CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY SEPT. 27, 1935

NUMBER 17

Big Lincoln County Fair

Friday and Saturday Oct. 18-19. Free Barbecue Sat. at Noon

The Fair this year will be an event for the entire county and will be long remembered. Each town in the county will be represented by a committee and all proceeds will go into the treasury of the Fair Association, which is a permanent organization and for the whole county.

Entertainment will consist of Baseball, Softball and Basketball games; Prize fighting; a rodeo and cow pony races. Both days will be climaxed by a big dance at night.

And on Saturday at noon a big free barbecue will be served.

All kinds of exhibits including agricultural mining, home work of every description. Prizes awarded for each event and on each exhibit.

Program and committees will be announced in next week's paper.

All are invited to come to Carrizozo the 18th and 19th to help make this Fair the greatest in our history.

Methodist Sunday School Rally

Everybody is invited to come to the Methodist church at 10 o'clock Sunday morning to our fall Sunday school rally. A short program and special songs will be given; sponsors will be Mrs. F. L. Boughner, Superintendent and Mrs. Nettie Lemon, teacher of the Young Peoples' Class.

Promotions will be given to members of the different classes.

Woman's Club Notes

The first meeting of the Woman's Club of Carrizozo for the new season, was held at the home of Mrs. Carl E. Freeman with (seventy) 70 ladies present, Miss Thelma White was installed as First Vice-President, and responded by singing "Absent" in a most charming manner. A committee of ladies with Mrs. F. L. Boughner as chairman, was appointed to assist with the County Fair to be held October 18-19. The club voted to change the October meeting to Saturday October 19th if that date is convenient for the ladies at Fort Stanton who will be hostesses. Ten new members were reported.

After an interesting business session a gavel with appropriate inscriptions was presented to the club by Rachel Ann Young, club mascot and Mrs. C. W. Young, Junior past president.

The following program arranged by Mrs. Paul Mayer was presented:

1. Trio, "When I Grow too Old to Dream" Mesdames Young, Lemon, Clouse, Mrs. Kelley pianist.

To The Citizens of Lincoln County

We left Lincoln County so hurriedly that we were unable to prepare any statement for submission to the local press.

—We believed it would be more profitable to locate in a larger field, where we might be able to better employ an invested capital of over $60,000.00. Besides, the grass loans have been largely absorbed by Government and Semi-Government loan agencies.

We will be satisfied if we receive the kindness and support from the people in Eddy County that we have received from those of Lincoln County.

Personally, it had been my plan to make my permanent home in Carrizozo, and I planted and built accordingly. Leaving old friends, associates and the mountains of Lincoln County was not all "funny," and the roots did not all come out painlessly.

To those who rode with us through storm and sunshine for a greater part or all of eighteen years, we can only say you made it possible for us to survive the roughest financial seas this country has ever known. We are grateful, and your names are in our private "Hall of Fame."

To the Masonic Lodge, the I. O. O. F.—thank you for everything. To Comet Chapter No. 29, Order of the Eastern Star, you made it possible for me to write my name with those of the O. E. S. Immortals. Your page in my book of memory is long and wide.

To the Churches—when I think of the hard fight you have made to keep the "lower lights" burning so that those who would to do so might look to the "Beacon" I really feel that what Grandma Skinner said about me was correct.

To the Post at Ft. Stanton, we enjoyed a large volume of business from you, and we paid out at your location more than $1,000,000.00 cash, with never a "hitch." We feel kindly and grateful toward you.

To the Business Men's Club, I am proud to have sat at the head of your table for three years.

I have enjoyed my association and work with the Students of Carrizozo and Lincoln County, and never even thought of failing when I knew you were behind me. I commend to the attention of the Carrizozo schools and the people of Carrizozo, the Community Hall. This property has been of great benefit in the days past, and is too valuable to let go now.

To the School Teachers of Lincoln County, from the time we opened our bank in Carrizozo until we moved out, we always had from seventy-five to ninety per cent of your business, and we have loaned you a lot more money than your financial statements would warrant, but never a note of yours was lost during our eighteen years of business. Aside from dates, the writer never lost anything on a school teacher.

To one and all—Good-bye and the best of luck. We can not promise to remember you until the "sands of the desert grow cold" but we will not forget you until the sun quits coming from behind the mountains to take an early look at Carrizozo.

Very Respectfully,
E. M. Brickley, Cashier.
First National Bank of Carrizozo.

Miss Lorena Sager returned to Santa Fe today accompanied by her parents who will return home next week.

Dies from Blood Poison

H. R. Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Gray passed away last Wednesday at 5 p. m., from blood poison, which resulted when a splinter became imbedded in his thumb. He was 12 years of age and was ill only a short time.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at Angus, followed by burial in the Angus cemetery.

Sympathy is extended to the bereaved parents and other survivors.

Purcella-Skinner

Mr. Gordon Skinner of Carrizozo and Miss Verona Mae Purcella of San Patricio were united in marriage last Friday night at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. Edgar H. Johnson. The witnesses were Mr. and Mrs. Edwood Stearns of Nogal.

The groom is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Skinner and was born and reared in Carrizozo. He is interested with his brother-in-law Jack Payne in a mine near Nogal. The bride is very attractive and was born and reared at San Patricio. She is a sister to Mrs. Elwood Stearns. These young people have a wide circle of friends who join in wishing them happiness and prosperity.

Business men Hold Meeting

Discuss Bull Gap Dam and Highway No. 380 John Hall Presides

The Business Men's Club met at the Carrizozo Eating house Wednesday with twenty members present. As the president Mr. Brickley has departed for Carlsbad, Mr. John Hall, vice-president was in charge. Along with the pleasures of the occasion some important discussions took place.

The Bull Gap Dam was favored by everyone as the major subject and it would open up vast possibilities for the farmers of the county. The location is nine miles from Carrizozo near Oscura. The cost of the dam would be $150,000. It would give employment to 176 men for a year, or more, and would furnish water for the irrigation of 1,500 acres. Farms and homes for 100 families would result from this project.

A committee of Business men met with members of the Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce and Albuquerque has agreed to join our fight for Highway No. 380, which will open up this trade territory for the benefit of all concerned. Albuquerque is a New Mexico town, is near enough that 85 per cent of the business would go to that town with the building of a first class highway. No. 380 is one of the most important in the state and could easily be made into an all-the-year highway.

School Assemblies Different This Year

"The High School Assemblies this year will be conducted along different lines than that of last year. Superintendent Hall is doing all that is possible to make these Assembly Programs interesting and educational to Students and Patrons alike.

Assassination of Senator Long Stirs the Nation—Great Britain Ready to Take Sanctions Against Italy— Ickes Versus Hopkins

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union

Huey P. Long

HUEY P. LONG, United States senator and political dictator of Louisiana, is dead, the victim of an assassin's bullet. As he passed through a corridor of the state-house in Baton Rouge, where the legislature was passing more laws to solidify his control over the state, he was shot once through the body by Dr. Carl A. Weiss, Jr., of Baton Rouge, one of the "Kingfisher" political opponents. The assassin was immediately shot to death by the senator's ever present bodyguards.

The surgeons and physicians worked unceasingly to save Long, but his strength steadily waned and shortly after 4 o'clock Tuesday morning, about thirty hours after the shooting, he passed away. Long's body lay in state in the rotunda of the Capitol building while many thousands passed by the bier. The impressive funeral services were held on the front terrace and the dead senator was interred in a sunken garden of the Capitol grounds. Rev. Gerald T. K. Smith, the young minister who deserted a rich parish in Shreveport to follow Long, was the only speaker at the funeral. The only music was the song, "Every Man a King," played in minor key and dirge time by the State University band.

Though the man who killed Long was known as one of his political foes, the real story of the assassination was shrouded in uncertainty. Earl Christenberry, secretary of the late senator, declared that Long was murdered as a result of a conspiracy that a number of his enemies formed a "jury of death," and that Doctor Weiss was selected by lot to fire the fatal bullet. To those who are familiar with the conditions in Louisiana this story does not sound especially fantastic.

What will become of Long's "empire" is a question that agitates all his followers, and all the people of the state as well. For the present, it seemed likely, the members of the Long machine will sink their personal ambitions and try to hold the organization intact. It will be difficult for them to decide on a successor to the "Kingfisher" as their leader. Gov. O. K. Allen is considered too mild and peace-loving. Seymour Weiss—no relative of the assassin—treasurer of the Long organization, is the strongest man in the lot, but he always has drawn back from holding a public position. Alvin A. Ellender, speaker of the house, may be the man finally selected, though Lieut. Gov. James A. Noy is to the fore.

