These posters, which explain how 26,000,000 eligible workers may apply for these benefits, will go to public employment offices, public libraries, chambers of commerce, labor union headquarters, railway stations and other public buildings in the three States, Powell said.

The first poster, entitled "A Monthly Check to You," already is being displayed in the post offices throughout the nation.

A second poster, entitled "Join the March to Old-Age Security," emphasizes the fact that the employee's application for an account number is to be returned not later than December 5, 1936.

The third poster, entitled "Three Steps to Security in Your Old Age," informs the employee that after he fills out and returns to the postoffice an application form, the government will set up for him a security account which establishes the employee's right to receive an old-age benefit check each month for the remainder of his life when he reaches the age of 65 and stops working.

Decline in Relief Rolls Predicted by Hopkins

IN HIS first press conference since the Presidential election Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, asserted his belief that relief rolls this winter would be at the lowest point since the start of the depression.

H. L. Hopkins

He estimated that 3,750,000 families and single persons would be receiving federal and local aid January 1, 1937, compared to a peak of 5,316,000 in January, 1935.

"I think," Hopkins said confidently, "that we will go into January of this year caring for 1,000,000 less cases than a year ago and a reduction of about 1,500,000 from 1935."

The administrator's attention was called to the fact that latest figures showed that 3,498,012 persons were employed the first two weeks of October, an increase of 29,020 over the preceding half month. He explained this by pointing out that the drought in the Midwest added 32,831 destitute farmers to his WPA project list.

Steel Workers Ask for Legislation

FIRST of the big groups that added in the re-election of President Roosevelt to call on him for their reward, the steel workers have asked that the Chief Executive recommend to the next congress the passage of legislation outlawing company unions and forbidding coercion of workers by employers.

George A. Patterson and Elmer J. Malot, employee representatives of the Carnegie Illinois Steel company, carried this request to the White House.

The Carnegie Illinois company has offered employees a 10 per cent wage increase on condition that workers sign an agreement to permit adjustment of wages to the cost of living.

At his press conference President Roosevelt said living costs should not be permitted to operate to curb wage increases. Furthermore, Secretary of Labor Perkins ruled informally that the employee representatives had no authority to sign such an agreement for their fellow employees.

Labor Board Dissolves Harvester Council Plan

EMPLOYER corporations were but by a ruling of the National Labor Relations board ordering the dissolution of the "industrial council plan" of the International Harvester company at the plant in Fort Wayne, Ind.

While the ruling dealt only with the Indiana plant, the board pointed out that the same plan also exists in the other 14 Harvester plants in the United States and Canada. It sets a precedent also for future decisions in regard to similar plans in other manufacturing plants throughout the country.

The industrial council of the Harvester company is an illegal labor organization under the terms of the National Labor Relations act, the board ruled. Under it the employees possess "only the shadow, not the substance, of collective bargaining," according to the decision. Numerous benefits conferred on the employees under the plan are admitted but the board says most of them are granted in the form of paternalism.

A. F. of L. Council's Report on Social Security Act

WHEN the American Federation of Labor's annual convention opened in Tampa it had before it the report of the executive council dealing with, among many other topics, the social security act. The report heartily approved of a federal social security program and urged adoption of state laws that would give labor the greatest possible benefit from the federal statute. If the federal law is unconstitutional, the council said, "it is clear that its provisions must be changed or that sanction must be afforded to them through an amendment to the constitution."

The council questioned the wisdom of obtaining the necessary funds through a payroll tax "which to a great extent is to be paid directly or indirectly by the workers involved" and suggested that congress repeal this feature of the law as soon as it convenes.

In discussing unemployment since NRA's end, the council said: "The shorter work week and the six hour day furnish the real solution to the insistent problem of unemployment. It is the responsibility that private industry must accept in order to give the necessary balance to economic expansion."

The council reported a membership of 3,422,328 on August 31—the greatest since 1921.

The council dismissed John L.

Lewis' epochal rebellion with a detailed factual account of its progress during the last year. "Appropriate action" was suggested.

George L. Berry, national co-ordinator for industrial recovery and president of the Printing Pressmen's union, proposed that the controversy with Lewis and his C. I. O. group be ended by arbitration, but this was rejected by President Green and other federation leaders. John P. Frey lost no time in introducing his resolution for expulsion of the rebel unions with their membership of over a million.

President Starts on His Ocean Cruise

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT went by train to Charleston, S. C., to board the cruiser Indianapolis for a jaunt in southern waters. He said he was not certain where the ship would take him, but in Washington it was assumed that he would proceed at once for Buenos Aires to attend the opening of the Pan-American peace conference on December 1. In that case he will make stops at Port of Spain, Rio de Janeiro and Montevideo, and will not return before December 15. If his plans are changed, he will merely spend two or three weeks fishing in the Caribbean.

At his last press conference before departing the President said he had about completed drafting the 1937 budget. He said also that he had outlined to his subordinates the things he wants done during his absence, these including: Drafting of a farm tenancy law to end evils attending the system of share-cropping and farm tenancy, now chiefly prevalent in the South. Clarifying amendments to the social security act.

Amendments to the Tennessee Valley Authority act, permitting broader social and economic improvement of the regions served by the TVA's huge power projects.

Year's Breathing Spell Likely for Farmers

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace in an interview intimates that for a year there may be no new legislation for crop control along the lines of the outlawed AAA, for farmers would like to have one really good crop without forced curtailment. But he added, "We will need some legislation eventually unless the weather changes or the world demand for our products greatly improves."

