CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, MAY 1, 1936

NUMBER 45

Senator Dennis Chavez on National Radio Hook-up

Dennis Chavez, U. S. Senator from New Mexico, an active New Deal stalwart, will be heard on a National Radio hook-up Monday, May 4th. Speaking from Station W. J. S. V. in Washington he will discuss important phases of Soil Conservation.

The talk is scheduled to be given over the Columbia Broadcasting System at 10:45 Eastern Standard Time, 8:45 Mountain Standard Time. Choice of the New Mexico Senator to speak on this subject is logical since it is New Mexico that the New Deal is conducting what is hailed as "The Greatest Soil Erosion Project in the World."

Champion Economist

Thelma Kohn of Normandy, Mo., is a golf champion who practices economy with her motor cars just as she does with her golf strokes. She makes them go a long ways without much wasted effort.

Miss Kohn who holds the Southern Illinois Women's Golf Association championship and was a former St. Louis district champion in 1933, recently drove her Pontiac car through a number of southern states, covering a distance of 4381 miles on only 268 gallons of gasoline or an average of over 16 miles to the gallon.

Indians Trim Cobras

By M. C. St. John

The Mesalero Indians took an easy victory over the Carrizozo Cobras last Sunday. Russell of Mesalero pitched for the full game, allowing 3 runs in the first 2 in the second 1 in the third and 1 in the fifth but kept the Cobras swinging futilely for the last four innings. The score was 20 to 7 in their favor. Andy Lueraz who was on the mound for the Cobras for five innings struck out nine men and Russell of the Indians struck out 15 in nine.

Three base hits by Lueraz, Barela and Tino Lopez.

Red Huffmeyer kept the Braves scoreless for two innings but allowed 6 runs in the first of the eighth, three runs were made from Barela in the last inning. The Cobra pitching staff was good, but good hitting by the Indians coupled with a few costly errors by the Cobras resulted in a one sided game.

Italy Is Ruthless and the League Helpless

OCCUPATION of Addis Ababa and all of Ethiopia was the price demanded by Italy for an armistice in East Africa when the council of the League of Nations met again in Geneva. Baron Pompeo Aloisi presented the ultimatum on behalf of Dictator Mussolini. Volde Mariani, representing Ethiopia, countered with a request that the league invoke all penalties against Italy under article 10 of the covenant, these including military sanctions as well as the economic penalties which the league has been trying to enforce. The British and French delegates explained the stand of their respective governments in the embroglio. The league was helpless, and having received the discouraging report of the conciliation committee, was compelled to confess it could not find means of attaining peace. France will not consent to the imposition of military sanctions, and Great Britain naturally will not undertake to enforce them by herself. It appeared the poor Ethiopians were to be abandoned to their fate, meaning the extinction of their empire and their exploitation by Italy.

The council adopted a resolution regretting its inability to end the war, reminding league members that they should continue the sanctions and asking Italy to be generous in bringing the conflict to a close.

Anthony Eden in his address to the council warned France that she might expect from Great Britain no further support against aggression by Germany than France had given against Italy.

From the north, south and west the Italian armies were advancing on Addis Ababa, and the panic-stricken civilian inhabitants of the capital were fleeing from the city. Foreigners sought shelter in the bomb-proof British legation. The mayor issued all the arms available and the government called on all able men to make a last stand for liberty, saying "It is better to die than to be enslaved."

Baron Aloisi

most of the European nations are preparing for war with feverish haste. Austria's army, small but well equipped, held a spring parade in Vienna, and immediately the nations of the little empire displayed their anger at this show of military force and their military attaches in the Austrian capital were ordered not to occupy the places reserved for them among the reviewing officials. Rumania has increased its military budget to $38,000,000 and created a special fund of $20,000,000 for the development of aviation. Hungary is clamoring for revision of the Trianon treaty and recovery of the territory it lost to the little entente.

The forty-seventh birthday of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler provided an opportunity for a big display of Germany's military power.

President's Secretary and Adviser Taken by Death

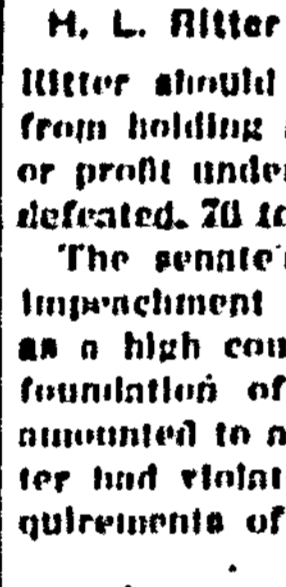

LOUIS McHENRY HOWE, secretary to President Roosevelt and for many years his close friend and adviser, died in the Naval hospital at Washington after an illness of more than a year. Mr. Howe was known in the capital as "the President maker," for it was largely due to his efforts that Mr. Roosevelt reached the White House. For twenty-five years, from the day when Mr. Roosevelt and he first met in Albany, he had devoted himself to forwarding his friend's political fortunes. During the Chicago convention and the ensuing campaign his planning and his advice were credited largely with the results attained.

Judge Ritter Is Found Guilty by Senate

FEDERAL JUDGE HALSTED L. RITTER of Florida was found guilty on impeachment charges by the senate and removed from office, being the fourth federal jurist to be ousted in this manner. On each of the first six articles of impeachment a majority of senators voted for his acquittal; but on the seventh article, which was a generalized summary of the charges against him, he was convicted by a vote of 63 to 29.

An order declaring Ritter should be "forever disqualified from holding any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States" was defeated, 70 to 14.

The senate's verdict in the twelfth impeachment case brought before it as a high court of impeachment since foundation of the American republic amounted to a decision that Judge Ritter had violated the Constitutional requirements of good behavior in office.

Editors Condemn Seizure of Private Telegrams

RESOLUTIONS condemning the blanket seizure of private communications were adopted by the American Society of Newspaper Editors in convention at Washington.

"We are of the conviction," said the resolution, "that if such practice is not checked the threat to liberty of individual action and particularly to the freedom of the press is immediate and menacing."

The society urged its members to cooperate with all law enforcement agencies by guarding against the premature publication of information harmful to the successful completion of criminal investigations. The editors also inaugurated a formal study to determine if it is possible for the press and bar jointly to reach some working formula to prevent sensational murder cases from becoming public scandals.