Political leaders of all parties expressed their deep regret for the assassination of Senator Long.

MUSKOLINI tacitly consented to the appointment of a committee of five nations by the League of Nations council to handle the Italo-Ethiopian imbroglio, and after protest agreed that Great Britain and France should be among the members of that body. The other members are Spain, Turkey and Poland.

Salvador de Madariaga

Soon after the assembly of the league opened its session, Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, electrified the gathering by an outspoken warning to Italy and France. He declared Great Britain recognized Italy's need for expansion and raw materials but would not admit those could not be obtained peaceably. Pounding the tribune, he said:

"Britain stands for steady collective resistance to all acts of unprovoked aggression." He paused, struck the tribune again, and repeated: "Steady collective resistance to all acts of unprovoked aggression."

Sir Samuel more than indicated that Great Britain was prepared to take sanctions against Italy in case of aggression provided all the other members of the league shared the risk; and if not, then England was prepared to fabricate herself from the continent. This seemed to put it up to Premier Laval of France, to choose between the friendship of Britain and that of Italy. Laval, meanwhile, was trying to persuade Mussolini to accept another plan he had devised and postponed his speech to the assembly.

Representatives of the Netherlands and Sweden were the first to support Hoare's position, announcing their countries would fulfill all obligations, including collective penalties. It was a member because a victim of aggression. In two speeches in Rome Mussolini gave indication that he would not be diverted from his purpose to conquer Ethiopia. Though in one he said "the Italian people want peace provided it is accompanied by justice," in the other he declared "we shall march straight on." The Ethiopian government announced that "telegrams from the northern frontier show that the Italians are making important troop movements on the Ethiopian and Eritrean frontier, indicating an early offensive against Ethiopia."

Accepting the advice of his "brain trust," which includes Everett A. Colson of the United States, Emperor Haile Selassie instructed his representatives in Geneva to reject all solutions thus far offered by the powers for settling the quarrel with Italy. These are a tripartite mandate over Ethiopia, as suggested by France, with the League of Nations guaranteeing Ethiopia's independence and territorial integrity; France's proposal for an Italian protectorate similar to that of the British in Iraq, and an international police force similar to the one that occupied the Saar.

PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATOR

ICKES and Work Progress Administrator Hopkins got into such a quarrel over the spending of the $4,000,000,000 fund that the President had to call them to Hyde Park, together with the third and neutral member of the works relief triumvirate—Frank O. Walker, the director of the national emergency council and administrator of applications.

Others called to the important works relief parley included Daniel Bell, director of the budget; Charles West, under secretary of interior; Corrington Gill, assistant of Hopkins; Fred Ironsides, administrative assistant of Walker, and Col. Harold Hackett, chief of housing in the IWA.

Mr. Roosevelt was determined to have peace, and told those present that the prime necessity at this time is to make jobs quickly, always keeping in mind the idea of turning workers back to private industry as business warrants. This looked like a victory for Hopkins, who favors quick jobs, over Ickes, champion of permanent public works. The President has declared that he hopes 3,500,000 persons can be removed from the relief rolls and put to work by the first of November.

LEGAL attack on the Guffey soft coal act has been opened by 10 coal companies operating in Harlan county, Kentucky, in Federal court at Louisville.

They brought suit for injunction against its enforcement, charging that it violates the federal Constitution in these ways:

1. It violated the fifth amendment, which forbids taking property without due process of law.
2. It violated the tenth amendment, which reserves to the states, or to the people, all rights not granted the federal government or forbidden the states.
3. It attempts to delegate legislative power.
4. The section levying a 15 per cent tax on all coal production, with a 50 per cent refund to producers submitting to the code provided by the act, is "an unconstitutional attempt on the part of congress, under the guise of taxation, to punish those producers of bituminous coal who are unwilling to surrender their constitutional rights."
5. Congress has no jurisdiction over and no power to legislate upon certain matters covered by the act or the code.

The companies declared they would refuse to submit to the act and the code if authorized.

Former Federal Judge Charles J. Dawson filed the action as counsel for the plaintiffs. Judge Dawson recently left the bench to re-enter private law practice after declaring unconstitutional the NRA and other New Deal measures.

UNIVERSITY of Michigan is rejoining over a gift of $3,000,000 for enlargement of its graduate school.

The money is donated by the Horace H. and Mary A. Rackham fund, based on the bulk of the estate of the late Horace H. Rackham, Detroit philanthropist.

One million dollars will be spent to purchase a square block of land adjoining the present campus and for a new building. The remainder will be employed as an endowment. The income will be used to promote research. By the terms of the agreement the school will be known as the Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies.

"The purpose of the gift is twofold," Dr. Mark S. Knapp, director of the fund, said. "First, to create a memorial, and, secondly, to place the university on a firmer foundation as one of the greater universities in this country. It will provide means for original research, funds for which have been lacking."

REACTION of American business and financial men to President Roosevelt's latest public statement that his basic program has reached substantial completion and industry will have a breathing spell ran the gamut between mild hope and downright disbelief.

Those who permitted themselves to be quoted were generally extremely cautious in their expressions, but there was usually a vein of skepticism in their remarks. Wall Street brokers were gladdened by a spurt of trading at higher prices, but bankers were more than doubtful, and economists insisted that a balanced budget, which wasn't mentioned in the President's letter to Roy Howard, publisher, was a prime requisite.

Silas Strawn, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said: "Business men generally will say that the improvement in some lines of business has been in spite of, rather than because of, the activities of the administration."

Polliticians regarded the letter as Mr. Roosevelt's opening of his campaign for re-election, and praised or decried it according to their party affiliations. Frank Knox of the Chicago Daily News, a potential candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, called it "just another promise" and set forth the many campaign promises which Mr. Roosevelt has failed to keep. Senator Black of Alabama said the statement was "a wonderfully clear explanation of his program, its original aims and its execution. It should be a call to those engaged in business to co-operate in further national progress."

Howard had written the President that many business men had become convinced that there could be no real recovery "until the fears of business have been allayed through the granting of a breathing spell—to industry and a recess from further experimentation until the country can recover its losses."

In a long letter the President replied that the legislative program of his administration had reached substantial completion and "the breathing spell of which you speak is here—decidedly so."

THREE men who made independent investigation of the deaths of 233 war veterans in the Florida hurricane reported they found no evidence indicating culpable negligence on the part of any person.

They were Sigita Attorney G. A. Worley of Miami, Aubrey Williams, representing Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins, and Col. George H. James of the veterans' bureau, representing President Roosevelt.

This finding was denounced as "whitewash" by James E. Van Zandt, commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; John J. Skillman, commander of the Miami chapter of the same organization, and other representatives of veterans' societies. Van Zandt's statement called on President Roosevelt to ignore the official report and take action against "officials guilty of negligence."

RESTORATION of the Greek monarchy is coming nearer and presumably former King George will be the man to occupy the throne.

Teodoris has put himself on record as favoring the restoration, and President Zaimis has indicated he will be willing to resign to make room for a king.

Teodoris said in his statement: "I attribute the nervous tension at present existing in public ranks and the army to general anxiety concerning the question of a constitution. I consider democratic royalty as the natural regime for Greece and ask the people to vote for it in the impending plebiscite."

"WE WENT to war on foot, and we're joining the parade the same way," declared about 150 of the grizzled veterans who attended the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Grand Rapids, Mich.

So these sturdy old men marched in the big parade while the rest, numbering some 250, rode in automobiles. Here were all that remained of the hundreds of thousands who answered the call to the colors in Civil War days, save for a few who were kept at home by extreme age and illness. Some of the states had no representatives in the line, but their flags were carried nevertheless. From other states there were but one or two. It was a pathetic but inspiring procession, watched by thousands whose eyes were dimmed by tears and escorted by Sons of Veterans, American Legionnaires and Veterans of the Spanish War.

Oley Nelson, 61, of Slater, Iowa, was elected commander-in-chief, to succeed Albert E. Stacey of Elbridge, N. Y. In a session of the organization the proposed reunion at Gettysburg next year with the Confederates veterans was discussed, and Commander Stacey made it plain that the affair would not be held under the official auspices of the Grand Army. It's plan originated in Pennsylvania.

EDWARD L. DOHNEY, son of the wealthiest of America's oil magnates, died in Los Angeles at the age of seventy-nine years, after a long illness.

His oil interests were mainly in California and Mexico. In 1924 Dohney and his old friend, Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior under Harding, were involved in the investigation of the government's leasing of the Elk Hills naval oil reserve in California to Dohney for exploitation. Dohney was twice tried and twice acquitted, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government and of giving a bribe of $100,000 to Fall. The latter, however, was found guilty of taking a bribe and went to prison.

