I had one article in the Challenge, and that was only because it was in favor of the Bay Bridge—"

"Abigail Lawrence! Your compositions always took prizes at school, and your Mother's day article was published on the front page of the San Francisco Call."

"Well, I know," Gail pondered it a minute, and then said with a suddenly flushed face, "If I should marry anyone who had any money, Edie, and didn't have to work so hard and worry so much, I believe I could write stories!"

"You don't have to tell me that," said loyal Edith.

"Are two of your daughters going to be writers, Mr. Lucky Lawrence?" Gail whimsically asked the enormous, enlarged crayon portrait of her father hanging on the wall.

"All of us are going to get somewhere, and put the Lucky Lawrences back on the map!" Edith prophesied.

Left alone under her greenish light, Gail fell into a happy, musing mood that made her supply of books entirely superfluous. She had been getting tired and discouraged of late; for months she had seemed to drag with her, to lack its accustomed sweetness and interest. After all, Papa had been dead for almost seven years now, and they had been hard, puzzled years for the children he had left behind him, years barren of results. The old house had grown shabbier, the garden more of a jungle, the children themselves had grown only poorer and more bewildered. There appeared to be no escape; there had been no miracle.

Just at first there had been a decided social movement toward the orphaned Lawrences; immediately after Patterson Lawrence's heroic death in overcrowded Washington, all Clipperville had made a gesture of kindness and concern toward his children. During these days Gail and Phil had been the center of a happy, fun-loving group. These had been days of picnics, charades, amateur theatricals, sundays at Dobbin's, movies, occasional hilarious gatherings at theaters or dances.

All that was over now. Gradually the smart crowd had drifted away, taking to motor cars, hotel tea rooms, roadhouses.

Gail had neither the money nor the wits to hold her own; Phil, always something of a Puritan, had frankly abandoned a company and a code with which he had no sympathy, and Edith had withdrawn first of all.

For actual years now—Gail always winced away in her secret thought from calculating them too exactly—there had been no attempt made on the part of Clipperville's golden youth to include the Lawrences in good times. Edith had become just a little bit twisted, in consequence, just a little too prone to explain merrily that the Lawrences did not want to have anything to do with modern ways, for they intended to marry men worthy of their name. And Phil had given up society entirely, and admired—or had admired, for Gail never admitted it—that wretched little social outcast, Lily Cass.

As for Gail, for many months she had known herself to be slaking into utter commonplaceness. As time went on she was becoming more and more drawn little Miss Lawrence of the library; Phil more and more the quiet, hard-working, underpaid iron worker; Edith more and more bookish, old-maidish.

The joyous promise of the romantic Lawrence youngsters had long been lost. Phil had told Gail, with a little patient bitterness, that it was to the Hunter and the Barchi boys that all advancement at the Iron Works had been given. Months had gone by without seeing one single eligible man coming to the Lawrence house.

Hardest of all for Gail to lose had been her faith in herself. She had been so sure, at sixteen, seven long years ago, that courage, self-confidence, high spirits, and honest service were the weapons with which to conquer the world. She had been so sure that she knew the secret!

She had seen herself writing children's stories. Oh, nothing sensational, nothing classical—but simple, charming, boarding-school and ranch stories that all girls would love, and that would assure Gail pleasant fame among her townpeople, insure her an income that would mean pleasure and beauty for Ariel's girlhood, and an opportunity to develop the little sister's poetical genius.

But it seemed that forever—forever—forever the once lucky Lawrences would be poor, shabby, hardworking, and obscure, that Phil would help to build ships in which luckier men should cruise the waters of the world, that Edith would sell to more fortunate women the romances she would never realize in her own life, and Gail taste in her own mind only the rapture of typewritten pages, the ecstasy of holding her own book in her own hands, the shy delight of being introduced in distinguished gatherings as "the authoress."