Wallace was asked whether the lack of a control plan might not result in another surplus, "leaving the administration up in the air without any machinery to cope with it. He said he could not estimate a surplus ahead of time and that he would rather wait to see what would happen.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., to Marry Ethel du Pont

THE engagement of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., third son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, to Miss Ethel du Pont of Wilmington, Del., was announced by the young lady's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont. There had been rumors of this romance for months, but announcement was delayed until after the election. The wedding will be in June after Mr. Roosevelt's graduation from Harvard, and will be a quiet affair. Miss du Pont's father is a member of the board of directors of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours company. She is a niece of Lamont du Pont, president of the company; of Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of the board, and of Iracez du Pont, another director of the board. She was presented to society on June 27 last.

Loyalists Defend Madrid With Desperation

LOYALIST defenders of Madrid, reinforced by troops from the southeast and apparently supplied with airplanes and tanks from Russia, put up unexpected resistance to the furious attacks of the Fascists, delaying the capture of the capital. The insurgents sent many planes to rain bombs on the city and there were dramatic battles in the air as well as on land. The attackers at one time smashed the defending lines at the Los Franceses bridge and forced their way across the Manzanares river and into the northwest quarter of Madrid, but probably retired, for the loyalists dynamited the bridge and captured several rebel tanks. The new supreme defense council in the capital, taking charge when the president and other government officials fled to Valencia, was reported to be functioning smoothly and was confident of ultimate victory over the rebels, even if Madrid were lost to them.

Clark-Howell, Eminent Editor, Is Dead

CLARK HOWELL, editor and president of the Atlanta Constitution and one of the best known journalists in the United States, died at his home in Atlanta at the age of seventy-three after a long illness. He was one of the original directors of the Associated Press. He was elected to the position at the time of its incorporation in 1900 and held it at the time of his death.

Always active in state and national politics, Mr. Howell was a pioneer in the formation of "Roosevelt for President" clubs. He was offered his choice of several diplomatic posts in 1933 but declined, saying he felt he could better serve the President and the nation as publisher of the Constitution. He was, at various times a member of temporary national commissions, but in the main devoted his time to his journalistic labors. A few years ago the Constitution won the Pulitzer prize for "meritorious service" in exposing political conditions in Atlanta.

Secretary Roper Plans Census of Jobless

NOW that the election is over, Secretary of Commerce Roper is laying plans for the complete census of the unemployed in the United States which has so long been called for. He said he would ask congress to appropriate between 13 and 15 million dollars for this count and that it would require the services of about 25,000 persons who would be given special training for several months.

Sec. Roper

"The census would not only take up an enumeration of those classified as unemployed," said Roper, "but we want to find out which trades or industries the unemployed would fall into. We would also like to help the states in classifying the unemployed from the unemployed."

"There are many economic questions involved. Some families have enough income to support them, but one or more members may be out of work. We want to obtain information on this phase."

Government Buys 9 Million Acres of Poor Farm Land

REXFORD G. TUGWELL, Recombination administrator, announced that the government had acquired more than nine million acres of land considered unsuitable for crop production, and he added that it should buy ten times as much. The Recombination administration is committed to pay $30,010,603 for the land, under option in 210 different projects in 44 states at an average price of $4.40 an acre.

These acres, Tugwell said, "could not support human subsistence" when used as they have been, and so were being restored to grazing, forestry, recreation, and other uses for which they were naturally fitted.

Tugwell reported 3,476 families still residing on the tracts "will need aid in resettling." More than 2,000 families already have been moved, it was disclosed, and many others found new homes without aid.

Hitler Scraps Another Treaty Clause

ADOLF HITLER has torn up another clause of the Versailles treaty—the one that internationalized the German rivers and canals. He has announced that the reich has resumed sovereignty over all such waters. The treaty clause was designed partly to give Czechoslovakia free access to the sea, and that nation now has agreed with Belgium to protest formally against Germany's action. British-Foreign Minister Eden rather mildly criticized Hitler's course.

Belgium Asks Specific Pledge From League

WITH embarrassing directness, Belgium has demanded that the League of Nations be specific on what help an attacked member nation "could count on." In a note, she demanded clarification of the league covenant, particularly the article applying to sanctions against an aggressor. Efforts to prevent war should be emphasized by the league, Belgium said, and measures against countries which endanger peace should be improved upon.

In a recent speech to parliament, intended to clarify a previous address by King Leopold, Foreign Minister Spaak said his country would assure both Germany and France that Belgium never would become the jumping off place for an attack on the territory of either power.

San Francisco's Bridge Formally Opened

SAN FRANCISCO'S dream of 30 years was realized when the great bridge across the bay of Oakland was formally opened with elaborate ceremony. This largest vehicular bridge in the world has been under construction since July 19, 1933, at a cost of $77,000,000, the funds being largely supplied by the Reconstruction Finance corporation. It is eight and a quarter miles long and, except for a tunnel passage through Yerba Buena island, is entirely over water.

Most Ancient India Is Revealed in Chanhu-daro Ruins

Trade City Uncovered by Archeologists

AMERICAN archeologists have unearthed a buried city in India, showing more vividly than ever before what the most ancient civilization of India was like. The ruins, found under mounds of earth at Chanhu-daro, northwestern India, date back five thousand years in their oldest era.

Chanhu-daro had homes of burnt brick, and the brick was just about like modern brick in size. The houses had bathrooms and drains that are pronounced superior to the sanitary arrangements in cities of other civilizations of their time. The people were industrious at many lines of skilled labor. They made toys for children of cities around the country. They were workers in bronze and copper. They turned out quantities of beads, making some so tiny that forty to an inch could be strung, and boring holes so fine that nothing coarser than a hair would thread these beads.

An Chanhu-daro was on a trade route, the goods of the city were dispatched by ox-load or peddler's pack to other, distant cities.

It had great floods. The picture of a trade town of ancient India, as old as the famous ruined city of Mohenjo-daro, is the result of excavation by two institutions, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the American School of Indic and Iranian Studies. It is only within three years that the Indian government has changed its law, to permit outside universities and archeological organizations to dig in this region.