Loans totaling 639 for $2,236,909.50 had been made in New Mexico by the Production Credit Corporation at the beginning of September.

The office of Senator Carl A. Hatch has been advised of works progress approval of three projects for New Mexico Normal University, involving a total of $32,546.

Calling for construction of a municipal auditorium, with a seating capacity of 2,500, at city park, Prescott, Ariz., has applied for $64,000 in works progress administration funds.

The department of agriculture has reported excellent harvests of eight farm crops that are being grown in Arizona. They are corn, oats, alfalfa hay, wild hay, beans, potatoes, apples and pears.

The U. S. bureau of reclamation has received an allotment of $2,000,000 from the public works fund to begin construction of the first unit of the Gila valley reclamation project in southwestern Arizona.

Indian service offices at Gallup, N. M., have announced that Herman Bogard, former superintendent of the Euche Indian school at Sapulpa, Okla., will head the Charles E. Burke Indian school at Fort Wingate this year.

Colfax county livestock men will meet in Raton, N. M., Sept. 28 to hear addresses by James K. Wallace, of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and Dr. W. L. Black, extension livestock specialist for New Mexico.

Two specimens of the Kalbab squirrel, existent only in the northern Arizona forest of that name, have been presented to the University of Arizona department of entomology and economic zoology by the State Fish and Game Commission.

Dr. Elwood Mead, reclamation commissioner, conferring at Yuma with officials of Arizona irrigation projects, said that work on the Roza division of the Yakima valley, Washington, project, for which $5,000,000 has been allocated, cannot be started in less than ninety days.

Initial work on the Gila Valley reclamation project near Parker, Ariz., will be the construction of a connecting flume between the proposed Imperial dam on the Colorado river and the main project canal and the beginning of excavations for the main canal, according to U. S. reclamation engineers.

Allotments for the various counties in New Mexico for student aid from the national youth administration have been announced by Tom Popjoy, assistant director. At Albuquerque the aid, 35 per month, applies to students from families on relief, and applications must be made direct to the school principal.

Health budgets already have been established in twenty-nine of the thirty-one counties in New Mexico, according to Chief Tax Commissioner Byron O. Beall. The total for health budgets so far is $187,478. The health budgets have been set up under provisions of the health legislation passed by the last legislature.

A small valley fair at which products of the Middle Rio Grande Valley will be exhibited will be held in conjunction with the fiesta and rodeo at Socorro, N. M., Sept. 25-29, it has been announced. It is hoped that the small fair will be the foundation for a larger fair next year and possibly a part of a state fair at Albuquerque.

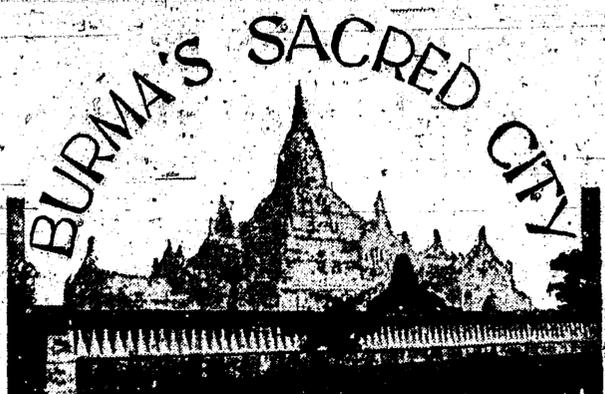

Phoenix, Ariz., fan dancers are going to wear more clothes or Sheriff J. R. McFadden is going to put them in jail—fads and all. The Maricopa county sheriff, after touring the night clubs and casting a critical eye on the emulators of Sally Rand, announced that henceforth fan dancers will wear two-piece costumes or will go to jail.

A large number of infant and preschool children are being organized in the Las Vegas district, according to Dr. W. W. Johnston, district health officer, who stated much of the alarming diseases among infants may be checked through these clinics. Such clinics will be organized where a county nurse or other help is available. Dr. Johnston said.

Discovery of an underground ceremonial room, first found in central or southern Arizona and described as "a direct ancestor of the Hopi Kiva," has been reported by Dr. Byron Cummings of the University of Arizona upon his return from the Kinshaha pueblo, located in east-central Arizona on the Apache Indian reservation, where he has directed summer excavation activities by twenty-six archaological students and twenty-seven Indian helpers.

Old Timers' Day on Friday, Oct. 4, at the Eastern New Mexico State Fair, to be held at Roswell Oct. 2, 3, 4 and 5, will be more spectacular than ever before. Those whom have been in New Mexico thirty years or longer, many of them dressed as they did when they came to the territory, will ride in the morning parade on chuck wagons, horses, burros, in hacks, buggies and carriages—ride in most anything except automobiles, which are barred. Old timers say gasoline was unknown at that time.

Coolidge, Ariz., celebrated its tenth anniversary Sept. 14. Beginning with a store, postoffice and twelve habitation in 1855, Coolidge today has a population of 2,500. Through the boom days improvement was rapid, and in 1930 the Coolidge dam, the largest multiple dome structure in the world, was completed with a storage capacity of 1,200,000 acre feet, providing water for 100,000 acres of the San Carlos project, of which Coolidge is the hub. Activities started with a parade led by the Sacaton Indian band, and many other events followed.

The Ananda, a Temple of Pagan.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

PAGAN, Burma's Sacred City, is solemnity and mystery; it is an enchantment. Here, 90 miles southwest of Mandalay, the traveler finds himself in the midst of a veritable forest of temples and pagodas, large and small, nearly perfect or almost unrecognizable because of decay. Before their vast bulks the traveler becomes painfully conscious of his littleness and insignificance. His mere presence seems an impertinence. The crumbling walls, the fallen pinnacles and the desolation are eloquent of the vanity of fame, the hollowness of glory, and the futility of human effort.

Of the 5,000 or more temples that are still to be seen, the Ananda, the Thatbyinnyu, and Cawdawpalla, standing all three within a circle of a quarter of a mile radius, are surpassingly beautiful and majestic.

The Ananda rises like a structure of foam. On its summit, like the flame upon some altar, a slender, golden spire gathers the radiance of the sun and flings it forth again to every quarter. It is the first of all the temples to command the traveler's attention; it is the last upon which he gazes as the swift steamer bears him away.

The Thatbyinnyu has suffered more from time and neglect than has the Ananda. Its walls are blackened and much of the detail of its ornamentation has fallen away. It is hardly beautiful; it is majestic.

The third temple has neither the exquisite beauty of the Ananda nor the sublimity of the Thatbyinnyu; yet in the perfect harmony of its proportions, the refinement of every detail, it has a charm of its own. It contributes with the others to the spell which Pagan casts over even the most careless visitor.

Lovely View From Circuit House.

From the Cawdawpalla the path leads on to the circuit house. At every step is revealed some new grouping of effects, some new harmonies of proportion or (elicited) of detail, and from the stupendous verities of the resthouse the view is one never to be forgotten. Westward the river and the hills, silver and gold and blue in the sunset; near at hand the Cawdawpalla, with orange light and soft purple shadows mingling and shifting over its huge battlements; farther away the Ananda and the Thatbyinnyu, now indistinct in the twilight; and all around, the half-seen outlines of pagodas.

Heroic achievements, the basest villainy, successful subtlety—all these are mingled in the history of this ruined city.

The greatness of Pagan, and with it reliable Burmese history, dates from the accession of Anawrata, about A. D. 1075. This truly remarkable monarch won by the sword a splendid empire and established a dynasty that continued in power for more than 200 years. At the beginning of his reign he devoted himself to the moral and religious uplift of his people. A corrupt and degrading "Naga-worship" or obedience to devils, in the form of serpents, had come through Assam from northern India.

Anawrata's Great Reform.

Soon after Anawrata ascended the throne Buddhist missionaries arrived at Pagan from the country of the Taining, a people dwelling to the south and, as a result of the frequent and easy communication with India by sea, highly civilized. These Taining missionaries found the king a zealous convert. He expelled the priests of the abominable cult that for so many years had debauched his people, strictly proscribed the Naga worship, and did everything in his power to further the efforts of the preachers.

His fervor had, however, one lamentable result. Hearing that there were in Thaton, the Taining capital, copies of the Buddhist Sacred-Books and several precious relics, he sent a noble envoy to beg for such portions as might be spared. His reasonable request was refused in a singularly insolent and shortsighted manner.

With characteristic energy Anawrata assembled an army and a fleet and moved against Thaton. He was completely successful, and as the spoils of victory he carried back to Pagan not only the books and the priceless relics but the king and queen of the fallen city, together with principal nobles, high treasure, 32 white elephants, and a host of 30,000 officers and scholars.

