CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1936

Gov. Landon

Governor Landon is discovering that words that seem rather unimportant when they are uttered have a tendency to become of considerable consequence later on. It was quite all right for the Gov. of Kansas to join with the Governors of certain other States to urge President Roosevelt to an inflation policy back in 1933. But that sounds strange now in view of the Cleveland platform that the Republican candidate has announced he will adhere to.

This platform states: "We advocate a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards. * * * We oppose further devaluation of the dollar. We will restore to the Congress the authority lodged with it by the Constitution to coin money and regulate the value thereof by repealing all the laws delegating this authority to the Executive."

Now let's compare that with this text, to which Governor Landon subscribed in the message of his fellow executives to the President: "We recommend that the President exercise the grant of power given him by Congress under the monetary section of the Agricultural Adjustment Act to inflate the currency under proper safeguards and control; and

"We further suggest and recommend that the Fourth Liberty Loan be paid out in new currency issued by the government instead of refunding same with another interest-bearing bond issue."

The most grisly spectre that affrights the bankers and others of the duPont Liberty League coterie is inflation of the currency. The President of the United States refused to go along on the proposal to start the printing process turning out dollars, which the Liberty League's candidate subscribed to. This would seem to suggest an embarrassment on the part of the stop-Roosevelt crowd who are backing the Republican candidate and must be depended on to keep up the flood of campaign contributions that have been so conspicuous in the reports of expenditures of the various organizations and agencies that have been issuing all the G. O. P. propaganda.

They will probably resort to the expedient of saying either that their candidate has changed his mind or that he did not agree with what his representative subscribed to three years ago.

The other day Chairman Farley of the Democratic National committee, in his comment on Governor Landon's nomination, included a reference to this contradiction. Chairman Hamilton of the Landon forces promptly replied, telling how wicked the Democrats were generally but carefully avoided any reference to this very definite incongruity.

of politics, is at liberty to change his mind. And undoubtedly the Governor of Kansas must have changed his mind in regard to the policies and procedure, for some weeks before President Roosevelt took office the Governor explained his view of the then situation: In a speech at Kansas City he said: "We are in a battle as vital and as dangerous as any war has caused. Why not give the President the same powers in this bitter peace-time struggle as we would give him in time of war? Our battles are on as wide a front as those of the greatest war in which the world ever engaged. We cannot sit idly by and let things drift. We have never felt it a confession of weakness in a democracy to repose in our President the greatest powers of any government head in the world in time of war."

Cobras Lose to Ft. Stanton

By M. C. St. John

The Cobras lost to Fort Stanton last Sunday 18 to 12. The Fort Stanton team took the lead in the early part of the game with a 10 to 1 score but the Cobras came up from way behind and made a rally in the last inning which had the Stanton boys worried. Sally Ortiz and Manuel Chavez made home runs for the Cobras.

The Fourth of July game which will take place at Fort Stanton Saturday at 3:30 will be well fought, for both teams have been preparing themselves for this particular game. Andy Lueraz, a veteran Carrizozo hurler and Melcor Gonzales of Tinnie who has been coming up in true form when it comes to pitching will have charge of the mound, these two boys if given the right support from their team mates can hold their own against any team in this district.

Those who will probably be in Cobra uniforms and from which the line-up will be chosen are as follows:

Andrés Lueraz, Manuel Marquez, Sally, Manuel and "Quino" Ortiz, Tino and Alfredo Lopez, L. C. St. John, E. Baca, "Chino" Mirelez, Lucio Vidaurri, Manuel Chavez and "Mucho" Gutierrez.

This is going to be a real game and a large crowd is expected to attend.

74th Congress Adjourns After a Long Session

THE Seventy-fourth congress adjourned after a session lasting five and a half months during which it appropriated nearly $10,000,000,000 and was faced by some unexpected legislative complications.

In the closing hours the emergency tax bill which is expected to produce $800,000,000 in revenue was passed. Supreme court invalidation of the AAA and Guffey coal bills and the passage of the cash soldiers' bonus over the President's veto upset the budget plans and made such a bill necessary.

Although it was passed by the house, the amended Guffey coal bill designed to remove the objections of the Supreme court failed of passage in the senate. Similarly, the Wagner slim housing bill, which had passed the senate, failed in the house.

Larger than normal appropriations for governmental activities were passed. The bonus, farm payments, relief and the greatest national defense program in peace time history helped swell the total.

Funds for continuing the present relief program were voted; the public works revolving fund was amended to permit more heavy construction projects. But congress failed to approve the Florida ship canal and Panama-quaddy tide dam.

Invalidation of the AAA brought a revised and expanded soil conservation and domestic allotment act; the rural electrification administration and electric farm and home authority were both placed on a permanent basis; the Commodity Credit corporation was expanded, two food control bills were passed. Labor received attention through the Walsh Healey bill dealing with working conditions on government contracts.

A compromise ship subsidy bill was rushed through in the closing hours. Financial legislation included expansion of the jurisdiction of REA. Important among business legislation was the Patman bill amending the Clayton anti-trust act regarding price discrimination.

A number of important bills failed of enactment. Among these were the Pettengill long and short hauls bill, stockyard regulation, Frazier Lemke farm mortgage bill and bills on the CD hour week, extension of the railroad coordinator's tenure, anti-war profits, alien deportation, enlargement of the federal trade commission's power and treasury agency service.

Smith Asks Roosevelt "Be Put Aside"

CALLING upon the delegates to the Democratic national convention to "put aside Franklin D. Roosevelt" and to nominate "some genuine Democrat" for President, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and four other anti-administration Democrats charged the New Deal with failure.

The demand came in the form of a telegram and was signed by Smith, Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under President Wilson, James A. Reed, former senator from Missouri, Joseph J. Ely, former governor of Massachusetts, and Daniel F. Cohalan, former justice of the Supreme court of New York.

Former Governor Smith and his colleagues indicated that they will not support President Roosevelt in the forthcoming Presidential campaign, fulfilling Smith's previous threat to "take a walk."

"Pro Roosevelt delegates from every section of the country prepared for a concerted attack upon the 'bolters,'" Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York turned his back upon Mr. Smith and predicted President Roosevelt would carry New York by a substantial majority in November. He declared:

"I have read the statement. I am confident that the views expressed by the five signers of statement represent the feelings of only a handful of Democrats."

Death Takes von Buelow Noted German Diplomat

THE death of Bernhard W. von Buelow, secretary of state for foreign affairs in the Hitler cabinet, removed one of the most skilled of Europe's diplomats. Von Buelow, who was fifty-one, was an expert on the League of Nations and gave his country valuable counsel when Germany began to consider rejoining the league. He was noted as a studious and hard-working official, with a vast amount of detailed information always readily available.

A "blueblood" of the German nobility, the diplomat was a nephew of the late Prince Bernhard von Buelow, imperial chancellor. He was one of the first of the German nobles to associate himself with the republican regime after the collapse of the empire in 1918. Although different in background from Hitler, he nevertheless enjoyed the chancellor's confidence.

In diplomatic circles it was regarded as likely that Dr. Hans Dietrich, chief of the political department of the foreign office, will succeed Buelow as secretary of state.

In Russia, Maxim Gorky, early foe of the czars who became a hero of the Soviet regime and its outstanding writer, died of influenza at the age of sixty-eight. Although not a member of the Communist party, Gorky had a preeminent position in Soviet life and was a former member of the central executive committee. Moscow honored him with a public funeral and interment in the Kremlin in a niche facing Lenin's tomb.

Rep. Lemke Will Be Presidential Candidate

REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM R. LEMKE of North Dakota announced that he would run for the Presidency as candidate of a new political group known as the Union party.

Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit priest, is the leading sponsor of Lemke's candidacy. Thomas Charles O'Brien of Boston will be the vice-presidential candidate on the ticket, it was announced.

Mr. Lemke made public a 15-point platform embodying demands for re-financing of farm mortgages, old age security, a living wage for all workers, limitation on individual incomes, the establishment of a central bank, the issuance by congress of all currency and its regulation of the value of all the money.

Plans were made for the new party to hold a national convention some time during August in Cleveland. Mr. Lemke said the Union party has the support of farm unions, labor, the National Union for Social Justice established by Father Coughlin, the Townsend old age pension movement and "all other liberals who have been driven from the old parties."

Packers Seek Recovery of All Processing Taxes

BATTLED to recover all the processing taxes paid to the government under the invalidated AAA was undertaken by the "big four" of the packing industry—Swift and Company, Armour and Company, Wilson and Company and the Cudahy Packing company.

Having won back $45,000,000 when the AAA was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme court the packing industry has decided to attempt to recover from the government more than $200,000,000 paid before injunctions against the tax were granted and subsequent payments imposed.

U. S. Revokes Sanctions Imposed on Italy

FOLLOWING the lead of Great Britain, the United States formally revoked all sanctions imposed against Italy during the recent Italo-Ethiopian conflict. A proclamation by President Roosevelt declared all previous communications dealing with the sale of munitions of war, loans and travel by Americans on Italian ships was revoked.

Although the sanctions were against both Italy and Ethiopia, in practical application they were used only against Italy, since the United States did not supply the African nation with any war materials and the empire of Haile Selassie had no ships of its own.

Farm Income Sharply Up In Year's First Quarter

FARM cash income from marketing in the United States amounted to $2,017,000,000 in the first four months of 1935, compared with $1,748,000,000 last year, an increase of 15.3 per cent, according to a compilation issued by the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The institute's figures showed that the price level during the first four months was 2.3 per cent lower than a year ago, but the quantity marketed showed an increase of 18.1 per cent.

Senator Fletcher of Florida Passes Away

DEATH "in the harness" came to Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, dean of the senate, who had represented Florida in the upper house for the last quarter of a century. He died suddenly at his home in Washington. Senator Fletcher, a strong supporter of the Roosevelt administration, although he was considered a conservative, was chairman of the banking and currency committee which bore the brunt of the task involved in the currency reform legislation and the banking act of 1933.

President Roosevelt, in a statement eulogizing the senator, said "the country has lost an able and conscientious servant in the death of Senator Fletcher." He declared the Floridian "was ever actuated by motives of high patriotism and unselfish devotion to the public welfare."

The death of Senator Fletcher followed closely the passing of Senator Park Trammel of Florida and the death of Speaker Joseph W. Byrnes of Tennessee.

Senator Fletcher was born in Sumner county, Georgia, January 6, 1859. He was graduated from Vanderbilt university in 1880 and began the practice of law in Jacksonville, Fla., in 1891. He was elected to the United States senate in 1908 and had been re-nominated and re-elected in each subsequent term.

Republicans Make Plans for Coming Campaign

IN TOPEKA, Kan., Gov. Alfred M. Landon, Republican nominee for the Presidency, met Col. Frank Knox, Vice Presidential nominee, and Chairman John Hamilton and members of the executive committee of the Republican national committee to make plans for the coming campaign.

Speaking itineraries for Governor Landon and Colonel Knox were discussed as well as other campaign strategy. Youth is definitely organized personnel of the executive committee which will chart the Republican course. Hamilton, the new chairman, is forty-four. The youngest member, Robert P. Burroughs of Manchester, N. H., is thirty-six. Seven new members attended the meeting, including Burroughs; Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., North Attleboro, Mass.; J. Will Taylor, Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. Horace Sayre, Ardmore, Okla.; Mrs. John W. Wynn, St. Joseph, Mo.; Ezra Whitte, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; and Earl Warren, Oakland, Calif. Members returned to the committee are: Charles D. Miller, New York; Harrison E. Spangler, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; R. B. Creager, Brownsville, Texas; Mrs. Bertha Raur, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, Newport, R. I.; Walter S. Hallahan, Charleston, W. Va.; and George Hall, Muncie, Ind.

In the reorganization of the committee, Hamilton traded posts with Henry F. Fletcher, who took over the job of counsel for the committee. C. B. Goodspeed of Chicago succeeded George F. Getz as treasurer. The other committee officers include four vice chairmen: Ralph E. Williams, Oregon; J. Henry Hornback, Connecticut; Mrs. John E. Hillman, Colorado; and Mrs. James Worthington, Pennsylvania.

The most packing industry as a whole paid a total of $271,000,000 in processing taxes from the inception of the AAA. The packers are having their claims for recovery on the ground that as the Supreme court ruled the processing taxes invalid, payments made in accordance with that law were illegally collected and should be returned. It was reported that smaller packing companies were considering action to recover their tax payments, but have waited until the major units in the industry instituted their proceedings. The total in tax recoveries sought by the four big Chicago companies is approximately $100,000,000.

Far-East Situation Reaches Grave Crisis

THE situation in the Far East reached a graver crisis. Friction between Japan and China became more intense when it was reported that a Chinese customs cruiser had fired upon a Japanese ship, off the harbor of Chikou, Hopei province.

At the same time foreign residents of Peking were amazed at the spectacle of 3,000 Japanese troops in full war regalia parading through the legation quarter. While Japanese officers declined to explain the unprecedented influx of troops, observers declared that the soldiers were from nearby Tsungchow and Fengtai.

International Conference on Mediterranean Problems

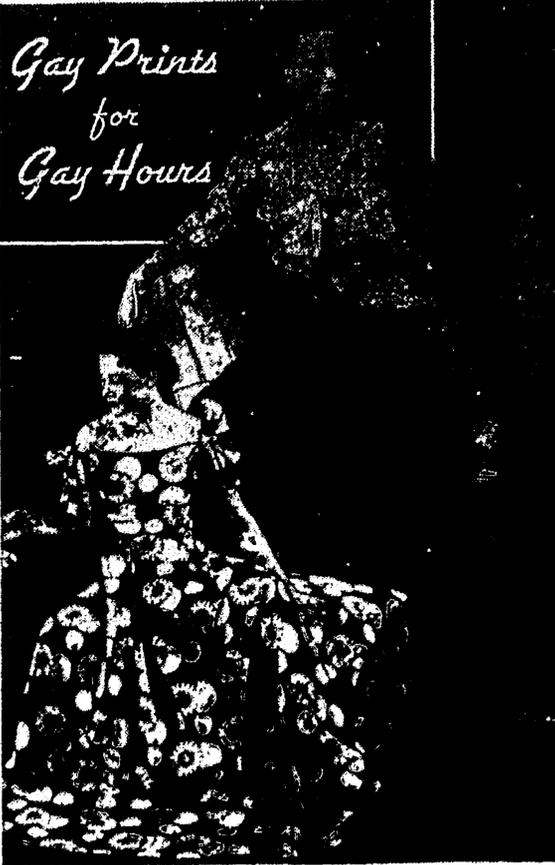

A GENERAL review of the naval and military problems in the Mediterranean loomed as the result of Turkey's request to fortify the Dardanelles. Meeting in Montreux, Switzerland, delegates from Great Britain, France, Italy, Turkey, Japan, Greece and Yugoslavia indicated they would lay before an international conference the objectives in which their nations are interested.

It was reported that Great Britain was considering presentation of a mutual assistance naval pact in the Mediterranean, providing for Italy's participation. Should such a step be taken, it would extend a series of such pacts which were concluded between Britain and France, Yugoslavia, Greece and Turkey against Italy at the time sanctions were imposed on it by the League of Nations.

