The Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company has spent several thousand dollars in changing their system from the old magneto to common battery.

Mr. R. O. Brady a representative of the Company is with us, he will be glad to explain the new system and its operation.

We are now able to give you any service that is required to meet your demands. Just call the office and Mr. Brady or Mr. McQuillen or any of its employees will give you the required information and charges for service.

Flandin Calls on Germany for a Showdown

PIERRE-ETIENNE FLANDIN, French foreign minister, speaking at Vezelay, demanded in the name of his government that Adolf Hitler lay his cards on the table, and intimated that unless Germany gives concrete proof of no aggressive intentions in Central or western Europe, France will decline to negotiate further with the reich and will prepare for war. Flandin made it clear that France will stand firmly with her allies, the little entente and Russia. Said he:

"The Fuehrer says Germany does not want to take anything from anybody, but he already had said that after the Saar plebiscite. He then also reaffirmed the Locarno treaty, which since has been repudiated. In the name of the integral sovereignty of the German people, does the Fuehrer intend, when he thinks the moment favorable, to bring up the Danzig question?"

"When he proposes a nonaggression pact with Lithuania does he accept, definitely the status of Memel or is he just stalling for time to prepare new deeds of force in violation of treaties?"

"If Germany intends to assert her right to possess and exploit colonies, what colonies is she going to claim? Is it not significant that at the moment Hitler launches his peace appeal, Nazi propaganda is redoubling in Austria, Danish Schleswig, Polish Silesia, among the German minority in Czechoslovakia, and even in German Switzerland?"

"Yes or no, does Hitler renounce annexation and even full absorption of the populations of these territories into the reich, or does he proclaim that these are internal affairs of the German people in which he does not intend to let other nations meddle?"

"If the latter case be the truth, then we understand why Germany is remaining at a record pace."

Germany Almost Solidly Supports Hitler

GERMANY'S men and women in the number of 44,000,000 declared by their votes in the Reichstag election that they supported the policies of Hitler. Only 542,000 had the nerve to vote against the reichsfuehrer, and a still smaller fraction refused to go to the polls. Among the latter were the former Crown Prince Ruprecht of Bavaria and his wife.

Hitler's victory was thus extraordinarily complete, and the Nazis celebrated it with wild rejoicing in Berlin and other cities. It was the culmination of a three years' campaign in which the leaders sought to persuade the population of the reich that only Hitler could save the country from great danger. According to Berlin correspondents, there was a difference of opinion there as to the influence the triumph would have on the Fuehrer. Some said it would stiffen his back and induce him to ride roughshod over the powers which objected to his scrapping of the Locarno pact. Others said the election would make him feel so strong he would be willing to make a concession to his neighbors in an effort to help establish "the new order in Europe" to which he referred so frequently in his election speeches.

The new Reichstag will be the largest in history, having about 740 members. Most of them will be officials of the Nazi party.

For the first time in the history of aviation a polling booth was established in the air. It was aboard the new dirigible Von Hindenburg, whose 104 passengers and crew voted solidly for Hitler. The Hindenburg and the Graf Zeppelin cruised over the Saar and the Rhineland all day long.

Japan Expects Trouble With Soviet Russia

THOUGH Koki Hirota, the new Japanese premier, said a few days ago that while he was in office there would be no war, it is evident his government really is looking for serious trouble with Russia. This feeling is expressed by Kiji Anan, spokesman for the Tokyo foreign office, who said: "Japan must prepare for Soviet aggression."

Recent activities indicate the Reich are availing themselves of the critical situation which developed after the recent military revolt in Tokyo and are increasing the strength of their troops along the Manchukuo border.

Anan said the "recent Soviet policy has been to fire on any persons near the border." He said he regards this as a "friendly neighbor." He said Premier Hirota has protested the alleged action to K. K. Kurose, Russian ambassador to Japan.

About every day there are reports of clashes on the Manchukuo border.

each side blaming the other as aggressors. The Outer Mongolian government, reinforced by conclusion of its mutual assistance pact with Soviet Russia, dispatched a note to the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchukuo, declaring its readiness to resist any invasion.

Italian Bombers Wreck Second Ethiopian City

MUSSOLINI'S air bombers were busy again in Ethiopia, virtually ruining Harar, second city of that country, with a downpour of explosives. Most of the populace had fled when scouting planes gave a warning of what was to come, so the casualties were few. An official telephone message from Harar to Addis Ababa said fifteen incendiary bombs struck the Egyptian Red Cross hospital and others hit the Ethiopian Red Cross hospital.

A French mission, the French consulate, the Ethiopian radio station and prison all were reported officially to have been ruined.

The attack on Harar, coupled with a heavy bombardment of Jijiga, fifty miles east of Harar and a center of Ethiopia's southern defenses, raised native fears in Addis Ababa that the capital itself might be the next target.

Government in Business Decried by Committee

ACCORDING to the committee on government competition with private enterprise, whose report has been made to the President, that practice is wholly destructive except in situations where the public welfare can only thus be served. "The government's function," the report said, "is to protect economic activities of its citizens and not to supplant them."

The committee unanimously agreed that only under the following conditions is the government justified in entering into competition with private enterprise:

1. When required to assure adequate preparation for, and creation of, the facilities for national defense.
2. For the conservation of natural resources.
3. When private enterprise fails to conduct needed scientific research and exploratory activities to advance industrial development, or in the interest of public health and safety.
4. When private enterprise fails to render a service necessary for the general welfare.