PWA Power Loan Suit Goes to the Supreme Court

ASKING that the Supreme court reverse the lower court decision in the celebrated Buzzard Roost case, the Duke Power company and the Southern Public Utilities company carried up to the highest tribunal the question of whether the Public Works Administration may finance publicly owned and operated hydro-electric plants in competition with private enterprises. Unless extraordinary measures are taken to speed the case, arguments cannot be heard until the term beginning next October. The government has 30 days in which to reply to the petition for review.

This case, which deeply concerns the New Deal program, arose when the PWA allocated $2,832,000 for construction of the Buzzard Roost plant on the Saluda river.

Resplighi, Noted Italian Composer, Is Dead

OTTO RINO RESPLIGHI, one of the most famous of modern Italian composers, died in Rome at the age of fifty-six of heart disease following blood poisoning. His passing is cause for deep mourning among music lovers everywhere. Several of his operas were presented in New York and Chicago, and he was guest conductor of the Philharmonic symphony orchestra of New York in 1922.

Results of the Illinois Primary Election

ILLOINOIS' primary held the center of political interest for it not only provided lively state battles but also was of considerable moment nationally. Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and Senator Borah of Idaho, who was born in Illinois, were the contestants for the Republican Presidential preferential vote, and the former came out with 31 delegates against 20 for Borah. The senator's friends were elated because, without organization, he carried a large part of the state outside of Chicago. This preferential vote is purely advisory and neither man has a slate of delegates to the national convention. The result makes it certain that Knox will make a respectable showing on the first roll call. It also adds to Borah's prestige and aids him in the coming Ohio primary.

Gov. Henry Horner, seeking re-election, was victorious in the bitter fight with the regular Democratic organization and the Kelly-Nash machine in Chicago, which had thrown him overboard and supported Bundesen for governor. The Democrats almost unanimously voted for the re-nomination of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, and the Republicans named Former Senator Otis Glenn to oppose him in November.

Republican leaders in Washington were encouraged to believe the internecloud warfare in the Democratic ranks would help the Republicans, to carry the state. The Democratic sages, on the other hand, liked the showing of strength made by Borah, feeling his liberal following might switch to Roosevelt in November.

In Nebraska's primary only Borah's name was printed on the Republican preferential ballot but almost one-sixth of the voters wrote in the name of Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas.

For the Democratic preference President Roosevelt was unopposed in both Illinois and Nebraska.

Flood-Control Approved by the President

IN HIS press conference President Roosevelt said government departments are concentrating on flood control problems and that if congress would pass a bill appropriating a billion dollars for that purpose he would sign it, provided the measure put them to work immediately.

Mr. Roosevelt said the Panama-quoddy project in Malco and Florida ship canal were eliminated because of the recent refusal of congress to make appropriations for continuance of the work. He said he did not contemplate doing out relief funds for the projects and that there would be no funds for the projects unless congress reversed its refusal.

On the same day the United States Chamber of Commerce issued a warning against encroachment of the federal government on flood control projects which are the primary responsibility of the states.

Private Life of Jonah

IT WASN'T a whale which swallowed Jonah, theorizes Stanley Suchwako, it was a big-mouthed fish in northern Michigan. His friend, Laddie Hornak, captured the monster in 1930.

Laddie inspected the fish, which had laid down its life while being hooked, killed and beaten over the head with a pile of cars, and couldn't decide what to do with it. The size seemed to detract from the fish's commercial value and Laddie's surprise, says Stanley, when the first stranger to arrive bid a fabulous price for the fish's scales.

Laddie yelled "Sold!" Then he recovered his pulse, secured off the scales, counted the money and watched the stranger bear the scales away.

"What'll you do with 'em?" asked Laddie.

"I'm a scale manufacturer from Moline, Ill.," replied the buyer. "I've got material here for 2,000 spades of the best chipped steel."

Buyer after buyer paid staggering prices for different parts of the fish and Laddie, says Stanley, didn't get wise until a tremendous price was bid and accepted for the fish's stomach.

The stomach buyer immediately slit open the fish's belly and revealed the golden throna upon which Jonah had been seated during his long captivity.

"It's cheap at half the price," stated the buyer with pardonable satisfaction as he brushed a stray sn from his precious purchase.

The Despondent Grasshoppers

A SEASONED maxim of the copy-books is that frequently a real cry does a person good. Leonard Baller, once a Nebraska farmer, is sure of it. Rain washed away the railroads around his Nebraska lands; the drought hit him squarely; then the dust storms killed every living thing and his land was dry as the inside of a grain bin. At this moment, the grasshoppers arrived by millions and settled on his farms.

Wasn't a thing for the 'hoppers to eat but they were too tired to move on and Leonard almost lost hope. As a last gesture, however, he rushed out among the despondent grasshoppers, sitting there in the dust, and planted several sets of the strongest and hardest onions he could buy.

To his surprise the onions matured quickly. The moment their bulbs appeared above ground, the grasshoppers pounced on them, ate ravenously and burst into tears.

"And that," Leonard recalls proudly, "is how my farms were saved. The land was drenched by the tears of the grasshoppers and as soon as they had drowned themselves I was able, of course, to raise a normal crop."

President Lays Cornerstone for a Big Building

WITH appropriate ceremony the cornerstone of the new interior department building in Washington was laid, the President presiding. The structure, the second largest government office building there, is to be completed in December. It covers five and one-half acres and will provide 700,000 square feet of usable floor space. It will cost $12,000,000, about $5,000,000 less than the capital's largest, the Commerce department building.

The ironed by Mr. Roosevelt was the one employed by George Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol in 1793.

Draft of New Tax Bill Ready for Consideration

HAVING discarded the President's suggestion of temporary processing taxes, Chairman Sam B. Hill's house subcommittee completed its draft of the new tax bill.

It calls for a new type of corporation levy, ranging from 1 per cent to 29.7 per cent for corporations with net income up to $10,000, and from 4 to 42 1/2 per cent for corporations with net income over $10,000, depending on the amount of earnings that are not distributed. Preferential tax treatment is given to banks and insurance companies, to debt-ridden companies, to companies in receivership, and a new system of taxing non-resident aliens is created.

Big Pay for Lobby Committee Lawyer Is Refused

BY A vote of 153 to 137 the house rejected a resolution to permit Senator Black's lobby committee to pay $10,000 to special counsel in injunction litigation started by William Randolph Hearst to protect his telegrams from the probers. This action, which followed a bitter debate, doesn't halt the work of the committee, which has its own funds, but it prevents the payment of more than $3,000 a year, in accordance with general law, to Crampton Harris of Birmingham, Ala.

