"Saving the Constitution?"

Somewhat earlier than during the last Presidential campaign, the chairman of the Republican National Committee is being afforded relief from arduous endeavors. The situation gives promise of the public a measure of relief.

The irrepressible Mr. Lucas, who, having attained one of the closest political adjectives of President Hoover while serving as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, was promoted to the post of executive director of the Republican National Committee. He relieved the burden of a one-sided political contest and relieved Senator Simon B. Lee, the venerable chairman, of practically all responsibility and worry.

And now Mr. Lucas is again in action. He was around at the grass root gatherings, those held and some that were called off. He sat in at divers caucuses last Spring when the regional conference plan of arousing interest in the rank and file of the party was discussed and approved. And it is evident that these affairs were hopeless unless manhandled as at Springfield, Illinois. They promoted the spirit of democracy and also open resentment at the mere presence of Charles D. Hilles, James E. Watson and such other overlords of the Old Guard. Worse still, the chief accomplishments of these open meetings was to accentuate to the country at large the very apparent success of President Roosevelt's agricultural adjustment program and above all its increasing popularity right in the midst of the grass roots.

So another method of sounding out sentiment and arousing ambitions was suggested as the result of several sessions out at Palo Alto. Col. Frank Knox, the Chicago publisher; James M. Beck and other eminent corporation constitutionalists; Governor Nice of Maryland, a quorum of the former Hoover cabinet, et cetera, was there. Sentiment was sounded as to the Mountain States regional conference to be held 23 and 24 in Yellowstone, National Park. Several of the guests had been flying around the Northwest and none could report anything conducive to Old Guard comfort.

Thereupon, after listening to Chairman Fletcher's mildly boisterous radio speech which the press had been informed was his "opening blast" of next year's campaign, Mr. Lucas no longer restrained himself. He, too, got in touch with the press and announced that while there would be a continuance of the grass roots formula, it would be by mail. Thus he handed to the Washington correspondents copies of a letter he sent to "3,000 Republican county chairmen, 4,000 city leaders and 800 young Republicans," which led off with the assertion that "The campaign to save the country from the Reds should be going full blast right now." He referred he said to the Roosevelt administration, adding:

"There has been an utter lack of courageous opposition by patriotic Americans to the activities of the Socialists and the Communists in our governmental affairs. I therefore want your assistance and advice."

To arouse extraordinary interest in his renewal of Mr. Hoover's recent "Call to Arms," Mr. Lucas gave "assurance" that he was "acting as a liberal, seeking to wrest control of the party from Wall Street and return it to the rank and file."

Then this startling statement: "Today Charles D. Hilles, Republican boss of New York, top man on J. P. Morgan & Company's selected list and director of Morgan corporations, is the dominating influence on the Republican National Committee. It is most desirable that the Republicans nominate a candidate and write a platform that will avoid the appearance of domination by big business, Wall Street and the utilities."

It will be observed that the writer was "acting as" a liberal and that he regarded it as "most desirable" that both candidate and platform should avoid the "appearance" of domination by the special interests.

Having indulged in this bit of banter about Mr. Hilles, Mr. Lucas injected the "contest complex" considered indispensable in tooth paste and shaving cream advertising campaigns. He invited attention to three letters he enclosed, each providing first and second choices for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination from a list also enclosed.

The list containing the name of Mr. Hoover, but alphabetically it leads off with the name of James M. Beck. Then follow Senator Borah, Charles Curtis, Senator L. J. Dickinson, the 1934 keynoter, Congressman Hamilton Fish, Senator Daniel O. Hastings and Mr. Hoover, Ogden L. Mills, Patrick J. Hurley, James E. Watson, Arthur M. Hyde, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., et cetera.

Mr. Lucas letter concludes in this manner:

"If members of the party get behind their real leader, there will be a rebirth of Republicanism within 40 days. It will go forward electrified, militant, patriotic, under the banner of Americanism and with the battle cry, 'Save the Constitution' sweeping all before it."

The intrepid Mr. Fletcher, the irrepressible Mr. Lucas, the inevitable Mr. Hoover.

Bank Changes Hands

September first the First National Bank of Carrizozo will become a branch of the Citizens State Bank of Vaughn under the name of "The Lincoln County Agency" of the Citizens State Bank of Vaughn. Officers of the new agency are Mr. B. F. Straughan, president; Mr. John W. Wood, vice-president and Mr. A. E. Huntsinger, cashier.

Mr. Huntsinger will be in charge of the Lincoln County Agency and comes to us very highly recommended as a reliable banker, and as an enterprising, forward-looking business man, who will readily fit into our city affairs and become rapidly allied with our various public organizations.

And while on this subject we may state that he is a native place of a fine, public spirited citizen, one who has done many things for Carrizozo, and will be sadly missed in many, many ways. Mr. Brickley, even in these remaining few days that are crowded with last minute duties is trying to wipe out the park deficit. He has been a great factor in building up and carrying forward the work of the church, his lodge and every good work. In their new home, we trust that each hour, as it comes will be freighted with gladness.

For the very fresh heat fruits and vegetables go to Ziegler Bros.

Fort Stanton, Cedarvale, Honda, White Oaks and the Cobras will start their baseball tournament here today.

Dr. W. H. Broadbuss of Santa Fe filled his usual appointment at Dr. Shaver's office August 9th.

Our prices on Summer Coats, are so low, that you cannot afford to do without a Wrap, that will be useful for the next two or three months yet. Ziegler Bros.

Eastern N. M. Junior College

The Eastern New Mexico Junior College has made application to Tom Popejoy, recently appointed assistant administrator for the National Youth Administration in New Mexico, for aid for 400 students whose applications are on file at the office of President Donald MacKay.

Two building projects utilizing 100 students are contemplated if sufficient money can be obtained from the National Youth Administration to finance them.

A survey of Clovis, Portales, and Elida business, professional, industrial and agricultural interests is being completed to show the cooperation in the program for apprenticeship for the students attending college.

Dr. J. W. Thurman and Mr. H. O. Warren of Ruston, La., visited Mrs. J. S. Cook Thursday and Friday of last. Mr. Warren is Mrs. Cook's cousin.

Grazing District Meet

The town is full of ranchmen today, to attend the meeting which is being held to hear appeals for grazing licenses. At a meeting held early in the month, temporary grazing permits were issued on the basis of livestock owned by applicants.

Republicans Elect Chairman

At the Republican convention held in Capitan last Friday, Mrs. J. B. French resigned as chairman and Mr. Will Gallecher was elected to succeed Mrs. French.

