Federal Public Work Notes

Mr. G. C. Street, Jr., PWA State Engineer Inspector for Texas and New Mexico, whose headquarters are at Fort Worth, Texas; today called a meeting of the Resident Engineer Inspectors now on duty in New Mexico. The meeting was held in the office of the State Director of the Public Works Administration at Santa Fe, New Mexico, and, as a result of this meeting, Mr. Street has authorized his New Mexico Resident Engineer Inspectors to supply information, details and application blanks for loans and grants, or for grants only, for construction projects in New Mexico. While all of these Resident Engineer Inspectors are supervising important construction projects at the points listed below, Mr. Street authorized them to devote the major part of their time for the next two weeks to contacting authorized representatives of the various political subdivisions which might have authority to file applications for Public Works projects.

A letter or telegram addressed to Edward H. Oakley, State Director, Public Works Administration, Santa Fe, New Mexico, will result in the nearest Resident Engineer Inspector available making a personal call on anyone representing an authorized political subdivision, such as a City, Town or Village Mayor, Chairman of a Board of County Commissioners, President of a School Board, President of an Irrigation or Drainage District, etc.

Mr. Street has designated Mr. Charles Goldenberg, Relief Engineer Inspector, to handle the actual travel and similar details which may have connection with any visit any of the following Resident Engineer Inspectors may make to a community. Mr. Goldenberg will have his temporary headquarters in the State Director's office in Santa Fe.

The following are the New Mexico Resident Engineer Inspectors with their present addresses:

Geo. W. Brown, City Hall, Hegerman, N. M.; W. C. Campbell, P. O. Box 231, Tucuman, N. M.; Frank E. Estes, P. O. Box 492, Albuquerque, N. M.; R. B. Gaines, P. O. Box 1402, Santa Fe, N. M.; W. B. M. Cune, P. O. Box 512, Ft. Sumner, N. M.; Andrew O'Rourke, Cor. Ash & Terrace Sts., Albuquerque, N. M.; D. W. Townsend, General Delivery, Magdalena, N. M.

The Santa Fe office of the Public Works Administration is now prepared to handle to a conclusion, as far as their recommendations are concerned, all applications submitted in proper form, within a period of ten days from their filing dates. It will be necessary to file applications in the State Director's office within the next twenty-five days in order to assure New Mexico its proper proportion of the remaining balance of funds made available for such projects as Public Works Administration handles.

Colonel Horatio B. Hackett, Assistant Administrator of the Public Works Administration, yesterday telegraphed the New Mexico State Director, Edward H. Oakley, as follows:

"A resolution was passed at Alotment Board Meeting August twentieth setting September sixteenth as deadline for receiving in State offices applications on projects out of new funds stop. This should be widely publicized

Republican Strongholds Favor Roosevelt

The only two presidential newspaper polls reported last week, in widely separated sections, were both decidedly favorable to President Roosevelt. One conducted by the Courier-News, a Republican newspaper in Elgin, Ill., showed that while three years ago Hoover carried the Northern Illinois industrial city by 2 to 1, or 11,999 to 5,982 for Roosevelt, "today there is little margin between those who would vote for Roosevelt in 1936 and those who frown on his administration." From the first day of the poll, when 1,626 votes were recorded against the President and 1,405 sustained him, the paper reports that "there has been the same definite trend."

"A poll just completed by the Asheville Citizen, an independent Democratic newspaper, in 21 of the 23 counties comprising the Tenth and Eleventh congressional districts in Northwestern North Carolina, was favorable to the re-election of President Roosevelt to the extent of slightly more than 68 per cent of all votes cast. He received 58 per cent of the total votes cast in the same counties in 1932. The significance of this poll is that it was confined to the erstwhile Republican stronghold of the state. Both districts elected Republicans to Congress in 1928 and that region has been depended upon by all G. O. P. aspirants in state-wide elections for many years.

Ft. Stanton Downs Cobras

By M. C. St. John

Last Sunday's baseball game between Fort Stanton and the Cobras was the worst ever played on the local park. With the exception of a home-run made by Manuel Ortiz the Cobras made a very poor showing. Fort Stanton won by a large margin.

The next game will be played at Fort Stanton Sunday, Sept. 1st, it is believed that this game will be the last of the season for the Cobras. However it is expected that next year the Cobras will fill a few weak places with new material and will be ready to give first class competition to any team.

This should prove good news for the communities which have not yet filed any applications for the type of sound construction which PWA has a well earned reputation for carrying through to a conclusion, as it had been understood, until this telegram was received, that September 16 was the deadline for getting applications into the Washington Office and as it takes from two to three weeks to get an application through the three Sections in the State Office before they can be sent to Washington, this telegram means that the communities in New Mexico which have not yet availed themselves of the new liberal terms offered by PWA—a 45 per cent outright grant and the balance of 55 per cent loaned at an interest rate of 4 per cent—have over three weeks in which to get their applications in to the Santa Fe Office of PWA.

For detailed information and application blanks, telegraph or write the PWA State Director, Post Office Building, Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Rainbow Activities

Last Friday night the Rainbow girls initiated six candidates into their order. They were Anna Belle Hoffman, Miralda Ramey, Pinkie Ruth Skinner, Louise and Henrietta Degner and Helen Kalson. After the ceremonies ice cream and cake were served.

This afternoon the Rainbow Girls are entertaining with a party and shower at the home of the mother, Mrs. J. M. Shelton in honor of Miss Patricia Keller, one of their members who is to be married early in September.

You will admire those new Gage Hats, we just received. Ziegler Brothers.

Towns and the county itself should be on the job when one thinks of what can be secured through the Works Progress Administration of the Federal Government. It is true we have several projects already approved and several under consideration, but all are comparatively small. There are thousands of dollars available and local and county officials and the people themselves should not be derelict in setting up more and larger projects. The W. P. A. desires to offer every able bodied man in the county a job. With the full co-operation of the county, municipalities and school districts this end can be attained resulting in benefits to the workers the local public and the state at large. The number of constructive and permanent projects Lincoln county obtains will be in proportion to the energy our people show in seeking their accomplishment.

Rev. E. H. Johnson and daughters, Elizabeth and Juanita have gone to Clyde, Texas, where Miss Elizabeth will teach this year and Juanita will attend school.

We are receiving some new fall styles; Dresses with every express, come in and see the new arrivals.—Ziegler Brothers.

O. E. S. Honoring The Brickleys

Thursday, August 22 the O. E. S. entertained Miss and Mr. Brickley with a program of songs and readings.

A musical program arranged by Mrs. Ed Kelley, consisting of a group of pep songs, lead by the O. E. S. Choir and duets sung by Mrs. Ray Lemon and Mrs. Don English were much enjoyed.

Mrs. Ula G. Mayer read Edgar Guest's poem "The Sort of Friend" dedicated to Mr. Brickley by Comet Chapter No. 29, followed by Mrs. Clara T. Snyder reading Tressie Marie Carver's poem "My Neighbor" dedicated to Miss Brickley.

Mrs. Bernice Nickels gave a review of the lives of Miss and Mr. Brickley since they have resided in our community in appreciation of their service to us.

In appropriate words Mrs. Ina Mayer presented Past Grand Patron, Mr. Brickley, a gift from Comet Chapter of a hand tinted picture of Carrizozo taken from the Mal Pais. Mr. Brickley assured us that we could not have given him anything that would have given him more pleasure.

Mrs. Gussie Titsworth, in the absence of Mrs. Sproles, presented Miss Brickley a lovely beaded evening purse from the Chapter.

After the program, the guests repaired to the dining hall where delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by the committees.

A large tray of gorgeous red dahlias, from the Keller home was presented to the two honor guests, and then each guest was the recipient of one as a souvenir of the occasion. Other flowers that gave the dining room a gala appearance were from the flower gardens of Mesdames Blaney and Titsworth. A lovely white cake with the words "Success to Brickleys" in E. O. S. colors was presented to the Brickleys by Mrs. Ziegler.

After refreshments, the members were divided to represent the four seasons of the year, and each group was asked to present a stunt. The stunts caused much merriment.

The members departed at a late hour declaring that they had spent a most enjoyable evening. We sincerely regret to have the Brickleys leave us. They have both been good workers in our Chapter and our community, and they will be sorely missed. Carrizozo has every reason to be proud that they have been so long with us.