Alien Deportation Bill Reported to Senate

DESPITE vigorous opposition, which will reappear on the floor of the senate, the senate committee on immigration and naturalization reported favorably the Kerr-Coolidge alien deportation bill, which Secretary Perkins has been trying to get through congress for three years. It will give her and two other members of an interdepartmental board discretionary power to harbor radical and even criminal aliens, otherwise deportable, in this country. The same bill recently was reported favorably by the house committee.

Pending action by congress on the measure, Secretary Perkins has been building up the deportation of some 2,500 aliens mandatorily deportable under existing law, contending that they are "hardship cases." Some are radicals, some have criminal records, and others entered the country illegally. By "hardship cases" Secretary Perkins means that they would be separated from family ties or put to some other inconvenience.

Senator Robert H. Reynolds of North Carolina, Democrat, not long ago attacked the action of Secretary Perkins in holding up the deportations and denounced the pending bill as a "sham and a mockery" and a subterfuge to shield all kinds of radicals, criminals, and dependents unlawfully in this country.

Secretary Perkins refused to produce information respecting the 2,500 "hardship" cases until Reynolds introduced a senate resolution, whereupon she permitted him to examine the records.

Third Party Is Favored by Farmer-Laborites

FORMATION of a third national party was suggested in a resolution adopted by the Farmer-Labor party convention at St. Paul, Minn., and the delegates joyfully welcomed the hint that Gov. Floyd D. Olson of Minnesota might be its Presidential candidate in 1940. Just now Mr. Olson is after a seat in the senate. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 285 to 205 although several leaders pleaded that the move be put off for four years.

Governor Olson said privately that in his opinion the resolution could do no harm since it does not commit the liberals to putting a national ticket in the field this year. Neither does it authorize formation of such a ticket, unless a second convention convenes and makes any action a proposed "voluntary conference" may take.

New Processing Taxes Out of Revenue Bill

ONE of the major features of the new tax program suggested by President Roosevelt is omitted from the measure prepared by a house subcommittee and in which open hearings were begun by the ways and means committee. For political reasons it was decided that the plan for new processing taxes on farm and competing products should be abandoned. Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion for a "windfall" tax to recapture part of the refunded or unpaid AAA processing levies was accepted by the subcommittee.

A third suggestion of the President for graduated taxes on the portions of incomes which corporations do not distribute in dividends to stockholders, was changed to provide levies on total income of corporations varied according to percentages of profits put into reserves.

The subcommittee agreed that the corporation tax rates should be so drafted as to permit corporations, particularly small ones, to build up reserves for lean years without being compelled to pay comparatively high taxes for the privilege of doing so.

The subcommittee figured on collecting some $25,000,000 from taxes on dividends going to foreigners who own stock in American corporations and $83,000,000 from temporary continuation of the capital stock and excess profits taxes.

Half Million Farmers May Get Double Benefits

REXFORD G. TUGWELL, head of the rural resettlement administration, announced that a special committee is considering a plan under which more than half a million grovers of farm products would receive double benefits from the federal government.

It provides that the rural families now getting loans from Tugwell's administration to put them on their feet and keep them off the relief rolls may also receive full subsidy payments in connection with the soil conservation program now being put into operation. There are now 450,000 recipients of the Tugwell loans and the number is expected to increase to 625,000 by July 1.

The soil conservation subsidies are to be paid to farmers who transfer land from commercial crop production to soil conserving growth, or who resort to other "economic" farm practices. Officials said that the rehabilitation clients already are under obligation to treat their soil wisely. Before a family can obtain a rehabilitation loan, it must agree to follow a farm management plan drafted by the government.

This plan stipulates that the borrower must conserve his land's fertility and grow food and feed crops for home consumption. Tugwell indicated that examination may show that the farm management plan is so closely in accord with the AAA's soil conservation aims that the rehabilitation clients may already be qualified to receive the AAA subsidies.

Anti-Chain Store Bill Opposed by Witnesses

SEVERAL witnesses who appeared before a senate subcommittee declared that the Robinson-Patman anti-chain store bill, which has administration backing, would promote rather than curb monopolies, increase the cost and lower the standard of living, and decrease employment in whole industries.

The hearing was on the Borah-Van Nuys bill, a modification of the Robinson-Patman measure, but the witnesses particularly attacked the latter, which already has been reported favorably. The house judiciary committee reported the Utterback bill, still another modification of the Robinson-Patman measure, and a bitter fight over the proposed legislation is expected.

The Robinson-Patman bill would prohibit manufacturers from making price discriminations in favor of large quantity purchasers, through advertising allowances, service charges, brokerage fees, etc. The Borah-Van Nuys bill would prohibit such allowances only when they were refused to purchasers of goods of "like grade, quality, and quantity."

One Fight in A. F. of L. Ended by Compromise

ONE of the big fights within the American Federation of Labor has been settled peacefully. It was for control of the building trades department. In the past, building projects have been held up by strikes growing out of arguments over which of two unions should do a certain piece of work. The peace pact provides for appointment of an impartial referee to settle such arguments.

The pact also called for J. W. Williams of the carpenters to head the reorganization department, with M. J. McDonough of the plasterers as secretary-treasurer. Each has been the leader of one of the warring factions and each has styled himself as the lawful department president.

Electric Home and Farm Authority Is Renewed

WITH only one change, the house passed the senate bill to continue the Electric Home and Farm authority as a federal agency until February 1, 1937, or any earlier date desired by the President. The authority was created to help finance sales of electrical appliances.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Racial Hatred. BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.—It may be old to you—but it's new out here:

Small Prussian town turns out for "traveling" circus. Ferocious lion escapes; villagers flee madly. Sinewy stranger grapples, single-handed, with ravening brute; twists its jaws, hammers its nose, boots it back into cage.

