Lincoln Co. Mining & Milling Co.

An Enterprise that Means Much to Many People

High Against the Skyline, Above Bonito Dam

The editor of the Lincoln County News accepted an invitation last Sunday to visit the Lincoln County Milling & Mining Company's plant, commonly called the Skinner-Payne Mine. We found it quite an interesting place, a regular bee-hive for activity, a mine capable of putting out $400 per day when things run smooth.

Location: After a drive which encircles Bonito dam, then winds its way between high mountains and mountains of lesser degree for five or six miles you find yourself gradually ascending a hillside completely covered with pine trees. After rounding the last curve you see some small rustic buildings made of rough hewn pine logs; on the right, a two story bunk house, also of rough pine logs meets your gaze, beside which is a pump which runs continually, supplying water for the entire mining plant.

Equipment: On the left is the mill which has been equipped at a cost of thousands of dollars. The machinery is the most modern that can be bought, a giant gasoline engine which consumes 120 gallons of gas in a 24-hour run is the motive power for the hopper which grinds the ore into small particles. The ore then passes into a vat or agitator where it swirls around and passes into a flotation tank which is supplied with chemicals. These chemicals cause the pure metal to float and the dirt to sink, each going their separate ways; the high grade metal running onto the whistle table from which it passes into another tank.

It is then conveyed to a kiln which is kept hot enough to evaporate the moisture, and which leaves a dry powder known as concentrates; two truck loads of which were shipped last week.

The Mine: An air compressor pipes the air into the shaft which runs the jack-hammers, drifter and stoper. About 300 feet have been tunneled by a force of 24 men who work shifts day and night. Timber supports are placed at intervals in the tunnel. A mining engineer can readily tell in which direction the most valuable ore may be found. A shaft is being sunk and eventually a chute will carry quantities of ore which is now pushed by a tram car.

Operations: People generally are not aware that over $31,000 have been spent in Lincoln county by this company for labor, supplies and equipment. Much development has been accomplished and considerable very rich ore has been produced. Valuable deposits of silver combined with lead, zinc and some gold are found in a vein from 42 to 52 inches in width. It is confidently believed that the property is one of the most valuable in Lincoln county and that its resources have just been touched. The company engineers consider it rich in alluring prospects and promise. Capital and transportation have been supplied, and ore of commercial value is known to exist in quantities.

Company Officials: Mr. Lykins is president of the company; Mr. Jack Payne, mining engineer is general manager; Mr. Roy Skinner is secretary-treasurer. Their city office is located in the Lutz building.

Basket Ball Notes

(By Bradley Smith)

The Grizzlies enjoyed two walkaways the past week-end taking Capitan in a hard-fought game Friday night and Tularosa the next night. Zoza as winner of honors trimmed Capitan to the tune of 46 to 6. Carrizozo did not play until the half at which time they began to shoot the leather through the loop from all angles to hold their lead.

The scrubs won a thriller from the Ancho boys.

Saturday night the Grizzlies met a fast stepping five from Tularosa. Apparently suffering from a let-down after their easy conquest of Capitan the Grizzlies led Tularosa get 18 points, and besides, Tularosa had a much better team than when we played them last. This didn't suit Barla the curly-haired guard, so he made a goal, which example was promptly followed by Elliott and Shaw. After the third canto things happened fast and the score was overwhelming in our favor 38 to 18.

The curtain raiser was a game between our scrubs and a team from the Santa Rita school. Scores were close and Santa Rita made a good showing.

Coach Detloff says the Grizzlies are looking forward to some real tender Coyote meat tonight. Be there!!! A dance sponsored by the Senior class will follow the game. Admission 75c.

FROM THE LINCOLN CO. NEWS FILES

Copied from the Lincoln County Leader under date of Sat. Jan. 20, 1886. (Wm. Caffrey, Editor)

"Marriage whether regarded as an ordinance or a civil contract involves more of importance than any step which mortals can take, not only of importance to themselves, but inasmuch as the marriage relation is closer allied to our higher civilization than any other, its sacred observance or disregard toward its obligations touches society and the interests thereof, in their vitality elevating or wounding. The scene of a young couple with hearts beating as one, standing up before legalized authority and pledging eternal fealty is an inspiring sight; but to see an aged married couple after years of living together, tearing one against the other in love and confidence is a sight holier and more ennobling than can be seen this side of Paradise.

"White Oaks has had several marriages of late which we now recall: George Sligh to Ida Lane; Pres Collier to Belle Cavett; J. A. Alcock to Lulu Archibald and Benjamin Stimmel to Anna Mackel—matches, which if not made in heaven will certainly be ratified there. "The nuptials of Ben Stimmel

After the ceremonies were completed refreshments consisting of rainbow-hued jello with whipped cream, angel food cake, coffee and cocoa were served to about 75 guests.

to Miss Mackel were solemnized on Tuesday night and duly celebrated by the many friends of the bride and groom. The festival opened at Brother's hotel, but the space proving too small, the Town Hall was resorted to where festivities were kept up until far beyond the hour when graveyards are reported to yawn. We shed the electric light of our countenance, upon the dazzling scene for a few moments, when we retired praying in unison with all our people, that Ben and his little mate travel life's journey together in ungalling harness, and that their road may be smooth, fringed, and skirted with life's choicest blessings."

King George Is Dead; Edward Takes Throne

GEORGE V, king of Great Britain and emperor of India, died in Sandringham house, peacefully and painlessly, in his seventy-first year. Immediately on his passing, his eldest son, Edward Albert, who had been prince of Wales, succeeded to the throne, which by British law is never vacant. Next morning the state council, consisting of the queen and her four sons, which had been created by a decree which George signed a few hours before his death, proclaimed the accession of the new ruler as Edward VIII. His first official act was to notify the lord mayor of London of his father's demise.

King George, who had been on the throne almost twenty-five years, was the best loved and most democratic of the world's monarchs, always just, solicitous for the welfare of his subjects, and living a simple and almost faultless domestic and official life. The new king, a confirmed bachelor, knows his vast empire intimately, having visited practically every part of it, some regions many times. Decidedly different from his father in his tastes and ways of life, he still, as the prince of Wales, has been a great favorite of the people, and in recent years, realizing that he would soon have to mount the throne he studied down and took an increasing interest in the affairs of the empire. He is especially liked by the laboring classes, in whose welfare he often has shown deep sympathy. That he never married has been a disappointment to the British people. Now for the first time since the reign of William IV there is no prince of Wales. Next in the line of succession is the king's brother, the duke of York, and second comes the duke's little daughter, Princess Elizabeth. There will be six months or more of official mourning for George's death, and Edward VIII will not be crowned for about one year.

The body of the dead ruler was removed from Sandringham house to the little church of St. Mary Magdalene in Sandringham. Thence it was to be taken to Westminster abbey, there to lie in state. Intention is to be in the Albert Memorial chapel at Windsor, beside the tombs of George's father and mother. It was believed the state funeral would not take place for two weeks.

Death of Rudyard Kipling

RUDYARD KIPLING, poet and story writer who best embodied in his literary work the ideas of British imperialism, died in London following an operation for perforated ulcer of the stomach. He was seventy years of age and in recent years had written very little except as a propagandist. He was a vigorous and bold writer and a master stylist. His best work was done long ago when he wrote numerous poems and stories about India, his native and the British soldiers there.

Senate Passes Bonus Bill, 74 to 33

BY A vote of 74 to 33 the senate passed Senator Harrison's compromise bonus measure which provides for the payment of $2,237,000,000 to veterans in baby bonds and cash. The action was taken despite warnings from the treasury that the national debt would be swollen to $35,500,000,000 in eighteen months. The senate rejected an amendment for discretionary currency inflation. It was considered certain the house would accept the senate bill, for it was backed by the veterans' organizations. Relief was general that President Roosevelt would veto the measure, but its proponents felt sure the veto would be overridden in both house and senate.