Mr. P. G. Peters of Capitan was a White Oaks visitor Wednesday and stopped over at Carrizozo on his way. Mr. Peters is operating the Capitan Re-Sale Store and has many things in stock. His ad appears in this week's News.

Mrs. Chrl. Braum, who has been in an El Paso hospital since July 24th came home last Monday evening and is convalescing at the home of Mrs. Nettie Braum from injuries she received in an automobile accident July 23rd. She is to be congratulated upon her rapid recovery.

The City Park Benefit dance given by the Carrizozo Country Club last Friday evening was successful in realizing $14.40 for the park treasury.

Preacher Dobbs who lives in the Hoedo place near the Ma-Pais killed a panther near his home last week.

Littleton-Cornett

Last Saturday Aug. 10th at 5 p. m. Raymond Littleton and Miss Clara Belle Cornett were united in marriage in the Baptist church by Rev. I. D. Jordan. Witnesses were Mrs. Alec Chapman and Fredly Current. Both the bride and groom were born and reared in Carrizozo and attended the local schools. Mr. Littleton is the son of Mrs. Mattie Littleton and is a ranchman.

Mrs. Littleton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Chapman, and is a pretty and attractive girl. Their friends join in wishing them happiness and success.

Cobras Lose to Alamo.

The Cobras motored to Alamo last Sunday and played their scheduled game with the Alamo-gordo Trojans. The Cobras had the Trojans trailing 7 to 5 in the first of the 9th but Alamo pulled out of what seemed a certain defeat when they piled 3 scores on their last chance making the final result 8-7 in their favor.

Two Prisoners Escape From Jail

Early Wednesday morning two men escaped from the Lincoln county jail. One of their pals on the outside saw the bars for them. County officers have picked up the trail and believe they will be caught in a short time. One of the men was Cruz Perez age 29 accused of horse stealing. The other was Arthur Hansen, 29, accused of theft of high tension wires.

Local News

We are glad to report that Miss Charlotte Rice, who has been ill for several months is now very much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler and Mrs. Mary Wilson, from Carrizozo visited the Pettibone and Rices Sunday.

Mrs. S. G. Grants, who for some time has been making this place her home, moved to Capitan Sunday.

Mr. Frank Salazar and Macario Vigil made a brief visit to Santa Fe Saturday to bring Mr. Salazar's daughters Celina and Rafaelita. Rafaelita, after attending the Normal University at Las Vegas, stayed with her sister, Celina, who is employed with the Federal Housing administration at Santa Fe.

Dolores Salas and wife left last week for Colorado for an indefinite period.

Ramon Luna, and Ballemar Carabajal were Carrizozo visitors on Monday, the boys went over to register for work. We hope they may be able to land something soon.

The Lincoln Billy the Kids, beat Capitan at Capitan Sunday, behind the steady pitching of Sito Luna, the score was 14 to 3. Peralta pitched a fine game, but Lincoln took advantage of many errors made by Peralta's teammates. In the night caps the Lincoln Tigers played the Capitan Wildcats. It was nobody's game, it went only three innings, altho' Capitan was leading 3 to 2. The first game was called off at the first half of the 8 inning because it was getting too hot. Everyone had a good time, just the same.

Mr. Bryant, mgr of the Bonito Inn was in Roswell this week on business.

Mrs. Leopoldo Pacheco and daughters and son George Suenos, from Arabela, were in town Sunday. While here they attended church service at the Catholic church.

Statesmen in Geneva Struggle to Prevent Italo-Ethiopian War — Progress of the New Deal Measures in Congress.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN, British minister for League of Nations Affairs, was exceedingly busy in Geneva trying to find a way to avert the war between Italy and Ethiopia.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, often mentioned as a Presidential possibility, also demanded postponement of the tax legislation until January.

Another time limit was set for September 1, when the three powers and Ethiopia would be required to report their proposals to the League Council.

Germany's diplomatic note concerning the Communist attack on the liner Bremen in the port of New York took the form of a request that the offenders be punished but asked for no apology.

SENATOR GLASS scored perhaps the greatest victory in his long public career when the Senate without a record vote, passed his draft of the 1933 banking act.

DEMOCRATIC congressmen started the week briskly determined to push through the President's "lock the rich" tax bill at this session.

FROM the Communist Internationale in Moscow comes the word that the Reds are planning a strike of unprecedented scope.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, often mentioned as a Presidential possibility, also demanded postponement of the tax legislation until January.

The pending tax bill, as it is being developed, said Senator Vandenberg, will not produce appreciable revenue for Uncle Sam.

POULTRY

CORN IDEAL FEED AS FAT PRODUCER

Quality Poultry Important, Expert Points Out.

By H. H. Alp, Poultry Husbandry Extension Specialist, University of Illinois, WNU Service.

While farmers may not be in a position to compete with the commercial egg-producing areas, a plentiful supply of corn offers them the opportunity of becoming leaders in the production of market poultry.

Corn, the major grain crop of the state, has been found to be the ideal feed for producing high quality poultry. The fat produced by corn is distributed through the meat in a way similar to "marbling" in beef.

In addition to the needed corn, recent good prices offer further incentive to farmers to excel in the production of quality market poultry.

With good prices being paid for quality birds and the all-important feed available in the state's corn crop, the future looks bright for the poultryman who feeds for the poultry market.

Too often all the emphasis in poultry husbandry is placed upon egg production, with little attention being given to the production of quality meat and its sale in an appetizing manner.

When the goslings are ready for feeding it is a good practice to place a green sod near the nest or brooder and let the young birds pull the sodder about themselves.

For the first few days goslings should be fed on bread crumbs moistened with milk. When the young birds are about a week old they may be given a mash composed of equal parts by weight of corn meal, barley meal, bran and shorts.

Give the goslings a good start and they may then be turned out on good pasture and the feeding of mash discontinued. Make sure that the goslings have plenty of shade and a liberal supply of fresh drinking water before them at all times.

Bloody Droppings

It is said that a dog's nose is his thermometer. If you want to test his health, put your hand against the tip of his nose which is always cold if he is well and warm if he is sick.

Care in Vaccination

An important point to remember in vaccinating against bronchitis is to examine the birds on the fifth day to make certain that each shows a "take" or inflammation of the cloaca.

Poultry Notes

After being cooled, eggs should be held at 60 degrees.

If birds are properly sorted, even the cull birds may bring a surprisingly good price.

Chickens cannot do their best when mites and lice are taking their toll.

The best way to condition birds for market is to keep them in good flesh at all times.