This signal success only fanned the flame of Anawrata's zeal. A fresh field for enterprise was found in Ceylon. There was in that island a most sacred relic, nothing less than a tooth of Gautama. Such a trophy was beyond price and its possession by Pagan would sanctify and enoble the king's name. Accordingly, with four trusty captains, mounted on matchless steeds, Anawrata hastened to the seashore and embarked for Ceylon at nightfall. But unseen hands were fighting on the side of the sovereign of Ceylon and sacred tooth. The ship sped swiftly on through the night. Yet when the travelers awoke it was to find themselves anchored a little below Pagan!

Baffled but not defeated, Anawrata sent an envoy to Sangabodhi, the king, an envoy who bore many costly presents and who was instructed to demand the tooth of Gautama in return.

Gautama Supplied Teeth.

Sangabodhi, unwilling to surrender his most precious possession, yet fearful of arousing the ire of so dreadful a monarch as the king of Pagan, was in sore straits. In his distress he expressed the wish that he might have two such teeth. No sooner had he given utterance to this desire than the tooth produced a fellow exactly resembling itself! In fact, the two were indistinguishable until the original declared itself by rising into the air and performing miracles.

The duplicate was placed in a casket of gold and delivered to the envoy, who carried it back with great pomp to Pagan.

To solve the difficulty of choosing a site for the enshrinement of the prize, the casket was placed on the back of a white elephant, and it was announced that wherever the animal halted there should be the resting place of the tooth.

Much to the disappointment of all, the elephant bearing his precious burden crossed the river and knelt down near the Tangyi hills. This was very far from the palace, and the king expressed his regret that he also had not two sacred-teeth. Here again the wish was father to the miracle. Immediately there were two teeth instead of one! The duplicate was placed on the elephant's back and the beast was bidden to move on.

Five times the elephant halted before reaching the neighborhood of the palace, and at each place the tooth was miraculously multiplied, until at last the site of the Lokanassa was reached and the king professed himself satisfied. At each stop a shrine was built, and at the last was reared the pile which still remains as one of the monuments to Anawrata's greatness.

Anawrata's end was tragic. One day, as he was riding through the forest on an elephant, he struck his head against the branch of a tree in which dwelt two rats—Telmbin and his wife, Leimbina. In a fit of rage the monarch dragged Leimbina down from the tree and beat her mercilessly.

Telmbin, in his turn, enraged at the king's cruelty, lay in wait for Anawrata in the depths of the jungle. Taking the form of a huge white buffalo, he furiously charged the unhappy monarch and succeeded in impaling him upon one of his horns. The body was never found.

Conquered by the Chinese.

For more than two centuries the successors of Anawrata more or less worthily maintained the dignity and prestige of Pagan. But in the north was developing a power that was soon to engulf not Pagan only, but almost the entire continent of Asia. Kublai Khan in 1254 conquered what is now Yunnan, and the Chinese were thus brought into contact with Burma. To the resulting conflict there could be but one issue. In 1287 Pagan fell before invaders from the north, never again to attain historical significance. Of the great battle between the two armies on the plain of Voelam, Marco Polo gives a graphic and spirited account.

Though, under the circumstances, the fall of Pagan was inevitable, the last king of that unfortunate capital stands in pitiful contrast to the great Anawrata. Known to history as Tayokpremlin—the King Who Ran Away From the Chinese, he was utterly unworthy of his noble office. In the Mingalazedi is an inscription which commemorates his achievements at the table. Here it is recorded that he never dined off fewer than three hundred dishes!

While the Chinese host was yet a long way from the city, the cowardly king fled down the river to Bassein. When the cooks whom he had taken with him were able to produce only 150 dishes, the full horror of his position dawned upon the unhappy monarch. He burst into childish tears and exclaimed, "Now, I am poor indeed!"

When the invaders had taken their toll of Pagan and retired, he thought of returning. At Errome, however, he was met by one of his sons, who offered him poisoned food. For a time the weakling hesitated. At last, convinced that it was better to die so than by the sword, he yielded and met a fate that, as few writers have avoided the temptation to remark, was singularly appropriate to his character.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES

INSTALLMENT TWO.
No State shall, without the Consent of the Congress, lay any Imposts or Duties on Imports or Exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its Inspection Laws; and the net Produce of all Duties and Imposts, laid by any State on Imports or Exports, shall be for the Use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such Laws shall be subject to the Revision and Control of the Congress.

No State shall, without the Consent of Congress, lay any Duty of Tonnage, keep Troops, or Ships of War in time of Peace, enter into any Agreement or Compact with another State, or with a foreign Power, or engage in War, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent Danger as will not admit of Delay.

ARTICLE II.
Section 1. The executive Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his Office during the Term of four Years, and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same Term, be elected, as follows

Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; but no Senator or Representative, or Person holding an Office of Trust or Profit under the United States, shall be appointed an Elector.

The Electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by Ballot for two Persons, of whom one at least shall not be an Inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a List of all the Persons voted for, and of the Number of Votes for each; which List they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the Seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate.

The President of the Senate shall, in the Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the Certificates, and the Votes shall then be counted. The Person having the greatest Number of Votes shall be the President, if such Number be a Majority of the whole Number of Electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such Majority, and have an equal Number of Votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately choose by Ballot one of them for President; and if no Person have a Majority, then from the five highest on the List the said House shall in like Manner choose the President. But in choosing the President, the Votes shall be taken by States, the Representation from each State having one Vote; A quorum for this Purpose shall consist of a Member or Members from two thirds of the States, and a Majority of all the States shall be necessary to a Choice. In every Case, after the Choice of the President, the Person having the greatest Number of Votes of the Electors shall be the Vice President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal Votes, the Senate shall choose from them by Ballot the Vice President.

The Congress may determine the Time of choosing the Electors, and the Day on which they shall give their Votes; which Day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any Person be eligible to that Office who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United States.

In Case of the Removal of the President from Office, or of his Death, Resignation, or Inability to discharge the Powers and Duties of the said Office, the Same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by Law provide for the Case of Removal, Death, Resignation or Inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what Officer shall then act as President, and such Officer shall act accordingly, until the Disability be removed, or a President shall be elected. The President shall, at stated Times, receive for his Services, a Compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the Period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that Period any other Emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Before he enter on the Execution of his Office, he shall take the following Oath or Affirmation:—"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Section 2. The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual Service of the United States; he may require the Opinion, in writing, of the principal Officer in each of the executive Departments, upon any Subject relating to the Duties of their respective Offices, and he shall have Power to grant Reprieves and Pardons, for Offences against the United States, except in Cases of Impeachment.

He shall have Power, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, to make Treaties, provided two thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States, whose Appointments are not herein otherwise provided for; and which shall be established by Law; but the Congress may by Law vest the Appointment of such inferior Officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the Courts of Law, or in the Heads of Departments.

The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session.

Section 3. He shall from time to time give to the Congress Information of the State of the Union, and recommend to their Consideration such Measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary Occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in Case of Disagreement between them, with Respect to the Time of Adjournment, he may adjourn them to such Time as he shall think proper; he shall receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers; he shall take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed, and shall Commission all the Officers of the United States.

Section 4. The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.
Section 1. The judicial Power of the United States, shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges, both of the supreme and inferior Courts, shall hold their Offices during good Behaviour, and shall, at stated Times, receive for their Services, a Compensation, which shall not be diminished during their Continuance in Office.

Section 2. The judicial Power shall extend to all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States;—to Controversies between two or more States;—between a State and Citizens of another State;—between Citizens of different States;—between Citizens of the same State claiming Lands under Grants of different States, and between a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.

In all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, and those in which a State shall be Party, the supreme Court shall have original Jurisdiction. In all the other Cases before mentioned, the supreme Court shall have appellate Jurisdiction, both as to Law and Fact, with such Exceptions, and under such Regulations as the Congress shall make.

The Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment, shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial shall be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed.

Section 3. Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying War against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court.

The Congress shall have Power to declare the Punishment of Treason, but no Attainder of Treason shall work Corruption of Blood, or forfeiture except during the Life of the Person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.
Section 1. Full Faith and Credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, Records, and judicial Proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general Laws prescribe the Manner in which such Acts, Records and Proceedings shall be proved, and the Effect thereof.

Section 2. The Citizens of each State shall be entitled to all Privileges and Immunities of Citizens in the several States.

A Person charged in any State with Treason, Felony, or other Crime, who shall flee from Justice, and be found in another State, shall on Demand of the executive Authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having Jurisdiction of the Crime.