The Indus valley, where Chanhu-daro stood, had its trouble with floods, like Ur of the Chaldees and many another ancient town. The field director of the expedition, Ernest Mackay, finds that at least three great floods attacked the city. After such a flood, the people were forced to leave the place entirely, and in some sequences of the city's history, debris piled over the abandoned ruins before settlers came to rebuild.

After the Harappa culture, as the oldest civilization at this site is named, there followed a people of about 2000 B. C. who lived in matting houses, and had only rough paving under their feet. These people made great quantities of pottery which the archeologists hope will shed more light on the migrations and trade relations of their era.

Gas From Fruit Skins Stops Potato Growth

WASHINGTON.—The skins of ripe apples, pears and Hawthorn fruits produce a gas that keeps potatoes from growing. Dr. O. H. Elmer of the United States Department of Agriculture has found.

Doctor Elmer measured a large number of the effects that this gas, produced by the living skin of sound apples, has on potatoes. He found that the respiration of the potato was speeded up, and consequently the activity of all the other processes directly connected with the potatoes' respiration was also increased.

Sufficient concentration of the gas stops potatoes from sprouting, and keeps them well preserved for long periods of time, the experiments show. Chemical investigation disclosed that the unknown gas was ethylene, the gas used in carbide lamps. Interestingly enough, this gas has for some time been used by produce experts to keep citrus fruits while in transit, and to aid in ripening them.

Wild Cinchona Trees Found in Costa Rica

CHICAGO.—Cinchona trees, the source of quinine, have been found growing wild in the Central American republic of Costa Rica.

Specimens of this unique discovery have been received at the Field Museum of Natural History here. Wild cinchona trees have not hitherto been known outside their ancient home in the Andean highlands of South America.

The world's supply of quinine is at present derived from plantation trees in the East Indies. The old South American cinchona forests, mercilessly exploited, were practically wiped out many years ago.

Delicate Surgery on Tiny Fruit-Flies Aids Biologists

Glass Needles and Microscopes Used

PASADENA, CALIF.—Surgical operations of incredible delicacy are used for the transplantation of eyes, sex glands, legs, wings, and other organs of tiny insects the size of ordinary gnats, by two young scientists, Drs. Boris Ephrussi and G. W. Beadle. Doctor Ephrussi is a Frenchman, Doctor Beadle an American.

The work was begun in Paris, at the Institute of Physico-Chemical Biology, and has been continued at the William G. Kerckhoff Laboratories of the Biological Sciences at the California Institute of Technology. The insects operated on are the favorite experimental animals of geneticists, the handy little fruit-flies known more learnedly as Drosophila. They are subjected to the transplanting technique while still infants, in the larval or grub stage.

Only Sixth of Inch Long. Although even the largest of these larvae are only a sixth of an inch long and a twenty-fifth of an inch in diameter, both scientists work at the same specimen at the same time.

The operating table is a small glass laboratory dish, and the two biologists work with hollow glass needles, drawn out to hair-line fineness. Each man watches through a double-barreled microscope. With the needles they pluck up the rudimentary "buds" of organs which have been dissected out of one larva, and inject them into the body of another.

The "host" larvae, with their added transplanted organs, are then placed in an incubator and kept at a temperature of 77 degrees Fahrenheit for four or five days, during which time they transform themselves first into pupae and then emerge as full-grown fruit-flies.

Transplanted Organs Grow. Some of the transplanted organs, of course, are never of any use to the insect that has acquired them. An eye grafted into the abdomen of a fruit-fly becomes a perfect eye, but because it lacks the proper nerve connections does not help its unconscious possessor to see.

On the other hand, transplanted ovaries often successfully make connection with a female insect's egg-laying apparatus, and these then function quite as well as the owner's original pair.

These experiments have a purpose decidedly more serious than just showing that so difficult a biological stunt can be carried through successfully. Drosophila has been the most important organism for demonstration of the basic principles of heredity ever since Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, now director of the biological laboratories at the California Institute of Technology, carried out the pioneer researches in this particular field many years ago. But certain tissue transplantation work, of value in studying these principles, has hitherto been possible only with larger, but less understood animals, like insects, fishes and frogs.

WASHINGTON.—Bone armor worn in American battles a thousand years ago, when Europe's fighters went clad in mail, is among the trophies of an archeological expedition recently returned from Alaska.

Ancient Bone Armor Found in Alaska

Mounds of prehistoric rubbish yielded the slabs of bone armor, and the arrow heads, fish lines, harpoons, combs, needles, children's toys, and bits of clothing of Eskimos who lived at Cape Prince of Wales, the most westerly point on the North American continent. The expedition, led by Henry B. Collins, Jr., was a joint venture of the Smithsonian Institution and the National Geographic society.

The makers of the ancient objects are identified as Eskimos of the Thule stage of Eskimo prehistory, by Mr. Collins. While this type of culture has been known, especially in Greenland and central Canada, Mr. Collins' latest expedition confirms the theory that this ancient culture spread eastward from Alaska. The digging also probed into an earlier stage of Eskimo culture.

Dozen Years Added to Average Woman's Life

Washington.—Eleven years have been added to the average man's life and 12 years to the life of the average woman, it is revealed by life tables of the bureau of the census, United States department of commerce.

At the beginning of the present century, the average length of life in the United States was 48 years for white men. Now, these new figures give an average life length of 59 years. For women the average lifetime in 1900 was 51 years. Now it is nearly 63 years.

She lifted her hand with the letter. "Jeb has not, sister, quit his claim on you," Bee's handwriting assured.

They traveled slowly through Provence, into northern Italy in the autumn, on to Interlaken below the Jungfrau, and reached Paris, at last, in November; and there they were when the crash came, and the cafes and the counting-houses alike—the Cafe de la Paix and the American branch banks on the Place de la Concorde and Boulevard Hausmann—became places of panic.