Sen. Harrison

Two Treasury Officials Resign Their Posts

UNDERSECRETARY of the Treasury Thomas Jefferson Coolidge resigned his position suddenly and unexpectedly, because he did not agree with all the policies of the administration. At the same time Assistant Secretary Lawrence W. Roberts resigned. President Roosevelt accepted both resignations. It was understood there was no connection between the two withdrawals. Mr. Roberts had been expected for some time to quit his post.

In his treasury position Mr. Coolidge, long a New England banker, has been in charge of such government financial affairs as the huge borrowings of money to meet heavy government expenditures. He was understood to be in accord with most Roosevelt policies but felt he was unable to give his full support to the general New Deal program.

Supreme Court Orders Process Tax Return

SUMMARILY overruling the government's petition for a rehearing of the Louisiana rice millers' cases, involving the refund of some 200 million dollars in processing taxes held in escrow, the United States Supreme court issued its mandate ordering the return of the funds to the taxpayers. The court also issued its mandate in the Hoosac mills cases, in which the Agricultural Adjustment act was held unconstitutional and thereby closed the door to petitions for a rehearing in that case. In a third action the court ordered arguments on February 4 on the New Deal's motion to dismiss a suit brought by the state of Georgia to test the constitutionality of the Bankhead compulsory cotton control act.

Ellsworth and His Pilot Rescued in Antarctica

ALL the world rejoiced over the news that Lincoln Ellsworth, noted explorer, and his pilot, Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, had been found safe and well in Little America and were on board the rescue ship Discovery II which was sent jointly by the British and Australian governments. The two men had been missing since November 23 when they started on a bold airplane flight across the Antarctic continent. In this they succeeded, but they ran out of fuel and were forced to land at the bay of Whinlea.

Nye Arouses the Wrath of Fellow Senators

GERALD P. NYE, the radical senator from North Dakota, apparently upset his own apple cart when he accused the late President Woodrow Wilson of having "falsified" with respect to his knowledge of secret European treaties at the time the United States entered the World war. One after another Democratic senators arose to denounce this charge and to promise no more money would be appropriated for the investigations which Nye's munitions committee has been carrying on. Carter Glass, the fiery old Virginian who was Wilson's secretary of the treasury, was especially bitter in his attack on the North Dakotan and by skillful indirection managed to express his opinion of his fellow senator without violating the senate rules. Said he:

Senator Nye

"If it were permissible in the senate to say that any man who would asperse the integrity and veracity of Woodrow Wilson is a coward; if it were permissible to say that his charge is not only malicious but positively mendacious, that I would be glad to say here and elsewhere to any man, whether he be a United States senator or not, because the charge would be not only destitute of decency but it would be such a shocking exhibition as never has happened in the 85 years I have served in the congress of the United States."

The attacks on Senator Nye were not confined to his charge that President Wilson was a falsifier. He was accused of exploiting his position as chairman of the munitions committee for his political endorsement, for the sake of newspaper headlines, and for his personal profit.

Thirty-Hour-Week Bill Prepared by Committee

CONGRESSMAN CONNERY of Massachusetts, chairman of the house labor committee, says that body has approved a bill designed to impose the 30-hour week on industry operating in interstate commerce, and that he hopes it will have the support of the President. The measure would license all interstate business and withhold licenses from firms which work employees more than 30 hours a week, fail to provide a wage sufficient to maintain a decent and comfortable standard of living, deny workers the right to join unions or bargain collectively, or employ persons under sixteen years of age.

Bill to Enlarge Trade Commission's Powers

INTRODUCED in the house by Chairman Rayburn of the Interstate Commerce committee is a bill for the purpose of increasing the powers of the federal trade commission to prevent unfair and deceptive trade practices. It proposed these four major changes in the present law: 1. Declares "deceptive acts and practices" unlawful in addition to the "unfair methods of competition" now specified. 2. Includes "trusts" in the scope of the law along with corporations. 3. Gives the Circuit Court of Appeals power to restrain practices involved in a commission proceeding pending final court decision. 4. Limits to 60 days from the date of a commission order the time in which application may be made to the Circuit court for review of the order.

Farm Program Based on Soil Conservation Act

THERE will be no new legislation to continue the aims of the AAA, if the plans of the administration are adopted, for it has been found by officials that the soil conservation act of 1935 will permit the undertaking of about everything in the bill that the house and senate agricultural committees were drawing up.

In a White House conference the new program was agreed upon by President Roosevelt, Senator J. T. Robinson, majority leader; Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Attorney General Cummings, Chairman Ellison D. Smith of the senate agriculture committee, Chairman Marvin Jones of the house agriculture committee, Spenser Joseph W. Byrnie, Senator John H. Bankhead (Dem., Ala.), AAA administrator Davis, and M. G. White of the AAA. The administration will work out a system of granting farm subsidies to farmers restricting acreage under authority of the soil conservation act of 1935. In connection with the program the administration will make provision for obligations incurred under the AAA.

Final Returns in the Literary Digest Poll

LITERARY DIGEST'S Presidential straw vote has been concluded, and the final returns indicate a growing opposition to the New Deal. A total of 1,507,081 ballots was received, and of these 62.00 per cent were cast against the President's policies and acts, and 37.34 per cent were for the administration. Thirty-six states gave majorities against to eleven still in favor of the President and his policies. Among the pro-Roosevelt states was Utah. The other were classified in the release as "southern and border" states.

Of the different sections of the country, New England cast the heaviest "No" vote, going 77.98 per cent against the administration. The Middle Atlantic states from New York to West showed 68.69 per cent of the voters against Mr. Roosevelt and his recovery schemes, while the Middle Western states in the farm belt and the Rocky Mountain states indicated a ratio approximately the same as the nation at large—3 to 2 against. The three Pacific coast states totaled 65.42 against the New Deal.

Seventeen Persons Die in Airplane Crash

SEVENTEEN persons met a tragic fate in the worst airplane accident that the United States has had. A big transport plane of the American Airlines, en route from New York to Los Angeles, crashed in a swampy area near the village of Goodwin, Ark., and its 14 passengers, two pilots and stewardesses were killed. With great difficulty the bodies of the victims were brought out of the marsh where their bodies were found scattered among fragments of the shattered plane. Officials of the government and of the airline company immediately started an investigation but the cause of the disaster could not easily be determined.

Hauptmann Is Reprised by Gov. Hoffman

LESS than thirty hours from the time when he was to die in the electric chair, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted kidnaper and slayer of the Lindbergh baby, was given a thirty-day reprieve by Governor Hoffman of New Jersey. This means he will have at least sixty more days to live, because he will have to be re-sentenced.

Bruno Hauptmann

The governor did not give specific reasons for his action. He did say: "A reprieve is an act of executive clemency rather than judicial clemency. I am not required to give a reason, but I might say that there are grave doubts in this case, not only in my mind, but in the minds also of our citizens."

There will be only the one reprieve, "unless the evidence should warrant" another, the governor said. If Hauptmann is to be finally saved it must be through the presentation of sufficient new evidence to warrant Justice Trenchard granting a request for a new trial, or for a new plea for clemency to the state pardons court.

Italo-Ethiopia War Again Before League Council

MEMBERS of the League of Nations council assembled in Geneva and opened their nineteenth session, to resume their efforts to settle the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. Diplomats present believed further sanctions against Italy might be imposed, but it was generally believed the plan to declare an embargo on oil was dead, at least for the present. This was due to uncertainty as to the course the United States would follow in that regard. Italians in Geneva asserted flatly the embargo with Ethiopia could be settled only along Italian lines, but added they had no peace proposals themselves and knew of none to come from others. Intensified Nazi activities in the free city of Danzig were reported officially to the League of Nations by Sean Lester, high commissioner of Danzig, at a private meeting of members of the council.

The Saar

Industrial Panorama in the Saar.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—W. H. Storer.

ALTHOUGH barely 788 square miles in area and with fewer than 825,000 people, the Saar has been one of Europe's most populated regions since the World war. Powder keg of Europe; witches' caldron; political sore spot. For years such graphic labels have been tacked onto this small but highly industrialized region lying north of Alsace-Lorraine between France and Germany. From the days of Attila and the Caesars down to Foch and Von Hindenburg, its valleys and wooded hills have rocked and echoed to the tramp and shouts of marching armies.