Chicks put into a house that is thoroughly clean and then kept away from older birds seldom are troubled with lice.

The poultry brooder house should be cleaned before it is moved to new ground.

The best home-grown bedding for poultry consists of wheat, oat, and barley straw. Second comes dry, clean, shredded corn stalks; and third, very clean, coarse ground corn cobs.

Rash on Baby Caused Constant Irritation

Relieved by Cuticura

About three months after my baby was born, eczema broke out all over her body. It came out in a rash and was very red. It caused constant irritation and loss of sleep so that I had to put gloves on her hands to prevent scratching. I could not bathe her. For nearly two years this eruption lasted. Then I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and sent for a free sample. I bought more, and after using two boxes of Ointment with the Soap she was relieved completely of the itching. KILL ALL FLIES

DAISY FLY KILLER

The Lucky Lawrences

By Kathleen Norris

Copyright by Kathleen Norris WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

The Boston Lawrences came to California at the beginning of the gold rush, but the holdings of the family have shrunk to a small farm, and the old family home in Clippersville, Phil, twenty-five, is working in the iron works. Gail in the public library and Edith in the book department of a store. Sam is in school, and seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming a problem. Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. Young Van Murchison, son of a wealthy family, is working from Yale, and Gail has visions, through marriage with him, of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's friend, has the run of the house. Gail goes with Van for a week-end with the Chipps, his uncle and aunt. She is received coldly. At a roadhouse Gail sees Ariel, at midnight. Next day Ariel admits she was at the place, and displays no remorse. A policeman brings Ariel home, announcing that a child has been killed in an automobile smashup. Ariel was driving one of the cars. Dick Stebbins, who has been admitted to the bar, has the case against Ariel dismissed. Gail suddenly realizes that she loves Dick and not Van. Stebbins and Ariel exchange glances to a note left by the clerk.

"Oh, no use at all."
"He told me that the cheapest place he could move to, with the three children—and I dare say another coming—"
"Oh, Gail, no!"
"Well, I wouldn't be one bit surprised. He told me that the only decent places he could find were sixty and seventy-five, and that he simply couldn't pay it. They ran up a bill of more than two hundred at Muller's, you know, when Lily's clothes were all burned up."
"I know. Invaluable stockings and fourteen-dollar hats!" Edith said in the pause.
"And now that Joe Cass is dead and Lily getting nothing from her people, I suppose Phil can't afford it. We never had any too much, as it was, and Phil's simply added four more persons to the list."
"You'd think," said Edith in patient scorn, "that Phil might have seen that coming!"
"I try—I really do try to be decent to Lily," Gail said after a while. "I try to think up things that will interest her, and be reasonable when she's helping me in the kitchen. But when I hear a thing like her telling Sam that Phil has as much right to the house as we have..."
Another silence. Then Gail added, very low, "Something rises up in my soul, and I feel that I could murder her!"
"I wish we could get away, Gail, you and I."
"Oh, I mean to!"
"If we could live in Carmel!"
"I know. And if we rented the corner for a gas station, and you and I had that, we could live there."
"Then that reconciles me to the gas station!" Edith said, fervently.
"I suppose," Gail summarized it all soberly, "the only decent thing—the only square thing—is to make the best of it. It's one of those things that would be so darned easy—so picturesque in a book. And it's—so hard!"
The voice that to Edith was always brave and gallant faltered a little, but Gail wanted no sympathy. There was a scowl between her eyes, a gruffness to her aspect that repudiated it.
"This effort to make the best of it won't get us anywhere," she said.
Yet Edith was quite keen enough to notice the courage with which Gail carried the whole situation that night. The atmosphere, which in the three weeks since Phil's marriage had been charged with dangerous electricity, cleared. Gail was not only nice to Lily; she seemed able, with her own peculiar winning sweetness, to put herself in Lily's place. It was as if she had a part to play, and was determined to play it to its utmost limits.
For the first time, tonight, she spoke of the marriage, its suddenness and surprise. If Lily suspected some lingering trace of apology in this she gave no sign, but she brightened visibly, and the dinner table was more like its old self than it had been since the Saturday of Edith's and Gail's return.
Phil, in the fatuous blindness of love, was radiant with satisfaction, and Edith felt that he would feel that they could all go on living together indefinitely—the happy family in which men are so pathetically eager to believe.
"No, he won't do that!" said Gail. "For you going to talk to him tomorrow, and get everything definitely settled. Then we'll only have to work toward our goal. Enough money for the smallest overhead expenses we can manage, and then you and I'll get out of Clippersville forever!"
"I love Clippersville," Edith said bravely. "I don't think anyone could ever leave here. I always think of Clippersville as the sweetest place in the world," the younger sister pursued. "Just the same, I'm going to get out, Edith Lawrence!"

"And—just the same, I'm going with you, Abigail!"
This on a Monday, the last of September. On the Tuesday, on the Wednesday, Gail looked for her chance to talk to Phil, in vain. On Thursday Gail went home to lunch to find Edith and Lily in a glory of housecleaning. They appeared to be working together harmoniously enough, and Gail walked back to the library at one o'clock mortifying in her own soul upon the desirability of making the best of things in this curious world, putting up with what could not be changed, enduring what could not be cured.
THE only way to get past certain things in life is to plunge right through them, like them—or pretend you did—learn from them, and go on to other lessons.