Shirtwaist Frock Simple and Chic

It seems that girls will be girls this season—even in the field of sports! And most welcome, too, is the return to femininity in clothes. That flattering quality is most often achieved through the softness of gathers (as you see in this yoke) or easy freedom of line (like the pleated sleeve with its casual air). But every important tailored detail is retained making the shirtwaist frock an universally becoming! See how trim the collar, how neat the front closing—how simple the pocket! Make yours of sport silk or cotton.

Pattern 2212 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 3 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

IN GOOD CONSCIENCE

"What are you going to say when the congress meets?"

"I am going to avoid the complications of world economics," answered Senator Borghum, "and concentrate on a notorious matter of plain fact and simple justice—votes for Washington, D. C."

Doctor of Etiquette

"I am at work on another book," said the European savant.

"What kind of a book?"

"A book of etiquette. In some court circles there is need of some writing to define the formalities, so that when officials meet they will know just who is expected to shoot first."

Free for All

"What are your ideas for a campaign?"

"Sharing the wealth," said Senator Borghum. "I'd even go so far as to demand free radio time for everybody."

Golden Phantoms FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Edith L. Watson

SUNBURNED GOLD

STRANGE, dark ore from a hidden mine—copper gold! The padres at San Diego mission were using it before the annexation of California. How much they knew about its source they did not reveal. But it is said that when the new dispensation began they caused the Indian to hide their mine and "forget" that it existed. And it stayed hidden and forgotten until the day when it was found by Pegleg Smith.

Pegleg was, as his name implies, a one-legged man—a roustabout, sometimes a prospector. What he was doing in the Colorado desert on that day in 1881 is unknown. But somewhere between Yuma and San Diego, instead of going from one water hole to another as sensible people should, he decided to make a short cut, and as a result, he became lost.

There was a mountain close by, and Pegleg knew that the only thing to do was to reach its top and get his bearings from there. It must have been an unpleasant climb, with but one good leg to go on, but finally Smith stood on the summit and looked about him.

He also looked down—and there at his feet was a strange, dark ore. He was not certain that it had any value, but picked up a few chips anyway, and resumed his delayed march to San Diego, reaching his destination without further adventures.

For several weeks the ore lay about unnoticed. Finally, just because it was curious-looking stuff, Pegleg showed it to his acquaintances. Some one recognized it as gold in spite of its odd appearance, and a new search was on—a search for the copper gold, the "sunburned" gold, of Pegleg's mine.

As such things will, this search proved fruitless. Perhaps the desert added a few more skeletons to its collection of bleaching bones, but no one came back with any more of the gold. Finally the excitement died down.

But it had no more than done so when here came a soldier from Fort Yuma with more of that same unusual ore. He had a slightly more-detailed location to give: there were three peaks, he said, instead of one. He was anxious to return, and lost little time in outfitting and choosing several companions. They set out with vast confidence that they would soon return with loads of gold. Then the desert swallowed them.

East of Warner's Pass all trace of them was lost. But many years later prospectors in the Cuyamaca mountains found the bones of men and animals.

Later, an Indian woman appeared with some of the ore at a place where workmen were laying tracks for the railroad. She had lost her way, she said, and like Pegleg, she had seen the mountain and had climbed it, to discover the ore. She claimed, also, that there were peaks, which substantiated the soldier's story. From the mountain top she had seen the tracklayers, and she had headed for their camp.

The tracklayers took on started inspection of her little load of ore, and then most of them immediately threw down their tools and "made tracks" in the direction from which she had come, without waiting to hear the end of her story. This was a fatal mistake, for she told the rest that she had circled around and approached their camp from an entirely different direction than that in which the mountain lay. The men who had so hastily rushed off were never seen again.

The Indian woman refused from this first to disclose the location of the gold. At last a prospector, Jim Denslow, became her friend, and after many years she told him of the three peaks, and that the mine was near a dry lake. Then he set out, as so many had done before him, seeking for the strange, dark ore. He found the three peaks at last, but between him and them stretched, not a dry lake, but a vast, shallow, wet one, with such dangerous quicksands around its margin that he could not cross it.

Denslow decided that the thing to do was to return to San Diego, re-outfit, and come back prepared to do some work. This he did, and succeeded in skirting the lake and climbing the peaks—only to find nothing but oxidized, volcanic glass.

The next to locate the mine was a Mexican cowboy. He disappeared for several days from the ranch where he was employed, and on his return he showed some of the copper gold. This he squandered on fine saddles and other such matters dear to the cowboy heart, and on gambling. When he was broke again, he disappeared as before, and returned with more gold. This he did several times, always, each time to elude all those who tried to trail him. Of course he would not tell the location, but the character of the ore revealed that it had been taken from the same place as that which Pegleg and the others had visited. At last the cowboy was killed in a knife duel, and his secret died with him.

A former sheriff of the county, however, had seen the Mexican riding in a certain direction. He decided to ride that way, too, and see what lay out there. He set out, but never returned. Every old-time desert rat in the Southwest knows the approximate location of Pegleg's mine, yet none have succeeded in reaching it.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT THE DEER BECOMES UNEASY

THE Green Forest was very beautiful. It was no longer green save where the pines and spruces and hemlocks grew. Everywhere else it was red and yellow and brown, for it was October and the leaves had turned. All day long and all the night, too, for that matter, there was a gentle rustling all through the Green Forest, for the leaves were falling.

Lightfoot the Deer was becoming uneasy. It was the rustling of the falling leaves that made him uneasy. You see those falling leaves had a message for Lightfoot, a message and a warning. It was that the season of terrible danger for him, the hunting season, was close at hand.

All through the long summer Lightfoot had lived in peace and safety. In the early spring his wonderful antlers, which some folks call horns, but which are not true horns, had fallen. Very helpless had Lightfoot been then, but despite his helplessness there had been no fear in his heart. You see, he knew that there was no one in all the Green Forest, save Buster Bear, of whom he need be afraid. It was an easy matter to keep out of the way of Buster Bear. Besides, there was little cause to fear Buster, for Buster was finding plenty to eat and a full stomach makes for good nature in man and beast.

So all the long summer Lightfoot the Deer had lived quietly and in peace while new antlers grew, antlers larger and more beautiful than those

All Through the Long Summer Lightfoot Had Lived in Peace and Safety he had lived. While these new antlers were growing he kept very much by himself. Now, they were fully grown and he wore them like a crown. He had polished and repolished the points of them by rubbing them against trees. You know, while they had been growing they had been covered by a sort of furry-looking skin, called velvet. They had been soft and tender then. Now that they were hard there was no further use for the velvet covering and this Lightfoot had rubbed off as he polished his antlers.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am an amateur actor, and last night our dramatic club gave one of Shakespeare's plays, in which I played Hamlet. Every time I was on the stage the audience laughed out loud. How do you account for that when you know as well as I that Hamlet is not a funny character?

Truly yours, MANNY JER.

Answer: I know it isn't, but I guess the way you played it was.

Dear Mr. Wynn: Why do some musicians close their eyes when they play?

Yours truly, L. TROYATORE.

Answer: That is so they can't see the audience suffer while they are playing.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I possess so many women keep money in their stockings, and every time they need it they lift their skirt, put their hand in their stocking and pull it out. What I want to know is: "How do these women get at their money when gentlemen are around them?"

Truly yours, X. TREMITIES.

Answer: My dear friend, when there are gentlemen around, women don't have to get at their money.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am in a peculiar predicament, and hope you can help me. I have a $10 bill which is counterfeit. One day I'll think it is all right and feel on the verge of passing it, and then on another day I'll think it isn't any good and make up my mind to tear it up. This has been going on for weeks and it worries me. What shall I do?

Yours truly, I. M. A. PRADIE.

Answer: The only thing for you to do is to wait until the day for thinking the bill is all right to come around, and pass it.

VACATION MEALS

DURING the summer weather is the time when everybody should take a few hours away from the grindstone. The house mother needs a vacation as much as any worker, but usually, a picnic is but an added burden unless everybody takes a hand in planning and preparing the food. Have everything simple, easy to prepare and then let the young folks do the work; it will be good experience and give mother a rest; if it is possible for her to give up the idea that no one but herself can pack a lunch.

With the frying pan, take along some eggs and bacon. Scramble the eggs, add the crisp bacon which has been fried and kept hot, serve as a sandwich filling, or, well buttered bread, young green onions or a simple salad, or a cucumber and radishes, go well with such sandwiches. For the youngsters, take milk, lemonade or cocoa, which may be carried in a thermos bottle. Coffee, too, may be prepared at home, but one of the pleasures of an outing meal is cooking it. Coffee never tastes better than when cooked in a Dutch oven or on a campfire.