What had changed? What cursed caused this incredible calamity that spared no one?

The Gleneths, mother and daughter, moved among groups utterly confused. Beatrice had a cable from her husband in Chicago: "All right enough with us. Don't worry."

She was not dependant, as many about her were, upon monthly remittances from home, or upon renewals of a letter of credit. Bob had provided generously in advance.

Some wires, in her situation, were however cashing their letters of credit and cashing the proceeds home. So astonishingly had the situation reversed itself!

Then the second big "drop" came. It had come much closer to the Gleneths than merely to people they knew; but the two of the family in Paris had not yet received a letter written that day. They had only Bob's second cable to his wife: "Some temporary losses of course, but nothing serious; no necessity whatever to alter any of your plans."

Bee's letter arrived the next week: Six o'clock, Tuesday, just before I go to meet Davis.

Well, Agnes—for it's your turn—we got it. Today at noon Corlitt, Ayreforth and Ramble admitted inability to make obligations. The afternoon papers have it in headlines; also our phone has been busy. It appears to have surprised many friends.

Nobody knows—or tells—how much we're short; but it's a few hundred thousand, not counting what's owed to Father when he threw in a lot of money last week to try to save Davis.

Why did I let Davis in for this? But I never dreamed he could get in so deep. I didn't know that men could lose more money than they ever had. It seems they can.

Of course I never figured that it might happen at a time when it would make so much difference to Father. And there are others besides ourselves to consider. Davis seems to have done his bit, you see, dear, in making papers of many trusting people.

Every one is grateful to Jeb in these days. Agnes—everybody, lucky enough to have taken his advice. He's been insisting on the utilities, and especially the Insull properties, you know. Of course, they're down; but in comparison with other things, they're just Gibraltar. A lot of people are thanking God tonight or J. E. Braddon.

I'm going to the train, now, to meet my husband.

Both boys perfectly fine, Mother.

Bee had mailed it, her sister realized, on the way to the train; but what a place to stop a letter—before she met Davis on the day he had failed completely!

How was he? Agnes put herself beside Bee on the platform awaiting him for that meeting yet to occur in her mind, though her sister had accomplished it eight days ago. She could see him stepping from the car slowly but unwaveringly, with lips pressed tight and white; with his eyes looking at his wife, on this day of his public failure with Jeb Braddon, whom all people more than ever drained and admired.

had been—"good" to Davis that night. Never would she have blamed or reproached him; she would have been sorry for him, and shown it. But that was what, last of all, Davis desired; he could have borne reproach better than pity. Agnes wished she could have been there to prevent Bee's pitying him; to show him something like admiration.

She did not believe that she could have felt for him admiration; but she could have feigned something to satisfy him; she knew how Davis had needed some word of praise that night.

Agnes waited for her mother to finish the letter.

"We ought to be home, Mother."

"Yes. But how can I go?"

"Why not?"

"I will return, I told your father," her mother said, "when he asks me to. I must wait until he does so."

Bee gave up her home the week before Christmas.

"Not before Christmas!" Davis protested to her.

"What would Christmas be to us in the house, under the circumstances?" Bee retorted. "And the boys are too little to know. Let's get it off our hands."

"Oh, God!" breathed Davis, and held her to him.

Technically, Bee could have kept the house; it was in her name, and her father offered her a monthly allowance large enough to pay grocery, and furnace-bills, light, telephone and wages for one servant; but Bee spared Davis even discussion of this. She dismissed all her maids and turned title of the house over to the bank which held Davis' biggest note; and she sold everything she possessed that would fetch a price—except her engagement and wedding-rings.

So the girl whom her father had always called Dark One returned "home," to his house, with her babies and her husband.

"Bee Ayreforth is perfectly wonderful with her husband," the neighborhood said. "This will make them much closer together." For the neighbors know that Davis and Bee needed to be brought "closer"—whatever that meant. The neighbors did not "yet know—though Davis and Bee did—that she was bearing him another child. Yet Davis could not feel that his wife "loved" him; and he longed as never before for love to reassure him and give him boldness.

He became more sensitive to comparison of himself before her with men who continued to succeed, and so he avoided the homes of many of Bee's friends. By himself in the day, he called on the men at their offices; he looked up mere acquaintances and even strangers who were suggested as possibly having a job open. He put down his pride mercilessly, except that he refused to take the position which his father-in-law patently made for him in his office.

Jeb was still doing splendidly. The Insull "equities" were still quoted high. Jeb had proved himself much, much wiser than other men; he prospered in the panic; and Davis could not bear the thought of him. Yet he had to see Jeb at the house.

Bob Gleneth was the one who, usually, invited him. Gleneth had liked him best of Agnes' friends, and now he was doing business with Jeb; for Bob badly needed some new financing which Jeb had proved able to arrange. Jeb liked to come to the house.

Not infrequently, therefore, four sat down at the dinner-table—Father in his own place, the Dark One in her mother's place, Davis on one side, Jeb on the other.

Cravath still served the table; but the house staff had been cut in two.

So there sat Davis at the table silently between his wife whom he no longer supported, and her father who lodged and boarded them both, and who paid even the nursemaid; and opposite sat Jeb Braddon, whose opinions constantly were asked, and given, when expressed, the respect and authority of success.

Davis, sometimes, could scarcely eat. At night, after Jeb had gone, Davis did not sleep. He lay alone in a room which had been a guest-chamber next to the room which had been, and now again was Bee's, and wherein she slept once more in her own bed.

Some nights he never got up to disturb her; but often he could not keep himself from entering her room and waking her.

"Or did he wake her? Had she always been asleep?"

"Bee."

"Oh! You! . . . What is it?"

"Do you love me?"

"Love you? . . . What more can I do to show it?"

"By God, Bee, I'm going to support you. At least support you! . . ."

