Weeding the Relief Rolls

Harvest time usually follows some weeks after the week-cutting season with respect to most crops. But the two are falling together in the Middle Western United States. Except that the harvesting is of wheat, and the weeding is of able-bodied men who have stayed on the relief rolls though jobs in the fields were available.

State relief offices have been closed in South Dakota, and administrators in Iowa, Nebraska, and southern Illinois, have acted to remove from the dole every man able to handle a pitchfork. This move follows complaints from many localities elsewhere in the United States that relief recipients had refused jobs. Investigation sometimes has shown that the working conditions offered were unreasonable, but on the whole it is clear that the time has come to demand that people earn their bread where reasonable means of earning it are available.

A report by the Senate Labor Committee charges after long investigation that there has been widespread violation and evasion of the law which requires that contractors on government construction shall pay the full "prevailing rate" of wages. The "kick-back" and similar abuses for exploiting the scarcity of employment are the less condonable in these instances, since contractors know what the law is when they make their bids.

Yet, considering the low state of construction activity outside government work, an objective view of the committee report suggests two conclusions. One is that the American people should be continuously alert against the labor exploiter and cheat who would beat wages down to unconscionable low extremes. The second is that on the other hand, some kinds of labor might do well to make slight concessions in hourly wage rates so as to make possible greater employment and greater actual earnings.

A worker's pride is in general a constructive force. It impels him to give attention to his craftsmanship and to cling to the highest possible standard of living. Yet there is both true pride and false pride. It is false pride for anyone to think that any kind of honest work is beneath him. The most warranted and most effective kind of pride is pride in the willingness to work.—Christian Science Monitor.

Mrs. Erva Claunch and children arrived home Sunday from a two weeks' trip to Tulsa, Oklahoma where they visited Mrs. A. E. Adams, Mrs. Claunch' mother.

Lueraz Hurled Cobras to Victory over Ft. Stanton

The Cobras and Fort Stanton played their second consecutive game here last Sunday. The odds were that Stanton would trounce the Cobras this time, but the Carrizozo boys were playing their best and kept the visiting team scoreless until the first of the ninth when Stanton scored two runs, making the final score 5-2 in favor of the Cobras. Lueraz pitched a splendid ball with Chavez doing the back stopping.

At The Lyric

On August 1st, 2nd and 3rd what is considered a treat of treats, is in store for you. You have no doubt either seen or heard of "Lady For A Day." Well critics agree that this production, "Lady By Choice," which again presents May Robson in a similar role, is another great triumph. Just as in "Lady For A Day," the story's warm human interest combines splendid drama, stirring comedy and unique romance. You cannot help but agree with these critics that it is one of the best films of the season and the performances of Carole Lombard, Walter Connolly, Roger Pryor and Arthur Hohl are outstanding. Just as one of them remarked, "Give yourself a real treat and then tell your friends about it."

And on August 22nd, 23rd, and 24th, you will have an opportunity of seeing a motion picture which is considered one of the strangest and most fascinating stories filmed in a long time. It is "Black Moon" which presents the popular Jack Holt together with Fay Wray and Dorothy Burgess and an excellent supporting cast. Chuck-full of thrills, gripping drama and strong action, "Black Moon" tells the story of a man who discovers that his wife is the high priestess of a blood-crazed voodoo cult that indulges in human sacrifices as a part of their religious rituals.

Don't miss either of these productions! You will find yourself thanking Mr. Walker for his enterprise in providing them for your entertainment.

Mr. E. M. Brickley went to Carlsbad on business Wednesday. Wayne Zumwalt and Louise Shelton assisted at the bank during his absence.

We are indebted to Senator Carl A. Hatch for a copy of the 1935 Agricultural Year Book received last Monday. It contains much that is of interest—"What's new in Agriculture," also statistics of grain, tobacco, cotton, vegetables, stock, poultry, etc.

Mr. Stearns' Funeral

Funeral services were held for Mr. Orsa Stearns at the family home in Nogal Canyon last Friday afternoon, with Rev. L. D. Jordan in charge. After a hymn was sung, Rev. Jordan delivered a brief, but impressive sermon, followed by a prayer. The Masons then took charge. A long line of cars followed the remains to Angus Cemetery where the solemn burial rites of the Masonic order were given.

The members of the Eastern Star Lodge who acted as flower women, formed a double line, holding the wreaths and flowers through which the casket was borne. Past Master F. L. Boughner took charge at the grave side, assisted by other officers of the lodge.

Pall bearers: F. W. Skinner, A. B. Zumwalt, J. P. Nash, F. A. English, B. S. Burns and J. M. Shelton.

Honorary pall bearers: Albert Roberts, Louis Adams, Don English, Ansel Swearingen, Henry Lutz and Dr. Blaney.

Truly a good man and loyal Mason has passed to his reward, and he will be sadly missed by his family, his friends and fellow lodge members.

Besides his widow, Mr. Stearns leaves an elder son, Elwood Stearns and wife and three children; two step children, Miss Erma Poage and Robert Poage; and a younger son, Johnson to all of whom sympathy is extended.

WARNING

Please observe speed law. Limit 20 miles per hour in city. These laws will be enforced. Obey the law and abolish wrecks. Each violator will be fined.

F. H. Johnson
Mayor.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our heartfelt appreciation of the great kindness shown us by our many friends in our bereavement through the loss of our husband and father.

Mrs. O. S. Stearns and Johnson,
Miss Erma Poage
Robert Poage and wife
Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Stearns.

When the overpass north of town was under construction, we have been reliably informed that Dr. Johnson, as Mayor, wired a protest to the highway department to the effect that the culverts being installed were of insufficient capacity to carry the water and this has proven true. All the floodwater which formerly ran the other way, is now thrown into the city. A high bank was built last year, but was washed away in a short time.

Mmes. E. T. Collier and S. O. Spoles returned last Wednesday from Pasadena and Englewood, Calif., where they had been the past ten days, guests of Mr. Collier's sisters. Mr. Collier had been in California since last May under a physician's care, and Mrs. Collier and Mrs. Spoles went out to accompany him home. While there they visited many points of interest on the coast.

Messrs. Melvin Franks of Corona and Larry Gomez, Picocho attended a special meeting of the commissioners here this week.

I. O. O. F. Install Officers

D. B. G. Master H. E. Kelt, D. D. G. Marshal J. B. Dinwiddie, D. D. G. Warden Jas. Tom, D. D. G. Guardian C. Carl and acting D. D. G. Treasurer Wm. J. Langston motored to Alamogordo Monday evening, where they officiated at the installation of the officers of Alamogordo Lodge, No. 25, I. O. O. F. An enthusiastic gathering of Odd Fellows extended the visitors a royal welcome.

On Tuesday night the same deputy grand officers performed the installation service for Carrizozo Lodge No. 30.

Senator Lewis Sounds Warning

"I advise you to remember there is the selfish motive behind opposition to bills now pending in Congress," said Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois in a radio broadcast from Chicago Saturday night. "Remember you are in the period when such interests ignore the Republic's welfare. They are quite willing to forget the injury and destruction brought upon this nation by their selfishness."