TALL TALES

As Told by: FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Champion of the Oil Fields

ASK any Texas or Oklahoma oil-driller who's the best in his business and he's pretty certain to answer "Why, Kemp Morgan, of course!"

Ask him why and he will tell you it's because Kemp had more unusual experiences than any other seeker after "black gold" ever did.

For instance there was the time Kemp lost his best drill. He was working in soft ground but he noticed that the drill kept going slower and slower the farther it went down. Pretty soon it stopped completely. When Kemp tried to pull it out, it was stuck fast. Come to find out that he had hit an alum mine and the hole had shrunk up around the drill so tight that even Kemp couldn't budge it.

Then there was the time a Texas "norther" swooped down on Kemp's rig. But it didn't stop him—no sir! He just kept on drilling, and brought in a 22-inch gusher. It was so cold that the oil froze as it spurted upward so there was a solid column of frigid oil. Kemp just took out his knife, hacked it off in three-foot lengths and shipped it to the refinery on flat cars.

That was in Texas but Kemp had a funny experience once in Oklahoma. He drilled a well so deep that it tapped a rubber mine way down in Brazil. She began to gush pure rubber, so Kemp just blew his hot breath on it to make it solid, cut it off in 11-foot lengths and shipped it to that place in Ohio where they make solid tires for trucks.

When the average driller brings in a "duster," he moves his rig away from there pronto. But not Kemp Morgan! He knew what a tough time the Kansas farmers had digging postholes in the summer when the ground was baked hard. So whenever he'd strike a dry hole, he'd just take his iron hands, pull it up four feet and two inches at a time and saw it off. Then he'd ship a carload of these lengths across the state line where they always found a market.

Farm Jurors Don't Know Hay Baler; Judge Asks Picture

Attorney Paul O. Cooper, representing a client in Fairmont, Minn., suing for damages allegedly suffered in a collision between an automobile and a hay baler, thought the jury of 12 farmers knew about hay balers. But they told Judge J. E. Hoyer that they had never seen one, although much hay is raised hereabouts. Then it developed Attorney Cooper couldn't describe one either, so Judge Hoyercraft told him to bring a picture.

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat any food. My stomach hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose took brought me relief. Now I eat and sleep like a normal man. My doctor says I'm better."—Mrs. J. A. Miller.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas, pain, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shouh, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

Why Physicians Recommend Milknesia Wafers

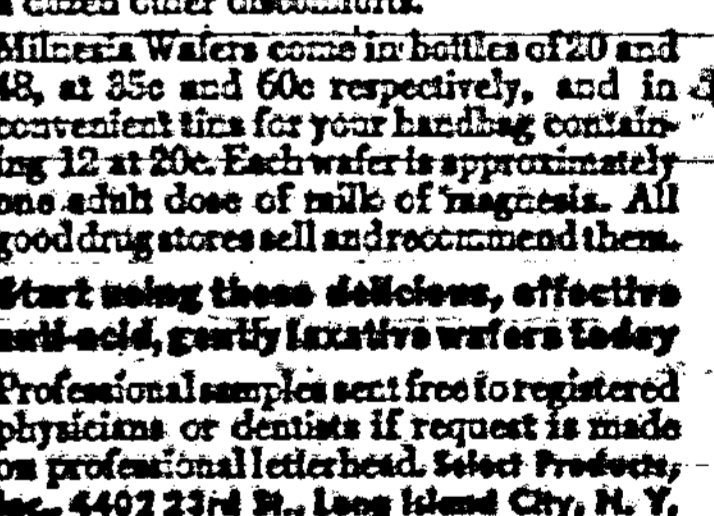

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the stomach and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milknesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Start using these delicious, effective acid-soak, gently laxative wafers today!

Oh, see the man! The man is a racketeer. What is a racketeer? A racketeer is a man who enjoys special privileges in America and who gets more space in the newspapers in a month than honest business men get in their lifetimes. How does the racketeer obtain special privileges? It's all done by mirrors, machine guns, armored cars and political ambitions. Are racketeers ever arrested? Now and then. Do they go to prison? Rarely ever. Why not? It's too difficult. Some of them try very hard to get into the hoosegow, but it is almost impossible. If rounded up on serious charges, such as defying the Constitution, general lawlessness and murder, don't they go to prison? Not so that you could notice it. But isn't there any way a racketeer can get the government to put him in prison? Oh, yes, there is one way that will greatly excite Uncle Sam and cause him to deal quickly and severely with a racketeer.

HOW TO TAME A LION TAMER

"Marry Him!" Says Mrs. Clyde Beatty, Whose Hubby Is Terror of Jungle Cats, but Kitten Around House.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

GIRLS, what would you do if you woke up one of these spring mornings and discovered that you were in love with a lion tamer? With a guy who stares the King of Beasts right in the eye and makes him sit sulking in a corner like a disciplined schoolboy? Who wrestles hand-to-hand with a man-eating tiger and wins the decision? Who walks into a cage with thirty or forty assorted jungle cats of both varieties twice a day and makes them do his bidding? Who even keeps a lion around the house to take care of the scraps from the dining table?

Don't laugh. It might happen to YOU. This is spring. Spring is the open season for romance. And spring is the season for the opening of the circus.

It happened to a little Russian-American girl just about three years ago. SHE fell in love with a lion tamer, a lion tamer who does all those unbelievable things we were just talking about. And what did she do? She married him.

Follows Hubby's Footsteps.

She married Clyde Beatty, the little, curly-headed fellow who is generally considered the greatest animal trainer of all time. For a couple of years she peeled potatoes in their home at Rochester, Ind., where the circus spends the winter, while Clyde's lion-around-the-house sat at her feet and roared for more table scraps. But like all good wives, Harriet knew that she must keep herself interested in the things that appealed to her husband. And she did—with a vengeance. She became a lion tamer herself and now appears every day in the same circus with her husband. She is today the only trainer in the world who "works" a lion, a tiger and an elephant in the same cage at the same time.

The story of this remarkable pair is one of those romantic dramas under the big top that endow the circus with much of the glamor it still holds for millions, young and old, even in this fast-moving age.