In March, Davis got his job; and as before, he acted without consulting either his father-in-law or Jeb about it. He borrowed ten thousand dollars on his life-insurance, and formed a new partnership with Ken Ramble.

Business was looking up for a while; many leaders believed and proclaimed that the worst was past and prosperity restored. But within two months more some of them who had backed their beliefs—had shot themselves while "cleaning" revolvers, died of monoxide gas poisoning in their garages, or had leaped—or "fallen"—from their office windows.

Arthur Linsdale, a neighbor of the Gleneths, rose from dinner-table and went to the lake shore alone and put a bullet through his head. He was important enough so that cables carried the news that night to European papers; and Beatrice Gleneth read it in her room at her hotel in Florence.

She sent Rogna for her daughter.

"Agnes, we're leaving for home. . . . No; your father has not cabled for me; and I've had no letter today. It's this; Arthur Linsdale's shot himself. He's just your father's age. I've often thought of them as alike. . . . We're leaving at once."

When Bee's mother and sister were on the water, she met, driving to market, a neighbor of hers whom she had often seen when she had lived in her own house. It was Joyce Moreday, whose husband, though out of a job since January, had held on to their home, though it was well known that the grocer and the butcher had not been paid for months. The garage man would not carry slow accounts, and so Gene had got rid of his car. Joy was walking from the market. She had had no servant since Christmas.

Bee asked her to lunch; and Joy got into the car casually enough, and as they drove, she referred easily to her children, who were being sent to the public school; they took their lunch with them to save the two-mile walk two extra times a day. Joy was older than Bee, and her girl was ten, and the boy eight.

It was when Bee and her guest were at the luncheon-table, with Bobby and Davy between them, that Joy suddenly broke down.

Cravath had just served her and Bee, and he had laid before the little boys exactly what they ought to have, when Joy dropped her fork, which she had lifted to her lips.

"I can't eat! How can I eat? How can I put this food in my mouth when my children—my children are hungry?" Bee jumped up and caught her in her arms.

"No! No!" Joy cried. "I can't eat! . . . I sent my girl and boy to school again with bread with a little butter spread on it! All I had in the house! That's all they've had for days in their lunch-boxes! . . . And oatmeal at home. That's a box of oatmeal I left in your car; all we'll have tonight and tomorrow. . . . And my Sally said to me this morning: 'Don't mind. . . . don't mind, Mother. Nobody knows.' You see, Bee, they go off by themselves to eat—Sally and Gene—and nobody does know, from them. And they eat the oatmeal morning and night at home! They're such little sports!"

Bee made the mistake, that night, of letting Davis learn of this. She would not have told him, but she had to explain two circumstances—Bobby's report to his father that a big lady cried at lunch-time, and the further fact that Bee was without ten dollars, which was to have served her for the rest of the week; for she had made Joy take it.

Bee herself did not sleep too well that night. She heard Davis walking about; he came into her room and bent over her.

"Hello," said Bee, and put up a hand which he clasped so tight he hurt her; but she let him.

"I've been looking at our boys," he said.

"And they will be. Nothing—nothing will ever rob them of their opportunity!"

"Of course not."

"And by God, I'll take care of you—and the little you that's coming."

"Of course you will."

"Kiss me, Bee."

She put both arms about his neck and found his lips.

"That's like—old times—almost, Bee. Oh, God, how I want you to love me!"

The huge ship, upon which Agnes and her mother crossed, was almost without passengers in the first class. It carried, actually, more stewards and attendants for that class than travelers.

Topics of discussion between the homebound passengers were seldom cheerful; they felt themselves favored and protected people on their way to hear, at home, the full facts of disasters which had been withheld or glossed over in cables and letters.

The Chic New Princess Silhouettes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SO FAR as the silhouette of the autumn and winter frock, coat or ensemble, is concerned, anything in the way of startling innovations is apt to happen these days. In fact is happening. The whole scheme of things is changing. For one thing it is back to short wide-at-hemline skirts that current fashion has dared to go—fourteen inches from the floor if you care to follow the extreme.

The princess influence is as everywhere present in daytime clothes as it is in formal evening clothes. From the formal evening angle the message is of regal black velvet gowns cut exquisitely in a princess, the long unbelted lines of classic simplicity sweeping out into expansive hemlines. The very beautiful moire silks so favored for dinner and dance gowns yield gloriously to princess styling, as do also the fashionable metal cloths and brocades.

NEW COAT LINES

Prepare for something different in the newer evening coats. The latest models are apt to have a Napoleonic look and there is also a trend to borrow lines from the dignified mannish frock coat and similar cut-away effects with long coat tail at the back. Formal types of town suits are also taking on coats of this new influence. For these black broadcloth is the favored material. The coat pictured is typical of the new movement. It is designed for evening wear and tops in this instance a light gray gown-embroidered in rhinestones. The coat is of slate gray velveteen.

daytime fashions that the most exciting events are taking place. The youthful, flattering little princess gowns tailored of swanky wool weaves, preferably broadcloth, duvetyne or suede cloth are fashion "firms" for day wear. The majority of them button down, the front from neckline to hemline and they are enlivened with dramatic touches of color—perhaps a banding at the throat and on the sleeves and about the wide hemline of braid in the now-so-much-talked-of coronation colors or in the vivid Tyrolean reds, greens, blues and yellows.

As to the new coats styled along princess lines, you will agree that the accompanying illustration conveys the message more eloquently than words. The models pictured also exploit the use of Persian lamb in ways that are most attractive. The coat to the right goes extreme in the matter of the new princess lines. It is made of beige broadcloth. The buttons and young-looking collar of Persian lamb are typical of the manner in which designers are handling supple and thin fabriclike furs. Developed either in gray or beige there is no smarter coat to be found in all fashiondom.