Now, on her twenty-third birthday, unexpectedly, Van Murchison had given her back these dreams. Oh, how good she could be, how gracious and sweet and fine she could be if Van Murchison fell in love with her! That was all she needed, just a break—just an indication that wonderful things could happen, that poor girls were sometimes sought in marriage by rich young men.

Young Mrs. Murchison. After all, if she was married it—say this time next year—nobody could say that she had been an old maid. Twenty-four—that was young to marry. And then Edie should marry—it would be easy enough to find beaux for the other girls, with the Murchison money and position behind her!

The fun of it! The beauty of it! And why not? Other girls had had that much luck, and much, much more. Drawing off to sleep in the sweet summer darkness, Gail heard a door bang downstairs, just as the clock struck a drowsy eleven. The Lawrences, having little to protect, rarely locked doors; perhaps this was Sam coming in late, perhaps it was Phil. Anyway, unless it banged again she did not propose to get up to bother with it.

As it happened, it was neither, but Gail could not know that, and so she drifted happily off into the deep sleep of tired twenty-three. Van Murchison's laugh, his voice, aill in her ears.

Sam had been in bed and asleep for an hour when the clock struck eleven. Phil had walked home from night school with Lily. He was now sitting on the steps of the Cass shanty at the end of Thomas street, murmuring incoherent and foolish absurdities to the little car that smelled of heavy cheap powder and perfume.

No; the door had been slammed by Ariel—or rather it had been caught and slammed by an unexpected gust of wind when her small frail hand had opened it upon the summer dark. She had stood there, trembling, terrified, waiting to see if Sam or Gail or Edith had been roused, ready to fly to her room and scramble into bed at the first sound of an investigating footsteps.

But there had been no disturbance upstairs, and after an interminable silence Ariel had opened the door again, senselessly this time, and had slipped down through the overgrown garden, and into the deep green-black shadows at the gate. In a sky of clear dark blue millions of stars had been twinkling, and in the side lane, deeply ratted from winter rains, there had been two other stars, the watchful lamps of a shining low open car.

Ariel knew Buddy Balch very slightly, but she knew, as all the town knew, that he was an overgrown big boy who had been in Stanford university for about three years and was still a sophomore. She knew what the scent of Buddy's breath signified, too.

Of the couple sunk in the rumble seat, an overcast man with a collapsed little bobbed, alick head on his shoulder, she had known nothing. But she had settled in beside the driver with a little gasp of satisfaction and excitement.

Buddy had whispered, "Listen, we're only going down the road a ways, and come back."

"That suits me," Ariel had said, unperturbed.

"You're a good little sport." Buddy had told her. They were out of hearing of the Lawrence house now, and he could move faster. He had stepped on the gas, and the car had shot like a projectile into the starry night.

Herring and Sardine Family

Any properly prepared small fish of the herring family is entitled to be called a sardine, according to the bureau of fisheries, United States Department of Commerce. Pilchard, sprat, and bristling are named as sardines in Europe; in the United States young herring become sardines in Maine, and a species of pilchard, called the Pacific sardine, in California.

Plan Pharos of Columbus

Move to Create Monument to Great Sailor in World He Discovered; Island of Hayti Selected as the Most Appropriate Site.

Some brief descriptions have come down to us about one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world, the Lighthouse of Alexandria.

It was built on the island of Pharos in the harbor and was connected with the city by the Seven Furlong bridge. Accounts placing the height of its tower at 600 feet are believed to be overdrawn and 400 feet is regarded as more probable. Built by Sostratus of Cnidus, it was begun under Ptolemy I of Egypt and was finished under Ptolemy II, its cost being placed at 800 talents, which by some valuations might be the equivalent of as much as $1,600,000.