It was believed that Japan would seek liberation from the terms of the Lusanne agreement by which she, with Great Britain, France and Italy, guaranteed freedom of the Dardanelles, the Sea of Marmora and the Bosphorus. Russia was expected to urge a ban on the passage of warships to the Black sea, while demanding the right of Soviet fighting vessels and submarines to come into the Mediterranean, in the event she engaged in war.

Glazed Chintz and Quilted Print

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

COME to the party frocked in gay glazed chintz and you will look not only charming but "new" as to fashion. What! Glazed chintz going normal after all these years it has been serving as material for sofa cushions on summer verandas, as bathroom curtains and as general utility household hangings? Yes! It's not only true but what's more, glazed chintz is simply perfect in the new role it is playing as high-style fabric for evening gowns and wraps. Try a gown of glazed chintz, you'll love it.

You will be perfectly safe and sane in choosing a dress of glazed chintz for the merits of this charming material have been recognized by leading Paris couturiers. Worth fashions an evening redingote with big sleeves of this cotton, the patterning of which accents huge gorgeous flowers.

See in the picture the lady seated in the foreground. The adorable gown she wears is fashioned of gleaming glazed chintz or cired chintz, as some call it. The daring airtal patterning is done in vivid coloring on a dark background. Rows of self-fabric accent the off-shoulder silhouette. The Altz skirt is cut with a very full circular flare in last-minute fashion.

It is nothing short of a revelation the way cottons of every description are coming to the fore in a formal way. Designers are fearless in appropriating the most ordinary of household cottons for their use in creating fashionable apparel. For instance, clever coats to wear this summer, are being made of bed-spread pique and they are that good-looking you will be wanting one at first sight.

As to printed linens and cottons, especially printed piques and cottons that look like linens, and linens that look like cottons and a host of other eye-catching wash fabrics, they are scoring a triumph in the most exclusive circles of high fashion. Some of the printed linen-looking cottons are gorgeously patterned with widely spaced florals that splash color unsparingly throughout their design.

If you haven't seen them already, there is a real thrill waiting you in the summer swagers and jackets that are fashioned of hand-quilted gay print. The bright field flowers in the jacket worn over the black silk organdie, pictured, look as if they could be picked. Hand-quilting outlines each flower in this very beautiful silk shantung print. The enormous bobquet is composed of pink and yellow silk organdie flowers. Quilting is being done in a great way this season. If you want to express the "last word" in a daytime jacket or coat to wear over summer dresses, make it of black or navy satin that has been hand quilted in decorative design.

Getting back to the subject of cotton fabrics the junior girls are having the happiest sort of a time wearing dresses of gingham that are made quite formally for parties. As to organdies, dotted swisses, cotton nets, especially pointed capris, printed voiles and a whole list of fascinating sheers, they are cutting a big spurge this season in "society"—made up as painstakingly as silks or velvets.

PIQUE CULOTTE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A culotte costume's the proper dress for sports wear—by unanimous vote in the world of fashion. For cycling, for tennis and for beach this pique culotte costume made of sanforized-shrunk fine wale pique will be found most practical and attractive. The beauty of it is that the fabric has been so processed, it carries a guarantee not to shrink or get out of shape when laundered.

Cottons Gain Favor

Each summer proclaims the uprising of some particular cottons. Denims appear in some smartly tailored suits with fitted or swaggy jackets. Long-sleeved familiar in the past for intimate wear and baby dresses has been piqueed up for daytime, play and evening fashions that are fresh and fashionable.

HAT OF TULLE FOR SUMMER EVENINGS

The dinner-out in summer, whether by daylight or dark, needs a hat as well as a gown. And the hats that are first choice this season are those of tulle. There are brimless hats or sailors made of layers of tulle, marked by rounds of stitching and a loose frill formed by the layers at the edge. Some of these stitched tulle hats are made in so many layers that they resemble sports fabric, although the edges are left rough to distinguish them from the tailored materials. The little bonnets made of tulle are particularly delightful for youthful heads when they are worn far back and have a flared-out, short veil from the crown edge. One of the new evening hats seen recently is a tricorn made of novelty or stitched net in brown, or black, or navy, with a splash of bright flowers tacked on at back.

Slide Fasteners in Bright Colors Is Latest in Hats

Slide fasteners are the latest news in spring hat trims. They appear in bright colors on the tops of several models, making a vivid streak across the crown. A bright red one was used on a navy blue felt hat and a green one on a black chapeau.

Crowns which button up are another innovation. Several new slouch felts have a row of buttons and buttonholes running from the peak of the crown to the edge of the brim.

Shapes of both crowns and brims for new models are distinctive. Crowns are triangular or square, while brims pitch over the right eye and are turned up in back to reveal the colature.

Barnyard in Prints

The barnyard is glorified in silk sheer animal prints of white roosters, birds and bunnies. Instead of traditional dots on black. One smart model features a vest and three pleated tiers of a twin print on a red ground.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Heroes of the Southwest.

GALLUP, N. M. — Through the dust of vanished yesterdays we've just traveled the high ranges of the earlier pistoleroes—Pat Garrett of the itchy trigger finger; and John Wesley Hardin, the Texas preacher's boy turned scorpion; and Doc Holliday, the coughing dentist with his nervous mannerism of shooting people; and that babyish king of all the killers, little sawed-off Billy the Kid, who smiled his diffident buck-toothed smile even as he blasted out a life for every one of the twenty-one years of his life; "not counting," as he himself would say, "Mexicans and Indians."

We viewed the historic bullet pocks and their personal burying grounds, and we discovered just one survivor of those ancient two-gun clans—a rancid octogenarian, wearing the look about him of a venerable, shamefaced sheep where he sat with a gingham apron draping the withered flanks which once had supported his artillery, and he shelling peas by the kitchen door of his present wife's boarding house.

As somebody prematurely remarked, before I thought it up myself, the old Southwest is gone. But you never saw nobbler service stations than we passed, nor shiner beauty parlors, and the curb service was excellent.

Destructive Pests.

AS THOUGH it weren't bad enough already with a Presidential campaign on this year, grasshoppers have threatened growing things in the Midwest.

True to their advance notice, the 17-year locusts are popping out along the eastern seaboard. In Ontario a plague of caterpillars covered the railroad tracks so thickly trains could not run on schedule.

There's no word yet from our little southern friend, the boll weevil, but news is expected. Maybe he's waiting for the return of the cotton crops that we used to plant for the export trade—when we had an export cotton trade.

The pine borer is reported on the job in the north woods. To date, out here, we have only the regular resident pests, including the white termite, the red ant and the mother who can prove her child is another Shirley Temple. Of the last-named, we already have upwards of 30,000 and more arriving every day.

Still, we cannot hope to escape. Presently the party who goes around taking straw votes on the election will start multiplying rapidly. And then professional California spellbinders will be binding; and at any moment Upton Sinclair is liable to start running for something.

What Makes News.

SOME gentlemen who must work at the postoffice because, seemingly, stamps don't mean a thing in the world to him, keeps taking issue with me for saying the reason why successful newspapers feature so-called sensations above news of art and science and literature is not through any desire to pander to morbid or vulgar tastes, but because the average publisher, being a smart merchandiser, puts such wares in his shop window, which in his front page, as are calculated to catch the eye and win the trade of the general public.

My correspondent demands an answer. All right, let's make it a parable:

Suppose, mister, that tomorrow, through the town where you live, passes a train bearing a distinguished savant who has made some great discovery—say, the cause and cure of boils—and on another train there is a taffy-haired lady who, after a spectacular murder trial, has just been triumphantly acquitted on the ground of self-defense for shooting a gentleman friend eight or nine times in the back. Which one of these two travelers will draw the biggest crowd down to the station? And, brother, which train will you meet?