"The proposed tax bill is now condemned by the very forces who tried the same theory of tax to be put on the other people of the nation and now when extended those who created the theory it becomes a criminal bill and is denounced. I ask you to look about and see how many instances of such attack on the administration have been made by those whose conduct in the past has brought the government to dishonor."

"I ask you to consider the opposition to the Stock Holding Company Bill and the violence of such opposition and see what has developed—false propaganda, forged telegrams by the tens of thousands and frank confessions under oath that the object of inflaming the mind of the ordinary investor (that 'widow and orphan' of whom you have heard much) was to defeat any obstruction that would prevent the sale to the public by false advertisements and false propaganda of stock. This form of stock has been lying in vaults representing in itself companies that have gone into bankruptcy, stock that was valueless and had been denounced as criminal. Yet now in the hands of those who were willing to sell it to the innocent and rob the unfortunate and the ignorant."

"On the other hand, stock sellers in the new companies arising are crying for the Administration bill to be passed quickly that the houses may be cleaned of rottenness and new ones act on the basis of honorable stock and honorable salesmanship."

"Note that many who howl against the new Banking Bill are those whose methods brought the country to the verge of national bankruptcy and took billions from depositors. I ask you to recall that some of these banking interests, so-called, are in debt to the institutions in which they were officers to the extent of many millions. Yet these now daringly ask the banking committees to exempt them by law from their debts and their swindles."

"When farmers asked for the privilege of bankruptcy procedure as allowed the business men of the cities, hear the howl of 'unconstitutionality' against the worthy measure for their relief. I beseech you to take notice of such interests; study their objects; catch purpose, and protect yourself and your country."

Attend Rainbow Girls' Organization

The Rainbow Girls organized in Alamogordo last Tuesday evening. Las Cruces Rainbows had charge of the ceremonies. Masons, Stars and Rainbow Girls who attended from here, as guests were Mr. C. P. Huppertz, Mmes. J. M. Shelton, F. A. English, Misses Helen Frances Huppertz, Dixie Harman, Martha Catherine Smith, Leslye Cooper, Agnes Degner, Alice Degner, Dorothy Nickels, and Wilma Snow. Alamogordo organized with eighty members. A social hour was enjoyed after the initiation. Cake and ice cream in rainbow colors were served.

Branums Discontinue Business

Carrizozo lost one of its most accommodating and enterprising business firms this week when the Branum Grocery closed out its stock at cost. Clint Branum, manager is preparing to enter other fields of endeavor. He marked the entire stock at cost, notified the people Saturday and Sunday and it is safe to say the shelves were at least half empty by 4 o'clock Monday. People hungry for bargains, and anxious to buy in quantities, bought in sums from $50 up, and loaded their trucks, cars and trailers accordingly. Everyone will miss this popular and convenient business house.

LINCOLN LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sanchez from Fort Stanton and Misses Mabel Miranda, Susie Maes and Mr. Juan Luna, attended the dance Saturday at Tularosa.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryant from Roswell, took the management of the Bonito Inn Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Catron, who had the hotel moved to Capitan.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilario Maes visited relatives at Rabenton, Sunday and Monday.

Christain Science Service

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches and Societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 4th. The Golden Text is: "The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with lovingkindness have I drawn thee." (Jer. 31:5)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And we have known and believed the love that God hath for us. God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." (1 John 4:16)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christain Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures", by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is Love. More than this we cannot ask, higher we cannot look; farther we cannot go."

Current-Allen

Mr. Geo. C. Current and Miss Susie Beatrice Allen of Corona were united in marriage at the Baptist Church last Monday afternoon by Rev. L. D. Jordan. Messrs. John Ellison and B. Current, brother of the groom were witnesses. Mr. Current is a farmer of the Corona district and the bride is an attractive girl of the Corona community.

Appreciation

I take this means of expressing my deepest gratitude to the host of friends for their many acts of kindness during the illness of my wife, and for their words of condolence and comfort, as well as for the many beautiful floral offerings on the occasion of her passing.

These kind and thoughtful acts will ever be gratefully remembered.

Sincerely,
Morgan Lovelace.

New Deal Badly Hurt by Ruling That AAA Processing Taxes Are Unconstitutional—Democratic Senators Score Schall of Minnesota.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union

TWO to one against the New Deal was the week's score in Federal court decisions. The administration suffered severely. The Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati first held unconstitutional the condemnation of land by the PWA for slum clearance. Then the Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston dealt the AAA a terrific blow by declaring unconstitutional the processing and farm taxes. The one favorable decision was by the Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and was that the sale of cheap electric power by the Tennessee Valley authority was constitutional.

Chester Davis

Harold Ickes, who is PWA administrator, said the slum clearance work would be carried on, though necessarily in modified form. But Chester Davis, AAA administrator, openly admitted that "the end of the processing taxes would mean the end of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in all its important aspects." He would not concede that he believed for a minute the Supreme court would confirm the ruling of the court at Boston. He asserted he had expected that decision to be adverse, saying: "That section around Boston is a hotbed of resistance to the processing taxes. Why, it's right up there among all those cotton manufacturers." This was most extraordinary comment from a high government official, but the Appeals court in Boston has not yet cited Davis for contempt.

Most well informed and unbiased persons have never believed the processing taxes would stand up under court test. The Guffey coal bill has some similar features, so that those who debate it should read these paragraphs in the Boston decision:

"The power of congress to regulate interstate commerce does not authorize it to do so by taxing products either of agriculture or industry before they enter interstate commerce, or otherwise to control their production merely because their production may indirectly affect interstate commerce."

"The issue is not, as the government contended, whether congress can appropriate funds for any purpose deemed by congress in furtherance of the 'general welfare,' but whether congress has any power to control or regulate matters left to the state and lay a special tax for that purpose."

Several hundred suits to enjoin collection of the processing taxes have been filed in Federal courts by processors. If they pay the taxes and the act is held unconstitutional by the Supreme court, they will not be able to recover, under a provision of the pending amendments prohibiting recovery suits against the government.

DROPPING all their rebellious indignation, the Democrats of the house did everything the administration wished in considering the social security bill as altered by the senate. The conferees had settled all differences after two weeks of hard work, but one of the amendments they accepted was that permitting private pension systems to function under the measure. The majority members of the house were informed that President Roosevelt was opposed to this, so they refused to accept it. The senate would not permit the elimination of the amendment, so back to conference went the bill.

THOMAS D. SCHALL, the blind senator from Minnesota, has been one of the sharpest tongued critics of the administration in the senate. Recently he described President Roosevelt as a "megalomaniac," and, though the word was subsequently eliminated from the record, the Democratic senators were decidedly miffed. So a little later Senators Robinson, Black and Bone found opportunity to tell Schall what they think of Senator Schall and to demand that he conform to the rules of "decorum."