No Person held to Service or Labour in one State, under the Laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in Consequence of any Law or Regulation therein, be discharged from such Service or Labour, but shall be delivered up on Claim of the Party to whom such Service or Labour may be due.

Section 3. New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the Jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the Junction of two or more States, or Parts of States, without the Consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Section 4. The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government, and shall protect each of them against Invasion; and on Application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) against domestic Violence.

ARTICLE V.
The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose Amendments to this Constitution; or, on the Application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a Convention for proposing Amendments, which, in either Case, shall be valid to all Intents and Purposes, as Part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other Mode of Ratification may be proposed by the Congress; Provided that no Amendment which may be made prior to the Year One Thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any Manner affect the first and fourth Clauses in the Ninth Section of the first Article; and that no State, without its Consent, shall be deprived of its equal Suffrage in the Senate.

ARTICLE VI.
All Debts contracted and Engagements entered into, before the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation.

This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.

The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the Members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial Officers, both of the United States, and of the several States, shall be bound by Oath or Affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious Test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any Office or public Trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.
The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States, shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the Same.

In Convention Monday September 17th 1787.

Present The States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Mr Hamilton from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. Resolved.

That the preceding Constitution be laid before the United States in Congress assembled, and that it is the Opinion of this Convention, that it should afterwards be submitted to a Convention of Delegates, chosen in each State by the People thereof, under the Recommendation of its Legislature, for their Assent and Ratification; and that each Convention assenting to, and ratifying the Same, should give Notice thereof to the United States in Congress assembled.

Resolved, That It is the Opinion of this Convention, that as soon as the Conventions of nine States shall have ratified this Constitution, the United States in Congress assembled should fix a Day on which Electors should be appointed by the States which shall have ratified the same, and a Day on which the Electors should assemble to vote for the President, and the Time and Place for commencing Proceedings under this Constitution. That after such Publication the Electors should be appointed, and the Senators and Representatives elected; That the Electors should meet on the Day fixed for the Election of the President, and should transmit their Votes certified, signed, sealed and directed, as the Constitution requires, to the Secretary of the United States in Congress assembled, that the Senators and Representatives should convene at the Time and Place assigned; that the Senators should appoint a President of the Senate, for the sole Purpose of receiving, opening and counting the Votes for President; and that after he shall be chosen, the Congress, together with the President, should, without Delay, proceed to execute this Constitution.

EGG IMPROVEMENT THROUGH BREEDING

Color Affected by Feeding, Authority Says.

By J. H. Vandell, Poultry Department, Massachusetts State College, WNU Service.

The greatest improvement in egg quality in the future will come about through breeding. Many of the different factors affecting quality of eggs are controlled or at least strongly affected, by breeding. Feeding probably is the second factor affecting egg quality.

While poultrymen and egg dealers judge quality in eggs by candling, the homemaker judges the eggs by their appearance, odor, and flavor after they are broken. The yolk should be up-standing and should be surrounded by a well defined mass of thick albumen, or "white."

Some hens inherit a tendency to lay eggs with watery whites, and this does not seem to be affected by feeding. The feed seems to have no influence on the amount of thick albumen in the egg or on watery whites.

In eggs with watery whites the yolks usually are weak and do not stand up when the eggs are broken into a plate. This, too, is influenced by heredity, rather than feed. Only by careful selection of breeding stock, to avoid birds which produce eggs with watery whites, can the fault be eliminated.

Some hens occasionally lay eggs which have a fishy smell. While all the facts are not known, this characteristic, too, seems to be inherited.

One thing which is definitely known to be affected by feeding is the color of the yolk, although this, too, is influenced by heredity to some extent. Pale yolks of relatively uniform color may be produced by feeding the birds an all-mash ration, while colorless yolks will be produced if the birds are given a feed entirely lacking in the yellow pigment found in the yolk. Green and yellow feeds increase the amount of yellow color in the egg.

Easy to Distinguish Sex of Chicks at Early Age

It is comparatively easy to distinguish the sexes in the light poultry breeds, the comb and tail being a reliable sign of a very early age; but in the case of the heavy breeds more care is needed for accurate sexing. Batches of chicks of the same age and breed should be handled separately, says a writer in the Montreal Herald.

At four weeks the feathering is a valuable guide, that of the pullets being more profuse than that of the males, which are bare on the neck and shoulders. From five to six weeks, feathering will still help, but should be checked with other points. The male chicks are cobbler, longer in the legs, and generally deeper in the body than are the pullets. The skull is broader and the eye bolder, while the body is carried at an angle. The pullet's head is smaller and narrower, and the body longer from head to tail, and usually carried parallel to the ground. Most seven-week pullets sport a tail from about seven days of age, while in many strains the cockerels show no signs of this for six weeks. The feathers in the saddle back of the male are longer, narrower, and more pointed than in the pullets.

Wire Platforms for Waterers

Poultrymen will find it profitable to provide a small wire platform for the water fountain. Such an arrangement will help keep down worms and disease, for around the water fountain where the ground is moist is an ideal place for parasites and disease germs to multiply. A simple square frame can be made of ten-inch boards, large enough so that pullets must stand upon it while drinking, and covered with one-inch hardware cloth of heavy gauge poultry netting. The frame should be braced with crosspieces so as to give the wire support and to support the water fountain in the center of the frame. It will pay also to provide another platform for the hoppers where waste feed will not be picked up by the pullets out of droppings and dirt.—Missouri Farmer.

In the Poultry Yard

Fresh eggs become stale in a day or two of hot weather.

Forty out of every one hundred eggs set fail to hatch, according to good authorities.

Young chicks require a little more hard grain than older ones; that is, they should have it fed to them often. Later they will have learned to satisfy their desires from the mash hoppers.

Eggs must be gathered several times in hot weather and stored in a cool place where there are no objectionable odors for them to absorb.

On the E. C. Schneider farm in Waller county, Texas, 270 White Leghorns held their own board bill and bought feed for four work horses.

Frozen eggs imported into the United States from China in 1924 amounted to 20,744 pounds, valued at $4,906, and $2,562 pounds of frozen egg yolks, valued at $30,240.

Tap Gap

By THAYER WALDO
McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

BENNIE set his lips in a very firm line and resolutely kept his eyes upon the ledger. Through the open window came the syncopated tinkle of a piano and the rhythmic click of dancing shoes. Merely by raising his head Bennie could have looked across the narrow court directly into the room whence came those sounds. He could have seen the keyboard, with Morrie Neal's nimble fingers skipping over it, and beyond, a flash of bare legs as Beth tapped upon the platform.

Now it must not be assumed that this self-denial was a matter of conscientious regard for duty with him. To be frank, Bennie rather heartily despised his job and on most occasions was quite ready to neglect it for diversion. Ordinarily, too, nothing could have been so pleasantly diverting as to watch Beth dance, even from this distance and with the foreshortened view. But today there existed most unusual, not to say unhappy, circumstances: Beth and Bennie were "on the outs."

It had all happened out of a clear sky. For almost a year they had gone together with never a quarrel. And in the past few months plans for marriage had become a frequent topic between them. As soon as Bennie completed his study of wireless, there would be a government position waiting. Perhaps he would be sent to some romantic spot and Beth would go with him as his wife. Lately they had even been figuring the time in months, for with Beth's help Bennie was rapidly acquiring an expert knowledge of his subject. But now—well, that was just a shattered dream—their romance irreparably ruined.

Bennie found a sort of bitter satisfaction in dwelling on its finality. They were, he told himself with average conviction, as far apart as if they had never met. Beth could go her own sweet way, and if it led her right into the arms of that—that rat, Morrie Neal—why, all right. He, Bennie, didn't care a snap. She had had her chance last night to choose, and she had said:

"Bennie Jackson, you're the meanest, most suspicious fellow I ever know! Of course I'm going to keep on taking the lessons Mr. Neal's giving me. What's wrong with that?"

So Bennie had picked up his cap and stalked out of her apartment, very coldly. He wasn't the kind to let a girl see that she had hurt him. Maybe Beth had forgotten about the treasurer's office, right next door to the dance director's, and that Bennie went there several times each day to return accounts to the safe.

Well, if that was what she wanted, she certainly could have it without any more interference from him. He was going to finish his wireless studies in a hurry and then get as far away as possible from Zenith studio and Hollywood and Beth Millard. He reached in the desk drawer for the little manual he always kept there, determined to spend a few minutes reviewing code.

As he took it out, his eyes strayed in one fleeting glance to the window opposite. Immediately they riveted there; he sat upright, tense and startled. The shade was being pulled down over the lower half of the window. He just had time for a glimpse of a man's hand on the cord; then it was completely drawn and Bennie was staring at a blank buff square.