The early October day was somber and overcast without rain, but equally without sun. Leaves were turning restlessly in the gardens; other leaves, heaps of them, were being raked into damp, somber piles that smoked in the lifeless, ominous air and scented the world with autumn. A strange hush lay over the town; something was expected, something was drawing nearer and nearer across the great range of the eastern mountains and under the pale cool sky.
Edith and Gail almost always walked home together. But Edith was not downtown today, and Gail had no need to stop at Muller's book department as usual. It was the third, the night they called the "house's birthday," and Gail—reflecting rather ungraciously that they might as well break Lily into some of the customs of the Lawrence household, since the poor little creature appeared to be only too anxious to copy her new family's ways and ideas, stopped at the hardware store and bought twelve new drinking glasses.
"Did you wish them wrapped?" as a gift, Miss Lawrence?
"Well, yes," Gail said, with a whimsical twist to the corners of her mouth. "Wrap them as a gift."
"We haven't given Phil and Lily anything," she thought as she walked on. "Well, they didn't give us any warning. Perhaps Edith and I'll make some gesture—some day, before we leave. And Ariel—Mother's poet! To have no wedding, no fun, no beauty. And not to have loved us. She couldn't have loved us, to walk out that Christmas night and send us no word—never to write."
"It's a funny world. Things seem to happen to us Lawrences. But such queer things, and in such funny ways."
The two older Cass boys—they were to be Lawrence boys soon, for Phil, in his gentle way, adored his stepsons and was eager to have them take his name—the two older Cass boys were digging contentedly down at the end of the garden where the grass was sprouting green and pale in the shadow of the heavy evergreen fence. Gail waved at them as she followed the uneven, discolored flags of the path to the side door.
And then Phil in the kitchen chopping ice—chopping ice... And Lily flying down the back stairway, with a terrible face—a terrible face.
"Gail! Edith was hurt."
"Edith!"
"She fell. She struck her head." This was Lily. She gestured with an arm. Gail ran.
Edith was unconscious on the couch, her eyes closed. Her soft tawny hair was damp, her forehead wet. A girl—Mary, Humboldt—was there, white and concerned, not touching Edith.
"I thought you were the doctor, Gail," Mary said in a still voice. "We took off her shoes," she added inconsequentially.
Gail was breathing in great spent breaths. She could not speak. Her lips moved soundlessly.
"She fell—" asked the silent, moving lips.
"No," Phil was beside his sister, his arms about her. She leaned against him, suddenly spent. "No. It was the statue—the Neapolitan Bay," he said. "One of the kids—Danny—ran against it. Mary and Edith were just going out, and Edie leaned over and caught at the pedestal—and it toppled and struck her."
"How long ago?"
"Ten minutes. We telephoned you."
"Doctor?"
"He's on his way."
"Phil—Phil—" she whispered, swallowing.
"I don't know, Gail. We don't know. Lily says that one of her brothers—Lily knelt beside Edith, and with her gentle, common, stubby little hands fitted an improvised ice bag on Edith's head."
"Ah, that's lovely, Gail!" Edith said unexpectedly in a clear, low, happy voice. "Are we swimming? Green—green—green water—like emeralds—wet emeralds."
She lapsed into silence again, sighing contentedly.
"She's coming out of it; it was only a shock," Phil said, frowning, with a reassuring nod and glance for Gail.
Gail was not conscious of the passing of time. She was conscious of but one thing—Edith. She must hold Edith here, by the sheer power of that sisterly love that was the strongest love in her life.
Doctor Peters was here, and Doctor Reynolds. They wanted another opinion, a man from San Francisco. Conclusion, undoubtedly, and possibly fracture, but it might be that both were slight. In undertones, in the hall, old Doctor Peters told Phil of other cases—cases from which one never would have supposed that little boys could recover. But they had.
"Doctor Reynolds from San Francisco is coming," Phil told Gail. "She emerged, white and dazed, from the sitting room at ten o'clock. 'He'll be here about three. And Dr. Peters says that if Edith goes on all right until this time tomorrow, she's got a good chance."

"The weary eyes were raised."
"Then the only thing to do is—live, until this time tomorrow."
Lily brought her warm wrapper, her slippers, downstairs, set a cup of hot coffee before her.
"Oh, thank you, Lily," Gail said, with the first honestly affectionate look she had ever given her little sister-in-law.
"Oh, Gail, if it hadn't been Danny!" Lily said, weeping.
"Poor Danny!" Gail murmured, with a steady, dry-eyed shadow of her old smile.
She went back to her post, sitting in the low chair that had been "Mother's rocker" for twenty-five years. Old Doctor Peters came and went in the quiet room. Lily was up all night; Phil and Sam kept vigil in the kitchen.
Sometimes Edith murmured. At about two o'clock she opened her eyes, looked straight at Gail, and said, in her own smiling way, "I'll tell you, Gail, I'll go first and get the cottage ready, and be waiting for you!"
"All right, my darling," Gail's trembling, tender voice answered.
"Put that comforter over her feet, will you, Lily? She doesn't feel any too warm."
Lily had been kneeling. But she was on her feet now, and as she brought the comforter a strange expression came into her face.
"Let's say some prayers, Gail!" she said suddenly, in a frightened tone.
"Ah, as if I hadn't! And she did, too," Gail whispered back. "We said our prayers together, just as we used to, a little while ago, and she seemed so sensible; just—hungry—for them."
"Doctor Reminger is here," Phil announced in the doorway.
"Phil!" Lily said quickly, running to her husband, catching him importantly by the arm. "Take Gail away—Phil!"
"Take—" Gail echoed. She got to her feet, looked dazedly from Phil to the doctor. The San Francisco physician was beside Edith. He had straightened up—had said something to Doctor Peters.
They were trying to make her leave Edith, and she would not go. She looked from face to face, terrified. Then she was conscious of choking, and of seizing Phil with both frantic hands and of trying to scream.
Then the room rocked and the world rocked, and there was nothing but blackness everywhere.

CHAPTER IX

Gail went to the strange country of grief. She saw the sunlight changed and sickly, the trees brassy and dead; the country town, where all her life had been spent, was a pasteboard town now, a place of unrealities and emptiness.
Every one was kind to her. She was amazed at the kindness, at the pains these good folk took, to help her through the echoing, queer days. She thanked them absently, came suddenly to consciousness, confusedly thanking them again.
Letters brought her beautiful messages; she found other beautiful words in books.
"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."
Grandma Polk, foremost in courage and prohibition and social work generally for half a century, copied out a poem for her in a trembling, beautifully clear old hand.
I shall go gently, never fear—give little warning,
Say not good-night, but in some happier sphere,
Bid you good-morning.
Old Man Whitman, who had known Stevenson, sent her the exquisite verses that genius had written for one in grief:
He is not dead, this friend; not dead,
For he is a mortal tread
Got some few trifling stars ahead,
And eddied to the end.
So that you, too, once past the bend
Shall meet again as face to face
This friend.
You fancy dead,
Push gaily on, strong heart! The white
You travel forward mile by mile
He loiters with a backward smile
Till you can overtake
And strain his eyes to search his wake,
Or whistling, as he sees you through the brake,
Waits on a stile.
"The Gov. finding no place to rest her foot, returned to him in the ark," said the priest gravely at Edith's funeral.
And browsing among the books to which she turned with the sure instinct of the living creature that must fight for its life, Gail thought in lines of music. "Oh, lyric love" half angel and half bird... she whispered, walking alone to the library in the cool winter mornings. "Oh, Edith, Edith, come back to me, beloved, or I die!"
Miss Mary Tevis, the rich, eccentric old maid who had given Edith dresses and hats, took Gail with her to Santa Barbara for Christmas. They drove down in the big Tevis car, and stayed at an enormous hotel; saw movie queens entertaining hilarious friends at dinner, spent whole mornings swimming, idling on the sand. They went to a big inter-collegiate game in Pasadena, and came back to Clippersville feeling that somehow they had cheated the year, and that there had been no Christmas at all.
Use of James and Jellies
Either the English have more of a sweet tooth or Americans make more of their own Jellies, for studies show that Americans eat only one and one-half pounds of manufactured jams and jellies for each person, compared with twenty pounds for each Englishman.