Entire community starts jubilation—flags flying, bands playing, burgo-master puts on his high hat, special train arranged for rushing this hero to Berlin to be decorated by Herr Hitler as reincarnation of ancient Nordic demigods, typifying spirit of old German stocks—all that sort of thing.

Suddenly hideous discovery is made that stranger's background is not Teutonic, the family name being Ginsberg. Celebration called off; flags furled, bands sneak home, special trains canceled, burgo-master has apoplexy.

And next day the local paper comes out with scathing article under the headline, "Jew Attacks Defenseless Lion."

Criminal Lawyers. WERE a funny people, did we read where, in some far-off country, men who had access to zoos, picked the locks on the cages and freed the man-eating tigers and the blood-thirstiest wolves and the deadliest poison snakes to go forth and kill again, you'd marvel at a land which endured such a thing.

But when in our own land criminal lawyers truthfully boast that, of all the individuals charged with deliberate murder whom they have defended, no single one ever went to prison or chair, and that ever so many more were, by their skill, saved from the prisons where we are supposed to pen our human tigers and wolves and snakes, we give these geniuses our admiration and much free advertising, and young lawyers crave to follow in their illustrious footsteps.

We are indeed a funny people—so funny it's hard to decide whether we should laugh of ourselves—or weep.

Husbands and Wives. LOTS of matrimony in the area, now that marriage, instead of being a contract, is a ninety-day option.

A Pittsburgh gentleman gets fined for dunting his lady's face in a simmering beef stew. That's no way to treat a lady. Or a beef stew. Take the average lady, and would you care for a beef stew flavored with Upstic, eyebrow pencil, mascara, cold cream, hair dye and three kinds of paint?

A gentleman who's president of the take a deep breath—American Creative League of Harmony and Music Students, declares if ill-suited couples learn the guitar hoplessly would return, the guitar, he states, being the most romantic instrument there is. But once in Vanderbille, I saw a peevish helpmate crown friend husband with an lalala guitar, and it didn't seem to do him any real good.

slowing Up Youth. OBVIOUSLY it's too late to save the confirmed speed-maniacs among the adult population. They won't be with us long, anyhow, and will be missed by but few, if any.

Every one of these madmen whizzes past, I find myself saying to the back of his neck, "Well, brother, glad to have this glimpse at you. Probably I'll not be seeing you again unless I should drop in at the morgue the day you arrive."

But maybe we might help to insure the outgoing generations by inaugurating a definite course of juvenile education. Let's start with the babies; let's make it a fixed and required ritual in every kindergarten, every public or private parochial school—yes, every Sunday school, every Boy Scout camp and at every girl's campfire; every place where youngsters are gathered. Over and over again, let's pound it into them that reckless driving is neither gallant nor smart nor sporting, but that it is stupid and criminal and vicious and murderous.

Desolation of Floods. THIS first time we went to Venice I my wife looked across the Grand canal and said:

"Did you ever see anything like it?" And, trying to be funny, I said: "Absolutely. Looks just like South Third street did during the big rise of 1913. If I might now a fellow in a skiff should come rowing up to this window to collect the water-rent, I'd swear I was back home."

That seemed a sorry joke as I read of a monstrous yellow torrent sweeping down on the beleaguered lowlands where my people have lived for nearly a century and a half, bringing ruin on its crest and desolation in its wake.

Nature has been pitiless this last year—drouths and duststorms; forest fires and smoke-palls; blizzards and ice-packs; and now these cruel floods. Still, amid the afflictions, one consoling thought gleams like a star: congress will adjourn pretty soon.

A three-hour extension course entitled "Laboratory in Teaching" will be offered to Flagstaff city school teachers during the spring quarter. Nominations of officers for the Associated Women Students organization at Arizona State Teachers College at Flagstaff have been announced by the nomination committee. For president, Marjorie Wingfield of Camp Verde and Amy Thompson of Holbrook were selected; for vice president, Dorothy Fain of Williams and Jole Allweis of Globe and Margaret Smith of Morenci; for treasurer, Daisy Swartzell of Holbrook and Jane Marshall of Phoenix.

Dr. Ira C. Barile, San Luis Obispo, Calif., authority on fungi and spores, recently explored the ruins of ancient Tlucmaniri mounds, near Nogales, Ariz., for deathless germ spores. The spores, buried for more than two centuries in adobe walls of the old masonry, Dr. Barile said, may be resurrected by modern science and examined under the microscope. In the heart of the adobes, Dr. Barile said, he found aridians that the organisms have been in a state of suspended animation and would become alive when placed in favorable conditions.

Press a Button and Robot Gives Train Information

Visitors to Glasgow may see the first "robot" railway time-table introduced in Scotland. The new system was inaugurated at Glasgow Central station. The "informator" shows at a glance the train service from the station to any desired destination.

Similar in size and appearance to the automatic ticket machines on the London underground system, it has a window at the level of the eyes of an average-sized person. At the back of the window is a card with the names of the various stations served from the central station. Attached to each name is a number, and just below the window is a series of numbered keys. By pressing the button corresponding to the number attached to his destination the inquirer causes a card to slide into view, which gives a complete list of the trains to and from the specified station.—Washington Post.

EASTER BUNNIES

Coloring Easter Eggs

IN HOMES where there are small children, it usually is the task of the mother to prepare colored eggs for an Easter egg hunt. This is an important occasion, and the eggs should be cooked and colored so they may be eaten afterward, observes Edith Shuck in the Chicago Daily News.