The music and the clacking tap of feet had ceased. Involuntarily, Bennie's teeth came hard together and he felt a rush of hot blood mounting to his cheeks. He stood up and started to turn away.

At that moment the sound of the piano was resumed. Bennie halted in his tracks, puzzled. Yes, there could be no doubt about it; now he even heard Beth's shoes again. He faced around, irresolute and wondering. Suddenly he stiffened, listening with renewed intensity. The next instant he had sprung to the phone and was frantically pounding the switch.

"Give me the studio police—quick!" Two minutes later four men with drawn revolvers preceded Bennie on the rush into Morrie Neal's office. Neal sat at the piano, his face taut and strained. Beth was still tapping feverishly.

The door at the far side stood open. The studio policemen rushed across through it. There came a yell, a string of oaths, a sound of heavy scuffling—and the thing was all over. The four uniformed men emerged, securely grappling two others whose looks revealed their profession.

Beth ran into Bennie's arms and clung there, crying:

"Oh, darling, you're wonderful! I was so afraid!"

The treasurer of Zenith studio came out of his office, mopping his brow with a silk handkerchief, and gripped Bennie's hand warmly.

"You're a real hero, my boy!" he exclaimed; "but I don't understand—I don't see how you knew! Why, those thugs made Morrie and Miss Millard here go on with their practicing and told the rest of us they'd shoot the first one who let out a 'peep!'"

Bennie glanced down into Beth's upturned adoring face.

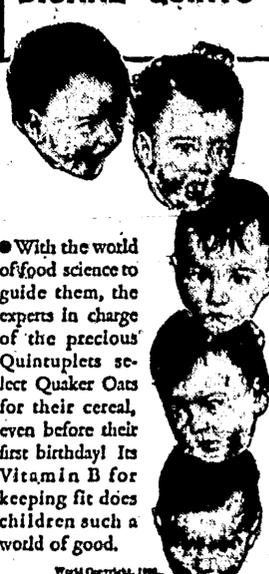

"Here's where the credit goes," he replied; "if she hadn't remembered how to tap out a message in Morse code, I'd have been half a mile from here by now, thinking she didn't love me."

School Notes

Ola C. Jones, Co. School Sup't.

The past week, the following rural schools were visited by Mrs. Ola C. Jones, County Superintendent, and Mrs. Mary Watson, Rural Supervisor:

Nogal: Mrs. Thelma Chappell. The pupils have cleaned the school grounds of all obnoxious weeds and have made many little improvements in the interior of their building.

Angus: Miss Gloria Campbell. The pupils are working on a nature study unit; all material being secured from the immediate community.

Mon Jau: Miss Amelia Fritz. The pupils are also working on a nature study unit here.

Escondido: Miss Carmen Pino. The pupils are carrying out all activities with the Home Unit; every pupil contributing his share to the success of same.

Bluewater: Miss Dora Trujillo. In this school the activity program is being carried out very nicely. The Indian Unit is being correlated this six weeks' period.

Arabela: Mrs. Marie Pacheco and Miss Ann Kimbrell. The enrollment is 54 and still increasing. There is an excellent spirit being manifested in this school. There is the stressing of English at all times and a splendid reading program in all grades.

Richardson: Miss Lucia Gomez. The pupils are studying the Home Unit. The whole group are so happy and are striving in every way to learn English.

Encinozo: Miss Harriet Blackshere. The pupils have just completed the Clothing Unit. Special stress is dramatization of stories in Pro-Primer and Primer groups; thus stimulating and encouraging interest in learning to better speak English.

Stotsen: Mr. L. Vernon Baker, Miss Dorothy Arnold, Miss Jane Raymond, and Miss Jennie Hunt. The enrollment has increased to such an extent that another teacher was needed. Miss Jennie Hunt was selected for this position.

It is very encouraging to note the decided improvement in the professional attitude with the majority of the teachers.

We particularly note that San Patricio and Ruidoso are especially happy because their building programs have been approved and work will soon be begun on them.

Mr. Frank Abel returned last week from the Southern Pacific hospital in San Francisco.

RAMON NEWS

Very little interest was taken in the election in Ramon precinct last Tuesday. Sixteen votes were cast and all amendments were defeated except the fifth which carried by two votes.

L. O. Morgan and Isaac Rogers took a truck load of cattle to Clovis last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Smith have moved to Melrose.

We understand J. H. Gray has bought the L. O. Morgan store building at Ramon and has leased it to Mr. Elmore who formerly ran the Craig station at Wire Lake. Mr. Elmore took charge last Saturday.

Jesse Parchall has returned from a several weeks stay at Kilgore, Texas.

W. A. Blankenship and J. M.

Mr. Grady Miller visited his son Grant at Fort Bliss last Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Raymond Bilho and her brother, Joe Spence and his wife were in town from Jicarilla last Saturday. Mr. Spence is representative in this territory. Real Silk hosiery and may make his headquarters here or at Jicarilla for several months.

Smith were in Clovis last Friday.

Hugh Bunch and W. A. Blankenship carried the election ballots to Carrizozo last Wednesday.

Lee Hancock of Corona was buying cattle at Ramon last week.

Henry Grimmit and family have moved to Corona.

Mr. Hall of Capitan spent last Sunday with his daughter, Miss Wyona Hall who is teaching the Ramon school.

Local and Personal

Tuesday morning, while at work Abie Sanchez fell off the platform at the depot and seriously injured his knee, so that he will have to go on crutches several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Sager, accompanied by Dixie and Daisy Harman, went to Encino last Sunday, where they met their daughter, Miss Lorena of Santa Fe, who spent the past four days here visiting.

The thing to remember while driving the old Bus, is that the average pedestrian has neither a Body by Fisher nor an All-Steel Turret Top. From "Jabs" in New Mexican.

Jack Payne left Wednesday of this week for Denver, to attend to some business matters connected with his mine.

Mr. Phipps is remodeling the building which he and Mr. Langston have used as workshop for several years. The front of the building will be left for business purposes and rooms in the rear have been made into convenient living quarters.

Jack Harkey attended the rodeo in Alamogordo last Sunday.

Mrs. Chas. Smith, Nellie Lee and Bradley Smith and William Kelt attended the rodeo at Alamogordo Sunday and drove on out to the White Sands.

Mrs. C. Carl and Mrs. Dan Elliot went to El Paso last Friday and returned Saturday.

Two more WPA projects have been approved for Lincoln county; a new school building at Ruidoso and one at San Patricio.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Blood of Alto were business visitors here last Monday.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Editha L. Watson

THE HUNTER'S TREASURE

A HUNTER'S trick of shaving out small wooden spades resulted in the finding of a lost gold mine in the Breckenridge district in Colorado.

Breckenridge, as everyone knows who knows about gold, is a mining town not far from Fairplay and Alma—those rich camps where men still find abundant gold.

In the early '90s a certain hunter used to come into Denver to spend the winters. He brought skins in with him, and also rough gold in pleasant quantities.

He had a peculiar habit of shaving out small wooden spades, with which he shoveled the snow away from the doorstep of his cabin.

It was in the '90's, a good thirty years later, that a prospector—rambling about in the Breckenridge district came across an old cabin, a tunnel, and a dump.

But on the way in he became confused. It is not hard to lose oneself in the mountains at any time.

If you ever go prospecting around Breckenridge, and come upon a cabin, a tunnel, and a dump, work down spades and black talcy ore, try not to get confused before you get back to town.

THE MINER'S PARADISE AT TRUCHAS, north of Santa Fe, New Mexico, two Frenchmen came along some fifty years ago and found rich ore.

Some time passed, and at last the partners had a stable stake. One day they were discussing the future, which had never seemed more fair.

So the happy Frenchman hurried—as much as was possible in the '80s—to fetch his sweetheart from St. Louis.

Things went on peacefully until the first Frenchman began to suspect that he was being betrayed.

Both men were young and strong—both wished to live, and both wanted the girl's affection.

ON LABOR DAY

By ANNE CAMPBELL

ONE never knows the satisfying taste of bread until he earns it. . . . Better still!

To plow the stubborn earth, to plant the waste, and carry the threshed wheat down to the mill.

Bread that one gains by sweat is better than

The proffered loaf. . . . The gift of luxury

Will never sink into the heart of man As will his triumph over poverty.

Once the soiled hands of Labor were not held in high repute, but now our daily prayer

Is not for gifts of bread. . . . Our pleas have wailed

From weary hearts that have too much to bear.

But with new courage for the bitter toil,

We pray to earn our bread by honest toil.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: I have lost all my money and am broke. A fortune teller told me that when the soles of my shoes wear out, I will be on my feet again. Do you believe it?