Problem Seen in Matter of Truth Occasions Can Arise When Over-Frankness Is Inadvisable.

Can you tell me why the whole world is so afraid of the truth? Why people implore you to tell them the truth but want you to tell them only what they hope to hear? "A woman who is trying to write comes to you for your opinion. 'The truth,' she says, 'I want to know the truth.' What she wants to hear however is that all the editors who have sent back her work are ignorant or stupid or conniving to print only the products of their friends. If you really tell her the truth—that what she writes has neither the benefit nor entertainment value, demanded by the readers whom editors must satisfy—you get for your thanks a stony look, and the knowledge that you have joined the roster of the 'unappreciative' or 'malicious.' Why do you not tell her the truth?"
"And then the people who come to you for advice on their problems with husband or children. They do not really want advice as you see their problem from your detached viewpoint. What they really want is to hear that they have the best husband in the world and the finest children, and therefore no problem at all if they will only take the way of least resistance. Why do they ask advice if they don't want it? Why, oh why don't they want the truth?"
This is no means novel question, put to an ethical authority, drew the following answer:
"I am sorry, dear reader, but I can't help wondering, in this complex business that is life, if any of us has the right to set ourselves up as knowing the truth. For my part I should shrink from the terrible responsibility of pointing out to anyone arbitrarily the truth about anything."
"I feel that way about assuming the cloak of authority even in matters in which I can claim experience. I should hesitate to discourage creative effort. There is always the danger, in condemning a piece of work, of mistaken judgment. More than one manuscript that has been crowned with the laurel wreath of greatness was at one time dismissed by all to whom it was submitted as so much trash. One of the most successful as well as meritorious plays of recent years had production a year or so ago almost by accident after being rejected by every manager on Broadway. Much of what is today considered great in modern painting would at one time have been regarded as the pastime of lunatics. So who are we to give final judgment?"

"And, when it comes to domestic matters, why should we assume that our detached position and our viewpoint hold the key to truth? To my mind there is in such personal problems no arbitrary general 'truth.' What may be right for one person under certain circumstances may not be right for another. Each problem between a husband and wife or a family and children, seems to me an equation between those particular warring or balancing forces. Put yourself in the place of one of them and you completely change the equation. So how can we presume to dictate the 'truth'?"

"It is logical to ask, 'Why do people come to us in this way for help and advice which they do not want?' But we do not have to go far for the answer. They come to us for help. It is true, though not for advice. And the help they crave is encouragement, reinforcement, a bolstering up of their belief—in themselves or those they love. That is why it is so obvious what they want to hear. And since many of us must take part of life's happiness in the currency of illusion, it may indeed be the province of a true friend to help to maintain that."

SLIMNESS ALONG WITH SIMPLICITY

Pattern 9350

Every line in this dress is cleverly contrived to "fit" about your weight. The unbroken line from shoulder to hip adds to your height, the diagonal closing "slims" you down and the panel skirt gives you a trim hip line.

Pattern 9350 may be ordered only in sizes 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 30 requires 3 1/2 yards 50-inch fabric.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Edith L. Watson

NAVAHO GOLD

WESTERN newspapers during the spring of 1915 carried a story which dates back to 1840. In that distant year, it is said, the Spanish explorers of the West discovered a placer in the Navaho country. It was lost, in the manner of so many old Spanish mines, but the story of its existence and its richness, and the approximate location of the place, persisted.

James O'Rourke, a western congressman, heard the story, and was inspired by it to gather together a small party and to go down into the Navaho country to search for the lost placer mine.

The party succeeded beyond their hopes. In a canyon somewhere in that strange region they came across a pile of stones which marked the location of some 200 pounds of silver matte and also a number of fine gold nuggets. This, they felt, must be a sign of the place they were hunting, and they camped that night at the cache.

The Navaho, however, had an idea that these white men were trespassers on their land. Any gold or silver that lay within the reservation belonged to them. So it was not natural that the hand of these intruders should be so bold as to intrude, unless their only hope was to escape.

Prospectors who happened to come that way finally rescued the party, which returned home much the worse for wear. The only treasure they had to show for this chase of the golden phantom was the handful of gold nuggets, which they had taken on sight.

Perhaps that lost Spanish mine is the same as Pech-la-Ki, a word which is a combination of Navaho and Spanish and means "white money."

This mine is also in the Navaho country, somewhere near the famous Four Corners where Colorado, Utah, Arizona, and New Mexico meet. The Navaho have sold silver specimens from Pech-la-Ki for many years, and more than one prospector has tried to find the source of their wealth, but a series of lost lives mark the search.

This, too, may have been the mine found long ago by Merrick and Mitchell. They were young prospectors in the Navaho country who came upon a rude forge or furnace and some nuggets of gold. While they were searching for the ledge from which the ore had come, Indians discovered them and both were killed.

In 1822 an old prospector, Charles T. Johnson, retraced their route, and in doing so became separated from the rest of his party. He got lost in a forest of fallen timber, which was impossible on horseback, so he left his horse and tried to get out on foot. While climbing about over the rotten logs he lost his balance, fell down a steep incline and brought up in a mine, which apparently had caved in at this place. A vein of white quartz containing much gold met his eyes, and he was certain that at last he had found the lost mine.

His friends, who were searching for him in the forest, heard his shouts and helped him out of the place. But for some reason it is not recorded that he or they ever went back to the shaft.

Another echo from the Navaho country was heard when a priest appeared in Prescott, Ariz., many years ago, searching for a cache of gold. He had been told about this hidden treasure, he said, by a man who died in the hospital of the Sisters of Charity in Denver.

This man and two others had taken $75,000 in gold out of a placer mine on the Navaho reservation, and they had fled with their wealth when the tribesmen discovered their presence. In getting away from the region, to avoid as much contact as possible with the Navaho and their neighbors, the fugitives had traveled south through western New Mexico, crossed the Mogon mountains, followed the Gila river to the Verde, and at last had reached Prescott in this devious manner. On the way two of the men died, one of malarial, the other from wounds given him by the Indians, so that the man who told the story was the sole survivor. He, afraid that retribution would overtake him also, buried the gold under a boulder near a spring, at the foot of a mountain past which a stream flowed into a sweet valley. The place he described as near Prescott.