The argument started when Schall had read by a clerk an editorial from a Texas editor, and an address of his own—all critical of the administration. Robinson protested. He asserted "when one whose moral obligations are so great as are those of the senator from Minnesota, it becomes necessary for some one to object." He added "Schall cannot shield himself behind an unfortunate affliction."

The Schall speech said President Roosevelt was imitating Mussolini, and that Earl Cohn, an administration aid and bill drafter, had "assumed the legislative functions usurped by the Executive."

"It is small business and only could be done by a man of small mentality," said the Arkansas senator. Replying, Schall said, "If the people knew what was behind this government they would not stand for it a minute."

SENDING floods of telegrams to senators or representatives for or against pending legislation will not be so effective in the future, as a result of the disclosures before the senate lobby investigators. They heard evidence to the effect that large numbers of telegrams against the utilities bill were sent from Warren, Pa., by an employee of the Associated Gas and Electric system, that the messages were signed with names taken from a city directory and that the originals were destroyed at Warren.

The senate committee, evidently planning a nation-wide inquiry, asked the Western Union Telegraph company to prohibit the destruction of any messages transmitted during the last year, and officials of the company promised to co-operate.

TWENTY months of apparently futile moves to revitalize the commercial relations between the United States and Russia, and then suddenly Washington announces that the two nations had concluded a one-year trade agreement under which the Soviet Republics agreed to increase their American imports by 150 per cent. In return for purchase of $30,000,000 worth of American goods Russia is to be granted wide tariff concessions by the United States.

Russia will buy railroad equipment, machinery for making new automobile models and other products of heavy industry. In addition the Soviets will buy cotton. The railroad equipment is needed badly for modernization of a weak transportation system.

In return Russia expects to sell sausage casings, certain grades of iron ore, manganese, furs and dairy products in large quantities to the United States.

The pact, concluded by the exchange of notes between Ambassador Bullitt in Moscow and Maxim Litvinov, commissar for foreign affairs, provides for no further loans to Russia and makes no mention of the more than $700,000,000 in debts contracted by former Russian governments. It is in line with Secretary Hull's policy of trade agreements. For these two reasons especially it is attacked by many Republicans and not a few Democrats in congress. Senator Pat McCarran of Nevada was one of the ungiest of these critics. He declared Secretary Hull was a "brilliant diplomatic dupe" and announced that he would demand an immediate modification of the reciprocal tariff act to rescind powers under which Hull is negotiating such treaties.

SENATOR J. HAMILTON LEVISO of Illinois, a member of the foreign relations committee, long has urged that Great Britain be persuaded to cede to the United States her island possessions in the Caribbean sea in payment of her war debt. The other day he was moved to bring the subject up again and delivered an interesting speech in the senate. This time he based his proposal upon the "peace offer" of England to cede a portion of her territory in Somaliland to Ethiopia, which in turn would cede certain territory to Italy with a view of averting the impending war between those countries.

The senator also suggested that England surrender all rights she claims to privileges of constructing a Nicaraguan canal, recalling, as a precedent, that England compelled France to yield all claims to territory adjacent to the Suez canal.

The British Islands in the West Indies, the senator said, are both useful as defense and necessary as protection for the United States. They "could be seized in time of war between nations fighting among themselves to possess the Caribbean and Southern seas. They could be used as the backyard of the United States from which supplies could be stored to be used in assault on America."

CHARLES TAUSSIG, who had served the administration for two years without official title or position, has been appointed chairman of the advisory committee of the National Youth Administration. In announcing the creation of the NYA the President allocated to it $20,000,000 of work-relief funds.

EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE appeared before the Ethiopian parliament and made an impassioned appeal to his countrymen to fight Italy to the death, declaring he had prepared himself to die in the contest if need be.

"Ethiopia knows how to fight to preserve its independence and its sovereignty," he said.

"Soldiers! Follow the example of your warrior ancestors, Soldiers! Traders! Peasants! Young and old, men and women! Unite to face the invader! Your sovereign will be among you and will not hesitate to give his blood for the independence of his country."

Though the League of Nations council was scheduled to meet for consideration of the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel between July 25 and August 2, there were indications that the European nations were about ready to abandon Ethiopia to its fate and that "The Lion of Judah" doesn't give in completely. Mussolini will be permitted to have his way with him. That probably will mean a long guerrilla warfare the details of which will not be pleasant reading.

Newspapers of northern Italy intimated that Premier Mussolini might abandon his projected war with Ethiopia if he could find a way of backing out without losing face. But the Roman public was quite sure the duke's aggressive policy would be unimpaired. This opinion was strengthened by the sending of more troops to East Africa.

Secretary of State Hull entered the picture again with a rather mild statement expressing America's abhorrence of war and confidence in the Kellogg pact. The Italians didn't like this at all.

SENATOR HUEY LONG has the political fate of his chief opponent, Mayor T. Semmes Walmaley of New Orleans, in the palm of his hand. But he is forcing the people of the city to put the mayor out. A majority of Walmaley's followers, tired of the conflict, formally deserted him when the commission council adopted a resolution endorsing recent statements of two commissioners calling for the city to make peace with Long. The mayor, or, standing almost alone, declined to yield. He told the council he "would not deal with men who have been called 'crooks and thieves' by every member of the commission council."

In a caucus preceding the council session, 13 of Walmaley's 17 ward leaders voted for his resignation "for the good of the city." The mayor told them he was "going to stick from here to breakfast."

WHEN Chinese rivers overflow they do the thing in a big way. The Han, which joins the Yangtze near Hankow, broke through the dikes and rushed through the densely populated land, drowning about 10,000 men, women and children.

UNOFFICIALLY and informally, the general opinion seems to be that the Wagner labor disputes act is unconstitutional and will be so declared by the United States Supreme court when that tribunal is called on for a decision. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, urges labor leaders to pay no attention to claims that the law is invalid.

"Leading legal authorities of the nation are of the opinion that the act is Constitutional in every respect," he wrote, but added in a letter that he expects a court test and that the American Federation of Labor will get "the best legal talent."

Even if the Wagner law is knocked out by the Supreme court, the administration believes it has a plan that will avert at least 50 per cent of the usual number of strikes, walk-outs, lock-outs and other disorders. It is being launched in Toledo, Ohio, and has been called the "Toledo plan" because it was conceived by Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady when he was trying to settle a dispute in that Ohio city.

It has no sectional characteristics; carries no federal compulsion, and rests solely upon the willingness of workers and employers in every city that adopts the plan, to abandon the harsh economic weapons of old and substitute peaceful discussion for violence.

Here again Green throws a monkey wrench into the machinery. He says the A. F. of L. will not co-operate in promoting the McGrady plan because it provides that the mediation panels would include on the labor side representatives of company unions and of independent and rival unions. Under Green's leadership the policy of the A. F. of L. evidently is all for the federation, or nothing for anyone.