French fried toast goes very nicely for a camp hot dish. This is easy to prepare by basting an egg, adding a little milk and a pinch of salt and sugar. Fry in a little hot bacon fat or the slices may be fried on the sheeting the bill is all right to come around, and pass it.

Dear Mr. Wynn: Can you please tell me whether or not there is anything good for a snake bite—besides whisky?

Yours truly, I. M. STUNG.

Answer: Who cares if there is? Associated Newspapers. WNU Service.

Waiting for Word From Houdini

NINE YEARS ago Harry Houdini, master magician, died. Before he passed away he made a compact with his wife that he would seek to communicate with her from the beyond, giving her certain code signals whereby she might know when he spoke. In her rustic Laurel Canyon home, near Hollywood, Calif., Mrs. Beatrice Houdini waits for that message. She has waited nine years at a shrine in which stands a photograph of the magician.

ONE DAY IN AUTUMN

I CAN remember my old Granddad sitting Beside me on the wagon, sticking sticks From the roan team, his pipe filled with tobacco, Surveying the shorn fields with wise old eyes.

And as I looked at him, I heard the creaking Of the off wagon wheels, and knew right well What he would say. He wasn't much for talking, And he sat silent now for quite a spell.

But when he spoke, though I was very little, I knew just what he meant. . . I'd heard loud speaking And bragging folks, and laughed when Grandpa muttered: "The weakest wagon wheel does the most squeaking!"

WHEN Hollywood had only 800 people and not even a "nickelodeon," pioneering actors rented an old barn there and began to film "The Squaw Man." Armed cowboys, dashing through dusty streets to "fight" Indians, alarmed the village.

If the play called for a scene on a front porch, the actors simply got permission to use somebody's porch. No oak, at first, built special "sets." Such colossal structures as Babylonian palaces 300 feet high, built later to film "Intolerance," were undreamed of.

Now studios that are walled cities within themselves house this stupendous industry, whose feats smack almost of witchcraft. To make a "horror" picture, the illusion of prehistoric monsters invading a modern city was achieved with Texas armadillos. Shot at 20 times normal size, while waddling past the toy buildings of a miniature city, this final effect on the screen was realistically hideous.

One studio has a toy shop where boats, airplanes, cities, railroad trains, and automobiles are all made in miniature. In "The Invisible Man," a tiny automobile, loaded with gasoline-soaked cotton and a fuse, was run off a toy cliff, bursting into flames. In the same picture a railroad train (with cars 2 feet long) tumbled down a mountain side. Both "accidents" were strangely convincing.

Coral and marine plants for under-sea views are cleverly counterfeited. "When we found ocean stuff wouldn't transplant," said a Universal director, "we dipped cactus and other desert growth in a plaster solution. Dried and painted, this 'bottom of the sea' fooled everybody."

Octopus tentacles and snakes may be merely a jointed tube, strung on piano wire, coated with sponge rubber, and painted.

Human Actors of All Kinds.

But it is human beings and their behavior, as much as tricks with cameras, that make Hollywood, which is only a part of Los Angeles, better known abroad than the big city itself.

Since most of the world's movies are made hereabouts, the millions paid in salaries lure performers, real and would-be, from every other clime. Besides stars and plain five-dollar-a-day "extras," these actors range from real pygmies, as in "Tarzan," to acrobats and bona fide bareback riders in plays like "Polly of the Circus."

Casting offices for years have studied herds of people for different roles. More than 17,000 are listed on cards for "bit" and "atmosphere" work. Every conceivable type is decided. As one official said, "We could not use the same crowd for an embassy reception as for a clandestine meeting of the Black Hand."

At the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, experts keep in mind the faces of some 7,000 semi-regulars, and use a filing system for thousands of extras.

Eighty per cent of the types needed fall into such groups as dress men, bellhops, police, collegians, butlers, riders, tall, short, and fat men, stunt men, army and navy men, tough men, judges, etc.; dress women (meaning intelligent, society types who can wear smart clothes), pretty girls, homely girls, stenographers, tall, short, fat, and stout women, maids, character women, riders, dancers, downers, healthy children, peaked children, Hawaiians, Orientals, Latins, Nordic and Slavic types.

An emergency call for "one tough mechanic with a broken nose and two teeth missing" was quickly met.

Trained acrobats who can take rough falls and not get hurt; sailors with one eye; a distinguished-looking man with a continental-like "spade beard" who can work as a count or a diplomat—all these are in the cards!

Some of the Tricks.

"These bottles we break over each other's heads in barroom brawls couldn't hurt anybody," explains an actor made up like Jesse James. "They're not glass; they're made of candy."

Some such trick candy costs $30 a pound. In the form of pills, it is used in shooting wintry scenes. The actor holds this pill in his mouth like a cough drop; as it melts, it gives off a vapor that is visible, like breath on a cold day.

Tedies of plastic, oatmeal for snow, and gales made by wind machines, all join to simulate winter. To make it rrip over a three-acre field in "Little Women," RKO engineers built scaffolding high above the lot which carried a mile of perforated pipe. By this vast sprinkling system it could "thaw" whenever directors yelled, "Start the rain!"

In another scene, horses hauled a sleigh across a "snow field" made of half-baked cornflakes. Being yellow, they photographed white. At the same time a battery of 20 huge motor propellers at one side of the field blew the air thick with cornflakes, making a "blizzard." During a pause in the work one horse got at a big bag of extra cornflakes, omelete, was foundered, and a movie veterinarian had to give first aid. Just then an actor, bundled up to face the "cold," got a sunstroke!

Among strange sights here is an Eskimo village with igloo, ice fields, and all. Five hundred men used tons of white plaster to make this set. It saves the cost of sending actors up North.

Realism of "Berlin"

"Berlin" was only about 150 feet from "Mexico" on the Universal lot. "Rain" poured down in a Berlin street where actors in "Little Man, What Now?" walked along in raincoats, carrying umbrellas; cab horses pawed the water, and boys pedaled along on gleaming-wet bicycles. From out in the dry a director called his orders.

For verisimilitude an exact model of a Berlin street car, all painted with bona fide names and numbers, clattered along under its own power. About a kiosk, or newsstand, draped with illustrated German weeklies, a group of old German types recruited from Los Angeles lodging houses talked in German about German politics.

Barely a stone's throw away, on another "set," a cowboy actor, the idol of small boys the world over, was struggling through Mexican border brush a few jumps ahead of a Texas sheriff.

Any kind of scenery desired, from Alpine to Sahara, can be found or easily manufactured somewhere in southern California.

To film an Australian drama, some rolling plains were wanted like the terrain near Melbourne, where the principal action of the story took place. They were found in Los Angeles county.

Sometimes, however, nature plays a joke. Once rain interrupted the shooting of some scenes where were used big leafless gum trees. Two weeks later, when the actors went back to complete that scene, the trees had leafed out. In order to match the old setting, the trees had to be picked like chickens, which made a two days' job for 20 men.

From-snow scenes in mountains back of Hollywood to seaside set-ups, is only a three-hour's drive. "Covered wagon" was filmed on a ranch near Burbank, now seldom used because two air lines fly over it and the roar of planes spoils sound effects.

Near Santa Monica is an almost perfect bit of Cuba.

About Oxnard is a made-to-order Sahara. The "Alps" are in San Bernardino county, and the Babermer's village on the Los Angeles harbor has often been pictured as "Southern Italy."

Orders for the Property Man.

One company has its own hand-made jungle in which wild-animal scenes are filmed. Under jungle trees life nets are used in case of accidental falls by "wild men" and others who leap from tree to tree.

An odd order for one picture called for "5,000 moths and 200 cockroaches."

In "Sungaree," a tale of Australia in 1870, the background included bull cars, dingoes, and even a kookaburra bird, or "laughing jackass," all brought from Australia to give faithful local color.

The bird enacted his own comedy role by sitting in a tree and insulting the players with his raucous "raspberry" cry.

In making an American "tackle" of life in 1800, more than 6,000 separate items, with hoopskirts, ruffled pantallettes, bustles, wall paper, and top buggies of that period, had to be duplicated after painstaking research. More than 2,000 people, drawn from almost every profession, craft, and trade in America, were employed before this picture was finished.

INSPIRATION IN DEEDS OF HERO

Nation Has Held Memory of Paul Jones in Honor.