He never dared to return to his cache; evidently his fear of the Indians was based on first-hand knowledge. But on his dying bed he begged the priest to go and recover the gold for the use of the hospital.

In case a placer mine, a ledge, a shaft, and gold and silver together may prove to be too puzzling a combination, a few words of explanation will clear up the matter. The Spaniards found the placer first, and then, looking about for the source of its gold, they saw the ledge, where gold and silver ores were mingled.

Roasting the silver in their rude furnace produced the matte, and the silver was probably taken away in this form, to be chemically treated in Mexico. While working thereabouts, a shaft was sunk in the search for further gold, which led to the development of the mine.

Oil Wells at Sea Are Expensive but Pay Out

THE tremendous output of oil wells drilled at sea has justified the expense of this unusual undertaking near Ventura, Calif. A rich stratum of oil-bearing sand was discovered more than a quarter of a mile off shore. Drilling was started shortly afterward and the resultant wells far beyond the breaker line have been a highly successful venture.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

SITTING safe and comfortable in the hollow stump to which Whitefoot the Woodmouse had led him, Danny Meadow Mouse told Whitefoot all about his adventures from the time he had visited the Smiling Pool right up to the moment when Whitefoot had come to his rescue. Whitefoot listened without saying a word until Danny's story was ended. Then he gravely shook his head.

"It was a crazy thing to do, Cousin Danny. It certainly was a crazy thing to do," said he.

"What was a crazy thing to do?" demanded Danny, looking puzzled.

"Going so far away from home when there was no need of it," replied Whitefoot. "I thought you were too wise to take such foolish risks. At your age—you should know better. It might be excusable in a youngster with no family to think of, but one of your age should have known better."

"I guess you are right, Cousin Whitefoot," replied Danny meekly. "I've learned a lesson I'll never forget. I've had frights enough to last me all the rest of my life and if I ever get home I'll never leave it again. I guess I ought to be starting along right now."

"I guess you ought to do nothing of the sort," retorted Whitefoot promptly. "The thing for you to do now is to rest and get yourself in condition."

Danny sighed. "I don't know but what you are right, Cousin Whitefoot," said he. "I really don't feel as if I could face danger again this night. My nerves are rather upset. This is a very nice, comfortable place you have here. It is one of the most comfortable places I've been in for a great while."

Whitefoot looked pleased. "I'm glad you like it," said he. "I think it is rather good myself. I have two or three other places quite as good. Now the thing for you to do, Cousin Danny, is to stay here the rest of the night and make yourself right at home."

To the Danny agreed, for he really did not feel equal to going any farther that night. So he and Whitefoot slept a little and talked a great deal. Danny learned many things about the Green Forest and in turn told White-

GOOD ICE CREAM SAUCES

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM SAUCE. Boil one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of water until it boils. Add one cupful of strawberries, one-half cupful of lemon juice and one-half cupful of vanilla. Boil one minute. Strain through a fine sieve. Add one cupful of vanilla and serve hot or cold.

FRUIT PUNCH SAUCE. Cook together one cupful of sugar and one-third cupful of water until it boils. Add one cupful of crushed pineapple, one-third cupful of maraschino cherries, chopped, add some of the juice, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a few grains of salt. Bring to the boiling point and chill.

CARAMEL SAUCE FOR ICE CREAM. Put into a saucepan one-half cupful each of sugar and corn sirup and one cupful of cream. Mix and boil, stirring occasionally until it is of the right consistency. Add three-fourths teaspoonful of vanilla and a few grains of salt. Leave over hot water until ready to serve.

MAPLE PECAN SAUCE. Boil three-fourths of a cupful of maple sirup with two tablespoonfuls of butter until it makes a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Remove from the fire and add slowly one-fourth cupful of cream. Keep hot over water until ready to serve, then add one-fourth of a cupful of broken pecan meats.

PEAR SULTAN. Top vanilla ice cream with a pear cooked in a sirup colored pink. Slice quartered blanched almonds into the pear and pour an apricot puree around the cream.

ECLAIRS DE LUXE. Make eclairs five inches long, cut in two and place a long slice of ice cream between. Serve with any of the desired sauces, or with cream and nuts.

CREAM CHOCOLATE SAUCE. Mix one cupful of sugar, one-fourth

QUESTION BOX by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: I have a puzzle for you to solve for me. I like to bet on horse races but always break about even. Here's how it is: One day I win but the next day I lose. What can I do? Yours truly, WILL I. EVERWYN.

Answer: That is very simple, just play every other day.

Dear Mr. Wynn: My father says it costs from $3 to $5 to have a tooth pulled by a G.D. Don't you think it could be done cheaper if the dentist used kerosene? Yours truly, A. KEETOOTH.

Answer: If you're not having the tooth pulled, why worry?

Dear Mr. Wynn: We are a New York family, and my son, who has just graduated from high school, is preparing for college. I asked him what course he intends to study, and he says he thinks there is a great field for civil engineers. Do you agree with him? Truly yours, L. M. A. BRAKEMAN.

Answer: What New York really needs is civil taxicab drivers.

Dear Mr. Wynn: Can you help me? For the past two weeks I have been despondent and have the most peculiar feeling. Sometimes I sit in a chair for hours and suddenly something within me seems to rise, then go down again, and a little later it rises again. What do you think is the matter with me? Sincerely, WRIGHT MESOON.

Answer: From your description, I should say you swallowed an elevator.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a man forty-nine years of age. I have traveled all over the world and have just returned to settle down in America. I have a big problem to solve first. I have spent nearly all my money, but still have enough, if properly invested, to keep me for the rest of my life. I think I have a bright idea. I intend opening a school for "stuttering." What do you think of my idea? Truly yours, IGO BACKEN FORTH.

Answer: Your idea is all right, but who wants to go to school to learn to stutter?

ONE SUMMER NIGHT

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SITTING beside you on the cool gray stone, I saw through your dear eyes, the summer night. The trees were shadowy, their dark leaves blown by perturbed breezes. . . . In the misty light Of the far moon, I caught the pure white gleam Of your loved profile. . . . With your quiet gaze Turned on the stars, lost in a happy dream, You wandered far from earth's perplexing ways.