WITH the approval of the house labor committee a new bill is intended to replace the NRA was brought forward in congress, but its chances of passage at this session were small. It would create a federal commissioner to license industries selling goods of commodities into interstate commerce. To obtain a federal license, an industry would be compelled to:

Work employees not more than 36 hours a week, provide wages adequate for a decent and comfortable standard of living, accept collective bargaining, outlaw dealings with parties to "yellow dog" contracts and bar workers under sixteen years of age and convict or forced labor.

Golden Phantoms FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES OWNED BY Editha L. Watson

THE HILL OF SILVER

A FEW years more than a century ago, a company of eleven men set out from San Antonio, Texas, to search for a wonderful silver mine. This mine was supposed to be near the old fort of San Luis de las Amarillas, on the San Saba river. It was known to legend as the Hill of Silver, and a vast fortune in that valuable metal awaited the man, or men, who should be lucky enough to find it.

It—or something like it—had been "found" many times before. The Indians knew about it, and rumors of its wonders had reached the Spaniards of Mexico as early as the eighteenth century. The Apaches indicated its direction; the Lipans brought silver from its veins to San Antonio; the Comanches knew its location, and the Caddos, Wacos, and Tehuacanas, who survive only by their names on maps of the south, fought off the white men who traveled near it. Don Fernando de Miranda, lieutenant general of the province of Texas, found a mine which he claimed was of vast extent, and from which he brought samples of ore, and reported that he had been told of even richer mines farther on. Early eastern adventurers established a little smelter for gold and silver; some distance away they had a mine, which they claimed had been worked by the Spaniards; all this was somewhere in the extensive territory of the Hill of Silver.

The little group of eleven men from San Antonio were not hunting blindly. Their leaders were James and Rezin Bowie, who were supposed to have seen with their own eyes the fabulous wealth of this hidden mine to which they were going. James Bowie, who was to become one of the martyred heroes of the Alamo, was said to have joined the tribe of Lipans who guarded the mine, for the express purpose of learning its location. Having succeeded, he organized this company to go back, fight off the Indians, and secure as much as they could of the rich ore.

The old fort was only 150 miles from San Antonio; both Bowies had been at the mine. Putting these facts together, one might suppose that the travelers would head straight for the source of the treasure. But for some obscure reason, they wandered about for three weeks, following James Bowie, who was "looking over the lay of the land," and finally wound up about six miles east of the fort—where they were attacked by a large band of hostile Indians. A day or so before, a friendly Comanche had warned them of the projected raid, so they were prepared to fight, but one man was killed and three were wounded, and there were no means of caring for the injured. So, as soon as they could move them, they took their casualties back to San Antonio, making the trip, though crippled and halting, in ten days.

Perhaps reasoning that if he had gone straight off to his objective the expedition would have met success, James Bowie organized another party, of thirty men this time, and started out again for the silver treasure. This time he led them to the right location, but legend disagrees as to whether he found the mine or not.

That there actually is a Hill of Silver in that region is substantiated by records in the archives of Mexico. According to these records, the mine was worked in the early days of the San Saba mission. When the local Indians uprose and killed everyone at the mine, it was considered politic to abandon the place for a while, until it should be safe to return and continue operations. But during the years after this massacre, so many things of great importance occurred to the Spaniards, and so many of those who knew the location of the mine were killed or returned to Mexico, that the Hill of Silver became actually lost.

Several years ago silver bullets were found in the bottom of San Saba springs, and this led to the search for the lost site to begin again. It is said that treasure-seekers are now hunting over an area of more than 2,500 square miles, hoping to find the wonderful silver hill.

Other lost and hidden treasures of Texas include the famous "Nigger head," in the wild country along the Rio Grande border. There is not much of a story to go on in the search for this mine, but it is said that a negro who worked for a ranch below San Antonio found the ore and brought specimens of it into camp. He disappeared shortly afterward, and ever since then the hunt has been kept, but with no results. Then there is that deep spring one hundred miles southwest of San Antonio, where "seven jackloads of silver" were thrown in early days when bandits attacked the transporting party. Not long ago drought caused the water to become much lower than ever before, and a bucket which scraped the bottom of the spring brought up a Spanish silver coin dated 1742.

After every violent storm along the coast of Texas, Spanish doubloons are found on the islands in the gulf—only a few at a time, of course, but only enough to recall legends of Juan Laritte, who is supposed to have buried his wealth on some of these islands.

Approximately 500 students will be able to obtain employment through the University of Arizona this fall to aid in defraying their college expenses. About half the number will be paid from federal funds. The university student employment committee has had applications from 1,500 prospective students for part time work.

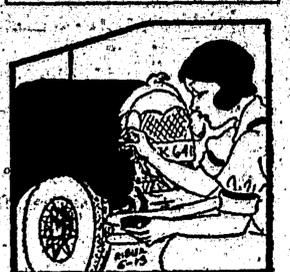

Dona Ana county's per capita cost of education during the past school year, in public elementary and high schools, 1934 to 1935, was slightly below that of the majority of the other counties in New Mexico, it was revealed in a report released by the Taxpayers Association of New Mexico. Rio Arriba county presented the lowest per capita cost of $3.53.

Application for a cannery plant for Las Vegas, N. M., has been submitted to the Works Progress administration in Santa Fe and its approval is expected, according to L. G. Griffith, local Works Progress administrator. The plans would take care of produce from San Miguel and Mora counties, including produce from the four community gardens at Las Vegas, Mora, Pecos and Villanueva, and also will do share canning for individuals from both counties.

An increase of about 50 per cent over the 1934 harvested acreage in New Mexico's important crops is noted by Fred Daniels, agricultural statistician, who says that acreage increases are noted for all crops except winter wheat. The bean industry is said to be one of the largest on record, due to the fact that heavy rains during the last month made it possible to plant near normal size crops this year for the first time. A spring wheat crop of 312,000 bushels is forecast.

Bound on a search for dinosaur tracks, believed to have been left in the Chloride Valley of Arizona during the prehistoric ages, H. J. Stocum, Charleston, S. C., has gone into that region. With his base at the town of Chloride, Stocum will make pack trips into the little known recesses of Chloride Valley where he believes traces of the prehistoric monsters will be found. He will report to the American Museum of Natural History in New York on the advisability of sending a scientist into the valley.

SYNOPSIS

The Boston Lawrence came to California at the beginning of the gold rush, but the holdings of the family have shrunk to a small farm and the old family home in Clipperville. Phil, twenty-five, has gone into the iron works, Gail to the public library and Edith to the book department of a store. Sam is in school, and seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming a problem. Phil is fascinated by "that terrorist" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. Young Van Murchison, son of a wealthy family, returns from Yale, and Gail has visions, through marriage with him, of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's friend, has the run of the house. Phil suggests to "his sister's" consternation, that they invite Lily Cass to the house. Gail goes with Van for a week-end with the Chippis, his uncle and aunt. She is received coldly. At a roadside stall she meets a "midnight" man, and finally admits she was at the place, and finally no remora. A policeman brings Ariel home, announcing that a child has been killed in an automobile smashup. Ariel was driving one of the cars. Dick Stebbins, who has been admitted to the bar, has the case against Ariel dismissed. He suddenly realizes that she loves Dick and not Van.