From the Pharos of Alexandria is traced an addition to languages and an influence on lighthouse and also on other architecture. The word "Pharos" came to be applied to lighthouses generally and with some change in spelling is of common usage in certain modern tongues, while pharology became a technical term for lighthouse building. The first of the lighthouses in western Europe, built by the Romans, was called the Pharos of Dover, while the minarets of Mohammedan mosques symbolize lighthouses and in the earlier ones we possibly may see what their model, the original Alexandria structure, looked like. Some influence on the steeples of Christian churches is discerned by writers.

An example of special dignity and worthiness is accordingly followed in elaborate plans for creating, in the western hemisphere, a like wonder of the modern world in a monument to Christopher Columbus. Its site will not be at any modern Alexandria—at any of the great ports of the New world he discovered, but on the island of Hayti, on which he landed during his very first voyage, where he established the first American colony and where his remains were buried in 1530, 30 years after his death. During the partial occupancy of this island by Americans of late the project has been advanced to a stage where success seems certain.

If the plan is carried out as contemplated, no other undertaking will be representative of the New World in as complete a sense, for it is proposed that every western national government, large or small, shall contribute to its $2,000,000 cost. A design for a noble structure has already been made, embodying special precautions against a Caribbean peril, the original Pharos having been destroyed by an earthquake in the Thirteenth century.

To some it will seem important to know whether the remains of Columbus still rest in the ancient cathedral of Santo Domingo, in the island's second republic, and some recent works of reference print an authoritative version of the Spanish government as to their removal years ago. The bare statement that the wrong tomb was opened and the bones of one of Columbus' sons taken away, and not those of Columbus himself, does not seem very convincing, but if the data preserved by those called in as observers during an examination at the cathedral some years ago are accurate, a mistake was made by the Spanish. Insinua, lettering, other small evidences indicated that the tomb which had been opened was undoubtedly that of the son and that another tomb now holds the few fragments of Columbus' bones and the observers were men of intelligence, including high ecclesiastics, officials and others.

But whether or not their opinion was correct, this is an appropriate site, for many other reasons, and what could be a more appropriate form for a monument to the greatest navigator of all than a splendid pinnacle carrying a perpetual light for the guidance of his successors on the seas? This will be more than a name seen afar, for directing those who ply the ocean. It is also designed for those plying the upper air. Aviation is now farther advanced than was the lore of the sea in Columbus' time. Probably air routes along the short parallels of latitude in the inclement North will always be followed, but distance is much less important than safety to aviation, making miles by the hundreds in an hour.

May we not believe that the favorite routes of the future will be along the warmer, milder, safer parallels to our southern ports; that the skies to be "whitened" by flying craft will be skies to the south and that the Pharos of Columbus, looked for by many an eye on dark nights and stormy nights, will be a wonder and preserver vouchsafing in the Caribbean blessings to the Imperical greater even than those of its predecessor of the Mediterranean.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Rubber Turf for Racers

Tested at a stadium near London, rubber turf is being used to surface the track on which greyhounds race. It is claimed that the material gives better footing after a rain than grass. The rubber turf also will be tested on football fields.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Russian Auto-Sleigh

A worker in the Molotov automobile factory of Russia has invented an auto-sleigh that runs on spokes or feet instead of wheels, and instead of wheels at the back there are two pairs of skis that move along special grooves in the chassis and then press at the snow and shove the car along.

HIGHER SHOULDERS—WIDER, DEEPER NON-SKID TREAD—MORE RUBBER ON THE ROAD . . .

These Truck Tires Will Cut Operating Costs for You

FIRESTONE has constantly been the pioneer and leader in the development of balloon tires for trucks, and in the New Firestone Truck Tire for 1935 we have incorporated improvements that enable you to maintain uninterrupted schedules at higher speeds—at lowest cost per mile.

A new tread compound has been developed, which is tougher and longer wearing. The tread has been specially designed with higher, more rugged shoulders and wider, deeper non-skid, with more rubber on the road. It is possible to hold this thicker tread to the Gum-Dipped cord body because of the patented Firestone construction of two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread. These improvements give you greatest blowout protection and non-skid safety for the higher hauling speeds of today.