I saw the world beyond you . . . reaching space, The silhouette of trees against the sky And knew that nothing counted but your face. You were my world. . . . The moon that rode so high, The stars, as lost as I in mists of blue, Were nothing. There was only love and you.

Sheba's Land

Ethiopian Army Captain in Full Dress Uniform.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—W. H. Service.

ETHIOPIA, a familiar name in the headlines these days, boasts a long and imposing history. The kings of this ancient empire are traced from Ori of 4478 B. C. to Haile Selassie the First of A. D. 1935—with time out, naturally, from the date of the Deluge, until the fall of the Tower of Babel. According to tradition, the queen of Sheba, who lived in the latter part of the reign of King Solomon, was the first to visit the Ethiopian empire.

Modern Ethiopia includes more than 350,000 square miles of the rich and productive northeastern African plateau. It is mainly a mountainous region, much broken by deep valleys. Arid, semi-desert country surrounds it on every side. It does not touch the sea, although some Ethiopian feudal chieftains like to grasp a marine telescope as they pose for a formal photograph.

In the population there are, perhaps, 5,000,000 Christians of the true Ethiopian (Hamitic-Semitic) type. They are the inheritors of an ancient civilization under whose feudal form of government are estimated to be 7,000,000 Moslems and pagans. The latter are mainly negroes.

The country is surrounded by African colonial possessions of Great Britain, France and Italy. As the Ethiopia of Solomon's time, it probably included all of these adjacent territories, with an Egyptian frontier, and that part of southwestern Arabia known today as the Yemen and Hadramaut.

There is in Ethiopia a very evident mixture of Asia and Africa. Some of the blood came from ancient Palestine, some from Arabia, and some from the shores of the Caspian. Authorities do not agree as to the elements in this African melting pot of races. But the Ethiopian claims with pride a strong relation to the Semites.

Getting into Ethiopia.

The front door entrance and port to Ethiopia is Djibouti, French Somaliland. The French are commendably responsible for Djibouti. It is the base of their 600-mile railway from the coast directly inland to Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital. This railway is Ethiopia's only modern connection with the outside world. Djibouti is, therefore, very important to Ethiopia. It is headquarters for an Ethiopian consul who gives intending visitors their visas.

There are two kinds of trains now on the efficient but expensive little Franco-Ethiopian railway. On Sunday and Wednesday mornings a train leaves Djibouti to arrive three days later in Addis Ababa. Each Tuesday evening departs the "through express," which does the 500 miles in 38 hours. Passengers can sleep on this "fast" train, not in pullmans, but in adjustable seats. On the three-day trains sleeping is done at little wayside hotels the two nights en route.

The first day of this railway journey ends usually at six in the afternoon, at Diredawa, the first town of importance after the train enters Ethiopia. It is on the fringe of a plateau 4,000 feet above sea level and a 200-mile climb from the coast. An interesting side trip from Diredawa is the old Mohammedan walled town of Harar, four hours away by rough motor trip or a whole day by muleback. Camels, horses, or mules are available as a means of transportation, but the mule is considered the most appropriate for one of actual or apparent high station in life.

The second night of the three-day train journey is passed on the banks of the Awash river, one of the peculiar streams of the world. At this point it is a swiftly flowing river in a deep canyon. Rising on the Ethiopian plateau, it turns northeastward toward the Red sea, but loses itself in the Danakil lowlands about its natural destination. Awash consists mainly of a small railway yard, a one-story brick building housing a hotel under quasi-Hellenic management, a scattering of native shacks, and many cats. Food and accommodations are simple and the most essential thing is a good mosquito net.

Addis Ababa, the Capital.

The train gets under way again the next morning at dawn and rolls through lovely grass and forest lands, where gallop many herds of gazelles and antelope. Occasionally one sees the dark blur of a rhino breakfasting on the far side of the Awash River canyon. About four o'clock in the afternoon of this third day the sprawling city of Addis Ababa is sighted in a forest of blue gum trees, across a rolling, grassy plain.

A ride of 20 minutes on mule or horseback, or five minutes by motor, takes the arriving traveler to the main part of the city. Addis Ababa has good streets and no "across the railway tracks" quarter. It has also legations, consulates, hotels, many American motor cars, airplanes of sorts, and some presentable business buildings. On one of the two principal elevations of the city is the ever-interesting market place. Here "once stood the great tree of life," which was the center of a great market. The tree was cut down by the British when they took the city in 1896. The most imposing edifice on this designated "Hill of the Gebbi" is the Audience Hall of the Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah, constructed of stone and given its high-sounding title by order of the late Emperor Menelik. Menelik claimed his title by virtue of his descent from that first Menelik who was born to Sheba after her visit to Solomon.

Ethiopia claims to be the oldest Christian sovereign state. The teachings of Christ were introduced about A. D. 330 by two shipwrecked Phoenician youths. Before they became Christians, the ruling classes of Ethiopians were adherents of Judaism. Their present church ceremonial retains many traces of that great and venerable religion.

Resources of the Country

After the professions of priest and soldier, agriculture is the principal occupation in Ethiopia. The country is very fertile, though methods of cultivation are still primitive. Many fine beef cattle are produced, and the people are great meat eaters. They have what might be called a ceremonial custom of eating a bit of raw beef as a sort of hors d'oeuvre.

In addition to the ordinary kinds of stock, Ethiopian farmers in parts of the country raise civet cats for commercial purposes. From these animals they obtain a liquid musk marketable to French and American perfumers at $2 an ounce. The chase is also a commercialized industry in Ethiopia, and naturally ivory heads the list of its products.

Many an Ethiopian leopard involuntarily contributes his skin to American feminine fashion. As many as 100,000 of these spotted skins have gone to American furriers in a single year. Also monkey furs are an item of profitable trade. A shy member of the monkey tribe, called the guereza, lives in the trees of the Ethiopian highlands. Their long, silky, black-and-white fur was worn by the Ethiopians as capes until Parisian dressmakers fancied it as a trimming for feminine gowns. Lately the Ethiopian government has decided to protect its wild game by requiring the taking out of licenses and payment of hunters' fees.

Where Fine Coffee is Grown.