On the Fourth of July France placed a marble memorial to the honor of John Paul Jones, at the spot where in Paris his body rested from the time of his death in 1792 until his forgotten grave was found and the body brought to the United States in 1905, a period of more than a century of neglect by both countries. The French had not marked his grave nor given it honor and we ourselves were content to do him honor only in our school book histories and occasionally listen to some orator declare that he had "only just begun to fight" for something or other. It now rests in the naval cemetery at Annapolis, its monument a constant inspiration to thousands of cadets, who hope some day to place their names beside this on the scroll of national heroes.

John Paul, which was his right name, Jones being added after he came to America to live in Virginia in 1773, had a soul for adventure and daring. He fought under the flags of three nations, not as a mere soldier of fortune, but as an adventurous spirit eager to deliver blows where he thought they should be given. Other men of adventurous impulse had under the British flag fought for plunder, as did the notorious Sir Francis Drake, knighted by Queen Elizabeth for the riches he brought to her from plundered Spanish ports and galleons. Jones took no plunder. He even failed to receive much of the regular naval portion of the prize money from captured ships.

Franco gave him a converted merchant ship for a flagship and then in surprise acclaimed him for defeating in his Bon Homme Richard, named for Benjamin Franklin, the much superior Serapis and capturing her while his own ship was sinking. She voted him a medal and the king bestowed upon him the sword and cross of the Order of Military Merit. Later he was voted a pension, which was never paid. Russia, for whom he fought valiantly and successfully against the Turks, gave him nothing, so far as history shows.

As for the United States, he was promised command of a new 74-gun ship of the line, but he never set foot on her deck or any other fighting ship of the American navy during the last four years of the war. In 1787, five years before his death, Congress voted him a gold medal, and 118 years later we brought his body to this country for honored rest in the naval cemetery. France was in the throes of the great revolution when Jones died and was obscurely buried in Paris, but the United States was not, nor was there anything during that more than a century of neglect by which it could be justified. John Paul Jones, while the most conspicuous, is not the only great hero in our national life who might be cited as proof that "republics are ungrateful." So are monarchies and empires, as his case makes plain. We were not ungrateful, even though our demonstration of honor was long delayed. We were merely neglectful, which, next to selfishness, is the greatest of mass human failings. Even while we long neglected his body, we took constant inspiration from his words and deeds, and perhaps, were he alive to decide, that would please him most.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Painting traffic markers, as it moves along the street or highway, a motorcycle with a sidecar is being used for painting and renewing the white road lines in an English city. Inside the sidecar is a tank from which a canvas-covered wheel takes up the paint. The wheel is lowered on the road and rotated by the movement of the cycle, thus spreading a white line. YOUR MOTOR runs lots hotter in Summer. That's why you must have oil that maintains high film strength under extreme temperatures to get safe lubrication. Otherwise, the lubricating film ruptures and the bearings and cylinders suffer damaging wear.

Plain mineral oils have little film strength and oils over-refined by new cleansing methods have even less. As motor heat goes up, these oils rapidly lose film strength.

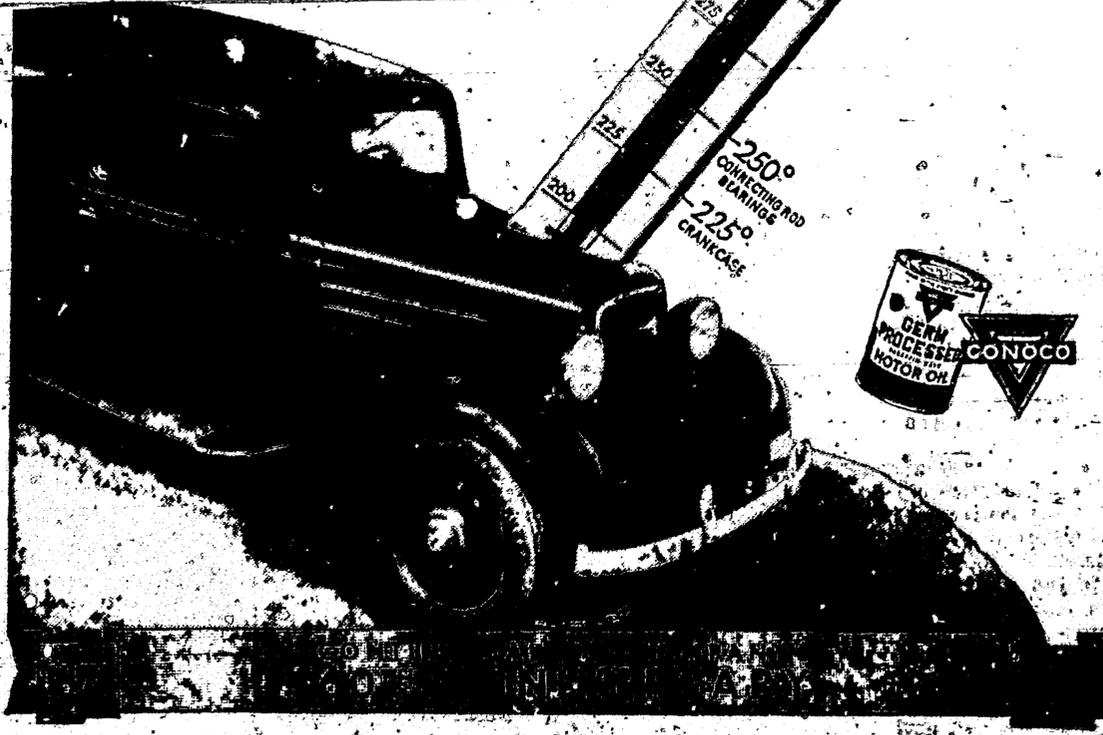

You'll get better motor protection with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil. Timken machine tests prove that it has 2 to 4 times greater film strength than any plain mineral oil and that heat above 225° does not lessen this advantage.

More proof—supervised road tests were made in identical cars fitted with the new alloy metal bearings used in many 1935 cars. The bearings lubricated with a high-quality plain mineral oil showed 45% more wear than those lubricated with Conoco Germ Processed, the first alloyed oil.

You'll be certain your motor is safely lubricated even at high temperatures if you say "O. K.—Drain" and fill with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil—the oil with the "Hidden Quart" that stays up in your motor and never drains away.

Republicans Passed 63% Unconstitutional Laws

Denouncing "efforts to sell the people on the idea that the Democrats have never had a proper regard for the Constitution," Congressman John W. Flannagan, Jr., of Virginia, suggested on the House that "the record speak."

"During our 146 years of national life," he summarized from the record, "the Supreme Court has declared 67 acts of Congress unconstitutional. Only 20, or around 29 per cent, were passed by Democratic Congresses. On the other hand, Republican Congresses, whom we are now told are the guardians of the Constitution, passed 42, or about 63 per cent, four were passed by a Republican Senate and Democratic House and one by the first Congress, which was non-partisan. (The Republican party first gained control in 1861 or 74 years ago.)"

"Now that is a pretty good record, especially when you consider the fact that we have had 38 Democratic Congresses, 27 Republican Congresses, one Whig Congress, one non-partisan and 12 Congresses when Senate and House were controlled by different parties."

After citing all of the 67 laws which have been declared unconstitutional and the dates, the Virginia continued:

"During the term of office of the greatest Republican President, the immortal Abraham Lincoln, when he had a Republican Senate and a Republican House, seven acts were passed that were later declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

"Theodore Roosevelt made a great President in spite of the fact that his Constitutional record may frighten present-day self-appointed defenders of the Constitution. During his administration, with a Republican Senate and a Republican House, six laws were passed which were declared unconstitutional by a Republican Supreme Court.

"In President Grant's administration 10 unconstitutional acts were passed by Congresses which were strongly Republican in both Senate and House and two others were declared unconstitutional that were passed by Congresses with a Republican Senate and a Democratic House.

"During General Grant's term alone a Republican Senate and a Republican House passed one-half as many unconstitutional acts as have every Democratic House we have had since the birth of the Nation."

MRS. E. F. GONZALES, Secretary of State

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 1

A SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION PROPOSING TO AMEND SECTION FIVE OF ARTICLE EIGHT OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW MEXICO AND FIXING THE TIME FOR HOLDING AN ELECTION THEREON.

Senate Joint Resolution No. 5; Approved January 31, 1935.