Favorite Son Keynote.

BACK home the folks are all puffed up with pride. Our own Albin W. Barkley keynoted for the Democratic convention until the rafters warped.

Besides being a grand person and a hard-working senator, he's one of the last of the real southern silver-tongued—the kind that can make a song of a syllable and turn any reasonably long word into an anthem.

And does he come from the place where the true faith prevails? The majority stabilized just as soon as we got a lot of old-timers to quit voting for Jeff Davis. We weaned them on W. J. Bryan. Ours is probably the only congressional district in the Union that never has gone Republican, although, when Al Smith ran, it had a comparatively close call from going Baptist. Let the creatures of entrenched greed beware. As goes Paducah, so goes Paducah.

CHAPTER X—Continued

The knowledge set my heart pounding. Some fountain that had not been working burst suddenly into play. Its liquor was bitter-sweet—and it made me drunken with rage. A girl had been mishandled. Not the Countess Helena of Yorick, for she was not of this life; but a slight, pathetic figure, whose head was bare . . . that had stood very still in a valley.

What their took place, happened more swiftly than I can set it down. Bugle was on the drawbridge, and I was standing, ready and waiting to kill him, three paces away. I saw the man drop the handkerchief and I saw him draw back his arm to discharge the shoe. It was then that I noticed Sabre—noising the scrap of linen, white on the bridge.

As the shoe left Bugle's hand, the Alsatian crouched, and as he turned to come back, the great dog sprang. The shock would have sent a giant flying, for Sabre weighed fully six stone.

As Bugle met the rail of the drawbridge, I heard a bone snap. And then the two went over, into the moat.

The splash they made must have been heard, but for the outcry within the castle itself.

As I ran for the postern, I heard a hubbub in the archway and Florin's voice calling to Hubert to open the gates.

As I stumbled into the passage—"This is the stuff," breathed Rush. "Up the stairs on yer left. I've got to lock this door."

It seemed best to do as he said. Pharaoh and Dewdrop were gone. I needed Rush to bring me where they were.

Without a word, I turned to the steps I know.

As I came to their head, I became aware of a radiance—a faint suggestion of light, enough to outline the doorway that gave to the little hall. Another step, and I heard the drone of a voice.

I entered the hall a-tiptoe. One of its doors was half-open—not that of the staircase which led to Helena's room. Beyond this a light was burning, the light of a torch—and an ice-cold voice was teaching a bitter sentence to cut like a whetted knife.

"So you see, there's not much left. Tomorrow morning, no doubt, order will be restored. Very likely the police will arrive. They won't arrive tonight, for the telephone isn't working. I'm afraid I'm to blame for that. The search, which is now proceeding in a somewhat haphazard way, will be organized; clues will be sifted; the objection will be reconstructed. Your sheets are below the ramparts, so they'll know you were taken that way. Your handkerchief lies on the drawbridge; the slipper which you kicked off will be found in the fields. I expect they'll employ your Alsatian—I'm sure I should. But as I carried you here, I don't think that he will come off. One has to think of these things. Be that as it may, no stone will be left unturned to find the beautiful countess—you really are lovely, you know—the worshipful mistress of Yorick, that carried her drunken brother out of her way. And all the time you'll be here, sharing this somewhat unfriendly chamber with me and my friends. . . . You do see the point, don't you? They won't search the castle, because they'll know for certain we're none of us here. You didn't search it this morning—you knew I was gone. And if they did search the castle, I hardly think Florin would let them look in this room. It's cleverly done, that door. You've got to be curious to find it and an expert to find its lock. I'm both. I found them on Wednesday evening—with the help of your brother's key. I need hardly say that had I known that the key which you handed the warden was his and not yours, we should have adjourned to this chamber this morning instead of tonight. However, all's well that ends well. . . ."

A stealthy step behind me remembered Rush.

As I turned, he was locking the door at the head of the curving stair.

For a fraction of a second I hesitated. Rush was at my mercy. Was this the time to unmask? And then I decided to stake my winnings once more.

Rush straightened his back and turned to the half-open door. Then he hung on his heel for an instant, to breathe in my ear.

"Come on, you. I'll give you Pharaoh's a genius. He's got little Sheba cold."

Here, since it bears upon my story, I must describe how you entered that secret room.

This was the way of it. In the massive door from the hall the keyhole was set to the right, and when you had turned the key, the iron-studded oak opened inwardly and so to the left. At once you found yourself at the foot of a staircase-turret, the steps of which rose to the right and after three or four rises curled out of your view.

Now the door was very heavy and, not being truly hung, had to be held open. If it were not so held, it at once swung back to its frame and, since its lock was a spring-lock, shut itself fast. A catch was, therefore, provided, to prevent it from playing this trick—the sort of self-acting catch that is used for an entrance gate; and to bring this catch into action, you had but to open the door as wide as you could. But by so doing you were masking another door.

Enter the turret and let the door shut behind you, and there in the wall which the door, when open, had hidden, was another smaller doorway which gave to the secret room. The door which it framed was also of oak and iron, but though it boasted a handle, there was no keyhole at all. It was in fact locked by the catch which held open the major door. Turn this catch to one side, and the minor door would swing open without a sound.

From within the room this door, when shut, could neither be opened nor seen, because it was backed with the woodwork which covered the walls.

All this, of course, I learned later. All that I knew at the moment was that the door to the room had been "cleverly done."

Rush whispered over his shoulder. "Watch out for this door. It's wedged."

He sidled round the oak and I followed, with a hand on my pistol and Geoffrey's knife in my sleeve.

I shall never forget the scene. "Only one torch was alight, and this was so held, by Dewdrop that its beam fell on Helena's face. To this the eye naturally turned, and in an instant the rest of the room was black."

She was sitting upright on a bench, with her back to the paneled wall. The neck of her dress was torn and had fallen from one of her shoulders. If anything, her air was listless; she did not seem to be breathing, she sat so still. Her eyes were lowered to avoid the glare of the torch, but her beautiful head was high, and for all the emotion she showed she might have been sitting in a church.

The sight of her captive and desolate hit me hard. That Pharaoh had been able to seize her was all my fault; but for me, she would have had Sabre, her body-guard. More, had I returned to the castle, my cousin and Harley and I would all have been there, and the odds against Pharaoh's success would have been even; as it was, I had made them absurd—and Pharaoh had won.

The beam of the torch was blinding and I shut my eyes and sank my chin on my chest. I wanted to be able to see where Pharaoh was. Rush was beside me; he had lingered a moment to take up the wedge and to lock the major door, but now he was standing beside me—I could hear him licking his lips. And Dewdrop, a pace or two distant, was holding the torch. But I had not distinguished Pharaoh, and Pharaoh was first on my list. Then the man spoke again, and I knew that he was standing or sitting on the farther side of the room.

"As always, I'm perfectly frank. My hand is upon the treasure. It's simply a question of testing these walls and this floor. But I can't get it out of the castle—at least, not as much as I want. I don't like to use the drawbridge; I believe even your buccles would find that strange. But I know there's another way out. You took it with Mr. Spencer five nights ago."

There was a little silence. Then—"Go on," said Helena, quietly.

"You will tell me that way," said Pharaoh.

"And then?"

"We shall work till dawn, removing as much as we can."

"And then?"

"We shall clear up and go," said Pharaoh. "And you will be free. I hardly think you'll want anybody to find us—in possession of so much gold."

"Clear up and go," said Helena. "What do you mean by 'clear up'?"

"I mean what you think I mean. There's a nuisance I've got to abate."

"If you were honest, you'd say 'a score to settle.'"