Geographically, the Saar is an irregular patch of hilly land crossed by small valleys. It lies alongside Luxembourg, forms a buffer state between France and Germany, and was cut from the two German states of Prussia and Bavaria.

With a population about equal to that of Boston proper, it shelters more than 1,000 people per square mile—one of the most densely settled areas in all Europe.

Only such miniature European states as Andora, Liechtenstein, San Marino and Monaco are smaller than this tiny, yet dynamic country. America knows no state so dwarfish. Delaware is about three times the Saar's size, yet has less than a third its population. Saarbrücken, metropolis of the Saar, has only 132,400 people; yet in one year Saar trains haul 60,000,000 passengers!

Sit in any stuffy cafe at Saarbrücken, watch the guests eat red cabbage and boiled pork, or sip fat steins of beer as the band plays heavy Wagner music, and the place seems just another German industrial center.

But look into its eventful annals, or make a careful trip about its historic roads and ruins, and you find a land with a past peculiar to itself. Saar Problem in Caesar's Time. There was in fact a Saar problem even in Roman times, when blond men from east of the Rhine already had invaded this basin. In Caesar's "Commentaries" you read of three early German settlers. One Roman report of the time says that 120,000 barbarians, enamored of Gaul, had settled here.

Cesar feared these Germans might menace Rome itself; so he helped the Gauls drive them back across the Rhine. His battles on the Aisne and elsewhere were precursors of centuries of fighting along the Rhine. Some Roman military roads hereabouts are shown on the Peutingier map of about 200 A. D. One ran north from Argentoratum (now Strasbourg) to the Saar basin. About this same time the Romans built a castle at a point on the Saar river where it was bridged by their military road from Paris to Mainz. Saarbrücken was so named, meaning "Saar Bridge." That early Roman castle was the first house in the now modern city of Saarbrücken.

Dense forests choked all the basin then, forests frequented by heathen druids, by wild Celtic tribes who hunted deer and boars with spears. Scattered ruins of menhirs, dolmens and cromlechs, symbols of the druid cult, have been found in the Saar forests. Slowly, through centuries of paganism, tribal wars, and feudalism, the Saar was settled, civilized, and its wooded areas dotted with castles, villages, and towns.

Many old castles, such as Saarbrücken and Ottweiler, were set aflame by invading French in 1703, and some of their occupants perished on the gallotines. Yet in German-speaking Saarbrücken today, with its street cars, new city hall, baths, paved streets, playgrounds, "talkies," airport, museum and brightly lit stores with glass fronts, newspapers, and crowded schools, there is little to remind one of the Roman stronghold of long ago; no old Latin inscriptions remain, as in Rome itself.

Roman ruins there are—if you dig—ruins of villas, of baths and bridges, some almost in the shadow of early Christian churches. At Tholey is a church that dates from the thirteenth century. In sharp contrast, near Saarbrücken is a mosque built by the French during the World war, where in their Moroccan soldiers might pray.

Strategically, the Saar lies on a natural route between France and Germany, and for centuries they have disputed as to where their boundary lines should be fixed. Soon after the break-up of Charlemagne's empire, and the Treaty of Verdun in 843, the Saar became German soil.

Briefly, for more than a thousand years prior to the Versailles treaty, Germany held the Saar, except for two short periods, the second being the years from 1703 to 1815, when Napoleon pushed the French frontier to the Rhine. When Blucher and his Prussians advanced into France in 1815, he followed the very route taken by the German hordes when the Roman empire fell. It was so in the Franco-Prussian war: Von Moltke, in 1870, followed Blucher's route of 1815, and about Saarbrücken came one of the first clashes of that war which helped Bismarck to found his German empire. Again, of course, in the World war, the armies passed this way, and many an allied soldier washed his shirt in the Saar, the Moselle and the Rhine, or traded cigarettes and white bread to willing frauens for a jug of wine. Fly over Saarbrücken, where Marthal Ney was born, and in its very heart you see the outline of the old forts built by Louis XIV of France.

Dating as a town, from 1650, its people lived for more than 200 years almost wholly by trading with the garriens—first French, then German, then French again.

Today old walls and moats that encircled the fort have been torn down and filled to make broad, smooth streets, as the Americans did with parts of Manila. German infantry, artillery, cavalry, army wagons—all the money-spending machinery of war—made Saarbrücken a busy town until after the World war. When they evacuated, the French came in for a while; but now few occupants are found for all the vast barracks. It is quiet, much too quiet, for those residents who remember the band concerts, the glittering reviews, and fat army pay rolls of other days.

French Are Scarce There. German in race, speech, culture, and traditions, the Saar showed by a pre-war census only about one person in 200 with French as his native tongue. It was simply a legal accident at Versailles which made these people citizens temporarily, of a phantom state. The Saar, on that treaty, gained no nationality, no president or other ruler of its own. Instead, a commission of five Europeans was named by the League of Nations to administer the territory's affairs until the plebiscite.

If treaty the Saar went under a customs union with France; French customs guards were set to patrol the line between Germany and the Saar, and French money was put into use. To pay France for her own coal mines damaged by Germans in the World war, she was given the coal mines in the Saar. The treaty provided also that after the plebiscite Germany might buy these mines back again if she wished, and such an agreement was concluded late in 1934. Only around Saarbrücken is any French influence noticeable, and that is not due to the presence there of many living Frenchmen. Such influence belongs to the past—Vauban's old forts, built when Louis XIV made this a French garrison town; French names and epitaphs in the cemetery; and an odd local dialect current among older residents, a curious blend of German and French.

To see how thoroughly German the region is, in speech and sentiment, you have only to mingle with any holiday crowd and listen to the songs, the speeches, and the music; or read the papers, or see what crowds follow broadcasts from the radio stations at Frankfurt and Stuttgart. Industry Is Intensive. As in the Ruhr, industry here is compact, intensive, and theatrical in its setting. Like volcanoes, its giant mills, as at Volklingen (250,204), belch forth clouds of thick gray smoke; the red glare of blast furnaces turns black night into brilliant Gehenna. Under every hill is coal. Over every mine is a big wheel on a tower; again and again you see the big wheel spin, as it winds up a cable that lifts its load from deep in the earth.

This is the only place on earth where you see mines and steel mills closely crowded by forests, as if bits of industrial Pittsburgh were set in one of our forest reserves. The wooded slopes of the winding Saar river all covered with snow, much resemble Algonquin park in Ontario to winter; it seems the woods must be as dense and mysterious as when druids built their sacrificial altars there and hungry pagan Celts searched for wild meat.

New York City Still Has Its Indians and Farms

There are more people named Cohen in New York than any other name. In fact, there are 10,000 Cohens in the Bronx and Manhattan alone. The Kellys are forgotten and overlooked, Indians like to live in New York city. Seems to agree with them as the number is increasing. There are now 391 of them living there.

There are two buildings that each has five floors below the street level. There is one store for every 70 persons. There is one physician for every 545 persons. More people live in the Bronx than in Los Angeles. New York's quite a farming town. There are 305 families classed in the official census as being farming families. And 2,400 cows are milked every day in New York city.—Homer Gray in Esquire.

I FEEL FINE

Mothers read this:

A CONSTIPATED child is so easily straightened out, it's a pity more mothers don't know the remedy. A liquid laxative is the answer. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help. This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult. Doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. And today, there are fully a million families that will have no other kind in the house. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drugstore.

Not for Aged. Dancin' is a pastime to be learned early in life or not at all.

NASAL IRRITATION due to cold. Relieve the dryness and irritation by applying Mentholum night and morning. MENTHOLATUM Give Comfort Daily. If you prefer nose drops, or throat spray, call for the NEW MENTHOLATUM LIQUID in handy bottle with dropper.

A Virtue. When angels visit you they do not tell you they are angels.