Be It Resolved by the Legislature of the State of New Mexico:

Section 1. That it is hereby proposed to amend Section five of Article Eight of the Constitution of the State of New Mexico, said Article being entitled, "Taxation and Revenue," so as to read as follows:

"Section 5. The legislature may exempt from taxation, except for special assessments, and/or except from assessments and levies for bond issues, the homestead of each head of a family, or widow, and of every honorably discharged soldier, sailor, marine and army nurse, who served in the armed forces of the United States at any time during the period in which the United States was regularly and officially engaged in any war, in the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars; provided that only one exemption may be claimed by any one person. Provided, further, that in every case where exemption is claimed on the ground of the claimant having served with the military or naval forces of the United States as aforesaid, the burden of proving actual and bona fide ownership of such property, upon which exemption is claimed, shall be upon the claimant.

Section 2. In the event of the passage and approval of the foregoing amendment the same shall be submitted to the people at the general election in November, 1936; provided, however, that in case a special election is held prior to 1936 the same shall be submitted to the people at such election.

"Section 6. (a) A state board of Education is hereby created, to consist of five members, who shall be appointed by the Governor and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The terms of office of the members of said Board shall be six years; but the members of said Board first appointed hereunder shall be appointed to hold their offices for terms as follows: two for two years, one for four years, and two for six years, from and after January 1, 1937.

(b) Members of said Board may be removed from office only by judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction, for such causes and under such procedure as may hereafter be provided by law. Vacancies in the membership of said Board shall be filled for the unexpired term by the Governor. The Commissioner of Education shall be the Secretary and chief executive officer of said Board, and shall perform such duties as said Board may direct, and may be invested with such of the powers and duties of said Board as said Board may by regulation provide.

(d) The Commissioner of Education shall, during his term of office, reside and he and said board shall keep the public records, books, papers and seal of said Board at the seat of government.

(e) The Legislature may provide for District or other school officers subordinate to said Board.

(f) The provisions of Article V of the Constitution of the State of New Mexico insofar as same relate to the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction are hereby repealed.

(g) This amendment shall become effective January 1, after its adoption, but it shall not affect the term of office or the compensation of the Superintendent of Public Instruction elected at a General Election held prior to or concurrently with the election at which this amendment may be adopted, but said officer shall during the remainder of his term of office be subject to all the remaining provisions hereof.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 3

Lobby Committees Quarrel Over Magnate Hopson—President Signs Social Security Act—Tri-Power Conference on Italo-Ethiopian Question.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union

WILL ROGERS, famous actor and humorist, and Wiley Post, one of the best known fliers in the world, crashed to their death in a plane while flying from Fairbanks to Point Barrow, Alaska. The two men, close friends, had been enjoying an aerial vacation trip in the North, and Post intended later to fly to Asia. News of the fatal accident was sent to Seattle by Sergt. Stanley K. Morgan, signal corps operator at Point Barrow. He said he had recovered the bodies from the wreckage.

RIVALRY in the matter of publicity, the house and senate committees on the activities of lobbyists got into a tangle that certainly didn't enhance their dignity. Howard C. Hopson, the long sought head of the Associated Gas and Electric Utilities system, permitted the emissary of the house committee to find him, and Senator Hugo Black flew into a rage and had his committee threaten Hopson with contempt proceedings unless he appeared before it. Chairman O'Connor of the house body was angered by this and declared: "Hopson is in my custody. I've got him. Nobody else has got him. Nobody else is going to get him."

H. C. Hopson

The elusive, chunky utilities magnate told the house committee about his various companies and related the ages of his travels while he was being sought. But he politely refused to answer questions concerning the sources and amount of his income. He testified that he "believed" the Associated Gas system had spent "eight or nine hundred thousand dollars" in opposition to the Wheeler-Hayburn utility control bill.

"That's just a small fraction of the $300,000,000 equity in our companies which would be destroyed if the bill becomes law and remains law," he declared.

To one question by Cox of Georgia Hopson replied: "I resent that inquiry. No gentleman would have asked it." Whereupon Cox threatened to kick him out of the room unless he withdrew the answer, and Hopson mildly withdrew it.

O'Connor introduced in the house a resolution that severely rebuked the senate, but it dropped when word came that Senator Black would want to take Hopson after O'Connor's bunch was through with him. However, it gave opportunity for a ridiculous quarrel between the New Yorker and Hanklin of Texas.

Late in the day Hopson calmly walked into Black's committee room and asked: "Is some one here looking for me?" Black and his committee then questioned the utilities man for an hour or two and got mighty little out of him except smooth answers that made the chairman quite furious. At that time both Hopson and his attorney had been served with contempt citation.

GOV. MARTIN L. DAVEY of Ohio has "pulled a fast one" on the Republicans in behalf of the Democratic party. The O. O. P. leaders were demanding a state-wide election in Ohio to fill the vacancy created by the death of Representative at Large Charles V. Trax, believing the result would demonstrate, even more clearly than did the Rhode Island election, the waning strength of the administration. But Governor Davey went to Washington and consulted with President Roosevelt and then announced that he would not call and could not be compelled to call a special congressional election until next year. His declared reason was the cost, but fear of party defeat. Court action to force the calling of the election has been started but Davey says there is no restriction of his discretion in fixing the time of the election.

SURROUNDED by a group of notables and in the glare of photographers' flashlights, President Roosevelt put his signature on the social security act, of which he said: "If the senate and house of representatives in this long and arduous session had done nothing more than pass this bill the session would be regarded as historic for all time."

Among those who were present were Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York and Representative John Lewis of Maryland, who jointly drafted the bill; Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who had a hand in its making; and Senators Pat Harrison, William King and Edward P. Costigan.

In a talk intended for reproduction on the sound screens of the country, the President said: "This social security measure gives at least some protection to 30,000,000 of our citizens, who will reap direct benefits through unemployment compensation, through old age pensions and through increased services for the protection of children and the prevention of ill health."

"We can never insure 100 per cent of the population against 100 per cent of the hazards and vicissitudes of life but we have tried to frame a law which will give some measure of protection to the average citizen and to his family against the loss of a job and against poverty-ridden old age.

"This law, too, represents a cornerstone in a structure which is being built but is by no means complete—a structure intended to lessen the force of possible future depressions, to act as a protection to future administrations of the government against the necessity of going deeply into debt to furnish relief to the needy—a law to flatten out the peaks and valleys of deflation and of inflation—in other words a law that will take care of human needs and at the same time provide for the United States an economic structure of vastly greater soundness."

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN of England, Premier Pierre Laval of France and Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy met in Paris, as arranged, to see if they couldn't devise a way to avert the Italo-Ethiopian war, due to begin in September. Eden had a plan all prepared and after outlining it to Laval he laid it before Baron Aloisi. The latter, of course, had no power to assent but was compelled to submit the proposals to Premier Mussolini.

That Mr. Duce would accept it without change was considered unlikely, but it formed a basis for discussion. According to the best information, the Eden plan embraced these chief points:

1. Important economic concessions for Italy in Ethiopia.
  2. A proposal that Italy be given the right to colonize and exploit rich, sparsely inhabited portions of the Ethiopian uplands probably under a League of Nations mandate as is provided for former German colonies in article XXII of the League of Nations covenant.
  3. The offer of an outlet direct to the sea for Ethiopia, as a measure of compensation for its concessions.
- It was understood in Paris that Mussolini still demanded what would amount to a mandate over Ethiopia so that he would have political as well as economic control over the country. This Great Britain does not like, and France is rather on the fence. The British insist that in any case there must be an immediate showdown. One correspondent said if Great Britain adhered to the policy at which Eden hinted in his conversation with Laval, it would mean either dissolution of the League of Nations or else collective sanctions against Mussolini, involving the risk of a European war.

NOBODY liked the new tax bill that congress was working on, and the senate finance committee had hard work making up its mind as to the form it would recommend. First it altered almost every provision of the bill passed by the house and changed it from a "soak the rich" measure to one which would soak practically every one. This was done by lowering personal income tax exemptions and starting the surtax increases at $3,000 instead of $5,000. The latter feature was proposed by Senator La Follette and was adopted to keep him in line. Also, the inheritance taxes which President Roosevelt had asked for were eliminated.

Protests against increasing the taxes on little incomes came immediately from senators, representatives and the country at large. Senators Borah of Idaho and Norris of Nebraska were among the "independents" who expressed their disapproval. Mr. Borah especially was vocal in opposition.

Families with these small incomes are now paying more than their proportionate share of taxes and at the same time are facing higher prices for food, clothes, fuel and rent," he said.