Call on the Firestone Service Store or Firestone Tire Dealer in your community today. Let him show you how these amazing new tires will help cut your operating cost and give you more dependable service.

Beautiful Madeira

Radio Towers Crown Funchal's Ancient Fort.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

CHANGING seasons do not touch Madeira, the beautiful Portuguese island on the fringe of the eastern Atlantic. Its velvety green mountains cleft by deep ravines, its terraced hill-sides, brilliant with flowers and flowering vines are the same, summer and winter.

In December the peaks of the towering mountains, which rise like an amphitheater back of Funchal, chief city of Madeira, are sometimes tipped with snow; but all else is vividly green, with a riot of multi-colored blossoms on every terrace of this quaint old town, which climbs the hills above a sapphire sea.

Gardens are the striking feature of the Madeiran capital. They hang one above the other like balconies, radiant with flowers of many climes.

Stiff Brazilian araucaria pines, tall Australian eucalyptus, and leafy Asiatic mango nod to palm, mimosa and magnolia. The Indian fig, with its wide-spreading branches, grows beside the flamboyant of Madagascar, the coral tree of the West Indies and the camphor tree of Japan.

Most effective in winter are the flowering creepers—the deep-magenta and brick-red bougainvilleas and the blazing orange bignonia, which form solid masses of color on the high walls. Flaming poinsettias and red, pink and white camellias grow as tall as trees. Clinging to the sheer face of the cliffs which border many of the gardens is a variety of aloes, which thrusts out startling scarlet flower spikes above the blue sea.

To the gorgeous hues of the flowers add the gray and black of the rock-strewn shore, lapped by white sea foam; the deep terra cotta of the soil in the ravines which intercept the town; the pink, buff, and cream of the houses, with their green shutters and red-tiled roofs; the brilliant chrome-green of banana and sugar cane which grow in nearly every garden, and you have the "natural color picture" of Funchal.

Automobiles, motor busses, and trucks now crowd Funchal's narrow streets, but it is the native "carro" or sledge, drawn by a pair of patient oxen, that catches the eye.

Hiding in an "Oxen-Cab."

In one of these two-wheeled, curtained and canopied "oxen-cabs," which resemble big baskets on runners, one may glide over smooth, polished cobbles to the cog railway that climbs a steep incline to pine-clad heights 3,300 feet above the sea. A feature of the ascent is the shower of flowers tossed by blossom-laden children, who scamper after sledge and funicular.

The descent from the mountain can be made in a toboggan sledge, which offers an exciting ride. The speed of the passenger and cargo sledge is slow, but the downhill "running carro" provides real thrills. The broad armchair on runners is used in descending selected routes of tilted streets. Two men hold the sledge in leash by guide ropes; as it starts down the slippery stone path they hop onto the back platform and the slide begins.

Then come flashes of town and sea, gaudy blossoms draping high, sunlit courts, dark-haired women and big-eyed children framed in vine-hung doorways, pedestrians flattened against the wall. As the sledge approaches a curve, the crew jump off to guide it with vigorous tugs around the corner, checking the speed when the lower level is reached.

Madreia is an oceanic Amazon whose height from her crown, on the summit of Pico Ruivo, to her base in the briny deep south of Funchal is nearly 20,000 feet. Only about one-third of this mountain queen is visible above water, her head and shoulders draped in a vivid emerald scarf.

The islands forming this archipelago, Madeira, Porto Santo, and two uninhabited groups, are of volcanic origin. Considering the depth of the surrounding sea, and the abysmal chasms which everywhere cleave Madeira's mountainous surface, it is evident that a vast period of time must have elapsed since the beginning of the countless eruptions which went toward the making of the island. There are no live craters in this group, as on the Canary and Cape Verde islands.

Early History of Madeira.