Still Coughing? No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Forgive Graciously. If you must forgive, forgive graciously.

Abraham Lincoln Goes to Washington

Abraham Lincoln (FROM PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN IN JANUARY, 1861)

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

FEBRUARY 12, 1836 . . . a red-letter day in America's calendar . . . a holiday in most of the states of the Union . . . a day of remembrance, of eulogy, of "flinging his name against the stars."

For this is Lincoln's birthday. But let us go back to another Lincoln's birthday . . . to February 12, 1861.

A short, little locomotive with a flat-topped smokestack, is puffing along the single track that winds among the gently-rolling hills of Ohio. Back there in one of the wooden coaches a tall, gaunt man sits by a window gazing out over the bleak winter landscape.

Yesterday he had stood on the rear platform of a train at the brick railway station in Springfield, Ill. A crowd of nearly a thousand people, silent, bareheaded in the cold, drizzle of rain, had listened to these words:

"Friends, no one who has never been placed in a like position can understand my feelings at this hour nor the oppressive sadness I feel at this parting. For more than a quarter of a century I have lived among you, and during all that time I have received nothing but kindness at your hands.

"Here I have lived from my youth till now I am an old man. Here the most sacred trusts of earth were assumed; here all my children were born; and here one of them lies buried. To you, dear friends, I owe all that I have, all that I am. All the strange checkered past seems to crowd now upon my mind.

"Today I leave you; I go to assume a task more difficult than that which devolved upon General Washington. Unless the great God who assisted him shall be with and aid me, I must fail. But if the same omnipotent mind and the same almighty arm that directed and protected him shall guide and support me, I shall not fail; I shall succeed. Let us all pray that the God of our fathers may not forsake us now. To Him I commend you all. Permit me to ask that with equal sincerity and faith you will all invoke His wisdom and guidance for me.

"With these few words I must leave you—for how long, I know not. Friends, one and all, I must now bid you an affectionate farewell."

"Now I am an old man," he had said. Yes, Abraham Lincoln is fifty-two years old this twelfth day of February, 1861. But he has come a long way in those 52 years. This should be a happy birthday for Abraham Lincoln. But his three boys, Robt and Willie and Tad, hear the sigh that escapes from his lips as he turns from the window and they hush their noisy play. And Mary Todd Lincoln sees in the deep-set eyes that look of sadness which will shadow the face of this "Man of Sorrows" for the next four years.

Yes, he is President-elect of the United States of America . . . or should he say "the Disunited States?"

Six weeks after his election South Carolina had passed its ordinance of secession. During the next month Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida had followed the Palmetto state's lead. On February 4 representatives from these states had met at Montgomery, Ala., and organized the "Confederate States of America."

Five more, Texas, North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Arkansas, were almost certain to join the six that had already departed from the Union. The future course of three "border states," Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri, as well as the northern slave state of Delaware, was doubtful. And always in the background loomed the threat of a fratricidal war between the North and the South.

So much depended upon what he said and how he said it that he had toiled, night and day, for three weeks over his inaugural address.

"He wrote it as a composer writes a symphony," says Don Glassman in the Washington Star. "He marshaled all the melody in words, all the rhythm of speech and euphony of language to build a monument out of cold syllables . . . He weighed every one of a musical scale. He employed them as full notes and half notes. He would pronounce each word separately and feel convinced of its necessity both as to thought and style. By the time he finished a sentence it would harbor no contradictory thought or coarse note. The words were riveted together, so that to strike out an adjective or syllable would upset the thought and leave a gaping hole in the sentence."

Ever since his election, his mail had been full of letters bearing southern postmarks. Some were signed with the names and addresses of the senders; others were anonymous. They were filled with such words as "Black Republican," "mulatto scamp," "jail-bird," "rascals" and "thieves."

"Caesar had his Brutus! Charles the First his Cromwell. And the President may profit by Sir—This is to inform you that there is a club of 100 young men in this place who have sworn to murder you. Joe Bradley Joe Perkins Mike O'Brien their example," warned another, which was signed "from one of a sworn band of 10 who have resolved to shoot you from the south side of the avenue in the inaugural procession on the fourth of March, 1861." And still another declared: "This is to inform you that there is a club of 100 young men in this place who have sworn to murder you."

It was hard for him to believe that anyone should desire his death. But conviction came at last. More disturbing, though, were the rumors of men in high places who were about to turn traitor to their country and who might have gully knowledge of plans for reducing it to a state of anarchy. So he sent the adjutant-general of Illinois to Washington to sound out Gen. Winfield Scott, head of the army. Scott was a Virginian and his loyalty was suspected. Back came the reply from that doctored old fighter: "Tell Mr. Lincoln that, if necessary, I'll plant cannon at both ends of Pennsylvania avenue, and if any show their heads or even venture to raise a finger, I'll blow 'em to hell!"

But not even such reassurance could bring peace to Lincoln's troubled mind. As the train bore him nearer and nearer to the capital and in the day when he would take the oath of office, his despair deepened.

"To the anxious, listening country his speeches on the journey to Washington were disappointing," writes Nathaniel W. Stephenson in "The Chronicles of America." "Perhaps his strangely sensitive mind felt too powerfully the fatality of the moment and reacted with a sort of lightness that did not really represent the real man."

Arriving in Philadelphia he was informed that Allan Pinkerton's Secret Service men had uncovered indisputable evidence of a well-laid plot to assassinate him. He was urged to leave the City of Brotherly Love that night. His reply was: "I have promised to raise the flag over Independence Hall tomorrow morning and visit the legislature at Harrisburg. Beyond that I have no engagements."

After the Harrisburg reception a special train consisting of a locomotive, baggage car and coach sped back to Philadelphia. There Allan Pinkerton met the President-elect with a well-guarded carriage in which he was taken swiftly across the city to another station, where he boarded a sleeping car.

On the morning of February 23 the wires hummed with the news that the new President had made a secret entrance into the capital. Prince of Wales sneaked in under the cover of night," sneered some of his enemies. Others called him "that Illinois ape."

Thus Abraham Lincoln came to Washington. Never before nor since has a President-elect entered the nation's capital to assume the duties of his high office under such circumstances.

The next eight days were a nightmare of persistent annoyance by a horde of job-seekers, of rumors of disasters that were about to befall, of threats of sneers, of countless indignities.

March 4 dawned a "blue Monday." It had been raining. Pennsylvania avenue was a broad highway of spatter mud. Silence hung heavy over the crowd massed around the Willard hotel as President Buchanan and President-elect Lincoln entered an open barouche and started up the avenue toward the Capitol. Sharpshooters were stationed on the house-tops with orders to sweep the avenue with their fire if there was any uprising. In the side streets troops were massed ready for action. Other detachments were stationed beside the Capitol steps and near the north entrance a battery of artillery was ready to unleash a blast of death if need be.

Still unfinished, the Capitol dome was surmounted by huge derricks held in place by steel cables. "People might have drawn a striking parallel between the condition of the republic and its chief building. . . . On a level with the spectators stood the bronze figure of Liberty which would later surmount the dome. Perhaps she was making silent appeal to the man in black."

He stepped forward until he stood beneath a canopy surmounted by the Stars and Stripes. For the first time a wave of cheering swept over the crowd of 30,000 massed on the Capitol steps and in front.

"Fellow citizens of the United States!" There was emphasis on that word "United." The murmur of the crowd was hushed as his firm, clear, far-carrying voice went on:

"The Union will endure forever . . . no state upon its own mere motion can lawfully get out of the Union. I therefore consider that the Union is unbroken. . . . there need be no bloodshed or violence. . . . In your hands, my dissatisfied countrymen, and not in mine, is the momentous question of civil war. . . . The government will not assail you. . . . You have no oath registered in heaven to destroy the government, while I shall have the solemn one to 'preserve, protect and defend' it."

And so on to the end: "I am loath to close. We are not enemies, but friends. We must not be enemies. Though passion may have strained, it must not break our bonds of affection. The mystic chords of memory, stretching from every battlefield and patriot grave to every living heart and hearthstone all over this broad land, will yet swell the chorus of the Union when again touched, as surely they will be, by the better angels of our nature."