CONTRAST OF COLOR CHARACTERIZES HAT

Contrast in color continues to characterize the fall hats. Dashes of bright color on black hats are frequent. Other color contrasts gaining favor in millinery are: Cocoa felt with ivy green faile; dark Araby brown felt with royal blue faile contrast; dark deep green in felt with ribbon in soft rusty wine.

Tailored Suit With Fur Is Ideal for Autumn Days

If you don't have to worry about a budget and can go ahead and buy an outfit for now and a warmer one for later, a tailored or dressmaker suit with fur is ideal. It may include slim skirt and jacket with fur collar and cuffs or a plain jacket and skirt with fur-trimmed topcoat, swagger or fitted.

The most popular version of the formalized variety comes in black broadcloth with Persian lamb or silver fox; brown broadcloth with mink or brown Persian. The sports types are finished with wolf, lynx or raccoon collars and are made from the new rough, nubby woolens.

Paris Hats

A number of the French designers—Schlaparelli, Molyneux, Faibot and others, are sponsoring a crown that slopes away from the face toward the back.

Constipated 30 Years

For thirty years I had stubborn constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas bloating, headaches and pains in the back. Adierka helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, etc., anything I want and never feel better. I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

Do you suffer burning, scanty, or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong? Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison—and upset the whole system.

Final Date Set For Range Applicants

November 30 has been set as the final date for receiving applications for determination of grazing capacity from ranchmen, says W. A. Wunsch of the New Mexico State College. No applications received in the county Extension agent's office after that date will be considered for participation in the 1936 Range Program, which is a part of the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program.

Since no payment will be made for partial performance, any rancher who sees that it will be impossible for him to complete a practice before the first of the year, should not initiate a practice at this late date. Ranchers who have already begun practices under the 1936 Range Program should do everything possible to rush the completion of these projects so that they will be finished by December 31.

County Agricultural Conservation Committees are being instructed by the Washington office to review carefully all applications for determination of grazing capacity, eliminating those made by ranchers who cannot, or will not, comply. The reason for this is that the Range Examiners, who are furnished by the Forest Service, have such a large number of applications on hand, they will only have time to examine ranges for possible participants in the 1936 program. They can not afford to spend time examining ranges of operators who cannot possibly comply with the program this year.

On November 14, a total of 2,986 applications for determina-

Baca Canyon Camp

Baron Auriemma left for Alamogordo the first of the week after a successful canvass for funds for the Salvation Army.

While at Capitan he made a visit to the Girls' Camp at Baca Canyon, and asked that we make a statement to the people through the columns of this paper about his visit there and the favorable impression he received concerning this marvelous camp for the benefit of girls' whose parents are unable to give them many advantages which they receive in the Camp. He states that Mr. and Mrs. Shaw are the ideal couple for this job. They are conducting the camp in a way which builds the girls up mentally, morally, spiritually and physically. He asked Mrs. Shaw about the various phases of social and industrial life in the camp. He stated that Mrs. Shaw smilingly told him, "this was not a jail, but an educational institution, and the girls had plenty of social enjoyment with the proper supervision." He said the girls are acquiring a vast amount of knowledge which will be useful in after life; smoking is not allowed in the barracks, paint and powder to excess, are taboo; and if there were "more of these camps to build healthful minds in sound bodies, the world would be a pleasanter place in which to live."

Banquet at Masonic Hall

The Masonic hall was the scene of a second social event staged here Saturday night. This was a banquet honoring the Grand Master.

Mr. and Mrs. Dodge of the Southern Pacific hotel served this elaborate meal which consisted of a turkey dinner, and all the trimmings. About eighty participated. A lovely program, consisting of duets, violin and piano solos preceded the banquet. Favors were caps of many hues.

Those in attendance were impressed also by the many beautiful evening gowns worn by the women.

A committee of Rainbow Girls was appointed to assist in serving.

PNEUMONIA

The death from pneumonia in the United States in 1934 was 79.6, for New Mexico in that year it was 93.5. Last year the rate in this state rose to 107.6. Most victims of pneumonia are stricken in winter or early spring. In this state pneumonia is the third most important cause of death in infancy and the second most important in children under 10 years. It takes third place among the causes of death in men from age 10 to age 40, in women from age 30 to age 60. Our high altitude has been blamed for our high death rate, but we have to face the fact that in the Canadian Rockies, the pneumonia death rate is low.

There are two big groups into which pneumonias are divided: lobar pneumonia and broncho-pneumonia. Broncho-pneumonia kills infants and old people. Lobar pneumonia causes rather more than half of all pneumonia deaths and kills people in youth and in the prime of life. Broncho-pneumonia is frequently a complication of other diseases like measles or whooping cough. Lobar pneumonia comes on suddenly though it may start from a cold or an attack of influenza. There is a chill and the temperature shoots up. Usually there is pain in the chest or side. The patient coughs up a rusty colored sputum. It has been said that fatigue makes us more liable to pneumonia but experimental studies in animals do not support this theory.

Twenty years ago there was little that a doctor could do to save the victim from pneumonia. Today the situation is different. There is more than one method of treatment which gives promise of success but of them all treatment with specific serum is the most hopeful. More than one-third of all lobar pneumonia cases are caused by the Type 1 pneu-

High Marks in Wage Placements

Gratifying results in private and prevailing wage placements mark activities of the National Reemployment Service and New Mexico State Employment Service for the month of October, 1936. During the month, a new high mark in private and public prevailing wage placements was established, a total of 4,259 placements having been recorded.

A breakdown of placements indicate that 2,436 were made in private employment in October this year as compared with 1,245 for the same month the preceding year and 1,749 on prevailing wage public works projects as compared with 1,595 the same month last year, while only 74 placements were made on security wage projects by the Employment Service offices as compared with 1,038 in October, 1935.