"I prefer the term 'nuisance.' Still, that may have to wait a little. At dawn we shall leave the castle, and you will be free."

Helena took a deep breath.

"I see," she said. "And now I'll tell you something. You've got a long way, but a long way is never enough. You know that you're near the gold, but you don't know how to reach it. It's very well to talk of testing these walls and this floor, but that's a job for a mason, and you know it as well as I. But if the gold was here, as you admitted just now, you couldn't get it away. More, so long as you stay here, you're safe, for on one will open this room. But the longer you stay here, the slighter your chance of escape. You've only the Rolls and my men will very soon find that, looking for me. And tomorrow, as you surmise, order will be restored. Quite good order, I warn you! Mr. Bohun will see to that. If you wait till then, therefore, you will have to cut your way out. You'll have no gold to carry, so that should be easy enough; but once you are out, you'll have no sort of transport and the park will be full of my people, looking for me. Of course, as I say, if you stay here, you're perfectly safe. But you've neither food nor water, and nothing that you can think of will make me talk."

"What, nothing?" said Pharaoh.

"Nothing," said Helena, calmly. "You've no one here to torture, and I'm not afraid for myself. For the moment I'm up against it; but you are up against time."

It was clear that she meant what she said: her fearlessness was sublime. I wondered if she believed what Pharaoh had said. "Removing as much as we can . . . clear up and go . . . and you will be free." Once Pharaoh had access to more than a million pounds, was Pharaoh the man to grab what he could and bolt? If she opened her mouth, Pharaoh would certainly go. It seemed likely that he would take with him a thousand pounds, fifteen hundred, perhaps; Dewdrop and Bugle and Rush could each of them manage a bag. And something else he would take—against his return; and that was her master key. And she herself would be free, for she would be dead. Was it likely that Pharaoh, the ruthless, would spare her life? Spare her to cut off his access? If nothing else?

"It certainly looks," he said, "as though we shan't be able to finish tonight. Still, these things shouldn't be rushed. And you know I can't help feeling that twenty-four hours in this chamber will help you to change your mind. The quarters are close, aren't they?"

"So much," said Helena, calmly. "May happen in twenty-four hours."

"As I was saying, here we are out of the world, and time will stand still. Outside—well, the warden will rage and your people imagine vain things; Mr. Bohun will organize; Mr. Spencer will grin like a dog and run about the—"

"Mr. Spencer's the rock you've split on from first to last."

"In a sense that's true," said Pharaoh. "I frankly admit I'm more accustomed to dealing with knives than fools. And he's been very fortunate so far; but I don't think his luck will last. It's all my fault," he sighed. "I've only myself to thank. But he made such an excellent lever that against my better judgment I let him live. But there—we all make mistakes. To be perfectly honest, I went to the forester's cottage because I believed he was there. I didn't need you, you know. I already knew of this room."

"As You Know I Can't Help Feeling That 24 Hours in This Chamber Will Help You to Change Your Mind."

"You seem to need me now."

"Quite," said Pharaoh, "quite. But that's because your brother has gone. As a host—well, his hospitality left nothing to be desired. I find you more exciting. Never mind. About Mr. Spencer. You know I did give him a chance. I actually wrote him a note, containing some good advice."

"People like Mr. Spencer don't take any notice of threats. He had spoiled your game—and he isn't dead yet."

"I assure you," said Pharaoh, "it's only a matter of time. A gust of passion suddenly shook his accents. 'If he goes to Tibet, I'll get him.' The gust died down, and he laughed. 'Stupid,' he murmured. 'Let's say I don't like his face.'"

"You don't like him because you fear him."

"He may prove inconvenient. Unabated nuisances sometimes do."

"I'll let his tongue that you fear. You fear his hand."

"But you don't, do you?" flashed Pharaoh. "It's astonishing how you've fallen for that young calf."

I could just distinguish the man, but the resolute beam from the torch went far to distract my eye. I could make out that he was sitting astride of a chair, about six paces from Dewdrop, close to the wall. There was furniture standing between us, a massive writing table against which Dewdrop was leaning, holding the torch.

For fear of missing my man, I dared not fire upon him from where I stood. I reached for my gun, without crossing the beam of the torch.

"I told you I had no scruples." The voice was cold and harsh as the Vardar wind. "Am I to demonstrate this?" Helena shrugged her shoulders. "That's a matter for you—not me. I find it sufficiently obvious, but perhaps you like gliding your most refined gold."

"I have two questions to ask you. You know what they are. To obtain the accurate answers, I am ready to go all lengths. Not a long way. All lengths."

"I believe you," said Helena calmly. "The trouble is you've got far as you can."

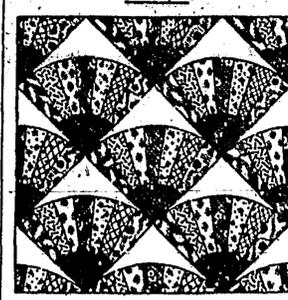

"Let us see. Your brother was a mine of information, as you may believe. Amongst other things he told me the following curious fact. When a son or a daughter of Yorick is ten years old, a leopard, the badge of Yorick, is tattooed upon their skin. . . . Is that true, Lady Helena?"

Helena moistened her lips.

"Yes."

Compare the Platforms

The most casual comparison of the platforms adopted by the Republicans at (Cleveland and by the Democrats at Philadelphia (and voters, as never before, should compare them with care) reveals the astonishing contrast between them. The former for the most part reminds the reader of the labels on that grade of patent medicine that was typified by Kickapoo Indian Sagaw, which was equally effective in reducing high blood pressure or raising low blood pressure. And its specific promises are even more arresting, because in every instance without exception the planks themselves contain qualifying clauses which completely nullify the commitment and render compliance obviously and utterly impossible.

The Cleveland platform of course provides for an immediate balanced budget, definitely and concisely promising that this shall be done "not by increasing taxes but by cutting expenditures drastically and (also) immediately." Yet it pledges "grants-in-aid" to states for unemployment relief, for old-age pensions and other purposes; to pay benefits to farmers on the domestically consumed portion of their crops "in order to make the (still higher) tariff effective" and favors larger appropriations for the army and navy than the billion dollars voted by the Congress which just adjourned. At least $3,000,000,000 would have to be cut in expenditures for unemployment relief, farmers' benefits, social insurance, larger armaments, to mention only the principal items, in order to balance the budget next year as not one of these items was in the budget when it was last balanced, in Mr. Hoover's first fiscal year.

How would these promises be fulfilled? Under the title of "security" only the subject of revenue is mentioned. It "must be provided from the proceeds of a direct tax widely distributed." Granted that customs tariffs would be raised, as that is specified at two points in the platform, certainly there would be need for federal sales tax or application of the income tax to much lower brackets than at present, or both. All of course would bear most heavily upon the poor. The expression "widely distributed" assures that much.

But the conflicts and actually shoddy compromises that are to be found in every plank of the Cleveland creed and the amazing omissions of such subjects as neutrality, banking--notwithstanding there is a title which reads "Banking"--TVA, the chaos in the coal industry, etc., etc., the features which set it entirely apart from the forthright statements in the Philadelphia platform are fundamental. The Republican document clearly endeavored to make government as nearly powerless as possible. The Democratic platform, not only referred to definite accomplishments of the Roosevelt administration during the "three long years," the story of the courage of a man who led a beaten and confused people out of an awful crisis, but it tells you what you may expect. It answers the question: Where do we go from here? In the crisp, convincing words the average man and woman can quickly comprehend and admire.