The story really begins about sixteen years ago in Chillicothe, Ohio. There was a circus playing in Chillicothe, and its fanfare drew the attention of a strapping youth of fifteen in the town of Bainbridge, a few miles away. It was a big day for the boy. It was also a big day for the circus, although that was not proven for quite a few years.

Clyde Beatty never went back to Bainbridge. He got a job as a cage-boy for the polar bear act. He was pretty small, but there was something to his eye, and they took him.

Two years later Clyde was working his own act—not with polar bears, but with the great cats who would tilt a man with a single bite and do it willfully.

Over the years Clyde and his cats were to reach the heights—heights from which they have not yet descended. In rapid succession came top billing in the Big Show, moving pictures and, finally, ownership interest in one of the major circuses. Clyde is now part owner of the Cole Brothers circus, in which he and Mrs. Beatty perform.

To catch up Mrs. Beatty's part of the story now: She was born in Chicago of Russian parents not too many years ago. Her name was something you have to guess in Russian but in English it became just plain Harriet Evans. In 1930 the circus was in town and advertised for girls to sell candy. Harriet needed a job, and she joined up with the show. Like Beatty, she never left it.

Harriet is a lily-wisp of a thing, with deep-set, serious eyes betrayed by a smile that curls at the corners. Her soft, delicate, blonde beauty charms all who meet her. It was, too, good for a cundy girl. Combined with her natural flair for dancing inherited from Russian ancestors, it got her into the circus ballet.

Harriet Gets Up in World. From the ballet it wasn't much of a jump—figuratively speaking—to the flying trapeze, and Harriet accomplished it, quaintly enough, with the greatest of ease.

And then she fell. No, not from the trapeze (although she did that, too, once). She fell for the dapper little man who looked the bold, bad lions in the eye and made them wilt.

Mr. Beatty looked the petite aerial artist in the eye—and HE wilted. The little giant whose leer could turn a jungle lion into peevish schimper just rolled over on his back and purred like a kitten.

The daredevil with nerves of steel became putty in the hands of a woman—THE woman.

And now, girls, if your heart boy friend happens to be a bookkeeper, a farmer, a clerk, a lawyer, a truck driver, a doctor or even a newspaper man, here is your chance to find out what a thrill it is to be wooed by the world's most courageous lion tamer. You have Harriet Beatty's word for it first-hand.

Imagine the Thrills, Girls! "What," Mrs. Beatty was asked, "is it like to be wooed by a lion tamer?" "Oo—oo—oo!" She gleefully giggled. "It can very sweet!"

"How does a fearless, dominating ride around the ring the best of friends. So adept a trainer is she, she has never yet had a "close call" in the cage.

Such luck has not fallen to the lot of her husband. Clyde works as many as 48 assorted lions and tigers in the same cage at once. He makes them perch upon stools and assume all kinds of positions and formations. Menelik, a new cat with the set this year, sits on his haunches and waves his paws around in the air like a prize fighter entering the ring. A tiger rolls over and over and then chases his fall at Clyde's command. With such goings-on and a horde of wild beasts, it is not an infrequent happening for one or two of the cats to rebel.

Clyde's closest shave came in winter quarters when he was rehearsing his act preparatory to opening the 1932 season. Samson, one of the older and larger lions, attacked him and put him in the hospital, hovering between life and death for sixteen weeks. Had not a tiger then attacked the lion and diverted its attention, Clyde must have been a goner.

Lion Kills Cage Boy. Samson, incidentally, is one beast you would not like to be nicking some night down a dark alley. The writer personally saw him sink his teeth into the shoulder of another trainer, Allen King, one night, and King, too, would be a dead man today if a tiger had not come to his rescue. (It must not be supposed that the tiger in either case was trying to save the trainer's life—he was merely after a nice, juicy bite of lion meat on the tooth). Last winter Sammy succeeded in killing a cage boy who carelessly left the "chute" door open while working.

The two cats have a natural hatred for each other, and when this hatred works up to a certain pitch a fight sometimes results in Mustang Michigan, last season a fight almost broke up the show and resulted in the death of a cat or two. Across the state in May (the season before a rumour in the cage caused a plot in Beatty's holster to discharge, wounding him severely in the leg. He went on with the act, however, and it was not until some time later that the slug was removed by a doctor. He holds his gun with nothing but blinks now.

Clyde Beatty has never seen an Afric can jungle, but then Edgar Rice Burroughs wrote the whole "Tarzan" series of savage jungle lore and he hasn't seen one either. Clyde huss his cats from zoo and animal dealers. He looks for lions and tigers with spirit cats who will fight back when he encourages them. That's one of the reasons that his every appearance in the cage is a nearly mortal ordeal, one that leaves him sopping wet with perspiration and with nerves so unstrung that he will talk to no one, even his wife, for 20 minutes after the act.

Prefers Cats to Camera. Even so, Clyde says he is more afraid of Hollywood than his cage of cats. He has made three pictures, "The Big Cage," "The Lost Jungle" and "Darkest Africa." The latter is a thriller or serial which he completed this winter, and it's Hollywood at its dullest. It's full of Bat Men, wild hairbreadth escapes, volcanic eruptions and heroic feats.

In making the picture, Clyde was badly bruised by some of the Bat Men, did not succeed in effecting a couple of the hairbreadth escapes, was rather painfully blown up in one of the synthetic volcanoes and had to rest up for a week after performing the final heroic feat.

The last named incident occurred when the director casually asked Clyde if he would mind "rinsing" in tiger hair-breadth, on the plea that it would be "sure-fire picture stuff." Clyde was finally talked into it, but only on condition that the match take place after the rest of the picture was finished, so there would still be a picture, even if there was not any more Beatty.

The match was long and furious and Clyde got pushed around plenty before winning the deciding fall.

"Pretty good," conceded the director, "pretty good. Now let's try it just once more with a little more of the old pep!"

Clyde's reply has been deleted so that this newspaper can be sent through the United States mails.

Oo—oo—oo! He can't very sweet!

Harriet Beatty is the only trainer ever to work a lion, a tiger and an elephant in the same cage at the same time.

male like Clyde act during a courtship?" "Oo—oo—oo! He can't very sweet!"

"Well, now that you are married, haven't you found that a lion tamer is something of a terrible tyrant around the house?" "Ooo—oo! He can't very sweet!"

So now you know. When Clyde and Harriet were married he insisted that she quit working. She did for a while. She didn't like to be around when Clyde was risking his life with the cats, anyway. She was afraid of them. But she raised a cub, Leo, on a baby's bottle, and that cured her of a great deal of her fear.