So the committee suddenly reversed itself abruptly, rejected the La Follette plan by a vote of 8 to 7. The bill which the committee reported was passed by the senate by a vote of 57 to 22. It contains new provisions to compensate for those eliminated from the house bill and the estimated revenue is only $1,000,000 less. This is divided in the senate bill as follows:

Graduated corporation income tax	$ 80,000,000
Corporate excess profits and capital stock taxes	15,000,000
Inter-corporate dividend taxes	15,000,000
Increased estate taxes with related gift taxes	100,000,000
Increased surtax on income in excess of $1,000,000	1,000,000
Total	$215,000,000

The bill thus more closely follows the demands of President Roosevelt than the house measure.

FIFTY commissioners representing the Methodist Episcopal church, the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and the Methodist Protestant church have been in session in Evanston, Ill., and have agreed upon a form of union that is to be submitted to the general conferences of the three churches and, if ratified by them, to all the annual conferences. The new organization, it was agreed, would be called the United Methodist church and would consist of six jurisdictional or regional conferences.

FARMERS who believe that their individual rights are being encroached upon by the administration's agricultural policies are offered a chance to get together by the organization and incorporation in Chicago of the Farmers' Independent Council of America. Dan E. Casement, a farmer of Manhattan, Kan., is president of the body. Stanley E. Morse, South Carolina farmer and consulting agriculturist, is executive vice president and Chris J. Abbott, Nebraska stockman and farmer, and Clyde O. Patterson, Illinois Jersey breeder, were incorporators. Dr. Charles W. Burkett, agricultural authority of New York and formerly director of the K. A. agricultural experiment station, and L. O. Tolles, farmer and past master of the Connecticut State Grange, are other vice presidents of the council, and Dr. E. V. Wilcox, representative of the Country Gentleman, District of Columbia, is secretary-treasurer; Fred L. Crawford, Michigan congressman and farm owner; E. E. Dorsett, farmer and past master Pennsylvania State Grange, and Kurt Greenwald, farm manager and agricultural engineer, New York, are directors.

"To me there is, but one issue, whether we are going to have a constitutional government or have a dictatorial regime," said Charles E. Collins, Colorado cattleman and president of the American National Live Stock association, regional vice president of the new organization.

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace has changed his mind about the reduction of wheat acreage for 1933. Instead of asking the farmers for a cut of 15 per cent, as was announced recently, the figure is now placed at 5 per cent.

Wallace told reporters, that the change was decided upon after the government's August 1 survey of crop conditions indicated that total wheat production this year would amount to only 628,000,000 bushels as compared with domestic requirement of 635,000,000 bushels.

The step was taken, he asserted, to assure ample supplies for domestic consumers. He said that it was expected to place the country in a "strengthened position" in the export market. He added the change in policy will not result in any marked reduction in benefit payment to farmers. He did not say what the exact reductions in the payments would amount to.

AAA officials estimated that approximately 52,000,000 acres would be placed under contract this year. They asserted that the government is given "adequate powers" to deal with the situation if a bumper wheat harvest should result in 1933.

WHEN the President's social security bill was finally enacted into law, the senate adopting the conference report already agreed to by the house, probably many thousands of men and women all over the country began figuring on the pensions they would receive under its terms. It is unlikely that one in a thousand has any clear idea of how the new program's pension system will work, so we reprint here a neat summary prepared by the Associated Press showing its operation as applied to "Bill Jones":

"Suppose young Bill is twenty when the law goes into effect and makes an average monthly salary of $100 until he is sixty-five. He will get a monthly pension, until his death, of $37.75.

"In detail, here is what will happen to him: "In the calendar years 1937, 1938, and 1939 he will pay a salary tax of 1 per cent, or a total of $30 for the three years. In 1940, 1941, 1942 he will pay 1 1/2 per cent, or $45. In 1943, 1944, and 1945 the tax will be 2 per cent, or $72. In 1946, 1947, and 1948 the tax will be 2 1/2 per cent, or $90. From 1949 to 1951, inclusive, the tax will be 3 per cent, or a total of $135.

"Thus, in 45 years, Bill Jones will have paid in $1,440. All the time his employer will have been matching his tax payments, so the total paid to the federal treasury will be $2,880.

"At sixty-five Bill Jones can expect to live perhaps 10 years more. If he does, he will get back $4,450.

"When Bill Jones dies this is what will happen: "His average annual salary will be multiplied by the number of years he paid taxes. In other words, if he dies after he has paid taxes for 45 years, $1,440 will be multiplied by 45—giving a total of $64,800. Arbitrarily, the bill stipulates that Bill Jones' estate shall be entitled to 8 1/2 per cent of that, or $5,400—less any amount he received in pensions before he died.

"If Jones dies before he gets back $1,500 in pensions, what he actually received is deducted from $1,500 and the remainder paid to his heirs. If he lives until he gets back all of the $1,500 and more, his heirs get nothing.

POULTRY FACTS

USE LAYING FEED FOR SUMMER EGGS

Safest Way to Make Profit, Poultry Man Says

By Leo Tradd, Extension Poultryman, Purdue University—WNU Service. If the healthy flocks of laying hens receives a balanced laying ration through the summer, they should return a profit. To discontinue the feeding of a laying mash would cause most of the flock to go out of production and then into a molt. The feeding of a laying ration will also make it easier and more practical to select the poor producers.

Since most farm flocks did not lay many eggs last fall or early winter, it is possible that the same flocks will give a slightly heavier production this summer if they are properly fed and have good care. Records from farm flock owners co-operating with the Purdue poultry extension division show that it is possible to make a good profit from summer egg production, provided the flocks get a balanced ration and the poor producers are eliminated.

When the flock is properly fed it is not difficult to select the poor layers. They are the first to go out of production during the summer and will soon be molting. If some of the birds are to be kept over for the second year, it is wise to make those selections during the summer.

Usually the same ration which was fed during the winter is also used to keep up summer production. The one exception is that the birds will consume less grain during the warm weather. One should not forget to provide oyster shells and plenty of clean fresh water.

Pullets Need Green Crop When Released on Range

Wherever possible a succulent green crop should be available for the pullets when they are released on the range, and the pasture preserved and utilized to the best advantage throughout the summer. The ideal system would be to confine the birds in a fairly small section at a time and move them periodically throughout the summer, keeping the crop cut or grazed by live stock in advance, so that only fresh new growth would be available to the pullets. In practice, a similar result can be achieved by running a two-year crop rotation so that the land is free of poultry every other year. Within the area allotted for the year's use the hedges may be moved to a new position several times during the summer. If this is not feasible, then the feed hoppers should be moved, say 15 or 20 feet, every few days, so as to induce the birds to spread over the entire field, instead of congregating on one spot.

Give Hens Wet Mash

If the poultry flock has a late-summer laying slump, feed a wet mash. If skim milk is available use it in the regular laying mash, or use semi-solid buttermilk at the rate of two pounds to the hundred of mash. The hens should have only what they will clean up in 20 minutes. It is best to feed the wet crumbly mash late in the afternoon, just before the night feeding of grain. At the New York State college two pounds of tobacco dust is added to each 100 pounds of mash as an aid to control intestinal worms and coccidiosis. Tobacco dust should be guaranteed to contain 1 per cent of nicotine sulphate. When the mash is being fed no change should be made in the regular routine of flock management.

Have Sufficient Nests

A sufficient number of nests in the laying house is necessary to prevent crowding on the nests which may result in broken or soiled eggs, says H. C. Henderson, poultry extension specialist of the Pennsylvania State college. In a recent survey conducted in one of the Pennsylvania counties it was found that most of the producers were providing too few nests for their birds. Forty-four per cent of producers were using 10 to 12 nests for 100 birds, 23 per cent were using 13 to 15 nests, and 12 per cent were using over 20 nests.

With the Poultrymen

Culling hens should begin early.

It takes from eight to eleven months to properly develop and finish a capon.

Since young turkeys grow faster than young chickens, their feeds should be higher in protein.

Limbberneck is caused by the birds eating decayed animal or vegetable material which is highly poisonous to them.

More harm is done to chicks by high brooder temperatures than by low temperatures, according to a noted poultry authority.

Egg producers whose product is trucked into New York are ordered to pay an impost of seven cents a crate to the teamsters' union.