Yours truly, CLAUDE VOXANT

Answer: Well, I have to.

Dear Mr. Wynn: Can you tell me how it is that so many men are bald headed?

Yours truly, DAN DRUFF

Answer: Men lose half their hair worrying if their sweetheart will marry them. After they are married they pull out the other half worrying how to get a divorce.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I see where they were recently playing Hamlet in evening clothes. I am trying to moderate Uncle Tom's Cabin. Can you offer any suggestions?

Truly yours, I. NOEL OTT

Answer: When the bloodhounds

chase Eliza, have her do the Charleston on each cake of ice.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I owned a horse but had no hay for the horse to eat. I met a man who had a load of hay and I traded him the horse for the hay. Now I have no horse to eat the hay. What can I do?

ANN VILL

Answer: Find the man you traded with and ask him if he'd be kind enough to lend you the horse to eat the hay.

Dear Mr. Wynn: There is a man living next door to me who is very lazy. In fact he lets his wife support him by taking in washing. Shouldn't he be ashamed to let his wife support him in that way?

Sincerely, ALEX. TRICKIRON

Answer: I wouldn't blame the husband so much, if I were you. Maybe his wife is ignorant and can't earn a living any other way.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

SECRET OF CUSTARDS

CUSTARDS are such good desserts for children and the aged as well as for those who have weakened digestion. The secret of a good custard is in the cooking.

Steamed Cup Custard

Beat two eggs lightly until the whites and yolks are well mixed, add three tablespoons of sugar, a bit of salt and a generous grating of nutmeg. When the sugar is well dissolved, add a pint of good milk, stir and mix well and pour into three custard cups if large—four if small.

bottom of the cups before adding the custard. When cooked they may be turned out and the caramel will form a brown sauce over the custard.

Meringue of Rice

Put a cup of rice to cook in a pint of boiling water. When the water has evaporated add a pint of milk, a tablespoon of butter, the grated rind of a lemon and four well-beaten egg yolks.

Puffed Rice Puffins

Heat until crisp three cups of puffed rice, stirring often to keep from scorching. Boil two cups of brown sugar with one-half cup of water, one tablespoon of vinegar, one tablespoon of butter, until the mixture makes a soft ball in cold water.

Do YOU Know—

That more than 3,500 tons of hair has been cut from the heads of American women during the bob era, it is estimated? There are 14,000,000 bobbed heads in the United States and about half this number spend $15,000,000 a year for waves.

Chic Tailored Suit

Black velvet and black and gray striped corduroy are combined effectively in this tailored suit. The double-breasted jacket has four patch pockets. The blouse is Chanel's new matelasse crepe in white with elephant's tined in gold lame thread.

MINUTE MAKE-UPS

CHAPTER XII

Afterward they went upstairs, through the familiar halls and past the familiar doors, to talk desultorily, inconsequently, of anything and everything. When a wall from the kitchen took Gall down there again on flying feet, Ariel, bare-headed and looking young, small, and tired again, came too; and then Lily, Phil, and the boys came in and there was a babel and confusion in which somehow Gall and Ariel managed a cup of tea.

When Gall went upstairs after dinner, supposedly to superintend the little boys' retiring, it was to be noted that she remained there some additional moments. When she came down she wore her newest gown, a simple, thin black velvet gown that left her slender brown arms bare and fell away in a long line from the straight column of her throat and the curve of her young breast. At the throat there was golden old lace, her mother's lace, and Gall wore tonight her mother's old cameo ring.

The tawny locks that had been bobbed three years ago were longer now and gathered in a cluster of curls at the nape of her neck. Gall rarely showed any color, but tonight there was a subdued sparkle and shine about her; her wide sweet mouth was burning scarlet, her sapphire eyes starry. Phil, Lily, Sam, Ariel—they all sat in the room that had once been the lesser drawing room but that now had been changed into a living room.

The fireplace was opened, and logs crackled there. The boys' blocks and books were stored on the shelves, and a ring of comfortable shabby old chairs circled the hearth. Lily only hesitated tonight. She was a good deal older than Ariel, but she seemed a little afraid of her. Gall was rather silent, too. She sat, slender, thoughtful, and tawny-headed, at Phil's knee on a cushion. Her square shoulders rested against her brother, her square fingers were locked, her eyes thoughtful, and her full underlip slightly bitten.

Sam drafted for tomorrow afternoon's Challenge the announcement that would take all Clippersville by surprise. Little Ariel Lawrence, Mrs. Vance Marchison, Ariel, listening, correcting, appeared the least concerned of the five.

There was a step at the side door, a gust of rain-sweet air penetrated to the sitting room. Gall had known this must come. She did not stir, except to raise her eyes to Dick Stebbins as he came in.

Phil did most of the talking. Dick talked, too, to Lily—to all of them except Gall. To her he did not speak directly until the clock struck ten and she got to her feet.

"Ariel, you must go to bed. You must be dead. Come on!"

"Are you coming back, Gall?" said Dick then, with a glance.

"I think not. We'll be talking," Gall said, with a smile, "all night."

"Tomorrow I'll have to hang around the hospital in the hope of seeing poor Willoughby."

"If he died, Dick," Phil asked, "would that kind of throw the monkey wrench into your plans?"

"Well, in a way. There are two or three other propositions I could follow up," Dick answered, untruffed.

He was the old Dick, and he was a new Dick, too. A quiet big man, very sure of himself. His manner, his voice were more authoritative than they had been. He had not worn a big belted coat three years ago, nor jammed big gloves into his pockets.

"Willoughby, is doing the London work for his eastern firm," he said.

"And there was some talk of my going with him."

"If you didn't, might you practice here, Dick?" This was Gall.

"I don't think so—not in Clippersville," he answered decidedly. "International law, you know . . ."

"Some 'Caravan'?" he demanded abruptly, looking at Gall.

"You mean the big musical comedy?"

"Yes."

"No, I haven't. It's playing in Oakland tomorrow."

"I noticed that," said Dick. "Want to go up?"

They were all looking on, suddenly awakened, suddenly aware of the situation. But she could not see anything but the lean, homely kindly face that was smiling—just the hint of a smile—at her.

"I'd love it!" she said.

The great news rocked Clippersville breakfast tables the next morning, and Gall, walking to the library in the delicious autumn freshness after the rains, was amused on all sides.

"The family knew she was married," Gall said, over and over again, hoping that this was not stretching the truth to the breaking point. "But they were both so young—and Van had no prospects—and then that unfortunate business of the bankruptcy came."

But Ariel's marriage was in second place for her. She was thinking all the while that it was almost nine o'clock, and that in eight hours Dick Stebbins was coming to the house to take her out for dinner and the theater in Oakland, 35 miles away.

She did not have to wait so long to see him. At about ten o'clock he walked into the library and came up to the desk. Gall saw his humping figure in the entrance arcade, and her heart turned over completely, and the hand that was resting on her desk blotted trembled.

When he stood, before her she reached both hands across the high desk.

"Dick, we couldn't say much before, Lily last night. She's not to know anything. But how are we going to thank you for standing by Ariel, for saying her?"

"Why, that was all right!" he said, laughing a little awkwardly, flushing warmly.

"Ariel's only a child still, Dick; she can't appreciate it. But Phil and I do—I do, from the bottom of my heart!"

"I guess you know why I did it," he wanted to say. "I guess you know I was glad to do it!" was what she heard.

"That doesn't make it any less!" she told him.

"It's a nice town to get back to," he said, after awhile. "On a morning like this, with everything washed fresh and cool, there's something awfully friendly about it."

"And how's poor Mr. Willoughby?"

"Not so good."

"Mrs. Cantor," Gall said seriously, "told me that he had been told by the best New York doctors that he would simply have to stop drinking and eating the way he was."

Dick listened respectfully to this and other Clippersville revelations. He had all his old simple, keen interest in Gall's point of view; he was especially concerned and amused over her reports of Lily and Ariel.

"They don't like each other?"

"Well, they're polite. But they have nothing in common!"

"No," he conceded, deeply struck. "I suppose not."

"But Lily makes Phil happy?" he asked anxiously, more than once.

"Oh, utterly! He's mad about her."

"And that's a cute baby!" Dick said, in satisfaction.

The autumn sun shone, and only the occasional fall of a yellow leaf through the crystal air indicated that the month was October and not May. The hills were transparent blue gauze, all about the canyon and the dam, when the Lawrences took their lunch up there on a hot clear Sunday afternoon.

Dick Put His Big Arms About Her and Crushed Her Against His Heart.