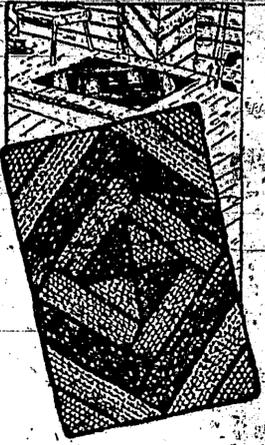

The Harar district, town and province, is the center of production of cultivated coffee in Ethiopia. The bean produced is of excellent quality and ranks next only to Mocha in world markets. It is called "long-berry Mocha" and is sold to a discriminating clientele in the United States. Although the Harar plantations are descended from seed introduced from the Mocha district in Arabia, Ethiopia is the home of coffee. The tree was found originally by Arab travelers in the Ethiopian province of Kafa, from which it took its name. Seed was taken from Kafa to Arabia, and thence came back to Harar. According to the Arabs, the cultivation of coffee also spread to other parts of the world from the Yemen, in southwestern Arabia.

In Kafa and adjoining parts of southwestern Ethiopia may be seen today vast and virgin forests of coffee of the indigenous variety. It necessarily grows without cultivation or care and thousands of tons of the berries fall to the ground in waste each year. The outer fringes of some of these forests are worked by natives in sections not too far from export trading centers, where the market value of coffee is known. Egypt buys much of this coffee, shipped via Khartoum, in place of former importations of the Brazilian product.

Lions are numerous in the Harar district. They are the fine black-maned fellows so alluring to the big-game hunter. Probably other kinds can chew one up just as thoroughly, but the Harar fellow is particularly respected. When an Ethiopian kills a lion, he has the right to demand a special audience from the emperor during which to declaim and act out the feat. Afterwards he is privileged to wear the mane and skin as part of his warrior dress.

Log Cabin Effect in Crocheted Rug

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Log cabins are always picturesque, and the many antiques usually found about the place add much to complete the picture.

We can't all live in cabins, but we can satisfy our antique cravings by giving these ideas some space in our homes.

This "Log Cabin" crocheted rug was developed from the old "Log Cabin" quilt, which is made of many small squares of material. The inner square of triangles is made first. Four elongated pieces of same size form the first row around center; two short and two long pieces form the next row. Four pieces of same size from the third row. Four "same" size triangles form corners. Slip-stitch sections together in black and single crochet all around in black. Color scheme may be all brown light and dark shades or mixed colors. Alternate panels in light and dark shades to give contrast to rows. Measure each section as the work progresses and fit sections into spaces. Rag rug and mat may vary in weights.

Grandmother Clark's Rug Book No. 24 contains full directions for making this rug, and many others that will interest you. All illustrations in color. Postpaid, 10c. Address—HOME CRAFT COMPANY, DEPARTMENT C, Nineteenth and St. Louis Avenue, St. Louis, Mo. Enclose a stamped addressed envelope for reply, when writing for any information.

Virgin Islands Bought for Future Naval Base

There are surprises in store for Americans who visit the Virgin Islands without knowing their history. Although Denmark owned the group for two and a half centuries, from 1666 to 1917, Danish was never spoken as a language. English was used by the natives from the first. Danish money is still very much in use. The population is 75 per cent negro, 17 per cent mixed blood, while only 7 per cent is white. There are three main islands, St. Thomas, St. John and St. Croix and half a hundred islets, most of them uninhabited. The three main islands have an area of 192 square miles.

St. Thomas has one of the best harbors in the West Indies. Ships drawing 31 feet may dock at its wharves. On the hills sloping up from the harbor is the largest town in the new American possessions, it is now called St. Thomas, but under the Danish regime it was Christiania. This harbor is the reason the islands now belonging to the United States. Denmark wished to sell, and the United States, to prevent this excellent naval base from falling into the hands of a European power, made the purchase. The price, $25,000,000, was the highest ever paid by this country in a territorial purchase.

BOYHOOD'S IDEAL
Father had decided the time had come when he should talk to Junior, his nine-year-old son, about his life's work. When Junior was asked what he wanted to be when he grew up, he promptly replied he wished to be an Indian.
"An Indian?" queried the father.
"Great Scott! Why do you want to be an Indian?"
"Because," the boy answered, "when you're an Indian you don't have to wash your face and hands and nobody can tell if your neck's dirty, and if you don't want to talk to people you just grunt."—Capper's Weekly.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons
Do you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, swollen feet and ankles? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unwell and don't know what is wrong? Have you ever thought to you kidneys? Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.
Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.
DOAN'S PILLS

IT'S BLAZING

inside your motor!
That's why you need Germ Processed Oil for safe lubrication—it maintains high film strength under extreme heat!

The heat of your cylinder walls ranges from 350° to 425° in Summer weather.

When you drive at 50 miles an hour, your wrist pin bearings heat up to 350°.

Your connecting rod bearings, at a speed of 50 miles an hour, reach a heat of 250°.

In hot weather, your crankcase "runs a temperature" over 225°.

WITH heats of 225° to 425° in your motor, you must have oil that maintains high film strength under extreme temperatures to get safe lubrication. Otherwise, the lubricating film ruptures and the bearings and cylinders suffer damaging wear.

Plain mineral oils have little film strength and oils over-refined by new cleansing processes have even less. As motor heat goes up, these oils rapidly lose film strength.

It's an absolute certainty that you'll get better motor protection with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. Timken machine tests prove that it has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than any plain mineral oil and that heat above 225° does not lessen this advantage.

More proof—supervised road tests were made in identical cars fitted with the new alloy metal bearings used in many 1935 cars. The bearings lubricated with a high-quality plain mineral oil showed 45% more wear than those lubricated with Conoco Germ Processed, the first alloyed oil.

You'll be certain your motor is safely lubricated even at high temperatures if you say "O. K.—Drain" and fill with Germ Processed, the oil with the "Hidden Quart" that never drains away!

Say OK-Drain—FILL WITH CONOCO GERM PROCESSED MOTOR OIL

YOU DON'T HAVE TO "BREAK IN"
THE FORD V-8

You can drive it 50 miles an hour the day you buy it

The Ford V-8 is ready for normal driving when you buy it. There is no tedious period of breaking-in for 500 or 1000 miles. You can drive it up to 50 miles an hour the first day. And after the first hundred miles you can drive it as fast as you desire.

That means greater motoring enjoyment for every motorist. It is especially important to motorists who are thinking about a new car for a vacation trip—to physicians, salesmen and all those who use a car for business. Instead of dragging along at slow speeds for days, you can make good time from the start.

The reason for this is as important as the result. The Ford V-8 needs no breaking-in because of unusual accuracy in the manufacture of moving parts and the smoothness of bearing surfaces. Clearances are correct when you buy the car. It is not necessary to depend on a long wearing-in period to eliminate tightness and insure smooth running. Longer life, greater economy and better performance are bound to result from such precision methods. The Ford V-8 gives you fine-car construction, along with fine-car performance, comfort, safety and beauty.