Comic Opera Tactics in Use in China's Civil War

Most of the comic opera tactics that characterized Chinese warfare a few years ago still continue. The Fukien rebellion was reputedly put down by a bribe rather than by force of arms. The Sun-Ma war in Ninghsia province of Inner Mongolia for months alternated between schoolboy arguments over the telegraph to Nanking and surprise attacks on "marching" armies.

Umbrellas and "big swords" are equally conspicuous in the equipment of a soldier, and the men can never be sure in the morning on which side of the battlefield they will be fighting by sunset.

In at least one of China's numerous fighting areas, however, such methods are definitely discouraged and the result has been a new kind of civil war for China. In Kiangsu province the government troops are at present engaged in a tremendous drive against the Communist regime, the third and largest drive in nearly seven years.

Except when relieved by an occasional irrepressible Chinese touch, the fighters are doing their work in a way that would be a credit to many a better equipped and better trained modern foreign army.—Stuart Lillico in Current History.

Quick, Pleasant Successful Elimination

Let's be frank—there's only one way for your body to rid itself of the waste material that causes acidity, gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts. ### SYNOPSIS

The Boston Lawrences came to Clippersville at the beginning of the gold rush, but the holdings of the family have shrunk to a small farm, and the old family home in Clippersville. The family consists of Phil, the oldest, Gail, Edith, Sam, who is in school, and seven-year-old Ariel, something of a problem. Phil is fascinated by "the terrible" Lily Cass, Young Van Murchison, scion of a wealthy family, returns from Yale, and Gail has visions, through marriage, with him, of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's friend, has the run of the house, and Gail has a week-end with the Chipps, his uncle and aunt. She is received coldly. At a roadhouse Gail sees Ariel, at midnight. Next day Ariel admits she was at the place, and displays no remorse. Dick Stebbins proves himself a true friend of the Lawrences, and Gail realizes that she loves him and not Van. Stebbins and Ariel elope, according to a note left by the girl. Phil and Lily are married and Lily and her three children make their home in the Lawrence house. Edith is fatally injured in an accident for which Lily is innocent responsible. After Edith's death Gail passes through a period of heartbreaking grief. Always a great reader, she begins to write and her first story is accepted by the editor of a leading magazine. The cotton gin for her fortune is swept away, and Van faces the world almost penniless.

"Is this you with me, Edith?" her soul would ask as she stamped and penciled books and slips, smiled and answered at the library desk. "Are you helping me at last?"

And then, a week after the picnic, came a Sunday of deluge, when Phil and Lily went to a movie and Gail took the three little boys for a wet walk. The older two came back contentedly enough to blocks and crayons, but little Danny was almost too tired for luncheon, and quite too tired to play, and at three o'clock Gail sponged his sticky little face and put him down on her bed, with her old woolly dog, for a nap.

"Rit-rat," she said to him affectionately, straightening her big room, putting another log of wood—wood from the famous old Lawrence pine that had come down only a few weeks ago—into the little stove.

"Wif-waf," Danny said affectionately returned.

Gail closed bureau drawers, straightened books on the shelves. She carried a finished, fat, satin-bound microscope blue blanket into Lily's room, stood looking thoughtfully at Lily's upper bureau drawer that was already filling with bands and knitted jackets for Phil's, Junior.

In the hall, she called down to the sitting room. "Wolfe! Everything all right?"

"I'm down here, Sam called back. "I'm building these kids a cattle barn!"

Gail went back into her room. Little Rit-rat, was asleep, looking like a toulie-headed angel. The room was warm and orderly and still, rain tapped, tapped, tapped tirelessly on the tin of the kitchen roof. Clippersville was buried in wet tree tops, in the silent Sunday afternoon; here and there blue smoke struggled up above the oaks and elms and pear branches.

On Gail's desk lay a heap of paper—large sheets—and her own green fountain pen. She sat down, dreamy eyes fixed on space, the pen's smooth butt pressed against her cheek.

"I don't know why I shouldn't write stories," she mused, half aloud, "I've read enough!"

"Ede, wouldn't it be funny if I were really to be a writer some day?"

"To the dear memory of my sister, Edith Parington Lawrence."

The pen touched the paper; began to move.

Danny slept deeply, luxuriously, in the center of the big bed, the old woolly dog tightly clasped to his shabby little underwaist. Rain streamed steadily down the high windows, and dreamed on the tin roof, the high feathery new tops of the trees below moved gently in the constant onslaught of the warm drops. Wood fell in the stove, and flamed up and was quiet again.

After awhile Gail threw a covered sheet aside, numbered a second, covered that. She pushed back her hair; her face was pale, her eyes aching. The scratching of the pen recommenced. The clock struck, struck again. Danny slept on, and the rain continued to fall.

But at six, when Lily was home and the boys in their supper in the kitchen, a hot, golden sunset suddenly broke over the world. Gail walked up past the old stables, and saw the light shining red on the trunks of the oaks and on the village and on the woodpile, and straining itself through the screen of the young grape-leaves. Everything sparkled and glittered, scents heavy, wet and delicious crowded the air; the kitchen table, that had been on the pump ever since Gail could remember anything at all, was a dimmed light, and the dry yellow balls of chickens, cheeping and tumbling after their officious mother, across the wet grass, were almost more of beauty than the human heart could bear.

She reflected that she would do her full share of the dinner work and of the dishwashing afterward. Then she would take a bath, and get into pajamas and wrapper, and arrange shoes and dress for the library day tomorrow, and carry her week's laundry—for this was Sunday night—out to the big basket in the upper back hall.

And she lighted her desk lamp, and drew those five scribbled pages toward her, and in a silence and solitude of her own room read them once again, and found them good.

The loss of Ariel, the deeper blow of Dick's loss, Phil's marriage had been earthquake, the unbearable last burden after the burdened years. And beyond that had been the consuming flame of Edith's going, the unthinkable thing, the death of something that was herself, that was her own life.

The earthquake and the fire. And now into Gail's heart comfort came creeping back, new interest, new hope—the still small voice of the Lord.

Thus began the new life, in the unchanged setting of the old. Gail did not know whether what she dreamed and what she wrote was good or bad, nor did she care. It had to come, and the coming was a sort of ecstatic beating—a giving of life.

In April she had the letter: a dozen typewritten lines:

"Dear Miss Lawrence:

"The readers report that, delightful as this story is, it is not quite in our tone." The feeling of the Atlantic is that, when a tale is as intimately true to life as this is of yours, the tone is surely a tone for the Atlantic to adopt.

"It gives us much pleasure to accept so admirable a story.

"Very truly yours,
"The Editor."

The dull old grimy kitchen swooped and soared about her. She had been hulling strawberries, putting every twelfth one into Danny's expectant mouth, open at her knee.

"I Don't Know Why I Shouldn't Write Stories."

The letter from the Atlantic had strawberry juice on it; so matter, it shook like a tacking sail as she read it.

"Phil! Look here a minute."

"My-Gawd!" said Phil, upon reading it.

"Read it, Sam!"

"When you write a story!" Sam said, incredulous.

"Oh, Phil, you don't suppose—you don't suppose I'm—I'm going to write!"

"Well, for heaven's sakes," Lily said patiently, "the way you carried on, I thought some one was dead!"

Gail sat at the table, her elbows resting on the worn oilcloth, pressing the crushed letter against her face. She felt as if her body had taken wings and was about to lift itself up into the air.

"Phil Lawrence," she whispered presently, taking her hands down, regarding him seriously. "I've sold a story!"

He looked at her kindly from the old rocker. Lily tried easily now, and had established her amiable person wearily on his knee. Phil's eyelased eyes looked over Lily's head.

"Bout time something good came to you, Gail," Phil said simply. His sister felt the words to be an accolade.

"Oh, I can't believe it—it isn't me!" Gail whispered. "It's—the Lawrence luck, coming back!"

She got up and carried the glass dish of strawberries into the dining room. She lifted the cover of the pail, and poured the lightly tumbling hulls down into it. Then with a damp old rag she wiped the oilcloth, afterward at the sink rubbing her finger tips with a withered half lemon. And all the time the juice-stained letter blazed in the breast pocket of her old midshipman's blouse like a burning jewel.

CHAPTER X

So came Clippersville to be proud of another Lucky Lawrence. A thousand pleasant little episodes, as the summer wore along, told Gail that she was famous and that her old friends and neighbors were glad.

The Challenge ran her picture with a flattering article. Patrons of the old library, coming and going in the hot afternoons, smiled at her over the broad desk top.