It doesn't detract from the fun of the occasion or beauty of the eggs to prepare them according to the correct cooking rules. Put them on to cook in plenty of cold water. Place the pan over a low flame and bring the water to the simmering temperature slowly. This keeps the shells from cracking. Cook the eggs at simmering temperature 20 to 25 minutes. Cool the eggs gradually, so the shock of putting cold water on them will not break the shells.

When the eggs are partially cooled, place them on a soft towel and dry them so they will not have water circles on them. Keep the eggs away from any grease. Most commercial dyes are best dissolved in hot water, but follow whatever directions are given on the package of dye you use. Stir the dye until it is dissolved, with a well-polished silver spoon, so the dye is not discolored. Dip the warm eggs into the hot dye and then drain them on a cake rack. When they are cool, rub them with a buttered cloth to add a high gloss.

Fancy eggs for Easter place-cards may be made if you paint initials on eggs. Give the eggs a very light tint, and have a different colored egg for each guest if possible. Do not polish the eggs. Put the names or initials on the eggs with a fine paint brush, dipped into the liquid vegetable coloring that is used for coloring foods. If you are very ambitious you can draw an Easter lily or daffodils on the eggs. Use egg yolk coloring for the flowers and grape green coloring for the leaves.

A number of customs and superstitions have been woven round the festival of Easter.

When Eggs Are Cool Rub With a Buttered Cloth.

One old custom, that of face-painting, is still carried out in Germany and in parts of the eastern countries.

An Easter custom, originated 800 years ago, still survives in the village of Hildesheim, East. Two sisters, Mary and Elizabeth, churchwardens, lived there. They were joined at the hips and shoulders like the twins, and when they died they left a considerable amount of money to be expended in the purchase of Easter money or bread and cakes for the poor of their village forever. The cakes, which are called Hildesheim Maids, are made in their image and given to strangers.

The First EASTER Lily

THE original Easter lily was developed in Philadelphia only a half century ago, according to G. B. Stichter, field inspector of the bureau of plant industry, Pennsylvania department of agriculture.

In 1870, a woman returning from Bermuda brought with her two bulbs of a lily which she found growing wild. These bulbs were given to Mary, a florist who had greenhouses at Gray's lane, below Woodland avenue, Philadelphia. The florist planted the bulbs, and for some time they attracted no attention.

A Dutch lily had been used at Easter time, but this was unsatisfactory because it was impossible to control accurately its time of blooming.

Florist Was Successful in "Forcing" the Easter Lily.

Since Easter comes at varying times, it was impossible to "force" this lily in order to have it bloom at a specified time. Therefore, the Dutch lilies were not popular as Easter flowers.

The florist propagated the lily from Bermuda until in three years she had about 100 bulbs. It was then that a Philadelphia florist purchased the bulbs and experimented with "forcing" the lily in order to have it bloom when wanted. This florist was successful in his experiments, and the lily harvest resulted. Since it was possible to cultivate this lily so that it would be in flower exactly at Easter time, it became the Easter flower.

The growing of Easter lilies is today a giant industry, but strangely enough the lily used now—the lily plant—was propagated and improved in Japan from the lily first developed in Philadelphia. It was taken to Japan, where conditions for its cultivation were ideal, developed, and brought back to America. The present-day lily has a larger flower, with more sturdy foliage than the original Easter lily.

Bacon, Eggs, Easter Dishes

According to Brand's Popular Antiquities, the custom of eating a gammon of bacon at Easter, still kept up in many parts of England, was designed to show their adherence to Judaism at that solemn commemoration of the resurrection. There is also mention, in the same authority, of eggs and bacon, composing a usual dish on that day in the sixteenth century.

Well Proved Fact

Taking all the evidence together, it is not too much to say that there is no single historic incident better or more variously supported than the resurrection of Christ.—Westcott.

TALL TALES

As Told by
FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Double Tragedy

A FEW years ago a group of forty Chicago and Milwaukee newspaper men were guests of the Milwaukee railroad and Rocky Wolfe, now a widely known radio sport commentator, on a week-end outing in Manitowish, Wis.

Among the extraordinary sights of the resort town were live porcupines strolling about a nine-hole golf course played by the scribes and a mother hawk, whose broad back and spread wings were used by three baby hawks as a landing stage, high above ground.

A dormant appreciation of Nature having been awakened in the minds of the visiting city folks, they were treated by Wolfe to the prize story of the vicinity.

A Manitowish hunter, according to Rocky, reported that he had shot a fox which had a dead porcupine in its mouth. The fox was already dead when shot, for the spines of the porcupine had killed it.

It was learned later, Rocky averred, that the porcupine had been a pet which earned a living by carrying fruit on its back from its owner's orchard to the elder mill.

"And I am ashamed to report, gentlemen," Wolfe concluded, "that both animals were intoxicated when the double tragedy occurred."

The Colorado Cinder Beetle

WHEN the Santa Fe railroad was built into Colorado, its coming brought rejoicing to the residents of the rich Arkansas River valley. It meant an outlet for their crops and prosperity. But that lasted only a little while. Then disaster swept down upon them.

Every night a large section of the roadbed disappeared. Something was taking away the cinder ballast. Train schedules were disrupted and there were endless delays until the damage could be repaired. In several cases freight trains were wrecked or derailed.

Santa Fe officials were frantic, for no one could discover what was carrying away the ballast. Finally a newspaper man, Charley Blakeley of the Kansas City Star, suggested that possibly the Colorado cinder beetle was eating up the ballast and his surmise proved correct.