Leo is a year and a half old now and, according to Harriet, "can't very sweet," but some of the Beattys' house guests don't think so. Leo is an affable sort for a jungle beast, but he is as large as a small draft horse and likes to play. Women folks don't warm up to him very easily.

"He rips their stockings and that annoys them," says Harriet. "And his teeth are getting big now. When he bites you it hurts."

She Knows No Fear. Leo's teeth are a couple of inches long and about as dull as the business end of an ice pick. But they can't be very terrifying to a little lady who spends a few minutes every afternoon and evening now in a cage with a full-grown lion, an ill-dispositioned tiger and a lumbering pachyderm, all natural enemies.

This is the new act which Harriet devised and, with Clyde's guiding hand to tame her, works in the circus this year. She makes the great cats leap through hoops of flame to the elephant's back and

Mrs. Era B. Smith, Editor and Publisher

On the 15th of next August we will have completed our fourth year as owner and editor of the Lincoln County News. The News has always floated the Democratic ensign.

Personally we have always believed in democratic principals, but we are still stronger in the faith when we go back to the last Republican administration and observe their utter incapacity in dealing with the problems which were facing the people at that time. Contrast the conditions of three years ago and now.

The contrast between the state of the nation now, and the way it was under Mr. Hoover is the only answer needed to combat the claims of the ones who are seeking a return to the system which was so emphatically repudiated by the people in 1932. Unable to combat the fact of the restored solvency of business they say the renewed prosperity is not because of the help given by the administration. Well if it wasn't the administration, what in the world was it that turned the despair of the people into hope and gave courage to the very people who are now crying for a return to Hoover principles? We know that the Hoover administration witnessed ten thousand bank failures. We also remember that the remainder of our banks were on the verge of collapse. The Roosevelt regime made them so safe that no one stops to worry over the possibility of losing their money. Now, perhaps some other people might have done a better job than Mr. Roosevelt, but to date none of these critics have made a suggestion as to how this could have been accomplished.

Some Republicans are weeping over the extravagance and waste and failure to balance the budget. We haven't heard any suggestions from these self appointed economists either. A preacher set to holding services at a churchless employment camp? A writer doing some emergency compilation? An artist decorating some emergency scheme? Well preachers, writers and artists, all have important places in the scheme of things. To economize, would they abandon the farm program? They say not! Would they cut off relief? They say not! Governor Larson, aspirant for the presidency denied indignantly that he had any such intentions.

There is still no suggestion from these pulpitating patriots as to where the extravagance is manifest, but they lament about failure to balance the budget and about the "boondoggling."

They say the President has repudiated his promise, but we have yet to hear them mention any promise that has not been carried out or is not now being carried out. They say he promised a balanced budget. Balancing a budget is not something that can be done in the flicker of an eyelash when millions are still on relief. If you deduct the money now coming back to the Government in payment of RFC loans and those of the Farm Credit and Home Owners Loan administrations, the actual amount the Government owes is not much more than the Hoover deficit.

Moreover, because the Government's credit is so good that it can borrow money at a very much lower rate of interest than it did before, the cost of carrying the total debt today is less than what it cost to carry the lesser debt of the Hoover period.

Used Car Situation

Chevrolet dealers' used car sales for the first six months of the current model year will reach the staggering total of more than 9,000,000 units.

This announcement by W. E. Holler, vice president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, was a highlight of an interview this week, in which Mr. Holler pointed out that his company's record-breaking new car volume is giving used car prospects an exceptionally wide assortment from which to choose. High volume sales of used cars, he said, are the natural outcome of the public's recognition that these offerings are sound transportation values.

SYNOPSIS

John Spencer and his cousin, Geoffrey Bohun, are vacationing in Austria. Geoffrey is a gifted portrait painter but prefers to paint landscapes. While strolling in the forest, John hears English voices, and decides to investigate. From cover he finds four men burying a man in green livery who, evidently, had been murdered. Pharaoh is the leader of the gang; the others are Dewdrop, Rush and Bugle. Unfortunately, John makes himself known to the assassins by dropping a letter with his name and address. He tells Geoffrey and his chauffeur, Barley, of his adventure. Geoffrey, realizing that John's life is in danger, declares he must vanish. Spencer discovers that the livery of the murdered man corresponds to the livery of the servants of York Castle, and tells Countess Helena, governess of the castle, what he had seen. With Geoffrey and Barley, John starts for Annabel, a nearby village. They encounter Pharaoh. In making their getaway they exchange shots with the gang, without serious result. They arrive at Plumage farm, on the York estate, where Lady Helena had requested John and his cousin to meet her. She reveals to them that her father had converted his immense fortune into gold and hidden it away in a secret vault in the castle. Knowing that his son, Valentine, Helena's brother, was incapable of controlling the fortune, he had revealed it to Helena alone just before his death. In some manner the news leaked out, and Pharaoh is after the treasure. They planned that Geoffrey and Barley would go to Salzburg to watch for Pharaoh, while John was to remain at Plumage, patrolling the roads about York from dusk to dawn. Several nights go by without important incident. John visits York Castle and finds that Helena's brother, Count Valentine, is there and with him, on most friendly terms, is Pharaoh, an ex-Captain. Hearing that John is stopping at Plumage, Pharaoh speaks to Dewdrop. John suspects a plot. At dinner is announced, Helena and John make their escape, pursued by Pharaoh's men, encountering many difficulties during the night. They run out of gas.

If we were now in no peril, our case was sorry enough. Stay with the Rolls we dared not, for the chance that some friend would come by before some enemy seemed to us very slight. Helena's brilliant plan was back in the mulling-pot, for her cousin would have kept her counsel, but we could not now summon Geoffrey until we were sure of our boat. And the Rolls had to be recovered before we could move. . . . Over all, the knowledge that, until I was healed, I was not only out of action, but could not lift a finger if danger arose, hung like a thunder-cloud.

"Are you sure you can walk?" said Helena.

"Comfortably," said I. "And if I saw Pharaoh coming, I quite expect I could run. The burning question is where to look for a lodging that's not by the side of this road."

Together, by the light of the torch, we studied the map. Upon this there was shown a farm, called Holy Tree. So far as we could make out, it stood some seven miles off.

Though I was tired and in pain, I shall always remember with pleasure our progress that summer night.