He had no money, he was country-bred, he was only the son of the people who rented the old Lawrence place over in Stanislaus—it did not matter. Gail, who had always felt that Clipperville limited and bound her, knew herself quite willing—ah, breathlessly willing!—to live contentedly in Clipperville forever, or out on the Stanislaus ranch forever; if Dick so decreed. What Ariel or Edith would think of this sudden altering of all her dreams was nothing; there was nothing anywhere, except Dick!

All life was a miracle now, and she walked in the glory of it like somebody lifted above the earth. All the happy old customs that she and Edith had known for years were touched with new joy and new pain. When Dick joined the family circle the air was only a little more electrified than when he did not come.

And meanwhile Van had established a more comfortable footing in the old Lawrence house than ever before, and while he and Ariel did not seem to be exactly flirting—exactly having an affair—there was a far more substantial base to their relationship than his friendship with Gail had ever known. Very quietly, in an almost bored tone, Ariel told her sisters in early November that Van was going east to get to work.

"No more college?"
"No, he wants to get into business. His father says he'll start him in the New Jersey plant."

"Then he won't come back to Clipperville?"

"Yes, he's going to be back for a week in January. That's—that's month after next!"

"He's coming back after her!" Edith said, when she and Gail were alone.

"Oh, Edie, it does look like it!"

Gail's imagination was off at full speed: Ariel married at eighteen to young Van Murchison; Edith and Phil and Sam living on here at the old house; herself and Dick . . .

But this last smothered at her breath. Herself and Dick. People in the library would glance at her: "She's engaged; she's going to marry that young lawyer, Richard Stebbins."

Dick would have cases, and she would study every detail of every case and keep up with him. And she would have babies—babies tumbling about among the flowers.

Happiness, happiness, happiness—to be married to him, to have Dick all to herself! The miracle of marriage, the amazing flaming glory of it, surrounded her with a cloud of mist by day and of fire by night.

It began to seem as if things were happening in Clipperville, after all. The sluggish current of Gail's life was stirred in many ways. It was not only that Phil got a raise, and that Van Murchison might marry Ariel. Sam was working for a scholarship, and might actually win a year at Columbia University in New York. Gail was assistant librarian now, with the name "Abigail Lawrence" printed in gold on the library windows and a salary of fifty-five dollars a month.

And then Christmas was coming. Always exciting, it seemed doubly so this year. She fairly danced to work in the mornings; and Edith would come home in the darkness of five o'clock to hear her singing over dinner preparations in the kitchen.

Dick was starting with them now, for his mother had gone to Oregon to stay with a daughter newly widowed, and there were only men on the Stanislaus ranch.

There was one cloud in the sky, to be sure. Gail and Edith acknowledged its existence bravely one December evening when they asked Dick if he thought Phil really cared for Lily Cass.

"That's a hard question to answer," Dick said, with a faint frown and a sigh.

"Do you like her, Dick?"

"Well—she's not my type. But she's an awfully sweet little thing, really."

"Is she divorced, Dick?"

"No. But there's talk of it."

"If she were, do you believe Phil really would marry her?"

"A pretty, then Dick asked slowly, "Would you give your girls, care?"

"You've answered!" Gail said, with a brief, merciless laugh.

"I suppose I have," Dick sighed again. "There—there never was anything wrong with Lily," he offered, doubtfully.

"No!" Gail agreed forcefully. "Except that she was as common as fruit flies, and ran with that terrible box-factory gang, and chewed gum in church, and talked way up in G major."

This rather finished Lily's case for the moment. But a little later Gail said apologetically, "I don't know why I got so wild about poor Lily. She certainly is having a rather tough time of it."

"I'll tell you!" Dick said eagerly. "Phil's the quiet sort. He loves Clipperville; he wouldn't change places with the President. Phil wants to stay here and develop the place, and he loves Lily—or if he loves her—" Dick frowned, turning red, and correcting himself hastily.

"We know he loves her; you needn't be so scrupulous!" Gail said with a dry little laugh. "I believe you'd stand up for Phil if he went out some night and cut somebody's throat!"

But she loved Dick for his loyalty none the less, and curried the mutton stew with one idea in her mind. "They all eat it, and he loves it curried!"

Christmas falling on a Tuesday, they all went up to the woods on the Saturday afternoon preceding it, and came back laden with evergreen, scarlet toyon berries, crisp, polished huckleberry branches, and the one great bunch of mistletoe that Dick climbed high into a dying oak to secure.

Gail, frantic to start tying bundles and mixing batters, had to spend the wet Monday in the library. She walked up to Muller's at five o'clock, not only to wait for Edith but to help her effectually while she was waiting.

Edith was in an exhausted whirl of last Christmas sales; Ariel also was there as one of her Christmas assistants, at two dollars a day.

Rain was twinkling and sparkling in the black night as the Lawrences came wearily, excitedly out and started for home. Ariel was very silent.

But Gail and Edith were gay. Christmas eve, at library and shop, was over, and nothing but fun and holiday ahead. Edith thought of the tissue paper and ribbons in her lower bureau drawer. She would begin wrapping and marking packages right after dinner; she had completely ruined herself on presents, as usual, and she felt the usual joy in her plight.

Gail thought of presents, too. She wondered if Dick would give her a present—of course he would! She would not care what it was; it would be the most valued thing she received.

"He's a darling," Ariel put her head in the door. "I've been asleep," she said, blinking.

"We looked in and saw you when we came in."

"I'm going to Miss Vall's now," said Ariel, who was hatted and coated and gloved. "I'll be back early."

"Dick will be gone when you come back!"

"I know it. I said good-by to him." Ariel looked very pretty in her dark blue coat and snug blue hat. She came in, kissed Gail, kissed Edith. "I don't want to go!" she said, with a weary sigh.

"I hate to have you," Gail said affectionately. "Think of being eighteen tomorrow, baby. Mother's poet, eighteen."

"Mother's nothing!" Ariel said bitterly.

"Gail, Edith asked, when Ariel had gone, "did she get anything from Van?"

"Not that she told me."

"It might be delayed in the mail."

"A telegram wouldn't be."

"I know."

There was a silence in the big, shabby, pretentiously furnished room. Gail roused herself, stiff and drowsily. "I told Dick I'd start packing his bag for the trip," she said, with an exultant rise at her heart.

"Well, Edith! The next time you have a bright idea you might take Dick and me into your counsel!"

"Don't worry—about anything that comes up, Gail," Dick was saying rather confused and breathless himself, very big, very much the man. "I'll be back in a few days. Everything will come out all right!"

He was gone. They heard the engine start in the yard, and laughed at each other as they wandered down to the kitchen.

Edith and Sam had tea and cold turkey, after all. But Gail, although she sat with them at the table, was feeding off finer food, and could not touch their tangible viands. Her mouth, her whole being, still pined to Dick's grave, hard, definite kiss. How he had kissed her!