Gall and Dick walked up the creek bed alone, after the meal. Both their faces were flushed and damp when they sat down presently on a great fallen redwood, up in the sweet shadowy woods, and smiled at each other.

"Gall," said Dick then, "do you know that you have grown to be the most beautiful woman in the world?"

Her blue eyes deepened oddly, like summer water touched by cloud shadow.

"If you say so—" she stammered, finding her voice with difficulty.

Neither one could seem to speak again. Dick stood up, and after a second Gall got to her feet, too, and turned as if she would have gone back down the trail.

"I guess you know what I've come back for, Gall," Dick said then. "You've always been the only woman in the world for me. But to come back and find you—what you've grown to be—with all the town—every one—more or less in love with you—"

He stopped, for Gall had come up close to him and was holding out her hands. Dick put his big arms about her, and crushed her against his heart, and they kissed each other.

It was half an hour after that first, deep kiss that shouts from the deserted party at the dam brought them back down the trail. Their hands were linked as they followed the rushing stream back; it was four o'clock on an October afternoon, the sun was already sinking.

Hot light poured through the thinning foliage, and lay graciously among the red, twisted madrone branches, and on the shafts of the redwoods. The birds were all still now, but bees went by like bullets, and here and there bright-winged flies buzzed in weaving columns in the sun.

"And all that time—all that time, Dick, you cared?"

"Yes. But I didn't know it was going to be all that time," he said honestly. "It—sort of—went on, from day to day."

"I knew I cared," the girl said seriously.

Suddenly the two stopped on the rough trail and smiled at each other.

"This all seems like a dream," Dick confessed.

Sun-brown, her tawny hair in a little disorder, her blue eyes bright, she stood looking up at him without speaking—her man, the man who was to take care of her, stand by her, and love her, all her days.

"Dick, after all these years—after all the other girls—it's so strange to think of myself as engaged!"

"It's strange to me to think that, at last—" He stopped on a brief, odd little laugh. "That at last I've gotten Gall Lawrence!" Dick finished it boyishly.

"It's all so strange," Gall mused, her fingers clinging to his, the glory and beauty of the autumn woods about them. "I'll be Mrs. Richard Stebbins!" she said.

"Gosh!" the big man said, smiling down at her, small and square and tawny-headed, flushed with walking, radiant in this exquisite hour of fulfillment.

"It's all come out like a story," Gall decided contentedly. She jerked her head, with a sudden little touch of self-consciousness, toward the unseen picnicers. "They know," she said, with an abashed grin.

"I don't know why they know," Dick answered, surprised.

"Oh, they do! But let's have it—ours, for just a little while," the girl pleaded. "Let's not tell them today, anyway."

"You're the boss," Dick agreed, as they went on.

The others were making preparations for departure. It was four o'clock, Gall gave no sign as she began to help gather sweaters and cups; Dick said nothing, but Lily shot Phil a significant glance, accompanied by a brief nod, and Phil went up at once to his sister and caught her by the arm and turned her about.

Gall's innocent inquiring glance changed guiltily, and she laughed, the rare hot color spreading over her face.

In another second Phil had given a great shout, and Gall was laughing and crying in his arms, and Lily, leaping over her amazed children, had run to embrace Dick wildly.

After that every one laughed and shouted. It was Ariel who was the most surprised; entirely taken aback.

"But Dick Stebbins, Gall," she said later, in a faintly complaining tone, in the privacy of their own room. "He—after all, his father was our father's—well, foreman! Employee!"

"Ariel, you little fool!" Gall answered with a joyous laugh. She was too happy to quarrel.

"Well, after all, birth does count," Ariel said discontentedly.

But Gall was too much absorbed in her own thoughts to hear her.

If Mr. Willoughby lived, then Dick would duly depart with him in a few weeks' time, and instead of following up the London offer would establish himself somewhere in the East, possibly in Washington.

If his superior died, Dick would go east at once, and follow the same course.

In either case he and Gall would be married in—say eight months.

"Call it a year, it's safer, Dick."

"Eight months. Maybe six."

"That would be April or May!"

"April or May."

He came soberly into the library, ten days after the picnic, to tell her that old Willoughby had quietly slipped away.

Gall's face paled a little.

"So it's no London?"

"No London."

"After all your work, Dick!"

"Oh, that! It'll come in, somehow, some day."

"But it does mean a fresh start?"

"In a way it does. But the thing I mind is leaving you."

"No help for it!" she said gallantly.

"I suppose not."

"I have something, you know," she said hopefully, after a pause. "Phil is fixing it all up now. Ariel wants money, and Sam and I would as soon wait. So it looks as if we might get the ranch, he and I, and he says he'd like to live there and farm it, and put out twenty acres of table berries. If he does, even though it might be some time . . . And then there's The Bella of Saint Giles!" she added, in increasing hope. Dick laughed.

"It'll all work out," he said, following the laugh with a faint frown.

"But—it isn't just what I wanted to offer you, my darling."

The last word fluttered her senses, and she laughed excitedly.

"Besides, there may be a miracle!" she said.

Dick looked into the honest, shining, loving, blue eyes so near his own, and lightly touched the square capable hand.

"You're the miracle!" he said.

The phrase was destined to become a household word. For it was but a few days later that Dick came to the Lawrence house to dinner, late, and handed a telegram to Gall across the rice muffins and the old blue milk pitcher and the glass bowl of pink October roses.

"Read it aloud."

"Dazedly, she obeyed. It was signed 'George G. Leavitt.'"

"We would be glad if you could arrange to take Paul Willoughby's place, assuming full responsibility for London office. Can offer you assistant if desired."

"Dick!" She swallowed hard. "What does it mean?"

"It means being picked out of the ranks, and handed a field marshal's commission!" Dick said in a voice that shook.

"Congratulations!" Phil said, his handsome Lawrence face one glow of pride and satisfaction.

"But Dick—Dick—can you," Gall stammered. "I mean—ate you sure? Without—without—"

Old Fashioned Patchwork Quilts

Patchwork Quilt Designs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

From all indications quilt makers will be busy this winter making more quilts. Quilts are still very attractive for needle workers, and any suggestion on this work will be welcomed.

Patchwork Quilt making is much easier today than during Colonial days. Patches are more easily obtained. Diagrams and cutouts for patches and books of instruction are printed. All of these make the work easier and more quilts are being made.

Grandmother Clark's Book No. 20 on Patchwork Quilts contains 30 quilts with cutting diagram for patches, also several ways to assemble 12 and 18-inch quilt blocks.

This book contains information and diagrams for the quilts shown above and many other old designs. Send us 15 cents for this book No. 20 and receive it by mail.

Fear Fat?—Count Calories
Anti-fat claims that blacken the nutritional reputation of certain foods may be grossly misleading. Average individuals grow fat or thin according to the total number of calories they eat a day. The one rule for reducing is to cut down on the calories but include enough of all the food essentials.—Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

PARENTS SHOULD WATCH CHILD'S REPORT CARDS

"Parents should spend more time in analyzing the scholastic report cards their sons and daughters bring home," writes Don Chalmers Lyons in Hygeia in "An Analysis of the Significance of School Report Cards."

Good or bad grades are not so important as is an evaluation of what those grades actually represent as indicators of social adjustment. The grades which appear on the report card are more than mere indicators of scholastic ability; they are key letters to character and, for the parent who is willing to take the time and trouble to analyze them or to have them analyzed by the child's instructors, they may reveal hitherto unguessed phases in the child's mental, physical and emotional make-up.

Harder work and more study are not panaceas in every case of scholastic failure. Some students have only a limited mental capacity; beyond a certain point, increased study is of no value because of actual inability to assimilate and correlate knowledge. While such students can obtain fair or even good grades if they are carrying a light load of work they are almost certain to fail if they are forced to carry a heavy schedule. It is better to lighten the scholastic load and allow a pupil of this type to take an extra half year or several summer school sessions, if necessary, to complete his high school work than to make him struggle on to fallure and the development of a sense of inferiority under an intolerable load.

Democratic Woman to discuss Recovery Measure

"We see no occasion whatever for any one worrying about the Constitution," said Mrs. James H. Wolfe, of Salt Lake City, Chairman of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, in a statement to the Associated Press. Referring to hysterical plans announced by the Women's Division of the Republican National Committee to "expound the Constitution" for the next 14 months, Mrs. Wolfe said: "It takes a vote of the people to change the Constitution, something that seems to have been overlooked or forgotten. And history shows the Republicans have been the principal Constitution-changers."

Announcing that she will speak before the Women's Democratic Clubs of Indiana at South Bend Oct. 12, Mrs. Wolfe said 710 "reporter groups" have already been formed over the country composed of women "who really have been studying government under