The Philadelphia pronouncement is based upon achievement that stemmed from a clear conception of what ails mankind, not only in our own land but throughout the world. It ignored generalities in dealing with the issues as, decidedly, as the Republican platform ignored many self-evident facts, for instance that big business if let alone restricts production in the interest of profit but denies that privilege to the farmer. The Democratic document breathed a realization that the restoration of our impotent industrial structure necessitated the reshaping of our social and economic order, a task neglected for fifty years

Spend the 4th at the Fort
 We invite everybody to Fort Stanton for July 4th, and we are getting ready for the largest crowd we have ever entertained on that date. The picnic ground is covered with grass and is shady and cool. In order to feed our ever increasing crowd, we will have four lines of people going through the barbecue stand at one time, instead of two lines as formerly. In this way we will speed up the feeding and go on with the rodeo.

Successful In Land Surveys

United States Division of Grazing officials have found that 30 enrollees detailed to make a survey of the range conditions of the States of Arizona and New Mexico, have done such excellent work that the project is an experiment no longer, but will be enlarged to take in the other two regions of the Divisions of Grazing, ECW, at Reno and Salt Lake City. In the three ECW regions of the Division, officials plan to employ some 500 CCC enrollees on Range Survey, both in the field and in the drafting office compiling the data sent in by the field parties into maps of the region.

The Division of Grazing has jurisdiction over 80,000,000 acres of Public Domain in the States of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, California, Nevada and Utah, but this Public Domain is so interspersed with privately and state owned land that a much larger area must be surveyed and mapped in order to obtain complete data on the range.

In the Albuquerque Region consisting of the states of New Mexico and Arizona, there are some 26,000,000 acres of Public Domain, but enrollees are surveying and mapping approximately 84,000,000 acres.

Enrollees of the survey crew measure distances between points on the open range by pacing, having been trained to walk with a uniform stride. They use General Land Office corners for control.

The most important features of this survey work is in gathering data on the types and density of the range forage plants. Stock watering places and their capacity are also noted.

Enrollees enter this information in their notebooks as they encounter different conditions of the range, and these notes are compared in the evenings, rewritten into more lucid form and sent to the drafting office in Albuquerque to be made into grazing culture maps.

The men detailed to the range survey crew carry a pocket compass for aid in walking in straight lines, often over very rough terrain, and aneroid barometer-altimeters for checking elevations on the land covered.

The work is largely up to the individual, there being only eight enrollees in the single crew now operating. Each enrollee is detailed to walk along a section line for a given township and note the essentials desired by the survey. They cover about a township a day, and have surveyed more than a million acres since the crew was established in April.

The data sent to the drafting office by the grazing survey crews are shown on the maps in color symbols representing different types of vegetation, and common mapping symbols to show watering places, fences and other important features of the public range.

The information shown on these maps is considered an invaluable aid in determining the livestock carrying capacities of areas on the Public Domain.

Riot-Proof Prison Will Keep Felons Safely Behind Bars

Newly Granted Patent Has Scores of Innovations

WASHINGTON.—A riot-proof, escape-proof prison has just been granted a U. S. patent here. Novel construction permits guards to "listen in" through microphones on the whispered mutters of prisoners.

Tear gas bombs can be hurled by the keepers through openings so designed that possible revolver bullets cannot strike the keepers. Or, the ventilating system of the prison can pour forth tear gas if needed.

All these are claims of patent No. 2,030,815, issued to R. L. Clark of Rochester, N. Y.

Observation Gallery.

Main feature of the invention is a hanging observation gallery which runs the full length of the proposed prison between rows of cells. Made of bullet-proof steel and glass, an accompanying observation tower is also designed to be gas-proof.

In it the guards would stand watch. Lookout openings of bullet-proof glass protected by louvre slats are built in the sides and floor of the corridor. Through these "one-way" windows guards would secretly keep an eye on the prisoners.

There would also be special openings through which guards could hurl tear gas bombs: novel doors which when opened would act as shields to prevent any prisoners' bullets from hitting the guard while he was hurling a bomb.

Port Holes for Guards.

Port holes through which the guards would aim their guns are large steel balls with a hole in the center just big enough for the barrel of a rifle or revolver to pass through. The steel balls have universal movement in the wall of the corridor so that pistols or rifles poked through them can be aimed in any direction. There is no space through which a chance bullet could enter the port hole.

Fitted to the bullet-proof walls of the gallery would be microphones, protected against bullets and tampering. Placing his ear against any of these "ears" the guard would pick up unusual sounds and conversations of the prisoners.

Antidote for Monoxide Poisoning Is Promised

KANSAS CITY, MO.—What is claimed to be a marked advance in the search for an antidote for carbon monoxide poisoning was reported to the American Chemical society here by Drs. Samuel and Joseph Seltzer of the University of Oklahoma Medical school.

In studies on rats, Doctor Seltzer found, an injection of the compound known as hexahydroferric chloride resulted in 75 per cent recovery after the animals had been poisoned with carbon monoxide gas.

It is this gas which appears in the exhaust gas of motor cars and leads annually to deaths where drivers run their motors in closed garages.

The new antidote chemical, it was found, is too drastic in its action to be useful on animals higher in the scale of evolution than rodents.

Already a search is being made for variations of the chemical which are less irritating and might thus be used for higher animals. The hope, of course, is that the new line of investigation will eventually lead to discoveries having applications to human beings.

Champion Blood Donor Gave 980 Ounces in Year

CHICAGO.—Raymond Briez works in the public markets of Paris, but he also has a thriving business of his own. He engages in the manufacture of blood, and since he entered the business in 1924 he has sold 237 quarts.

The output of Briez's human factory—his own body—is enormous when one considers that it takes only 7 1/2 quarts of blood to fill the blood vessels of an adult man. During 1933, Briez manufactured enough blood to supply himself and to give 93 transfusions. Each transfusion averaged about ten ounces or a total of 980 ounces. Last year broke all his previous sales records.

The champion blood donor of Paris started his manufacturing business in a small way. In 1924 he gave blood for four transfusions. The next year his orders jumped to 33. In 1927 the number of transfusions supplied by him attained the astonishing figure of 34 and from that time until 1933 he averaged from 50 to 60 a year.

Drift of Continent Westward Studied by Observatories

Science Seeks Answer to Geological Riddle

ARE the Americas drifting westward? If so, whither and where from? These questions, and several others, the International Astronomical Union and the International Geodetic and Geophysical Union are endeavoring to answer, through world-wide measuring of differences in longitude between all the important observatories of the world, and between several additional stations.

Definite answer to the question may have to wait for perhaps a generation.

The Wegener theory, that all the continents of the earth once formed a single immense land mass, which eventually broke up into various continents, further holds that Europe, Asia, and Africa remained fairly well in their original positions, while North and South America moved to the westward and Australia to the southward.

Bridged With Europe?

The late Doctor Wegener offered this theory in substitution for the older theory of a land-bridge connecting America and Europe, to account for the similarities in existing plants and animals on the two sides of the Atlantic. Wegener's theory seems borne out by the remarkable similarities between the eastern shore lines of the Americas and the western coasts of Europe and Africa, especially their deepwater lines.

In an effort to test the theory, studies were undertaken by astronomers and geodesists in 1926 to determine whether such drifts still exist. The Dominion of Canada participated through its stations at Ottawa and Vancouver, and the United States through stations at Washington, D. C., San Diego, Calif., Honolulu, Hawaii, and Manila, P. I. Observatories at Greenwich, Paris, Algiers, and Tokyo, and at many other important points, also took leading parts in the measurements.

Tests Repeated.

In 1933 similar measurements were repeated, more with the intention of strengthening the former network than with any hope of definitely settling the question after such a short lapse of time.

Aviator's Disease New Ailment That Baffles Medicine

CHICAGO.—Now comes acro-neurosis, a new disorder occurring only in airplane pilots.