Dick needed socks and ties and belts and gloves—if he went to Los Angeles next week he would need gloves—but she had dared give him none of these. Books. She had two books for him. In one, with a fast-beating heart, she had written, "Dick, with love from A. L." Love. Love from Abigail Lawrence for Dick Stebbins!

"Perhaps we'll be married by next Christmas!" thought Gail, running, racing, hurrying home in the black, rainy darkness of Christmas eve.

It seemed to her the most wonderful Christmas they had ever had. From the hour on Christmas eve when she, Ariel, and Edith got home wet, cold, and tired to the warm kitchen and to planning and laughter and tea, toast, and jam and wrapping gifts and surprises, until the two o'clock dinner on Christmas day, was safely served, there was not a flaw.

They got all their presents, ready and at eleven o'clock set the table for breakfast, then walked under warm shining stars to church at midnight. Every one stumbled back utterly exhausted, to go to bed heavily and blindly, fingers sore from strings and thimbles, backs and feet aching, hands scented with pine resin, hearts filled with happiness.

And then it was Christmas morning, and every one was thanking every one else and Gail was honestly amazed at all the things they got—and such beautiful things. Tables were loaded with boxes and bundles. Everybody got everything; there was no end to the gifts, nor to the tissue paper and ribbons that rained on the floor for somebody always to gather up and heap on the fire.

Breakfast, leisurely and late, was wonderful, and by eleven o'clock the accents of the early afternoon meal were in the spicy, warm Christmas-scented air. Dick was leaving for Los Angeles at seven. Ariel had promised Miss Lizzy Vall, with whom she had been studying dramatic expression, to have supper with Lizzy and her mother.

"But come home early, darling, for tomorrow's your birthday, and we have to celebrate all over again!"

Thus Gail, as she flew about the kitchen in the full glory of dinner-getting.

"Oh, I will, Gail," Ariel was very docile. She seemed to her sisters to be at her sweetest today. Van had sent her no present that they knew of. But Christmas malls were always late, Phil and Dick walked down to the post office at noon, returning laden with cards and small packages. But if Van had sent either to her, Ariel gave no sign.

At two they sat down, ravenous, to the feast. Everything was perfection. Long after three o'clock the sextette lingered at the table, nibbling raisins and nuts, trying the German honey cakes that had come as a greeting that morning, sampling the Christmas candy.

And when finally there was a still, it was only after an unanimous decision to abandon all plans for supper. Phil went off to some point unknown—probably to see Lily—Sam helped clear and cut somebody's throat!

But she loved Dick for his loyalty none the less, and curried the mutton stew with one idea in her mind. "They all eat it, and he loves it curried!"

Fight on Apple Worms Making Slow Progress

Research experts of the Department of Agriculture are seeking elimination of the worms of the codling moth which destroy large quantities of apples and pears. One effective method has been the use of the poisonous spray, lead arsenate being employed. This method, however, has a drawback in the occasional disclosure of quantities of poison still remaining on the skins at marketing time.

One angle of the new attack is along the line of development of new spraying materials which would be death-dealing to the moth, but harmless to man. Another plan is proper practices within the orchards to curtail the changes of development of the moth, and, thirdly, all other methods failing, new means of removing the spray residue before marketing will be sought.

In the search for substitute sprays, nicotine has proved the most promising. Before this alkaloid can be used in a practical way, however, it will be necessary to develop means to make it stick better to fruit and foliage in spite of rains, and also to prevent its rapid evaporation. In this direction some progress has been made with nicotine combinations, such as with bentonite, with tannic acid, and with mineral oil. None of the combinations developed thus far, however, are sufficiently effective, cheap and satisfactory to replace lead arsenate.

"But please leave the silver and glasses for me to wash—please," Ariel pleaded.

"Oh, nonsense!" Gail said. She and Edith made short work of the clearing up.

The short day ended with them both stretched luxuriously on Gail's bed, reading at intervals, talking desultorily, waiting for night to bring the other members of the family home.

"How long will Dick be in Los Angeles, Gail?"

"Only about two weeks. It's a ship case. A great chance for him."

"I think he's such a dear. I've grown awfully fond of him this fall," said Edith.

"He's a darling," Ariel put her head in the door. "I've been asleep," she said, blinking.

THE NEW FIRESTONE GROUND GRIP TIRE WILL ENABLE YOU TO USE YOUR CAR, TRUCK AND TRACTOR IN ALL KINDS OF WEATHER

The body of this tire is built with patented Gum-Dipped Cords, giving it extra strength and greater flexing ability without creating heat, the greatest enemy of tire life.

The extra-heavy super traction tread on this tire is scientifically designed to prevent the bumpiness on smooth roads that is so objectionable in other tires designed for traction in soft ground. This heavy self-cleaning tread, required to withstand unusual pulling traction and strains, is securely locked to the cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra Gum-Dipped cord layers under the tread.

Many Longer Sessions of Congress

"This session of Congress hasn't been so hard," said Speaker Joseph W. Byrns to the press on his 66th birthday July 20. "It has lasted 198 days but 47 previous sessions have lasted much longer than that. I well remember that in 1918 we also had important legislation to enact which vitally affected the welfare of the nation. That session lasted 354 days."

The speaker evidently was thinking of the attempt now being made by critics of the Roosevelt Administration to make it appear that the President is "holding Congress in session" against the wishes of its members and the country. He said he found no such sentiment and he added: "Since I became a member of the House in 1909, I have never served with a Congress any better than the present one."

Dictatorship or Democracy?

"Let us examine the specific charge of dictatorship. Could the farm program be put into effect without the willing cooperation of the farmers themselves?"

"Were not the industrial standards devised by business men themselves--which they declare they are retaining--for their own mutual protection against the unfair competitor?"

"To make manifest and to effectuate the will of the people themselves is NOT dictatorship. It is the essence of Democracy. It is the keystone of the New Deal."

Wisdom Teeth

The third molars, or wisdom teeth, are particularly liable to cause serious illness and even death because of the frequency with which we have trouble in "cutting" them. The complications most often arise between the ages of twenty and thirty but may occur at any time after adolescence even into advanced old age. Men and women suffer equally but in both sexes the trouble is more often in the lower than in the upper jaw. The most common mishap is that only the front half of the wisdom tooth comes through and the gum forms a hood over the back half of the crown. Infection creeps under this hood and dangerous germs thrive in this little cavern. Attempts to remove a wisdom tooth while the gum around it is infected may result in a fatal spread of the infection.

Extraction of wisdom teeth is, however, an easy matter if taken in time. Abnormalities in the development of the third molars can be recognized by X-ray examination by the age of eleven years; that is to say several years before they are likely to cause any trouble. The time will probably come when careful parents seek a dental X-ray of their children at this age to be sure that all is well and in order to forestall dangerous maldevelopment. The dental surgeon who recognizes abnormality at the age of eleven will continue to make X-ray observations of the tooth until its growth reaches a stage when preventive surgery can be undertaken with safety and a minimum of inconvenience to the patient.