How to check the ravages of the insects was the next problem. That was solved when it was discovered that the cinders used for ballast were from soft coal. So hard coal cinders were substituted and the cinder beetles broke their jaws trying to eat them. For some time, it is said, passengers on the Santa Fe were kept awake at night by the cinder beetles screaming with the pain of their broken jaws. So the railroad speeded up the schedules of their passenger trains. They now went so fast that the passengers heard the meaning of the broken-jawed cinder beetles merged into a symphony of sound, like the rattle of wind through pine trees, that quickly lulled them to sleep.

When a harder race of cinder beetles developed with jaws capable of eating hard coal cinders, the Santa Fe was ready for them. They began using crushed rock and since that time have had no trouble with the little pest.

Massachusetts Melons

THE visitor from Georgia motoring through the Berkshires of Massachusetts looked rather scornfully at the crops in the fields along the road.

"Why, I don't see any melons up here," he said to the farmer sitting on the fence. "Can't you raise them?"

"No, we don't seem to have any luck with melons," replied the Yankee. "I tried to raise some a while back—tried it year after year, but I couldn't ever get a good crop somehow. The trouble was that the soil was just too rich for 'em."

"I'll plant my seeds, the vines would start growing, the blossoms would come out, and then they'd set and the melons would begin to form. Then the sun would get hotter and the nights would sprinkle our Berkshires dew on 'em. And that dew, I tell you, acts like magic, it makes things grow so. But I never could get any melons, though."

"Is that so?" exclaimed the Southerner. "Why couldn't you?"

"Well, I tell you," answered the son of the Berkshires. "Those vines just naturally grew so fast they dragged the melons all over the field. They just plumb wore 'em out before they had a chance to get ripe. So I just had to give up tryin' to raise melons."

Marine Store Dealer

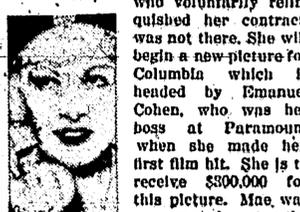

When a sailing ship came into port in the old days a man used to go aboard and bid for the old sails that had been torn by tropical storms. He was also given odd lengths of rope and all the junk accumulated during a voyage of many months. "Marine store dealer" was the man's title, and he dealt with ships which sailed the Seven seas. Later there was little for the marine store dealer to do—the big shipping lines managed their own affairs. As his trade with ships went, the dealer started to buy rags, old bottles and the like from houses in seaport towns. Now he has become the unromantic rag-and-bone man—though still his official name is marine store dealer.—Pearson's Weekly.

STAR DUST

By VIRGINIA VALE

WHEN Mae West's effects were moved off the Paramount lot, a fashionable gallery of Hollywood celebrities watched the strong men carry her furniture out to a red moving van. The list of onlookers included Carole Lombard, Bing Crosby, W. G. Fields, Jack Oakie and Herbert Marshall. Mae, who voluntarily relinquished her contract, was not there. She will begin a new picture for Columbia which is headed by Emanuel Cohen, who was her boss at Paramount when she made her first film hit. She is to receive $300,000 for this picture. Mae was represented at the moving party by Jim Timony, her manager, who checked over the list of furnishings from her dressing room which were moved to the new studio. These included a piano, a desk, a divan, a chair and an oil painting of Mae.

Mae West

A special automobile that will speed more than three miles a minute is being built for M.G.M. for use in its new picture "Speed." It is expected that it will be sent out on the road for publicity purposes when the picture is finished. The producers promise that it will not be driven at anywhere near its maximum speed.

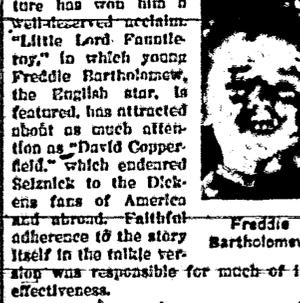

Gracie Moore has never sung the aria "Woman in Fickle" in Rigolotto, for that is the tenor's job, but it might be a theme song for her off-again, on-again act with the movies. After announcing that she was through, she says she has changed her mind and is going to make some more pictures at Columbia. She has made one important reservation, though. No more scenes where she is singing while milking a cow.

Richard Arlen is on his way to England where he will make a picture for Gaumont-British. Accompanying Dick are John and Little Hickey. When his English hitch is over, Dick will return to Hollywood to go to work for Twentieth Century-Fox, with whom he recently signed a contract to make three pictures.

Anita Louise, whose blond beauty has captured many hearts, will be cast for the feminine lead in Warner Brothers' new picture, "The Charge of the Light Brigade." This, it is said, is the biggest film opportunity Anita has yet seen. Errol Flynn, who swept to stardom in "Captain Blood," will play opposite her.

Hard luck has dogged the footsteps of many a movie star of yesteryear but it has slipped rather constantly at the heels of Alice Lake. She is now the ward of the Film Welfare League in St. Vincent's hospital. Fifteen years ago she was in the big money and had an immense following. Recently when brought into court and her plight revealed, she said she could not even get work as an extra. She still gets fan letters, however.

The success which has followed David O. Selznick's ventures in reviving classics of literature has won him a well-deserved acclaim.

Freddie Bartholomew

"Little Lord Fauntleroy," in which young Freddie Bartholomew, the English star, is featured, has attracted about as much attention as "David Copperfield," which endeared Selznick to the Dickens fans of America and abroad. Faithful adherence to the story itself in the talkie version was responsible for much of its effectiveness.