A roar of applause . . . from friend and enemy alike. Chief Justice Taney stepped forward holding a gold-clasped Bible. Then two men repeated together: "I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States. So help me God!" Abraham Lincoln was President of the United States.

Southwestern Briefs

The state health department reported 1,176 cases of communicable diseases in Arizona in December. Nearly twice as many tourists visited Carlsbad's famous caverns this January as did last January, recent figures show.

The federal government has returned $5,820.95 to New Mexico citizens and companies whose taxes for the fiscal year of 1935 were over-assessed.

Stuart Greenawalt of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been appointed agricultural teacher at Raton, N. M. high, to succeed Zenas R. Brush, recently named county agent.

Problems of cotton growers of the Las Cruces, N. M., section will be threshed out at a series of community meetings conducted by C. E. Hellbush, county agent.

Albuquerque's board of education has approved plans for the nine-class room high school building major project in the half million dollar school expansion program.

More than half of Arizona's budgeted expenditures last year went to its schools. Mt. Shims, state treasurer, said the schools received $3,026,185.29 out of the $5,519,477.47 budget.

Physicians of Eddy and Lea counties, at a recent meeting in Hobbs, N. M., chose Dr. J. W. Hillsman of Carlsbad as their chairman. Dr. C. C. Stone, Hobbs, was named secretary-treasurer.

Maricopa county, Ariz., supervisors have announced that the county's operating costs for the first six months of the fiscal year were 2 per cent under the budget. The total expended was $341,042.12.

University of Arizona officials have leased a tract of land from Maricopa county and will erect a $15,000 office building to house the county farm agent and agricultural extension advisory representatives.

Y. C. White, superintendent of banks, announced that deposits in Arizona's fifteen state and national banks increased $2,027,233.25 during November and December. The increase for 1935 was almost $10,000,000. Enough seed from the cross between Egyptian and American Pima cotton produced by the U. S. government at Tucson to plant 15,000 acres is available for this year's plantings. The cotton is grown in Maricopa and Pinal counties in Arizona.

Work has started on the $402,000 canal rehabilitation program of the Roosevelt irrigation district in Arizona. I. G. Vinson, contractor, said it would require four or five months to improve the fifty miles of canals between Phoenix and the Hassayampa river.

Arizona paid more than $4,000,000 in excise taxes in 1935, exclusive of the gasoline tax. The State Tax Commission, in making the announcement, said the figures represented a new high in excise tax collections, due primarily to improved business conditions.

New Mexico's gas tax collection plan will be given other states for study, on the premise that this state's plan produces more results. S. W. Burr, director of this division, said the New Mexico system was hailed at the regional meeting in Salt Lake City of the national gasoline tax officials.

A business census of Arizona has started under the direction of the U. S. department of commerce. Paul Plummer, of Prescott, director in district No. 2, will have charge of the work in Coconino, Apache, Navajo, Mohave and Yavapai counties. The remainder of the counties are under the direction of D. N. Gillan, of Phoenix.

A. H. Condon, secretary of the Tucson, Ariz., redox committee, has announced that bids for the construction of 520 additional reserved seats at the Tucson fair grounds south of the city had been awarded to the Frank O. Butler Construction Company. Construction of the new reserved section has been started.

To obtain more knowledge of the problem in tests and measurements in today's schools, the educational measurements class at Arizona State Teachers College at Flagstaff, under the direction of Dr. Vaughn C. Wallace, head of the education department, will carry out a project of testing and measuring in the Flagstaff school system.

Definite action to prevent recurrence of the devastating "black blizzards" in eastern New Mexico's "Dust Bowl" was seen in the establishment of the new division of the rural resettlement administration with headquarters at Amarillo, Texas. At least three counties, Union, Quay and Curry, are expected to be included in the ninety-six counties in the five states embraced by the program.

P. H. Ross, director of the University of Arizona agricultural extension service, estimated that 57,177 acres of farm land in the state should be treated to prevent grasshopper infestation. He said Arizona farmers saved $500,000 through the grasshopper control program last year. He estimated those who did not cooperate in the program lost crops valued at $92,000.

Bisbee, Ariz., according to the soil conservation service, will soon be flood proof. Although there has been no flood menace in recent years, the improvement will save the city the expense of clearing its main streets following heavy rains. Hundreds of check dams and rubble masonry walls are being built, and the Tombstone canyon subway will be required. Five hundred check dams, already have been built in upper Moan canyon, the source of much trouble. The area is so remote, water and cement were hauled to the workmen on burros.

Boulevard Speeds Prevail on Sea Highway for Ships

On the great steamer lanes between Europe and America, liners, cargo carriers, and tramps pass constantly. These are highways of the sea as truly as the Boston Post road and the Lincoln highway are traffic lanes of the land.

On what is known as the "west-bound tracks" are the ships coming from Europe, and on the "east-bound tracks" 60 miles south, are the ships going to Europe. All vessels off the tracks are reported for violation of the rules. A vessel off the track is just as dangerous as an iceberg or a derelict. Boulevard speeds prevail, so that the fast liners "step on it" through all kinds of weather. — National Geographic Society.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed. How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds. Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Leap Year Is With Us Again, and Here's What Causes It

Keeps Seasons in Order, Gives Fair Maidens Their Chance.

This is leap year and February 29 is the cause of it. But the cause of February 29 dates back to 46 B. C. when the astronomer of Julius Caesar figured out that the solar year (the time it takes the earth to complete its orbit around the sun) was 365 days and six hours.

The six hours stumped them until they decided to add an extra day to every fourth year and make that 366th day February 29. This is "leap" year because the extra day causes the calendar to leap over a day of the week after February 29. Ordinarily the calendar rotates just one day because 365 is one over 52 seven-day weeks. Thus, March 1 fell on Friday last year, but will fall on Sunday instead of Saturday this year.

Pope Suppresses Ten Days.

The Julian astronomers didn't have the thing down pat, however, for the solar year is actually 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 45.51 seconds. By the time Pope Gregory XIII decided to act in 1582 A. D. the dates of the year had shifted 10 days out of season. To correct this Pope Gregory ordered that October 5, 1582, be made October 15, 1582. To take care of the discrepancy occurring thereafter Pope Gregory's astronomers decided that leap year should be omitted on every century year not divisible by 400. Leap year won't be suppressed again until 2100 A. D.

Anyway, leap year has a more romantic aspect. By tradition, if not by practice, it is the time a woman can propose marriage to a man. The origin of this custom is attributed to the love suit in the Julian and Gregorian calendars.

But apparently Margaret of Norway, who became queen of Scotland, started the thing in 1258 A. D. by saying there ought to be a law. She decreed that during the leap years of her reign every "mayden ladye of bothe high and lowe estate shall have liberte to bespeake ye man she likes." And if a bachelor didn't like taking the proposition to be his lawful "wyfe" he could be "muled" (fined) one pound or less. His only "out" was to be already engaged.

Calendar Accepted Rapidly.

The Gregorian calendar was accepted in Italy, Spain, and Portugal on the same day it was ordered in Rome. In France it was accepted before the year was ended and in 1583 the German Protestant states retained the Julian calendar until 1700 when Sweden and Denmark also changed to the Gregorian or "new style" calendar. Russia held to the Julian calendar until the soviet union was formed.

In Great Britain the Julian calendar was abolished by the act of 1753. That same year saw the change in the British colonies in America. The birthday of George Washington, which was February 11 under the Julian calendar, became February 22 when the change occurred.—Chicago Tribune.

Sammy knew all of Lightfoot's hiding places. He visited every one of them. Lightfoot wasn't to be found, and no one whom Sammy met had seen Lightfoot for two days.