Much traditional lore is associated with the discovery of Madeira. Romans, Arabs, Italians, Spaniards, French, English, and Irish have all been credited as the first to glimpse the island. The most romantic of the legends concerns two English lovers of the fourteenth century, Robert Machin and Anna d'Arlet, who eloped from Bristol in a small craft and were blown southward to Madeira's eastern shore.

With the coming of the fifteenth-century history is on firmer ground. It is known that the Portuguese mariner, Zarco, sent out by Henry the Navigator, reached Porto Santo in 1419, then sailed across to a larger island, 23 miles away, braving a dark cloud which hung over it, an evil omen to the superstitious sailors of that day. The forbidding cloud proved to be vapor hanging over the mountains of a beautiful, densely wooded land. Zarco and his followers landed on the shore of a sheltered bay about 12 miles northeast of Funchal. Because of its forests the new land was named "Madeira," the Portuguese word for wood.

A world-renowned figure stands out in the early history of Porto Santo and Madeira. Christopher Columbus, relentlessly sailing these seas in search of information regarding the then unknown western ocean, came to Porto Santo. His married pretty Philippa Perestrello, the governor's daughter. The house where they lived in Villa Baleira, the only town in Porto Santo, can still be seen.

Columbus devoted himself to chart-making, from time to time visiting Funchal to gather information. In the Madeiras, Canaries, and Azores he listened to the tale of every adventurous sailor he encountered, picked up valuable nautical hints, and pondered deeply on the drift borne islandward from the west.

Sugar cane, introduced from Sicily, was responsible for Madeira's prosperity during the early years of its colonization. Negro and Moorish slaves were imported from Africa to work on the sugar plantations and to build roads and aqueducts. The stone irrigating canals, or "levadas," extending for miles down the steep mountain sides still render efficient service. Without them the lower regions would be waterless a large part of the year.

Origin of Its Wine.

Soon after the colonization of Madeira, the Malvasi wine was imported by Prince Henry from Crete, and other varieties were introduced at a later period. Today one type of Madeira wine bears the old name, "Malvasia," or "Malmsey," famous in England when western European wines of that name were well known, and later when Madeira wines had taken their place.

Our naval hero, John Paul Jones, was at one time master of the Two Friends, a Madeira wine ship. The finest wines of the island were in demand in the America Colonies. Ships from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Savannah, laden with pipe staves, lumber, train oil, dried fish, and rice, brought back pipes of Madeira to the wealthy American merchants and planters.

Madreia is a small island, little more than 20 miles in length, and less than half this in width; but it is so mountainous, so gashed by deep gorges and guarded by gigantic headlands, that access is difficult to certain of its sun-kissed coastal villages, cool, mist-enveloped uplands, and deep, fern-hung canyons. Motor busses, which connect the villages on the paved highways, have made a marked change in the manner of life and outlook of the country people.

The mountain village of Camacha, above Funchal, is the home of the important wickerwork industry, for the bushy willow grows in the beds of nearby streams. At nearly every door men and women weave chairs, tables and baskets.

Madreia hand embroidery has become as well known in recent years as Madeira wine. All through the country one sees women, sitting in the open, industriously plying their needles at odd moments between household tasks, and girls as young as seven or eight "stitching away" like veterans.

The islands of Porto Santo is much lower and drier than Madeira. It has stretches of sandy beach which the larger island lacks, and in summer, residents of Funchal brave the rough four-hour passage to Villa Baleira to enjoy the sea bathing.

The "Social Set" and the Workers

Not Altogether Idle Threat Made by Professional Dress Models.

There has been a fight on in New York between dress models and society girls.

The models, regarded as unfair competition the debutantes' practice of modeling for nothing in fashion shows. They said this hobby of the socially elect deprived them of a thousand jobs a year. So fifty of them got together at a mass meeting and drew up a petition warning the daughters of the social register to stay in their own back yard.

It was not only the loss of jobs that was in question the professional models asserted but their professional dignity. For the society girls provided an example of how clothes should not be modeled, thus belittling the "entire profession."