Dr. Harry G. Armstrong, captain in the United States army medical corps, stationed at Dayton, Ohio, describes this special form of functional nervous disorder in a long report to the Journal of the American Medical Association published in Chicago. He reports 18 cases of the disease in the 103 pilots who have been under his observation during the last three years.

Attacks Best Men.

Unfortunately the disease is likely to attack the best men in the flying service. Usually a pilot has been flying ten or fifteen years before he develops acro-neurosis. The chief cause is profound emotional stress resulting from the accident hazards of flying and from economic and social insecurity. Possibly there is destruction of nerve tissue.

Chief among the symptoms of acro-neurosis are irritability, stomach distress, sleeplessness, ceaseless activity and depletion of the higher mental centers. It takes more than a doctor to treat the disorder properly in Doctor Armstrong's opinion. The best medicine, he thinks, is suitable compensation, "either ego-stimulating or monetary."

Harvard Confirms Comet Discovered by Garage Mechanic

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—The first new comet to be discovered this year, visible through small telescopes as it rides slowly through the northern heavens near the pole, has been sighted by Leslie G. Peltier of Delphos, Ohio, thirty-two-year-old garage employee who has become one of the world's outstanding amateur astronomers.

The comet, the first to be discovered by Peltier, has been photographed at the Harvard observatory here, where Dr. Harlow Shapley, director, announced the find.

Position of Comet.

The body has a tail about one degree long and is located in the northern constellation, Cepheus. Its position is given by Doctor Shapley as declination plus 73 degrees, right ascension 23 hours 45 minutes.

The comet is of the ninth magnitude at present and Doctor Shapley expects it to remain that bright for some time. It is moving south and east.

Peltier, who has also discovered a nova, was awarded the merit prize of the American Association of Variable Star Observers, an international group of amateur astronomers, two years ago.

Household Questions

Oriental popples always grow in the autumn. It is, therefore, wise to divide plants the latter part of July or in August so that they may get a good start before cold weather sets in.

Don't use a stiff brush when washing linoleum. This destroys the luster. Wash lightly with soap and water.

When pressing a linen suit, dampen with cheesecloth that has been dipped in water, then press linen on wrong side.

Label preserving jars with adhesive tape and write on tape with red ink what each jar contains.

Leftover fruit juices should be canned for next winter's use. Added to gelatin desserts, puddings, etc., they give a delicious flavor.

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. # *The First Declaration*

A hundred years before, in 1776, Nathaniel Bacon (above) signed a famous "Declaration of the People of Virginia" wherein the king's governor was vigorously arraigned, Bacon led a rebellion against royal misrule (he is shown above at the burning of Jamestown) but it collapsed when he died suddenly.

Millions Yearly View Declaration

MORE than a million patriotic pilgrims a year pause before a marble shrine on the second floor of the Library of Congress to gaze with reverent eyes at a fading document—sheltered in a coating of gelatin to prevent its further injury—which is a certain Declaration of Independence signed in the city of Philadelphia on July 4, 1776.

Most of the signatures, writes Elizabeth Ellicott Poe in the Washington Post, are indistinguishable at the present time but on the front of the top row of names is a name written in large script. "John Hancock," it reads, and the historically minded remember that when that sturdy Massachusetts patriot bent over to put his signature to this fateful paper he remarked: "I'll write it large so King George can read it without his spectacles."

John Hancock, one of the richest men of Boston town, had much to lose by his stand. It was no idle gesture to him, this adoption of the cause of the colonies. His properties were to be forfeited to the crown for what would be considered an act of treason but John Hancock did not hesitate because of this. He was a native of Braintree, therefore a friend and neighbor, no doubt, of John Adams, who was afterward to be the second President of the United States.

The adopted son of an uncle, Thomas Hancock, who left him a large fortune, young Hancock was a graduate of Harvard in 1764, and was one of a numerous family of Hancocks in the vicinity. As a member of the Committee of Patriots appointed after the massacre in Boston asking the British to withdraw, Hancock had conceived every honorable means to avoid the conflict impending. At the funeral of the slain he preached an oration in which he flayed the cowardice of the British officers and men in slaughtering unarmed men.

When the Continental Congress was formed John Hancock represented Massachusetts therein and in 1775-1777 served as its president. In his spacious Boston mansion meanwhile Lord Percy, Britain's pet, held sway. A price was put on the head of John Hancock as well, which only amused the game patriot. Hancock was so eager to fight that he let it be known that he was willing to face the hardships of the field. But congress was wise and kept him in his post as its presiding officer. After his Revolutionary service was over, Hancock was elected the first governor of Massachusetts, which office he held from 1780 until his death. John Adams spoke of him as a "clever fellow, a bit spoiled by a legacy." He left no descendants and so busy were his heirs in distributing his property after his death that they did not erect a tombstone. Massachusetts in later years repaired this omission and a monument now stands over his grave in the Old Granary Burying ground, on Tremont street, in Boston, not far from the grave of his friend, Samuel Adams, another Massachusetts Revolutionary patriot.

Printed the Declaration of Independence was printed on the press of John Dunlap during the night of July 4, 1776, in Philadelphia.

When the Fourth Was Noisiest Day

LOOKING back from the security of our present Fourth of July saneness to the early 1900s when all Fourths were insane, we are compelled to admit that we did pretty well in those days considering the limitations we had of being insane compared to the advantages we enjoy now in our state of scientific sanity, states a writer in the Kansas City Star.

To a boy of the insane Fourth era, the Fourth of July ranked only with Christmas in social importance. On Christmas we know it was 102 days to the Fourth, and on the Fourth we knew we had only 173 days until Christmas. Christmas savings funds had not been invented at that time, and would have been of no interest to boys anyhow, because boys wore on the receiving end at Christmas.

On the night before the Fourth, the children began showing strange symptoms, especially an unnatural willingness to go to bed early. That gesture was deceiving and specious; the children were not interested in getting their rightful rest before a strenuous day, but were insuring themselves against the sad accident of sleeping past three o'clock in the morning. Any boy who wasn't out by three o'clock in the morning shooting firecrackers under the respective windows of the pastor, the school principal and the truancy officer was deemed a sissy and not fit for human companionship the rest of the day.

The opening ceremony was the only one unanimously attended. From that time on, too many things were happening to engage the entire juvenile attention at one time. There was the sunrise salute of 21 guns, engineered by the village blacksmith who placed one great anvil upon another with giant powder in between, touched off from a daring proximity with a red hot iron. Usually the nether anvil grew very hot before the 21 salutes were fired and this was one of the causes of many distressing accidents in the insane era. At ten o'clock there was the rendition of the "Star-Spangled Banner," led by the band and assisted by the ladies of the G. A. R., whose voices sometimes didn't quite make the high notes; and the reading of the Declaration of Independence by the mayor.

Hostilities usually were suspended at noon for the community dinner in the city park, where fried chicken, watermelon and lemonade from a barrel engaged the general attention until satiety was reached. The afternoon was a dizzy succession of patriotic and athletic events, wherein the popular candidate for congress, vied with a greased pole, a pie-eating contest and a ball game, for popular attention. If the honorable candidate wound up with thirty in his audience, and the ball game wound up in a fight with victory for the home club, the celebration was considered a success. The only remaining item of importance was the stupendous fireworks display, staged on a hay wagon at the north end of Main street; an event which sometimes was rained out, and sometimes prematurely ignited by over-zealous manipulators, resulting in bad burns duly chronicled in the vital statistics column of the home paper in the succeeding issue.

Such was the Fourth of July celebration in the early 1900s, fraught, as one may see, with great dangers later minimized by the sane Fourth campaign.