Sammy felt badly. You see, he was very fond of Lightfoot. You remember it was Sammy who warned Lightfoot of the coming of the hunter on the morning when the dreadful hunting season began. Ever since the hunting season had opened Sammy had done his best to make trouble for the hunters. Whenever he had found one of them he had screamed at the top of his voice to warn every one within hearing just where that hunter was.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

POTTED MEATS AND FISH

IN ENGLAND potted meats are so common that the everyday cook knows all about preparing them. We like to have such meats occasionally, and the following are reliable methods of preparing such dishes.

Meat such as ham, tongue or chicken, as well as left-over fish is picked for a luncheon dish, rather than use it in other ways, such as hash, which is all too common to some homes. The goodness of the potted meats is, of course, first of all, in the meat, then in the proper pounding and preparation and seasoning. If carefully prepared and put away, these will keep for a long time, and may be used for an occasional snack or an emergency dish.

Potted Chicken

Take a cold roast chicken, rejecting the skin and sinews, chop fine and to every pint allow a half-cupful of chopped ham or tongue. Put the bones of the fowl into a saucepan, add a pint of cold water and simmer until there is half a pint of stock; strain and remove the fat. Pound the chicken, and ham or tongue to a smooth paste in a mortar with an old-fashioned pestle; this makes a smooth paste or it may be put several times through the food chopper until fine. Then pound the pounding makes the meat of the creamy consistency needed. Add a little of the broth, season with cayenne, nutmeg and a tablespoonful of butter. Put into small jars, press down and cover with a cloth, then cover the cloth with a flour and water paste. Bake in a moderate oven for half an hour, having the jars in water. Take out, remove the cloth, cover with melted butter, then tie over a paper moistened with egg white and set away to keep in a cool dry place until wanted. This will keep for months, and makes a fine hot-weather dish. This will be a good way to take care of extra chicken at any time. Fresh beef tongue, cold roast veal, boiled or roast mutton, ham and smoked tongue are all most tasty treated in this way.

MY WAY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

LET me be up at morning,
And let me on my way,
For, with so much to see, to do,
Then who would long delay?
Let me go seeking fortune,
Let me go finding fame,
And doing something for the world,
The world that does the same.

Let me be far at noontide,
Be far upon the quest,
For with so much to do, to see,
Then who would care to rest?
I hear the pulleys rumble,
I hear the traffic roar,
A hundred matters to be done
And highways to explore.

Let me be up at morning,
Let me be far at noon,
For with so much to see, to do,
And so the morn to venture,
And so the day to roam,
But, when the evening shadows fall,
Let me be coming home.

HOSTILE VALLEY

SYNOPSIS

At a gathering in the village of Liberty, Maine, Jim Saladino listens to the history of the neighboring Hostile Valley, and the mysterious, enticing "Huldy," wife of Will Ferrin. Interested, he drives to the Valley for a day's fishing, and to see the glamorous Huldy Ferrin. "Old Marm" Pierce and her nineteen-year-old granddaughter Jenny live in the Valley. Since childhood, Jenny has deeply loved young Will Ferrin, older than she, and who regards her as still a child. Will leaves to take employment in Augusta. His father's death brings him back to the Valley, but he returns to Augusta, still unconscious of Jenny's womanhood and love. Bart Carey, something of a ne'er-do-well, is attracted by Jenny. The girl repulses him definitely. Learning that Will is coming home, Jenny, exulting, sets his long-empty house to rights, and has dinner ready for him. He comes—bringing his wife, Huldy. The girl's world collapses. Huldy becomes the subject of unfavorable gossip in the Valley. Entering his home unlooked for, Will finds seemingly damning evidence of his wife's unfaithfulness as a man he knows is Seth Humphreys breaks from the house. Will overtakes him and chokes him to death, although Humphreys shatters his leg with a bullet. At Marm Pierce's house the leg is amputated. Jenny goes to break the news to Huldy. Huldy declares she has no use for "half a man," and leaves. Will is legally exonerated, and with a home-made artificial leg "carries on," hiring a helper, Zeke Dace. Months later, Zeke comes back. Will accepts her presence as her right. Two years go by. Saladino comes to the Valley. Bad roads cause him to stop at Ferrin's farm, where he meets Huldy. Saladino, caught in heavy rain, takes refuge at Marm Pierce's. Bart Carey arrives, carrying Huldy, whom he claims had fallen from a ledge, and seemingly is dead. Marm Pierce declares her dead, but while Huldy and Jenny are alone, the woman, with her last breath, asserts Will killed her. Horrified, Jenny decides to tell no one of the accusation. She goes to notify Will. With him, she returns to Marm Pierce's. She has told him of Huldy's death, and he is bewildered. Zeke Dace cannot be found. Saladino informs Sheriff Sobler, by phone, of Huldy's death. The sheriff comes to Marm Pierce's farm.

"Rained hard last night," Bart reminded him. "They was fresh today. I see them myself, when I fished down."

The sheriff asked: "Carey, you got any idea who'd want to—hurt Miss Ferrin?"

Bart hesitated. "I wouldn't go to say," he said. "He added, with a deep reluctance: "Not unless it was Zeke. Zeke Dace, works for Will. Zeke was kind of crazy about her, and—jealous of her." He might have got mad at her." Yet he added hesitantly: "But Will don't 'low that Zeke would touch her."

"Where is Zeke?" the sheriff asked.

Bart shook his head. "Dunno. Nobody's seen him since."

Marm Pierce came out of the dining room. She told the sheriff she was glad to have him here.

He nodded, and asked slowly: "Was Miss Ferrin dead when she got here, ma'am?"

"As good as," the old woman assured him. "She was all broke to pieces, and bled white, and she died before I got around to it."

"Didn't come to?"

"No," Marm Pierce told him. "No." "You look her over, did you?" the sheriff urged. He explained: "I guess likely I'll want a doctor to see her, but you might have noticed some special hurt on her."

The old woman told him: "Why, she was hurt cruel, Sheriff. Looked like she'd fell on her head and side. There was scratches and cuts all over her; and a deep bad cut on her neck. And her face was banged where she'd hit a tree, or a rock or the like."

"I mean to say," he persisted, "nothing to show."

The old woman shook her head. "Nothing that she couldn't have got from falling the way she did."

The sheriff sighed as though discouraged, and Marm Pierce asked: "You didn't know Huldy, did you, Sheriff?"

"I've heard tell of her," he answered. "Guess the whole county has, if it comes to that," the old woman asserted. "But you can see for yourself, a lot of things might have happened to a woman like her."

"It was account of her," Bart reminded them, "that Will killed Seth Humphreys. I dunno as I blame him. I dunno as he went to kill her; but Seth had a gun, and Will, with his leg shot to pieces, he had to hang on to Seth's neck or get another bullet in him. But Huldy was back of that."

"I heard she'd left Will, sense," the sheriff reflected.

"She come back," Bart explained. "She took a shine to Zeke and decided to stay."

"Will take her back, did he?"

"Dunno as he could help it," Bart confessed, and he said slowly: "Will he always stood a lot from her, Sheriff! No matter what she did, I dunno as he'd—harm her." He added harshly: "But if he did, I wouldn't blame him!"

The old woman's sharp eyes fixed on him. "You trying to let on that Will killed her, Bart?" she asked, in a matter-of-fact tone. "Speak out. No sense in talking around corners."

"I'm not letting on a thing about it," Bart asserted her. "I'm trying to see through it, Grassy, the same as you."

"I can see a plenty," she said crisply. The sheriff said, bouding: "I'd like to talk to this Zeke. Might be he'd know something. Maybe Will, he'll fetch him. Looks like I'd have to talk to that man."

But when Will and Jenny presently did return, they were alone.

This hour she spent with Will was for Jenny deeply comforting. Huldy's accusation had faded into a cloudy unreality, like the substance of a dream. But Jenny now, more than any other emotion, felt a grievous sympathy for Will, for the remorse she knew he must endure; and she strove in small ways to reassure and comfort him, not by words, but by her steady supporting presence at his side.