We had walked for an hour and a half before the truck we were using came to an end. The going was rough and, because I was weary, I stumbled, and every time I did so the muscle which I had injured protested with all its might.

"It is useless," said I, halting. "We must wait till the dawn comes in." I stepped to a mighty beech and hung the clothes I was wearing down at its foot. "You must lie down here, my lady, and take some rest. And Sabre and I will watch."

"I see," said Helena, slowly. Then she put up her hands and slid my coat from my shoulders and drew it clear of my arms. "You've got to change," she said and, despite my protests, insisted on helping me into dry clothing.

"Now you lie still," said Helena, lighting my torch. "I'm going to get some leaves."

Three times she went and came with her coat full of dry leaves. Then she poured into a hollow by the side of the beech. I found there an ease of body which I had not expected that night. And she sat down behind me, with her back to the trunk.

"When we get to Holy Tree, I'm going to borrow some lotion and rub your back. I shall tell them we're brother and sister, so remember to treat me rough. It's really important, John; if you value my name—if you're polite, they'll know that you aren't my brother and then my reputation will cease to exist."

The falling of a bird woke me, and a glance at the leaves above me showed that the dawn was up.

At once I rolled on to my side, but Helena's judgment was empty and she and Sabre were gone. Since I was very foul, I determined to wash some water before she returned.

My back was stiff, as was natural, but to my relief I found I could walk with ease, so I set off towards the clearing, for there, the night before, I had heard the song of a rill.

When I had found this, I bathed my head and my hands—but before I had finished this very simple toilet, Sabre gave tongue beside me and then stood moving his tail and looking the way I had come.

A moment later my lady stepped out of the woods.

"How's his back?" said Helena, taking her seat on a tree-stump.

"Stiff," said I, "but better."

"Rest is the medicine," says she.

"We simply must find a farm. Besides, I want my breakfast."

"God send it you quick," said I. "We must go on walking east; but if after half an hour we don't strike a path or something—"

"I've struck one," says she. "I don't know where it leads to, but I think we might try and find out."

Nearly an hour had gone by when we saw before us no farm, but a little, time-honored cottage, standing in a glade of the forest, with a garden of flowers about it.

"Bread and milk," said Helena, turning a glowing face. "And honey, perhaps—there's a beehive."

We were 40 paces away, when a young woman entered the doorway and stood looking into the garden alight with the sparkling flowers. For a moment she stared upon them. Then she leaned against the jamb, put her arm up to her eyes and began to weep.

Helena and I stopped dead.

Then—

"You stay here," she said quietly, "and I'll go on and see what the trouble is. Perhaps we can straighten it out in return for a meal."

Twenty minutes went by before I saw her again, and then she came out of the garden with the lass that had stood at the door. The latter was smiling now.

For a moment the two stood speaking.

Then the woman dropped a curtsy and started across the forest in evident haste.

Helena beckoned to me, and I got to my feet.

As I came towards her—

"The trick," she said, "has been done. Our hostess has gone for petrol, and when she comes back in two hours, she's going away for good—for three days, at least, to Salzburg. Our host, however, will remain; he's laid now in the very best of humors and finding our use of his cottage an excellent joke."

I followed her into the cleanest of tiny kitchens, all bright with old wood and copper and smelling of sweet wood-smoke. Beneath the open window a table was laid with our breakfast.

Sabre was lying on the flags in front of the hearth, and a pretty, fair-haired baby that might have been two years old was seated beside the Alsatian.

Helena sat down by the infant and drew him on to her lap.

"Max," she said, "this is my brother. He's rather nice."

"And our host?" said I.

Helena looked up, laughing.

"This is our host," she said. "If you had any members, you'd come and give him a kiss."

CHAPTER V

The Forester's Cottage.

"Convention be damned," said Helena. "All right," I said, "I can't help it. Do what you like. If the Countess Helena of York is determined to dwell in a solitary, two-roomed cottage with an imitation brother, an infant-in-law and a dog—"

"Till your cousin arrives, she is. And now listen to me. Freda's mad as is Salzburg; he's lying in hospital there and gradually getting better of a fever which nearly carried him off. Yesterday she got a letter, saying that how she might visit him, but that on no account must she bring with her the child. I imagine there's a risk of infection. Well, that provision fore it for she's no one to take the child. And that is why she was weeping. . . ."

"I offered to care for the baby and to give her a present as well, if my brother and I might stay here until her return. She simply jumped at the bargain—she's gone for petrol and when she leaves for Salzburg she'll take a letter to your cousin. I need hardly say she's promised to hold her tongue."

"Now if, to serve convention, you'd have thrown such a chance away, we'd better say good-bye here and now. You're jealous of my honor. Well and good. If you weren't, we shouldn't be here. It is because you respect me, because you're so very anxious that I shouldn't put a foot wrong, that I like you and trust you."

"All right," I said slowly, and hardly knew my own voice. "I'll play the pretty game."

When Freda returned with a heavy laden, for she bore two gallons of petrol which she had begged of the farmer that sold her milk; and as well she brought two chickens and a basket of new-laid eggs. What tale she had told I know not, but I think that it served her turn, for we were not once molested by curious eyes. She had little time to spare, if she was to catch the train which would bring her to Salzburg that night.

I took my ease for the most of that day, but while I am sure the repose did much for my back, it was Helena's use of the lotion that actually healed the strain.

"Tonight," I said, "I am going to get the Rolls. I'll fill her up at some pump and then find some place near Witchcraft and park her there. Her value apart, we simply must have that car. Without her we're tied by the leg."

"I shall come, too," said Helena.

"Sabre can mind the baby and keep the house."

"I think," said I, "that you've come enough today. You've fetched and carried and nursed me and played with Max."

"Oh, John, why wasn't I born to a life like this? The life I lead is a duty—and that's the truth."

"We're not born to idylls," said I.

"We've no such luck."

Helena crossed her ankles and laced her delicate fingers behind her head.

"Did you find it idyllic, too?"

"I tried to say so this morning."

Helena knitted her brows.

"Then you said it very badly," she said. "I thought you were jibbing at being here alone with me."

"For me, that's the idyll," said I.

Helena turned her head and gave me a dazzling smile.

It was when we had eaten our supper and the infant was fast asleep that Sabre was given his orders and we set out with the petrol to seek the Rolls. The dusk would come in, I judged, by the time we had crossed the clearing and gained the track, and that was just what we wanted, for so we could use the daylight, yet be wrapped in the cloak of darkness by the time we came to the road. For all that, I was none too easy, for, if by some evil chance, friend Pharaoh had found the Rolls, his instinct might well have suggested that we should return at nightfall to try to recover the car. And if he was lying there, waiting . . .