Cross Stitch Kitchen Towels That Are Fun to Embroider—or Give Away

Pattern 787

Just a bit—but a telling bit—of decoration is all that's needed today to make our household items smart. And so, simple cross stitch brings color and life to humble tea-towels which make dish doing a pleasure rather than a duty. These motifs of glassware and china—in cross stitch—are easy to embroider. This half dozen makes fine pick-up work, and also a grand prize for a bridge party—or most acceptable for a fair donation.

Pattern 787 comes to you with a transfer pattern of six motifs aver-

Lard used in deep fat frying should be strained through cheesecloth after use to remove the food particles which accumulate in the kettle.

Oysters have a better flavor if not overcooked. They may be rolled in fine cracker crumbs, dipped in egg, rolled again in crumbs and fried in deep fat at 350 Fahrenheit.

Cut flowers will keep fresh much longer if removed from the table after each meal and placed in the refrigerator. Cover stems with water.

A tablespoon of borax placed in the water in the tea kettle will remove the coating that forms on inside of kettle.

Dressing tables, like little girls' dresses, are now slouched from top to bottom. For a young girl's room, five crisp, sheer slouches of white organdy make a most attractive table.

When scouring with wire wool use a snap clothpin to hold wool, thus saving your hands.

To bring out the brilliancy of cut glass, add ammonia to the water in which it is to be rinsed.

If the paint on the outside of your house has blistered it may be necessary to take off all old paint. No paint will bond well with poor old paint.

Peroxide will remove perfume stains from linen bureau scarfs. Keep a blotting pad under scarf to protect dressing table or bureau top when perfume is spilled on it.

Tie a little box of bright colored ribbon on the handles of the pressures and they can be quickly found in the sewing basket.

Before Long Supervision Will Be Our Only Task

Inventive science and new machinery have changed everything. Where the worker formerly began and finished one complete article, he now attends to one small operation, turning a few screws, putting on a wheel, driving a few nails, spraying with paint, tacking on heels or uppers.

With electricity everywhere, work has changed. The housewife turns a switch, a machine does the washing; a vacuum cleaner does the sweeping; turns another switch or burner and finds "heat" ready-made. Everything is time-saving, trouble-saving. The people do their shopping, selecting at home in the advertising column, and through advertising they learn of things unknown to them before and find that they need them. Civilization approaches the stage when pressing a button and starting the machinery working will represent a physical day's labor, with only supervision afterward.—Arthur Brisbane in Cosmopolitan.

NOT long ago I was like some friends I have... low in spirits, run-down, out of sorts, tired easily and looked terrible. I knew I had no serious organic trouble but I reasoned sensibly... as my experience has since proven... that work, worry, colds and whatnot had just worn me down.

The confidence mother has always had in S.S. Tonic... which is still her stand-by when she feels run-down... convinced me I ought to try this Treatment... I started a course... the color began to come back to my skin... I felt better... I no longer tired easily and soon I felt that those red-blood-cells were back to so-called fighting strength... it is great to feel strong again and like my old self.

"Not Likely"

"Speaking with more candor than usually marks the anti-Roosevelt press, The Indianapolis News observed: 'No group is going to fight all of the achievements of the New Deal. Its credit relief, social security, deposit insurance and such unemployment relief as the CCC, etc are not likely to become the target for oratorical attack.' The Roosevelt baiters are indeed as bold as lions when dealing with generalities but when it comes to things definite, they are as tame as barnyard geese." - Atlanta Journal.

"Coming from any other man, Herbert Hoover's insistence that the New Deal is 'a fountain of fear' might have been received with a complacence of credulity. But Mr. Hoover, it cannot be forgotten, was himself an occupant of the White House when fountains of fear were gushing forth in almost every section of the land--marked by the closing of banks, by the shutting down of factories and mercantile doors." - Scranton Republican. (Rep.) Penn.

"If the Republican party must raise the cry of 'confusion and fear' in an effort to beat Mr. Roosevelt, let them at least have the good sense to put those words in to the mouth of someone other than the President who gave this country the worst siege of that ailment in its history." - Medford, Oregon, Mail-Tribune. SYNOPSIS

John Spencer and his cousin, Geoffrey Bohub, are vacationing in Austria. Geoffrey is a gifted portrait painter but prefers to paint landscapes. While strolling in the forest, John hears English voices and decides to investigate. From safe cover he finds four men burying a man in green slacks who evidently had been murdered. Pharaoh is the leader of the gang; the others are Dewdrop, Rush and Bugle. Unfortunately, John makes himself known to the assassins by dropping a letter with his name and address on it. He tells Geoffrey and his chauffeur, Barley, of his adventure. Geoffrey, realizing that John's life is in danger, declares he must vanish. Spencer discovers that the liver of the murdered man corresponds to the liver of the servants of Yorick castle, and tells Countess Helena, mistress of the castle, what he had seen. With Geoffrey and Barley, John starts for Annabel, a nearby village. They encounter Pharaoh in making their getaway they exchange shots with the gang, without serious result. They arrive at Plumage farm, on the Yorick estate, where Lady Helena had requested John and his cousin to meet her. She reveals to them that her father had converted his immense fortune into gold sovereigns and hidden them away in a secret vault in the castle. Knowing that his son, Valentine, Helena's brother, was incapable of controlling the fortune, he had revealed it to Helena alone just before his death. In some manner the news had leaked out, and Pharaoh is after the treasure.

The warden lifted his head and looked me full in the eyes. Then he turned his head to his mistress and looked at her. Though he never spoke, he seemed to ask her some question, for after a moment she nodded and looked away.

With his hand still in mine, the warden went down on one knee.