World Wool Clip

New York, July 20.— Production of wool during 1934 in 24 countries, which produce over four fifths of the world production was below output in 1931 and 1932, but was not greatly different from 1933, according to the National Association of Wool Manufacturers.

The recent downward revision in the estimate of the Union of South Africa clip reduces the total for 24 countries to 2,520,000,000 pounds, or 1 per cent below 1933. There was further reduction in production in the U. S. S. R. in 1934 to 105,000,000 pounds, or 4 per cent below 1933, according to official estimates recently released. The latest estimate of the Department of Agriculture places the 1934 production of clean wool in the country at 838,000,000 pounds. For raw wool, the department prepared an estimate based on reports of the shippers, which placed the 1934 production at 40,140,000 pounds. Since the wool is generally washed the factor 1.1 is used to translate the figure into equivalent clean wool.

Japan Strike Next?

power of the result has been growth of civilization of its people and came to a full awakening with the realization of those people that they had "gotten away with" the complete subjugation of Manchuria; the ever-increasing pressure of a spiraling population to make room for its existence by enlarging its boundaries, and the self-discovery of a people's greed for making all manner of commodities for which there is a demand at a cost low enough to get the business.

Japan has conquered Manchuria and Korea. She has an eye, it is generally believed, upon the islands of the South Pacific. And she has already established a critical protectorate over North China. How far she will go and how soon, are the answers to a question which all the rest of the world would give a good deal to know.

If the Japanese have gained control over the "beastly China" they have certainly also bewildered him. For while the Japanese ministry of foreign affairs shakes his head with an attitude of paternal benevolence, the Japanese army makes up behind him and kicks him in the pants.

Foreign Minister Hirota scolded the Chinese leader, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek; army leaders immediately dub him a fake and a fraud. Hirota bores China by making an embassy of the Japanese legation in China; the army immediately orders it all news to them. While Japan on one hand proclaims cooperation and the common good, Japan on the other hand goes right ahead with methods of cut and cut.

As an excuse for direct action, the Japanese army cited Manchuria, supposed to have been encouraged by the Chinese, and the assassination of two Chinese officers who had been friendly toward the Japanese policy. The army of Gen. Yu Hsiang-shan has withdrawn south of the Yellow River and the Japanese army has moved in.

Whatever agreement finally emerges in the North China area, it is certain that it will be "spiced" by Japanese policy and expediency. It is doubtful, however, if any kind of political union with Manchuria will emerge, for the two areas combined in one would be a package highly unlikely to carry; the Japanese believe that it will be easier to administer them separately.

Under the provisions of the League of Nations treaty of two years ago, China north of the Yellow River has been declared a demilitarized zone, but it seems the only demilitarization has been carried out by the Chinese in moving to the south and west. The Japanese army is still there and is completely occupying the province of Chahar, which is rich in iron ore. This, with the other three North China provinces, Hopei, Shantung and Szechwan, will serve to form a new territorial unit, completely divorced from the Chinese national government and distinctly favorable in its relations with Japan and Manchuria.

Chinese coal and iron, and the opportunity for cotton spinning, particularly in Hopei and Shantung, have been the incentive for most of the Japanese action; however, it is pointed out that the loss of trade in other parts of China as a result may offset these advantages. This becomes doubly important when it is considered that Great Britain, America and other powers may extend financial aid to China.

Where Japan's imperialism and expansion will carry it next is open for conjecture. Japan is, of course, an "island empire," and to its south, in the Pacific are many islands in which it has enormous commercial interests.

But platonic. Certainly, although defending the Philippines from Japanese attack would be a man's best job for America, the Japanese would venture no aggression there so long as the islands are under the wing of American protection.

Not in 1915, according to the present agreement, the Philippines will get their complete political independence. With American domination will go the privilege of free trade with the United States; in fact during the next 30 years the tariff on Philippine goods coming into the United States will be annually increased. If the economic burden becomes too great for the Philippines—and there are plenty of those who say it will—the islands may be forced to enter some sort of union that would give them trade advantages with another large power. That would be Japan.

Consider Russia. It must be remembered that there is another great power which has been doing to say about a re-portioning of territory in East Asia. That power is Soviet Russia, which has 20,000,000 fighting men and a far superior air force, north of Manchuria and across the Amur river. The competing aims of these two powers was not so serious when Manchuria existed between them to absorb all the stocks. Now their borders have moved right up against one another. Already border skirmishes, ably provoked by Japanese guns, have caused vigorous protests from the Soviet ambassador in Tokyo.

That the status quo is likely to be maintained for some time between these two nations is due not to a mutual sympathy of interests so much as to the unwillingness of both nations to take any action that would jeopardize the status quo. The status quo is so generally satisfied that such a war might result in economic, if not physical, annihilation of both.

The Russian army is far better equipped than the Japanese, its airplanes are modern and double the Japanese strength, and the land of Japan itself is a perfect setup for aerial destruction.

To meet this, Japan will be moving from interior lines, and administration of a Japanese army campaign would be possible on a much more accelerated basis, for Siberia is on the outside of a great, curving, northern pocket of Manchuria. While Japanese reinforcements could be moved in with comparative ease, because of the proximity of the Manchurian border, it would take a much longer time for the Red army to move reinforcements from Siberia proper into eastern Siberia. These reinforcements would have to come over one line railroad which is notoriously inefficient and early susceptible to crippling by an enemy force.

While Russia would like to reach an agreement of non-aggression with the Japanese, Japan has so far avoided it. The possibility of having to defend itself from Russia is always a good excuse for keeping the military budget high. Japan is also a trifle wary over making it easier for communistic propaganda to slip into Manchuria, North China and even Japan itself.

The Test May Come. Soviet-Japanese relations may come a little more nearly to a head next year when new contracts will be discussed to permit Japanese fishing off the Siberian and Kamchatka coasts. Only 10 per cent of the fish taken from these waters bit on communistic hooks in 1927 now half of them do. Perhaps the red bait is more enticing. At any rate Japan now wants to pay its rental of Siberia in gold instead of gold rubles and wants to increase the rental on the number of fish actually caught, instead of on the "standard catch" as it is now. Maybe the answer will depend upon who controls the fish. By renouncing peacefully to the trailer of its ownership rights in the Chinese Eastern railway, Russia indicated that it was willing to let Japan have something of a free hand in Manchuria. The area, which is three times as large as Japan itself, is now administered—very ably, too—by the Japanese army of occupation.

The Japanese policy in Manchuria has been constructive. Railroads have been increased in mileage more than one-third in three years. There have all been built where they will make it easier to divert to Japan much of the traffic in goods which has passed through Siberian cities, particularly Vladivostok, which now must depend almost entirely upon inland Siberia for its trade. New railroads planned for construction will make even the far reaches of Manchuria readily accessible to Japanese commerce. Japan also built 4,500 miles of roads in Manchuria in 1933 and 1934, and schedules call for 2,500 miles annually in the years to come.