The active files at the end of October, 1936, indicate that 50,980 applicants were seeking employment through facilities of the Public Employment Offices as compared with 55,320 for the same month in 1935. However, this does not in any measure indicate the unemployed situation of the State, as the active files are composed of persons employed with Non-Contract Federal Agencies and on W. P. A. projects, and persons having private employment but are seeking better jobs in addition to unemployed applicants.

mococeps. Serum treatment in these cases is undoubtedly effective though unfortunately the serum is quite expensive. Realizing the life saving power of pneumonia serum New York state now distributes this serum without cost to the doctors practicing in that state.

Pneumonia is a communicable disease. The patient should be isolated and all linen soiled by his sputum should be burned or very thoroughly boiled and hung out in the sunshine.

"The Man Who-o-o"

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

FRANK E. HAGEN
ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A CANDIDATE "ANNOUNCES"
ON THE morning of April 4, 1900, the New York World printed what has been described as "one of the most curious announcements of a presidential candidacy ever made, one of the most naive declarations ever given out by any man who had even the briefest parts in American politics."

Admiral George Dewey, the "Hero of Manila," had given an interview in which he said in part: "If the American people want me for this high office, I shall be only too willing to serve them. . . . Since studying this subject I am convinced that the office of the President is not such a very difficult one to fill, his duties being mainly to execute the laws of Congress. Should I be chosen for this exalted position I would execute the laws of Congress as faithfully as I have always executed the orders of my superior."

"Not such a difficult office to fill," indeed! That was a job to the hero-worshipping American public. Already it had begun to suspect that its idol had feet of clay. It had gone wild over his victory in the Philippines. Upon his return to America, it gave him the reception such as few conquering heroes had. It had built a triumphal arch in his honor in New York and had raised money to buy a house in Washington for him. Not long after his return, he had taken a second wife who was much younger than he was and he had deced the gift house to her. That didn't sit so well with his worshippers, nor did the social ambitions of his new wife. Moreover, a matter of religious prejudice was injected into the gossip about the Deweys.

Dewey had been approached on the subject of being a candidate for President and had disclaimed any such ambition. But a "Stop Bryan!" element in the Democratic party had persisted in promoting his candidacy and at last he yielded to the temptation.

Then he made his amazing announcement and the public immediately turned against him. Where he had been previously praised, he was now ridiculed. His candidacy was generally characterized as the "climax to a series of unfortunate mistakes." As quickly as that candidacy had bloomed, it withered. America apparently would elect a military hero President, as witness William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor and Ulysses S. Grant. But, as for a naval hero—George Dewey was the first, and so far, the last, to find out that a sea dog isn't wanted in the White House!

A STUDY CAMPAIGNER
THERE is a physical side to this business of campaigning for the presidency.

In the earlier days, candidates went personally into the hinterlands, making, not one-night stands but brief pauses interrupted to move on to a newer and perhaps more fertile field. It was a tremendous strain on them physically. Today, with improved travel accommodations and the help of radio, campaigning is not the arduous task of former years, but it has its moments.

William Jennings Bryan, torch bearer of extraordinary record in politics, doubtless is the man who proved the sturdiest campaigner of them all. And even he almost broke down.

Bryan was physically fit and energetic when he first stamped the country in 1896, bearing his cross of gold. He insisted on patronizing the local trains, riding in the day coaches at the outset of his tour.

In that campaign, Bryan delivered as many as 20 speeches a day, a great part of them from the rear of his slow-moving train. In Tennessee, his throat began to balk. When this was known, many curatives were pressed upon him. One bottle of a remedy for hoarseness was tested by Benton McMillen of Tennessee and found to contain a caustic fluid which might have injured Bryan permanently.

It was toward the end of that campaign that Bryan began to approach exhaustion. He had completed a three-days' series of speeches in Chicago. Despite his splendid physique, the strain began to tell. He was scheduled to travel north of Chicago when his "loop" engagements were ended. But so trying had been the requirements of his tour that it was necessary to delay the start of the party for more than two hours.

Earliest Settlements
Newport and Portsmouth share with Providence the distinction of being the earliest settlements. After Roger Williams settled at Providence in 1639 another band of religious "outcasts" from Massachusetts, under the leadership of William Coddington and Anne Hutchinson, settled at Portsmouth in 1638. When dissension broke out in this colony William Coddington and a group moved on to Newport in 1639.

Street Cleaning Truck Can Battle Poison Gas

The latest development in military defense against gas attack makes use of the ordinarily un-war-like street cleaning truck. An auxiliary apparatus, attached to the truck, throws out jets of water to disperse poison gas in the air, and also sends out fan-shaped sprays of water to cleanse walls and roofs which have been contaminated by poison gas. A demonstration of the new equipment is shown in London with the "crew" of the truck clad in gas-proof clothing, complete with mask.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Salting Politics Away
LAS VEGAS, N. M.—A few weeks ago everybody on the train I'm traveling on was talking politics. Today everybody nearly is talking football. Exceptions noted thus far:

1. A middle aged lady talking symptoms. It seems she has had practically everything except lock-jaw. And as for operations—well, her whole life must have been an open book. I gather she never had a secret that was not shared with at least three doctors.

2. A gentleman connected with the movies talking movies. In an eighteen-hour shift.

3. Another gentleman talking self. Irvin S. Cobb. We can tell that, up to now, he is just browsing around the edges of this fascinating topic. By tomorrow we expect him to get really into the meat of it.

4. An elderly gentleman talking steadily. He has been going since we left Los Angeles. We don't know exactly what his subject is. He has not said yet.

Praising Grand Canyon.

SCOOTING across Arizona I was moved to weave into this a complete description of the Grand Canyon. But mercy stayed my hand. Instead, I have decided to send to all deserving applicants convenient postcards showing views of the canyon. This will give the general idea. It looks just like the postcards, only larger.