"Your servant, sir," he said quietly. And then, "I am very grateful, sir. I cannot say more. But I beg you will be careful. My son will not rest in his grave if you come to hurt."

Then he rose and turned to his mistress, and when she had smiled and nodded, he bowed to her and to me and left the room.

As the door closed behind him—"He shouldn't have killed," said I. Helena shrugged her shoulders.

"That's his affair. But please tell me he did so. You and he and I know, and that's enough."

Upon a sudden impulse, I put out my hand for hers. She gave it to me gravely enough. Then I went down on one knee and put the cool, slight fingers up to my lips. . . .

As she caught her breath—"Your servant," I said quietly, "and you may tell whom you please."

Eight hours had gone by, and I was sitting at Villach, in the driver's seat of the Rolls. My cousin was on the platform, but the car was berthed in the shadows, perhaps a hundred yards from the station's door.

The train from Salzburg steamed out. As its rumble faded, I saw a flash from a lamp, and thirty seconds later I drew up beside the pavement where Geoffrey and Barley stood.

Without a word being spoken our baggage was lifted aboard, and as Barley climbed in among it, my cousin sat down by my side.

"Let her go, John."

Two minutes later the Rolls stole out of town. . . .

"Tea filled on we pulled up by the side of the road."

"I tell my cousin rudge me. Then he lifted his voice."

"Anything to report, Barley?"

The answer came pat.

"No, sir. Nothing at all."

My cousin sat very still. Then he allowed himself round in his seat.

"That's strange," he said. "I'd half an idea that you might perhaps have seen someone—someone you thought you knew."

"No, sir," said Barley, firmly. "No one at all."

"Look here," said Geoffrey, "before you left—"

A desperate voice cut him short.

"Could I see you alone, sir, a moment?"

"You can speak the truth here and now. Mr. Spencer isn't going. We're all three going to stay."

"Very good, sir. Then I see Pharaoh. And Dewdrop beside. I'll swear it was them. In Salzburg; this afternoon. Came out of the station, they did, as I walked in."

CHAPTER III

On Patrol

If Barley's news had given us something to go on, it pointed the wisdom of acting without delay. This for two very good reasons. In the first place, Salzburg for Pharaoh was dangerous ground, for anyone moving in Salzburg must plainly be under the hand of the Salzburg police; if, therefore, we were to see him, and then someone suspicious sufficient to have him arrested, although he might get away, it would be a disaster.

right, his race was as good as run. Secondly, it seemed pretty certain that Pharaoh had split his force and that Rush and the fourth of the rogues were yet in the countryside; and that meant that if we could find them, we should only have two men to deal with, and those very ordinary thieves. (And here I will say that since I afterwards learned that the fourth rogue was known as Bugle, from now on it will be convenient to give him his name.)

I will not set out our discussion of these very obnoxious points, for fully three hours had gone by before with many misgivings our plans were laid. This may seem something foolish, but it must be remembered that we had a great deal at stake, and the fear of abusing a chance which might not return continually haunted our efforts to make up our minds. In the end, however, we came to certain decisions, and since we stuck to these, I will say what they were.

Early the following morning, Geoffrey and Barley and I were to visit The Reaping Hook; that Bugle and Rush would be gone, we had no doubt, but we had some hope of tracing the damaged car. If this should lead us up to the men we sought, we should at once give battle and do our best to lay the two by the heels; but unless by mid-day we had picked up some definite clue, then Geoffrey and Barley would leave for Salzburg by train, whilst I remained at Plumage, lying low during the daytime and patrolling the roads about Yorick from dusk to dawn. "And I give you my word," said Geoffrey, "if only you'll mind your step, I think you're more likely to get there than Barley and I. We've got to search a city, and we don't know where to begin. But your field is much more narrow. In the first place, Yorick's a loadstone, and Bugle and Rush will naturally turn that way. . . . But you simply must watch your step. You're out to get information, not to attack. If you find them, you must not strike; lie low and see them home, and then drive all out for Salzburg and Barley and me. Will you give me your word to do that?—And always to be back at Plumage before it's light?"

I gave him my solemn word, but I know in my heart that he would never have lost me if he had thought it likely that I should find Bugle and Rush, and that, though he disliked the idea of my working alone, he was doing his best to choose the lesser evil and to keep me away from Pharaoh at any price.

Thanks to my lady's foresight, we could now send word to Yorick without any waste of time, and before we left the next morning our groom was on his way to the castle, bearing a note from my cousin in which he had set out our plan.

It was barely eight o'clock when we ran into Annabel.

By Geoffrey's direction I stopped the car at cross roads out of sight of The Reaping Hook; then he and Barley descended and walked as far as the forge which was walling one side of the forecourt that graced the inn; and there Geoffrey stood by the corner while Barley walked up to the house.

As luck would have it, a servant was washing the steps, and a word from Barley brought him to Geoffrey's side.

Then my cousin turned and waved, and I brought by the Rolls, for, as we had fully expected, the birds were flown. One minute later we were speaking to the host and his wife. . . .

Now we had had no doubt that the moment we mentioned their late undesirable guests, the two would be only too ready to talk themselves hoarse; but we were not prepared for the spate of incoherence which our casual inquiry unleashed. The two were simply bursting to vent such a volume of grievance as I can only compare to the burden of Christian's sins. Since we were there to listen, there was clearly nothing to do but let the storm blow itself out, and when we had heard them in silence for what seemed a quarter of an hour and had inspected the spots at which violence had been committed or damage done, we ventured to put the questions which we had come to ask.