The nearer we drew to the road, the more I wished for Sabre; for he at least would have saved us from walking into a trap.

Five minutes later, perhaps, the darkness ahead was lightened, and I knew we were approaching the road.

With my right hand upon my pistol, I moved like any shadow along the side of the track.

Arrived at its mouth, I waited, straining my ears. So perhaps for three minutes. Then I stole round the corner and on to the edge of the road.

The Rolls was gone.

I was up betimes the next morning and had shaved and bathed and dressed before Helena called to me to know if I was awake.

First came the caring for Max and the preparation of our breakfast, which occupied our time for about two hours.

In my note I had asked my cousin to bring some food, but, in case he brought with him no bread, Helena decided to make some—a labor which kept us busy till nearly noon. I judged that my cousin would reach us by five o'clock. And that would be the end of my idyll; with his and Barley's coming, my present estate, my kingdom, must be resigned, my lovely hour would be over, and never so long as I lived should I ever be given another that smelled so sweet.

From a covert which we selected we could see the way to Witchcraft, yet could not be seen, for the ground rose up a little, to make a knoll, yet the bracken made us a breastwork through which we could see when we pleased, which no eye looking up from the path could ever have pierced.

As I turned to peer through the fronds—

"You are very impatient," said Helena.

"That's the wrong word," said I. "I can't tell you what's the right one, but it's rather like standing on a platform, seeing somebody off by train."

Helena knitted her brows.

"I know the feeling," she said, "but I don't see how it applies."

"You wouldn't," said I. "Never mind. The train will leave when Geoffrey and Barley arrive."

Again I turned to glance at the shadowy way down which they must come.

"I like Mr. Bohun," said Helena.

"He's the best-in-the-world," I cried.

"Well, he'll be here soon—if you don't keep on watching that path. Watched pots never boil, you know."

"You don't understand," I said, and lay back on the turf. "I don't want Geoffrey at all. I'll be glad to see him, of course. But if he was delayed or something, I—I shouldn't mind."

Some time later Helena suddenly peered through the fronds. "At last," she said. "Enter Mr. Bohun and Barley—with a suitcase in every hand. What do they think this is? The Ma-jestic hotel?"

Hats to Match Top Juvenile Coats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

GRANTED that mother and big sister are looking too chic and charming for words this spring, in their new syle and span stylish tailcoats or their bolero costumes, if not a redingote outfit that contrasts print with plain, to which there has been added accessories utterly feminine and seductive as accessories must be that would go high-style this season.

However, we are not saying that vaguely attired adults are the whole show, nor when a bevy of stylishly arrayed youngsters join the procession. Then does competition become keen and it is the tiny tots in their new spring outfits that will be getting the big applause, we venture to say, to their elders ever so beguilingly gaped. Which they should for children's fashions are as cunning and intriguing as fancy fare picture this season.

As a fashion "hot" for spring it is the little coat-and-hat ensemble that is taking precedent at the immediate moment. It adds zest to the "blonde" that children's coats are unusually versatile this season in the matter of styling. Then, too, a particularly wide choice of materials is offered. Tweeds in delectable colorings, camel's hair weaves, navy twills, novelty wool plaids and serge are all important in the list of juvenile coatings.

Careful attention is being paid to tailoring and styling, with the English trend dominating. Inverted pleats, crisp collars, velvet pipings as well as insets in tailored collars are high-style details to consider. Most important to remember is that fashion decrees that every wee coat or suit is to be accompanied by a matching hat. While grown-ups are going in for daring color to the limit, high colors are not so much in the children's wear picture. As a matter of fact, it is the medium tones that are most generally

In use this season. Pastels are also definitely favored in aqua, dusty and skipper blue in the order named. Many all-white coats will be worn.

Full length coats are more popular than the short jackets, although the over belored reefer type jacket of navy hannel continues to hold its own. The trio of models pictured were selected for illustration from among a collection of little folk's fashions displayed at a preview style event recently held at the Merchandise Mart in Chicago.

The clever little coat to the left is one of the new and very much admired Princess Elizabeth types. It carries that convincing air of distinction such as every fashion-alert mother covets for her child. Tweed in the popular dusty rose shade fashions it. Cunningly flared lines, the double breast button fastening, and the deftly tailored details of collar, cuffs and pockets are all significant style items. The collar of natural linen is detachable.

The little girl walking hand-in-hand so chummily with her companion has on a very attractive long reefer coat in navy blue. White metal buttons and a white hand-embroidered lingerie collar add chic finishing touches. The perky matching hat is of cloth identical with that of the coat.

The adorable child in the foreground has on a coat of skipper blue novelty weave wool with the Princess Elizabeth lines given to it such as are regarded as exceedingly smart for the younger set this spring. Her matching Scotch cap repeats the trim of blue plaid silk used on the coat.

STAR DUST Movie Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

EVERYONE who sees Harriet Hilliard in "Follow the Fleet" or hears her sing on the radio with Ozzie Nelson's band ought to meet her as well; she's decidedly worth meeting. To begin with, she is much prettier in real life than in pictures. And to see her as the demure music teacher who, as Ginger Rogers' sister, falls in love with Randolph Scott, gives you no idea whatsoever of what sort of girl she is. She is magnetic, delightful, charming. And she is one of the few girls who have had a career thrust upon them.

She never did want to go on the stage, but she had to earn her living. And when she was very young her mother pointed out to her the fact that it's better to train for a profession that pays well than for one that never will bring in much money. "Better a dancer at one hundred a week than a stenographer at fifteen," said Mama, or words to that effect. So Harriet became a dancer. She appeared at one of Broadway's big movie houses, and on the road in musical shows. And she worked so hard that, at nineteen, she had to stop.

"If you want to get ahead in Hollywood nowadays, it's better not to be too good looking," remarked a fan magazine editor the other day. She has been meeting movie stars for some fifteen years now, and knows what she is talking about. "Heppburn isn't beautiful," said she. "Neither is Doris Dudley, RKO's newest discovery. But they both have talent. Hollywood is too full of beauties who've been signed up for a few months, and more beauties who came out here hoping for the best, and finished as waitresses."