TALL TALES

As Told to: FRANK E. HAGAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON.

The Artistic Goat

GEORGIA'S delightful climate gave continuous employment to the goats owned by that eminent Atlantian, Pat Candler Dinkins.

The goats were Sandy and Mandy. Mandy was tied in the barn most of the time. Pat noticed casually that she amused herself by plaiting straw into various shapes and sizes.

Sandy went out at night to attack trespassers. There was the pecan grove in the fall and luscious Georgia watermelons to be guarded every summer. And not a night passed but Sandy returned with scraps of clothing his horns had speared from the hind quarters of some pickaninny whose judgment had surrendered to his appetite.

Pat says Sandy was invaluable as watchman and that the materials he brought in invariably were scraped from Sandy's horns into the goat stall. Size and color of samples depended, of course, on what white folks of the neighborhood had worn the year before. "I was proud of Sandy," Pat confesses, "but I didn't appreciate Mandy until I sneaked into the stall with a flashlight one night and learned how she used her spare time.

"There she was, calm and contented as can be, weaving a beautiful rag rug from the materials that Sandy'd brought in.

"Whenever we need carpets up at the house now I simply drop a supply of rags into Mandy's stall when it's real dark and make a scraping noise like Sandy's horns. That goat can weave four 3 by 6 rugs in one week and take a day off besides."

Ring 'Round Rosy

IN MILAN, TENN., where a specialty is claimed for watermelons, fine baseball clubs and tomato crops, they brag about their fat girl.

This lady, according to Bruce Oliver, was the most enormous gal inhabiting West Tennessee.

Nobody knew her name, said Bruce, because no one ever got that close to her. Just in fun he called her Rosy.

She came over to Milan from the nearby town of McKenzie and almost immediately was besieged with suitors. The most persistent of these was Bruce himself.

He used to visit the damsel, sit out on the porch with her and feed her ice cream from a double freezer. When the bottom of the freezer was reached, Bruce, sorely smitten by the fat girl's charms, was inclined to grow serious in his love making. He wasn't disillusioned even when she confessed she slept in a bed strewn with cinders to prevent her rolling off.

Bruce was a persistent cuss, he admitted. In attempting to express his true feelings he would place an arm part way around the fat girl. When he had reached as far as possible he would mark his position with a pink crayon. Then he would move around to the mark, resume a posture of affection, and so gradually encircle the waist of the girl he worshipped.

The romance progressed swimmingly, according to Milan records, until the day Bruce shifted position, crayon in fingers, and bumped into an utter stranger who was chalking his own way around the waist from the opposite direction.

The Erratic Gale

SOMETIMES in Chicago it isn't even necessary to go into a restaurant if you insist upon changing headgear. This will be understood, as well as the reason Chicago is called the Windy City when it is known what happened during the second Century of Progress to the visitor from Kallispell, Mont.

This gentleman strolled blithely through the fair when a gust of Lake Michigan wind lifted the wide-brimmed steatite from his head, slapped it twice against a flagpole and disappeared with it in the dusk.

The dismayed fair-goer almost swallowed his toothpick in his vexation. He had turned toward a nearby hat store to buy a new headpiece when there came a sudden swirl, another steatite dropped from out the sky and settled on his brow.

The second hat was of fine texture, in good condition, and fitted perfectly, all these details having been carefully attended to by the second erratic breeze, which fortunately had decided to befriend the visitor.

As he related the experience that night in a Michigan avenue tavern he was approached by an entire stranger who smilingly returned the lost hat, and retrieved his own.

The second man, it seems, had brought three carloads of cattle to the stock yards. As he was marketing them, he, too, was selected by a playful breeze. The hat of each man had been whisked away to the head of the other, even though they were nine miles apart at the time.

Frozen Wells

Frozen wells are wells in which ice is found either with or without water. They occasionally occur both here and in Europe. A famous one in Brandon, Vt., was sunk through a mass of frozen ground 15 feet thick and formerly showed ice at 14 feet below the surface in the summer time. In most frozen wells the ice lasts until late autumn and the temperature is above the freezing point.

"God" is the subject of the Lesson Sermon which will be read in all Churches and Societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday July 5th.

The Golden Text is: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." (Ex. 20:3)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson Sermon in the following from the Bible: "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ." (John 1:17)

The Lesson Sermon also includes the following from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, "The moral law, which has the right to acquit or condemn, always demands restitution before mortals can go up higher. Broken law brings penalty in this progress."

79 per-cent at Work

"Ninety-seven and one-half per-cent of the entire relief load in District Number 2, with headquarters at Roswell, is adequately cared for," Lea Rowland, New Mexico Works Progress Administrator, announced today.

Of the 3396 certified relief workers in this district 1082, only 86 of whom are professional workers, are employed on WPA projects, 1348 have been absorbed by private industry, including agricultural pursuits and other seasonal employment, and 937 have been taken over by demands of other governmental agencies, such as the U. S. Soil conservation Service, U. S. Army Engineering Corps, state highway department and the like, giving a total of 3312 relief workers actually working on June 19.

Failure to report for assignment, departure from the district, or physical disability account for most of the 84 cases remaining unassigned to projects, Rowland explained.

In some instances small numbers of relief workers live in isolated communities in numbers too few to justify initiation of a special project exclusively for them. Owing to great distances between settlements in outlying areas, transportation of workers is not feasible, he added.

Over the whole state 78 per cent of all certified workers are at work. They are employed either on one of the 283 WPA projects or in other governmental agencies and private industry, which together absorb 46 per cent of the certified workers.

"Due to such causes as completion of projects, seasonal employment, and workers being turned back to WPA by other agencies, these figures show variations from week to week and often from day to day," the administrator pointed out.

Notice

Due to the extreme dryness of the Forests in the Southwest, the Regional Forester has issued the following order:

"Due to the extreme dryness of the Forests, together with high winds and low humidity, the Forests are highly inflammable and an emergency is declared to exist; therefore under the authority of Regulation T-1-M of the Secretary of Agriculture, lands of the United States within the National Forests of Arizona and New Mexico are closed to the discharge of any kind of fireworks or firecrackers thereon is hereby prohibited.

Frank C. W. Pooler, Regional Forester.

Fireworks Injuries

Santa Fe, June 29, 1936. - Thirty persons were killed and 7,738 were injured in celebrating Independence Day, 1935. These statistics were received today at the New Mexico bureau of public health from the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. They are part of the result of the most intensive study ever made of fireworks injuries. This study, a W. P. A. project, sponsored by the Society and the American Museum of Safety was directed by Dr. Leland E. Cofer, a former assistant surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service. Dr. Cofer's report says:

"Fireworks accidents remind one of war injuries, and for two reasons: one, because of the growing practice of hurling fireworks at other persons, especially in passing automobiles. This practice is carried on with the apparent design of inflicting injury on the other person—otherwise why is this practice so much the fashion for the glorious Fourth? The other reason is that so many of these reports state that the victim supposed the firecracker was no longer lit and so he picked it up. The frequency which severe explosions followed reminds one of the reports for years after World War which told of peasants in France being killed and injured by picking up unexploded bombs in the fields. One also gets the impression that present brands of fireworks contain more powerful explosives than was true in the past."

The study shows that the common firecracker is in the aggregate the most dangerous of all fireworks, causing two thirds of all injuries. The part of the body most frequently injured is naturally the hands. It is important that one accident in ten affects the eyes and that last year no less than 57 fireworks injuries resulted in blindness. All injuries to the eyes are serious. First aid in such cases is not sufficient. A physician should always be consulted, preferably one who specializes in diseases of the eyes.

The New Mexico Bureau of Public Health requests that accidents occurring in New Mexico this year be reported to them at Santa Fe.