They tramped in silence through the woods, the lantern swinging in Will's hand making the black shadows of the trees along the way swing like somber pendulums. They crossed the brook, and climbed the steep trail, and came up through the orchard to the barn; and while Jenny held the lantern, Will let the cows into the tie-up and secured them there. He pulled down hay for them, and went to the kitchen for the pail and returned to milk. Jenny stood silently by, while he sat his head against the warm flanks of the cows, the lantern here beside him on the floor.

He spoke only once of that which filled both their minds. "I'd like to know where Zeke's gone to," he said. "He'll be around by and by," Jenny promised him. "It's all right, Will."

But her own words faintly startled her; since clearly, if Will must live with the secret knowledge that he had killed Huldy, the world could never be all right for him again; and she wished suddenly to take him in her arms, and tell him that she knew, and held him blameless. But she perceived that to do this, to confess her knowledge of his guilt, would be to open between them a gulf never to be bridged.

So she was silent; and later, when they came back through the wet woods together, she decided that this was a matter none should ever know. And thus resolving, she found strength for the task before her, and was at peace again. Huldy was dead. Let it be by accident. The world would presently forget that Huldy had ever lived. When with Will she came back to the little house in the Valley, she had somehow stifled her fears.

Will also saw the sheriff there.

When they came in, she felt her strength drain away. But then, and by Will himself, her foreboding was turned into fearful certainty; for Will said to this man:

"Why, Sheriff, what fetched you here?"

The sheriff hesitated. "I kind of hoped you'd bring this Zeke Dace back with you," he said, evasively.

Will shook head. "I dunno where Zeke's got to," he admitted in troubled tones. "He wa'n't to home." And he persisted: "But Sheriff, what fetched you here?"

Jenny was breathless, waiting for the answer. Then Saladino said gravely: "I sent for him, Will."

Will stared at Saladino. "What for?" he protested, bewildered.

And then the sheriff said: "Why Will, the thing is, it looks in every body as if maybe Miss Ferrin didn't just fall off of that ledge. They think someone maybe throwed her off."

Jenny's throat constricted strangely. The bounds were on the trail. As though from far away she heard Will stammer: "Killed her, you mean?"

"Something like that."

Will stood with his head bowed. "I guess not," he said firmly at last. "Who'd do that?"

"I was thinking maybe this Zeke Dace," Sobler suggested.

But Will shook his head. "No, Sheriff," he insisted. "Whatever did happen, it wa'n't Zeke. He wouldn't go to hurt her." And he continued, half to himself: "There might have been some to hurt Huldy; but not Zeke! Why, I'd as soon think I did it myself," he said.

Jenny felt the shock of a great blow. Then Bart chuckled, and Will turned to look at him. "What's the matter, Bart?" he asked. "What's funny?"

"(What you said," Bart told him. "That's a joke, Will. I mean, to think you'd hurt Huldy," he explained, and he added hotly: "Not that anybody'd blame you! She needed it!"

He spoke to the sheriff. "Anyone around here will say the same!"

Will moved a little toward him. "I don't take that kindly, Bart," he said. "I don't want that kind of talk from you or anybody. Not about Huldy, Not now."

There was, briefly, silence; but after a moment the sheriff said, half to himself, in almost querulous tones: "It's a pity she didn't come to long enough to tell what happened to her!"

And it seemed to Jenny suddenly that this familiar kitchen was very small, and crowded, and stifling hot. She felt strangled, and her hand flew to her lips, and stark terror struck her. Then she saw Marm Pierce watching her with eyes suddenly keen and aghast; and she felt smothered, and shrank back into the corner by the door.

After the sheriff spoke, there was silence for a moment; then Jenny had a respite for Joe Matthews, the undertaker, came out of the dining room. He spoke to Will.

"There, Will," he said. "I've done all that needs doing tonight; and if you want, I'll carry her home." He hesitated, added: "But if you take my advice, let her lay here tonight. I can tend to everything a sight better in the morning."

Marm Pierce said: "She's welcome to stay, Will!"

Will nodded. "Well, likely that's sensible," he agreed.

Jenny, while their attention was thus turned away from her, opened the door and stepped out on the porch, grateful for the taste of cool, moist air. In the kitchen she heard the sheriff spy doubtfully: "I guess, Joe, you'll want to go along home now. I don't know as I ought to leave yet, though. I'd like to see this Zeke Dace, first. But I wish you'd bring Doc Harris in the morning, I want him to look her over."

When presently the undertaker came out to depart, Jenny drew aside out of his way. Sobler and Saladino crossed with him to where his truck stood, spoke with him there. Then Bart came out, and said to Jenny casually:

"Hot in there, ain't it." And in a lower tone: "Don't you worry, Jenny! Nothing to be afraid of."

He too had seen her terror then! It must have been plain, for them all to see. Yet even as she thought this, she realized suddenly that she was no longer afraid, and wondered why. And then, without speaking to Bart, she came quickly back into the kitchen where were Marm Pierce and Will. Her hand touched Will's sleeve, and peace filled her; and a deep enlightenment and certainty, like a revelation.

Then the truck departed, and Bart and Sobler and Saladino returned indoors. After a moment the sheriff appealed to Saladino. "Jim," he said. "Looks like you could figure something out of this business. I guess you was the last one to see Miss Ferrin alive."

Saladino shook his head. "I don't see into it at all," he confessed.

Bart turned to Will. "How about you, Will?" he urged. "Didn't you hear her screech when she fell? I'd have said everybody in a mile could have heard that. It sounded mighty loud to me."

Will shook his head. "The noise wouldn't carry up to the farm, with the hill between, and the trees." He looked at Saladino. "I mind," he said, "when you went off with Huldy, Zeke he come out of the shed like he'd go along after you. I stopped him, made him stay behind." And he continued after a moment: "Seems like I kept him there a sight longer'n I'd take you to get down to the brook. Supposing you didn't stop any time on the ledge."

"I didn't," Saladino said.

There was silence for a moment; then Will spoke again, gropingly.

"By the time I figured you'd be gone," he explained, "I left Zeke and went into the house; but when it come on to rain, I wondered where Huldy was. I come out on the porch and yelled for Zeke, but he didn't answer, so I went hunting them. I started to go down the path to the brook. But then I decided there wa'n't any use in that." He added with a glance at Saladino: "I see tracks where you'd gone down, where your boots had slipped."

Saladino spoke quickly. "Boots? I've got shoes on. It was someone else," he insisted. "It wa'n't me."

Will said stubbornly: "It was boot tracks that I see. Somebody with boots on had gone down the trail!"

And Bart spoke. "Guess Zeke had boots on, didn't he?"

Will considered, and he nodded. "Likely," he agreed. "Yes, he did. I mind, now, he did."

The sheriff stirred. "The way it looks to me," he decided, "Zeke's the one to find; and we ain't likely to find him, long as we're sitting here!"

"Nor you can't find him outside," Marm Pierce cried sharply. "Show some sense, Sheriff! You couldn't see Zeke ten feet away, a night like this, if he was a blind to hide. Set down your head, 'stead of your feet! Use your eyes!"

"What good's my eyes going to do me here?" he urged.

"There's been enough to see, if you wa'n't blind," she told him; and she looked briefly at Jenny. "Jenny," she said sharply. "You were almighty scared a while ago. I think you know something more'n you've told. You was down brook this morning. Did you see anything, hear anything at all?" Her tones were insistent.

Jenny, though her heart was pounding, spoke after a moment steadily enough. The way was clear before her now, all doubts resolved. But she only said: "I told you I heard someone talking, in the woods."

Marm Pierce protested irascibly: "Nothing in that to scare you!" She came closer to the girl. "Jenny, I can see more than most; but I can't see everything. What was it scared you, a while ago? When the sheriff said that about wishing Huldy had come to, before she died? What was it, Jenny?" she demanded.

The girl smiled slowly, as at some secret thought.

"Go on, Jenny," said old Marm Pierce. "Tell the truth and shame the devil!"

Jenny look at Will's bowed head, and her smile suddenly was radiant as the sun. "It don't mean a thing to me now," she protested softly. "Because I can see it wa'n't true."