There's one thing about the Grand Canyon—long after every other natural wonder has been decried with architectural doodads and the scribbled names of individuals whose signatures would look all right on the register of any dollar-a-day American place hotel, but are sort of out of place when smeared over one of creation's masterpieces, the Grand Canyon will still be unspolled.

California Rivers.

IT'S fun to cross a river with at least a trace of witness in it. It must be my early rating, but I like a river to be dampled—in spots, anyhow.

After two years I can't get used to southern California rivers, where, for nine months a year, the only craft you can navigate is a canoe-boat, and unless they use a sprinkling system you can't see where you're going, and they deepen the channel by blasting and not by dredging, and you come back from an aquatic trip full of hayfever dust. They do say the fish have to learn to swim all over again every fall, and down between the steep banks the poor little frogs suffer terribly from sunburn. It's a great country for Holy Rollers but hard on Baptists.

Crater Versus Manville.

I'M TORN between temptations. I'd like to follow the search now on again for Judge Crater, who has been mysteriously missing all these years except for the two or three hundred times when somebody said he'd been seen. On the other hand, Tommy Manville, the husband of his country, is reported as having fresh woman trouble back east—this time of a blonde nature.

Still, I can always prowl the deserts, looking for the judge. Out here, we hunt him at regular intervals. He's different from the Liberty League. It disappeared just as suddenly as he did, but stayed that way.

Commercializing Football.

ONCE upon a time, and not so very long ago, a college was known by the football team it kept. Now it's known largely as the college that some football team is keeping.

And sport writers say that more money is now being wagered on football than on any other sport we have. And it doesn't take an expert's eye to see that, each season, football is becoming more and more commercialized, more and more a professional, profit-making industry. Well, if football is to go the way of wrestling and horse-racing and prize-fighting, it'll pretty soon be so that about the only game a chap can play without fixing somebody beforehand will be solitaire.

Still, being a football devotee does keep you out in the open air. But you could say that same thing for a seagull.

Happiness

Be cheerful! Which will you do—smile, and make others happy, or be crabbed, and make everyone around you miserable? The amount of happiness you can produce is incalculable if you show a smiling face and speak pleasant words. There is no joy like that which springs from a kind act or pleasant deed, and you may feel it at night when you rest, and at morning when you rise, and through all the day when about your business.

MONTAGUE

Relates What Came of Casting "Bread on the Waters"

One of the Men Made a Splint Out of the 'Spar An' Patched up the Flipper.

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE 'BECAUSE they ain't got legs an' arms an' whiskers, an' religion, like people has," said the old sailor, "the idee has got around that fish ain't got no feelin's.

"I ain't sayin' that they'll always git back at you, for the sea is a big place, an' it's just by accident that you meet up with a whale that you've had a acquaintance with before.

"I seen a lot of whales, mean ones an' cociable an' pleasant mannered ones, but they was two of 'em especially that I remember now, an account of the way they behaved their selves.

"Some of the men was dead shots, an' he got so many holes in his hulk that you'd think he couldn't hold water. By an' by he got cort of sick of it an' decided to git out of range, but before he done so he cracked on all sail an' bore down on us till he got to close aboard that he could give the ship a good look over.

"Just the name this whale done a lot of rememberin', for four years after that, when we was makin' a voyage down the coast of South America who should show up about two points off our weather beam but him. We had a new crew, includin' officers, all except the bos'n, an' though after I called his attention to the critter he tried to put the old man an' the mate on their guard they just laughed at him for being a fool superstitious sailor an' kept right on their course.

"An' now here's the other side of the picture. Quite a while after that I was aboard a ship that had one of these here humanitarians for a skipper. He wasn't so humane to the men aboard, but he couldn't bear to see anything hurt unless it was a sailor man, who to his way of thinkin' don't have no proper human feelin's.

POTATOES 'EVER DIET MAINSTAY

Monotony Can Be Avoided by Varying Preparation.

By EDITH M. BARBER POTATOES are certainly a mainstay in our diet. We do not tire of them and they can be prepared in an almost endless variety of ways.

Have you ever made savory potatoes? They are delicious for a luncheon dish or served with meat at dinner. Pare and slice six good-sized potatoes. In a saucepan melt one tablespoon of bacon fat and in it cook two sliced onions until they are a very delicate brown.

Remove the potatoes carefully to a hot platter and over the top sprinkle one-half cupful of grated cheese. These potatoes are a very nice substitute for scalloped potatoes, and as they are cooked on top of the stove do not take as long as those done in the oven.

Sometimes small sausages are placed in the holes in the potatoes and either baked in the oven or put under the broiler to cook. These also are good and the potato takes up fat and flavor from the sausage.

Nut Potato Croquettes. 1/4 cup cream or milk, 2 cups hot mashed potatoes, 1/2 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, Pepper, 1 cup crushed Brazil nuts.

Stewed Potatoes. 3 tablespoons butter, 3 cups diced potatoes, Salt, Pepper, 2 cups milk.

Codfish Balls. 4 or 5 medium-sized potatoes, 1 cup picked salt cod or 1/2 cup prepared salt cod, 1 tablespoon butter, Pepper, 1 egg or 2 egg yolks.

Baked Beans. 1 quart beans, 1/4 pound salt pork or 1/4 pound corned beef, 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, 1/2 teaspoon mustard, 1/2 cup molasses, Boiling water.

Rick Muffins. 1/2 cup shortening, 1/4 cup sugar, 1 egg, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 cups flour, 1 cup milk.

Lovely and Inexpensive

AMONG other things to be thankful for in this land of peace and plenty, think how pleasant it is to be able to procure such lovely patterns so conveniently and so inexpensively.

Pattern 1981, a youthful lounging or sleeping pajama, features a nobby, cutaway peplum and comfortably cut trousers. There is an easy yoke, a cleverly cut collar, and a choice of long or short sleeves.