The strangers were gone. What was the order of their going and what had become of their car? Our words might have been a spell. I have never seen human beings so suddenly change their tune. As though we had turned some tap, the fountain of talk stopped dead; all their excitement died an immediate death, and the two became as crafty and sullen as though we had come to trap them and do them some evil turn.

They had seen nothing at all. One minute the strangers were there, and the next they were gone. They had not seen them go; they knew nothing of any car; when we spoke of its being disabled, they glanced at one another and shook their heads.

"Scared stiff," said Geoffrey shortly, and went off to prove the servants to no avail.

In silence we returned to the Rolls. "And now for Plumage and Villach. At least, this means we can catch an earlier train."

Four hours later I bade my cousin farewell.

Helena glanced at her wrist and folded the map.

We were sitting by the water at Plumage, and had been for half an hour, for when I got back from Villach, a note from my lady was waiting for me that I might expect her at five o'clock.

"Do you think you can find your way?"

"I think so," said I.

"By night, without lights, upon roads that you've never seen?"

I swallowed.

"If I make mistakes, it won't matter. When I've felt my way round twice, I'll know where I am."

"And then?"

"I propose to watch certain points—the turning to Lays, for instance, and the copple that you call Starlight—that's where the road turns closest to Yorick itself."

"And the car?"

"I'll find some track or other and park her there."

Helena drew in her breath.

"And supposing they're there before you and watch you arrive. . . . They'll let you park the car and steal back to the road. They'll let you pick your position and settle down. . . . And tomorrow at dawn they'll be digging another grave."

"Be honest," said I, laughing. "Why on earth should Rush and his fellow be watching these roads?"

"I don't care," said Helena swiftly. "It isn't a one-man job. Mr. Bohun must be out of his mind. Will you take Sabre with you? At least, he'll give you warning if anyone else is at hand."

"I will, indeed," said I.

"What time are you leaving here?"

"About ten o'clock," said I.

"Do you think you can find the mouth of the entrance drive?"

"I can hardly miss that," said I.

"Sabre shall be there tonight at a quarter past ten."

"I hid myself back on the turf."

"And I'm not to thank you," I said. "I stay at your house; I ride your horses; and now I'm to have your dog. As partnerships go, it seems to be rather one-sided."

"That," said my lady, "is foolish. What am I doing that, if you were placed as I am, you wouldn't be glad to do?"

"That ought to be the answer," said I.

She was sitting sideways, propping herself on an arm; and either because of her pose or because her hair was tumbled, she seemed no more the fine lady, but only a beautiful child. Suddenly I knew that I was in love.

That night was very dark, and I would have given a lot to have seen but once by daylight the roads that I was to patrol; quite apart from picking my way, I could see no track or turning until I was actually there.

It follows that after ten minutes the only idea I had left was to go to where Sabre was waiting at the mouth of the castle drive; and this, after great tribulation, I found about half-past ten. I overran it, of course. However, I knew I was right, so I stopped the engine and listened and then stepped into the road.

I was hastening back in the shadows when I suddenly found that something was moving beside me, and then, before I could think, the Alsatian was licking my hand.

At once I turned, to make my way back to the car, but the dog did not turn with me and when I put my hand on his collar, he would not move.

I had not begun my patrol; the Rolls was out in the open; and Sabre refused to move. If he would not come. . . .

I perceived that the first thing to do was to get the Rolls off the road. If Rush and Bugle were out—

Far in the distance I heard the drone of a car.

For an instant I stood spell-bound. Then I was out in the road and was whipping back to the Rolls. . . .

Before I started the engine, I listened again, to hear on the road behind me the footfalls of somebody running; but lightly shod. Then—

"In you go, Sabre," said Helena, opening a door.

As the dog leaped in, she took the seat by my side.

"A hundred yards on," she panted. "As quick as you can. There's a track on the right. I'll show you."

The drone of the car was louder—some car on the road ahead.

As the Rolls gathered speed—"Now," said Helena, "steady. I set a foot on the brake. Put on your lights for an instant. . . . There you are."

As I left the road for the track, the drone of the car approaching turned into a snarl.

I stopped the engine and flung myself out of the Rolls.

"Stay here," I cried, and darted back to the bushes that were edging the side of the road.

The car was close now, and her headlights were on; but even as she passed me, her driver lowered his lights and slackened his speed.

Two Lovely Blouses That Will Give Your Suit That Feminine Appearance

Blouses have to go a long way toward giving the tailored and finished suits a sweet and feminine appearance. The model at the top is a new lingerie blouse made of madonna blue crepe de chine and trimmed with tiny crystal buttons. Soft puff sleeves tightly banded and a duffy bow at the throat contribute the feminine touches.

At the bottom is a most attractive shirt blouse—it has a charming Peter Pan collar and buttoned placket for the waist closing—the model is made of batiste with either short sports or long bishop sleeves.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1850-B—both blouses—are available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32,

Play Just as Important to Well-Balanced Life as Work

A vacation helps to balance our powers, to give us a more symmetrical development. It keeps us from becoming one-sided. It improves our judgment.

People who alternate work with play, who frequently get close to Nature, preserve the sweetness of life; are sounder, saner; have more common-sense than those who never drop their work.

Make the "FIRST QUART" TEST Just drain and refill your crankcase with Quaker State. Note the mileage. Then see how far you go before you have to add a quart. See if it isn't farther than you have ever gone on a single quart of any other oil. (That means real oil economy; but still more important, remember that the oil that stands up best between refills is giving your motor the safest lubrication. Motorists find that under similar driving conditions, they get many more miles from Quaker State. Quaker State Oil Refining Company, Oil City, Pennsylvania.