Katherine Hepburn

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America (what a title!) has decided that one week in May will be Memorial week for Will Rogers; during that week the Will Rogers Memorial at Garano Lake will be dedicated. But Will Rogers did so many things that will make people remember him that he needs no other memorial. For example, he put his old friend, Fred Stone, into pictures; Fred is now established as a screen star, thanks to his work in "Alice Adams" almost a year ago. He also put another old friend, Irvin Cobb, on the screen. You've known of Cobb, as a humorous writer, of course. For years he has been one of our most successful authors.

For a long time it has been Ituby Keeler's ambition to be a great woman golfer; being a good actress and a starlike dancer meant little.

She's been playing golf for some time, and recently she went into the Southern California women's tournament, won three matches, and was put out in the last round. Looks as if she might achieve that ambition after all.

Did you hear the recent broadcast of Paul Whiteman's birthday celebration? Of course, it came at a bad hour—one-thirty in the morning, Eastern Standard time; NEC kept its lice open after midnight for it. The Paul Whiteman album staged it—and what a list of well-known people once worked for Paul! Morton Downey, Bing Crosby, Jane Froman, Ferde Grofe and George Gershwin, the composers, and Mary Margaret McBride, whom you may have heard on the air as Martha Dean.

And, speaking of Marlon Downey, he's sailing in May to keep concert engagements in England and Ireland—and how he loves to go to Ireland!

Here's a funny check-up on the popularity of radio programs. In London they've found that during a really big broadcast the consumption of water drops 85 per cent.

ODDS AND ENDS... "These Three" is a picture that you can't afford to miss... Toby Wing is actually going to make a picture as last... "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is such a success every-where that all the studios are going in for outdoor pictures... Leslie Henson's son Ronald has been working as an extra in "Romeo and Juliet"... Shirley Temple has learned to ride a bicycle and she's crazy about it... "Little Lord Fauntleroy" is a grand picture of the famous book, although Freddie Bartholomew had his way and does not wear golden curls or a velvet suit... Incidentally, his father and mother are still trying to get part of his earnings... Paramount will make four pictures in color... And Twentieth Century-Fox will film "Romance" the same way... First thing you know, black and white pictures will be on the shelf with the old silent ones.

Here's an Adorable High-Waisted Dress That's Easy to Make for Little Girl

Pattern No. 1832-B

When you were a little girl wouldn't you just delight at the thought of having this adorable dress? Then why not sew this up for daughter and see yourself as others did when you were her size.

There's nothing difficult about it at all, no panned seams to join—just a high-waisted skirt and a bit of a bodice which makes it very quickly fashioned. Send for this pattern now and in the meantime make a trip to Main street and buy a few yards of either printed lawn, batiste, flimsy, or voile and a few yards of velvet ribbon for the trimming.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1832-B is available in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Size 4 requires only 2 1/2

All Around the House

A simple Russian dressing is made by adding two tablespoons of chili sauce and two tablespoons of finely chopped green peppers to one cup of mayonnaise.

Paint stains that are dry and old may be removed from cotton or woolen goods with chloroform. First cover amply with olive oil.

The tough skin that forms on top of a cornstarch pudding may be prevented if a piece of oiled paper is placed over pudding when set away to cool.

If the table silver is placed in hot soapsuds immediately after being used, and dried with a soft, clean cloth, much of the work of polishing will be saved.

Purchase seldom used spices in small packages, as it is more economical since spices lose some of their flavor when exposed to the air.

Wood ashes make an excellent fertilizer for shrubbery and rose bushes, also for dahlias, peonies and delphinium. Scatter ashes over soil. It makes it sweet and has a tendency to loosen it.

PERHAPS RETIRED

"I'd like to see that office boy of ours thirty years from now."
"Why so?"
"He ought to make a wonder as a tired business man."

SMILES

A Smart Man
Teacher—Who was the world's smartest man?
Boy—Thomas Edison. He invented the phonograph and radio so that people would stay up all night and use his electric light bulbs.

Affluence
They had suddenly grown rich and bought a farm complete with hens, cows and pigs. Said a visitor: "Do your hens lay eggs?"
"They can," was the reply, "but in our position they don't have to."

TALK ABOUT FLAVOR! TRY WRIGLEY'S

WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT THE PERFECT GUM

STEADIES THE NERVES

MULTI-DUTY GARB URGED FOR SPRING

There's a lot of talk these days about the "basic wardrobe," which is a good idea for the spring budgeter.

The idea is to select the spring suit, coat and printed frocks in one color theme, to be worn with interchangeable accessories. Suppose, for instance, you start with one of the smart new man-tailored suits with black jacket and striped skirt. With it, if you shop wisely, you will get an extra skirt to match the jacket.

Then you should choose a topcoat in tailored style, also black, which may be worn over the suit or with a printed silk frock.

Your printed silks should be bright, gay and simply made, so that you may wear various fancy lingerie accents with them, changing their mood with the favor or collar you select. With these for a foundation, you may achieve endless variety by choice of contrasting accessories.

Parasols and Fans Give Frivolous Touch to Garb

Parasols add a frivolous touch to many summer outfits. In bright printed cottons they appear with beach costumes and in polka-dotted silks they accompany summer suits. Some of these have long crook handles.

Folding fans made of field flowers, tulip or gerandy and flat oval lacquer fans, only a little larger than a hand, lend a glamorous air to evening costumes.

New Gloves

Don't put on the gloves for the first time when in a hurry. Even if you do get them on without splitting they will never fit so well as when they are carefully put on, stretching the kid gently to conform with the lines of the hands. If this is done the first time, all other times will be easy.

WITH A VEIL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A bit of straw, a bribe of closely stitched net, a full-blown rose and a fragile, frivolous, flattering veil and presto! The milliner creates an seductive little cocktail hat as the world's eye gazes upon. As here pictured this intriguing headpiece is posed by Helen Chandler, who wears it in her newest play. It carries a highly important style message in the tight brim that frames the head, namely, the use of many layers of hat closely stitched. Milliners are making many wide-brimmed hats as well as turbans and toques of stitched net this season.

Bowknot Motif

You can tie yourself in knots, fashionably speaking, this spring. Chanel sponsors the bowknot, and the new jewelry proves just how smart they look on a costume. Hinge bracelets carved in a bow have bright metal knots for contrast. The clip pairs carry out the same motif in little half bows with the same metal knots. They come in bright green, red, blue, white and black.