"Ticked to death to hear we have an authoress!" the women whispered, nodding and smiling. Gail would smile brightly, joyfully, in return. She saw them all differently now, these busy, strained young mothers, with their babies in rompers and sun-bonnets; these shapeless big middle-aged women with their corsets showing under their dirty volles. They were her marionettes now; they moved to the strings in her fingers.

Walking home, in the burning bright sunset, she looked at the hills that ringed sleepy Clippersville, those gauzy, transparent hills that were the color of the sky all summer long. She looked at the great oaks and the locusts that lined the Calle, and the magnolias and peppers on the lawns. She looked at the stout women in cottage gardens; women with hair wetly, smoothly dressed; women watering marigolds and wallflowers in the afternoon shadows. They were all beautiful to her.

If Lily telephoned her, and she had to stop in the market, she saw the market or the fruit store or the five-and-ten with new eyes. Their witted wares, their wearied salesfolk, their anxious bargainers were newly dramatic. When some shabby woman from Thomas Street hill, with a fat, drooping baby on her arm, and another stumbling and whining at her knee, priced the pork chops, priced the chopped beef, looked worriedly from one to the other, Gail felt her heart go out on a rush of love and sympathy for all poverty—all motherhood. She did not know why.

She had letters from persons, far away unknown persons, praising her story when it was published. Gail answered them simply, unable to believe the words that flowed from her fountain pen. She could presently write:

"If you liked 'Simply Impossible,' I hope you will like 'Post Office Closed Tomorrow.' It is coming out very soon in some magazine."

The great Barnes Rutherford, III, idling in a palace on the Maine coast, wrote her. He, sixty-five, the dean of the greatest profession of all, could find time to write to a little Clippersville girl, and tell her he thought "Simply Impossible" was a good story!

Even more touching were the literary folk of Clippersville. It had so many! Vain, discarded men and women, living in shabby little gaslight cottages smothered in dusty vines, suddenly appeared on all sides, and proudly claimed kinship with the writer. Gail accepted their condolences graciously; she knew that she was not of their ilk.

Miss Libby Gatty had sold a story to the Black Cat twenty-five years ago; a story that one of the judges had thought deserved first prize. Miss Lou Bennett had known Edward Townsend, who wrote the Chimmie Fadden stories, when she had been in New York with her uncle in 1897, and had met Archibald Clavering Gunter.

"Oh, my uncle 'knew everybody!'" said Miss Lou, tossing her withered head, growing spitchy in the face at the mere exciting memory. "He knew Frank Munsey; he knew everybody!"

Tottering old Kane Rissette had had quite a literary experience as one of the publicity agents of a big railroad in the days before he drank so hard. He lived with a widowed sister now, and Miss Rissette Riggs kept him in order. He delighted in remembering all the literary lights who had come into the office of the railroad magazine and paid their written, and sometimes rhymed, tributes to California.

Then there were the poets, most of them women. They tremblingly brought out for Gail's inspection their hoarded clippings, discolored strips of newspaper or magazine pages. Mrs. J. J. J. who ran a boarding house down by the flour mills, had once won a twenty-five-dollar prize for a poem called, "Cloud Voices."

"Oh, my dear!" said Hatty Schenck, who wrote women's club news for the newspapers all over the state, and nature poems beginning "Hail!" and whose pen name was "Lillian Lynae." "Oh, my dear, is there any moment in the world like the one when you know you're getting it, you're in the mood! For, you know, I can't always write, Hatty rushed on. "Sometimes . . ."

There were times when she just felt dull and blank, as if she'd never written a line. And then, suddenly, perhaps when she was in the kitchen with Mamma . . .

"Oh, I know!" Gail would sympathize, with dancing eyes.

And all the time, deep within her, she knew that she and Hatty were not alike. She knew that she could lean down to Hatty, but that Hatty could never reach up to her. It made her humble, and sometimes, when it came to her with a fresh pang of realization that only Edith could have shared all this truly, that only Edith would have appreciated it—indeed, that she owed much of it to the poem-loving, book-loving, truth-loving little sister—she felt a deeper sorrow even than the younger sorrow had been.

Lily sat sewing or idling on the side porch in the afternoon, and the three little boys worked in the wide yard. Sam and Phil had carried their work as far as trimming off the dry limbs of oaks and peppers; the shorn trees sent rich lacy shadows across the new sheen of the grass.

"Lily, what's for dinner?" Gail would ask out of a dream.

"The cream puffs and corn and the peaches, and there's a lot of cold rice. I thought maybe 'peached eggs.'"

"It's too hot for meat."

Silence again.

"Thinking up another story, Gail?"

"Well, there's one kind of teasing me."

"I can kinder tell by your eyes when you're thinking of your sister," Lily said once.

"Edith?"

"Well, I was thinking of Ariel, then."

"Ariel . . ." Gail always spoke the name on a long sigh. "She couldn't wait," she would muse aloud sorrowfully. "Doesn't it seem funny, Lily, for a person to go away—just as if she had died—and never to write—never to send any word?"

GOOD LADDERS WILL CUT LOSS BY RURAL FIRES

"A good ladder on every farm would help a lot in lessening losses from rural fires," says David J. Price, of the United States Department of Agriculture, in enumerating small but important precautions which rural residents often overlook. Doctor Price's job is to find out all he can about fire prevention and fire fighting and pass the information along to the people of this country. Precautions such as a handy ladder, he points out, would help to prevent and control many fires in rural communities.

Speed is essential in fire fighting, and a convenient ladder makes any roof fire quickly accessible. Frequent use of ladders to inspect chimneys and flues might prevent many unnecessary losses, especially during the winter when fires are going.

Among precautions other than convenient ladders are care in handling gasoline and kerosene, especially in kindling fires; careful disposal of hot ashes; care in using open fires and matches and in burning rubbish; repair of stoves, furnaces, fireplaces, flues, and chimneys not in first-class condition; and frequent inspection of electrical wiring and electrical appliances.

Observance of simple precautions, adequate water-storage facilities on every farm and at every rural home, with a well-manned fire truck at every cross-roads hamlet, is the Utopia at which Doctor Price hopes rural America will arrive.

In the meantime, one of his suggestions is, to paraphrase, "A farm fireman's best friend is his ladder."

Accepting a Job

A woman whose dignified and respected husband was among the unemployed but who, like Mr. Mcenaber, was expecting something to turn up momentarily, was advised by him each time he left home for the day, that if an offer for any sort of a position at all should come for him to wire an acceptance with speed. And when at long last the wire did come from Washington the wife was so thoroughly imbued with thrift that she couldn't bear to send only a one-word answer like "Yes" or "Accept" to the "Will you accept?" etc. message, so she sent the following:

"Yes thank you ever so much—love and kisses."—Miss Ann Thorpe, in the Kansas City Star.

Chevrolet-3000-Mile Economy Run

Twenty-one and three-fourths miles to a gallon of gasoline, and 3000 miles on 3-4 quarts of oil, were the records registered by a stock Chevrolet Master de luxe sedan in a certified 3000-mile non-stop economy run staged in California.

The run was undertaken to learn the actual economy performance of the motor car under routine driving conditions such as encountered by the average vacationing driver.

The car was sealed by the Los Angeles deputy state sealer of weights and measures. The sealing operation included the crankcase and ignition.

The route taken in putting the mileage on the car included a jaunt into Sequoia National Park, elevation 8000 feet. At the opposite extreme was Death Valley where the car passed through heat of 110 degrees. Having in mind the fact that no fair test of a car's routine economy could be achieved without speed runs, the driver cruised the floor of famous Murco Dry Lake at the pace of nearly 80 miles an hour.

The Chevrolet came through the hard test with no mechanical difficulties whatsoever, registering an average economy performance of 21.76 miles to the gallon. When the crankcase was officially broken, only three and three-quarters quarts of oil were required to replenish the supply.

Sloans Move to Roswell

Carrizozo lost another of its leading families this week, for a few months at least, when Mr. and Mrs. Brack Sloan and children moved to Roswell for the winter. Educational and church societies, will miss Mrs. Sloan very much.

Last Friday night as Charles Dow, his sister Ethel and several other young people were driving toward the Mal Pais to attend a marshmallow roast, a cow ran across the road unexpectedly and was struck. Ethel's arms were sprained and her face was cut and bruised. Other occupants of the car were unhurt. The fender was torn off the car and the light broken.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Boughner and daughter Rhea, and son Leslie, came home last Sunday from a week's trip to the Grand Canyon, the Painted Desert, Petrified Forest and other interesting places.