And what, you may ask, were they going to do about it? They were not bashful in making that clear too. "Suppose," they began subtly, "we professional models invaded these society affairs and stole the boy friends of these debutantes? We don't say we will, instead we are sending this petition. But if they ignore the petition—? We don't think we should have such a difficult task! But that, of course would be a last resort. We hope we won't have to go that far!"

I can hear many a debutante saying "laugh that off." I did hear a prominent society woman remark that only in this country would that phenomenon be possible of working girls having such amazing confidence that they could "take away the boy friends of the debutantes" merely by making up their minds to do.

To me that confidence is not so amazing. To the professional models it probably seems perfectly natural that they can do any given thing better than girls who never had to do anything they didn't want to do.

To girls out in the world earning their living, waging the ceaseless battle of competition in the struggle for existence, discipline and training themselves not only in the technique of their work but in the technique of the human contacts which are sometimes even more important, to girls accustomed to "taking it" as they say, it doubtless seems very simple to win any game against a competitor who has had to develop no deadlier weapons than "my mother is running this," or "I am Mrs. Sturtevant's niece."

The professional models are graduates, most of them, of the School of Hard Knocks. And whatever else their diploma may be worth, there is one degree of self confidence. And that's not all "baloney," either!

Insect Eats Buttons

From Sydney, N. S. Wales, comes a report of a new insect foe for entomologists to battle. This is a small beetle, the favorite food of which is vegetable ivory trousers buttons, and for some reason or other it seems to like the buttons better after they have been sewn onto garments.

Tailors and others using the buttons are having all kinds of trouble with them, claiming that the borings of the beetles soon reduce the buttons to uselessness.

The beetle is not a native of Australia, according to entomologists of that region, but has probably been imported in shipments of the vegetable ivory or in date stones. It measures but one-sixty-fourth of an inch in length.

FOR FULL MOTOR PROTECTION

Modern cars must have oil with extra oiliness

THE development since 1931 of motors of 80 to 180 horsepower has brought about correspondingly increased bearing pressures and crankcase temperatures. Motor manufacturers and crankcase temperatures. Motor manufacturers have turned to new alloy metals of extra strength and durability to meet these new conditions.

For full protection of such motors, you must have oil with enough extra oiliness and film strength to get safe lubrication under extreme pressure and heat.

Yet motor oils generally have no more oiliness and film strength now than they had ten years ago. Some oils have less, because over-refining to eliminate carbon and sludge has robbed them of oiliness and film strength.

There is one exception—Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. It, too, is free from carbon and sludge troubles, as its users know after millions of trouble-free miles of driving. But more important, Almen and Timken machine tests prove it has more oiliness and 2 to 4 times the film strength of any straight mineral oil. That added oiliness and film strength protect your motor under all conditions.

Germ Processing—adding concentrated oily essence to highly-refined oil—gives other valuable advantages. Because Germ Processed Oil penetrates and combines with metal surfaces, a "Hidden Quart" stays up in your motor and cuts down starting-period wear. Germ Processed Oil gives longer mileage with greater motor protection, as proved by the famous Indianapolis Destruction Test.

Say "O.K.—Drain"—fill with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil and get full motor protection.

Baseball News

By M. C. St John

Manager Ray Sipple brought his team from White Oaks last Sunday and played here with the Baca Canyon, Transient camp boys. White Oaks scored three runs in the first inning but the Transients tied the score in the same inning, from there on both teams gradually increased their scores and held the crowd in suspense. At the end of the game the Transients had the short lead of 1 score the final results were 7-8 in their favor.

Walton, catching for the Transients took four chances to second with four put-outs. Marshall Shearer who was holding the 1st sack made remarkable fielding and hit well.

Red Huffmeyer and young Shaw tossed for White Oaks and had nice support from their players.

The Carrizozo Cobras will play the Transients next Sunday May 12. Be on hand.