Last year Manchuria became Japan's biggest export market, taking 35 per cent of the exported goods. The value of these exports grew from more than 35,000,000 yen in 1931 to more than 40,000,000 yen in 1934. This has benefited Japan with a serious economic problem, however, for if exports of goods to Manchuria have grown, so have exports of capital. Japan's capital investments there were 90,000,000 yen in 1933, 170,000,000 yen in 1932, and 237,000,000 yen in 1934. The cost of military occupation in Manchuria is about 150,000,000 yen annually. A balance of trade will have to be effected if Japanese investments are to be secure.

It is not merely Manchuria's 4,500,000,000 tons of coal reserves, and the area's iron which Japan wants. She is basically desirous of maintaining more peaceful and civilized conditions in Manchuria, where the preceding rule was corrupt and oppressive. While she has definitely improved the country, she is not so popular with the native population, probably because of her desire to acquire more high posts in the administration and to business than is seemingly necessary.

Naturally, America has been charged by the Japanese abrogation of naval treaties and insistence on naval parity, and has been offended by the Japanese policy of forcing out foreign oil companies in Manchuria. We, along with Great Britain and other nations, have been provoked at her interference in China and violation of the self-determination of that country. But America has only about $200,000,000 invested in China. Great Britain has six times as much, Japan a little less than Great Britain.

Our export sales to China in 1933 amounted to nearly $200,000,000 or approximately 3 per cent of our total exports. We exported $140,000,000 worth of goods to Japan in the same year. If we were to go to war with Japan the value of our Chinese export business would vanish to no time. The expense would paralyze Japan economically and destroy our best customer in Asia.

The Japanese people are probably much more excited over our recent naval maneuvers in the Pacific than we are over their policy in Asia. Inflamed by a press which speaks only with the voice of Tokyo, they feel that we plan to carry out our Far Eastern policy with an armed force, and that the fact that we demand a stronger navy than Japan's is evidence that we want to be equipped to carry on an offensive in the Pacific and have no intention of foregoing world peace by isolation of Great Britain.

Japan, with her withdrawal from the League of Nations and her abrogation of a disarmament treaty, has openly showed her disgust and disinterestedness in European affairs, and her intention to devote her activities entirely to Asia. But she cannot forget Europe entirely, because of the interests of European nations, particularly Great Britain, in her vicinity.

More than anything else Japan fears an Anglo-American agreement which would form a potential union of the two greatest navies in the world. The great puzzle is whether such action would avert or bring on a serious crisis.

Trouble which is brewing in Europe may come to a head, and if it does, this will command most of the attention of European powers. Japan will then pursue her aggressive Asiatic policy more intensely, as she did during and immediately following the war.

Why Permit Men Monopoly of Fun?

"In this corner (we are describing a boxing bout) is Myron Emory, weight 132 pounds. And in this corner Charlie Young, weight 114. The boys are known as the Cuban Flash and the New Hampshire Wildcat. They will now fight four rounds for the welterweight championship of the world."

The reporter, in a popular magazine, goes on to describe the fight; how the boxers, lean, tanned, eager, advanced to the center of the ring; how the crowd applauded wildly; how they battled, now boxing cleverly, now straight hard, the crowd shrieking encouragement. Twice one of the fighters was knocked to the canvas, but twice he arose and earned himself the decision of a draw.

And now, says a woman writer, whose widely read articles are not usually devoted to prize-fighting activities, the point of this boxing report in this space. It was really a very strange contest. For the fighters, Emory and Young, were seventy-nine and seventy-eight years old! The referee was a hundred and three.

The bout took place in St. Petersburg, Fla., a popular haven for old people. It was managed by the Three Quarter Century club, all of whose members are over seventy-five, all active in some sport.

And no old-time athletes are these men. Just elderly people who when they retired to that city in the sun found all sorts of diversions—for young people. They realized that if they were to have any fun there they would have to organize activities for themselves. So they founded the Three Quarter Century club—"not to turn back the years, but to utilize fully the years they have left." It appears they are adding to them.

But—the Three Quarter Century are all men. My thought is, what about the women? They don't have to box or join the baseball team, but there are goodly activities in that city of the sun that would give them no less fun. Have they been so preoccupied all these years before that they can't learn now how to take fun like their men? That's an idea for the generation to follow them. Let this July 4th be remembered as an Independence day for a Woman's Three Quarter Century club!

Mike—But why on your leg instead of your arm?
Pat—Well, she was the step-mother.

Had That Effect

"Was a kid, my son," replied the father. "But I surely was covered with goose-feathers."

Chevrolet Trucks Sales Record

Detroit, July 29th.—An all-time record for June truck sales was set this year by Chevrolet Motor Company with a total of 18,880, it was announced here today by company officials. The June total represents a gain of 2793 sales over the preceding month, and an increase of 22 per cent over June of last year. The previous record for June had stood ever since 1929.

"Sales are holding up this year at a high level, month after month," said W. E. Fish, manager of the truck division of Chevrolet, "instead of diminishing after reaching their peak in the spring. Sales in June were only 200 less than this year's peak month, April—which was the best April in six years. The current summer is in fact running at a relatively higher level than that of 1929, which was the big year of the industry."

"It is clear that industrial and business concerns feel assured that there will be goods to haul this fall, and are increasing their equipment in expectation of continued business activity."

World's Biggest Nose Is That of the Sperm Whale

The huge cavities in the skull of the sperm whale, which seem like tanks for storing the valuable spermaceti oil of commerce, have been recognized as the creature's nostrils, says the Montreal Herald. This huge nose is six times as big as the whale's brain-case, and a whale with a head 12 feet long and 6 feet high will have a nose 10 feet long and 5 feet high; and a big whale may have as much as 600 gallons of oil in its nose! Through the bones, fat, oil, and connective tissue of this vast organ run the nasal passages, the right and larger one capable enough to admit a man. This can be expanded, and has a much smaller aperture leading into the windpipe funnel than the left passage, and it has been ascertained that these passages to the throat can be closed by two enormous plugs, which function exactly like the stopper in a bath or washbasin. This unique control of its breathing apparatus enables the whale to "hold its breath" when it dives to a depth of a mile, and also prevents the tremendous pressure at that depth from forcing the air out of the whale's lungs.

Word Origins

Most people are familiar with what is termed a "salary." But do you know whence came that word, or its significance? It comes from the Latin word, "sal," meaning salt. Back in the days of ancient Rome, Emperor Augustus gave his soldiers a certain amount of money with which to buy salt. After a time, probably through long usage, the term became "salary" in English. The northern peak of the citadel of ancient Rome was occupied by the Temple of Juno Moneta, which means "the warnor." It was here in 283 B. C. that the senate set up a mint, and by association with the temple the word Moneta has survived in such words as "money," "monetary," etc.—Washington Star.

The Government program for home building has stimulated operations all over the country. New private building enterprises are said to be humming. The new small-sized homes cost only about half as much as older houses. Flat roofs become natural sun porches; and sound-proofing is one of the easy contrivances of new building materials. The new homes are built to expand so that they may provide for larger families, and more comforts.