"What was it, Jenny?" the old woman insisted.

"Huldy did come to, for a minute, before she died," said Jenny then.

Marm Pierce cried in a deep incredulity:

"Jenny, she never did!"

And Bart exclaimed: "She couldn't, Jenny! Why, she was as good as dead before ever I got her here!"

Jenny repeated slowly: "She did, anyway!" And for a moment she said no more. She stood near the cabinet over the sink, where knives and forks and cooking dishes were stowed away. Bart was by the door into the shed. Marm Pierce was between Jenny and the stove; and Sheriff Sobler sat in front of the oven with his greatest looks about him.

Will was beyond the stove, near the other door, impassive, waiting.

Saladino, watching Jenny, thought she seemed in this moment to wear a mantle of grace. She looked at Will, and her eyes held his, and her tone was gently mistrustful.

"She told me you did it, Will," said Jenny, with a smile on her lips, and her glance serene.

Bart uttered a low ejaculation; but Marm Pierce spoke in brisk insistence. "How come you didn't call me?"

"I didn't want you," Jenny told her gently.

"The more fool you," said Marm Pierce, briefly, her patience near the breaking point. "What happened?" she demanded.

The sheriff spoke heavily. "Miss Pierce, you let her tell it her own way," he urged. So Marm Pierce was silenced; and Jenny's eyes turned again to Will. The big man shook and swayed where he stood, as though this that Jenny had to say had struck him nerveless.

Mastiff Is Considered British Isles' Oldest

There may be older breed of dogs than the mastiff but so in the British Isles for here this dog is considered the oldest of them all, its origin dating back to the Sixth century B. C. At that time, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News, it was brought into Britain by the adventurous Phoenician traders and was adopted by the Britons for hunting and in warfare.

For years the breed was used to hunt the larger wild animals and in bear baiting but as the centuries passed it was adopted as a guardian for property and as a canine companion for those who fancied the larger breed of dogs.

Mastiffs may be either fawn with a dark face or brindle. They weigh from 150 to 170 pounds and stand about 28 inches high at the shoulders. According to the American standard of perfection they should be large, massive and powerful with a well-knit frame. The legs should be wide apart and squarely set. The coat is short and close-lying but not too fine over the shoulders, neck and back.

International Childlessness

In February, 1920, at the first plenary meeting of the inter-allied commission and the Germans, a pretty farce was played out when the German chief insisted on opening the meeting. In spite of the fact that the allies were imposing terms and the Germans accepting them, a compromise on procedure had to be made wherein the German and the allied delegations entered the council room simultaneously.

POULTRY

EGG PRODUCTION WINTER PROBLEM

Proper Care and Management Are Vital.

By H. H. Alp, Poultry Extension Specialist, University of Illinois, WNU Service.

More favorable egg prices plus the seasonal rise places a premium on feeding and managing poultry flocks for high winter egg production.

Value of high egg production during the early winter is shown by farm management records taken from several farms during two years. The first year flocks that produced less than 10 per cent of the year's egg crop in October, November and December brought poultrymen an average of 13.2 cents a dozen for the eggs. Where 20 per cent or more of the year's egg crop was produced during these months the average price for the year was 15.1 cents. In addition the annual production was higher where fall and winter production was increased.

The second year the average price for the flock of low fall and winter production was 10.4 cents as compared to 20.7 cents where fall and winter production was high.

Poor fall and winter egg production is an indication that the flock needs better care and management. The hen should have plenty of fresh, clean water from sunrise to sunset. Plenty of the right kind of feed should be available at all times. The laying house should be kept in repair so that drafts and leaks can be avoided. The entire house should be kept clean, and clean, dry litter should be placed on the floor as often as necessary. Crowding should be avoided with approximately four square feet of floor space allowed for each hen.

Weak, parasite-infested birds should be culled from the flock and only the promising layers kept in the laying house.

Selecting the Cockerel for Breeding Purposes

Cockerels that are selected for breeding purposes should show early sexual maturity. This is indicated by the rapid development of the comb and wattles and the age at which they grow. The size of the body is an important characteristic of a good breeder and may be determined by handling the bird. High constitutional vigor is an important point as it affects the general appearance, size and shape of the bird, asserts a writer in the American Agriculturist. Cockerels having this vigor are alert, active, refined and well-developed. The head of the vigorous male is wide across the skull, set with full prominent eyes and has a strong arched back. The body is developed with a full round breast and a full abdomen. The shanks are large, containing a large amount of pigmentation and are well set under the body. If you trap-nest and pedigree your chicks and you have a pedigree of the cockerels, select those cockerels whose dams in their pullet year laid at least 175 eggs, or still better 225 eggs. These eggs should have averaged at least 24 ounces or even more to the dozen.

Trapnesting Pullets

Pullets do not lay with such machine-like regularity as to enable the trapnest to mark desirable birds at each month's closing. The number of eggs in or at a given time is but one indication of prospective value. Early maturity, or production at a comparatively early age, is an indication of good yearly production, though this should be accompanied by good weight and should not be at the expense of production. A high rate of production is also a mark of value, as it is commonly accompanied by good annual production. These indications may be observed in the first three or four months of laying. The evidences of vigor and ability to maintain weight during production are also to be considered in culling, which, after all, cannot be conducted upon a cut-and-dried formula, with number of eggs laid within a given time the only criterion.

Guard Turkey Breeders

The first consideration with breeding turkey hens is vigor. If it is desired to have turkey hens come into production early in the spring, they should be fed a laying mash all winter, and a grain ration containing yellow corn, oats, and wheat or barley on through to spring. They should be compelled to roost outside all winter, with shelter provided only in severe weather. The worst weather for the turkey flock is when it rains and turns to ice.

Blind Fowls

The causes of blindness in growing fowls are rather obscure. About all that can be said of them, according to a writer in the Rural New-Yorker, is that they are due to some affection of the nerves of sight. They may accompany some forms of paralysis or other diseases. Such birds should not be used in the breeding pen and it would probably be a good idea to make use of them for food before such further symptoms as emaciation make the carcass undesirable for the table.

All Around the House

Flower pots used in the house are made very decorative if painted with water color paints.

A bottle of furniture polish rubbed into clean dry mop will give hardwood floors an excellent polish.

Maple sirup mixed with confectioners sugar to which a little butter or cream is added makes a delicious frosting for cakes.

When postage stamps stick together lay a thin paper over them and run a hot iron over the paper. The heat does not remove mucilage.

A noted chemist gives us the information that science has discovered that it is not dangerous to leave canned foods in the can after it has been opened. They remain in better condition until eaten if the unused portion is kept in the can. There is nothing about the can that will contribute to the spoilage of food.

Neck pieces of beef and lamb make delicious soups and stews.

CAPITAN ITEMS

A capacity crowd enjoyed the Underwood Girls, Capitan Girls, game at the Capitan Gym last Saturday night. It was closely contested all the way with the outcome in doubt until the final whistle, the Underwood girls winning 19 to 17. Considering the fact that the Capitan girls had but a week to practice before the game, another encounter later in the season would be interesting. The dance which followed the game was also unusually well attended. The addition of Bill Nickels to the orchestra helped the music considerably.

New Chevrolet Truck on Economy-Safety Run

Carrying a 10,000-lb. cement block from Los Angeles to New York, a 1½-ton Chevrolet truck—one of the new 1936 models just introduced—demonstrated that safe driving means economy. Speed limits were observed in every community, with 23 m.p.h. the maximum on the open road. The 3511.4 miles were completed on two quarts of oil and 308.6 gallons of gasoline, at a cost of 0.13 cents per mile, or one-third of a cent per mile. The entire run was completed without any mechanical failure, repairs, or even a scratched fender. The illustrations show the test truck and features of the new 1936 models. Coupe type cab with solid steel roof, full-floating rear axle, and full-length water jackets, are some of the improvements. In the lower right, Harry Hartz, who drove the cross-continent test, is seen beside the 10,000-lb. block. The test was officially observed by the American Automobile Association.
